Time is running out for residents with arrest warrants and fines to avoid a trip to the slammer, as local law enforcement and courts get ready to participate in a warrant roundup Saturday.

Part of a statewide effort to help municipalities and other government agencies tackle the growing number of arrest warrants being issued, Big Spring Municipal Judge Tim Green said every effort has been made to contact those with warrants and get the matters cleared up before the handcuffs get slapped on.

"We've had letters sent out to those people who have warrants, so this shouldn't

Senate panel OK's $1.4B more in school spending

By PAUL J. WEBER
 Associated Press
 AUSTIN, Texas — Two years after historic spending cuts to Texas classrooms, budget writers in the Senate on Thursday approved a $1.4 billion hike for public education in the first clear signal that the new Legislature may pour money back into financially ailing public schools.

How much lawmakers will ultimately spend on schools remains to be hammered out over the next few months. But education groups who rallied 2,000 supporters during a march on the Capitol last weekend greeted the spending bump by the Senate Finance Committee with optimism.

Republican state Sen. Tommy Williams, the committee chairman, called a new $40 million chunk back into a prekindergarten grant program slashed in 2011 a "down payment."

"I know that we've done a lot more in the past," Williams said. "This is important. This is very focused on at-risk kids. This is not every kid who is eligible for funding under this."

Texas spends $8,400 per student, $3,055 less than the national average.

The approved budget recommendation, which includes roughly $1.4 billion more in school spending, will move to the full Senate. That addition was part of a $35 billion proposed budget for public schools.

Democratic state Sen. Kirk Watson described the Big Spring will be a rockhound's paradise this weekend.

The 44th annual Big Spring Prospector's Club Gem and Mineral Show will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Howard County Fair Barns. Show times are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

Club members will be on hand to demonstrate how rocks are cut and shaped into jewelry and other items. Also, between 35 and 40 displays of rough and finished rocks will be on exhibit.

For those looking to buy some of those finished products, more than a dozen vendors from across Texas and the Southwest will have booths manned both days.

A spinning wheel for children — organizers promise a prize for every spin — will be available, as well as a snack bar.

MENTAL

ers overhauled the juvenile justice system in response to pervasive reports of physical and sexual abuse, the responsibility for early intervention has shifted from state to local officials.

As a result, commitments of youths to state jails have declined by 65 percent over the past five years, creating a smaller population of older teenagers with longer and more violent criminal records.

Lawmakers debated the merits of the change during Thursday's hearing.

"It becomes a cost savings for us," said Rep. Sylvester Turner,

D-Houston. "And the kids are the ones being hurt."

Rep. Charles Perry, R-Lubbock, attributed the declining state jail population to successful intervention by local officials, who now supervise the vast majority of young offenders through programs such as probation and deferred adjudication.

"I'm thinking maybe we got something right," he said. "I hope that's the case."

But even at the local level, diagnoses of mental illness are rising sharply, with the rate of mental illness among juvenile offenders on community-supervised probation rising from 20 percent in 2007 to 37 percent last year.

It surpassed the rate of similarly situated young offenders receiving drug and alcohol abuse treatment, officials said.

"That gets worse as it goes along," said Nancy Arrigona, director of research for the Juvenile Justice Department, in an interview outside the hearing. "Mentally ill kids get detained at much higher rates."

Arrigona said the toll of mental illness among young offenders is particularly visible at the Corsicana Residential Treatment Center, the primary jail for mentally ill youths who've committed offenses.

"Assaults there are higher," she said. "They have so many issues and so much going on that they act out. They might not understand the rules. It's just difficult."

spread. There was a home nearby on E. County Road 34 and the fire was moving in that general direction. However, we were able to get on the scene quickly and the closest it got was about a half-mile out. No other structures were threatened by the fire."

Sullivan said the unintended portion of the fire consumed only two acres of brush land and no injuries were reported as a result of the fire.

"The HCVFD had four vehicles on the scene and the Big Spring Fire Department had one vehicle, so we were able to shut it down pretty quick," he said.

Sullivan said he and his firefighters also recently responded to a structure fire near the intersection of Hilltop

Road and FM 1501.

"There was an electrical short in the ceiling of the home," Sullivan said. "However, the occupants were very lucky. They smelled smoke and contacted the fire department quickly. Also, thanks to the extreme cold we had that night the fire didn't move as quickly as it normally would have."

Sullivan said firefighters were able to save the home, which suffered only minimal damage from the fire. No injuries were reported as a result of the incident.

According to Sullivan, wildfire hazards in Howard County are quickly going from moderate to extreme.

"We still have some moisture in the ground, so that helps us out a lot," Sullivan said. "However, we're getting closer and closer to extreme conditions with each passing day. That, coupled with the high winds we can expect toward the end of this month and in March, is going to make for a very busy season."

Sullivan said he plans to meet with Howard County commissioners soon to discuss enacting a burn ban.

"I expect to meet with them toward the end of the month to request they enact a burn ban if the conditions continue the way they are going," he said.

from(2011)," she said. "I can give parents the assurance that there is good instruction going on every day. Our students may not yet be the greatest test takers just yet, but they're being great learners."

STAAR testing in grades 3 through 8 this year begins April 12.

Also Thursday, trustees approved a change in the way the district conducts school board elections, approving a resolution to allow new trustees to be elected by a plurality instead of by a majority of votes.

In other business, trustees:

- Officially set May 11 as the date for trustee elections. Seats up for election this year include District 5, currently held by Chad Wash, and Districts 6 and 7, in which Jeff Borman and Phil Furqueron are the incumbents.

Wash filed his candidacy for re-election Wednesday. Borman said he is undecided whether he will run again, while Furqueron said he will not seek re-election.

- Approved renewal of contract for administrators, directors and coordinators, as well as legal and local policy updates.

Money is better spent elsewhere

There was a time not all that long ago when Texas prisons were jam-packed. Now, because of falling crime rates and a move away from trying to incarcerate as many convicts as possible, about 10,000 bunks might be going unused in Texas' 111-prison system. There are hundreds of additional empty bunks in the state's six prisons for juvenile inmates.

