Early voting under way; going strong, officials say

By STEVE REAGAN

Staff Writer

Early voting is off to a steady start in advance of the March state and county primary elections. There weren't any records broken during the first day of early voting Tuesday, but County Election Administrator Saundra Bloom was encouraged by the turnout. Bloom said 156 people voted in person Tuesday, while 155 mail-in ballots were received, for a first-day total of 311.

"It was steady, but not really busy," she said. "The lines weren't backed up or anything, but we didn't have too much down time, either."

Voters can cast early ballots between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. during the weekdays. There will be two extended-hour early voting days — polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Feb. 25 and Feb. 27, Bloom said.

The primary election will decide party nominees for November's general election. Reflecting statewide trends, the Republican side of the ballot drew the most candidates, while decidedly fewer candidates are vying for Democratic party nomi-

Discord taints EDC meeting on Tuesday By ANDREIA MEDLIN

Squabbling over policy and procedure tainted Tuesday's monthly meeting of the Big Sring Economic Development board.

During the course of the meeting, board members requested that EDC Executive Director Terry Wegman write a policy and procedure for his position, a task considered to be "A huge waste of time," according to board member Jim DePauw. "This is not moving us forward. Government entities use other government entities as a guideline for how the EDC is run. This is not useful and the time taken on this issue has not brought businesses to the city."

Board member Francis Hobbs voiced concerns about spending being approved after the fact and suggested that limits be approved prior to Independent School District will consider filing a waiver with the Texas Education Agency to avoid having to make up a missed school day, canceled because of more snow hitting the Crossroads area. Coahoma schools closed on Feb. 6, which was the third bad weather day taken by the district.

That is what you are required to have in your school year calendar," said Amy Jacobs, CISD superintendent "Our snow days were Monday and then May 26. purchase request. Hobbs also voiced concern on the lack of policv and procedures on such items as emergency purchases and bank transactions. Issues with hotel stays and money spent on room service by the executive director were also discussed at length. Specifically, discussion centered on a $385 hotel bill for the biannual Big Spring Day in Austin with EDC Vice President Nati Saldivar suggesting a budget for such stays be put in place. A budget of $100 a night and $45 per meal was discussed. A vote to continue the issue of policy and procedures was finally tabled to be continued at the next meeting. The meeting was then open to the public with several people taking the podium - some supportive and others critical. Board President Dale Avant shed a positive light on the otherwise tense atmosphere, saying, "Don't get discouraged. Don't give up. People do care about what's going on. The EDC should be run like a business. You may have different viewpoints, but you are working together."

In other business, Don Newberry presented results of an independent audit of the Economic Development Corporation. The results showed the EDC holds $8 million in assets, $3.5 million in cash and $3.5 million in working receivable grants and a $850,000 in liability for Boyce Galvanizing. The corporation holds $7.5 million in equity. The profit and loss report showed expenses to be $1.5 million which included rent for the building that houses the EDC and reimbursement. These were covered with revenue, i.e., sales tax and investments.

"There more net taken in than expenses," said Newberry. "This includes depreciation."

Newberry went on to explain that the EDC made $700,000 more than anticipated. Grants were in the amount of $537,000 with promise to the accounts at $100,000, earning $180,000. "The contracts are different than previous years," Newberry explained, and said the net receivable was the same at the end of the year.

 $\hbox{``There are more grants'}\$ this year," the auditor said, and explained that the responsibility of the auditor is to assess management responsibility and to the financial statement and then express an opinion. "The numbers are correction all material respects."

Although an audit is routinely done each year, this year was different, according to Newberry. "We looked at more this year, specifically phone bills, due to concerns of some board members," he said.

No discrepancies were reported concerning the phone bill, but there was one transaction that was recorded incorrectly, according to Newberry. "There was a transaction that was recorded as a grant that was actually a loan," Newberry said. The discrepancy was recorded erroneously due to a miscommunication and has been corrected. "It got put on the books, $180,000, and was coded erroneously so the credit wasn't put on the general ledger. The process has been stopped so that it will get recorded in the ledger," Newberry

The January financials showed a sales tax variance of an 18.57 percent increase, making December 2013 the largest sales tax increase to date.

What does being a nice guy get you?

person? Chances are you may have a harder time remembering bumping into a really nice person as quickly as you would recall someone who was rude to you. Even though I'm sure we all know some, in our society there seems to be a shortage of sincerely nice people. One of the great fallacies of our

that nice guys finish last.

