A ground-breaking ceremony for the largest construction project in the history of the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) Abilene District to date — the US 87 Truck Relief Route — was held Friday at the Hangar 25 Air Museum.

Local, state and federal dignitaries celebrated the moment by speaking of the project's history, economical importance and the collaborative effort by West Texas communities to bring the > bypass to fruition. Yet, of all the eloquent words spoken at the podium Friday morning, one long-time advocate of the Portsto-Plains trade corridor said it "Today is one of those I-can't-really-believe-this-is-happening days," said Bill Crooker, a longtime former Howard County commissioner and an original member of the Ports to Plains Trade Corridor Coalition who left the board in 2011.

The four-lane, divided truck relief route is expected to help relieve truck traffic, especially those carrying hazardous contents from downtown Big Spring in anticipation of increased traffic from trade between the United States, Mexico

Completion of the 8.5-mile highway, which will run from RM 33 to I-20, looping around Big Spring on the west side, is projected for early 2017. The project cost is $44.8 million. Also included in the project is construction of an interchange that will connect the new route to I-20. That project is estimated to cost $18.4 million.

Area childcare workers may be eligible for scholarship money to attend Howard College next year thanks to funds provided by the Permian Basin Workforce Center.

Howard College President Dr. Chervl Sparks will present information about the program to college trustees Monday when they meet at 12:30 p.m. in the Tumbleweed

the Student Union Building, 1001 Birdwell Lane. "The Permian

Basin Workforce Development Board receives child care velopment funds from the Texas Workforce Commission to provide subsidized childcare services to eligible families, and in the Room, located in last legislative session, they also wanted to mandate some of those funds to be used for improving the quality of child care in Texas," said Dr. Cheryl Sparks, Howard College president. "The Workforce board will be working with Howard College as well as other colleges in the region to give us scholarship money that can be awarded to individual caregivers that are already working part time or full time to be enrolled in a certificate program leading to a Level I or Level II certification or a child development associate degree or a certified child care profession."

Sparks said the board is allocating $75,000 in scholarship money to the district for the next academic year.

Once Monday's final administrative hurdle is cleared, the county can turn its attention to actual road repair. Officials anticipate using the money on road repair in the Barr said TxDOT will reimburse the county for 80 percent of its road repair costs during the project, which is expected to last three years. Howard County's share has been estimated at $750,000, he

Born to become an Indian ne of the first Anglos in Texas was a man known as Big Foot Wallace. Wallace was an early adventurer and explorer. He encountered the Comanche and was befriended by them. The Comanche did not fear the Anglo at this time and were curious about them. Wallace fit into the Comanche culture and lived with them at times, learning their ways. Wallace understood the Native American way of life, was comfortable with it and was welcome in their camps. There are stories such as this all over America. Early adventurers who met the American Indian, admired and respected their way of life. They fit into the native culture better than they fit into the culture they came from. All it took to fit into the native culture was a good heart, a strong will and an understanding of the balance of life between man and the land. They took Indian wives, became members of the tribe and lived as the Native Americans lived. They were not born an Indian but became one. There may be some of you who have been reading this column who have wondered, "Is this guy a real Indian, pretending to be an Indian or just writing about Indians?" Let me explain myself. I am much as the men I have written about above, only a couple of centuries later than they were. Most of you have probably heard the old expressing, "I wasn't born in Texas, but I got here as soon as I could." Well, I was born in Texas. I was not born an Indian but I became one as soon as I could.

I am a fifth generation Texan, my family settled in Texas in 1830. Because of Texan heritage, I became interested in Texas history which led to an interest in Native American history. The more I learned of the native culture, the more impressed I became. I came to admire and respect the Native

While a member of the Vietnam Memorial Committee, we had the Moving Wall (replica) here. A Comanche medicine man, Luis, came from Odessa to do a smudge ceremony. We had a member of the committee, David, who is also Comanche; he and Luis did the ceremony together.

Afterwards I was invited to smoke the pipe with them. David and I were good friends and Luis and I would soon become good friends. Shortly afterthis, David came to my house and told me that in having smoked together, we had become brothers. He brought me a necklace he had made and said it would show that I had been absorbed into his clan of Comanche. All of this was a great honor.

The powwow committee was just forming at this time and I was asked to join. I began helping to put on our local powwow, which in turn led to dancing and the powwow and any I could attend I began meeting many Native Americans and making new friends. I also became involved in exhibitions on native culture. I was invited to attend the sweat lodge ceremonies where I learned much more of the culture and the spiritual customs and ways.

I was then invited to Tabana Yuane which is an old Comanche custom and ceremony. Tabana Yuane means sunrise wind. After two years of being part of this ceremony, my wife and I were taken into the clan; we had earned the right. We became members of the Tabana Yuane clan of Mat'o Num pa Sake', the Sunrise wind clan f Two Bear Claws. I was given the name Waci Ki Tokecawnji Cancega, which translates to Dances to Another Drum. A name is given as to who you are and what you do. A name earned is not just made up. This name fits me and I am very proud of it.

So you see, I was not born an Indian. I was, however, born to become one. Many Native Americans have told me it is not what is in your veins that makes you an Indian, but what is in your heart. You do not have to have Native American blood in you to be an indian. You just have to have a red heart. Many of you may not have Native American blood in you, but you may have the heart of an Indian. Look inside yourself; look into your heart. I am glad I did. Maybe in your heart you are Indian. I know I am in mine. My heart tells me I was born to be an Indian.

Randy A. McKinney is a member of the Tabana Yuane clan of Mat'o Num'pa Sake and vice president of the Powwow Committee of Big Spring.

A yard full of turtles

Barbara Ellison of Cameron loves her back yard. It is full of flowers and birds. Occasionally a squirrel will drop in for a meal.

"I could stay out here from morning 'til night," says Barbara. "It's so pretty and we enjoy taking care of it."

She and her husband Carroll have about 30 turtles in their backyard. "They're a lot of fun to watch and feed," says Carroll. "We've had them for over 20 years." They got interested in turtles and terrapins when one showed up in their yard. "We started pick-to keep them from getting run over," says Barbara. "Carroll fixed the interior of the yard with tin so they couldn't get out."

ing them up on the highways says they show up around 6 a.m. for breakfast.

