Building bridges and providing hope is the goal of the 2014 United Way of Big Spring and Howard County campaign as board members strive to reach a goal of $330,000.

"It's an aggressive goal, but I know we can do it. I know it will happen because of folks in this community," said Larry Rodgers, United Way board first vice president. "Our community is on a growth spurt. We see it and we know there a lot of folks coming to this community to be a part of it and that tells us there will be a bigger need for it, a need for bigger bridges and more folks helping out, touching lives and making a difference. Together we can build a stronger and better community in Howard County."

In addition to the announcement of the new campaign goal, board members gave an update on the most recent campaign as supporters and ban all non-essential water uses beginning Wednesday, Aug. 21, 2013, at 9 p.m." Outside watering, washing vehicles, filling of swimming pools, flushing lines, wetting ground for construction or any other non-essential uses of water will be strictly prohibited, the release stated.

Residents may experience inconveniences such as low water pressure or additional air in the water during this Bomb technicians from the Midland Police Department were called to the scene, according to Everett, and assisted with the investigation. "Former Lt. Terry Chamness was the only (local)

PD personnel trained to handle these types of situations and he retired recently," Everett said. "So, we had to call in the bomb technicians from Midland. We made sure to secure the area — which included the street in front of the bank and the nearby parking lot — and waited for them to arrive." Midland bomb technicians used a robot to X-ray the box. Despite eventually discovering the mundane nature of the contents, Everett said the slight inconvenience to motorists on Main Street and bank customers is well worth the overall safety of the city's citizens. "When you come across something like that, something that seems so out of place and suspicious, you have to prepare for the worst-case scenario," Everett said. "That's what law enforcement officers on the scene did. It may have taken a handful of people a few extra minutes to get to work, but that's a small price to pay to keep people safe.

"You never know how a situation like this will turn out. No one wants to think someone would set a bomb or something deadly like that here in Big Spring, but it happens. We just have to be prepared and handle those situations like we handled this member agencies gathered together to enjoy an evening of celebration.

"This kick-off isn't about building bridges, it's about celebrating. It's about celebrating the spirit of giving, which is what we are doing, together, in an effort to help those people who need it," Rodgers said.

Ann McClarty, United Way of Big Spring and Howard County board president, said the 2013 campaign goal of $300,000 was not only met, but surpassed with a total of $310,000.

"It seems like only yesterday we were here to kick off the 2013 campaign and now I'm able to announce that we surpassed that goal. ter, CASA of West Texas, Council on Aging "We had the most suc-

Bowls Empty ever, which event caused us to have to move from the First Christian Church to the Dora Roberts Community Center and we are looking forward to another successful event this coming November," McClarty said.

One of the perks of having such a successful campaign and surpassing the goal was that each of the supported agencies was able to receive a bonus check.

"These agencies make a difference in someone's life every day and it's an honor to be a part of their lives and to be able to help them do what they do," Executive Director Sandy Stewart said. "It's just amazing how supportive the community and local businesses are, which is what really makes all this support possible."

The 2014 campaign will be helping out 17 member agencies. Those agencies include: Salvation Army Boys and Girls Club, Salvation Army, Isaiah 58, Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, YMCA, Northside Community Center, Emergency Services Chaplain Corp., Spring of Siloam, Girls Scouts of the Desert Southwest, Buffalo Trail Council Boy Scouts of America, American Red Cross West Texas ChapMobile Meals, Howard County Humane Society, Rape Crisis/Victim Services of Big Spring, Westside Community Day Care Center and Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

"A bridge is a structure built to span obstacles for the purpose of providing passage over the obstacles and as the United Way that's kind of what we do on a regular basis for member agencies," Rodgers said. "We build a bridge to go over the obstacles that may be placed in the way; that's what the United Way is all about, helping neighbors, family and friends. We have these wonderful people to reach out and build a bridge, tear down those walls and help us get to the other side while providing safe passage." To find out more about

GOP must shed defeatism

That are establishment Republicans so afraid of? Why are they so convinced that if they stand up to Obama even on issues the public agrees with them on — they will be spanked at the ballot box?

