The federal government has decided not to place the dunes sagebrush lizard on the endangered list.

Lizard not on protected list

By the Associated Press

A contentious battle over a rare lizard found only in Texas and New Mexico oil and gas country took a surprising turn Wednesday with federal officials deciding not to bestow endangered species protections on the small reptile.

Hutchison Neubegauer

U.S. Interior Secretary Ken Salazar said the much-anticipated decision over the dunes sagebrush lizard was based on the "best available science" and because of voluntary conservation agreements now in place in the two states.

"This is a great example of how states and landowners can take early, landscape-level action to

Fire destroys bar, home

Couple escapes safely, firefighters say

Local firefighters responded to a blaze early Wednesday morning that destroyed a Big Spring bar on the city's west side. No injuries were reported.

According to Big Spring Fire Marshal Carl Condray, emergency services received the call shortly before 1 a.m. with emergency personnel responding to the El San Luis Bar, located in the 3800 block of W. Highway 80.

"The call came into dispatch at 12:48 a.m. and firefighters with the Big Spring Fire Department were on the scene moments later," Condray said. "When they arrived, there was heavy fire in the south end of the building, with the wind coming out of the south and feeding it.

"The owner and his wife live in a residence located in the back of the business. They were both home when the fire started and managed to get out without any injuries."

Condray said firefighters ran

Carnival returning to shopping center

By AMANDA MORENO

Staff Writer

The Pride of Texas Carnival is coming back.

Crossroads residents will have five days to enjoy the carnival which will be located at the College Park Shopping Center parking lot June 20-23.

"The turnout was good last year so we decided to bring it back this year and give residents one more thing to do," Chamber Executive Director Debbye ValVerde said.

Gates will open at 6 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and at 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Armbands will be available each night for $25. The armbands, which will allow all the rides you can ride, will be good from 6 p.m. until 10 p.m.

"This is one thing that families can do in the summer instead of taking a long vacation," ValVerde said. "It's a good way to spend a night or two of family fun without having to leave town."

Carnivals were at one time a regular occurrence in Big Spring and ValVerde said the hope is to be able to make the Pride of Texas Carnival an annual summer event.

"We are hoping that this will just be one more place in Big Spring for people to go," ValVerde said.

"Even though it is the same weekend as the rodeo we believe people will have time to do both and it will provide options for people."

protect wildlife habitat before a species is listed under the Endangered Species Act," Salazar said in a conference call. "The voluntary conservation efforts of Texas and New Mexico, oil and gas operators, private landowners and other stakeholders show that we don't have to choose between energy development and the protection of our land and wildlife — we can do both."

Congressional members praised the decision for a compromise that could signal a shift in the way the government deals with a long list of plants and animals awaiting federal protections. "The decision by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to withdraw its proposal to place the sagebrush lizard on the endangered list is welcome news," said U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, "It shows how common sense can prevail when federal regulators work with local governments and other interested parties."

"I am extremely pleased that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service determined that the historic voluntary conservation agreements in Texas and New Mexico were sufficient to protect the dunes sagebrush lizard," U.S. Rep. Randy Neugebauer said.

"Listing the species for protection under the Endangered Species Act would have had unprecedented effects on energy producers, farmers, and ranchers," Neugebauer added. "It could have devastated our local economy by severely limiting energy production and agricultural activities. This decision shows how voluntary conservation can produce beneficial results for everyone."

The Fish and Wildlife Service delayed a final decision on the lizard earlier this year after an outcry from members of Congress and communities in both states that rely on oil and gas development for jobs and tax revenue.

The lizard is native to a small area of southeastern New Mexico and West Texas. It is found only in sand dune complexes that have shinery oak.

The primary threat to the lizard is oil and gas development near the dune complexes and oak removal stemming from the need for more forage for grazing, according to federal biologists.

Oil and gas producers throughout the Permian Basin say protecting the species could stop production, since federal protections would mean the lizard's habitat cannot be disturbed. The basin produces more than 1 million barrels of oil a day.

Environmentalists have argued that lizard habitat makes up only a fraction of the areas being used by energy developers and that listing would not impair the industry. They called the decision not to list the lizard "unfortunate."

"There is no species more deserving of federal protection than the dunes sagebrush lizard. Existing conservation measures, particularly in Texas, are so weak that I fear the species may become extirpated in parts of its remaining range," said Mark Salvo, wildlife program director for the New Mexico-based group WildEarth Guardians.

They have accused the Fish and Wildlife Service of caving to political pressure and energy interests.

The oil and gas industry praised the decision.

"We think the Fish and Wildlife Services got it right," said Ben Shepherd, executive director of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association in Midland, Texas. "We have always contended that the best available science did not warrant a listing."

In May, federal officials said energy industry had made enough progress toward conserving habitat in Texas and New Mexico that its efforts may help prevent the reptile from being listed. About 95 percent of the lizard's habitat in New Mexico and more than 70 percent of it in West Texas are under voluntary conservation contracts.

The agreements mean ranchers, the energy industry and the states agree to avoid the habitat or pay a fee if they cannot.

Under the conservation agreements, operators have agreed to avoid lizard habitat and buffer areas in the future, and ranchers pledged not to spray in the region. If those moves are unavoidable, the operators would pay a fee into a fund that would be used to restore habitat, including the removal of invasive mesquite brush and oil and gas development paths and roads that have fragmented the habitat.

Federal officials said state-led voluntary conservation efforts have reduced the impact of oil and gas development across the species' range. They cover more than 650,000 acres in New Mexico and Texas, which presents about 88 percent of the lizard's habitat.