TUMBLEWEED SMITH

The turtles have a varied diet and are very punctual when it comes to meal times. Carroll

"We feed them scrambled eggs, cantaloupe and corn kernels. They'll eat anything. Barbara used to fix a squash casserole just for the turtles. Some come up in the evening."

In addition to fruits and vegetables, the turtles love the harvest from the bug zapper.

"We've found those turtles eating dead birds. Maybe a cat killed them or whatever. If something comes very close to them, they'll snap 'em — like lizards. They bite the lizards' tails off. We have about five species of lizards around here. The turtles eat little toad frogs, too."

Most of what they know about turtles they learned on their

"When I first started looking for information on the turtles,' says Barbara, "I went to the library but couldn't find all that much."

Carroll says the turtles hibernate like bears in the winter.

"They go plumb under the ground. You can't find them anywhere. They bury down about four or five inches." Not only has Carroll put tin around the edges of the yard to keep the turtles confined. He has turned his back yard into residential areas for the little creatures.

He has made houses and condos that keep the turtles in shade. He built a ramp for them so they wouldn't have to climb over a curb to get to their back porch dining room. It's a veritable turtle paradise. A gated community for turtles.

He says the turtles have unusual characteristics.

"Sometimes Barbara will be out in the yard and they'll be looking for her. They run pretty fast. They'll see her and run for about six or eight feet, then stop with their heads straight up so they can look around and get their bearings, then here they come again."

While we were visiting, Carroll looked down to see four turtles.

"There's a brown one there. We got that one in Rockdale. I remember him."

He takes pictures of the turtles, which are aboutfive inches across and seven inches long.

He says it just wouldn't be the same without the turtles.

"We love to get up and go to the back porch and see them out there. This morning, there were about 10 of them just waiting to eat. One morning we had 26. They get to eat before we do."

Dentists, and the judge, know for sure

Tntil now, it's been a month. teapot-sized tempest, bubbling on the edges of awareness, but when two corporate behemoths square off and a federal judge steps in, the issue heats quickly to full boil. Dentists across the fruited plane — and beyond are smiling. They may even decide to renew their professional oaths.

In the blue corner is dental floss (Johnson and eral District Judge Denny Chin — has ruled.

And the ruling is a mouthful. Contrary to claims on its labels, websites and TV ads, Listerine CANNOT claim to be "as effective as flossing." Thus sayeth the

For decades, dentists have recommended regular flossing. Most of us have listened to their admonitions with "yeah-yeah sure-sure" assurances that we'll turn over new flossing leaves. Then, we rush back to our workaday world. Flossing, performed with such grace and ease by dental professionals, quickly is out of sight and out of mind. Sadly, only 13 percent of Americans heed dentists' sermons. (Granted, most preachers would settle for this percentage.)

One hygienist figures serious flossers number in the single digits when fibs and lies are factored in. One patient, bragging that he flosses regularly, says he does so seasonally — every third

What about mouthwash? Well, more people ought to use more of it more often. Pfizer contends that half of the populace has periodic bouts with bad breath. Dentists, on the receiving end of exhales daily, feel the scale weighs heavily in favor of the non-users.

Oral hygiene deserves this new spotlight; it's been ignored too

We used to joke about it. "Halitosis is better than no breath at all," we laughed. Dentists, miffed when patients grouse about spending $100 for a 20-second tooth extraction, offer well-worn responses: "I can pull it slower."

A half-century ago, when vaunted all-female and all-male colleges shared the same river, a joke trickled down from New York State, where Vassar en rolled only females, and Colgate, only males. The punch line? "Surveys say Vassar women prefer Colgate men to tooth decay, four to one."...

I digress — again. Perhaps the judge took his cue from the Federal Communications Commission that recently levied hefty fines with its "you can't say that or show that" edicts.

He maintained that Listerine advertising poses a "public health risk" that could "undermine the message of dental professionals."

Pfizer heard him loud and clear. The company sprang for $2 million to hire 4,000 workers to crisscross the United States. Their jobs? To paste over the "as effective as flossing" claims on Listerine labels in all stores. Labor Department people are smiling. For a few weeks anyway, US employment figures will be up.

It wasn't announced about wording on the stickers. Sev-

"For heaven's sake, use one or the other," or

"First job I've had since temporary Santa," or

Don't expect the ultra-liberal who believes in killing nothing to endorse this suggestion: "Don't use. Help rehabilitate the germs that cause bad breath." You get the drift.

In theory, this holds true for lawmakers. They face daunting tasks, sifting through thousands of bills en route to passing a few

One new bill calls for setting aside one day each year to honor aviation maintenance technicians. Really, this poses no problem; just slap the new day on top of one already named for special designation.

Do we really believe flags flown over the capitol in D.C. flutter there all day long? Of course not; the rope taking them up and down rarely stops.

However, let's keep oral hygiene conversations going – over backyard fences, down the block and in coffee shops. This could help reduce bad breath, improve oral hygiene and encourage dental professionals.

They'd probably stage a parade if serious flossing gets up to 15-20

And, at meals on "hug your dentist" day, we could promise to chew each bite 28 times, swish mouthwash and floss like we think it matters.

Perry appoints new head to embattled agency

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) Gov. Rick Perry on Friday tapped a Fort Worth deputy chief district attorney to head the state's embattled Office of Violent Sex Offender Management amid questions about who was running the agency. Elizabeth "Christy" Jack, who has been on the agency's board since 2011, will now head it. Her term expires at the pleasure of the governor.

The agency performs functions relating to the sex offender civil commitment program. Jack replaces Dan Powers, who resigned this week citing too heavy a workload for a volunteer position.

Also, the Houston Chronicle reported Friday that two other top agency officials, executive director Allison Taylor and program manager Deborah Morgan, were on leave. Agency general counsel Celeste Blackburn said Taylor is on leave until next week, but it was unclear how long Morgan will be gone. Taylor and Morgan did not return calls seeking comment.

In the meantime, five lowerlevel supervisors were managing agency operations.

