BSHS thespians schedule encore presentation of one-act play

BY LYNDEL MOODY

Staff Writer
 The Big Spring High School theater department will present its last production of the school year when "Chemical Imbalance: A Jekyll and Hyde Play," takes center stage this weekend at the high school auditorium.

The setting of the 40-minute play by Lauren Wilson is in a Victorian England of the imagination. It's a comedic spoof on the very serious novella, "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" by 19th-Century Scottish writer Robert Louis Stevenson.

"I have always enjoyed farce, and I felt like we had the students that could pull off the zany characters in this play," said Tabatha Wright, high school theater teacher and director of the play.

The production features three first-year acting students — Dakota Jones, Cameron Mikels and Joey Valle — who earned acting honors at the recent UIL One Act Play competition held in Snyder.

Performances are set for 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the high school auditorium, 707 E. 11th Place. Admission is free to the public.

A blank look, then bloodshed

Police investigate school stabbing that leaves 22 injured

By JESSE WASHINGTON

Associated Press

MURRYSVILLE, Pa. — It was just before the start of class and the hallways were packed with students at their lockers or chatting with friends.

Nate Moore was walking to homeroom, book in hand, when a classmate he knew to be quiet and unassuming tackled a freshman boy a few feet in front of him. Moore thought it was the start of a fistfight and went to break it up.

But 16-year-old Alex Hribal wasn't throwing punches — he was stabbing his victim in the belly, Moore said. The suspect got up and slashed Moore's face, then took off down the hall, where authorities said he stabbed and slashed other students in an attack that injured 21 students and a security guard — and might have been even worse but for the "heroes" who Pennsylvania's governor said helped prevent further injury or loss of life.

An assistant principal tackled and subdued Hribal, who was charged Wednesday night with four counts of attempted homicide and 21 counts of aggravated assault and jailed without bail. Authorities said he would be prosecuted as an adult.

The suspect's motive remained a mystery.

Raymond F. Stukel

Raymond F. Stukel, 85, of Big Spring, died Tuesday, April 8, 2014, in a local hospital. Memorial services will be 2 p.m. Friday, April 11, 2014, at St. Paul Lutheran Church with Pastor Don Rosentreter officiating.

Ray was born March 21, 1929, in Kenosha, Wis. and married Rose Fiebrantz Oct. 20, 1956, in Milwaukee, Wis.

He served in the U.S. Army from 1951 to 1953, then served in the U.S. Air Force from 1959 to 1977, retiring from Webb Air Force Base as a master sergeant. He then worked for Adobe Oil Company for 15 years before retiring to a life of church and community service.

Ray was a long-time member of St. Paul Lutheran Church, where he served as an elder. He also volunteered to drive residents of Big Spring to Midland/Odessa to receive scheduled cancer treatments. Ray and Rose also volunteered with the citizens police academy. Among his most recent commitments to community service, Ray was a member of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP), he volunteered with the chaplains office at the Big Spring Veterans Administration Medical Center and at Isaiah 58 Food Pantry.

Kristy Brooks Edwards (Bigelow)

Kristy Brooks Edwards (Bigelow), 62, passed away April 4, 2014, at a skilled nursing facility in Lubbock, Texas.

She is survived by her husband, Heziki "Bull" Edwards of Hobbs, N.M.; son, Scott Brooks and wife, Ray was a loving husband, a great dad and a caring friend. He was incredibly faithful to the church and his belief in Jesus Christ was steadfast. His expression of his faith was evident through his efforts to serve those around him. He thoroughly enjoyed his Walk to Emmaus and the friendships he established through that experience. He was perpetually working with his hands and was willing to try to fix anything that may have needed work, or to go behind the scenes to help others. It would not shock those who knew Ray that upon his arrival to the gates of Heaven, he likely questioned God as to whether He would like the gates to swing more freely, without squeaking.

He is survived by his wife, Rose Stukel of Big Spring; son, Randy Stukel and wife, Del, of Granger, Ind.; two grandchildren, Amanda and Devin Stukel, both of Granger, Ind.; son, Russ Stukel and wife Laura, of Denton, Texas; and sister, Ruth Heabler of Mt. Prospect, Illinois.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Frank and Matilda Stukel.