Fish and Wildlife Service Director Dan Ashe said that officials have determined that the lizard is not in trouble based on the agreements.

"It's not likely to become endangered in the future," he said.

Dog blamed for arson

LILLY, Pa. (AP) — A western Pennsylvania man who blamed his dog for causing an apartment fire has been jailed on charges that he set the blaze himself.

The Tribune-Democrat of Johnstown reported Wednesday that Cresson Township police have charged 58-year-old John Saparo with setting the June 12 fire, though police have yet to specify how.

What police did say is that they've determined the fire didn't start the way Saparo claimed. He allegedly told officers he was cleaning and had several fans running when his dog knocked over one of the fans, which, somehow, started the fire.

Saparo remains in the Cambria County Jail awaiting a hearing on arson and related charges.

FIRE

into a problem with the water delivery system near the business, a situation that was thankfully solved with some assistance.

"There was a problem with the hydrant the firefighters needed to use," Condray said. "At that point they were faced with two options, either hook up to a hydrant across the street (U.S. Highway 80) or one much further down the block. Using a hydrant across Highway 80 would have effectively shut down a major thoroughfare and going further down the block would have had the water lines crossing the railroad tracks."

"The answer to our problem came in the form of the Howard County Volunteer Fire Department, who assisted us on the call. They brought in their tanker, which solved the hydrant problem. Their assistance on the call was a huge help to us."

Condray said the bar was quickly consumed by the flames and firefighters' objective quickly shifted from saving the structure to protecting the nearby businesses.

"It became about containment of the fire because the building was pretty much lost at that point," Condray said. "There were several nearby buildings, however, that could have easily been threatened by the fire, so the firefighters concentrated on keeping it from spreading."

The cause of the fire was an electrical problem, most likely with one of the bar's appliances, according to Condray.

"We haven't put a value on the damage at this time, but my understanding is the business owner is submitting it as $70,000 for the property and $60,000 for the contents of the building," Condray said.

The fire scene was deemed safe at approximately 5 a.m., according to Condray, but a fire unit was left at the scene much of Wednesday afternoon as a precautionary measure.

"When you have a fire like that and the roof collapses on top of the structure, it's very hard for the firefighters to get to possible hot spots underneath the rubble," Condray said. "So, we had a unit stay on the scene until around 3 p.m. just in case there was a flare up. Fires like these can smolder for quite some time."

Condray confirmed no firefighters or other emergency personnel were injured as a result of the blaze.

OUR VIEWS

Old isn't as old as it was Another year of the Old Settler's Reunion is here — the 88th year to be exact.

All old settler's are encouraged to attend. In case you are wondering if you are an old settler, here's the answer: Have you resided in Howard or Glasscock County for 25 or more years? If the answer is yes then you are an old settler.

The Heritage Museum employees will once again play host to all those who have been part of the formation of Howard and Glasscock Counties' history and traditions.

Old Settler's Reunion has been a tradition since 1924, when it was started north of Coahoma on the T.J. McKinney Farm. By 1928 it was celebrated a mile east of Big Spring at Parish Park, later known as Cottonwood Park. According to Raney, the Heritage Museum became a part of the celebration in the early 90s.

The Saturday early afternoon event, which will take place June 23 at 11:30 a.m. will include hamburgers, chips, refreshments and cobblers. For those wanting desserts and are looking to have a little excitement, a dessert auction will be taking place, as well.

Following tradition, two pioneer families will be named. One family will be from Howard County and the other from Glasscock County. The families have been chosen by a committee based on their contributions and history in the community.

Before the reunion kicks-off, the Rodeo parade will be taking place — after taking a year off — at 10 a.m.

As soon as the parade concludes, all old settler's are encouraged to stop into the museum and take part in the festivities.

Of course, don't forget the rodeo will wrap up that night as well. The final performance will start at 8 p.m. and conclude with the Aaron Watson dance in the fair barn.

A SMALL PRAYER

by K. Rae Anderson

May our greatest satisfaction, Lord, be walking with You in mind.

Amen

Another Father's Day without you

Seventeen years ... hard to believe it's been that long. I say it like I say every year, it seems like only yesterday.

The events of that day still play so clearly in my mind. I guess, in a way, I figure if it replays often enough there will be some way of changing the outcome — or at least that's the hope.

As a nine-year-old little girl comprehending the fact that your dad is never coming back isn't the easiest thing to do.

Actually, as a 25-year-old it still isn't easy to accept. The comprehending part is easier, well at least more attainable, but the acceptance part still isn't there.

I will be the first to admit, the effects of that day are long-lasting to say the least. However, as much damage as that day has done it has also served as a great motivator.

The aspirations I have for myself are higher and the want to succeed is stronger.

Losing my dad at such a young age, followed by the loss of all my grandparents took a toll on me for sure. One of the biggest implications it has had on my life has been the fear of closeness to anyone and everyone.

The fear of allowing myself to open up has become so great because the only thought that goes through my mind is when will the next person I love be gone.

Back then I figured the best way to deal with the loss was to avoid and ignore, but little did I know it would be one of the biggest mistakes of my life.

By avoiding the situation, even as a child, I ended up stopping myself from receiving closure.

So ... here I am, 17 years later and wishing I could turn back time. As we all know, there is still no time machine that will allow us to do that and there is no magic potion to erase certain events.

Nonetheless, I know that even though my dad is no longer here physically, I know he is watching over me and doing his part in my life.

There are lessons that I learned within those nine years he was here and it is through those lessons that he remains alive and active in my life.