EDDY time is the theory

PRINCE

The great boxer, Muhammad Ali, said, "At home I am a nice guy, but I don't want the world to know. Humble people, I've found, don't get very far." Wilson Mizner's famous quote has been used by hundreds of folks; "Be nice to people on your way up because you'll meet them on your way down." My favorite quote about being nice came from the late Phyllis Diller who said, "Always be nice to your children because they are the ones who will choose your rest home."

Studies have long challenged the idea that nice guys finish first. Being kind and considerate in the workplace has been perceived as a weakness, and an invitation to disrespect, and indeed studies have found that such behavior does not seem to come with many rewards. A 2011 study by researchers at Notre Dame University found that although "agreeableness," defined as someone who is warm, sympathetic, kind, and cooperative, is the most valued characteristic when we talk about who we want to spend time with, that same "agreeableness" carries a penalty at work. Disagreeable men are considered "tough negotiators," and earn more than their agreeable counterparts. Among CEOs, narcissism isn't just tolerated, but often encouraged.

But is it possible to succeed in today's dog-eat-dog world and still be a nice guy? Apple's CEO Steve Jobs, who recently passed away, was notoriously not nice and he fully believed it necessary to be mean and hard-nosed to be king of the mountain. He was celebrated as a great success in his field and his company was enormously profitable but, in my opinion, anyone's legacy is tainted if it includes mistreating others and having a mean spirit to accomplish their goals. This week, a major change took place in the insanely profitable world of late night talk show television when a 39 year old comic by the name of Jimmy Fallon became the latest host of The Tonight Show after Jay Leno ended his 22-year stint as host of the iconic king of late night celebrity showcases. What's interesting to me about this is that he has quite a reputation, but it may not be what you would expect from a young guy who has risen to such heights in the highly competitive entertainment industry. Fallon is, by nearly all accounts, a genuinely nice guy. As Vanity Fair described, "He possesses no ironic cynicism, no attitude, no agenda other than to make people laugh." He writes thankyou notes to restaurants that treat him well. He's always respectful of his guests. In fact, it's this nice guy quality that's been credited with helping Fallon attract ratings-boosting, high profile guests and convincing them to take part in his show's silly shenanigans. He often features Bruce Springsteen singing parodies of his own songs. From all accounts, he honestly likes people and actually treats them nice. Since I don't know him personally, of course, I can't validate his niceness, but it's going to be interesting to watch his journey and see if being a nice guy will help him establish his legacy as one of the all-time greats. So is Fallon an anomaly? Or does he represent a shift in the balance of power between the tyrants and the team players? It's possible that Fallon is a natural-born nice guy. A 2012 study published in Psychological Science found that niceness can be genetic and that people who have certain types of oxytocin and vasopressin receptor genes, as well as generally positive outlooks on the world, are more likely to be generous.

But the atmosphere at work is changing, too, and Fallon is but one example of that shift. Millennials, those born since 1980, in particular embrace the notion that niceness should be rewarded, while dishonesty and greed should be condemned. That's nothing new to genuine Christian people who have long believed, and practiced, the Matthew 7 biblical pattern of what many people call the Golden Rule, "doing unto others as you would have them do to you." According to a Knights of Columbus poll, 77 percent of millennials believe that business decisions based on greed are morally wrong, while more than 80 percent believe the ethics and values that shape our personal lives should apply in business as well. In "The Power of Nice: How to Conquer the Business World With Kindness," author Linda Kaplan Thaler, an awardwinning ad exec, argues that good deeds are returned, not punished, using her own professional acts of kindness as examples. Helping opponents, she writes, can even be an effective strategy — a good way to boost your career.

Nice people know how important it is to be, well, nice. Universities and corporations can conduct all the studies they want to, but all of us who live in the real world know how much we like nice people and how much we dislike their counterparts, the mean, grumpy, hateful and rude. Margaret Cavendish, Duchess of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, was an English aristocrat a prolific writer, and a scientist in the 17th century who said, "A rude nature is worse than a brute nature by so much more as man is better than a beast: and those that are of civil natures and genteel dispositions are as much nearer to celestial creatures as those that are rude and cruel are to devils." Not sure how that flies to the meanies out there, but we nice people think she said it well. You may not agree with anything I've said, but I column as I see 'em.

Daily Prayer

May you walk with me and talk with me all my days, dear Lord.

Amen

And for this, Congress will act have found the issue that can bring America together. Republicans and Democrats, urban hipsters and country folk, corporate scions and infrequent fliers — they all seem to agree: The federal government must not allow mobile phone use on planes.

