3803 Connally, on charges of interfering with the duties of a public servant, abandoning/ endangering a child criminal negligence and resisting arrest, search or transportation. According to Sheriff

Stan Parker, the pursuit began at approximately 11:10 p.m. Tuesday in the 2700 block of U.S. Highway 350 when a law enforcement officer attempted to stop the vehicle driven by Tate for an expired registration certificate.

"When the law enforcement officer attempted to stop the vehicle, the driver took off, engaging the officer in a high speed pursuit," Parker said. "The driver made it to the 3800 block of Rice Road, where he tried to get away on foot. While running, the suspect attempted to throw away some suspected narcotics. The officer pursued him and took him into custody shortly after that."

Parker said the situation took a bizarre turn.

"While deputies were attempting to take Tate into custody, the female suspect got out of the car," Parker said. "She tried to prevent the law enforcement officers from arresting Tate, all the while with a child in her arms. The officers were able to take both suspects into custody without any serious injuries to either of them and no injuries to the child."

Officials with Child Protective Services were called and took custody of the child, while both Prikryl and television, gift cards

Tate were booked into the county detention center, according to arrest records.

Bond has been set at a total of $16,500 for Tate — including $5,000 for assault on a public servant and $2,500 for abandoning/endangering a child - criminal negligence — and $5,500 for Prikryl, including $2,500 for abandoning/ endangering a child – criminal negligence.

Parker said Tate was subdued during the struggle using a taser.

"He was taken to the emergency room at Scenic Mountain Medical Center, where he was treated and released," Parker said. "That's standard procedure any time a suspect is subdued using a taser. Neither suspect sustained any kind of serious injuries."

While high-speed pursuits ending in arrests aren't all that uncommon, Parker said pursuits involving a small child are still very unsettling for law enforcement officers.

"In a situation like this, the decision to engage in a high-speed chase with officers while there's a child in the vehicle is really hard to understand, both as a peace officer and a parent," Parker said. "To put the child in additional danger by involving them in a physical struggle with officers is even worse. It's really hard to understand how a parent could place their child in such a dangerous situation."

UN says nearly 93,000 killed in Syrian conflict

BEIRUT (AP) — Syria's spiraling violence has resulted in the confirmed killings of nearly 93,000 people but the real number is likely to be far higher, the United Nations' human rights office said Thursday.

The new death toll released in Geneva points to the seemingly unstoppable carnage that has engulfed Syria for more than two years. In Damascus, officials said that at least one mortar shell fell on the edge of Damascus International Airport close to the runway, briefly disrupting flights in and out of the capital.

The country's transportation minister Mahmoud Ibrahim Said told Syrian TV that a shell fired by "terrorists" struck near a warehouse, breaking its windows and injuring a worker there.

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights says rebel fighters targeted the airport with home-made rockets. The attack came a few weeks after the government announced it had secured the Damascus airport road, which had been targeted by rebels in the past.

The incident also came as President Bashar Assad's forces wage an offensive to drive rebels out of central provinces of Homs and Hama, as well as the northern province of Aleppo, following a major success in regaining control of the strategic town of Qusair near the border with Lebanon.

Boosted by their battleground victory, regime forces appear set on securing control of the central region, a linchpin area linking Damascus with regime strongholds on the Mediterranean coast, and Aleppo to the north.

In a new analysis of the Syrian death toll issued in Geneva, the U.N.'s human rights office documented 92,901 killings between March 2011 and the end of April 2013.

Among the victims were at least 6,561 children, including 1,729 children younger than 10.

But the U.N.'s top human rights official, Navi Pillay, said it was impossible to provide an exact current figure.

The last such analysis, released in January, documented nearly 60,000 killings through the end of November. Since then, U.N. officials had estimated higher numbers.

"The constant flow of killings continues at shockingly high levels, with more than 5,000 killings documented every month since last July," said Pillay. "This is most likely a minimum casualty figure. The true number of those killed is potentially much higher."

