Hydrant Art?

Grab your brush and help spruce up Big Spring

Bored this summer? Adopt a hydrant and paint it for a chance to win a prize.
 We see them everyday, but rarely notice them. They stand as silent sentinels in our neighborhoods, waiting patiently until they are needed.
 They go otherwise unnoticed and blend into the background. The lowly fire hydrant is mostly taken for granted and often neglected. Lack of maintenance around these objects can have devastating consequences.
 It's an issue not lost on Fire Chief Craig Ferguson, who shared a recent incident in which a house was burned to the ground because the firefighters couldn't find the hydrant.
 "There was no reflective blue marker in the intersection," Ferguson explained and said the hydrant wasn't visible from the road because of overgrowth and the overall

County officials mull growth revisions

By THOMAS JENKINS
 Staff Writer
 Howard County commissioners held a public hearing Tuesday to address revisions to its Flood Damage Prevention Order and a proposed subdivision and manufactured home rental community regulations, regulations designed to protect the unincorporated portion of the county in the face of tremendous anticipated growth.

 Tuesday's hearing marked the second held on the matters, which commissioners have taken up in the face of the recent Cline shale formation, expected to draw an incredible amount of growth from the oil and energy industry.
 Charles R. Kimbrough, an attorney with Austin-based Bickerstaff Heath Delgado

Acosta LLP, addressed the audience gathered in the commissioners courtroom on behalf of the county in an attempt to answer their questions and consider their concerns.
 "I've done these in other places and the dramatic growth Howard County is experiencing because of the energy industry was forcing the commissioners court to address what we call growth issues related to water, wastewater, sewer, transportation and road management, flood plain management and drainage issues," said Kimbrough. "Those are typically areas of regulation which cities do. Counties, historically, haven't been authorized by the legislature to

Former Big Spring resident walking for suicide prevention

Herald Staff Report

A former Big Spring resident will be participating in the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention's Out of the Darkness Overnight, a 16-to 18-mile walk from sunset to sunrise, to raise funds and awareness for suicide prevention.

Darleen Cameron, whose son, Brandon Martin, lost his life to suicide July 14, 2010, in Big Spring, will be making the walk in Washington, D.C. It begins at dusk Saturday and ends Sunday.

"He (Brandon) struggled much of his life and I know that the stigma associated with seeking help for mental illness kept him from getting the help he needed," his mother said. "The money I raise will help raise awareness and hopefully decrease and ultimately stop the stigma.

"There have been several other young adults who have died by suicide in Big Spring," added Cameron, who said she was born and raised in Big Spring and keeps in touch with friends via the internet.

According to the AFSP, nearly 1,000,000 people will make a suicide attempt and more than 38,000 will die by suicide in the U.S. this year.

"These statistics are troubling, but it is important to know that suicide can be prevented. That is why I am walking in The Overnight. I want to take action to prevent suicide," said Cameron, who resides in Round Rock now.

The Foundation believes that by bringing the event to the nation's capital it could elevate a national conversation about suicide prevention as well as motivate leaders to take more action regarding this serious public health problem.

Proceeds from the Out of the Darkness Overnight support research and a variety of prevention, education and advocacy programs including distribution of the Foundation's More Than Sad educational program on teen depression and suicide prevention to high schools across the country.

To support Darleen Cameron or to get more information about The Overnight, call 888-The-Overnight or visit www.TheOvernight.org.

If you or someone you know is in crisis or having thoughts of suicide, remember that help is available. For more information about suicide such as risk factors and warning signs, visit www.AFSP.org.

hydrant, there is supposed to be a reflective blue marker in the street nearby. These markers let the crew know where the hydrant is."

Big Spring resident Nati Saldivar, along with city council members, the Rotary Club, the fire department, FRAC Resources and others, hope that by getting the community involved a similar incident can be avoided.

Adopt A Hydrant is a city-wide project created to garner volunteers with a desire to be creative to paint a hydrant however they want, in any design and in any color or colors to make them easier for the fire department to find.

In an effort to get the community interested, Adopt A Hydrant will be hosting a painted hydrant contest Saturday, June 1 through Aug. 4.

All submissions will be judged and monetary prizes given to the top three entries.

"First place will get $250, second place will get $100 and third place will get $50," said Saldivar, who has started the project by painting a hydrant with husband Ramon and their daughter, Eddilisa.

"It's a great family project to do and it really didn't take that long," said Ramon. "We finished it in just a few hours."

But, as the Saldivars noted, just painting the hydrant isn't all that's involved. The missing blue reflectors were an issue as well until the Rotary Club stepped in and purchased one for each hydrant in the city.

Decorating a hydrant can take a little work as the Saldivars discovered when they decided to paint the hydrant across the street from their house.

"We cut all the grass around it too," said Nati, who observed that not only will this project make their neighborhood safer, but it will also improve its appearance.

The hydrants' once unsightly corner lot was overgrown with dead weeds and grass. Now there stands a proud multi-spotted Dalmatian wearing a fire hat, complete with badge, smiling whimsically at passersby.

To submit an entry for the upcoming contest, paint the hydrant of your choice, then take a photo of the finished "art" and visit the nearest fire station.

Entrants will be asked for the location of the finished hydrant as well as contact information including name, address and phone number.

However, there is one rule when choosing colors as the fire chief explained.

"The cap on the hydrant has to be either red, yellow or green. These colors tell our firefighters how many gallons per minute is released. This way, the fire fighters know which hoses to attach to the hydrant," said Ferguson.

That doesn't mean you can change the color of the cap. If the cap is red, yellow, or green it has to stay that color to ensure that the corresponding hose can be attached correctly to the hydrant.

"If the cap is green it has to stay green, if its red it has to stay red and so on," the chief said.

A would-be artist is free to use any type of paint that is not water based. House paint or spray paint would be ideal and would last longer while protecting the hydrant from the elements.

For those who wish to paint a hydrant, but will need paint and supplies, FRAC Resources has agreed to sponsor the event. Local liaison for FRAC, Jeff Vidal, said that the company will supply paint, brushes and whatever else is needed to assist decorators.

"We want to help improve the community by getting involved in these types of projects," Vidal explained.

City council member Carmen Harbour added that this project will benefit many other city programs.

"It will also promote Teen Court, church groups, Keep Big Spring Beautiful and community service," said Harbour.

"We want to encourage the public to take pride in their community," chief Ferguson said. "This is a great program and we appreciate the community service very much."

For more information about the contest contact Nati Saldivar at 264-6111 or email nati@crcom.net

For paint, brushes or other supplies, contact Jeff Vidal, local liaison for FRAC Resources, at 466-3507.

COUNTY

be able to regulate those types of things.

"In the past 25 years or so, you're just beginning to see where the oil industry is going great-guns right now. In other parts of the state, we've seen demographic shifts where people want to live outside the city, but work in the city. They want to live and raise their families in an unincorporated area. Historically, counties weren't granted the power by the legislature to do much. Mainly, I'm talking around Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth and San Antonio. When those citizens began to learn their commissioners had very little power, those people began to vote and the legislature began to change a bit."