Dad, I can't seem to erase that day out of my mind or get that pain out of my heart. Part of me is stuck in that day as that 9-year-old little girl, waiting at the front door. The visits from you in my dreams still seem to real and are much needed at times.

Each year that passes you figure it would get easier, but honestly, it's not.

Lately, so many things are happening and all I can think is how you aren't here to share them with me.

Within a month I will be walking down the aisle and as happy as that makes me, knowing it won't be as I imagined it as a child breaks my heart. I still don't know how I will react when that day arrives and you are not there to walk me down the aisle. I tell myself and everyone else that it's not a big deal but the truth of the matter is ... well ... it's the biggest deal of all.

Another thing that bugs me with each passing year is the fact that you aren't here to watch David grow. I remember my childhood and the things we used to do and I can't help but wish David was able to experience those things with you.

I say it again as I've said a hundred times and will continue to say — it's not fair that you are missing out on so much.

I know, there is a reason for everything, but no matter how much times passes, I'm certain I will never see the reason for this. There is no reason, not a good one anyway, for you, David or myself having to miss out on memories that could have been made.

I miss you as always. I love you forever.

For those of you who still have your father's, make sure you take the time to tell them you love them and make lasting memories. Nobody knows when it will be the last time and there should be no regrets.

Our father's, no matter how long they are with us, help make us who we are and shape our lives so much more than we realize.

For those who are missing their father's this year, take a moment and remember them.

Visit the cemetery, look at old photos or have a private moment, whichever way you choose to remember your dad this Father's Day, make it count. Even though they may not be here, they still see us and are watching over us — at least that's what I choose to believe.

Happy Father's Day!

Private sector is sucking wind

President Obama continues to prove how out of touch he is with the plight of the American people under his anemic economy. No, Mr. President, the economy and the private sector are not "doing fine."

Sure, Obama is pretending that he didn't mean it the way it sounded. But I am not buying that it was a gaffe. I watched the video, and he stated the point clearly and deliberately.

Obama is an incorrigible leftist ideologue who believes that only his statist policies can stimulate the national economy.

He thinks that without the prodding, deficit spending and wisdom of the federal government, the private sector cannot recover on its own, much less flourish.

Now he has put his theories to the test, having run up unprecedented national debt in the process and producing nothing but failure.

Even President Franklin D. Roosevelt's treasury secretary Henry Morgenthau admitted that FDR had spent a record amount of federal money for eight years and had amassed extraordinary debt without creating jobs or stimulating the economy. Why can't Obama learn from his own mistakes?

When his $868 billion stimulus bill didn't work, he demanded more infrastructure spending, and then came Stimulus Jr.: his $447 billion jobs bill. He only knows one course, and it involves expansion of government.

Though he intermittently assures us he's a fierce advocate of the free market, he revealed what he really thinks in his Osawatimie, Kan., speech, in which he revised history to conform to his unshakable belief that capitalism and free markets have only worked in America when the superior wisdom and generous pocketbook of the federal government have led the way against evil corporatists and profiteers.

His stubborn ideology blinds him from seeing or accepting the failure of his policies; to him, failure means that Bush left him an even worse "mess" than he thought and that his stimulus programs weren't big enough.

He might grudgingly concede that the economy isn't doing as well as it could be, but he insists it'd be much worse if he hadn't implemented his agenda.

So when he told us that the private sector isn't performing poorly, he meant it. But unfortunately for him — and for the rest of us — the facts don't corroborate his statement.

As I report in my new book, "The Great Destroyer," President Obama has presided over the weakest recovery in more than 50 years.

In every other recovery since World War II, employment had completely recovered within four years. The recession began in December 2007, and four years later, in December 2011, payroll employment was 4 percent below its pre-recession level. And private-sector employment was 4.5 percent below its pre-recession level. We'd lost some 5.6 million jobs, 5.2 million of which were private-sector jobs.

Indeed, private-sector job creation is at nearly record lows. Fewer existing businesses are hiring, and fewer entrepreneurs are starting new businesses, which means there are fewer jobs available for those in the job hunt.

Get this: Prior to the recession, the economy was adding more than 5 million new employees each month, but under Obama, that level has been mostly at or below 4 million.

Even though fewer employees are being laid off, unemployment remains very high because of these sluggish job creation figures.

It's not just that the economy is bad overall; it's that Obama has created an onerous regulatory tax climate that is sucking the oxygen out of the private sector particularly.

His policies have led to an atmosphere of uncertainty that is paralyzing small businesses and preventing a robust recovery.

In fact, contrary to his promise to streamline federal regulations, he has amassed regulations at an unprecedented pace, and this is without even considering Obamacare, which is a regulatory tsunami waiting to happen.

Also, he will preside over one of the largest tax increases in our history in a matter of months.

Unemployment hasn't been so consistently high since the recession of the early 1980s. Hardest hit have been African-Americans, whose unemployment reached a 27-year high, and the lowest 20 percent of income earners — two groups Obama pledged to protect the most.

Through all this, the only sector barely hurt by Obama's economy is the public sector, which continues to grow at a record pace. The Heritage Foundation reports that federal employment has actually grown some 12 percent since the end of 2007. The nation's overall unemployment rate is 8.2 percent, but the unemployment rate for government employees is only 4.2 percent.

The major problem isn't simply that Obama made an erroneous statement that reflects his obliviousness or insensitivity toward the private sector and small businesses, as bad as that was.

It's that he refuses to change course by removing his boot from the throat of small businesses, reducing discretionary spending and restructuring entitlements, without which we are destined to go the way of Greece.