"Much work needs to be done to restore public confidence in this agency and to ensure it carries out its mission of protecting public safety," Perry said. "I want to thank Christy for taking on this role at such an important time for the agency."

Even before the announcement of Jack's appointment, Perry's chief of staff, Kathy

Walt, told the Chronicle that her office is "moving to address the leadership vacuum at this agency." She said this is the latest in a series of concerns about the agency, including its past secretive placement of violent sex offenders and little advance notification to community residents and legislative leaders.

All high-risk sex offenders in the program have served prison sentences but are kept in custody under a civil commitment program because they are deemed too dangerous to return to society. There are about 350 offenders being held in civil commitment, with roughly half in prison and the rest in halfway houses and jails statewide. But there is also some evidence that many of the agency's 24 employees, including Taylor, might work from

A copy of an employee list obtained by the Chronicle shows that employees work at four offices in Austin, Conroe, Arlington and El Paso in offices shared with offices of Department of State Health Services. Calls to the Austin headquarters, though, often go to voicemail.

State Sen. John Whitmire, a Democrat who chairs the chamber's Criminal Justice Committee, has asked the state auditor's office and a state unit that prosecutes official corruption to examine questionable contracts for housing offenders.

"At an agency that deals an agency that appears to have been out of control for some time with its bad decisions, having the top positions vacant or on leave is not in the public interest," Whitmire said.

The agency previously has been criticized for relocating more than two dozen high-risk offenders into north Houston boarding home without any advance notice to neighbors or lawmakers who represent the area.

After a public outcry, officials moved the offenders back to a minimum-security halfway house in east Harris County, which had previously demanded their remove because of security and operational concerns.

UT regent investigated

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) University of Texas System Regent Wallace Hall, already facing possible removal from office by state lawmakers, is now under criminal investigation for his efforts to force out the president of the system's flagship Austin campus. Gregg Cox, who leads the Travis County district attorney's Public Integrity Unit, said Friday his office has opened a formal investigation of Hall's actions. A Texas House committee had sent to prosecutors a report by its investigator that alleged Hall may have broken federal and state student privacy

Cox said his office did an initial review to determine if it had jurisdiction. "Now we're opening an investigation to gather more information," Cox said, declining further com-

Hall's attorney, Allan Van Fleet, had not been aware of the criminal investigation until contacted by The Associated Press and declined comment. Van Fleet has previously denied that Hall released any legally protected information to the public.

The announcement of the criminal investigation came a day after the House Select Committee on Transparency in State Agency Operations scheduled a May 12 vote on whether it would recommend to the full House that Hall should be impeached. The House panel does not have to conclude that Hall broke the law in order for him to be impeached.

If the panel votes to recommend impeachment, the matter would go before the full House and then a trial in the Senate to determine if Hall would be removed from his governor-appointed position.

Hall was appointed to the board of regents in 2011 by Gov. Rick Perry and is one of nine members. Since then he has aggressively pursued efforts by several regents to push out Powers, who has clashed with Perry and some board members on tuition and gradteaching and research other issues.

The House panel was charged in 2013 to investigate whether Hall abused open records laws with requests for more than 800,000 pages of documents and released private student South Texas official or employee information. The panel was also charged with finding if Hall's actions amounted to malfeasance.

Teen gets nearly 17 years in South Texas wreck

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A Mexican

teenager has been sentenced to nearly 17 years in prison over a South Texas wreck that killed five immigrants who were in the U.S. illegally.

A federal judge in Corpus Christi on Friday sentenced 19-year-old Manuel Rendon-Lucas to 200 months in prison. Rendon-Lucas in March pleaded guilty to conspiracy to transport illegal immigrants causing serious bodily injury.

Rendon-Lucas was also ordered to pay more than $2.65 million in restitution.

Prosecutors say Rendon-Lucas was fleeing law officers last November in Brooks County when the SUV he was driving hit a construction barrier and smashed into a tree. Five passengers died. Ten others in the vehicle, including Rendon-Lucas, were injured. Some remain paralyzed.

Texas Rep. Stockman says ethics inquiry underway

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Rep. Steve Stockman of Texas says the House Ethics Committee is investigating a complaint about a campaign finance reporting error made by a former campaign

The error was committed more than a year ago by an accountant who was a campaign volunteer, said Stockman, who lost a GOP primary for U.S. Senate last month.

In a statement Friday, Stockman said the mistake was corrected soon after he became aware of it. The volunteer responsible for the mistake was removed from his position, and the campaign committee has been closed, Stockman said.

Stockman said he is cooperating with the ethics panel and that the Federal Election Commission did not impose a fine on him or his campaign comin higher education and mittee. He said he is confident the ethics panel "will ultimately dismiss the matter after it completes a careful review."

Sen. John Cornyn, R-Texas, trounced Stockman in a primary last month to claim the Republican nomination for Senate. Stockman, who also served one term in the House in the 1990s, is not seeking re-election.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A South Texas county commissioner has pleaded guilty to coercing a public servant and must resign his office.

Cameron County Commissioner Ernie Hernandez was indicted in January on several counts related to improper use of his influence to protect an illegal gambling establishment.

The Cameron County District Attorney's office announced Friday that Hernandez agreed to enter a pretrial diversion program and to resign from office immediately.

In return, prosecutors agreed to drop all but one of the counts. If he successfully completes the yearlong pretrial diversion program, the remaining count will be dismissed.

Texas nuke weapons plant cited for safety concerns

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - Experts have recommended improving operating and training procedures after inspectors raised concerns about explosives safety at the nation's only nuclear weapons assembly and dismantling plant.

A letter to Pantex from the U.S. Department of Energy cites six incidents since August 2012 that have heightened concerns, The Amarillo Globe-News re-

John S. Boulden, director of enforcement and oversight in that office, wrote that the letter is intended to "convey concerns about the level of rigor applied by B&W Pantex in safely executing work." HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston-area teacher has been charged with doing a lap dance for a boy at school on his 15th birthday.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

No balloons, please To the Editor:

On Wednesday, April 23, 2014, Scenic Mountain Medical Center recognized Child Abuse Prevention Month. The idea of preventing child abuse is a laudable cause and certainly merits recognition. However the methods by which this was done could warrant some criticism.