Among the victims were at least 6,561 children, including 1,729 children younger than 10. The conflict in Syria began in March 2011 as largely peaceful protests against Assad's autocratic regime. After a relentless government crackdown on the protests, many Syrians took up arms against the regime, turning the uprising into an armed rebellion that morphed into civil war. The U.N. said the average monthly number of documented killings has risen from around 1,000 per month in the summer of 2011 to an average of more than 5,000 per month since last July.

At its height from July to October 2012, the number of killings rose above 6,000 per month.

"Civilians are bearing the brunt of widespread, violent and often indiscriminate attacks which are devastating whole swaths of major towns and cities, as well as outlying villages," Pillay said.

"Government forces are shelling and launching aerial attacks on urban areas day in and day out, and are also using strategic missiles and cluster and thermobaric bombs."

Opposition forces have also shelled residential areas, albeit using less fire-power, and there have been multiple bombings resulting in casualties in the heart of cities, especially Damascus."

The most documented killings were in rural Damascus, with 17,800 people dead. Next were Homs, with 16,400; Aleppo, 11,900; and Idlib, 10,300.

Snowden, who worked for the CIA and later as a contractor for the NSA, has revealed details about U.S. spy programs that sweep up millions of Americans' telephone records, emails and Internet data in the hunt for terrorists. American law enforcement officials are building a case against him but have yet to bring charges.

U.S. officials have disputed some of his claims, particularly his assertion to the Guardian newspaper of Britain that he "had the authority to wiretap anyone." He also said he made $200,000 a year, although contractor Booz Allen Hamilton, where he worked before being fired this week, said his salary was $122,000.

Snowden's allegations about U.S. hacking add a new twist to the longrunning battle between Washington and Beijing over cybersecurity.

The U.S. been delivering a steady flow of reports accusing China's government and military of computerbased attacks against America. U.S. officials have said recently that the Chinese seem more open to trying to work with the U.S. to address the problems.

Snowden's allegations follow comments last week from China's Internet security chief, who told state media that Beijing has a massed huge amounts of data on U.S.-based hacking. The official held off on blaming the U.S. government, saying it would be irresponsible and that the better approach is to seek to cooperate in the fight against cyberat-

On Thursday, Ministry of Foreign Affairs Chungying said China is a "major victim" of cyberattacks but did not lay blame.

Thereaction was stronger online. Air Force Col. Dai Xu, known for the hawkish opinions he voices on his Sina Weibo microblog, wrote: "I have always said, the United States' accusations about Chinese hacking attacks have always been a case of a thief crying for another thief to be caught."

Post The cited Snowden as saying the NSA has been hacking into computers in Hong Kong and mainland China since 2009, citing documents he showed the paper, which it said it could not verify. It didn't provide further details about the documents.

He said that among the targets was the Chinese University of Hong Kong, which hosts the Hong Kong Internet Exchange, the main hub for the city's Internet traffic. Set up in 1995, it allows all data between local servers to be routed locally instead of having to pass through exchanges in other countries, including the United States. "We hack network backbones — like huge Internet routers, basically — that gives us access to the communications of hundreds of thousands of computers without having to hack every single one," Snowden told the Post.

According to Snowden's documents, other spokeswoman Hua NSA hacking targets included Hong Kong public officials, students and businesspeople, as well as targets on the mainland, though they did not include Chinese military systems, the paper said, without providing further details.

> A large number of mainland Chinese businesses, including ones that are state-owned, have offices in Hong Kong, a former British colony that passed back to Chinese control in 1997. The People's Liberation Army has a base in Hong Kong and the Beijing central government and foreign affairs department have offices.

News in brief

Inspector in Philadelphia collapse commits suicide

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An inspector who surveyed a downtown building weeks before it collapsed, killing six people, was found dead from a self-inflicted gunshot wound a week after the accident, authorities said Thursday.