News in brief

Obama, Romney focus on economy in Ohio

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharpening the choice for the nation, President Barack Obama and Republican presidential challenger Mitt Romney are offering dueling visions of how to fix the economy, framing in their most direct terms the fierce debate that will decide the November election. In a flash of campaign drama, the two are giving major speeches at nearly the same time Thursday from the same state, battleground Ohio.

For the president, Thursday's speech will aim to get above the daily ups and downs — more downs of late — and pull the American people into the discussion Obama wants: a choice between his economic ideas and Romney's.

As he has done before at pivotal moments in his presidency, Obama will use a big speech to try to reframe the debate as he heads into the heart of the campaign calendar.

For Romney, the occasion is about offering definition to a divided public about how he would lead the economy, including the priorities for his first 100 days in office. The former Massachusetts governor who made a fortune in business is sensing momentum on his side, particularly as the weak pace of job growth undermines Obama's stick-with-me message.

The split-screen economic addresses offer the air of a bigger moment in a general election campaign that has been defined mainly by ads, fundraisers and monthly jobs reports. Yet for all the emerging hype, particularly surrounding the speech of the sitting president, previews from both sides point toward plenty of familiar themes and few, if any, new ideas.

Suicide car bomb explodes in Damascus suburb, wounding 10

plosives in a Damascus suburb on Thursday, wounding 10 people and damaging one of Shiite Islam's holiest shrines, Syria's state-run news agency and witnesses on the scene said.

The golden-domed Sayyida Zainab shrine attracts tens of thousands of Shiite pilgrims from around the world every year who come to visit the tomb, which is believed to house the remains of the granddaughter of Islam's Prophet Muhammad.

The site is popular with Iranian and other Shiite pilgrims and tourists.

Witnesses on the scene said the bomber detonated his van in a parking lot about 50 meters (yards) from the shrine.

Guards tried to stop him from getting into the area but he pushed through, they said, setting the explosives off inside the lot. The blast shattered the shrine's windows and knocked down chandeliers and electric ceiling fans and caused cracks in some of its mosaic walls.

Six tourist buses and more than 30 cars and a small police bus also were damaged.

Campaign corruption charges dropped against John Edwards

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A relieved John Edwards said after his mistrial on campaign corruption charges that he believed good things were still in store for him, though image makers and his friends agree that does not include politics.

The ex-presidential candidate who turned 59 this week will no longer have to face that future with federal charges hanging over his head after prosecutors on Wednesday dropped their campaign fraud case against him.

After a six-week trial in North Carolina, jurors acquitted Edwards May 31 on one count of accepting illegal campaign contributions and deadlocked on five other felony counts. The judge declared a mistrial.

The U.S. Justice Department said in a court order that it will not seek to retry Edwards on the five unresolved counts, leaving some to say the charges shouldn't have been brought in the first place.

Assistant Attorney General Lanny A. Breuer, who oversees the agency's criminal division, said prosecutors knew the case, like all campaign finance cases, would be challenging. But he said it is "our duty to bring hard cases" when warranted.

"Last month, the government put forward its best case against Mr. Edwards, and I am proud of the skilled and professional way in which our prosecutors conducted this trial," he said, adding that he respected the jury's judgment and decided not to seek a retrial "in the interest of justice."

More U.S. homes entered foreclosure process in May

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lenders initiated foreclosure proceedings against more U.S. homeowners in May, setting the stage for increases in home repossessions and short sales — scenarios that could further weigh down home values in coming months.

Default or scheduled-home-auction notices were filed for the first time against 109,051 homes last month. That's an increase of 12 percent from April and up 16 percent versus May last year, foreclosure listing firm RealtyTrac Inc. said Thursday.

The firm monitors documents filed on properties with mortgages that have gone unpaid.

Once that process begins, homes can end up foreclosed-upon, sold at auction or via a short sale. A short sale is when the bank agrees to accept less than what the borrower owes on their mortgage.

May was the first month since January 2010 that the number of homes starting on the foreclosure path rose on an annual basis.

But the trend has been visible in the monthly numbers, with four out of the first five months of this year recording increases over the preceding month.

The data reflects how banks and mortgage servicers have been stepping up efforts this year to address unpaid mortgages.

Study on Yosemite rock hazards identifies most dangerous areas

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) — Falling boulders are the single biggest force shaping Yosemite Valley, one of the most popular tourist destinations in the national park system. Now swaths of some popular haunts are closing for good after geologists confirmed that unsuspecting tourists and employees are being lodged in harm's way.

On Thursday, the National Park Service will announce that potential danger from the unstable 3,000-foot-tall Glacier Point, a granite promontory that for decades has provided a dramatic backdrop to park events, will leave some of the valley's most popular lodging areas permanently uninhabitable.

"There are no absolutely safe areas in Yosemite Valley," said Greg Stock, the park's first staff geologist and the primary author of a new study that assesses the potential risk to people from falling rocks in the steep-sided valley. The highest risk area is family friendly Curry Village, which was hit by a major rock fall several years ago.

A newly delineated "hazard zone" also outlines other areas, including the popular climbing wall El Capitan, where the danger posed by the rock falls is high but risk of injury is low because they aren't continuously occupied.

"Rock falls are common in Yosemite Valley, California, posing substantial hazard and risk to the approximately four million annual visitors to Yosemite National Park," reads the ominous opening line of the report.

'Goodfellas' gangster Hill dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Henry Hill spent much of his life as a "goodfella," believing his last moment would come with a bullet to the back of his head. In the end he died at a hospital after a long illness, going out like all the average nobodies he once pitied.