Even with all this empty state-run space available, Texas pays $123 million a year to lease beds from private prison companies, as the American-Statesman reported last week.

This is money poorly spent that could be redirected elsewhere. The number of unused beds in state prisons gives legislators the opportunity to consolidate Texas' prison system and close more prisons beyond the one they agreed to close in 2011. Additional money can be saved by ending contracts with private prison companies.

The number of people sent to prison has been declining for years. The state's prison population is about 150,000, down some 7,000 convicts from three years ago. The incarceration decline is expected to continue as crime rates keep slowly falling and the state refocuses corrections on rehabilitation and treatment in community-based programs.

The same is similarly true of the state's juvenile prison system, as the American-Statesman reported. There are about 1,100 juvenile offenders imprisoned in Texas, but none of the state's six juvenile facilities is close to capacity. Two, the Corsicana Residential Treatment Center and the Ron Jackson State Juvenile Correctional Center, are less than half full.

Prisons mean jobs, and for that reason lawmakers find it hard to close them. Nonetheless, the state cannot afford to pay for unused prison beds.

“We've got to quit, once and for all, running these facilities just because they're there for economic development purposes,” said Democratic state Sen. John Whitmire of Houston, chairman of the Senate Criminal Justice Committee. “We need to use taxpayers' money to fight crime, on the public safety priorities of this state, rather than just on bricks and mortar that in some cases we don't need.”

Texas went on a prison-building and prison-privatization binge in the 1980s and 1990s. Many struggling small cities and towns competed to bring a prison to their area, thinking it would bring jobs and give the community an economic boost. Studies done over the past several years have questioned that assumption.

A new study by Gregory Hooks, a sociology professor at Washington State University and perhaps the leading researcher on the subject of prisons, jobs and privatization, finds that prisons contribute minimally to job growth and might even negatively affect it. In a Jan. 28 press release announcing his latest study, Hooks said that “the privatization of prisons often has a negative impact on employment prospects” in the rural counties that host many prisons.

This negative impact, according to Hooks, is attributable partly to the lower pay and fewer benefits offered by private prisons, which also have a higher turnover rate than state prisons.

Texas prisons are suffering from a chronic shortage of guards. Consolidating and shrinking the prison system might allow the state to hire more prison employees and bump up their pay and benefits, which might help stabilize prison employment.

We agree with Whitmire that a good move for the state to make, given the number of excess beds in the state-run system, is to not renew some of its contracts with private prison companies when they expire.

Brad Livingston, the chief of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, says that caps on prison populations and capacity mean there are fewer empty beds in the state's prison system than Whitmire and others are counting. He says his agency needs far more than the $3.1 billion annual budget proposed by legislators to maintain prisons, hire more officers and replace old vehicles.

Livingston's cautious notes should be considered, but the state has an opportunity to shrink its bloated prison system and more smartly, rather than bluntly, address its criminal justice needs. Every dollar misspent on prisons is a dollar kept from education, health care and, as Whitmire points out, public safety and fighting crime.

Plagued by good news

MEDFORD, Ore. — “Obama says he's going to make middle-class jobs,” the breakfast room troubadour bellowed at the Holiday Inn Express to those who wanted to listen — and to those who didn't. “Did he make your job?” he went on, cornering a female employee. “Private companies make jobs.”

The commentary was not entirely wrong. Private enterprise creates the great majority of jobs in this country. But the baritone assumes that entrepreneurs can easily grow good jobs in a world filled with smart young people working for less money.

Every successful rich country — Germany, for example — has a government actively building the right economic environment, including an educated workforce able to fill good jobs. It has low unemployment, high wages and a sturdy social safety net.

In his State of the Union address, President Obama proposed “a Fix-It-First program to put people to work as soon as possible on our most urgent repairs, like the nearly 70,000 structurally deficient bridges across the country.” A modern country needs a modern infrastructure. It helps the makers make more.

FROMA HARROP

Here in the Northwest, the aging I-5 bridge over the Columbia River is a major worry for both Oregon and Washington state. It needs rebuilding — and, for that, a good chunk of federal money.

If in the course of rebuilding these bridges, thousands of jobs are made, that's what we call a win-win situation. That taxpayer dollars are involved is no reason to hate the program.

Public investment in energy technology is today's moonshot. Notwithstanding some bad bets, such as Solyndra, it multiplies private-sector jobs. It is partly why American manufacturers are selling cars again and why, as Obama noted, wind and solar energy has doubled.

Technology is why, as Obama also pointed out, Caterpillar, Ford, Intel and Apple are opening plants in the United States, rather than in China, Mexico and other lower-wage countries.

Robots are allowing us to compete.

Now Obama does play fast and loose with some numbers, according to the fact-checkers. While wind and solar energy production is way up, it still represents a very small piece of the energy mix — even the renewable energy mix (which includes hydropower and ethanol). But these technologies are still relatively new, and they're way up from nothing.

Obama breaks the truth-meter when he claims that “we have doubled the distance our cars will go on a gallon of gas.” If only. He was talking about his administration's call for raising fuel economy standards by 2025 — a bold goal that carmakers may or may not be able to reach. Suffice it to say, though, the 17 percent rise in fuel efficiency over the last four years is very, very impressive.

Most viewers weren't dining with the fact-checkers, but even if they had, the news sounded pretty good. Over half a million new jobs, more American cars sold, less foreign oil used, a housing market on the mend. As Obama reminded everyone, “We have cleared away the rubble of crisis” created by you-know-who.

Sitting behind Obama, Republican House Speaker John Boehner stoically listened to the progress reports. Next to him, Vice President Joe Biden seemed paralyzed in a grin.

Much of the Republican reaction was self-pity. Official responder Florida Sen. Marco Rubio offered a long list of fictional accusations.

Example: When Republicans say that “government can't control the weather” (not quite true with global warming), “he accuses us of wanting dirty water and dirty air.”

Hey, it was a tough night for Republicans. Their big voices on the radio and in motel breakfast rooms have little recourse but to raise the volume.