The 52-year-old man's body was found Wednesday night in a pickup truck with a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the chest, according to Philadelphia police. Deputy Mayor Everett Gillison said the man was a Department of Licenses and Inspections employee who had inspected the building May 14.

Department employees were being informed of the death Thursday morning and the man's name wasn't immediately being released. Gillison and other city officials have scheduled a news conference for later Thursday morning. Investigators say a heavy equipment operator with a lengthy rap sheet was high on marijuana when a building under demolition collapsed onto a neighboring thrift store on June 5. The operator, Sean Benschop, faces six counts of involuntary manslaughter, 13 counts of recklessly endangering another person and one count of risking a catastrophe. His attorney has said he was being made a scapegoat.

The city's top prosecutor has convened a grand jury to investigate whether anyone else should face criminal charges.

A demolition permit indicates that contractor Griffin Campbell was being paid $10,000 for the job. Campbell's lawyer has called him despondent but "absolutely not responsible" for the deaths. On Thursday, he released a statement expressing condolences to the inspector and the families.

"Our heartfelt condolences go to the family of the inspector," attorney Kenneth Edelin said in a statement. "We also continue to pray for the families of those that were lost, and for the health and speedy recovery of those that were injured."

NSA director says surveillance programs disrupted dozens of terrorist attacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once-secret surveillance programs were crucial in enabling the U.S. government to thwart dozens of terrorist attacks, says the director of the National Security Agency in a forceful defense of spy operations that have stirred fears of government snooping and violations of privacy rights.

Army Gen. Keith Alexander, in his first congressional testimony since disclosure of the secretive programs, offered few details on Wednesday about the disrupted terror plots but asserted that the two government programs — they have collected millions of telephone records and kept tabs on Internet activity — were imperative in the terror fight.

The director of national intelligence has declassified some details on two thwarted attacks — Najibullah Zazi's foiled plot to bomb the New York subways and the case of David Coleman Headley, a Pakistani-American who used his U.S. passport to travel frequently to India, where he allegedly scouted out venues for terror attacks on behalf of the Lashkar-e-Taiba terrorist organization.

Alexander said he is pressing for the intelligence community to provide details on the other plots.

"I do think it's important that we get this right and I want the American people to know that we're trying to be transparent here, protect civil liberties and privacy but also the security of this country," Alexander told a Senate panel.

Building inspections in wake of Bangladesh disaster show other factories at risk

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Bangladeshi garment factories are routinely built without consulting engineers. Many are located in commercial or residential buildings not designed to withstand the stress of heavy manufacturing. Some add illegal extra floors atop support columns too weak to hold them, according to a survey of scores of factories by an engineering university that was shown to The Associated Press.

A separate inspection, by the garment industry, of 200 risky factories found that 10 percent of them were so dangerous that they were ordered to shut. The textiles minister said a third inspection, conducted by the government, could show that as many as 300 factories were unsafe.

Taken together, the findings offer the first broad look at just how unsafe the working conditions are for the garment workers who produce clothing for major western brands. And it's more bad news for the $20 billion industry that has been struggling to regain the confidence of Western retailers and consumers following a November fire at the Tazreen Fashions Ltd. factory that killed 112 people and the April collapse of the Rana Plaza building that killed 1,129 people in the worst garment industry tragedy. But the proliferation of inspections could signal the industry is finally taking its workers' safety seriously.

Rana Plaza was "a wakeup call for everybody" to ensure their buildings were structurally sound, said Shahidullah Azim, vice president of the Bangladesh Garment Manufacturers and Exporters Association.

"Earlier it was not in our minds. We never, ever thought of this," he said.

In a first, rural America loses population as boomers put off moves to retirement counties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural America is losing population for the first time ever, largely because of waning interest among baby boomers in moving to far-flung locations for retirement and recreation, according to new census estimates.