Memorials may be directed to St. Paul Lutheran Church, 810 Scurry St., Big Spring, Texas 79720.

Suspect in Snyder slaying arrested Sunday in Ohio

Herald Staff Report

The U.S. Marshals Service has placed into custody a woman wanted in Snyder, Texas, in connection with a homicide.

Nineteen-year-old Casandra Lopez was arrested Sunday in Toledo, Ohio, on a warrant for murder out of Scurry County, said Snyder Police Chief Terry Luecke. She is charged with participating in the death of 21-year-old Omar Diaz, who was found dead at his residence March 22 in Snyder.

On Wednesday, Texas Rangers and a Snyder police investigator traveled to Toledo where they made contact with Lopez, said Luecke.

"(She) was interviewed and is cooperating with investigators," Luecke said in a prepared statement. "Investigators will transport Lopez back to Snyder (today) where she will be booked into the Scurry County Jail for the murder of Omar Diaz."

Police said Diaz' 2004 Pontiac Grand Am was found in the Lubbock area on the weekend of March 29-30.

Lopez and Diaz were last seen together March 14 in Lorenzo, Texas.

thing," Moore recalled hours later. "He didn't have any anger on his face. It was just a blank expression."

At a brief hearing Wednesday night, District Attorney John Peck said that after he was taken into custody, Hribal made comments suggesting he wanted to die. Defense attorney Patrick Thomassey described him as a good student who got along with others, and asked for a psychiatric examination.

Thomassey told ABC's Good Morning America on Thursday that any defense he offers would likely be based on Hribal's mental health. He said he hoped to move the charges against the teenager to juvenile court, where he could be rehabilitated. If convicted as an adult, Hribal faces likely decades in prison.

Thomassey told several media outlets that Hribal is remorseful, though he acknowledged his client didn't appear to appreciate the gravity of his actions.

"At this point, he's confused, scared and depressed. Over the next few days we'll try to figure out what the heck happened here," Thomassey told ABC. "I think he understands what he did. ... I don't think he realizes how severely injured some of these people are."

At least five students were critically wounded in the attack, including a boy who was on a ventilator after a knife pierced his liver, missing his heart and aorta by only millimeters, doctors said. He had additional surgery overnight, they said.

The rampage comes after decades in which U.S. schools have focused their emergency preparedness on mass shootings, not stabbings.

While knife attacks at schools are not unusual, they're most often limited to a single victim, said Mo Canady, executive director of the National Association of School Resource Officers.

Nevertheless, there have been at least two major stabbing attacks at U.S. schools over the past year, the first at a community college in Texas last April that wounded at least 14 people, and another, also in Texas, that killed a 17-year-old student and injured three others at a high school last September.

The attack in Pittsburgh unfolded shortly after 7 a.m. Wednesday, a few minutes before the start of classes at 1,200-student Franklin Regional High School, in an upper-middle-class area 15 miles east of Pittsburgh. By Thursday morning, the school was no longer being treated as a crime scene, according to police and school officials, who said they expected it to reopen Monday.

Mia Meixner, 16, said the freshman boy who was tackled tried to fight back, then, when his assailant got off him, stood up and lifted his shirt to reveal a midsection covered in blood.

"He had his shirt pulled up and he was screaming, 'Help! Help!'" said another witness, Michael Float, 18. "He had a stab wound right at the top right of his stomach, blood pouring down."

As students rushed to the boy's aid, the attacker slashed Moore before taking off around a bend.

"It was really fast. It felt like he hit me with a wet rag because I felt the blood splash on my face. It sputtered up on my forehead," said Moore, whose gashed right cheek required 11 stitches.

The boy ran down about 200 feet of hallway, slashing and stabbing other students with kitchen knives about 8 to 10 inches long, police said.

The assault touched off a "stampede of kids" yelling, "Run! Get out of here! Someone has a knife!" according to Meixner.

Assistant Principal Sam King heard the commotion and found a chaotic scene in the blood-soaked hall.

"I've been stabbed," he heard a student say, according to a police affidavit.

King then saw Hribal stab a security guard, who leaned against the wall, bleeding from his stomach, the affidavit said. King tackled Hribal and kept him on the floor until a school police officer handcuffed him.

The rampage lasted about five minutes.