Happy 500th birthday, Florida

Editor's Note: This is the 29th part of an ongoing series, “America's Hidden Hispanic Heritage.” To read previous columns in the series, go to <http://www.hidden-hispanicheritage.com>

My reservations are made; my plans are solid. I'm going to be in Florida on April 2 and 3 to celebrate the 500th anniversary of Juan Ponce de Leon's great discovery. But it's not really fair. I'm going to a celebration that should be coming to me — and to all of us across this country!

When Florida marks its quinquennial, the whole nation should be celebrating its 500th birthday.

After all, on April 2 and 3, 1513, Ponce de Leon didn't just discover and land on what today we know as the State of Florida but on the mainland that later became the United States.

He discovered our country! Although Florida initially was believed to be an island, in the late 16th century, European scholars and mapmakers used the word “Florida” to describe much of the territory now known as the U.S. mainland. Yet nowadays, when we hear that Ponce de Leon discovered Florida, we give him credit only for one state. It's absurd!

But why would we deprive ourselves from celebrating our 500th birthday? Why aren't we planning a huge, nationwide series of events to commemorate our quinquennial in April? Why are we letting Florida have all the fun? And why is the rest of the country oblivious to the upcoming Florida celebrations?

Could it be simple confusion about the territory Ponce de Leon discovered? Could it be small-minded planning by Florida officials who failed call for a national celebration? Could it be greed for tourism dollars that made them reluctant to share their party with the rest of the nation?

Or could it be “The Black Legend,” that insidious centuries-old campaign that keeps minimizing the accomplishments of the Spanish explorers and their Latino descendants? Had this country been discovered by Anglo-Saxon explorers, instead of Spanish conquistadors, wouldn't we be getting ready for fireworks all over the United States?

The answer is: Yes, all of the above.

In 1976, we had a great national celebration to commemorate the bicentennial of our Declaration of Independence. There were many wonderful events to help Americans reconnect with their history. Doesn't the quinquennial of our discovery deserve similar national attention?

Wouldn't it give Americans another wonderful opportunity to reconnect with yet another portion our history, especially the history of Ponce de Leon and the millions of other Hispanics who have been following him to North America since 1513?

So why neglect our “American Discovery Day”? Is it because it recognizes the Hispanic roots that American history tends to keep hidden? Is it because it reminds us of nearly a century of Spanish exploration of North America before the British arrived?

Mind you, in 2004, the two U.S. senators from Florida, Bob Graham and Bill Nelson, both Democrats, introduced federal legislation that would have established a “National Commission on the Quinquennial of the discovery of Florida by Ponce de Leon” to “encourage, coordinate and conduct” celebrations that would “enhance public understanding of the impact of the discovery of Florida on the history of the United States.” Although it was passed by the U.S. Senate, the bill never cleared the House.

Yet now that so many politicians acknowledge their need to reach out to Latinos, one would think they would grab this opportunity to begin recognizing 500 years of hidden Hispanic heritage. This is the time to recognize the great feats of those conquistadors who discovered, explored and settled huge portions of North America long before other Europeans.

Ponce de Leon arrived in the New World on Columbus' second voyage, became the governor of Puerto Rico, and then led the 200

Spanish sailors who were the first Europeans to set foot on the mainland that later became the United States.

Nevertheless, this is only happening in Florida, where a year-long series events already are underway.

Under the statewide “Viva Florida 500” campaign, there will be history lectures, art exhibits, tall ship flotillas, parades, fireworks and wonderful reenactments of historic moments. But unfortunately, these events are so small and so local that the rest of us are not even aware of them.

If you follow news accounts on plans for the Florida celebrations, you know that instead of trying to involve the rest of the nation, two towns are currently competing for the right to claim the site where Ponce de Leon first landed.

First you have St. Augustine, founded in 1565, remaining the oldest permanent settlement in the United States, but also always claiming to be the site of Ponce de Leon's first landing in 1513. On April 3, the city is planning a ceremonial replica-ship reenactment of the landing at the downtown bay front, a mass at Cathedral Basilica of St. Augustine, the erection of its fourth Ponce de Leon statue and the dedication of a reproduction baptismal font on which Ponce de Leon was baptized in 1474. I plan to be there.

And then you have Melbourne Beach, some 142 miles to the south, where community activists and history buffs have been on a decade-long campaign to prove they live much closer to the real landing site. On April 2, Melbourne Beach will host its own replica-ship landing reenactment, an Air Force fly over, a naval 21-gun salute and the unveiling of a 10-foot bronze Ponce de Leon statue in the city's “Don Juan Ponce de Leon Landing Park.” I plan to be there, too.

What became of Aura Lee?

Aura Lee has disappeared. Once the sweetheart of an American Civil War ballad, the maid with golden hair has long been forgotten. Her virtues are no longer touted. All memories of her have ceased, buried with those whose lips once sang her praises.

Published in 1861 with music composed by George R. Poulton and words written by W.W. Fosdick, "Aura Lee" was a popular love song. A favorite of college glee clubs and barbershop quartets, the girl with golden hair was also sung about by the U.S. Military Academy in West Point, New York.

With the passing of time, "Aura Lee," like many other songs that embodied an era in history, had slipped into the archives of music history. But not to be forgotten, the dormant tune surfaced from the chambers of some musical storehouse to become a hit once more.

Almost a century later, a young artist named Elvis Presley released "Aura Lee" with fresh words written principally by Ken Darby. In the fall of 1956, Presley sang "Love Me Tender" to the tune of "Aura Lee" on the Ed Sullivan show. With more than a million advance orders, "Love Me Tender" became a gold record before it was released.

In the course of history, some great pieces of music, a few well-written books, a smattering of creative inventions, and a handful of good ideas earn the title of "timeless." Other works, perhaps of equal quality, disappear into the dust of the past.

In the field of literature, one book has remained a best seller, a gold record of sorts, for centuries. Portions of the Bible have been translated into 2,530 languages around the world. Testimonies about the impact of God's Word continue to emerge from the most unexpected places.