Long weighed down by dwindling populations in farming and coal communities and the movement of young people to cities, rural counties are being hit by sputtering growth in retirement and recreation areas, once residential hot spots for baby boomers.

The new estimates, as of July 2012, show that would-be retirees are opting to stay put in urban areas near jobs. Recent weakness in the economy means some boomers have less savings than a decade ago to buy a vacation home in the countryside, which often becomes a full-time residence after retirement. Cities are also boosting urban living, a potential draw for boomers who may prefer to age closer to accessible health care.

About 46.2 million people, or 15 percent of the U.S. population, reside in rural counties, which spread across 72 percent of the nation's land area. From 2011 to 2012, those non-metro areas lost more than 40,000 people, a 0.1 percent drop. The Census Bureau reported a minuscule 0.01 percent loss from 2010 to 2011, but that was not considered statistically significant and could be adjusted later.

Rural areas, which include manufacturing and farming as well as scenic retirement spots, have seen substantial movement of residents to urban areas before. But the changes are now coinciding with sharp declines in U.S. birth rates and an aging population, resulting in a first-ever annual loss.

Pa. girl, 10, who challenged transplantation rules, gets new lung PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A 10-year-old girl ailing with cystic fibrosis was recovering from a transplant of adult lungs made available to her by a judge's controversial ruling that expanded her options for lifesaving surgery.

Sarah Murnaghan underwent a six-hour surgery.

Wednesday at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, a procedure her aunt said that resulted because of the larger list of available organs.

"It was a direct result of the ruling that allowed her to be put on the adult list," Sarah's aunt, Sharon Ruddock said, after her niece's surgery was completed successfully. "It was not pediatric lungs. She would have never gotten these lungs otherwise." She said the donor lungs came through "normal channels" and not through the public appeals the family made directly in their bid to find a compatible donor. No other details about the donor lungs are known.

The Murnaghan family's public quest to qualify

The Murnaghan family's public quest to qualify their daughter for an organ transplant spurred public debate over how donor organs are allocated.

The generation that's grown up posting their lives online wants something unexpected: privacy

CHICAGO (AP) — Amid the debate over government surveillance, there's been an assumption: Young people don't care about privacy.

Turns out, the generation that puts much of the "social" in social networking is much more complex when determining what personal information they want to share.

Sure, they're as likely as ever to post photos of themselves online, as well as their location and even phone numbers, say those who track their high-tech habits.

But as they approach adulthood, they're also getting more adept at hiding and pruning their online

Despite their propensity for sharing, many young adults also are surprisingly big advocates for privacy — in some cases, more than their elders.

That attitude showed up most recently in a poll done over the weekend for the Pew Research Center for the People & the Press and The Washington Post. The poll, tied to the disclosure of broad federal surveillance, found that young adults were much more divided than older generations when asked if the government should tread on their privacy to Fifty-one percent of young adults, ages 18 to 29, said it was "more important for the federal government to investigate possible terrorist threats, even if that intrudes on personal privacy."

Police: Pa. prostitution suspect sang 'Rudolph' AMBRIDGE, Pa. (AP) — Police say a western prostitution suspect asked an undercover officer to sing "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" with her before other police swooped in to

The Beaver County Times reports Thursday 45-year-old Marcia Settles asked the Ambridge officer to sing the carol during an odd verbal exchange just before her arrest June 4.

Ambridge Sgt. Glen Sovich contends he and Settles agreed on a price for a sex act but before other officers arrived she asked him, "Are you the police?" Sovich denied it and asked Settles the same thing, prompting her to tell him she worked for the CIA and planned to kill him. Then she asked him to sing the song.

Settles' public defender could not immediately be reached for comment. She's awaiting trial after waiving a preliminary hearing Tuesday.

Police: Thief gets stuck in mud after burglary

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. (AP) — Police say a man who robbed a Foxborough home had to call a tow truck after getting stuck in the mud while making his getaway.