However, the vast majority of the dozen-plus residents who signed up to speak during the hearing were there to address concerns regarding a proposed apartment building near the intersection of 24th Street and Edgemere, located northeast of the Kentwood community.

"I've heard about the project that is coming in, but I don't really know much about it," Barr said. "I don't blame the people for being concerned with it, I really don't. However, the county is extremely limited as to what (regulations) we can impose.

We can't zone and we can't regulate how many dwellings can be on the property, because that is handled by the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality rules on septic systems. And those rules and regulations get very, very complex. And that's why we are holding these public hearings, because we've had so many people expressing concerns about what's going on in Howard County."

Many of the speakers shared concerns with water rights — most of the homes in that area utilize water wells — and negative impacts to their property values. According to commissioners, the development is being handled by Dale Mantoath.

According to Barr, the property in question is located in an area outside the city limits, although it still falls under municipal jurisdiction.

"Big Spring is what they call a home rule city," Barr said. "Because of the city's population size, they can have a two-mile radius beyond their city limits which is what they call an ETJ (extra-territorial jurisdiction). The regulations are very similar to what county regulations are (in the ETJ). There are some things they can do in the ETJ that we can't do out in the unincorporated area. So, for those property owners inside the ETJ, the first stop for an issue like this is city hall and see what their regulations are."

At least one speaker expressed concerns the county might "overreach" in its efforts to protect county property owners. However, Kimbrough said that sort of uncertainty is common when a county begins the process of attempting to regulate development.

"What that does is create uncertainty," Kimbrough said. "Folks who have never had a county with subdivision regulations (now have them). Yes, uncertainty does exist. However, when you look at what the laws are designed to do, most people come away with the idea that a forward-thinking, reasonable commissioners court, sooner or later begins to address the questions like, 'What are we going to do about roads, drainage, water and wastewater and things like that?' Because, long after the elected officials leave office, some of those problems may still exist if they don't try to do something about it now.

"However, the question becomes, 'What do you do? What do you do about it?' The county's regulations that are proposed tonight are by no means the strongest step that can be made. They are certainly stronger than nothing, which is what Howard County has had forever ... What they are designed to do is take a very firm, positive step to something more than window dressing."

The court approved impact assessments for both issues on unanimous votes during the meeting. Final consideration of both measures — the Flood Damage Prevention Order and a proposed subdivision and manufactured home rental community regulations — is expected to take place during a future commissioners court meeting, accord-

DAILY PRAYER

May we remain diligent about reading
Your word, Lord, for our life.

Amen

So what is in a name, anyway?

This year, more than 120 million babies will be born on earth (4.2 every second). Those who survive will sooner or later undergo the initiation process of receiving a name. At one time anthropologists thought that some groups of people were so primitive and unorganized that they didn't use names. We now know that the anthropologists were mistaken and that the idea came about because research fieldworkers were not able to get inside the minds of the people well enough to understand the customs that required that names be kept secret from strangers. The truth is that names are a part of every culture and they are of enormous importance both to the people who receive names and to the societies that give them.

Despite their universality, there is a great deal of difference from one culture to another in how names are given. Generally, in cultures with a keen sense of ancestry, children get their names from the totems and family trees of their parents. In some cultures, names are taken from events which happen during the pregnancy of the mother or shortly after the birth of the child. In some cases, the name given at birth is only the first of several names a person will bear throughout life. When this happens, the new names are given either to mark important milestones in life or, more commonly, they begin a career in the movies.

Names are fascinating and rather important. You may not think so, but I'm willing to venture that you would become rather irritated if someone called you by the wrong name for any extended period of time. There would likely come a time when you decide enough is enough and you would be compelled to end the nonsense and tell them your real name and ask them to please stop calling me by that other fella's moniker.

Your real name? Now, that opens up a whole new subject. When I think of the Johnny Cash song, "A Boy Named Sue," it becomes conceivable that in some instances a name change might not be that bad of an idea. I'm sure that living with some names would indeed present challenges, especially if you have ideas of becoming a star.

You think that may be why Ernest Evans changed his when he wanted to get the whole world doing a dance called "The Twist?" And it's hard for me to imagine listening to the classic song "Crazy" being sung by Virginia Patterson Hensley. It's totally inconceivable to be enthralled by "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" being sung by a little gal named Frances Gumm. For those of us who were listening to the radio in the 1960s, we loved "I've Got You Babe" by the popular husband and wife duo, Salvatore Phillip Bono and Cherilyn Sarkisian.

Can you imagine Hulk Hogan's mom calling him to the dinner table by his real name, Terry Jean Bollette? Would you buy "Seth Ward Sausage?" How about "Support Your Local Sheriff" and "The Rockford Files," starring James Scott Baumgarner? The annual MDA Telethon and some of the silliest movies ever made would surely be viewed differently if everybody knew they starred Joseph Levitch. Oh, and his co-star for those movies was a crooner named Dino Crocetti.

Everybody loved Roy Rogers and his loyal wife, Virginia Patterson Hensley. Remember that great TV show, "Hart to Hart", starring Robert Wagner and Stefania Zofija Federkiewicz? Did you see that epic classic film, "Spartacus," starring Issur Danielovitch Demsky? He has a famous son, Michael Delaney Dowd Jr., who is married to Catherine-Zeta Jones.

Nathan Brinbaum lived to be 100 and, along with wife Gracie Allen, made people laugh for many years. One of his contemporaries, Benjamin Kubeisky, put laughter in millions of hearts also portraying character roles as a miser and playing the violin badly. In character, he would be 39 years of age, regardless of his actual age at the time.

How about "Key Largo," starring Humphrey Bogart (real name) and Betty Joan Perske? And no reference would be complete without mentioning "True Grit," starring the incomparable Marion Mitchell Morrison.

But not all name changes take place in Hollywood. Gerald Ford, the 38th President of the United States, was known for most of his life as Gerald "Jerry" Ford. However, Ford was not born with that name. Gerald Ford was born in 1913 as Leslie King Jr., named after his father. Unfortunately, his biological father was abusive and so his mother divorced Leslie King Sr. shortly after Ford's birth. Two years later, Ford's mother met and married Gerald Ford Sr. and Ford's family began to call him Gerald Ford Jr. rather than Leslie King Jr. Although from about age two Ford was known as Gerald Ford Jr., the name change was not made official until December 3, 1935, when Ford was 22 years old.

Do you ever wonder what someone was thinking when they named their child? Try these, for instance: Pilot Inspektor (son of Jason Lee), Sage Moonblood (son of Sylvester Stallone), Audio Science (actress Shannyn Sossamon), and Moon Unit and Diva Thin Muffin (children of Frank Zappa).