Perhaps we shouldn't be surprised that the Scripture continues to make a comeback in the lives of those who have rejected God. The prophet Isaiah wrote, "For as the rain and the snow come down from heaven and do not return there but water the earth, making it bring forth and sprout, giving seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall my word be that goes out from my mouth; it shall not return to me empty, but it shall accomplish that which I purpose, and shall succeed in the thing for which I sent it" (Isaiah 55:11 ESV).

Just as a catchy tune becomes etched in the mind of a listener, God's Word has the power to penetrate even the most unreceptive heart. Like the "Aura Lees" of the past, we never know when Scripture we may have forgotten will pop up to bring conviction or comfort when we need it most.

BONNIE WHEAT

I dreamed a dream

Most of us know the song because of Susan Boyle's appearance on Britain's "Got Talent." April 11, 2009, Susan stood on the stage in her frumpy dress and outdated hairdo. The audience and judges snickered and laughed during her interview, enjoying the misery of this out-of-touch want-a-be in an out-of-place position.

But, when she opened her mouth and began to sing, everyone sat stunned. In a clear voice that was perfectly on pitch, she sang, "I dreamed a dream of time gone by, when

Pfeifer: Pope's resignation 'not totally' unexpected

Following is a statement by San Angelo Bishop Michael Pfeifer on the resignation announcement of Pope Benedict XVI:

"Like the whole world, especially the leaders of our Roman Catholic Church, I was surprised, but not totally, by the sudden decision of Pope Benedict XVI to offer his resignation as Supreme Pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church. While it was rather sudden and not expected at this moment, I had suspected over the past year that one day soon, Pope Benedict XVI, because of advancing age and health issues, would relinquish the Petrine ministry, as Pope, for our Catholic Church. I was with Pope Benedict XVI twice in the past year and a half and I could see how difficult it was for him to carry out his universal ministry for the worldwide Church.

"In March 2012, along with the other Bishops of Texas, I spent several days in Rome and had the opportunity for a personal visit with Pope Benedict XVI, and we all could see that his strength was failing. During that visit, he gave me a special pectoral cross that I wear each day and treasure immensely.

"Pope Benedict XVI, as he has indicated in his statement of resignation, does this for what he considers to be the best for our Catholic Church at this time. I know this is a very difficult decision for him, as he wants to continue a very demanding ministry, unlike that of any other office in the world.

"Pope Benedict XVI, who accepted the election of the Cardinals to head the Papacy already at an age when he could have retired, gave his entire heart and strength as long as he could to lead our Catholic Church during the past eight years.

"Pope Benedict XVI brought the tender heart of a pastor, the incisive mind of a scholar and the confidence of a soul united with his God in all that he did. His resignation is but another sign of his great care for the Church. We are sad that he will be resigning, but grateful for his eight years of selfless leadership as successor of St. Peter.

"While elected at an age past retirement, Pope Benedict XVI, as hope was high and life worth living. I dreamed that love would never die. I dreamed that God would be forgiving. Then I was young and unafraid, and dreams were made, and used and wasted ..."

It seemed that Susan Boyle was singing her own song, a dream of youth faded and gone. After a moment of stunned silence, the crowd leaped to their feet in a standing ovation for this obscure Scottish woman who lived alone with her cat. In November of 2009 she released her first album. It immediately became the number one best selling album in the world.

The song Susan chose to sing that night comes from the musical adaptation of Victor Hugo's novel, Les Miserables. It is the song sung by Fantine, an unwed mother ostracized in nineteenth century France for her "moral failure" and forced into prostitution in order to support her child. Anne Hathaway was nominated for an Academy Award and won the Golden Globe for her performance of the song in the recent movie version of the musical.

In 1862, commenting on Fantine, the character in his novel, Victor Hugo wrote, "What is this history of Fantine? It is society purchasing a slave. From whom? From misery. From hunger, cold, isolation, destitution. A dolorous bargain. A soul for a morsel of bread. Misery offers; society accepts. The sacred law of Jesus Christ governs our civilization, but it does not yet permeate it; it is said that slavery has disappeared from European civilization.

This is a mistake. It still exists; but it weights only upon the woman, and it is called prostitution."

Most of us think that slavery ended with the Civil War but, according to International Justice Mission, "More children, women and men are held in slavery right now than over the course of the entire trans-Atlantic slave trade.... Trafficking in humans generates profits in excess of 32 billion dollars a year for those who, by force and deception, sell human lives into slavery and sexual bondage." According to the U.S. Department of State, "There are approximately 600,000 to 800,000 children, women and men trafficked across international borders annually." 80% of these are women and girls. Up to 50% are minors. International Justice Mission (IJM) was founded in 1997 by Gary Haugen after an international study disclosed widespread global abuse of the poor. Today IJM has over 500 lawyers, investigators, social workers and other staff working in Asia, Africa and South America to confront abuse and rescue victims. More than 95% are nationals in the countries where they serve. (for more information visit <http://www.ijm.org>) God gives every generation the responsibility to help others experience dignity, freedom, respect, opportunity and faith. What am I doing today to help others dream their dream?

National/world news in brief

Crippled cruise ship docks at Ala. port; passengers celebrate end of miserable Gulf odyssey

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The passengers of the Carnival cruise ship Triumph began the process of getting back to normal early Friday, checking into hotels for a shower, hot meal and good night's sleep or boarding buses bound for other cities after five numbing days at sea on a powerless ship disabled by an engine-room fire.

The cruise ship carrying some 4,200 people finally docked late Thursday in Mobile, as passengers raucously cheered the end to an ocean odyssey they say was marked by overflowing toilets, food shortages and foul odors.

"Sweet Home Alabama!" read one of the homemade signs passengers affixed alongside the 14-story ship as many celebrated at deck rails lining several levels of the stricken ship. The ship's horn loudly blasted several times as four tugboats pulled the crippled ship to shore at about 9:15 p.m. CST. Some gave a thumbs-up sign and flashes from cameras and cellphones lit the night.

Less than four hours later, the last passenger had disembarked.

Some, like 56-year-old Deborah Knight of Houston, had no interest in boarding one of about 100 buses assembled to carry passengers to hotels in New Orleans or Texas. Her husband Seth drove in from Houston and they checked into a downtown Mobile hotel.