Many functions are performed with the release of helium-filled balloons to celebrate/honor certain events or people. It is obvious that the organizers do not realize, or choose to ignore the consequences. These balloons can travel long distances, but eventually return to earth.

This amounts to a transfer of pollution to other people' property, perhaps several states away. Big Spring has an active drive to "Keep Big Spring Beautiful," but we seem not to care where we put some items that become trash.

My main concern is that the plastic has shown to have an adverse effect on animals. Cows, sheep, goats, pigs, even coyotes have been found to have ingested these plastics, with sometimes fatal results. In some parts of the country balloon residue has been found in sea life. News in brief

Obama arrives in Malaysia for 1st visit by U.S. president in more than 4

decades KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) President Barack Obama on Saturday opened the first visit by a U.S. president in nearly half a century to Malaysia, the third stop on Obama's weeklong goodwill trip through Asia. Stepping off his plane and onto a red carpet at an air base near Kuala Lumpur, Obama was met by an honor guard in crisp white uniforms. Malaysia's foreign minister and top envoys to the U.S. were on hand to greet Obama before he boarded his limousine for the drive to Kuala Lumpur's Parliament Square.

During the two-day state visit, Obama will meet with Prime Minister Najib Razak and be honored at a state dinner at the National Palace. He also plans to hold a town hall-style forum with young people.

Obama's long-awaited visit to Malaysia had been scheduled for last fall, but was postponed because of a U.S. government shutdown. His rescheduled visit comes as Malaysia has attracted international attention over the March 8 disappearance of a commercial airliner with 239 people

Officials were preparing to widen the search area in a remote part of the ocean as Obama was arriving in Malaysia. The air base where Air Force One landed has been used as a staging ground for some of the recovery operations for the missing jet.

5 NATO troops killed in helicopter crash in southern Afghanistan

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The NATO-led military coalition in Afghanistan says five of its troops have been killed in a helicopter crash in the country's south.

The coalition said it was investigating the circumstances of the crash but gave no other information. The nationalities of those killed were not released.

The U.S.-led NATO force is preparing to withdraw its troops from Afghanistan at the end of this year.

S. Korean prosecutor: 4 more of sunken ferry crew detained; all involved in navigation now held

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — All 15 people involved in navigating the South Korean ferry that sank and left more than 300 people dead or missing are now in custody after authorities on Saturday detained four more crew members, a prosecutor said.

Yang Jung-jin of the joint investigation team said two helmsmen and two members of the steering crew were taken in on preliminary arrest warrants issued late Friday. Eleven other crew members, including the captain, had been formally arrested earlier.

All are accused of negligence and of failing to help passengers in need as the ferry Sewol sank April 16. The captain initially told passengers to stay in their rooms and took half an hour to issue an evacuation order, by which time the ship was tilting too severely for many people to get out.

Ten days after the sinking, 187 bodies have been recovered and 115 people are believed to be missing, though the government-wide emergency task force has said the ship's passengers list could be inaccurate. Only 174 people survived, including 22 of the 29 crew members.

The seven surviving crew members who have not been arrested or detained held non-marine jobs such as chef or steward, Yang said in a telephone interview from Mokpo, the southern city near the wreck site where prosecutors are based. A court hearing was held Saturday to determine whether formal arrest warrants will be issued against the four newly detained crew members.

Prom-date rejection investigated in school stabbing of teen recalled as 'bright light'

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The night before Maren Sanchez was fatally stabbed inside her high school, she asked to take a break from her drama group for a nail appointment. The junior prom she helped plan was the next day, and she wanted to look her best.

Sanchez, a 16-year-old junior, was attacked Friday in a school hallway, and a boy who's a student there has been charged with murder.

Instead of the prom that night, students gathered for a candlelight vigil and counselors were available for anyone who needed their help. They planned to be on hand Saturday as well, WFSB television station in Hartford reported. The prom was postponed indefinitely.

Police are investigating whether Sanchez was stabbed after turning down an invitation to the prom, an event she had been looking forward to attending with her boyfriend.

Family members and friends at the Jonathan Law High School in Milford were left reeling from the attack on Sanchez, an outgoing member of the National Honor Society who played guitar and was active in drama and other school activities.

Frontiers of Lebanon, Syria, Israel meet in tiny patch of land, site of Mideast's conflicts

CHEBAA, Lebanon (AP) — This small, scenic patch of land where the frontiers of Syria, Lebanon and Israel converge has long been a flashpoint, with Hezbollah fighters and Israeli troops positioned face to face in close quarters across undefined and disputed borders.

The Syrian civil war has made the region known as Chebaa Farms even more dangerous.

Rival sides in Syria's conflict crisscross it smuggling weapons and fighters, and sectarian tensions are rising as Chebaa's mainly Sunni residents, joined by thousands of Sunni Syrian refugees, turn against Lebanon's Shiite Hezbollah group because of its support for Syrian President Bashar Assad.

Even in a country with as many potential triggers for violence as Lebanon, Chebaa's unique geographic location brings together a collection of particularly bitter enemies. And with tempers fraying on all sides as Syria's war drags on, there are concerns that a misstep by just one of the players in this idyllic landscape of green, rocky hills could drag everyone into a wider, even nastier conflict.

No quick finish expected in Afghan elections, as preliminary results point to long process

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Afghanistan is expected to release preliminary results in its crucial presidential election on Saturday, but the results are only one step in a potentially long road to determine who will succeed President Hamid Karzai. Neither Abdullah Abdullah, a former foreign minister, nor ex-finance minister Ashraf Ghani Ahmadzai look set to win a majority, meaning the violence-weary country could be heading for a runoff.

Final results from this round of voting are due May 14. With no candidate likely to get a majority, a runoff must be held 15 days later. The most likely scenario appears to be a matchup between Abdullah and Ahmadzai in late May. Then, the entire process of counting, handling complaints and making revisions begins again, meaning that it could be late June or even July before a final winner is declared.