Hill, who went from small-time gangster to big-time celebrity when his life as a mobster-turned-FBI informant became the basis for the Martin Scorsese film "Goodfellas," died Tuesday at age 69, longtime girlfriend Lisa Caserta told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Hill had open heart surgery last year and died of complications from longtime heart problems related to smoking, she said.

An associate in New York's Lucchese crime family, Hill told detailed, disturbing and often hilarious tales of life in the mob that first appeared in the 1986 book "Wiseguy: Life in a Ma-fia Family," by Nicholas Pileggi, a journalist Hill sought out shortly after becoming an informant.

In 1990 the book, adapted for the screen by Pileggi and Scorsese, became the instant classic "Goodfellas," starring Robert De Niro, Joe Pesci and Ray Liotta as Hill, a young hoodlum on the make who thrives in the Mafia but is eventually forced by drugs to turn on his criminal friends and lead the life of a sad suburbanite.

The film became a constantly quoted pop cultural phenomenon that provided the template for the modern gangster story.

In the book and the film he talks about how hard it was to lead an ordinary life after years steeped in gangster glamour.

"I had paper bags filled with jewelry stashed in the kitchen. I had a sugar bowl full of coke next to the bed. Anything I wanted was a phone call away," Hill says in the film. "Today, everything is different. There's no action. I have to wait around like everyone else. Can't even get decent food. Right after I got here I ordered some spaghetti with marinara sauce, and I got egg noodles and ketchup. I'm an average nobody. I get to live the rest of my life like a schnook."

Unlike older Mafia tales, which focused on family and honor, "Wiseguy" and "Goodfellas" mostly dwelled on how utterly awesome it was to be in the mob.

Texas man in stand-your-ground case could get life

HOUSTON (AP) — A retired Houston-area firefighter faces up to life in prison after a jury convicted him of murder for gunning down his unarmed neighbor during a dispute over a noisy house party.

Raul Rodriguez, 47, argued he was within his rights under Texas' version of a stand-your-ground law when he killed Kelly Danaher in 2010. The trial's punishment phase, which will include further testimony, was scheduled to begin Thursday.

Rodriguez was angry about the noise coming from Danaher's home, where the family was having a birthday party for Danaher's wife and young daughter. Rodriguez went to the home and got into an argument with Danaher, a 36-year-old elementary school teacher, and two other men who were at the party.

In a 22-minute video he recorded the night of the shooting, Rodriguez can be heard telling a police dispatcher "my life is in danger now" and "these people are going to go try and kill me." He then said "I'm standing my ground here," and shot Danaher after somebody appeared to grab his camera. The two other men were wounded.

Rodriguez's reference to standing his ground is similar to the claim made by George Zimmerman, a neighborhood watch volunteer who is citing Florida's stand-your-ground law in his defense in the fatal February shooting of an unarmed teenager, Trayvon Martin. Rodriguez's case, however, was decided under a different kind of self-defense doctrine.

Danaher's wife, Mindy, said she cried tears of joy and sadness after the verdict was read.

"I'm just glad that he can't hurt anybody else. That's my main thing," she said outside the courtroom. "I love my husband and I miss him so much."

Rodriguez's attorneys left the courtroom without speaking to reporters. His family, who sobbed after hearing the verdict, declined to comment. His attorneys did not present any witnesses in his defense.

Texas shelter for illegal immigrant kids closes

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A federal agency has closed the last of five temporary emergency shelters in Texas that housed unaccompanied illegal immigrant children.

The Department of Health and Human Services says the last four children staying at Lackland Air Force Base near San Antonio have been relocated and the shelter there closed down Wednesday.

Spokesman Kenneth Wolfe says the department has opened new permanent, state-certified shelters and is expanded existing facilities. Wolfe says all of the temporary shelters are now closed.

The dormitory at Lackland, which opened in April, could hold up to 300 youngsters. Most of the kids who stayed there were caught near the border with Mexico.

The San Antonio Express-News reports that the agency has rounded up 8,541 unaccompanied children since October, exceeding the 2011 total.

45 years for attacker in Austin purse snatching

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A man convicted of a purse snatching outside a bar that left a Central Texas woman hurt has been sentenced to 45 years in prison.

A jury in Austin on Wednesday sentenced 30-year-old Steven Lawrence Keller for the May 2011 attack captured on security surveillance video.

Police say 42-year-old Merri Gale Hieger of Austin was slugged in the face and her purse was stolen.

Jurors on Tuesday convicted Keller of aggravated robbery in the attack that left the victim with dental damage and a facial scar.

Keller, whose criminal record includes burglary, robbery, unlawful carrying of a weapon and DWI, could have received life in prison. He must serve at least half of his 45-year prison term before being eligible for parole.

Fort Worth man gets 9 years for wounding officers

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A jury in North Texas has ordered nine years in prison for a gunman blamed for wounding two police officers trying to serve a drug warrant.

Jurors earlier this week convicted 24-year-old Ronald Wayne Herford of Fort Worth of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon over the 2010 incident. The panel on Wednesday decided the penalty for Herford, who faced up to 20 years in prison.

Herford testified he thought gang members were breaking into his home when he opened fire.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reports the two wounded officers have since returned to duty.

Glass artwork damaged during Dallas hailstorm

DALLAS (AP) — An outdoor glass exhibit in Dallas by famed artist Chihuly (chuh-HOO'-lee) has been damaged in storms packing hail the size of baseballs.

Dallas Arboretum officials say several pieces of Chihuly artwork suffered minor damage Wednesday night. Arboretum crews gently picked up broken glass from the displays.

An arboretum official did not immediately provide further details Thursday. A message left with a publicist for artist Dale Chihuly was not immediately returned.

