By STEVE REAGAN

VOLUME 108. NUMBER 293

Two Big Spring men who allegedly participated in the armed robbery of a local store in June were among 13 people indicted during Tuesday's session of the Howard County Grand Jury.

Eufemio Ortiz Jr., 21, and Sunday C. Luna, 26, both currently incarcerated in the Howard County Detention Center, were indicted on first-degree aggravated robbery charges for their alleged roles in the Aug. 22 stick-up of the Boost Mobile store on FM 700.

District Attorney Hardy L. Wilkerson said Ortiz is accused of robbing the store at gunpoint and making off with approximately $2,000 in cash, plus other materials. He then left the scene in a vehicle allegedly driven by Luna. The pair were apprehended by Big Spring police later that day, Wilkerson said.

If convicted, the duo faces a possible sentence of between 5 and 99 years or life in pris-Also indicted Tuesday was 28-year-old Joshua Aaron Kirby, who stands charged with attempted murder, two counts of retaliation and burglary of a building.

Wilkerson said Kirby stands accused of threatening, then attempting, to kill his girlfriend, who was scheduled to testify against him in a criminal trial in Midland.

On June 15, Kirby — who was armed with a handgun — and a friend drove to Big Spring to confront the victim. Before Kirby could follow through on his Howard County fifth graders got an up-close and, in some cases, hands-on look at agriculture's impact on this area Tuesday morning.

The Howard County Farm Bureau's annual "Ag in the Classroom"eventintroduced students from Big Spring, Coahoma, Forsan and Sands to several aspects of farm and ranch life, including how cattle are branded and milked, how corn is shelled and milled, how cotton is ginned and what kind of insects and other wildlife call this area home.

Although Howard County is considered a rural area, few youngsters realize just organizers said.

Garbage fee hike trashed

In 4-3 council vote Tuesday

By STEVE REAGAN

Big Spring City Council has done an about-face on plans to increase garbage collection fees this year.

Two weeks after tentatively approving monthly increases of $3 for residences and $5 for businesses, the council voted 4-to-3 to nix the idea during their regular meeting Tuesday evening.

Fernandez, the Marcus lone council member to vote against the fee increase two weeks ago, was joined by colleagues Carmen Harbour, Glen Carrigan and Marvin Boyd in defeating the measure. Mayor Larry McLellan See CITY, Page 3 and council members Bobby McDonald and Raul Benavides voted for the fee increase.

With city levies increasing in other areas, Boyd said it was time to give residents a break. "(Residents) already ab-thing but easy. Even though I'm 36 years old, I still learn my lessons the hard way. It's remarkably like parenthood. You see people doing it and think it can't be that difficult and then you have a child of your own and you realize that perhaps you overestimated your natural abilities and this child rearing business might be a bit more difficult than you originally anticipated. As a parent myself, I now appreciate the wisdom in much of what my parents said or did when I was growing up. I remember many times when we would beg my dad to help with whatever project he was working on and he would reply, "You can help me most by staying out of my way." I never knew the true beauty of that response until I had my own children who have wanted to help me do everything from lay hardwood floors to flush a toilet.

So here I am presented with the task of writing approximately 1,000 words and, in doing so, trying not to mortify my parents who have to live here even after I leave. At first I thought I would write a sappy tribute to my parents, detailing all of their beautiful qualities and cementing my place as their favorite child. Then I thought that would be cliché and I should write something that was witty and charming and would leave my parents fighting over who gets to keep the copy of the article on their person at all times. And by 2:30 a.m. Central Time the night before the deadline, I decided I would settle for anything that didn't make me sound like a complete idiot and leave my dad thinking that I could have helped him most by staying out of his way. They say to write what you know and at the moment the things I know really well are annoying shows on the Disney Channel, the ability to cripple oneself with a single Lego left on the floor, and the psychology behind tricking your 4-year-old into eating her vegetables. One thing is for sure: parenthood is not what I was expecting.

Just this week I have said out loud, "Stop licking your sister. You are not a mother cat cleaning your babies." I wish I had had sufficient sleep over the past 10 years to remember all of the things I have had to say to my children because we could share a good laugh, I'm sure. What I love about being an adult child is the things your parents tell you about your childhood that you didn't already know. Such as, there were no board meetings on Tuesday nights and Dad was really going to Astros games without us. Or they hid the good cookies in the healthy cereal box so we wouldn't know where to find them. And how they used to laugh at us when we thought we were fooling them and they knew the truth.

But the best realizations are the ones you come to on your own. Like when it dawns on you that all the "surprise" birthday cakes you made for them weren't really surprises at all. The fun in it for them was the joy it gave us. It makes sense now that there's no way four kids under the age of 10 could have conspired to truly surprise them. And someday it will occur to my kids as well that the greatest part of the secretive Mother's Day breakfasts and not-so-surprising birth day presents was letting it be so great for them.

Parenthood is this universal (and somehow still unique) experience that has deepened my relationship with my own parents Being able to commiserate with them is not something I anticipated happening but has been a pleasant surprise and something I now cherish. And maybe that's one of the greatest blessings of parenthood – being able to get to know your parents again but this time as friends.