Playing it safe sure has paid big dividends, huh? Every time we've had a fight over a budget ceiling or a continuing resolution, the establishment has told us we must not allow the government to shut down because Republicans would be blamed for it. The actual facts of the particular situation don't matter — even if the Republicans' position is justified, defensible or over an issue that aligns them with the electorate. The establishment has decreed that we couldn't possibly, ever, come out on top in such a battle. It's been a self-fulfilling prophecy. How can we prevail when we've announced in advance that we can't? How can we conceivably win over the public when we concede defeat before the battle begins?

Why is it automatically assumed that in every such impasse, Republicans will be blamed instead of Obama? Is it not true that his profligate spending is unpopular with the majority? That Obamacare consistently polls poorly? That the economy remains stagnant?

"We have to keep our eye on the big ball," they would say. "The 2012 elections are everything, and we'll lose if we always appear as the party of 'no."

Well, last time I checked, we got our clocks cleaned in 2012 after following this timid blueprint. Mitt Romney had Obama on the ropes in the first debate and refused to go in for the kill on Benghazi and other issues. He may as well have tendered his forfeiture right then and

Contrary to establishment

"wisdom," Republicans win elections when they contrast themselves with Democrats, not emulate them. You can't inspire voters if you don't offer them a different, superior vision.

Recently, unnamed GOP strategists warned that unless Republicans quit going negative on Obama, they'll go down in flames in 2014 and possibly even lose their congressional majority. We cannot take the House for granted, they say.

In the first place, any political strategist who says Republicans can ever take any race for granted, given the liberal national media and the Democrats' proficiency at propaganda, ought to be fired. We must always run as though everything is on the line and assume nothing.

But how about this theory that criticizing Obama is toxic and politically suicidal? How do people impregnated with such defeatism gravitate toward a profession that is all about winning? Do Democrats ever hold back their criticism of Republicans? Are they ever shy about lambasting Republicans as extremists and evil?

What makes our Beltway guys think they can compete with gloves on when the other side not only sheds the gloves but carries knives and guns? This is madness.

This is maddening.

Moreover, to say that Republicans must decide whether to criticize Obama or to present an alternative agenda is giving a false choice. You can't separate the two. We can't possibly make the case for our own agenda unless we focus the high beams on the utter failures of Obama's policies, his lawlessness, his divisiveness and his virtual despotism.

What's the point of presenting an alternative to Obamacare, for example, if we don't spell out to the public just how horrendous this law is? What's the point of offering a pro-market, pro-growth agenda if we don't point out how terrible Obama's economy is and then tie Obama and his policies to it?

With all due respect to those who say the public is already aware of Obama's failures, where are you getting your information? He continues to have respectable approval numbers even though the public is largely opposed to his agenda. Our feckless, uncommunicative, unmotivated side hasn't made the case against him. Nor is making a strong case against Obama's record "dirty campaigning." How silly. We have a duty to showcase his failures — unless we don't really believe he or his policies are the culprit. But if anyone is so deceived, it's time for him to come out of the closet and go to the other side, where he belongs. I read recently about how House Speaker John Boehner declined to state his position on immigration, saying he views himself as "a facilitator." Are you kidding me? He is supposed to be the GOP leader, not a mediator. National politics is an adversarial process, especially these days, and if our side holds back while the other side pushes the pedal to the floorboard, we'll get run over.

Come on, guys, take off your pocket protectors and put on your fighting gear. Quit spending all your time calculating, strategizing, number crunching and hand-wringing. Let's just start doing the right thing standing for the right things, communicating our message and calling Obama out without pulling punches — and inspire voters to vote for us. Our prescriptions work, so let's quit acting ashamed of them.

Give us patience, oh God, in dealing with bad attitudes. Amen

lf you drink, don't enjoy it

n unapologetic drinker, writer H.L. Mencken blamed Prohibition on American moralists' distaste for happiness. "A Puritan is not against bullfighting because of the pain it gives the bull," he wrote, "but because of the pleasure it gives the spectators."

Today's neo-prohibitionists know that fist-banging sermons about demon rum sound dated, so they've medicalized the warnings: Alcohol causes cancer and bury research showing the medidefinitions of "moderate."

The cautioners belong to the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism. It should surprise no one that an institute so named would not smile on the fruit of the vineyards.