If the Federal Communications Commission allows airlines with properly equipped planes to open the cellphone gates on commercial flights, even Washington agrees there will be revolts in the friendly skies. On Tuesday, by a bipartisan voice vote, the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee passed a bill, the Prohibiting In-Flight Voice Communications on Mobile Wireless Devices Act, to the House floor.

Chairman Bill Shuster, a Republican from Pennsylvania and the bill's author, argues that at 30,000 feet, fellow passengers do not have the option of walking away from obnoxious loudmouths. Ergo, the Department of Transportation must ban voice calls on planes. Shuster, however, does favor regulations to allow passengers to use their phones and tablets to text, send emails and work online. He's got a catchy slogan: "Tap, don't talk."

Me, I feel sorry for the poor chumps at the FCC. Since 1991, the FCC has banned cellphone use on planes, lest the signals interfere with wireless networks on the ground. With the advent of technology that can prevent interference, the FCC revisited the rule. In October, the FCC ruled that passengers may leave on their phones (in airplane mode) and personal electronic devices during takeoff and landing — because its mission is to regulate technology, not passenger behavior.

Kudos, the public should cheer. Finally, a regulatory agency that doesn't want to overreach its authority. Shuster himself noted that it is the responsibility of the Department of Transportation, not the FCC, to make rules in the name of airlinesafety.

Unconcerned with jurisdictional matters, however, the public has flooded the FCC with

According to The Associated Press, 48 percent of Americans (78 percent of frequent fliers) oppose allowing passengers to talk on their phones.

I get it. As airlines try to make flights cheaper — a good thing - seats are closer together and service lacks even the oh-somodest frills of yore. When flying is a chore, passengers get grumpy. It's no fun even just riding public transportation next to a bigmouth, and city bus rides don't last six hours like a crosscountry flight. The flying public fears "air rage" incidents.

That said, Americans are overreacting. The FCC conducted a study of countries that allowed cellphone use on planes in 2012; none of the 11 authorities that responded reported "any cases of air rage or flight attendant interference." Most countries reported low usage and short calls, and if there were complaints, they were about the cost or interruption of service. Remember when U.S. airlines installed those pricey middleseat phones? There were no mutinies in the sky.

If the FCC allows voice calls, my guess is that U.S. airlines will prohibit or strictly limit usage. Delta and Southwest have announced their intent to just say no. Legal departments, litigious consumers and flight attendant unions should take care of the rest.

I know world travelers who pay big bucks to visit countries that offer hole-in-the-floor plumbing and bus rides with barnyard animals and who nonetheless are terrified at the prospect of flying on a U.S. airline on which other passengers can make cellphone calls.

Truly, we live in a golden age. Americans' idea of hardship is flying safely over the entire country in six hours, with access to movies, music and their choice of news. But oh, the horrors, someone else being able to make a phone call? For this, Congress will act.

News in brief

Ukraine Health Ministry: 25 killed, 241 hospitalized after night of clashes

KIEV, Ukraine (AP) — As thick black smoke rose from the barricades encircling the protest camp in central Kiev on Wednesday, the Ukrainian president blamed opposition leaders for the deadly violence that erupted between riot police and protesters in the capital in which at least 25 people died and 241 were injured.

Thousands of defiant protesters faced rows of riot police who have squeezed them deeper into the Kiev's Independence Square, known as the Maidan, which has been a bastion for protesters, after overnight clashes that set buildings on fire and brought sharp rebuke from both the West and Russia.

The violence on Tuesday was the worst in nearly three months of antigovernment protests that have paralyzed Ukraine's capital in a struggle over the identity of a nation divided in loyalties between Russia and the West, and the worst in the country's post-Soviet history.

The protests began in late November after President Viktor Yanukovych turned away from a long-anticipated deal with the European Union in exchange for a $15 billion bailout from Russia. The political maneuvering continued ever since, with both Moscow and the West eager to gain influence over this former Soviet republic.

The latest bout of street violence began Tuesday when protesters attacked police lines and set fires outside parliament, accusing Yanukovych of ignoring their demands to enact constitutional reforms that would limit president's power — a key opposition demand. Parliament, dominated by his supporters, was stalling on taking up a constitutional reform to limit presidential powers.

The accelerating U.S. national security threat is leading the administration to take a fresh look at previously shelved ideas, including more robust assistance to Western-backed rebels.