Meteor falls in Russia's Chelyabinsk region; 400 injured by explosions

MOSCOW (AP) — A meteor streaked across the sky above Russia's Ural Mountains on Friday morning, causing sharp explosions and injuring more than 400 people, many of them hurt by broken glass.

"There was panic. People had no idea what was happening. Everyone was going around to people's houses to check if they were OK," said Sergey Hametov, a resident of Chelyabinsk, about 1500 kilometers (930 miles) east of Moscow, the biggest city in the affected region.

"We saw a big burst of light then went outside to see what it was and we heard a really loud thundering sound," he told The Associated Press by telephone.

Another Chelyabinsk resident, Valya Kazakov, said some elderly women in his neighborhood started crying out that the world was ending.

Some meteorites — fragments of the meteor — fell in a reservoir outside the town of Cherbakul, the regional governor's office said, according to the ITAR-Tass news agency. It was not immediately clear if any people were struck by fragments.

Republicans stall Hagel vote, drawing White House ire, but confirmation still likely WASHINGTON (AP) — By delaying a confirmation vote on Chuck Hagel to be defense secretary, Senate Republicans have forced Leon Panetta to remain on the job he is eager to give up. But they've also given the White House an opportunity to cast the GOP as obstructing President Barack Obama's assembly of a second-term national security team.

Senate Republicans temporarily blocked a Hagel confirmation vote on Thursday, insisting that the administration must first answer more questions about its handling of a terrorist attack last September on a U.S. diplomatic compound in Benghazi, Libya, that killed four Americans, including Ambassador Chris Stevens.

Jay Carney, the White House press secretary, called it "political posturing."

"Just when you thought things couldn't get worse, it got worse," Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said after the GOP forced the delay.

The Senate action amounted to a parliamentary maneuver, with Democrats needing 60 votes for Hagel's confirmation to move forward. It fell two votes short.

Obama wants to change the face of the federal judiciary, if nominees can get past the Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama is trying to change the face of a federal judiciary that has a long tradition of white men passing judgment on parties from all walks of life — if he can get his nominees past the Senate.

Republicans have used the powers accorded the Senate minority party to slow Obama's influence on the federal bench. But recent changes to Senate rules suggest the process may begin to move faster, at least at the lower, U.S. District Court level.

Under a recent bipartisan agreement, the Senate will limit debate on district court judge nominees to two hours, far below the 30 hours that used to be allowed. The hope is that will curtail a tradition that dates back to the Clinton administration of the president's opposing party stalling judicial nominees.

Democrats also used the tactic for some of President George W. Bush's nominees, but the delays have been particularly long under Obama.

House move to extend pay freeze for federal workers draws fire from White House, Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — House conservatives want to extend to a full three years the current freeze on cost-of-living pay increases for the nation's 2 million civilian federal workers.

They say that blocking a modest raise proposed by President Barack Obama for the last nine months of this year will save $11 billion over the long run and that well-compensated federal employees can afford it.

Democrats, and a few Republicans, say federal workers have already done more than their fair share in helping reduce the federal deficit and they are being singled out for punishment by anti-government lawmakers.

The House on Thursday took up legislation by freshman Rep. Ron DeSantis, R-Fla., that would block the 0.5 percent pay increase Obama ordered in December and scheduled to go into effect at the end of March.

DeSantis said federal spending is out of control and his bill "tackles Congress and our bloated federal government head-on." His bill would affect across-the-board pay increases but not merit and longevity raises.

The GOP-led House is expected to pass the bill on Friday, but it's likely to receive a cold reception in the Democratic-controlled Senate.

Couple's story about being held hostage by ex-LA cop renews questions about intensive manhunt

BIG BEAR LAKE, Calif. (AP) — Karen and Jim Reynolds say they came face to face with fugitive Christopher Dorner, not on a snow-covered mountain trail, but inside their cabin-style condo.

During a 15-minute ordeal just a stone's throw from a command post authorities had set up in the massive manhunt for the ex-Los Angeles police officer, the couple said Dorner bound them and put pillboxes on their heads. At one point, he explained that he had been there for days.

"He said, 'I don't have a problem with you, so I'm not going to hurt you,'" Jim Reynolds said. "I didn't believe him; I thought he was going to kill us."

Police have not commented on the Reynoldses' account, but it renews questions about the thoroughness of a search for a man who authorities declared was armed and extremely dangerous as they hunted him across the Southwest and Mexico.

Remains found in the burned cabin where Dorner made his last stand Tuesday were positively identified Thursday through dental examination.

Oscar Pistorius arrives in court in murder case after girlfriend shot dead

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Paralympic superstar Oscar Pistorius openly wept as he appeared in court Friday, charged with the murder of his girlfriend as South Africans closely watched developments in a killing that has stunned the country.

Reeva Steenkamp, a model and budding reality TV show participant, was shot and killed at Pistorius' upmarket home in an eastern suburb of the South African capital in the predawn hours of Thursday, sending the country reeling.

Pistorius solemnly entered court in a gray suit and blue tie. He later broke down in tears.

Chief Magistrate Desmond Nasir was presiding over the hearing which likely will include Pistorius' request for bail. Police oppose the granting of bail.

Pistorius' father, Henke, was in the court as was his brother Carl, sister Aimee and other supporters of the 26-year-old double-amputee athlete.

Planned 'traditional' prom barring gays raises questions about tolerance in small Indiana city

SULLIVAN, Ind. (AP) — A small Indiana community best known for its parks and corn festival has become the center of a national discussion about intolerance over a group's plans to host a "traditional" prom that bans gay students.

Residents and officials in Sullivan, a city of about 4,200 near the Illinois border, are scrambling to escape the uncomfortable spotlight cast when a teacher supporting the "traditional" prom for Sullivan High School said she believes people choose to be gay and that gays have no purpose in life.

"I just ... I don't understand it," Diana Medley, referring to gays, told Terre Haute television station WTOV.