Before we go on, a disclaimer. Alcoholism is a curse, and those so afflicted must learn to not drink at all. But for non-alcoholics, drinking should be the imbiber's business, assuming of course that the person is not driving while inebriated. Ironically, the neo-prohibi-tionist approach may be counterproductive to the problem of drunken driving. The national blood-alcohol limit for drivers has been continually lowered to the current 0.08 percent. But the hideous cases of drunken driving almost always involve motorists way beyond that limit.

In Seattle last March, a driver with a preliminary breathalcohol level of 0.22 killed a couple and seriously injured two young family members as they crossed a street. That's three times the legal limit. And as is often learned in such tragedies, the driver was a repeat offender, arrested twice in the previous months for drunken driving.

Critics of demands for still lower blood-alcohol limits argue that they pull harmless social drinkers into the dragnet, wasting resources better spent on putting the hard-core offenders behind bars.

The founder of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) quit the organization in 1985 for what she charged was one such neo-prohibitionist turn.

"I didn't start MADD to deal with alcohol," Candy Lightner said. "I started MADD to deal with the issue of drunk driving." Back at the debate over drinking and weight, puritanical thinking often bubbles up from an evident concern for health. Consider the research cited in the journal Physiology & Behavior that alcohol may enhance "the short-term rewarding effects of consuming food." What's wrong with that? Besides, wine cultures — Italy and France, for example — tend to have slender people.

Perhaps wine marries well with healthy food choices, as in the Mediterranean diet. Perhaps moderate alcohol consumption relaxes those who overeat as a response to stress.

The Wall Street Journal referenced studies at the Harvard Medical School suggesting that alcohol in moderation actually helps maintain weight. Researcher Eric Rimm noted that after drinking alcohol, people's heart rate rose, causing them to burn more calories. The increase in calorie burning was small, he carefully added, and that desire to lose weight is not reason to drink.

Another theory is that female drinkers eat fewer sweet foods because alcohol arouses the same pleasure center in the brain as do sugary things. Again, that darn pleasure center (Sorry, guys, the jury's still out on how you react.)

Good science accepts that temperate drinking protects somewhat against heart disease and has been associated with a lower risk for dementia. And the Nurses' Health Study found that while alcohol does raise the risk for breast cancer, adequate intake of folic acid may cancel it

If you can drink responsibly and want to, go ahead. Just don't say you enjoy it.

To labor means to work. In 1882, many kinds of workers lived in New York City. There were carpenters, bricklayers, furniture-makers, jewelers, printers and more.

hile they were proud of their work and what they made, many laborers were unhappy with their long hours, unsafe workplaces and low pay. Many worked seven days a week and 12 or 14 hours a day. Pay was so low that even young

In the 1880s, New York workers formed groups called craft unions. Bricklayers had their own union. The carpenters had theirs and so did the printers. After a while, these small unions formed a larger union called the Knights of Labor. The Knights of Labor fought for workers' rights. Their "weapons" were words and votes. They fought to get children out of the factories and the mines. They fought for better pay and safer working environments.

THE FIRST LABOR DAY

In 1882, a New York City union called the Central Labor Union (C.L.U.) decided to hold a parade and picnic for workers on September 5. The parade would be a chance for workers to show off their work. More than 10,000 marchers showed up that day. Thousands more watched the parade. Many of the people carried signs that told what the workers wanted to change.

Workers all over the country liked the idea of a workers' holiday. By the 1930s every state in the U.S. celebrated Labor Day.

Today we celebrate Labor Day to remember that working people help make our country strong. All workers are important!

Bird Poop: For the benefit of Mr. Kite or a second, the long-winged bird seemed stationary. Then, with half closed wings, it came down swiftly toward a tree, only to sail upward, immediately, at almost the same speed. Over and over, the bird seemed to be attacking the trees in the neighborhood. As it approached a tall pine and was close to impacting the needles, a cicada darted from its hiding place. The bird's talons quickly grabbed it.

Flying off with its food clutched in its foot, the bird pecked at the insect with its bill. While still in flight, and having eaten the most delicate parts, it dropped the rest.

Returning, it swooped downward toward a large shrub in our next-door neighbor's yard. A large grasshopper was startled into flight. Swiftly, talons surrounded the insect. Flying to the top of a telephone pole to dine, the hawk first pulled off the wings and legs. Then it quickly devoured another catch.

During mid to late August, these aerial displays are common. Our summer visitors are not only hunting in order to feed themselves and their fledglings. They are preparing for fall migration.