Chief Edward O'Leary says a man broke into the home on Tuesday, and loaded up his pickup truck with two television sets, a camcorder, camera, jewelry, and other items.

As he made his escape, he backed off the driveway and onto the ground softened by rain.

He got stuck.

He used rock salt, wood and even a throw rug under his tires to get traction without success before finally calling for a tow.

O'Leary tells The Sun Chronicle the suspicious tow truck driver alerted police, who tracked the truck to a Taunton man who had just been released from prison. Police are still looking for him.

No joke: Jester wanted at Austrian hotel

VIENNA (AP) — Wanted: A jester. Wallflowers need not apply.

It's no joke. An Austrian hotel is advertising for a modern-day court fool, who is communicative, extroverted, musical, creative and imaginative.

Applicants are asked to bring — and play — their musical instrument during the job interview. Also welcome: creative costumes. The successful candidate will earn 1,400 euros around $1,900 — a month. Hotel director Melanie Franke says those interested should not think they're on a fool's errand in applying. She says the idea is to treat guests like royalty, noting that "jesters were a luxury that royal families indulged themselves in."

The hotel in Austria's Styria province was designed by famed Austrian artist Friedensreich Hundertwasser and Franke says the jester concept fits its hotel's colorful appearance.

Pa. man finds reptile near sewer, offers gator aid

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Philadelphia man has offered a little gator aid — calling animal control authorities to help rescue a juvenile alligator he found near a sewer grate on his street.

Joe Malseed saw the 18-inch reptile this week in the city's Fishtown neighborhood and snapped its photo before calling for help. He says the alligator was in a puddle and appeared to be emerging from a nearby sewer. He says it was docile until a man tried to get a closer look and it hissed.

Police took the reptile to the city's Animal Care & Control Team. The reptile has been named Allie-Gator.

The animal control team said Wednesday despite the name it hasn't determined the alligator's gender because, "Who's going to do that job?"

Allie-Gator will remain with the team until a permanent home is

N.J. town OKs boardwalk ban on saggy pants

WILDWOOD, N.J. (AP) — Hindsight will soon be punishable by a $25 fine in this Jersey Shore resort.

Wildwood passed a law Wednesday night banning overly saggy pants on the boardwalk, prompted by numerous complaints from longtime visitors about having to see people's rear ends hanging out in public. Subsequent violations of the law, which could take effect as early as July 2, could result in fines as high as $200, and 40 hours of community service.

Civil libertarians say the law is unconstitutional and predict it will be overturned if challenged in court.

But Mayor Ernest Troiano Jr. said the issue is simple.

"This is just adding a little bit of decency to our town," he said. "It's amazing — and this is a pun — how far decency has fallen through the cracks."

Wildwood is a resort town near the southernmost tip of New Jersey. It is famous for its doo-wop '50s musical culture, its neon art-deco motels, and ridiculously wide beaches that are free — a rarity in New Jersey, which forces most other beachgoers to pay for the privilege.

The law passed unanimously, and no one spoke against it. Several residents strongly supported the law.

"It's long overdue," said Mary Erceg. "People who choose to dress like that offend any person. There has to be some common standard of decencv. It offends all of us."

"We need it," added resident Dennis Flynn. "This is our city. You have to respect it."

Known popularly as "sagging," the trend originated in the U.S. prison system, where inmates are not allowed to wear belts. It was popularized by hip-hop artists and embraced by youths. Authorities in suburbs of New Orleans, Chicago, Atlanta, Detroit, Miami and Jacksonville, Fla., are among those who have passed laws banning overly droopy pants. Bathing suits are already prohibited for both sexes on the Wildwood boardwalk, unless covered up by other clothing. City Commissioner Pete Byron said the city is not trying to be the fashion 'There's a line that gets crossed between being a fashion statement and being obnoxious," he said. "Families can feel threatened." The American Civil Liberties Union of New Jersev has declined to take a position on the law, but other ACLU chapters around the country have said such laws are unconstitutional. Troiano said he hopes no one will have to be cited by police for violating the ordinance. Rather, he said, a well-placed word from an officer should suffice to convince boardwalk patrons with overly low-slung jeans to hike them up.