Okay, I'll stop. I can hear you saying it's none of my business what someone names their child. True. But it is my prerogative to have compassion for them if I want to. I'm sure all of the above mentioned kids are glad they don't have my name anyway. If you mess with me, I'll call Carlos Ray Norris and then the fun will begin.

You may not agree with anything I've said, but I column as I see 'em.

Senate takes a bite of the apple

I hate Apple. There was a time when I would look at my iPhone, and my heart would skip a beat. With its stylish white-and-gray cover, it felt like a luxury car I could hold in my hot little hand. It told me things I didn't know. It told me how to get where I wanted to go. It was exciting. It purred cute little noises that let me know I was wanted, desirable, in demand.

Now I look at it and see hours spent in the fix-it station, dubbed the Genius Bar, the rapacious 30 percent commissions Apple charges to vendors, the demon device that has wooed so many secrets from me that it knows the name of my first dog. I see the nag that keeps bugging me about updates.

You start out thinking you own an iPhone until you realize it owns you.

I have told myself that, yes, I can leave Apple, I can be strong. I can look into the light of the seductive screen and not rush into it. But like Julia Roberts in "Sleeping with the Enemy," I have to plan my escape. You cannot just leave Apple. There are terms.

So when Apple CEO Tim Cook was set to testify before the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations on Tuesday on the issue of tax avoidance, I didn't see it as Sen. Rand Paul, R-Ky., did. Paul said the committee should apologize to Apple as he berated "a $4 trillion government bullying, berating and badgering one of America's greatest success stories."

I see the panel and the corporation as evenly matched. I figured Cook could hold his own when faced down by a gaggle of senators who try to squeeze the most out of federal campaign contribution laws as they lecture Apple about its duty to not play the tax code. And they do so in a way that you'd never guess that senators helped write that tax code.

"We pay all the taxes we owe, every single dollar," quoth Cook. "We not only comply with the laws, we comply with the spirit of the laws."

And: "We don't stash our money on some Caribbean island." He's absolutely right. Apple doesn't have to stash its money on the Cayman Islands because it stashes its intellectual property on a European island, Ireland.

Cook then put the ball in the Senate's court: "We recommend a dramatic simplification of the corporate tax code.

This reform should be revenue-neutral, eliminate all corporate tax expenditures, lower corporate income tax rates and implement a reasonable tax on foreign earnings that allows the free flow of capital back to the United States." He even told the senators he assumed that under such a system, Apple would pay more.

To which a skeptical Sen. Claire McCaskill, D-Mo., responded, "Let's assume that we simplify our tax code ... What keeps another country in one of these emerging markets from undercutting us once again like Ireland did back in '80?" Apple has a deal with Ireland that allows it to pay a tax rate of 2 percent or less.

At the end of the day, however, Apple has the more compelling argument — thanks to Washington. No U.S. senator could accuse Apple of breaking U.S. law. Apple could accuse America of having a corporate tax rate that is too high; at a combined federal/state rate of 39 percent, the Wall Street Journal pegs it as the highest in the developed world.

News in brief

Minn. Rep. Michele Bachmann says she won't run for re-election in 2014

WASHINGTON (AP) — Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann, a conservative firebrand and a favorite of tea party Republicans, said Wednesday she will not run for another term in the U.S. House.

Bachmann, who ran for the Republican presidential nomination last year, announced her decision in a video on her website.

"My decision was not influenced by any concerns about my being re-elected," Bachmann said. She narrowly won a fourth term in 2012 over Democrat Jim Graves, a hotel chain founder who is running again in 2014.

Bachmann also said, "This decision was not impacted in any way by the recent inquiries into the activities of my former presidential campaign." In January, a former Bachmann aide filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission, claiming Bachmann made improper payments to an Iowa state senator who was the state chairman of her 2012 presidential run. The aide, Peter Waldron, also accused Bachmann of other FEC violations.

A vocal opponent of the health care overhaul and other policies of President Barack Obama, Bachmann promised her supporters, "I will continue to work overtime for the next 18 months in Congress defending the same Constitutional Conservative values we have worked so hard on together."

Syria's main opposition bloc urges EU to quickly send arms to rebels

BEIRUT (AP) — Syria's main opposition bloc has urged the European Union to quickly supply rebels fighting President Bashar Assad's forces with sophisticated weapons to help them overthrow his regime.

The call by the Syrian National Coalition followed the EU's decision to let its arms embargo against Syrian expire, paving way for individual countries in the 27-member bloc to send weapons to Assad's outgunned opponents. However, the EU's move on Monday may have little impact on Syria's 2-year-old conflict, since no single European country is expected to send lethal weapons to the rebels anytime soon.

In a statement late Tuesday, the Western-backed Syrian opposition coalition urged the EU to promptly send "specialized weaponry to repel the fierce attacks waged against unarmed civilians" by the Assad regime, its allies in Lebanon's militant Hezbollah group and their Iranian backers.

"The Coalition recognizes that this decision is part of many serious efforts by the EU to support the Syrian people throughout the hardships in the uprisings," the opposition group said. "However, despite the importance of this decision, the words must be solidified by action."

Fire under control at chemical-carrying train

ROSEDALE, Md. (AP) — Officials say the fire at a derailed chemical-carrying CSX train outside Baltimore is under control.

Capt. Bruce Schultz of the Baltimore County Office of the Fire Marshal's investigative services announced early Wednesday that the blaze in Rosedale, Md., a suburb east of Baltimore, was called under control late Tuesday just before midnight.

Schultz says CSX has moved unaf-ected cars away from the derailed cars and the fire department operations have been reduced to a fire watch at this time.

Federal investigators will spend the coming days piecing together what caused the train to collide with a trash truck Tuesday afternoon.

Mother of baby trapped in sewer raised alarm but kept quiet about her identity during rescue

BEIJING (AP) — The mother of the Chinese newborn trapped in a sewer pipe in a stunning ordeal caught on video had raised the initial alarm and was present for the entire two-hour rescue but did not admit giving birth until confronted by police, reports said Wednesday.

The state-run, Hangzhou-based newspaper Dushikuaibao said police became suspicious when they found baby toys and blood-stained toilet paper in the 22-year-old woman's rented room, in the building where Saturday's rescue occurred in eastern China.

The woman's name was not revealed in state media reports.

same piece of land east of the Sid Richardson carbon black plant with the intent of developing it as a transport station.

Trains 100 cars long will export crude and gas produced to various refineries around the country.

The crude and/or gas will be exported instead of refined locally because as executive director of the EDC Terry Wegman explained, "Alon doesn't have room for more. They've got all they can handle."

Although crude oil is the primary product extracted and collected, Permian Energy will also be processing natural gas.

PEP has already begun building infrastructure at the site and bringing in oil field equipment. In preparation for drilling and extraction, the rail cars will be bringing in frac sand, pipe and cement for area oil companies.

While both companies that submitted bids were well-suited for the area and were objectively scrutinized, "We could only choose one," said Wegman, who continued by saying the EDC believes the best company was chosen for the project.