"There are a number of heroes in this day. Many of them are students," Gov. Tom Corbett said in a visit to the town. "Students who stayed with their friends and didn't leave their friends."

He also commended cafeteria workers, teachers and teacher's aides who put themselves at risk to help others.

Looking for a motive, Murrysville Police Chief Thomas Seefeld said investigators were checking reports of a threatening phone call between Hribal and another student the night before. He didn't say whether the suspect received or made the call.

The FBI went to the boy's house, and local media reports said agents removed at least one computer along with other items.

Meixner and Moore called the attacker a shy and quiet boy who largely kept to himself, but they said he was not an outcast and they saw no indication before the attack that he might be violent.

"He was never mean to anyone, and I never saw people be mean to him," Meixner said. "I never saw him with a particular group of friends."

During the attack, the boy had a "blank look," she said. "He was just kind of looking like he always does, not smiling, not scowling or frowning."

The rise of American totalitarianism

Last Thursday, Mozilla, the company that's home to the web browser Firefox, forced the resignation of CEO Brendan Eich. What, precisely, had Eich done wrong? Back in 2008, Eich had donated $1,000 to the Proposition 8 effort backing traditional marriage in California. Dating website OKCupid posted a ban on Firefox traffic, issuing a message to Firefox users instead: "Those who seek to deny love and instead enforce misery, shame, and frustration are our enemies, and we wish them nothing but failure." That ban reportedly prompted the action at Mozilla.

Of course, it was the people pushing for Eich's ouster who were enforcing "misery, shame, and frustration." Eich had never brought his politics into the workplace. Mozilla had no history of treating homosexuals differently, and no single instance of Eich doing so could be documented. Nonetheless, he had violated the dictates of the Thought Police. And thus he was ousted.

It's a disturbing story, to be sure. But it's also just the tip of the iceberg: Unfortunately, the same folks administering the private Thought Police would love to extend their control into the realm of government. These are not libertarians arguing for the right to hire and fire as you see fit in the private market. These are power brokers seeking to use whatever means necessary to quash opposition.

That's why gay couples have sued photographers, bakeries and florist shops, attempting to shut them down if they refuse to cater to same-sex weddings. That's why the Obama administration has attempted to fine businesses that do not wish to pay for health coverage they deem sinful. The underlying idea: If the left dislikes what you do, the left can compel you not to do it. As Kevin Williamson of National Review writes, American society is quickly morphing into a system governed by T.H.

White's totalitarian principle: "Everything not forbidden is compulsory."

Freedom is secondary to the yays and nays of the governing few in this vision. Freedom is merely that which the government allows — and the government should only allow you to do the bidding of the left. If you, recognizing that sometimes people will take action with which you disagree, believe that government should stay out of people's business, you must therefore be an advocate for discrimination and brutality. To allow Eich to work is to discriminate against gays. To allow religious businesses to reject contraceptive mandates is to push women into back alley abortions. Forget the notion of disagreeing with your opinion, but defending your right to say it — in the view of the leftist totalitarians, such a notion is inherently unworkable.

When fascism comes, it will come not with jackboots but with promises of a better world. The jackboots come later, when we've all been shamed into silence — when we've been taught that to allow that with which we disagree is to agree with it, and when we've accepted that the best method of preventing such disagreement is government power. We're on the verge. All it will take is the silence of good people — people on all sides of the political aisle — who fall prey to the ultimate temptation in a republic: the temptation to force their values on others utilizing the machinery of government. We're already more than halfway there.

Lincoln was actually sexy

Doris Kearns Goodwin is a petite person who writes about towering figures — Lyndon Johnson, Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt, Abraham Lincoln, Teddy Roosevelt, the Kennedys.

She sat in a hushed meeting room at the University of Chicago's hushed Alumni House, where David Axelrod asked her unshushed questions.

"People ask, 'Why can't Obama be more like Lyndon Johnson?'" Axelrod, director of the Institute of Politics at the university, said. "Why can't he command the bully pulpit the way Teddy Roosevelt did?"

"The bully pulpit, the platform a politician has to mobilize citizens, has changed," Goodwin replied. "Lincoln would write a letter to a newspaper, and it would be reprinted word for word and then pamphletized. Things changed at the turn of the 20th century."