Some vehicles had busted windshields. Several skylights were smashed at NorthPark Center mall. Damage estimates were not immediately available.

Fannin County officials say three people were transported to a hospital when storms damaged some mobile homes in the Randolph area, about 60 miles northeast of Dallas. A dispatcher Thursday had no additional details.

Perry, SpaceX chief discuss spaceport in Texas

McGREGOR, Texas (AP) — Texas is interested in a company's plans to build a space launch site in the state.

A spokeswoman for Gov. Rick Perry says Wednesday's meeting went well with Perry and SpaceX Chief Executive Elon Musk. She says they discussed Perry's commitment to finding a suitable launch site in Texas.

Spokeswoman Lucy Nashed says having a site in Texas would be a natural fit since SpaceX already has its rocket factory near Waco.

Musk said earlier Wednesday that South Texas is the leading candidate for a launch site for the company that sent the world's first commercial supply ship to the International Space Station.

Last month, the SpaceX Dragon delivered 1,000 pounds of provisions to the space station and returned with 1,400 pounds of old equipment.

2 death row inmates win new punishment trials

HOUSTON (AP) — The state's highest criminal court reversed the death sentences of two convicted Texas killers Wednesday and narrowly rejected an appeal from a third death row inmate.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled that testimony from a prison expert during the punishment phase of Manuel Velez's capital murder trial in Cameron County was improper, meaning the 47-year-old construction worker is entitled to a new punishment trial.

Velez was convicted of killing his girlfriend's son, Angel Moreno, a day before the boy's first birthday in February 2005 at their Brownsville home. Evidence showed he either hit the boy's head on a surface or struck him in the head with an undetermined object.

The court agreed with Velez's attorneys that prison expert A.P. Merillat was wrong when he testified about the security level classification of Texas inmates who serve life without parole. Velez's jury had the task of deciding between a death sentence and life without parole. Merillat and prosecutors who called him to testify as an expert witness on prisons and inmate violence should have known the testimony was incorrect, the court ruled.

In the second case, the Court of Criminal Appeals unanimously agreed Guy Stephen Alexander, 52, should get a new punishment hearing because jurors had no way in 1989 to properly consider mitigating evidence in his case.

Alexander was arrested for killing Wilma Jewel Wofford, 75, of Houston, during a January 1989 robbery. Wofford was beaten with a brick and strangled. Alexander, a 29-year-old mechanic at the time, fled to Mississippi, where he was found driving Wofford's car and arrested.

Opening lead — three of clubs.

Whenever declarer plays a suit contract, he is faced with the question of when or whether to draw trumps. Unfortunately, it is impossible to formulate a perfect rule to cover this vexing problem. Hands simply vary too much from one deal to the next for anyone to devise a cure-all that provides all the answers.

What can be said is that in general, a declarer draws trumps unless there is a good reason not to. How he decides this question is mostly a matter of using good judgment.

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.
©2012 King Features Syndicate Inc.

Consider this deal where West leads a club against four hearts and South must decide whether to tackle trumps right away. Let's suppose he wins the club with the king and plays the king of hearts. East wins and returns a club to dummy's ace.

Declarer crosses to his hand with a diamond and plays the Q-J of hearts, hoping for a 3-3 break. When West shows out, South must go down one, losing a diamond, a club and two hearts.

The trouble with this approach is that declarer, in effect, stakes the contract solely on a 3-3 trump division. Instead, he should shape his play so that he has a chance to make the contract even if the hearts are divided 4-2.

After winning the first club with the king, he should play a spade to the ace and ruff a spade. Now he leads the king of hearts. East takes the ace and returns a club. Declarer wins in dummy and ruffs another spade, then plays the Q-J of hearts, revealing the 4-2 trump division.

It is here that South's advance preparation pays off. He cashes the K-A of diamonds and then ruffs dummy's last spade with his last trump to produce his 10th trick. In this way, South scores five trump tricks despite the 4-2 division, as well as five tricks on the side in aces and kings.

Mets down A's to earn spot in Major League tourney final

Major League Met Nathan Vidal reaches first after a base hit during Wednesday's 15-10, extra inning victory over the Athletics. The Mets will now face the Blue Jays to determine the city tournament champions.

By ROBERT SMITH

Special to the HERALD

In a game with all the ebbs and flows you could ask for the Mets took a hard fought, 15-10 win over the Athletics in Little League city tournament action last night. The Mets are now headed to the championship game tonight where they will face the Blue Jays.

The Athletics took an early four run lead only to see the Mets fight back to take a one-run lead after four innings.

The game went back and forth through regulation play and was tied 10-10 after six innings were recorded.

The Athletics loaded the bases with one out in the 7th inning, but the Mets' defense prevented a rally.

The Mets then produced five runs in the top of the 8th and shut the Athletics down in the bottom of the same inning to claim the 15-10 win.

The Mets were led by Robert "Gordo" Valencia who struck out 14 batters on the mound, connected for three hits and scored four runs. Ustin Darden also had three hits for the Mets.

Tonight, the Mets will take on the Blue Jays at 7:30 p.m. at Garrett Field at the Roy Anderson Sports Complex.

Should the Blue Jays win, they will be the Major League city tournament champs. If the Mets win, they will force a Game Two to determine the victors.

Rangers record third shutout in five games, edge D'backs 1-0

STEPHEN HAWKINS

AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas — Arizona rookie left-hander Wade Miley held the powerful Texas Rangers lineup scoreless until giving up one run in the eighth inning.

And that still wasn't good enough for the Diamondbacks.