"PEP won the bid based on its superior term agreement and its intangibles," said Wegman. "PEP came to us in December and we have been in negotiations with them since then. Frontier Logistics didn't come in until April. PEP has more experience and offered more to the community. That group is comprised of several very large companies with a lot of experience and expertise in their field."

As for Frontier Logistics, it may have lost the bid, but the company plans to stay in the area for now, according to liaison Jeff Vidal.

"It left a bitter taste in our mouth, but we'll stay in the area and look at alternatives or other avenues for something else we can do," he said.

Some specifics of the agreement remain confidential until PEP releases the information, but there were several factors that PEP offered that ultimately clinched the deal.

"The number of jobs it can create, the capital investment it can create, some of the intangibles that Permian Partners will bring to the table. The company, the developers, are very experienced in this line of work. We just felt more comfortable with that group," Wegman said.

The company would do just about everything related to rail.

The proposed ground lease terms provided by the EDC includes the company's capital commitment of the crude rail park and infrastructure which is estimated at up to $50 million and a cryogen plant/pipeline and infrastructure of up to $100 million.

The Delaware-based company expects to process up to 1,200 cars per month by the end of the first year of operations.

The land will be developed by Permian Energy Partners according to needs such as transportation, logistics, storage, warehousing, materials and related industrial businesses.

The economic development plan is estimated to be valued at $500,000. Projected jobs that will be created are estimated to be 227 construction and 187 permanent.

Wegman is confident in the EDC's decision and is optimistic about the prospects for the future of Big Spring. "I believe this is the beginning of great things to come for Big Spring."

Thursday's Splash-In for seniors is free, and will set off a summer-long program for the older set.

"Last year, Gloria McDonald, senior/retirement vice president for the Chamber, thought of the idea of giving seniors an opportunity to utilize the aquatic center by way of exercising in the lazy river," said Debbye ValVerde, chamber executive director. "We implemented a senior water exercise program on Tuesdays and we had a great response so we thought we would try it again this year.

"This year, the city will be opening the aquatic center Tuesdays and Thursdays for one hour, 11 a.m. to noon," she added.

Cost for seniors will be $4 per day or $32 for a month pass or eight punches.

The money will go to help pay lifeguards. The first class will be June 4.

Last Saturday, a youthful Splash-In was held per usual but the center has not be open to the public this week because area schools are still in session. The season will officially open this Saturday.

Hours will be noon to 8 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays, 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturdays and 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Sundays. The center will be closed Mondays.

Swimmers age 3 and above will pay $3. Children under age 3 are admitted without charge.

The aquatic center is located in Comanche Trail Park. This is the second year for the center, named after former mayor and city councilman Russ McEwen, to be open. Capacity is 600.

From our leased book area, the new book section, please search out Khaled Hosseini's newest book, "And the Mountains Echoed" (RN HOS K).

Hosseini returns to Afghanistan again, just as he did in "Kite Runner" and "And a Thousand Splendid Suns," to write from his heart and heritage. His newest novel is about how we love, how we take care of one another and how the choices we make resonate through generations.

In this tale revolving around not just parents and children but brothers and sisters, cousins and caretakers, Hosseini explores the many ways in which families nurture, wound, betray, honor and sacrifice for one another; and how often we are surprised by the actions of those closest to us, at the times that matter most. Following its characters and the ramifications of their lives and choices and loves around the globe — from Kabul to Paris to San Francisco to the Greek island of Tinos — the story expands gradually outward, becoming more emotionally complex and powerful with each turning page.

Frances Irvine was brought up in a life of wealth and privilege in London, but is left penniless upon the death of her father. Shunned by her relatives in 1877 society, she has little choice but to accept marriage from a previously rejected suitor. Edwin Matthews is a doctor, scraping out a living in the diamond fields of South Africa. "The Fever Tree," (F McV J) a first novel by Jennifer McVeigh, is the story of a young woman forced to shed her innocence in a harsh land and in circumstances far beyond what she could ever imagined.

Braiding strands of earthen insight with uproarious storytelling, Texas Hill Country legendary author Becky Patterson recreates the history of the Steiler Hill Ranch in "The Ranch That Was Us" (B PAT B). The result is a mixture of memoir and montage, treasure chest and tableau vivant of a world that's beautiful, brash and wonderfully heartbreaking. Patterson — the daughter of Texas folk hero and self-proclaimed mayor of Luckenbach — Hondo Crouch — has big shoes to fill and she does so successfully in this colorful collection of Hill Country and Texas ranch vignettes. Foreman and general cowboy guru Raymond Kuhlmann tells stories of the Goat King and German drinking songs, the buzzard traps and Mexican corridos that filled the nighttime pastures. First-person accounts and vivid historical narratives evoke the ranch's past, overlaid with Patterson's breathless personal histories of afternoons spent rescuing a doe in a nightgown, or saving a porcupine from a pack of dogs. This is a book that will connect you to whatever patch of earth you hold dear. It is poignant reminder of the landscapes we've forgotten to keep close, of the land that does not belong to us but simply is who we are. "The Ranch That Was Us" is an affectionate reminder to go outside and touch the earth that is you.

Its strains may be haunting, but western swing is alive and on the upswing, enjoying a renaissance among musicians too young to recall or even comprehends its heyday. For them, the term may evoke the nationally known country music of Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys and the Spade Cooley Band. Yet on the local level, western swing bands dominated the airways and dance halls in every town and rural setting throughout the Southwest in the 1930s and by the 1940s had spread their influence and music to California.

In "Dance All Night: Those Other Southwestern Swing Bands, Past and Present," (781.642 Boy J) Jean A. Boyd presents the history and music of those bands that did not garner national fame, but were local sensations to thousands of south westerners hungry for diversion and good dancing during the depression and World War II. Devoted fans who travel the festival circuit will surely appreciate the histories and recollections Boyd has carefully compiled, while musicologists will welcome her musical analysis and her transcriptions of recorded performances. Performers, as well, may learn new licks and tricks from the ubiquitous swing jazz artists of a time not yet forgotten, preserved here for another generation's enjoyment and edification. The two books above are ones I discovered at the Texas

Library Association Conference in the vendor's showplace. You can find some real gems in the conference hall.

In Tracy Chevalier's newest historical saga, "The Last Runaway," (F CHE T) she introduces Honor Bright, a modest English Quaker who moves to Ohio in 1850, only to find herself alienated and alone in a strange land. Sick from the moment she leaves England, and fleeing personal disappointment, she is forced by family tragedy to rely on strangers in a harsh, unfamiliar landscape. Nineteenth-century America is practical, precarious, and unsentimental and scarred by the continuing injustice of slavery.

In her new home, Honor discovers that principles count for little, even within a religious community meant to be committed to human equality. However, drawn into the clandestine activities of the Underground Railroad, a network helping runaway slaves escape to freedom, Honor befriends two surprising women who embody the remarkable power of defiance. Eventually she must decide if she too can act on what she believes in, whatever the personal costs.