Police Chief Steven Long said his officers will respond appropriately when they see violations.

"The ultimate goal is compliance," he said. "We're just trying to make the city a better place to visit."

"The city is not going to be out hunting these kids down," the mayor said. "We're not going to be out there with a tape measure. But we know what's right and not right. If we don't make an attempt to clean our town up, who's going to?"

Hawks taken in MLB Draft

By BRIAN MCCORMACK

Sports Editor

Howard College's baseball program has a history of sending players off to the next level. Whether that level is a Division I school, a minor league squad or a major league organization, HC Manager Britt Smith can be counted on to root for their success.

This season, several Hawks, former Hawks and future Hawks have been eyed by the big league scouts. Topping the list of hopefuls is the 6'9" David Palladino, a righty from Emerson, Palladino went in the fifth round and was taken as the 164th overall pick by the New York Yankees.

That doesn't mean we'll be seeing Palladino mixed in the Bombers' rotation along with C.C. Sabathia and Hiroki Kuroda next year, but according to Smith, Palladino is

"The average length of time a kid will spend in the minors is six years," Smith explained. "It really depends on the kid. How do they handle themselves off the field? It all varies by position and organization. There is some physical skill involved, but you have to be able to handle professional baseball. There's a maturity level that's required. Palladino is already a pretty polished guy. He got drafted because of his big time arm strength. His downfall is that he may not be able to develop much more."

Another hurler Smith is sending off is David Gates. The 6'5" Lubbock native may be seen on the mound for the Texas Rangers at some point, after being picked up in the 18th round.

"Gates has a chance to be fasttracked," Smith said of the righthander. "He will be a reliever someday. That's a guy who can pitch in the big leagues for 10-15 years. He has to develop some more and he won't be a starter. He's a starter at this level, but I told him, "You're going to be a reliever." The Rangers love him because he's competitive and he's willing to work hard." Kyle Bartsch, a former Hawk who transferred to Southern Alabama, was taken in the seventh round by the Kansas City Royals.

"Bartsch is a great development story," Smith said. "He continued to work and he has the all-time career saves record at Southern Alabama. He's a 91-93 mile per hour left-handed closer. He could make it."

Smith, along with assistants Jake Carlson and Robert Martinez, lost a handful of guys to the draft, including pitcher Hunter Wood who signed with the Tampa Bay Rays and catcher

Tanner Norton, who signed with the Milwaukee Brewers.

"It wasn't unexpected," Smith said. "We go through this every year. Norton is a catcher from Northern Kentucky with a big time bat. I think his bat is little more ready for the big leagues than his catching is."

Position players are in for a long haul once drafted. The years of grinding it out in minors may not translate to a major league career. Paul Hendrix and Levi Scott will each get a chance to prove themselves. Hendrix left Howard College in 2011, while Scott graduated this year.

"Paul's got a good shot," Smith said. "So does Levi. Paul is more of a grinder, He'll find a way to be successful. Levi has the physcial ability. It's a lot harder to make it

Indians to meet Orioles in Major League Championship by Bryson Van Vleet and a Indians, going two-for-Special to the Herald

In a game that determined who would move on to the Major League City Championship today, the 11-year old Indians and Astros duked it out on the field Wednesday at the Roy Anderson Sports Complex, with the Indians coming out ahead, 11-5.

the Indians drew first blood, scoring a run in the first inning, but the Astros took a 4-1 lead in the second, keyed by a double quartet of singles by Isaac Rios, Dakota Roberts, Ryan Buske and Brett Berringer.

The Indians — hoping to slow the hot Astros inserted their Ace, Jason Miramontes, on the mound, who shut the Astros down for the remainder of the affair. Miramontes recorded seven strikouts and just one walk during the outing.