The U.S.-led military coalition is counting on Afghanistan's first democratic transfer of power as part of its plan to withdraw most troops at the end of the year, nearly 13 years after toppling the Taliban's radical Islamic regime for sheltering al-Qaida's Osama bin Laden.

Potential 2016 GOP presidential candidates discuss gun rights, court NRA at annual meeting

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Several potential Republican presidential candidates courted gun-rights supporters Friday at the National Rifle Association's annual convention, talking up their pro-gun credentials while imploring the crowd to fight not just for their Second Amendment rights but for other freedoms they say are being threatened.

U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio of Florida, former Pennsylvania U.S. Sen. Rick Santorum, Indiana Gov. Mike Pence and Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal addressed the NRA's annual leadership forum, a kind of political pep rally the organization considers one of its premier events. Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker and U.S. Sens. Ted Cruz of Texas and Kelly Ayotte of New Hampshire also recorded brief videos that were played for the crowd of more than 2,000 inside Lucas Oil Stadium.

One after another, the possible 2016 contenders thanked the NRA and its members for flexing their considerable political muscle to help push back recent gun-control efforts, including legislation following the 2012 massacre at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Connecticut that would have required background checks for gun purchases. They said that same activism will be critical heading into elections this fall.

Jindal charged that Vice President Joe Biden and former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, both possible Democratic presidential candidates, think the Second Amendment is little more than "a phrase from a speech writer."

Shiite rally bombing ahead of parliamentary elections in Iraq sparks deadly reprisal attacks

BAGHDAD (AP) — A multiple bomb attack that killed at least 33 people at a campaign rally for a militant Shiite group likely unleashed a series of apparent sectarian attacks in Iraq, signaling the start of a new wave of Sunni-Shiite bloodletting ahead of elections next week, security officials said Saturday.

An al-Qaida breakaway group, the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant, claimed responsibility for Friday's attack on the Baghdad rally, which drew about 10,000 backers of Asaib Ahl al-Haq.

It said on a militant website that the bombings were to avenge what it called the killing of Sunnis and their forced removal from their homes by Shiite militias. The authenticity of the claim could not be independently verified.

A senior Asaib Ahl al-Haq official said the 33 dead included 10 group members who had fought in the Syrian civil war.

Something special's happening in the Circle.

Lees named new coach at Clarendon

Addie Leesnew Clarendon College women's basketball coach

By TOMMY WELLS

Sports Editor

Howard College head women's basketball coach Earl Diddle knew the day would eventually come when Addie Lees would get her chance to be a collegiate basketball Talented coaches eventually get their shots.

For Diddle, the news that he had lost his assistant came earlier this week when Addie Lees was named the new women's basketball coach at rival Clarendon College.

The former Plainview High School and Arkansas-Monticello standout spent two seasons as an assistant at HC. She took over as the Clarendon head coach on Tuesday.

"I am delighted for her professionally," said Diddle. "She was a great asset, not only to Howard College, but to our entire basketball program."

Diddle, who has had approximately 60 former players or assistants become high school or college coaches, said he feels Lees will find success as a head coach.

"She'll do a great job at Clarendon," he said. "I think it is a great opportunity for her. She knows the game, and has a tremendous future ahead of her."

Lees was a standout athlete during her career. After graduating from Plainview, she played at Midland College before moving to Arkansas-Monticello. After her playing career ended, Lees spent two seasons as a graduate assistant at Eastern New Mexico State University before joining Diddle on the HC bench. "She did an outstanding job for us while she was here,"

The Big Spring High School boys' and girls' track and field teams moved a step closer to punching their tickets to the state track meet on Friday morning by getting off to a solid start at the Region I-3A Track and Field Championships in Lubbock. The BSHS thinclads qualified for the finals in eight of the 12 events they were entered.

The Big Spring Lady Steers qualified for the finals in all three relays, winning the 4x100- and 4x400-meter events, while placing third in the 4x200.

Only the top eight finishers in each advanced to the finals, which were held Saturday afternoon on Texas Tech's Fuller Track. The top two finishers in the finals will advance to the state meet on May 9-10.

The Big Spring 4x100-meter squad, running in the second heat, posted the fastest time of the meet with a time of 49.11 seconds. Kennedale finished second at 49.66.

The Lady Steers' 4x400-meter team continued to dominate the event. Big Spring turned in a time of 3:59.32 in the race and edged out Stephenville for the top spot by almost 5 seconds.

'hen Devin Roberson was an elementary student, he used to go to the golf course with his father, Nick, and his grandfather, the late Big Spring Junior High School coach E.C. Roberson, and dream of one day playing as well as they did.

That motivation has served him well since.

On Monday, the Big Spring High School senior will add a special page to his family's history when he begins play in the Class 3A State Golf Tournament in Austin.

"My goal is to win it all," he said. "I wouldn't set it any lower than that. If a few things go my way while I'm down there, I think I can win it."

Few people would argue that point. Roberson is one of the state's most experienced golfers attending the meet. When he steps onto the Hyatt Resort at Lost Pines course, he will be making his third straight appearance in the state tournament. As a junior, Roberson was part of the Steers' team that finished third in the final standings at the state meet. As a sophomore, he was part of the BSHS team that fin-

Hawks salvage split of twinbill with Clarendon

By TOMMY WELLS

Sports Editor

The Howard College Hawks moved a step closer to nailing down third place in the Western Junior College Athletic College standings on Saturday by splitting a doubleheader with the Clarendon Bulldogs at Jack Barber Field.

With the split, the Hawks moved to 34-15 for the season, and to 17-13 in WJCAC lay. Clarendon went to 18-21 and 12-18.

The Hawks didn't turn in one of their better performances in Game 1 of the twinbill on Friday afternoon. The Hawks squandered an early 1-0 lead and suffered a 7-2 loss.

"We just didn't play very well in the first one." said HC head coach Britt Smith. "It was terrible and that is about the best way to describe it."

Austin Solecitto, despite feeling ill prior to the game, gave the Hawks a lift in the nightcap by helping Howard roll to a 10-2 run-rule victory in the eighth inning.

"He was sick before the game," said Smith. "I just told him to go out

ONE ENERGY COMPANY DEDICATED TO SAFETY...SMART DIGGING MEANS CALLING 811 BEFORE EACH JOB.