We are open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturday, 10 until 2; the internet/video room closes one-half hour before closing. You may reach us at 264-2260; fax number is 264-2263. Our website is <http://wtls.tsl.state.tx.us/howard-county>.

Opening lead — jack of spades.

It would be easy to make six hearts on this deal if you could see all the cards. You ruff a spade in dummy, take a trump finesse through East and finish with 12 tricks, losing only a diamond. But in real life the hand is not that simple. Since you have nine trumps in the combined hands, you might feel tempted to cash the A-K and so end up down one.

Situations of this sort occur frequently. In general, when missing four to the queen in a suit, it is best to play the A-K rather than finesse against the queen. This approach will succeed slightly more often over the long haul.

Declarer should conclude that since there is no good reason to play the trumps abnormally, he will have to lose a trump trick if either opponent started with three to the queen. He should therefore focus on the problem of trying to find a way to escape a diamond loser should the need present itself.

By timing his plays properly, South can meet this goal, setting up an extra club trick in dummy to take care of his diamond loser. He begins by winning the spade lead with the ace, then plays a club to the ace and ruffs a club.

Next he cashes the K-A of hearts and learns that East has a trump trick coming. He then cashes the king of clubs, discarding a diamond, and ruffs a club, establishing dummy's nine as a trick.

Now he trumps a spade with the jack and plays the nine of clubs, discarding the eight of diamonds. Whether East ruffs or not, the only trick South winds up losing is a trump.

Tomorrow: Haste makes waste.

Ten Lady Buffs named to All-District

By BRIAN MCCORMACK

Sports Editor

FORSAN — The number of Lady Buffaloes recognized by District 2-1A softball coaches is in the double digits — a testament to the perennial success Forsan has on the diamond.

This year was no different, as Head Coach Shanna Taylor — who has won back-to-back state titles since taking the reins at FHS — led her team deep into the playoffs once again, before being eliminated in the regional quarterfinal round by Albany. The Lady Buffs finished among the best teams in the state in Class A.

“I think we got off to a slow start, but when we needed to, we pulled it together,” Taylor said. “If we don’t have any injuries, I expect to be even stronger next year and I fully expect to go even deeper into the playoffs than we did this year.”

Senior leadership should help

Taylor’s cause. Four juniors — pitcher Ali Knight, Maria Ortiz, Jahnia Willard and Gabby Womack — are all expected to return. Each of the quartet received district accolades, with Knight and Ortiz representing the First Team and Willard and Womack representing the Second Team.

“I think next year is going to be even better for Ali,” Taylor offered. “She led the team offensively with Kayla (Tilley). They went back-and-forth. Next year, she won’t have to carry so much weight at the pitcher position. That should take some of the pressure off her. It will be a big advantage for us to have them all back.”

Taylor also has a talented crop of freshmen moving up the ranks, including Rosie Munoz, who made a big enough splash to earn recognition as a First Team pick. Maddie Munsell and Lindsey Boeker picked up an honorable mention from Taylor.

“A lot of freshmen came in and carried their weight. I’m excited — I think they will be working hard this summer to keep their spots. We had nine total freshmen come out this year. I think it says a lot about our program.”

Munoz gained some experience in the circle this season and Taylor expects junior varsity newcomer Jordan Matthews to be ready to split time with Knight for a one-two punch.

“Jordan and Ali have different styles, they have different pitches,” Taylor said. “I think together they can keep some teams off-balance. I have some other girls who have pitched coming in, too. I fully intend to work them.”

Despite her enthusiasm, Taylor will be bidding adieu to three valuable seniors including Shelby Roemer, who picked up one of the district’s top honors: Defensive MVP. Kayla Tilley, a First Team selection; and Stephanie Duffer, who worked her way to a varsity position and was named to Second Team.

“Obviously, Shelby and Kayla have been a big part of the team for three years,” Taylor said. “Both of them have,” Taylor said. “Both of them before, but this is the first year Shelby has gotten a superlative. We will definitely miss them next year. This was Stephanie’s first year on varsity. She worked extremely hard and I am glad she is getting the recognition she deserves.”

Overall, Taylor was pleased with the All-District choices.

“I felt our players got the recognition they deserved,” she added. “It’s a big district, we have seven teams. It’s a tremendous honor to have so many of our girls recognized by the coaches.”

QB's body found in Michigan woods

DETROIT (AP) — A three-day search for one of the winningest college quarterbacks ever ended in a remote wooded area in Michigan, where authorities found his body and were left with a mystery of how he died.

Cullen Finnerty, 30, a former Grand Valley State University quarterback, went missing Sunday while fishing near his family’s cottage. His body was found in Webber Township about a mile from where he disappeared, but authorities said no foul play was suspected. An autopsy will be needed to determine how he died, they said.

Finnerty led Grand Valley State University to three Division II national titles and more than 50 wins during his four years as a starter in Allendale, Mich., last decade.

The search drew scores of police and volunteers, including staff and players from Grand Valley State.

Finnerty last spoke to a family member that night in a phone call in which he said “he was nervous about something,” Sheriff Robert Hilts said.

Nike severs ties with Livestrong

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — With Nike’s help, Lance Armstrong’s Livestrong cancer charity turned a little yellow wristband into a global symbol for cancer survivors.

Celebrities and rock stars sported them on stage. Politicians wore them on the campaign trail and in the White House. And with Armstrong dominating the Tour de France, the trendy little pieces of plastic helped Livestrong pump millions of dollars in cancer survivor programs and spawned countless imitations.

But that partnership, which started in 2004, will soon end. Livestrong announced Tuesday the shoe and apparel company is cutting ties with the charity in the latest fallout from the former cyclist’s doping scandal.

Nike said it will stop making its Livestrong line of apparel after the 2013 holiday season. Foundation and company officials said Nike will honor the financial terms of its contract until the deal expires in 2014.

Pacers beat Heat to knot final at 2

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The open looks Udonis Haslem and Chris Bosh took advantage of to help the Heat win Game 3 disappeared in Game 4, and so has Miami’s lead over Indiana in the Eastern Conference Finals.

Miami’s Erik Spoelstra won the coaching battle with the Pacers’ Frank Vogel in Game 3, using mobile post players Haslem and Bosh primarily as jump shooters to keep them away from the bigger, brawnier Roy Hibbert and David West.

Vogel countered Tuesday night with a simple adjustment: putting Hibbert and West in better position to step out and contest shots without sacrificing rebounding. And it worked, eliminating Miami’s normally excellent floor spacing and making the Heat’s offense appear unsettled.

Hibbert finished with 23 points and 12 rebounds to lead Indiana to a 99-92 victory that tied the series at two games apiece and helped the Pacers regain a little swagger heading into a pivotal Game 5 on Thursday night in Miami.

In Game 3, Haslem and Bosh combined to make 14 of 19 shots and score 32 points, mostly on jumpers. This time, they were 4 for 11 and combined for 13 points.