The comments by Medley, a special education teacher in a neighboring school district, have gone viral and sparked online campaigns to have her fired. A petition on Change.org calling for her dismissal had generated more than 17,500 signatures from as far away as the United Kingdom as of Thursday, and a Facebook page supporting a prom that includes all students had more than 27,000 likes.

The fallout has surprised many residents, who say the issue roiling the community in an area known for coal mining and attractive parks is being blown out of proportion.

Contract Bridge

By Steve Becker

Test Your Play

You are declarer with the West hand at Seven Notrump. North leads the jack of hearts, which you win with the queen as South follows low.

How would you play the hand?

West East

♠ A K Q 2 ♠ 6 5 4 3

♥ 3 2 ♥ A K Q

♦ A K Q 3 ♦ 2

♣ A K Q ♣ 6 5 4 3 2

If either the spades or the clubs are divided 3-2, you have 13 tricks, so you should start by assuming that both suits are divided unfavorably — that is, 4-1 or 5-0.

The contract cannot be defeated — no matter how the cards are divided — if you play properly. You might have to execute a squeeze, but to accomplish it you must be careful to cash your tricks in the right order.

You start by playing the A-K of spades and A-K of clubs. When you do, you might discover (1) that one opponent has both of these suits guarded, or (2) that each opponent has one suit guarded.

In case No. 1, the squeeze is accomplished by simply cashing the A-K-Q of diamonds, queen of clubs and A-K of hearts, ending in dummy. As these cards are cashed, you discard a spade and a club from dummy and a diamond from your hand, leaving this position:

West East

♠ Q 2 ♠ 6

♥ 2 ♠ 6

♦ A K Q 3 ♠ 6 5

♣ 6 5

The opponent with both black suits guarded is down to two cards also and was forced to unguard one of those suits when the last heart was cashed. Whether he relinquished a club or a spade, that discard was fatal.

In case No. 2, you continue by cashing both black queens, followed by the A-K of hearts, to bring about this position:

West East

♠ A K Q 3 ♠ 6

♥ 2 ♠ 6

♦ A K Q 3 ♠ 6 5

♣ 6 5

By now the squeeze (called a double squeeze because both opponents feel the pinch) has already worked.

The opponent with the spade guard could not keep more than three diamonds, and the opponent with the club guard likewise could not keep more than three diamonds. The A-K-Q-3 of diamonds therefore win the last four tricks.

Of course, if either opponent relinquishes his guard in either black suit, you would discard the three of diamonds on the established club or spade before cashing the A-K-Q of diamonds.

— Jews, Muslims and

Christians in the war-torn Middle East, the desperately poor in Africa and the world's youth gathered to meet him in Australia, Germany and Spain.

I was with him at two of those huge World Youth gatherings — in Australia and in Spain.

"He delighted our beloved United States of America when he visited Washington and New York in 2008. I had the privilege of being with him during that visit to Washington, especially when he visited the White House, when he and President Bush together addressed thousands of people on the South Lawn of the White House.

"As a spiritual leader, he led the Catholic community in prayer at Nationals Park, Yankee Stadium and St. Patrick's Cathedral. He spoke for the world's poor when he visited them and wrote of equality among nations in his peace messages and encyclicals.

"I thank God that I had the privilege as a Bishop of the Roman Catholic Church to serve God's people under his leadership and I recall my visits with him even before he became Pope Benedict XVI, when he was known as Cardinal Ratzinger. As he lives out this surely hard-made decision, but what he considers to be the will of God and the best for the Church he has guided, I thank him for his outstanding, gracious and enlightened leadership that he has provided for the Catholic Church and the whole world. As I have done every day, I will continue to pray for him and invite all of our people to pray for him.

"This is a unique moment in the life of the Catholic Church, as we have not experienced a change in the Papacy through resignation for more than 600 years ... I invite all of our people during this time of transition, as we prepare for the conclave of Cardinals to elect a new Pope, to more than ever pray for the guidance of the Holy Spirit. May Jesus, who is the main Shepherd of our Church and all of us, continue to guide us, and may His precious Mother, Mary, continue to intercede for us."

SWEETWATER — The Big Spring powerlifting squad earned a sixth place finish out of 14 teams Thursday at the Sweetwater Classic meet and Head Coach Eric Tuttle believes several Steers will qualify for the regional meet coming up in March.

"We've been doing pretty well," Tuttle said of his athletes. "We've been steadily gaining every meet and getting better. Chris Lindem added 95 pounds to his total since the last meet. We should have about eight boys and all four girls competing at regionals."

Tyler Narin took first place in the 123 pound division with a total of 875. Vanessa Alvarado and Roenisha Bell nabbed second place finishes in the 148 pound and 220 pound weight classes, respectively.

Aric Rutledge finished third in the 275 pound class and Lindem came in third in the 220 pound division.

Next up for the boys will be a meet in Hawley on Saturday, Feb. 23. Regionals will be held in Fort Stockton on March 2 for the girls and March 8 in Sundown for the boys. The state meet will be held March 23 in Abilene.

"We're excited," Tuttle added. "They have been working hard and bumping up their totals at every meet. As long as they keep it up, we are on the right track."

Individual results:
Boys

- Tyler Narin, 123 lbs., Total: 875 — 1st place.
- Robert Martinez, 148 lbs., Total: 915 — 7th place.
- Chris Lindem, 220 lbs., Total: 1165 — 3rd place.
- Ronnie Bell, 220 lbs., Total: 1150 — 6th place.
- Austin Cantu, 220 lbs., Total: 1055 — 8th place.
- Aric Rutledge, 275 lbs., Total: 1275 — 3rd place.
- Val Presas, 275 lbs., Total: 975 — 10th place.

Hawk squads split at NMJC

By BRIAN MCCORMACK

Sports Editor

HOBBS, N.M. — Howard College Head Women's Basketball Coach Earl Diddle and his team have been faced with adversity for much of the season.

The squad lost some of its starters early in the year due to family issues, leaving Diddle scrambling to fill in the gaps. Just when things started coming together for the Lady Hawks (17-10, 5-6), Marion Lemonnier — point guard and one of the leading scorers — pulled a hamstring last week and was forced out for at least a few games. Starter Brittney Aikens — who led HC in scoring last week — had to skip Thursday's game due to an illness in the family.