Whether you are planning to do it yourself or hire a professional, property owners often make risky assumptions about whether or not they should get their utility lines marked, but every digging job requires a call - even small projects like planting trees and shrubs. Digging without calling can disrupt service to an entire neighborhood, harm you and those around you and potentially result in expensive fines and repair costs. Calling 811 before every digging job gets your underground utility lines marked for FREE and helps prevent undesired consequences.

Once you've made the smart call to 811 and waited for your underground utility lines to be marked, you are now officially ready to dig. Don't forget that with time, erosion or root structure growth may shift the locations of your utility lines, so remember to call 811 again, each and every time you are planning a digging job. Visit call811.com for more information about 811 and the call-before-you-dig process.

Culture differences and school activities are among the discussion items for a class of fourth grade Coahoma students to their same age pen pals in Germany pparently, Duck Dynasty hasn't caught on with the 9- to 10-yearold crowd in Germany yet.

Fans of the reality TV show need not worry — a Coahoma Elementary class is helping to spread that bit of American culture to at least one class of German fourthyear students.

The fourth grade gifted and talented students are participating in a electronic pen pal exchange with a group of sameage students in Bardowick, Germany, municipality in Northern Germany in the district of Lüneburg.

"Before we began, the students made lists of things that they would like to know about the German students and questions they could ask," said Brynn McJimsey, GT teacher. "In addition, I gave my students a run down of basic German vocabulary they could use in their emails."

The exchange came about after McJimsey saw a posting on a friend's Facebook page. McJimsey spent the summer of 2008 at the equivalent of an elementary school in Lüneburg, Germany, through a study abroad exchange program offered by Angelo State University.

"I remained friends with several of the people I met while I was there," McJimsey said. "One of them recently posted on her Facebook that she was looking for an American group of students to be pen pals with. I jumped on the opportunity for my students. She put me in contact with a student teacher, and we put the project in motion. There are 10 fourth-grade students in her class we are exchanging emails with. The students exchange one email a week, and, so far, we have received and sent three emails each."

Topics of conversation between the two classes include comparing school schedules, favorite foods, sports and pets, down to what they learn

"One of the specific reasons Ms. Dana Jordan wanted to do the project was to help her students with their English," she continued. "German students are taught English in fourth grade."

The Texas students are also picking up a few German words.

Nein, or No in English, is Tanner Adkins' favorite, while pfannkuchen, pancake, is Katlin Johnson's top word so far.

One of the major differences between the two school system, the Coahoma students learned quickly, was German students only attend classes until noon, but they go all year long. No prepared lunch is served by the schools and no transportation is provided for the students to and from the school.

"I would like to go to school all summer," Johnson said. "It would be hard, but it would be fun. I do like to go to school until the end of the day. Their school system is a lot different. If they want to ride the bus, they ride the public bus.

a bunch They don't have parents picked them, up but they don't have a car. I think they walk them home."

Another startling difference for the Texas students is at the end of their fourth year, German students are placed in one of three levels of schools which may decided their future employment. Placement depends on their grades, behavior and teacher recommendation, McJimsey explained.

"The first school is called Grundschule, where first through fourth grade subjects are taught the same for everyone," Adkins said. "I don't think they change classes. After fourth grade, they are separated by academic ability. The Hauptschule school, fifth through 10th, is slow paced and teaches vocational. The Gymnasium is the high academic school."

There is a third level of school that falls between the two — Realschule — where, after graduating in the 10th year, top students can attend a higher academic level school and other graduates can attend a vocational type trade school or seek an apprenticeship. Students at this level learn at least one other language while students at the Gymnasium learn at least three, McJimsey said. "I think it's crazy," Adkins said. "The STAAR test is hard enough. I can't believe what it is like 'The hardest part would be separated from my friends," Johnson added.

Culturally, the two classes have found they have several similarities in common including eating the same cereals, having the same type of video gaming equipment — PS4, which was quickly pointed out by fourth-grader Grayson Jacobs and both students have watched SpongBob and Jesse, a TV show on the Disney Network.

"They have Angry Birds," Jacobs said.

When the Coahoma class learned that Duck Dynasty wasn't known to the young Germans, they sent a link to the show's website to the class. The German students found it pretty amusing, McJimsey said.

"I do feel that this program has been effective with my students," McJimsey said. "After their (German students) return from Easter Holiday (Monday) Ms. Jordon and I plan on letting them discuss the different ways they celebrate Easter. It is still fairly early in the project but I have noticed through the students email conversations that they are finding they do have things in common with the German students.

"We will continue the exchange when the German students return and it will continue through the rest of this school year," she continued. "I hope we have the opportunity to continue it next year."

The light within

Last week the small town of West, Texas marked one year since the devastating chemical explosion leveled a large section of the town killing fifteen and injuring more than 200. Those who were there, and those who witnessed the mushroom cloud rising on the horizon, will never forget.

This week 35,755 runners participated in the first Boston Marathon since the horrendous bombing one year ago that killed and maimed spectators and participants near the finish line.

One event was the result of a tragic accident, the other a hideous crime. But in both cases, the year past was remembered by remarkable stories of courage, faith and determination. In West, a choir sang Amazing

Grace while surrounded with flickering candles on which students wrote, "Rise Up West!" CNN reported, "Residents say their faith has been instrumental in understanding and dealing with last April's tragedy. Montgomery Irwin says the anniversary falling so close to Easter — with its message of resurrection and renewal —is especially appropriate for the people of

in a one mile tribute-run on Saturday. Boston Mayor, Martin J. Walsh spoke to the crowd, "As I look out on the crowd, there is a lot of inspiration. I want to thank you for your courage and your resilience." At Old South Church, near the finish line, tribute runners were given blue and yellow scarves knitted by volunteers across the country.

Perhaps John had this kind of human resilience in mind when he wrote, "That was the light which coming into the world, enlightens every man." (John1:9). Every human being is born with a reflection of that light that is at the source of creation. In some way we are like the clouds that reflect the rising sun, streaked with crimson, purple and gold prior to the sun's entrance. Often in our moments of greatest heartache and difficulty we reflect the greater glory. But when the sun rises, its brilliance supersedes everything that has gone before.