“We were a lot more attentive to it,” West said. “We had our antennas up. We didn’t allow them to space. We were there on catch a lot of times. That’s more of us just being locked in. We were just ourselves tonight.”

The Heat shot 39 percent and never found a consistent rhythm.

Indiana also re-established its dominance inside. The Pacers shot 50 percent, outrebounded the Heat 49-30 and outscored them 50-32 in the paint. They relentlessly attacked the basket, continually won the battle for loose balls, dominated the glass and turned the tables on Miami yet again.

Lance Stephenson added 20 points for the Pacers, who

Saban calls for SEC to expand schedule

DESTIN, Fla. (AP) — Alabama coach Nick Saban has a strong — and seemingly solitary — stance on the Southeastern Conference potentially moving to a nine-game league schedule.

Saban said Tuesday he would like to see the SEC expand from eight to nine games, an opinion that surely will draw debate and dissent during the league’s annual spring meetings this week.

Saban was the only SEC coach to publicly call for increasing the number of league games, the biggest topic being discussed during daylong meetings in the resort town. Although unlikely, SEC presidents and chancellors could vote on the issue Friday.

“I’m absolutely in the minority, no question about it,” Saban said. “But everybody has their reasons.”

Having won three of the last four Bowl Championship Series national title games, Saban admitted he should be against changing the model.

“If you look at it through a straw and how it affects you ... then you’re not going to be for it,” he said. “I shouldn’t be for it. We’d have a

Super Bowl 50 to be held at smartest stadium in NFL

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Goodbye cold, grungy Candlestick Park. Hello high tech, shiny new Levi’s Stadium.

Fifty-four years after $32 million Candlestick Park opened, the 49ers are building a new, $1.2 billion showcase of a stadium which is almost twice as big, wired to the hilt, and opening its doors just in time to host Super Bowl 50 in the heart of the Silicon Valley.

Arriving just five years after Cowboys Stadium, Jerry Jones’ $1 billion showcase for his club, the 49ers are aiming to redefine state of the art, as team officials made clear on a recent tour.

“If you’re a fan and you go to Candlestick, then you will really appreciate this new stadium,” said project executive Jack Hill, standing on the building’s 200-foot-high roof, gazing out at the south tip of the San Francisco Bay. “It’s going to be the crowning glory of the NFL.”

The airy, open stadium had an intimate feel; with the largest lower bowl in the league, the 68,500 fans are close to the action. And that closeness is mutual. When players burst through the blowing smoke and blasting music on game day, they’ll be able to make eye contact with every seat, even the corner nosebleeds who are dwarfed beneath some of the largest high definition jumbotrons in the league.

"This stadium is tremendous for the team. It helps strengthen the brand, because the one negative thing about the 49ers has always been Candlestick Park," said University of Southern California professor Jeff Fellenzer, who teaches sports, business and media.

The steep construction bills are being paid by $800 million in seat and luxury box sales, along with a 20-year, $220 million naming rights agreement with Levi Strauss and Co. announced May 8, clinching a partnership with the company that added copper rivets to denim pants 150 years ago to create the first blue jeans for California's rugged gold miners, the so-called 49ers. A few weeks later, the NFL chose the stadium for the 2016 Super Bowl.

While they're in the black now, funding for the stadium has come with its share of rancor.

"Our city has long deferred more important projects," wrote resident Bill Bailey on the anti-stadium organization's Santa Clara Plays Fair website. Bailey heads the coalition of Santa Clara residents concerned that accommodating the 49ers draws funds away from critical needs like public libraries. "We believe that Santa Clara should not tax its citizens, increase its debt, or allocate land or any other valuable assets to build a stadium."

The 49ers and the city of Santa Clara initially partnered to build the stadium, with voters approving a $30 million public investment.

better chance to be successful if we don't do it, but I think it's best for the game and for the league. I'm trying to look at it from 1,000 feet."

Others, including Georgia's Mark Richt, Vanderbilt's James Franklin and Mississippi's Hugh Freeze, want to keep things status quo. The SEC currently plays eight conference games: six games against division opponents, one against a designated rival from the other division and one rotational game against the remaining six teams.

Several coaches argued that expanding to nine games would only make an already difficult schedule even tougher — and could affect bowl eligibility for teams on the bubble.

"You add a ninth game and that's seven more losses for our conference," Freeze said. "We want to fill all our bowl slots and represent our conference. When you play that ninth game, it would create some more revenue, but it's seven more losses. I'm in favor of playing the West and two rotators. That's what I will push and vote for."

But with a four-team playoff on tap for the 2014 season, strength of schedule should become a bigger priority for teams with national title hopes.

"What I'm looking for is a decision that's in the long-term best interest of the Southeastern Conference," commissioner Mike Slive said. "Everybody may have a different view of what that is. One of the hallmarks of this league over time is being careful, thoughtful, creative, doing new things and sitting down when the going gets tough and making decisions based on what's best for the league and sometimes subordinating one's own interest to that."

"We're going to have enough dialogue to make sure we get there from here."

The SEC's 14 coaches spent Tuesday discussing the pros and cons of eight- and nine-game schedules. While most want to remain at eight games, some would like to see the 6-1-1 model switched to a 6-2 version that would eliminate cross-division fixed opponents. That would mean the end of annual rivalries like Alabama-Tennessee, which have played all but one season since 1928, or Auburn-Georgia, which have played 116 times in the past 120 years.

"Eight games, nine games, 6-1-1, 6-2, I think you can make a lot of arguments," Franklin said. "That's what we're going to discuss. Again, we've won the last seven national championships with similar models to what we have now. Our first couple of years in these meetings was to make sure we were able to hold on to some of these rivalries we've had for a long time. That's important to certain fan bases and certain institutions, so we'll see."

"The thing that I'm pounding the table about is eight games. Really there's no other discussion but eight games. That's in the best interest of the SEC. That's in the best interest for Vanderbilt."

Coaches will vote and take the result to athletic directors Wednesday. The ADs will make a final suggestion to presidents and chancellors later in the week. The league plans to stick with the 6-1-1 format for 2014, and any resolution on future schedules likely will come down the road.

"If any coach is going to speak truthfully and honestly, they prefer the eight," Arkansas coach Bret Bielema said. "A wise man once taught me: if it ain't broke, don't fix it."

FINAL

closed with a 16-6 run to pull away from the defending NBA champions.

"We're never going to give up. We're relentless," Hibbert said after another big game. "All those guys in there, they believe we can win. No matter what all the analysts or whoever says anything, they count us out, those guys in the locker room were ready to play and we went out and played our hearts out."

Hibbert will get no argument from Vogel, who challenged his team to bring it or go down swinging — and Indiana scored with punch after punch.

The Pacers revved up the crowd with an opening 11-0 run, got the Heat in foul trouble and answered every challenge Miami posed in a physical game that had bodies flying, tempers flaring and James stunned after fouling out of a playoff game for only the second time in his career.