Admired by many, their hunting flights and soaring abilities often draw the wrong attention during our hot and lengthy summer afternoons. When a phone call indicated a downed raptor, it was no surprise.

Soon, the game warden arrived, his carrier holding an adult Mississippi kite. Glaring at us with its colorful red eyes, the hawk had the typical, striking appearance. Its light gray head was accented with dark eye patches. Its softer, darker gray body was quite a contrast to its bold, charcoal colored wing parts and tail.

Removing it from the container required leather gloves for protection from its extremely quick feet and small, sharp talons. Its screams of defiance did

From Kansas across to South Carolina and downward through the Gulf States, the Mississippi Kite is a distinct summer hawk. Its name is derived from the area of the United States, where it was first documented, and its soaring abilities. In August or early September, the specie begins its long journey to South America in order to find a fall and winter food source.

No obvious fractures were in its wings. Since it held them equally to the sides of its body, it might have suffered bruising or a hairline fracture.

Another possibility was a toxic bug. With a diet of cicadas and grasshoppers, the bird might have encountered a pesticide.

For four days, the kite readily ate crickets and mice, but had no inclination to make any short flights when released in a large, open area. A trip to Lubbock could assure that the bird would be x-rayed and examined to try to determine the cause of its passive nature.

After a thorough "hands on" examination, the kite was watched carefully as it devoured platters of beef heart and crickets. Wanting to know more, Gail Barnes took it in for x-rays.

"Now we know why it didn't want to fly,' she continued after telling me what had been found. Shot in the upper right chest with a pellet or BB, the raptor had been extremely

Removing the projectile was not considered since the surgery would do more damage than good. "So, what do they think will happen?"

With time, the veterinarians felt the hawk could fly again. "What about lead poisoning?" I asked.

Although a possibility, the pellet could remain in the tissue since apparently there was no nerve damage or broken bones. Far more suited to being in nature than captivity, it could live out its life span with nature deter-

turned into weeks as its progressed from a mew in the barn to the flight

With word that it had mastered the rigorous efforts of flying, the Mississippi kite was released. Knowing it would be able to soar and migrate for a rendezvous with other members of its specie was gratifying. Rising to sail in broad circles in the sky, its graceful presence on a clear day thrilled the volunteer who said good-bye.

Suddenly the silence of its debut was interrupted by a familiar "phee-phew," "pheephew." Perhaps the summer guest from South America had been able to express its gratitude through the delightful whistling that echoed through the

Three days later Farmer John called the policeman and said,

"You've got to do something about these drivers. The 'school crossing' sign seems to make them go even faster!"

So, again, the policeman sends out the Main Roads workers' and they put up a new sign: Slow: Children at Play.

That really sped them up. So Farmer John called and called and called every day for three weeks. Finally, he asked the policeman, "Your signs are doing no good at all, can I put up my own sign?"

The policeman said, "Sure, go ahead." He was willing to let Farmer John do just about anything in order to get him to stop calling to complain.

The policeman got no more calls from Farmer John. Three weeks later, curiosity got the best of the policeman and he decided to give Farmer John a call.

"How's the problem with those drivers. Did you put up your sign?"

"Oh, I sure did," replied Farmer John, "and not one chicken has been killed since then. I've got to go. I'm very busy." He hung up the phone.

The policeman was really curious and he thought to himself, "I'd better go out there and take a look at that sign, it might be something that we could use to slow down drivers." So he drove out to Farmer John's house, and his jaw dropped the moment he saw the sign.

It was spray painted on a sheet of wood: Nudist Colony. Go slow and watch out for chicks! Human ingenuity wins out again!

Against the Houston Astros, they weren't alone in making things happen.

relating to the issue of whether Rodriguez obstructed the office of commissioner's investigation.

Tacopina, a lawyer with one of the four firms representing Rodriguez, said the players' association would have to agree to waive confidentiality. "The letter was nothing more than a cheap publicity stunt," Tacopina said in a statement. "The letter that was addressed to my law office with the words 'Via Hand Delivery' on top was in fact never delivered to my office but was instead given to the 'Today' show, which in and of itself is yet another violation of the confidentiality clause of the JDA. They know full well that they have to address the letter to the MLBPA and such a waiver would require the MLBAPA to be party of the agreement and signatures. It's nothing but a theatrical trap hoping I would sign knowing that I couldn't and in fact would have me breaching the JDA agreement if I did."