You may not agree with anything I've said, but I column as I see 'em.

Cheney fishing for a Senate seat iz Cheney, political pundit and daughter of a former vice president, might ■ have trouble unseating three-term GOP Sen. Mike Enzi in the Wyoming primary next year. On vacation in Casper last where owner Susan Bosco proudly displays signed photos of local political luminaries — including Enzi, Sen. John Barrasso, Gov. Matt Mead and Dick Cheney himself, Republicans but there was no head shot of Liz Cheney. ^oEvery town has a restaurant like egist Liz Brimmer noted, and "it's not just about a face on the wall." Enzi has won re-election with more than 70 percent of the vote twice because he truly represents Wyoming. As for Cheney's aspirations to represent Wyoming, said Brimmer, "this is all so recent."

Cheney has had a rough ride since moving from Virginia to the Equality State last year. In August, the Casper Star-Tribune reported that Cheney improperly received a state resident fishing license. (She had lived in the state for 72 days, not the 365 consecutive days required by law.) Worse, her application wrongly claimed the she had lived in Wyoming for a decade.

"That's the kind of thing that really makes people mad," observed C.J. Box, author of a mystery series that features a Wyoming game warden/sleuth. "That's kind of sacrosanct in Wvoming."

"You can't just make that error."

When Angus M. Thuermer Jr. of the Jackson Hole Daily reported that Cheney had to file a $220 bond for filing a false statement, blogger Jim Romenesko reported, Cheney told a tea party gathering that the paper's staff suffered from liberal bias and "newspapers are dying, and that's not a bad thing." Strike 2. Cheney had to walk back that quote with a Facebook posting that praised Wyoming's "hardworking objective journalists." To Box, it was a rookie Wyomingite mistake. Her campaign rejects any notion that Cheney is new to the state.

She's a fourth-generation Wyomingite, spokeswoman Celeste Colgan maintained in a statement, who split her time between Washington and Wyoming since her father was elected to Congress in 1978. The campaign positions Cheney, 47, as the "true conservative" in the race, "with the experience, values and roots" to represent Wyoming well.

I would add that Enzi, 69, doesn't own his seat for life. Others have every right to challenge him, including in the Republican primary. But when the challenger hasn't been a full-time Wyoming resident since childhood and she owes her high profile and ability to raise campaign cash largely to her father, locals might want to remind the Cheneys: Wyoming is an oil-and-gas state, not nepotistic MSNBC.

"Money raising has always been a problem for me," Enzi told The New York Times in July as Cheney was about to throw her cowboy hat into the ring. At the time, Enzi's campaign had a quaint $488,000 in the bank.

Cheney can raise beaucoup bucks and turn the Wyoming primary into an ugly, big-money slugfest. In this red state, whoever wins the Republican primary wins the general election. The only way Cheney wins is by turning voters against Enzi.

"I would be surprised if it went all the way to the primary," said Box, secure in the belief that his neighbors don't want an ugly primary. "That might make people more angry."

C.J. Box's character Cody Hoyt. Hoyt is a former police investigator who just lost his job and has fallen off the wagon after a long period of sobriety. Again, Box places his books in the wide open places of the West, this time in Montana. Two sisters, Gracie and Danielle Sullivan, who set out to visit friends, drive a very lonely stretch of Montana highway and never make it to their friend's home. Come to find out, they are not the first girls to have gone missing on this stretch of road. Persuaded by Hoyt's son and former rookie partner, Cassie Dewell, to conduct a search for Gracie and Danielle, Cody begins an off-the-record investigation. we have 2003 and 2006 to 2009. Part textbook and part cookbook, the chef will take a dish, and then "dissect," if you will, and write about what and how to make the perfect dish. In the 2006 book, Chapter 7, you will learn how to make chicken and dumplings like your momma (or granny as the case may be), and chicken and dumplings with leeks and tarragon.

In the equipment corner, you will have Zip-lock bags; in the tasting lab, you will have supermarket chicken broths. So, as you can see, the chefs want you to learn how to make the chicken and dumplings to taste good! I peeked at the recipes and it warns you not to use low-fat or skim-milk. You have to use whole milk and reserved chicken fat for the best flavor. To find these cookbooks, look for "America's Test Kitchen" (641.5 AME T) America's Test Kitchen.

With the news of chemical weapons use in Syria featured prominently in the news, "War of Nerves: Chemical Warfare from World War I to Al-Qaeda" (358.340 TUC J) by Jonathan Tucker is certainly a book worth considering. His book was published in 2006, and will give quite a bit of background upon the subject. Tucker received a B.S. in biology from Yale University and Ph.D. in political science from MIT, specializing in defense and arms control strategy.

For the past 10 years, he has been a chemical and biological weapons specialist at the Center for Nonproliferation Studies at a high-level think tank. He is well qualified to write about such matters.