Presidents could be heard on phonograph records — quite good copies exist of Teddy Roosevelt speaking in a clear and precise voice — and then came radio.

Listening to Franklin Roosevelt's fireside chats — he made only 30 in 12 years — became a national pastime. "Saul Bellow used to tell the story of walking down the streets of Chicago and hearing Roosevelt speak from radio after radio, in house after house, all tuned to the same station," Goodwin said.

But today? Today you see moments, glimpses, summaries, roundups and, of course, the talking heads. "Now you just see parts of speeches," Goodwin said and added ruefully, "And then you see commentators like David and me."

Goodwin described a Washington of a bygone era in which Democrat LBJ spent weekends with Republican Sen. Everett Dirksen. "They didn't run home every weekend to raise money," Goodwin said. "It was a club; there was a comity to it."

Then Goodwin homed in on the real evil in our current political system. "Money is the poison in our system, and we know it," she said and then turned to the students in the audience. "If I were you, I would be working on a constitutional amendment to change the effect of money on politics. I would be like Susan B. Anthony on this."

A constitutional amendment — a purposely difficult undertaking to achieve — would almost certainly be necessary because our high court believes that money is a form of free speech and that the more money you have the more free speech you ought to be able to buy.

Whenever Goodwin speaks, the issue of whether Abraham Lincoln could get elected today comes up. Steven Spielberg's 2012 movie, "Lincoln," was based in part on Goodwin's book "Team of Rivals: The Political Genius of Abraham Lincoln," and it made Lincoln hot once again.

"If I didn't believe Abraham Lincoln could win today, I might as well give up," Goodwin said and then added: "OK, shave the beard, and get rid of the stovepipe hat. But I think he was actually sexy."

Goodwin then gave an example of the kind of humor that gave Lincoln such public appeal: "People say I am two-faced,"

Lincoln once said. "But if I had two faces, would I be using this one?"

Goodwin said that in the 1960s, some 90 percent of Americans thought the government would do the right thing most of the time. "We must return to the belief that our collective energy can restore faith in our daily lives," she said.

Axelrod said that "voters have to be willing to handle the truth. As Robert Kennedy said, 'the future isn't a gift; it's an achievement.'"