Chris Ibanez led the charge at the plate for the three with a single and a triple and picking up five RBI. Miramontes also went two-for-three with a single and a triple and had two RBI.

Or play during the most consecutive games on their schedule.

Rookie right-hander Nick Tepesch allowed five runs in five innings and the Rangers lost 5-2 loss Wednesday night to the Cleveland Indians, who had lost eight in a row before winning consecutive games to clinch the three-game series.

"You're going to have moments where you fail as a team, you're going to have moments where you fail individually, and the key is to just minimize the valleys,' David Murphy said. "Right now, it's just not happening for us."

The series against the Indians opened an 11-game homestand for Texas. It is also part of 20 games in 20 days — and the Rangers are 3-6 heading into the midpoint of that Thursday, when they open a four-game against the Blue Jays, who took two of three from them in Toronto last weekend.

On the other side, Jason Kipnis and the Indians felt a lot

Nets hire Jason Kidd as coach (AP) — The Brooklyn come home, Jason."

Nets hired Jason Kidd as their coach Wednesday, bringing the former star back to the franchise he led to its greatest NBA success.

Kidd retired earlier this month after one season with the New York Knicks, his 19th in the NBA. The Nets decided to hire him to replace P.J. Carlesimo despite his absence of coaching experience.

"Jason Kidd has a long and legendary history with the Nets and with the city of New York," Nets owner Mikhail Prokhorov said in a statement. "He has the fire in the belly we need, and has achieved as a player everything the Brooklyn Nets are striving to achieve. We believe he will lead us there. Wel-

The move reunites Kidd with the franchise he led to consecutive NBA Finals in 2002-03, when they played in New Jersey. He spent $6\frac{1}{2}$ seasons with the Nets, averaging 14.6 points, 9.1 assists and 7.2 rebounds, and is their career leader in numerous statistical categories.

"Jason is a proven winner and leader with an incredible wealth of basketball knowledge and experience," general manager Billy King said. "This will be a natural transition for him to move into the role of head coach, as he embodies the tough, smart and team-first mentality that we are trying to establish in Brooklyn."

made Kidd the 18th coach

Terms of the deal that in franchise history were not disclosed. The Nets will introduce Kidd on Thursday during a press conference at Barclays Center.

Carlesimo wasn't retained after leading the Nets into the playoffs, where they lost to the Chicago Bulls in the first round.

He went 35-19 after replacing Avery Johnson, who was fired in Decem-

The 40-year-old Kidd was considered one of the smartest players in the NBA, which he believes will help him make the transition into coaching.

"This is a tremendous opportunity to be named head coach of the Brooklyn Nets, and it's a role I have been studying for," Kidd said.

Leo Moon Lightens the Load

A playful Leo moon puts some humor and amusement into the mix, helping to lighten up the current t-square, which includes Venus, Pluto and Uranus. If you don't have enough laughter in your life — and who does, really? — look for more. You won't have to go far. Mercury and Venus in Cancer suggests that the best source of humor is at home.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You specialize in what others would call "tough situations." What they don't know is that you find this work fun and easy. You'll be praised for your talent, even though you don't see it as anything extraordinary.

HOLIDAY MATHIS

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You're adaptable, but you don't stray from your principles. This gives you a confident footing on this uphill climb of a day. These are the kinds of challenges that keep you in shape.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Most of the boundaries of the world are unseen, but those who own the territory know where the lines are. You'll be exploring foreign land in some sense. Ask where the lines are drawn to avoid crossing the wrong boundaries.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You will be compelled to think carefully through your upcoming schedule. As you picture each thing you will tend to, you will get ideas as to what would make the experience even better. Attention to detail saves the day