Indiana believed this was the only way it could get back into the best-of-seven series after giving home-court advantage back to Miami two nights earlier.

The players promised to treat Game 4 as if they were playing a decisive seventh game, and it showed.

An angry Paul George uncharacteristically smacked the floor after being called for a foul in the third quarter, leading to a technical foul on Vogel that seemed to get Indiana refocused. The defense continually contested shots by James and his high-scoring teammates. The four-time MVP finished with 24 points but was only 8 of 18 from the field.

The Heat now face a stunning must-win scenario Thursday night. If they lose Game 5, they'll return to Indy for Game 6 fighting for their playoff lives.

Over the next 48 hours, the Heat will try to figure out what went wrong in a game full of oddities.

Bosh crashed to the court clutching his right knee after a first-half collision. In the second half, he limped to the locker room after appearing to twist his right ankle on a foul call but returned a few minutes later trying to shake off the injury.

Wade limped noticeably during the first half and wound up in foul trouble, too. Miami's three All-Stars were a dismal 14 of 39 from the field.

Still, Miami nearly took command of the series. "We had them right where we wanted them, but every time we would get a stop, especially in the fourth quarter, we didn't come up with the rebound," said Bosh. "It was there for us, but we didn't capitalize."

Nobody was more frustrated than James, who was called for a technical foul in the first quarter and four fouls over the final 12 minutes — the last an offensive foul. After walking from one end of the court to the Miami bench, James sat disbelievingly on a press table and spent the final 56 seconds mumbling to the officials.

Again he promised to make amends.

"It was a couple of fouls that I didn't feel like were fouls, personal fouls on me, but that's how the game goes sometimes," James said.

Miami had its chances, but Indiana simply refused to back down.

When the Heat used a 9-0 run to take a 60-54 lead early in the third quarter, Indiana answered immediately with a 10-0 run to regain the lead. When James committed an offensive foul with 2 seconds left in the third, his first turnover since the end of Game 2, the Pacers got a buzzer-beating

3-pointer from Stephenson to make it 77-70.

When the Heat rallied in the fourth, charging back from an 81-72 deficit to take an 86-83 lead, the Pacers answered again. George drew a foul on James and wound up tying the score on a three-point play with 5:38 to go.

Ray Allen broke the tie with a 3 from the left wing as the shot clock was winding down, but Indiana answered again. This time, West made 1 of 2 free throws, Stephenson knocked down a 19-footer, and Hibbert scored on a putback and then completed a three-point play to end the 7-0 run that gave Indiana a 94-89 lead with 90 seconds left.

Miami never got another chance to tie it.

The SEC has won the last seven BCS titles, no doubt a stretch of success that any conference would love to boast about.

But the league is in the midst of a major overhaul, so the schedule might just be next to change. Not only did the SEC add Texas A&M and Missouri last year, it is launching the SEC Network in 2014, with ESPN as a partner. The network surely will want more marquee matchups in exchange for increasing revenue.

Saban, though, said more consideration should be given to fans during these scheduling discussions.

"One of these days, they're going to quit coming to the games because they're going to stay at home and watch it on TV," Saban said. "Everybody's going to say, 'Why don't you come to the games?' Well, if you'd play somebody good, then we'd come to the games. That should be the first consideration. Nobody's considering them. They're just thinking about, 'How many games can I win? Can I get bowl qualified? How many tough teams do I have to play?'"

"After coaching in the NFL for eight years, everybody in the NFL plays everybody in the NFL, and you lose some games. The Giants lost how many games and won the Super Bowl, six? I think it makes it more exciting if you don't have to go undefeated or lose just one game to be able to have a chance to qualify to play for something at the end."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Industrious Moon

Even when you know what you want and the right way to go about it, personal resistance still sometimes makes it harder to get motivated. Today, resistance is low. An industrious morning brings fast-paced developments. This afternoon the Capricorn moon goes void of course for a spell, signaling to check and recheck your work.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You have an excellent sense for what matters and what doesn't, but that doesn't always keep you in line. Sometimes you chase down lesser opportunities and time wasters because it's just more fun that way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). There's something very timely in your heart. Don't wait until the right place and moment to express it. You're in the right place, and the expression itself will create the moment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). When you do your best, you may not produce the greatest result that ever was in the history of the world, but you'll create the best possible result for the moment, and that's good enough.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You don't want to be considered special and therefore treated better than everyone else. You'd rather understand the common experience and bond with people because you really do know how they feel.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). There is a big difference between academic and practical skill. You absolutely have to "do" to "know" today. The best scenario will be for you to work alongside a friend who has experience.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You are an industrious hummingbird today, buzzing from flower to flower. These blossoms open but once and then lose their petals and become vehicles of legacy. You'll help in this process.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You are only in the prime of your life once, but how do you know when "once" is upon you? It's not for you to say. Your only job is to keep striving to uphold the virtues you hold dear: patience, love, awareness, mastery, joy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You love honesty almost as much as you love privacy. When people mind their own business, it feels like all is right with the world. Too bad people seldom mind their own business for very long.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You've been looking forward to this change, and now you don't have to wait anymore. A pattern that used to repeat on a seemingly endless loop will now be so completely interrupted that it can't continue.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Time alone won't heal all wounds. Time plus scar tissue is what heals. You have to have it in you to knit things back together—which you do. But not everyone does, and that's something to be aware of today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Lying isn't an option for you, although you may find yourself trying to get around telling a rather bothersome truth. Saying nothing may very well be the friendliest and kindest thing to do.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Cynicism is no fun. It may be smarter and more accurate, but who cares? It's also lonelier. People who are overly concerned with facts and actualities are rather boring.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 28). You don't want things to come too easily, because you like who you become when you have to earn your benefits. In many ways, you're smarter and stronger than you've ever been. You'll use your powers to help loved ones. Seize a professional opportunity in August. September sends you on a journey. Libra and Aquarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 13, 8, 47, 26 and 11.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Teen heartthrob Cameron Boyce has shown his Gemini versatility by appearing in several different film genres with equal success. Whether in comedy, horror or action movies, Boyce is believable and relatable. His Mars in Libra suggests that working well with others and creating auspicious alliances is a strong suit for Boyce. A magnetically appealing Scorpio moon doesn't hurt, either!

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My bull-headed 50-year-old daughter has taken gossip from 32 years ago to make my life a living hell.

I have four grown children. My older daughter called everyone she could think of and told them I molested my son when he was 5.

My daughter never checked to see whether it was true. I have never been arrested for this or had charges filed against me. She further told all the grandchildren and great-grandchildren that they should never stop at my home.

I am 74 years old, have trouble breathing and have cancer that is currently in remission. I want to see my family before it's too late.

My daughter called my sister-in-law and told her she will not go to my funeral when I die. I have been denied visits and phone calls from family members for three years. I desperately need my family to visit. — Sad and Lonely

Dear Sad: You say charges were never filed, nor were you arrested, but you haven't said that you are innocent of the accusation. If the gossip is true, we completely understand why your daughter would want everyone to stay away.