This may be what Zecharias meant when he said, "The sunrise from on high has visited us!" (Luke 1:78). Or John, when he wrote, "And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, glory as the only begotten Son of God." (John 1:14). All of our expressions of courage, faith and determination, mixed as they are with our shortcomings and our sins, are but dim reflections of the perfect light that is found in God.

It seems fitting that between remembering these two tragic events, the world paused to celebrate Easter and the resurrection of Jesus from the dead. Seeking comfort, consolation and inspiration, we turned our eyes toward that signal event in human history when God entered into our suffering through His Son and overcame death and the grave.

Our human resilience reflects not on our own glory, but on the glory of Him who made us in His image, Who sent His Son to forgive us our sins and transform us into children of light. He is the source of all comfort and all

A Big Spring church will celebrate National Nurses Week with a special and time honored tradition.

National Nurses Week 2014 is being celebrated from May 6 through May 12. National Nurses Day will be observed May 6 and National Parish Nurse Day will be observed May 12. Sam and Christina Segundo, senior pastors of Family Faith Center (FFC) will be hosting the fifth annual Blessing of Nurses' Hands for Big Spring nurses and those from surrounding areas.

"The church motto is 'Your Healthy Place to Be," Sam Segundo said and the Segundos recognize parish nurses play an important role in the health of local fellowships. A Parish Nurse is a registered nurse who specializes in matters of health and healing within a faith-based community.

Some congregations use the term faithbased nursing or faithbased nurses. The pastors have included the parish nurse ministry as one of many key faith components available to members of the Family Faith Center congregation.

Sam Segundo added "Our Parish Nurse Ministry is known as 'The Gate Called Beautiful' and is headed by certified parish nurse Les White PhD APRN-BC." Dr. White indicated

there are many aspects of parish nursing, however the core concept is assisting church members to understand the relationship between their faith and their health and healing. He also noted that prayer is a crucial part of the ministry and he conducts a health and healing service every Sunday morning to pray for those who are ill or in-

The health and healing service is one of seven Sunday morning (Sunday school) classes the fellowship offers for the members of the congregation. Dr. White has been a member of Family Faith Center for 13 years and received his certification in parish nursing in 2003 at Bellarmine University in Louisville, Ky.

He believes he may be the only certified parish nurse in Big Spring, but remarked, "One does not have to be certified to use the title of parish nurse. Any registered nurse may provide services as a parish nurse.

Tornado shelters face dilemma with pet lovers

(AP) — Jerry Starr thought he was taking the safe approach when a twister was reported heading toward his subneighborhood outside Oklahoma City last May. He grabbed his teenage daughter Dyonna and his dog and drove to the local City Hall, which serves as a public storm shelter.

But when he arrived, a police officer told him that the only way they could come in was if Tobi, his shih tzu-yorkie mix, stayed outside. No pets allowed. So Starr and Tobi rode out the storm in his car, one of the most dangerous places he could be.

"I love her and there's no way I was going to live knowing I was abandoning her," said Starr, of Del City.

Modern forecasting technology now gives residents hours of notice of threatening conditions and precise projections of a storm's likely path. Residents are bombarded with broadcast warnings to take shelter.

But as the spring storm season arrives in Tornado Alley, emergency officials are still wrestling with a dilemma posed by man's best friends. Since many public shelters won't accept animals, people wind up dashing across town to rescue their pets or staying in unprotected

"Pets and sheltering is always a problem," said David Grizzle, gency management coordinator for the college town of Norman, which closed its public shelters last fall because of problems with pets and overcrowding.

in and "Pets come sometimes they're hard to control," he said, describing past scenes of dozens of frantic dogs with chickens and even iguanas brought inside.

Access to shelters has special tion in Oklahoma this year after 79 tornadoes strafed the state in 2013, the second highest total in the nation, killing 34 people and injuring hundreds.

Most of the victims were in cars, houses or unreinforced buildings. joint state-federal program offered up to a $2,000 rebate to help eligible homeowners install fortified "safe rooms" or above or underground shelters.

"One of the most common injuries that people may sustain during tornadoes, storms or straight-line winds are injuries from falling or flying debris, so it's important to take shelter," said Keli Cain, spokeswoman for the Oklahoma Department of Emergency Management.

But while the number of in-home shelters is growing, most people in small towns and of modest incomes depend on sturdy public buildings like schools, hospitals and courthouses. And more than 60 percent of households have pets.

At city council and campus administration meetings this spring, officials reviewing cal emergency are again debating the implications of turning animals away.

"People are so attached to their pets, I don't think it's even possible to ban them," said Byron Boshell, director of Security at Oklahoma City's Integris Baptist Medical Center, where people from surround ing neighborhoods come when funnel clouds approach.

Staff members try to herd the pets to the basement garage, away from the patients. But at some shelters, 60 to 70 dogs may be packed in with the people.

Southwestern Oklahoma State University, in Weatherford, used to allow pets into the campus buildings until several bad scenes involving dozens of barking lunging dogs and other panicked animals.

The animals kind of terrified from the storm and also strange people," said Rick Bolar, chief of the campus police.

With the exception of a few low-lying areas, most Texas peach orchards escaped damage from the April 15 and earlier freezes in 2014. There were exceptions, however, such as this East Texas orchard in Smith County, that were subject to temperatures in the teens in early March. By late April, these trees should be filled with small peaches, according to the grower, but trees either had only a few peaches or none at all.

Freeze, drought taking toll on crops

By Robert Burns

Agri-Life Agent

COLLEGE STATION – There were varied reports of damage to wheat, forages and fruit and nut crops from the hard freeze on April 15 from Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service personnel throughout the Central, Rolling Plains, South Plains and Panhandle regions.

A statewide summary of damage to wheat inthose areas is pending. However, Dr. Larry Stein, AgriLife Extension horticulturist for fruits, nuts and vegetable crops at Uvalde, was certain pecan and peach orchards were left mostly unscathed.

A large part of the reason for the lack of damage was due to preventive measures taken by orchard owners and managers, Stein said.