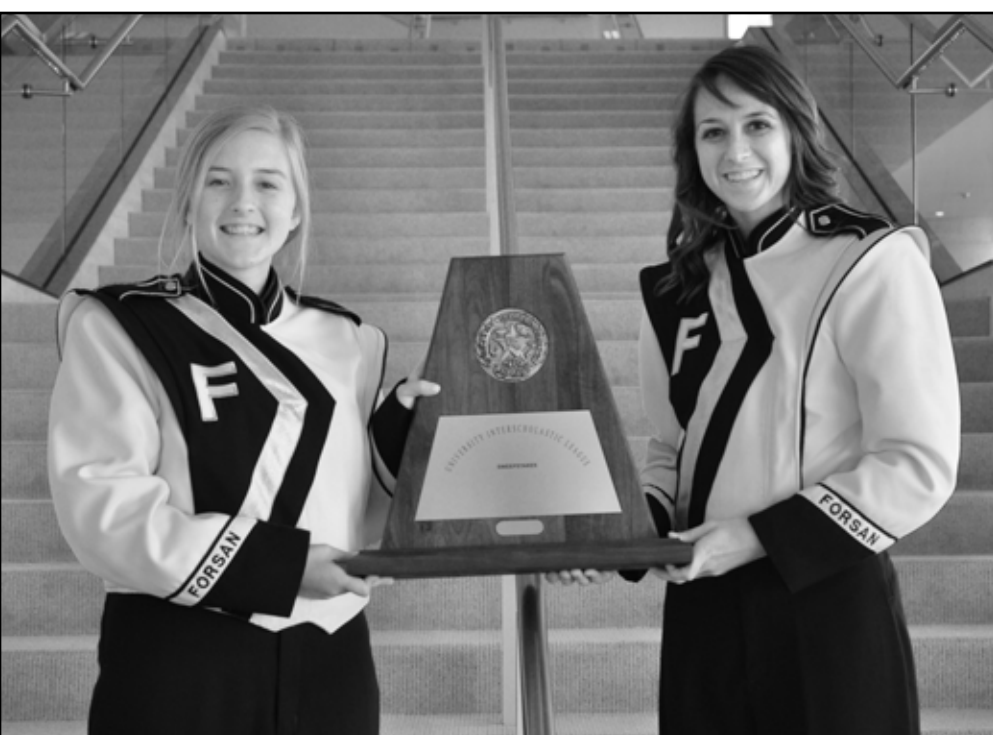

Goodwin is one of America's greatest living historians, a person who has managed to achieve commercial success — six New York Times best-sellers — while still maintaining her academic credentials. She won the Pulitzer Prize in 1995 for "No Ordinary Time: Franklin & Eleanor Roosevelt: The Home Front in World War II."

She was also the first female journalist to enter the Boston Red Sox's locker room.

But one thing has eluded her. Instead of her writing about famous public servants, why didn't she become a famous public servant?

"Take the risk of helping somebody with a campaign or working in a neighborhood," she told the students. "If I hadn't gotten married and had a bunch of kids, maybe I would have gotten involved in politics."

Dog escapes Texas backyard, somehow shows up in Ohio

HAMILTON, Ohio (AP) — A small dog that escaped its fenced-in yard in Texas was found outside a southwest Ohio animal shelter, and its owners have no idea how he traveled more than 1,000 miles in a few days.

The 3-year-old Chihuahua-Dachshund mix named Corbin dug a hole under a fence in his backyard in Killen, Texas, on March 25. He was found Saturday tied to a bench outside the animal shelter in Hamilton, about 30 miles north of Cincinnati.

"It sounds like one of those too-good-to-be-true stories," Corbin's owner, Mike Saiz, told The Cincinnati Enquirer. "This isn't the first time he dug a hole under the fence. One time he was waiting for us on our front porch and the other two times we had to pick him up from the local pound."

A surveillance camera at the Animal Friends Humane Society in Hamilton recorded a woman leaving Corbin at the shelter late Friday night. Staff found him the next day.

Corbin was in good shape, just soaking wet from rain and a little scared, said Kurt Merbs, supervisor of Butler County's dog warden's division. Authorities are hoping to identify the woman and see if they can get answers about how Corbin ended up in Ohio and at the shelter, Merbs said Wednesday.

The staff located Saiz after finding a microchip on him that contained his owners' information.

"They called my wife and she told me that they found our dog, but she didn't sound happy about it," Saiz said. "I asked if he was OK and she told me he was fine. I then asked where the shelter was and she said, 'Hamilton — not Hamilton, Texas, but Hamilton, Ohio.'"

Lady Steers in must-win mode after loss

By TOMMY WELLS

Sports Editor

Big Spring High School Steers head coach John R. Sparks isn't one to sugarcoat his team's post-season situation.

"They need to win. End of story."

The Lady Steers find themselves in a tough situation as they head into their final three regular season games.

In order to claim the District 4-3A No. 4 playoff seed, Big Spring must rebound from a 14-1 setback against Snyder on Tuesday. And they have to do it quickly.

Heading into Friday's showdown with Sweetwater, the BSHS girls are tied with Monahans for fourth in the district standings.

"We have three very important games remaining and the girls understand what needs to be done to make it in the playoffs," said Sparks.

Following its game against Sweetwater, Big Spring will close out its regular season schedule at home against Greenwood on April 15 and in Monahans on April 17.

"I am confident they

The Big Spring defense struggled on Tuesday in their setback to Snyder. The Lady Steers committed 10 errors in the contest.

"We started off the first inning playing solid," said Sparks. "The lead-off hitter in the bottom of the second sent one over the fence in left center field. After that we could not seem to make a play."

Sparks said the loss wasn't as bad as the final score appeared. Big Spring had several chances to fight its way back into the bout.