The union didn't immediately respond to a request for comment.

A three-time AL MVP, Rodriguez is playing his pending appeal, which is not expected to be decided by arbitrator Fredric Horowitz until at least November.

In addition to his own lawyers, Rodriguez paid Florida-based attorney Susy Ribero-Ayala in February to represent Bosch.

"A retainer of $25,000 was paid (via wire transfer) by a representative of Alex Rodriguez. Ms. Ribero-Ayala accepted this payment on behalf of Anthony Bosch as payment for his legal representation," Ribero-Ayala spokeswoman Joyce Fitzpatrick said in a statement Monday. "In April 2013, Ms. Ribero-Ayala received an unsolicited and unwarranted wire transfer of $50,000 from A-Rod Corp. The funds were immediately returned. Mr. Rodriguez does not have any involvement in Mr. Bosch's legal representation."

The payments were first reported Sunday by ESPN. Rodriguez declined comment, citing the JDA's confidentiality provision.

"At some point, I think everybody will talk," he said early Monday. "I think everybody has to have a little patience."

and had seven hits six singles and a double — along with three walks, two Houston errors and a sacrifice bunt. Only five of the 11 runs were earned.

The last team in the majors with as many runs in an inning was St. Louis, with a 12run seventh in a 12-0 win over the Chicago Cubs on July 21, 2012. Texas' last 11-run inning was in the fifth of a 15-3 win at home against Tampa Bay on Sept. 26, 2009.

The Rangers have won 12 of their last 13 games against Houston (41-83), the firstyear American League team now 30½ games back in the division.

Martin, in his 19th start as the leadoff hitter, had an infield single to start the Texas first before Andrus had a single on a perfectly executed hit-and-run play. Ian Kinsler had a sac fly and Adrian Beltre got his first intentional walk of the game before a double steal. Andrus swiped home for a 2-0 lead.

"Every time we get on base, put ourselves in scoring position, it makes things easier," Andrus said.

Matt Garza (3-1)struck out eight in 6 2-3 innings. But the right-hander allowed five runs, becoming the first Texas starter in 22 games to allow more than four.

Lucas Harrell (6-14), getting another start after four consecutive relief appearances, allowed nine runs (seven earned) in 2 1-3 innings. He was initially sent to the bullpen after also giving up nine runs in 3 2-3 innings at Texas in a 10-5 loss July 5.

Texas finished with a season high for runs, two nights after a 15-3 victory over Seattle that is its highest-scoring game without a home run in the 20 seasons of Rangers Ballpark.

Texas had 15 runs without a homer again before Pierzynski connected in the seventh off reliever Philip Humber, who last season threw a perfect game for the Chicago White Sox with Pierzynski as his catcher. Pierzynski finished with four hits and four RBIs.

After Martin and Andrus got the third started, Kinsler had a sac bunt before Adrian Beltre, hitting .437 over the previous 19 games, got his second intentional pass. Singles by Pierzynski and Alex Rios re-loaded the bases, Mitch Moreland hit a two-run doubled to deep center and Jurickson Profar walked to load the bases again, and end Harrell's night.

Wade LeBlanc, recalled by Houston earlier Monday, got David Murphy to hit a grounder. Second baseman Jose Altuve made a nifty stop going toward the middle of the infield and flipped the ball with his glove, only for shortstop Jonathan Villar to drop it and allow two runs to score. Martin then walked and Andrus reached on an error before Kinsler's tworun single. Pierzynski drove in another run with a single to cap the scoring.

Astros infielder Jake Elmore, who made his first major league appearance at catcher when taking over in the fourth after Carlos Corporan got hit by a foul ball, later pitched a 1-2-3 eighth. Elmore was the only of four Houston pitchers with a scoreless outing.

"They told me early in the game that I was going to pitch because the game was out of hand. I was expecting that, but out of nowhere (Corporan) got hurt. I had told them I could catch like 2 weeks ago," Elmore said. "I've never done both in the same game."

Houston was within 2-1 when Jason Castro and Chris Carter had consecutive doubles to start the second. The Astros then fell behind 15-1 before scoring four times in the seventh.

"It's real simple, we didn't play well," manager Bo Porter said. "We've got to let this one go."