As short-handed as the Hawks are, they almost pulled off a win against New Mexico Junior College on Thursday, but came away with a narrow, 52-46 loss.

It was tied at 23 at the break and Diddle said it was a see-saw battle for the entire second half. All tied up with three minutes remaining, NMJC sank a three-point basket and then drew a foul to close out the game with a six-point victory and hand HC their first loss in three games.

"I thought we played extremely well defensively," Diddle said. "We struggled offensively at the end of the game. We turned the ball over too many times. I think we had 25 turnovers. I'm proud of their effort. We should have and could have won that game if we had taken better care of the ball."

With only seven players suited up, Tori Tucker took charge, leading the Hawks with 19 points.

Next up for HC will be a rematch against Odessa College, which Diddle said is likely the dominant team in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

"Odessa is the most talented team in the conference and the most aggressive team," Diddle added. "We're going to have to play hard and take care of the ball." Game time is slated for Monday at 5:45 p.m. at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

HOBBS, N.M. — The Hawks (22-4, 9-3) avenged the conference loss that came at the hands of New Mexico Junior College on Thursday with a 69-64 road win over the Thunderbirds. Howard College has now won three straight games and six of its last seven.

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My wife and I are having marital problems. Our issues started when I caught her lying to me and talking privately on the phone to my best friend of 12 years — the same guy who was the best man at my wedding.

After arguing for a few days, I asked her to make a sincere effort to go for counseling, and she agreed. I also asked her to stop speaking to my friend during the time we are trying to repair our marriage. She agreed to that, too.

However, this guy messages her on Facebook, and she still reads his comments. We went to our first counseling session, and I felt it went well. But when we got home, I realized that she was having doubts. She finally said she had not been in love with me for five years.

Annie, we have a beautiful 16-month-old baby girl. I want to repair our marriage for our child's sake, as well as for us. What should I do? Can marriage counseling help if there's no love? — Dying in New York

Dear New York: Marriage counseling can help if there once was love that can be recaptured, or if both parties are dedicated to making the marriage work. A compatible marriage doesn't necessarily require passion for each other, only a commitment to the stability of the relationship. But you cannot do it alone. Please continue with counseling. If your wife wants to work on the marriage, she will come along and make the necessary effort. But if she is unwilling, the counselor will help you forge your own path.

Dear Annie: Would you please define "immediate family"? My granddaughter is getting married in May. She is inviting "immediate family only," thus excluding my daughter (her aunt) and my daughter-in-law's sister.

This is going to cause a lot of hurt feelings and might even create a split in the family. I am invited, but not my male friend of 14 years. I have talked to my son, the father of the bride, but he does not want to get involved.

Our side of the family is not as large as the groom's. My ex-husband (the grandfather) will not be attending. Why can't my daughter take his place? What about my daughter's husband? My relationship with my granddaughter is very close, so I don't understand this, and it's causing tremendous stress. Please advise. — Gram

Dear Gram: "Immediate family" refers to the bridal couple's parents and siblings. (If the bride and groom have children, they would also be part of the immediate family.) Grandparents are usually included as "immediate family," but not aunts, uncles, cousins, in-laws or other relatives. Your companion of 14 years should be invited because the two of you are an established couple. If your daughter is invited, her husband should be, as well.

Your granddaughter gets to determine her side of the wedding list. Although we understand how painful this is for you, as long as ALL aunts, uncles and cousins are excluded, it is equitable.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Moon Plays Quality Monitor

The Taurus moon is a quality control expert, checking the integrity of everything that falls into our path on this opportunity-filled day. This earthy lunar influence provides an objective and highly discerning viewpoint. We'll employ all of our senses to separate the good results from the excellent ones.

HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Be careful where you throw your energy. If you're not absolutely sure, don't go all in. A ram who butts into the bramble will find himself in a tangled-up mess.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). If you give people something to resist, they will resist it today. That's why you would be wise to influence through your subtle example. Your presence is stronger than you know.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Doing the right thing in general will lead to specific improvements in the situation that most needs it. You have great powers of endurance that will lead to your eventual success.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You are a bit like the tides — eternally faithful to the moon, forever carrying bits from shore to shore. Through you, lovely mixes happen. Lively varieties are born.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The moment of truth isn't really a single moment; rather, it's a series of small choices that add up to a particular destiny. You condition yourself by doing right in a million tiny ways.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your complexities are made obvious now. There are many polarities inside of you. An awesome power will come of accepting the strong and weak, the good and bad and everything else that makes up who you are.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Gravity is invisible, but you have no problem seeing its effect. Love is the same way. You only realize it's there when people react to its power. Where there is no action or movement, love will go undetected.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It feels as though a cyclical force is pulling you along and it would be futile to resist it. That may be so, but you won't know for sure until you are fully aware. The patterns and cycles of your life are a worthy study.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). In some way, you are recovering your balance. Don't expect that this will happen just once. The dance of life requires you to be in a constant state of recovery.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). There is a right way and a wrong way to fish. The right way is to show up where the fish are with bait they enjoy and wait patiently for a nibble. There are too many wrong ways to mention, as you'll witness today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Sometimes you feel that there is nothing more you can do other than submit to the fates. There are times when this is so, but this is not one of them. Take a long walk. You'll return with new possibilities.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). The outcome you desire will only be possible if you stay the course, maintaining your integrity in each situation. That sounds difficult, but every right choice you make will strengthen you.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Feb. 15). Regardless of what you want to share, promote, sell or achieve, you'll meet the people who can help you reach your goals. Over the next six weeks, you'll increase your responsibilities. Magically, your stress levels decrease. Conscientious behavior leads to making great money. You'll travel in May and December. Aries and Taurus people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 20, 5, 14 and 36.

WEEKEND LOVE FORECAST: ARIES: For a relationship to succeed, all parties need to be basically self-reliant.