Germany was the first country to use chemical weapons on a widespread basis; chlorine gas that led to 90,000 deaths at Ypres in France. German chemists also developed the first nerve gas Tabun, and a few years later, developed two more toxic formulas: Sarin and Soman. Tucker's book is a history of chemical warfare and how it should and must be banned by all people.

Good defense often requires perfeet teamwork, as in this deal where South was in four spades. West led the queen of hearts. East playing the seven and South the three. It is true that in most leagues a for the AP Pro32 power rankings. It wasn't quite enough to overtake Denver and Seattle atop the weekly list.

After a 40-23 victory that dropped Pittsburgh to 0-3, the Bears climbed five spots to No. 3 in the rankings released Tuesday.

Cutler had just 159 yards passing compared to 406 for Ben Roethlisberger, but the Bears quarterback led a turnover-free offense while Chicago had five takeaways and two defensive touchdowns.

"Jay Cutler's offense now on a par with opportunistic Bears' defense," wrote voter John Czarnecki of Fox Sports.

Denver remained atop the poll with eight first-place votes after the Bron-fensive players. "Who needs Von Miller and Ryan Clady when Peyton Manning looks as masterful as he's ever been?" wrote Ira Kaufman of the Tampa Tribune.

San Francisco and Green Bay each dropped nine spots. The 49ers fell to 12th after a 27-7 loss to Indianapolis a week after getting blown out by NFC West rival Seattle, and the Packers (1-2) are at No. 14 following a 34-30 loss to Cincinnati.

Cowboys' Spencer needs surgery, will miss season

IRVING, Texas (AP) Dallas defensive end Anthony Spencer will have season-ending surgery on his left knee and may have played his last game for the Cowboys.

Spencer's agent, Jordan Woy, says doctors have a "good idea" what type of surgery but were still considering options. Cowboys owner Jerry Jones spoke earlier on his radio show, saying Spencer was likely to have microfracture surgery.

The 29-year-old Spencer is on a one-year contract with the franchise tag for the second straight season, so he will be a free agent when he's healthy again. He's

originally Spencer injured the knee in offseason workouts and aggravated it during a conditioning test the day before training camp. He had arthroscopic surgery July 25 and missed the preseason and the opener against the Giants. Last year's leading tackler for the Cowboys returned and played more than half the game in Week 2 against Kansas City before he was sidelined again.

"Here's a case of a guy, you almost have to tie him up to get him off the field," Jones said on his radio show. "He was so diligent in his rehab.

The individual that I have the most empathy for is Spencer because of the type of person he is."

Microfracture surgery is a procedure to repair cartilage that provides cushion for bones in knee joints. The recovery time is usually at least four months but can be career-threatening for pro athletes. Spencer, who had career highs last year with 106 tackles and 11 sacks, has described his injury as a bone bruise.

He had just two days of limited participation in practice before playing 34 snaps against the Chiefs. Going into the Rangers hand Astros 11th straight loss

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Adrian Beltre homered for the first time at home in more than a month, then got back to the Texas dugout to find his teammates seemingly nodding off.

"I can't blame them. It's been a long time," Beltre said.

His solo shot in the sixth put the Rangers ahead to stay in a 3-2 victory over Houston on Tuesday night that kept them close in the wild-card race.

"But hopefully that'll be the beginning of a couple this week," Beltre said. "Not because I hit a homer, but because it was a good spot to hit it."

With five games left in the regular season, Texas remained a game behind Cleveland for the AL's second wildcard spot. Tampa Bay is a game ahead of the Indians in a crowded pack.

The Astros lost their 11th straight game, their 107th overall to match the franchise record set last year.

Once Beltre started jostling a few of his teammates, they jumped up and started celebrating with him. "The guys fell out and went to sleep because they hadn't seen him do something like that ager Ron Washington said. "I was the only one who greeted him. That home run was huge right there. We certainly needed and it couldn't have got it as a bigger time." Beltre's 29th homer snapped a 2-all tie with one out in the sixth. That came after Yu Darvish gave up the lead in the top half of the inning. The AL leader with 193 hits, Beltre hadn't homered since Aug. 28 at Seattle. His last at home had been Aug. 20, also against the Astros.

Neal Cotts (6-3) struck out two in a scoreless inning after taking over for Darvish. Joe Nathan, the fourth reliever, worked a perfect ninth for his 41st save in 44 chances.

Matt Dominguez homered for the Astros, and rookie Brad Peacock (5-6) struck out seven in six innings while allowing three runs and six hits.

"I felt like he threw the ball outstanding," Astros manager Bo Porter said. "Even the homer Beltre hit was a fastball down. You've got to tip your cap to him." The Rangers are 16-2 this season against Houston, winning the last 10. It's the most wins Texas has he would play more than a dozen or so, but he based that more on conditioning than the status of his knee.

'It didn't seem like it was bothering him at the time," coach Jason Garrett said Monday. "You can't go back eight days ago and say, 'Hey let's have him make 16 plays instead of 30.' We thought we were doing the right thing by him and our football team."

Journeyman George Selvie, who signed several days into camp after it was determined Spencer needed the first surgery, has been a strong replacement and complement to standout end De-