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). How do you know whether you've made a difference? Simple. Are things different because you are there? If not, you need to speak up, touch people, do something, change something.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Being a novice is fun. The possibilities are endless. Enjoy that phase, but don't let it seduce vou. It's important to be a master, too, which you never get to be if you're always starting something new.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You're feeling free and a little rebellious. You inspire people to try and encourage them to mistakes, knowing that eventually they'll come up with something good. You will be a channel of creative energy for those who are blocked.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Act on the impulse to make something out of nothing. Don't hesitate because people around you aren't moving; they can't see the opportunity. You see the potential in things that others are blind to.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Your emotions will warp the space-time continuum. A few minutes can seem like an eternity if those minutes are spent in fear. Minutes spent in joy, however, rush by.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You'll improve on your last outcome. Sure, you'd like to know what it's like to be the winner over all. But the winner over "self" is by far the most satisfying victory.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Enjoy the pride of ownership you experience while you work today. As you work on this project, you know it's yours. But the minute you stop working on it because it's quite finished, it will belong to the world.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Play the role in which you were cast if you like it, but don't believe that just because you were cast, that's who you are. You're the artist behind a creation, not the creation itself.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 13). An incurable optimist, your hopes will come true. The professional challenges you face in July will inspire your best performances to date. Your support system will help you reach an ambitious goal by the end of August. You'll fly off on adventure in September and later bring loved ones along to share the experience. Cancer and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 34, 21, 29, 30 and 1.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "If people ask me to volunteer, I can't help myself; I feel I have to say yes. As a result, I am so tied up in commitments that I feel I don't have any time to myself. When I'm helping, I do feel happy. But why can't I find balance in life? I'm 45 years old. I've never felt like my life was in balance. I'm always stressed. I'm a Sagittarius with a Virgo moon."

You are a passionate, fiery Sagittarius and the kind of person who courageously, voraciously dives into life. You tend toward extremes. Stress and excitement are fuel for your high-energy personality. Your Virgo moon adds high levels of responsibility, organization and productivity. Striving for balance may be an ill-matched

In astrology, the idea of balance is ruled by Libra, the sign of the scales. Libra is also the sign of beauty, and therein lies one of her secret keys. The best things in life, like beauty, cannot be accurately measured except by the scale of our hearts. Our enjoyment is the greatest indication of their worth.

Instead of striving for balance, strive for maximum enjoyment. Say yes to pleasure and fun, and fill your schedule with that for a while. When you know what you're saying "yes" to, it's easy to say "no."

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Of course Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen were born under the sign of the twins. The Gemini actresses and fashion designers have launched several lines and are darlings of the press, as well as paparazzi magnets. Mercury and Venus in Cancer suggests the twins would be extremely successful in the area of fashionable decor for the home.

better heading home for a day off after what was still a miserable trip overall. Kipnis had a home run among his three hits.

"Definitely a good way to end this trip that did not start the way we wanted it to," Kipnis said. "It takes a little pressure off. You get a happy flight home, you get a day off, you get a little momentum on your side, you get to go home for a long homestand. I think everybody is ready to go home even more so now."

The Indians hit the road after an 11-3 loss at home to Tampa Bay on June 2. They were then swept in three-game series at the New York Yankees and Detroit before losing the opener at

Now they get a day off Thursday before playing Washington on Friday to start a nine-game homestand.

"We went through a pretty bad stretch there," manager Terry Francona said. "We played well tonight, and we'll have a much-needed day

Mike Aviles also homered for Cleveland (32-33) which also won 5-2 on Tuesday after losing the series opener 6-3. The Indians start a nine-game homestand Friday against Washing-

The Indians had lost 12 games in a row away from home before winning in Texas. They had gone 0-4-1 in road series since taking two of three May 10-12 in an early series at Detroit, the only American League team with a better home record than the Rangers

"It's not a game at that level," Smith added. "That's what a lot of people don't understand. At that level, it's a business. We always wish the players well. We will be honest with them and give them advice when we're asked for it, but we never stand in a kids way, even if we think it may be the wrong decision for them at the time. We build relationships with these guys during the recruiting process and we wish them the best."