TAURUS: You'll amp up your appeal by playing to the strengths of your gender. GEMINI: Your flexibility will help you get along with people who are far more rigid in their approach to relationships. CANCER: Last week was different, but now you'll feel that your romantic destiny is completely in your own hands. LEO: Quiet your thoughts, especially regarding your love life. Love blossoms when you stop letting your own mind harass you. VIRGO: You'll benefit from being with those who are equally as kind as you. LIBRA: Follow your artistic interests. They lead you to growing your talents, and it won't be bad for your love life, either! SCORPIO: The one who saw you as a buddy will suddenly have new feelings. SAGITTARIUS: Instead of worrying about the greener grass in other pastures, start landscaping your own. CAPRICORN: You have the potential for stunning eloquence. Write out your thoughts before you express them.

AQUARIUS: Don't settle for a piece of someone. Ask for it all. PISCES: When you let love chase you instead of the other way around, you give your feet and your heart a rest.

COUPLE OF THE WEEKEND: Taurus and Aquarius come from two different worlds. Taurus lives in the physical plane where the senses are always alive and receptive. Aquarius lives in the world of the mind — a far less tactile place where anything can happen. Because of their drastically different approaches to life, they are stronger for knowing each other. This weekend they may find that they've needed each other all along.

Yanks razz Youk for Red Sox remarks

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Teammates of Kevin Youkilis were waiting to razz him when the third baseman walked into the New York Yankees clubhouse on Friday.

Youkilis made the back page of two New York newspapers for telling reporters at his first day of spring training that "I'll always be a Red Sox."

"I was basically defining that, as a player, I'll be a Red Sox, and a White Sox, and a Yankee for life," Youkilis said Friday. "Three storied franchises. I'm excited to be part of this, and be with the Yankees."

"Trust me, there's no way that was meant to say my heart is in Boston or anything like that. My heart is here with the Yankees."

After spending 8 1/2 years in Boston and winning a pair of World Series titles, Youkilis was traded from the Red Sox to the Chicago White Sox last June. He signed with the Yankees in De-

Youkilis admitted the comment "by itself looks terrible."

"I've got to watch what I say," Youkilis said. "It hit me hard."

Youkilis took part in his first workout with the Yankees on Thursday after flying from California to Tampa.

"I think guys are having fun with it, joking around," Youkilis said.

A three-time All-Star, Youkilis figures to be the Yankees' starting third baseman for at least the first half of the season while Alex Rodriguez recovers from hip surgery.

Youkilis agreed to a $12 million, one-year contract.

Youkilis also made headlines during the offseason with Yankees' pitcher Joba Chamberlain. The two had feuded in the past over high-and-tight fastballs.

After Youkilis agreed to join the Yankees, the reliever left him a voice mail. Chamberlain said in January he had not heard back, then revealed this month he had received a text.

The pair got together Friday before workouts for New York's pitchers and catchers. Both feel the matter got blown out of proportion.

"Everything's good," Youkilis said. "We are all teammates here."

Chamberlain downplayed the feud.

"He just came over and said hello, and I welcomed him," Chamberlain said. "Like I told you all before, it's done now. I hope we don't have to talk about this anymore. It's over with. We don't live in the past. We live in the present."

New York will host the Red Sox in the regular-season opener at Yankee Stadium on April 1.

"I'm excited to play against them opening day," Youkilis said. "I'm excited to put on the pinstripes, the full pinstripes."

Pistorius prosecutors pursue murder charges

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Oscar Pistorius held his head in his hands and wept openly in court Friday as prosecutors said they would pursue a charge of premeditated murder against the Paralympic superstar.

Pistorius was formally charged at Pretoria Magistrates Court with one count of murder for the slaying of his girlfriend, Reeva Steenkamp, a model and budding reality TV show contestant. The 30-year-old was shot multiple times and died at Pistorius' upmarket home early Thursday morning.

Prosecutor Gerrie Nel said Friday in court it was premeditated murder, indicating the prosecution would file that more serious charge, upgraded from murder.

The double-amputee athlete's arrest and murder charge had already left South Africa stunned after Steenkamp's death on Valentine's Day at Pistorius' house in a gated community in an eastern suburb of South Africa's capital, Pretoria.

Following the hearing, Pistorius' family and his London management company issued a statement calling into question the criminal charge the 26-year-old athlete faces.

"The alleged murder is disputed in the strongest terms," the statement read. The statement did not elaborate.

"He would also like to express his thanks through us today for all the messages of support he has received — but as stated our thoughts and prayers today should be for Reeva and her family — regardless of the circumstances of this terrible, terrible tragedy," the statement read.

Those who knew Pistorius, including a former girlfriend, also weighed in on social media.

Trish Taylor, mother of Pistorius' ex-girlfriend Samantha Taylor, wrote on Facebook: "I'm so glad Sammy is safe and out of the clutches of that man."

But another ex-girlfriend, Jenna Edkins, defended Pistorius in messages Friday on Twitter.

"All I am saying is let him speak, let his side be heard without jumping to conclusions," Edkins wrote. She offered "love and support" to the Pistorius family and wrote: "I have dated they would argue the history-making Olympic athlete — the first amputee to run at the games — had planned Steenkamp's killing. It sent South Africans reeling further as their national hero, and a global role model in overcoming adversity, was set to face accusations that he intentionally gunned down his girlfriend.

South Africa's tabloid Citizen newspaper had the headline "Blade gunner?" Friday morning, playing on double-amputee athlete Pistorius' well-known nickname of "Blade Runner" because of his carbon fiber running blades.

Pistorius stood with his face in his hands as he broke down in tears on his first appearance at the Pretoria Magistrates' Court. Chief Magistrate Desmond Nasir delayed Pistorius' bail hearing until next Tuesday and Wednesday and ruled that Pistorius would be held at a police station in Pretoria until then. Police have said they oppose the granting of bail.

A solemn Pistorius entered the court wearing a gray suit and blue tie and initially appeared composed.

When he broke down in tears, his brother, Carl, reached out a hand and placed it on his shoulder. Pistorius' father, Henke, was in the court and later reached over to comfort him as well.

Oscar on and off for 5 YEARS, NOT ONCE has he EVER lifted a finger to me or made me fear for my life." Prosecutors said Friday that