Los Angeles bishop kept altar boy list from police probing clergy abuse

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Los Angeles police were investigating allegations of child abuse by a Roman Catholic priest in 1988, they asked for a list of altar boys at the last parish where the priest worked.

Archbishop Roger Mahony told a subordinate not to give the list, saying he didn't want the boys to be scarred by the investigation and that he felt the altar boys were too old to be potential victims, according to a deposition made public Wednesday.

The detectives investigating allegations against Nicolas Aguilar Rivera, a visiting Mexican priest, ultimately got the names of the boys from parish

They determined the priest molested at least 26 boys during his 10 months in Los Angeles, according to the priest's confidential archdiocese file and police records made public by attorneys for the victims. Twenty-five of the alleged victims were altar boys and the 26th was training with the priest to be one, said Anthony DeMarco, a plaintiff attorney.

It's not clear what impact Mahony's action had on the investigation, though at the time police complained that the archdiocese wasn't fully co-

Opposition firebrand in biggest test yet as he leads anti-government fight from Venezuela jail

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Moments before his dramatic arrest, opposition leader Leopoldo Lopez told a sea of white-shirted supporters that he doesn't fear years behind bars if that's what it takes to open eyes to the damage done to Venezuela by 15 years of socialist rule.

"If my jailing serves to awaken a people, serves to awaken Venezuela ... then it will be well worth the infamous imprisonment imposed upon me directly, with cowardice" by President Nicolas Maduro, a defiant Lopez shouted through a megaphone Tuesday from atop a statue of 19th century Cuban independence hero Jose Marti in a Caracas plaza.

He then pushed his way through the crowd, waving a flower over his head, to a police line a few feet away and turned himself in to face charges blaming him for violence between opposition activists and pro-government forces last week.

He was driven away in an armored vehicle, and a judge later ordered him held in jail before a court appearance

Friends and allies say the steely resolve exhibited at the rally is often seen in the man who competes in triathlons, is addicted to extreme sports and once escaped from the clutches of gun-firing bandits while stumping for votes in a pro-government slum. The trait has been evident in recent months as he emerged as head of an increasingly powerful opposition faction that is pushing for a stronger, but non-violent confrontation with the government.

Tough, volatile winter creates menace: Ice falling from skyscrapers, causing injuries

NEW YORK (AP) — City dwellers battling one of the most brutal winters on record have been dealing with something far more dangerous than snow falling from the sky: ice tumbling from skyscrapers.

Streets around New York's new 1 World Trade Center, the nation's tallest building, were recently closed when sheets of ice were seen shearing from the face of the 1,776-foot structure — turning them into potentially deadly, 100-mph projectiles.

And sidewalks around high-rises in cities big and small have been cordoned off with yellow caution tape because of falling icicles and rock-hard chunks of frozen snow, a situation that experts warn could get worse over the next few days as a thaw sets in over much of the country.

Big Spring rolls to big bi-district win over Eagles

By TOMMY WELLS

Sports Editor

ODESSA - Big Spring High School head coach Ian Ritchey admitted he wasn't sure what to expect from his team prior to their first-round playoff game against the Pecos Eagles on Tuesday. Would the team that upset Monahans show up, or would it be the team that was furious about losing its last two games of the regular season. It was a little of both.

Backed by dominating performance from its three interior plays – Ty Sealy, Tyler Bryan and Tate Kennedy, the Big Spring Steers took out their frustrations on Pecos in the second half of their bi-district playoff matchup and cruised to an easy 63-44 victory in front of a large crowd in the Permian High School gym. "Our effort was great the entire night," said Ritchey after the game. "Our intensity was really high in the second half. These guys knew what was at stake in this game. They worked hard this week to get ready for this game."

The hard work paid big dividends for the Steers in the second half. Big Spring outscored Pecos by a 38-21 margin in the final two quarters of play and blew open what had been a tightly contested contest.

After having taken a slim 25-22 lead at the half, Sealy and Bryan came up big for the Steers' in the early minutes of the second half.

Lady Steers pound out 7-3 win over Levelland

Valerie Goodblanket delivered a pair of clutch hits and the Big Spring High School Lady Steers turned in a solid outing on Tuesday evening en route to claiming a 7-3 win over the Levelland Loboettes at the BSISD Softball Complex.

With the win, the Lady Steers evened their season record at 1-1.

Freshman Mariah Sarmiento paced Big Spring's outing. She pitched well in the circle and picked up her first varsity victory.