Matt Harrison extended his consecutive scoreless streak to 16 1-3 innings, pitching into the eighth before Mike Adams and Joe Nathan closed out the Rangers' third shutout victory in their past five games, 1-0 on Wednesday night.

"That was a tough one for sure," said Miley, who finished with a career-high eight strikeouts in 7 2-3 innings.

Miley (7-3) had allowed only two base runners, on two singles, before opening the eighth with his only walk — on a full-count pitch to Mike Napoli.

"When he got the walk, they got a little momentum," Miley said. "It was a slider a little bit down and in. I wanted to throw it back door. It was a borderline pitch. It could go either way, but he got it right."

Yorvit Torrealba then had a sacrifice bunt before pinch-hitter Nelson Cruz struck out. Craig Gentry, the No. 9 batter hitting .340, hit a hard one-hopper that ricocheted off the top of third baseman Ryan Roberts' glove and into left field for an RBI single.

After David Hernandez replaced Miley, who had gone a career-high eight innings to win against Colorado his previous start, Roberts made an impressive stop and threw out Ian Kinsler for the third out, but the damage was done.

Texas has won seven straight against the Diamondbacks, who were shut out for only the second time this season. Arizona has scored only once in the first two games of this series.

"I don't really have an answer for it," manager Kirk Gibson said.

The Rangers have won 28 of their last 40 games against National League opponents.

Though Harrison didn't get a decision, and was denied an AL-best ninth victory coming off a five-hit shutout in his previous game, he followed four consecutive victories with another impressive start.

And the Rangers needed every bit of what he had against Miley.

"It was very critical, matching the zeroes. ... He got the opportunity to put it up first, and Harry kept doing it," Rangers manager Ron Washington said. "Tonight, it only took one run, tonight it only took one hit in the right situation. ... Give Harry a lot of credit."

Adams (1-2) took over after Willie Bloomquist hit a ball just inside first base for a double. The reliever pumped his fist — as did Washington and catcher Torrealba — when Justin Upton, already with two hits, struck out to end the inning.

Nathan worked a perfect ninth for his 13th save in 14 chances.

It was the 11th 1-0 game in the history of Rangers Ballpark, which opened in 1994. It was the second this season — the Rangers beat Seattle 1-0 on April 10.

The 95-pitch effort by Harrison came a night after Colby Lewis threw a four-hitter for Texas in a 9-1 complete game in the series opener.

Harrison had beaten San Francisco 5-0 on Friday night, the same score for Sunday's victory over the Giants when Alexi Ogando threw three perfect innings in a start before straining his groin running out a bunt. Ogando is out four to six weeks after joining starters Neftali Feliz and Derek Holland on the disabled list.

Harrison struck out three and walked two while allowing six hits against Arizona.

"I feel good with my tempo right now and it's making me just focus on making my pitches and not worry about my tempo," Harrison said. "Just being aggressive, being able to throw my offspeed pitches for strikes."

The game was played in 2 hours, 12 minutes, not including a 29-minute rain delay after the fourth inning.

Harrison benefited from two double plays before the rain delay.

After Miguel Montero drew a leadoff walk in the third, he was doubled up on Roberts' liner to shortstop. Gerardo Parra followed with the Diamondbacks' first hit, an infield single on a ball that shortstop Elvis Andrus fielded deep in the hole going away from first base.

Upton grounded a one-out single up the middle in the fourth before Paul Goldschmidt's double-play grounder.

"We had a few chances, but not very many," Upton said. "Wade gave us a chance to win. You've got to tip your cap to their pitcher too. In situations where we had a chance to score, he shut us down."

Astros on receiving end of Cain's perfecto

JANIE McCAULEY

AP Baseball Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Matt Cain and his wife, Chelsea, returned to the field an hour and a half later for a few more perfect memories. They snapped photos on the mound, posing with the workers who tore it down so the dirt could be sent to the Hall of Fame.

Then they walked away hand in hand, stopping in left field for an embrace and long kiss.

The Giants franchise waited a long time for a perfect game, and Cain became the one to finally do it. Not Hall of Famers Christy Mathewson or Juan Marichal or Gaylord Perry before him.

Fittingly, Cain is the longest-tenured Giant these days.

His perfecto is the 22nd in major league history. He struck out a career-high 14 and got help from two spectacular catches to beat the Houston Astros 10-0 on Wednesday night.

"I've never had that much excitement in every pitch, every swing," Cain said.

His 125-pitch gem for San Francisco featured a pair of great plays by his corner outfielders. He got pinch-hitter Jason Castro on a grounder to third for his 27th and final out with the sellout crowd of 42,298 roaring.

"This is incredible right now," Cain said. "It was unbelievable. The guys did a great job making it, in a way, kind of relaxing, because they were able to get on the board early."

It was the fifth no-hitter in the majors already this season and second perfect game.

Another Year of the Pitcher? You bet.

In the very ballpark where Barry Bonds made home run history five summers ago, Cain produced the signature moment for pitchers. It was the 14th no-hitter in club history — Mathewson pitched Nos. 2 and 3 in 1901 and '05, and fellow Hall of Famers Carl Hubbell, Marichal and Perry had one apiece.

After Cain's career outing was in the books, the center field scoreboard showed an image of him pitching with the message: "MATT CAIN First Perfect Game in Giants Franchise History."

Left fielder Melky Cabrera chased out Chris Snyder's one-out flyball in the sixth, scurrying back to the sixth, leaping catch at the wall. Cain raised both arms and slapped his glove in delight when Cabrera made the play.

Then, right fielder Gregor Blanco ran into deep right-center to make a diving catch on the warning track and rob Jordan Schafer for the first out of the seventh. The 27-year-old pitcher hugged Blanco in the dugout after the inning.