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My husband and I live in Minnesota. His 78-year-old stepbrother lives by himself in Florida. "Horace" has a part-time job and goes to church regularly, but otherwise sticks to himself. He has only a nodding acquaintance with the neighbors. We are his only family. We are the ones who initiate phone calls and send cards on holidays. He never calls us. We used to email, but he stopped using his computer. Horace is healthy, but I worry so much about what will happen to him when his health declines. He has no one nearby who can help. If he became incapacitated or died suddenly, we'd be completely in the dark as to how to proceed with his financial affairs. He did give us a copy of his living will, and we know where his burial plot is, but that's it. My husband and his brother both think there's no sense in worrying about things until they happen. But by then, it will be too late. I don't know how to approach Horace about making plans for the inevitable. I once asked him to consider moving to Minnesota, but he didn't respond, and besides, I doubt he'd actually come back to the cold after all this time. My husband won't be retiring for another eight years, so it's not as if we can take off and visit whenever. Where can we turn for help? -- Losing Sleep in Minnesota

KATHY MITCHELL

Dear Losing: You are kind to worry about Horace and smart to plan ahead, but there's only so much you can do without his cooperation. Ask Horace whether he'd mind if you spoke to his neighbors to get their phone numbers and email addresses so you can contact them if he becomes unreachable. Perhaps Horace would allow you to make a copy of his house key in case of emergency. Visit his church and find out whether there is a program to check on the members who live alone. Also suggest to Horace that he leave financial information with his banker or lawyer. And should Horace become ill or require care, you could contact Eldercare Locator (1-800-677-1116; eldercare.gov) or ask about hiring a geriatric care manager (caremanager.org) to handle the details.

Dear Annie: Can I make a suggestion for people who are downsizing or for any other reason don't want to keep old items around? Please tell them to consider photographing these things. That way, they still have a visual record but can discard the actual item. They also can scan these photographs and keep digital records.

This works particularly well if the items are pictures. They can simply scan them into their computer and give copies to as many people as might be interested. The photos can be printed out if you want or put into digital photo frames. I love watching pictures of my past pop up and cycle through on these frames. And getting rid of clutter was an added benefit. -- Getting Organized for Retirement

Dear Organized: Folks often think they need to keep originals of everything, but unless your items are historically valuable and worth professional preservation, those family photographs will fade and old letters will disintegrate. Keeping digitized records is a good idea, although people should create a backup copy (whether on a flash drive, CD or cloud).

Dear Annie: I have a different take on "Tears in Vermont," the couple whose son was a recovering addict and had moved away with his girlfriend and wanted no contact with his parents. "Tears" said their son lived with them until he was 30. It sounds as if the parents are enablers and may have been part of the problem.

It's no coincidence that after moving away, he's turned his life around. If they truly love that son and have a choice between estranged and clean, or in contact but an addict, they should be happy with estrangement. -- Seen It Before

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Creative Leo Moon

Just as the first rays of the sun show up in the sky before the sun rises over the horizon, there will be some preliminary mental tinkering that precedes a big idea. That's why it's important to let your thoughts dance and play under this creative Leo moon, even if those thoughts don't seem particularly important or relevant.

HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19). People who don't know how to have fun by themselves don't know how to have fun with others. You'll delight in your time alone and later bring a playful sensibility to your social interactions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Are you ready to leap, lunge or duck? Being able to react with a range of motion, both literally and figuratively, will give you an advantage on this fast-paced day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You long for a time when you can say that everything you own is in good working order and is in its proper place. Such a high level of organization may or may not happen, and luckily your success does not depend on this.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). When your subject knows what you want and is resistant to giving it to you, this person has yet to understand the personal benefit of saying yes (if indeed there is one). Point the way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Spell out what you want to do. Communicate slowly and clearly, assuming nothing. Do not execute your plan until the others involved know and understand what your plan is.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Where others see a lost cause, you see the potential for a real winner. Though there are many steps involved in taking an endeavor from "zero" to "hero," if it's a labor of love, it will be a joy and not a long, arduous process.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You'll work efficiently to get it done, get it right and get it out. Though you may not care who gets the credit, taking your fair share of this will be important to your future work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). There are times when you've craved the cozy comfort of a familiar relationship, but today you'll set your sights on something unexpected, interesting and even a little dangerous.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You only have to talk with someone for a few minutes to understand where the person is coming from. That's why it drives you crazy when a loved one doesn't seem to have the same "people smarts."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're unsure whether the other party is thinking along the same lines as you or will be amenable to your suggestions. Take the risk and find out. Say what you plan to do and see what happens.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Building rapport will be tricky business, but if you do it well, you'll get a prize. Hint: It doesn't always serve you to express your preferences and dislikes to those who may not agree with them.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Purpose and tenacity are your cosmic gifts, but they come with a caveat: You must use them on your own behalf, or you will later wonder why on earth you didn't.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 10). Your underrated talents come to the fore this year. This month you make money as a result of reestablishing contact with terrific people. Work through the logistics, and in May you'll make a smooth transition into a much better place. Singles have dream dates in June. The marriage-minded tie the knot in September. Cancer and Libra people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 1, 4, 44, 38 and 47.