"I was very pleased with the effort and as the season continues, I think the girls will focus in and become a much better team," said head coach John Sparks.

Healing Water Trine

The moon in

Scorpio will form a harmonious angle to the Pisces sun, a water-sign trine to bring emotional healing. This aspect isn't a magical Band-Aid; rather, it represents a process of mending that will happen in stages. Truth is the balm that will bring about the best results: apply generously.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Your destiny has nothing to do with what another person wants you to be. The momentum starts when you decide for yourself who you want to be and then take the first step.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Someone thinks of you as a role model today, but you're probably too busy to get caught up in the idea. You see what needs to happen next, accept responsibility and get things done.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Making the conscious effort to be positive will be necessary. Unfortunate happenings stand out more prominently in the Holiday human mind than Mathis good things, and this fact keeps us from making fatal mistakes.

> CANCER (June 22-July 22). Think about your options. Write them down and find someone who will discuss them with you. This is the way you make sure you're seeing the full range of possibilities.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Keeping score is silly at this point in the game and will only detract from your main success strategy: to play as well as you can. When it really matters, other people will keep score for you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You'll be paid well for what you master. It takes hard work to master a task so that in the future you can deliver without working hard at all. Effortlessness requires LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You'll spend your time effectively once you decide not to worry about who is right or wrong. Instead, you just fix the things that are standing in the way of smooth work and relationships.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Your brand of humor is two parts common sense, one part boldness. You'll say what others are thinking but are afraid to mention. You have a knack for being kind and funny at the same time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). When it's your turn to step out in front, you'll feel it. But for now, you'd rather be a follower than a leader who doesn't know the way. For that reason, you'll learn all you can by shadowing another.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're in the mood to raise a few eyebrows. You'd rather try something totally new that no one has done before and fail than succeed at something conventional, boring and obvious.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). What if wishes come true because you wish them a certain number of times? If that's so, it would be a shame to stop wishing right before the correct number. In any case, a persistent wish of yours will soon be granted.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Machines will help you accomplish hard work and tackle all that's involved with your ambitious goals. Just know that the goals themselves are extraordinary and beyond what a machine could ever duplicate.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY

(Feb. 19). You will keep the peace and bring relaxation to formerly stressful situations. Many will tell you that the world is a better place because you're in it. March brings a breakthrough in your work. You'll be accepted into an elite circle in April. A friendly connection will turn into a new income source in is the fortuitous omen known as a trine. It's a sign that harmony and grace have dropped by for a visit. The luminaries in question will be in the same element, and a natural simpatico will flow between them. The nature of the trine is influenced by the element in which it resides.

Water trines occur between luminaries in Cancer, Scorpio or Pisces. These trines are known for healing properties. The healing may be physical, emotional or spiritual in nature. When a water sign is present, it's an ideal time to bring what ails you to light, examine it and ask for help.

Air trines happen between luminaries in Gemini, Libra or Aquarius. The luck involved in these aspects often comes in the form of a bright idea or a new point of view. Problems dissolve in the new light.

Earth trines involve planets in Taurus, Virgo or Capricorn. They represent luck in material form. New resources become available.

Fire trines occur between luminaries in Aries, Leo or Sagittarius. They represent luck through action, guts and glory.

The bidding: West South North East 3 ♥ 4 🏚 4♥ Pass Pass 5♥ Dble Pass Pass Opening lead -ace of diamonds.

Let's say that in a given case you're the opening leader against a suit contract and you decide to lead from a holding of A-K-x-x of a side suit. Let's also say that your partnership agreement is that you lead the king from such holdings Now let's suppose that in the same situation you hold the A-K alone. In that case, according to standard convention, you would lead the ace folbleton. You hope partner can then gain the lead and play a third round This brings us to the accompanying deal where West led the A-K of diamonds, on which East played the 2-3 and declarer the 5-6. West then shifted to a low spade, expecting his partner would win with the ace and return a diamond for him to ruff. But South won with the ace, drew trumps and finished down only one (200 points) instead of down two (500 points), which would have been his lot had West led a club instead of a spade at trick three East complained bitterly, contending that West should have led a club at trick three. He argued that if he had held the ace of spades, he would have played his jack of diamonds on West's king at trick two as a suit-preference signal, indicating that he had an entry in spades. This would be in keeping with the standard agreement that the play of an unnecessarily high card in this type of situation is a signal for the higherranking side suit to be led. By extension, East argued further.

his play of the three of diamonds a low card - asked for a club lead at trick three.

East was right.