"Those were unbelievable catches," Cain said. "I mean that right there, that changes the whole thing."

Philip Humber of the Chicago White Sox tossed the majors' last perfect game at Seattle on April 21.

This is the second time in three years there have been two perfect games in the same season — before that, the only other time it happened was in 1880.

Anti-doping agency charges Armstrong

JIM VERTUNO

AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN, Texas — Lance Armstrong is facing more doping allegations just a few months after he thought he had finally put them to rest.

Although federal investigators in February closed a two-year investigation without bringing criminal charges, the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency has filed new doping charges that could strip the seven-time Tour de France winner of his victories in cycling's premier race.

Armstrong insists he is innocent.

"I have never doped, and, unlike many of my accusers, I have competed as an endurance athlete for 25 years with no spike in performance, passed more than 500 drug tests and never failed one," Armstrong said in a statement.

"Any fair consideration of these allegations has and will continue to vindicate me."

The move by USADA immediately bans him from competing in triathlons, which he turned to after he retired from cycling last year.

Armstrong has been dogged by doping allegations since his first Tour victory in 1999, but had hoped his fight to be viewed as a clean champion was finally won after federal prosecutors closed their probe.

Armstrong has said the investigation took a heavy emotional toll and he was relieved when it ended.

But USADA officials insisted they would continue to pursue their investigation into Armstrong and his former teams and doctors, and notified him of the charges in a 15-page letter on Tuesday.

Unlike federal prosecutors, USADA isn't burdened by proving a crime occurred, just that there was use of performance-enhancing drugs.

change! By afternoon, you'll know why the morning's plan wasn't comprehensive enough. A new attack on the problems of the day will yield results by bedtime.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Make yourself comfortable in your own lifestyle. This won't require money so much as organizational skills and the ability to set some limits, especially with your nearest and dearest.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You like companionship, but you also realize that life can be prosperous and great without it, too. Being versatile and not the least bit needy makes you the ideal partner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your talent for self-reflection will be highlighted, as will your ability to assess your relationships clearly. When it's not working, it's nobody's fault. You'll take on the responsibility to fix it yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Life is one big wonderful journey, and you don't feel wed to the road map. You don't even feel wed to the road itself. Figuratively, your vehicle is capable of an off-road adventure.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). One of your more discerning moods takes hold, and you wonder why you should accept what's given when you clearly can negotiate or charm your way into better options.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). In addition to the family you were born into, you have created and maintained a family of friends. You'll enjoy the fact that you can choose the cast of characters that accompanies you in your personal story.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There's no end to what fascinates you. You're enthralled with human history, nature, children, love, sunshine, dew, gravity... The hard part is quieting your brilliant mind at the end of the day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Your relationship with extended family will influence your day. If you're married, this may have to do with your in-laws. You'll pave the way for peaceful future interactions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Sameness leads to staleness. It takes more effort to mix things up, but keep striving for variety. It allows you to better enjoy the things that give you pleasure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You are creative at your core, though it doesn't always present itself in the way some people think creativity would. Artistic talent is only one small sector of the broad spectrum of your gifts.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 14). You don't need symbols of success in order to feel good about yourself, but you'll still enjoy the signs that you are growing rich and powerful. The next six weeks bring many such signs. An educational pursuit will connect you with new friends in August. October is best for travel. Wedding bells ring in December. Pisces and Aries people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 2, 4, 31 and 29.

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: I'm 16 years old and deeply worried about my mother. I believe she has an undiagnosed anxiety disorder that's getting worse. She constantly stresses about every little thing. I can't remember the last time I saw her totally relaxed.

Mom once had a panic attack so severe that she strained several muscles, causing intense pain for weeks. She knows that her anxiety is unhealthy.

Several years ago, she mentioned it to her doctor, but was told that she did not require any treatment. Mom is stubborn, so despite the fact that she is getting worse, she will not ask for help again.

Annie, is there anything I can do? I hate seeing my mom in pain. — Michigan

Dear Michigan: Is your dad in the picture? What about grandparents, aunts or uncles? You shouldn't have to shoulder this on your own. Please talk to your mother and let her know how worried you are. It would help to have another trusted adult speak to her, as well.

Encourage her to contact the Anxiety and Depression Association of America at adaa.org for information. In the meantime, see if you can get her to participate in some simple exercise program with you — perhaps a walk after dinner or a weekend bike ride. Exercise can help relieve some symptoms of anxiety.

Dear Annie: I'm getting married in two months. Yesterday, I received an invitation to my cousin's bridal shower, which made me realize that none of my bridesmaids has bothered to ask if I would like one.

My maid of honor lives 16 hours away and is planning my bachelorette party. She can only make the trip for the weekend of the wedding. However, I have three other bridesmaids who live nearby. For one of them, I was the maid of honor and planned a shower. I am now left to purchase my own honeymoon lingerie and feel I am missing out on another celebration of this big step in my life.

I know it is rude to ask for a shower, and bringing up my disappointment will just cause unneeded drama. What can I do? — Disappointed in Mexico, Mo.

Dear Missouri: The point of a shower is to help a bride furnish her new home, and with so many couples living together before marriage, the events have become more inventive, but less necessary. As the bride, it is OK to ask your bridesmaids whether there will be a lingerie shower, so you can plan accordingly, but you may not demand that they have one.

Dear Readers: Today is Flag Day and the 33rd Annual Pause for the Pledge of Allegiance at 7 p.m. (Eastern time). For more information, log on to americanflagfoundation.org.