VENUS IN PISCES AND THE HEART'S INTUITION, PART FOUR: As Venus travels the intuitive realm of Pisces, she invites us to rely on our heart's intuition for decision-making. So how can you turn up the volume on the inner guidance system that is your heart?

Tip No. 3: Confront the ego and talk its language.

The ego's voice is louder than the heart's, and when the ego is stressed, it speaks up with even more force than usual so that you can barely hear what the heart wants. But there's a way to talk to your ego to get it to relax enough to allow you to hear the messages it's trying to block. First, the ego needs to be assured that you're not going to undermine it. Secondly, the ego is like a child that needs to play, so you can use this to your advantage. Assure your ego that it's safe to be playful, and ask your ego to imagine that the situation is a game. Tell it, "You don't have to change your mind. You can still want what you want. But just for the sake of pretending, can you imagine a scenario in which you want something different?"

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Aries actress and pop star Mandy Moore is lovely on screen, though she's quickly becoming Hollywood's voiceover queen, with several major credits including Rapunzel in "Tangled," Cassandra in "High School USA!" and the adorable kitty Sheriff Callie in "Sheriff Callie's Wild West." Moore was born under the Leo moon of show business and entertainment.

This Date In History

Today is Thursday, April 10, the 100th day of 2014. There are 265 days left in the year. Today's Highlight in History: On April 10, 1864, during the Civil War, Dr. Mary Edwards Walker, an assistant surgeon for the 52nd Ohio Volunteers, was captured by the Confederates and accused of being a Union spy; she was held until her release in August 1864 as part of a prisoner exchange. (Walker received the Medal of Honor in 1865, the only woman to date so recognized; although the citation was withdrawn in 1917, Walker continued to wear the medal until her death in 1919. President Jimmy Carter restored the citation in 1977.) On this date: In 1790, President George Washington signed the first United States Patent Act. In 1864, Maximilian, archduke of Austria, was proclaimed emperor of Mexico. In 1866, the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was incorporated. In 1912, the RMS Titanic set sail from Southampton, England, on its ill-fated maiden voyage. In 1925, the novel "The Great Gatsby," by F. Scott Fitzgerald, was first published. In 1932, German president Paul Von Hindenburg was re-elected in a runoff, with Adolf Hitler coming in second. In 1947, Brooklyn Dodgers president Branch Rickey purchased the contract of Jackie Robinson from the Montreal Royals.

Area teams scheduled to join new baseball districts in 2014

There will be plenty of new faces and places to be seen for area teams when the 2014-15 high school baseball seasons get under way. Area teams learned their non-football/basketball alignments recently when the University Interscholastic League revealed its spring sports alignments. The Forsan Buffaloes will be joining Borden County, Hermleigh, Ira, Loraine, Roby, Rotan and Westbrook in the new District 2A ranks. The Coahoma Bulldogs will be joining Reagan County, Colorado City and Sonora in the District 5-3A race. Big Spring was placed in the newly created District 2-4A, joining teams from Lamesa, Levelland, Lubbock Estacado, Snyder and Sweetwater. Snyder and Sweetwater are currently in the same district (4-3A) as BSHS.

Ashley Ferguson and Breanna Lloyd placed first and second, respectively, in JV girls' singles action at the District 4-2A Tennis Championships in Brownfield. With the wins, the two CHS standouts earned births in the Region I-2A tennis tournament. Ferguson claimed the 4-2A singles title with a solid outing in Brownfield. After winning her first match by an 8-4 clip, she edged out Lloyd in the finals, 8-5.

Reuben Campos was second in the JV boys' singles division. His silver medal effort highlighted a solid showing by Coahoma in the boys' singles event. Kip Williams and Christian Can Wey also competed in the division.