"After the late freezes last year, a lot of people were on guard this year and ready to do whatever they could," he said. "The big thing was watering before the freeze."

In 2013, the Texas peach crop was hammered by two exceptionally late freezes, one in late April, and for some areas, another in May.

This year, an early March freeze caused some alarm, but most peach varieties had not yet bloomed and buds were tight enough to escape damage, Stein said. In 2013, the extreme drought meant many orchards were stressed before the freeze, making them more susceptible to damage.

Preventive measures can also include applying irrigation water to trees during a freeze, he said.

"You can run water during the time of the freeze," Stein said. "When water goes from a liquid to a solid, it's going to give off heat. And as long as that's happening, it's not going to get below 32 degrees (at the tree level.)"

Pecans were also mostly left unharmed, he said. "There were actually a few trees that were nipped back in a few locations, in the lower spots." Stein said. "The good news is there was only a few primary buds were forced, and there will be secondary buds that will come that will make pecans. But a lot of the primary buds hadn't forced yet."

BBB

your home with help from your BBB

Instead of choosing to buy a new home, many people prefer to remodel or upgrade their current one. Most home improvement projects take time and money. More importantly, they require skilled, reputable contractors that can bring your dreams to life. Better Business Bureau (BBB) received nearly 5,000 complaints against the home improvement industry nationally last year. Most complaints allege contracted work was not done properly or final costs were more than quoted. Others claimed repair or billing issues.

It's important to do your research before hiring anyone. You can find a BBB Accredited contractor at checkbbb.org. For any business, go to bbb.org to check the company's BBB Business Review for a history of complaints.

Once you have a list of contractors to contact, it's time to ask the hard questions:

TYLER

Ask for a list of references to get an idea of how familiar the contractor is with your type of project. A contractor should be able to give you names and phone numbers of at least three clients with projects like yours. Ask each client how long ago the project was and whether it was completed on time.

What are my payment options?

Don't pay large fees up front or pay in cash. It's best to solicit bids from at least three different companies. All bids should be in writing and should provide a full description of the services to be provided and the materials to be used. Depending on the nature of work, you may wish to specify the kinds (grade or thickness) of materials that will be used, as this could affect the bid.

Will my project require a permit?

Some building projects may require permits, even for simple jobs like decks. Additions or alterations to your home may affect title transfers or insurance requirements should you ever decide to sell your home. Therefore, be cautious of contractors who state no permits or inspections are required. All contractors are required to obtain permits for their work. Also, be wary of a contractor who asks you to obtain a permit on their behalf. The party that obtains the permit is ultimately held responsible for work that does not meet city code.

What types of insurance do you carry?

The Federal Trade Commission recommends contractors have:

- personal liability
- worker's compensation
- property damage coverage

Ask for copies of insurance certificates and make sure they're current, or you could be held liable for any injuries and damages that occur during the project.

If you have an issue with a business or feel you have been scammed, file a complaint with BBB.

McDonald's CEO: No heat from breakfast competition

NEW YORK (AP) — McDonald's apparently isn't scared by a waffle taco. Without specifying names, McDonald's CEO Don Thompson said during a conference call Tuesday that the company hasn't seen any impact from the "most recent competitor" in the breakfast space. In apparent references to Subway and Taco Bell, he also noted that McDonald's seems to face new rivals every year in the mornings, whether they're "sandwich shops or taco shops.'

The comments come after Taco

Bell's launch of its national breakfast menu late last month, which generated considerable fanfare because of the chain's TV ads featuring real-life Ronald McDonalds professing love for items like its waffle taco. But Taco Bell's lineup is still fairly limited compared with McDonald's, and it's not clear whether it will be able to convince people to visit its restaurants in the mornings.

Taco Bell, which is owned by Yum Brands, has declined to say how its breakfast is faring so far. In a phone interview, the chain's chief marketing officer, Chris Brandt, didn't have much to say about the comments by McDonald's.

"Well, good for them," Brandt said. McDonald's, which has been in the breakfast business for about 30 years, counts on items like the Egg McMuffin and Sausage Biscuit to generate 25 percent of its U.S. sales. Declarer's best-laid plans gang aft a-gley. So said the Scottish poet Robert Burns — if we may be permitted to paraphrase him - some two centuries ago. South surely planned his play correctly in the accompanying deal, but at the critical moment, East made an unusually good play that foiled South's plan. West led a spade against two notrump. Declarer held up on the first two rounds and won the third with the ace. South then cashed the A-K-Q of hearts and A-K of diamonds, producing this five-card end-North Declarer was well-aware that East had to have the ace of clubs for his opening spade bid. So he decided that his best chance to make the contract was to put East on lead with a spade at this point and force him to return a club to dummy's king. This would allow dummy to score the seventh and eighth tricks with the king of clubs and ten of hearts. But when South led the nine of spades, West discarded a club, dummy a diamond and East, obviously a devotee of Robert Burns, followed with the three! As a result, declarer had to go down one. He unexpectedly scored a second spade trick, but it proved to be a Greek gift!

J&J says Europe clears new diabetes treatment

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnson & Johnson said Friday that European Union regulators approved a pill that combines its diabetes drug Invokana with metformin, an older treatment for the disease.

Janssen-Cilag International will market the drug under the name Vokanamet. It is intended to treat type 2 diabetes, in which the body does not use insulin efficiently.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved Invokana in March 2013. European Union authorities followed suit in November.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy is welcoming the decision by oil and gas industry supplier Baker Hughes to disclose all chemicals in hydraulic fracturing fluid. But Halliburton, a major competitor in the field, isn't committing to such disclosure.

Deputy Assistant Energy Secretary Paula Gant says Friday that the move by Baker Hughes "is an important step in building public confidence."

Houston-based Halliburton says it's studying the move by Baker Hughes, which is also based in that city. Halliburton says it had an interest in protecting "our intellectual property and the substantial investment it represents" and will examine the new Baker Hughes format for its ability to

"Dallas is a global center of industry and it deserves more business-friendly flight options from the airport most convenient to downtown," airline CEO David Cush said in an emailed statement.