If it is not true, you need to make it clear to the rest of the family that your daughter is spreading lies. Please ask whether she would be willing to go with you for counseling to clear this up and to see whether there is any possibility of reconciling before it is too late.

Dear Annie: I'm one of two daughters. Both of us have two sons. Long story short, one of my sister's sons has borrowed thousands of dollars from Grandma, received a nice car and has never paid any money back. The other three boys have never borrowed a penny.

I am the executor of Grandma's estate and have power of attorney. When something happens to Grandma, I'm in charge. She's not going to have a million dollars, but when her estate is eventually divided, I believe it would be perfectly fair to exclude the one grandson. What do you think? — Trouble in Hubbard

Dear Hubbard: It may be "fair," but it could estrange you from your sister, not to mention your nephews. What does Grandma think? If she is of sound mind and wants all of her grandsons to receive equal shares, you have an obligation to follow her wishes.

You could discuss with her the option of deducting the money her grandson has already borrowed from whatever is left of his share. You also could give the grandson an object of sentimental value in lieu of money, so he doesn't believe his grandmother forgot about him. Whatever the final decision, please discuss it with your sister as a gesture of good faith and ask her opinion. She may or may not agree with your assessment, but at least she won't be shocked and angry when the time comes.

News in brief

Marine's mom doesn't know what led to rampage

LUBBOCK (AP) — The mother of a Marine killed after a shooting spree that left one dead in Texas said Tuesday that she doesn't know what prompted the attacks, including the stabbing of his wife in North Carolina.

Lance Cpl. Esteban J. Smith, a 23-year-old Marine, died Sunday in a gunfight with Texas authorities after a shooting rampage that left one person dead and several hospitalized. Authorities believe Smith fatally stabbed his wife, Rubi Estefania Smith of Bakersfield, Calif., in a Jacksonville, N.C., motel room near Camp Lejeune before the shooting rampage.

Esteban Smith's mother, Rosalva Jimenez, told The Associated Press in a phone interview Tuesday that she last spoke to her son on Thursday. She said her daughter-in-law had recently traveled from their California hometown to North Carolina to surprise him. She said her last phone conversation with her son was brief because he was at work and that she knew of nothing that would have led to the crimes.

"He was OK, but he went crazy all of a sudden," she said, speaking in Spanish.

She said her son had just married his wife in December and that he was preparing to leave the armed forces. "He wanted to come back, go to college, become a mechanical engineer," she said.

Smith was a veteran of two combat tours in Afghanistan, but Jimenez said she never asked him about what happened there. "I didn't want to hear," she said, adding that she hadn't wanted her son to go to war.

She also said she didn't know of any problems between her son and his wife. "Maybe they argued and he went crazy," she said.

Trial begins in Central Texas in 1975 slaying

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — The capital murder trial has started in San Marcos for a man charged in the slaying of a 20-year-old woman who was raped, strangled and drowned in her bathtub in 1975 after going home for lunch.

Opening statements and testimony started Tuesday in the trial of 59-year-old Willie Jenkins, charged in the death of Sheryl Ann Norris. She worked as a secretary at the Crime Prevention Institute of Texas in San Marcos.

The Austin American-Statesman reports that Jenkins was identified as a suspect in 2010 after DNA collected from the crime scene was submitted to a national database. At the time, Jenkins was being held in a state hospital in California under a civil commitment order.

Fight over Texas voting maps back in federal court

SAN ANTONIO (AP)

— The fight over Texas voting maps is back in federal court.

A three-judge panel in San Antonio on Wednesday will hear arguments from state attorneys and minority rights groups for the first time since the November elections. That's when Texans voted based on temporary political boundaries drawn by the federal court.

Gov. Rick Perry wants the Legislature to ratify those maps as permanent in a special 30-day summer session. Some conservatives worry that Republicans will end up with worse maps for 2014 if they don't take action.

Minority rights groups say the court's maps are flawed and need to be redrawn.

The League of United Latin American Citizens is one of nine plaintiffs that sued the state. Attorney Luis Vera says the maps "screw up too many neighborhoods" to remain.

Fort Hood suspect seeks to represent self at trial

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — A judge is to decide if an Army psychiatrist charged in the deadly 2009 Fort Hood shooting rampage will represent himself at his upcoming murder trial.

Maj. Nidal Hasan's request is among many issues to be addressed at a pretrial hearing Wednesday.

Military law allows defendants to represent themselves. But the judge, Col. Tara Osborn, is expected to ask Hasan's attorneys to stay throughout the trial in case he asks for their help.

Hasan, an American-born Muslim, faces the death penalty or life in prison without parole if convicted of 13 counts of premeditated murder and 32 counts of attempted premeditated murder in the attack on the Texas Army post.

Perjury case dropped against former South Texas DA

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A perjury case against a former South Texas district attorney has been dismissed.

The Corpus Christi Caller-Times reports the case against former Nueces County District Attorney Anna Jimenez was dismissed Tuesday after her attorneys and the Jackson County district attorney filed motions for it be dropped.

Jimenez, now a public defender, was indicted last month on four counts of aggravated perjury related to a capital murder case.

The indictment said Jimenez signed affidavits stating four witnesses refused to be interviewed but three gave interviews to Jimenez's mitigation specialists or investigators. A fourth wasn't contacted.

Texas state hospitals may lose Medicaid money

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two state hospitals face June deadlines to reform hazardous conditions or lose millions of dollars in Medicaid money.

The Austin American-Statesman reports that Terrell State Hospital faces a June 4 deadline to implement reforms or face the loss of Medicare funding. That's after Medicare investigators found significant nursing and patient rights problems in the wake of the February 2012 death of patient Ann Simmons.

An autopsy blamed the death of the 62-year-old Pittsburg woman three days after her arrival on a pulmonary embolism related to restraints used on her.

Bodies of 3 missing swimmers recovered

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Authorities say the bodies of three missing swimmers — including those of a father and his 10-year-old son — have been found in Southeast Texas following an extensive search.

All three were swimming over the holiday weekend along the San Luis Pass on Galveston Island. The pass is considered a dangerous area to swim because of strong currents.

Brazoria County officials say the bodies of 49-year-old Raul Stothart and son Chandler Stothart were found Tuesday along the shoreline of the pass. The elder Stothart had rushed into the water Sunday after his son was caught in a rip tide. They were residents of the Houston suburb of Missouri City.

Texas school district appeals banner ruling

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A Southeast Texas school district is appealing a court ruling that allowed high school cheerleaders to display at football games banners emblazoned with Bible verses.

The Kountze district filed the appeal Tuesday. The district says it wants the 9th Texas Court of Appeals in Beaumont to clarify whether the Kountze High School cheerleaders have a free speech right to include the religious messages.

The district says state District Judge Steve Thomas ruled the banners were allowed under the U.S. Constitution but stopped short of saying the cheerleaders had a free-speech right to them.
