Flowers are still blooming in the area as these grow near some cacti located on the Big Spring State Park. The National Weather Service is predicting mostly sunny weather today in the Crossroads area with a high near 94 degrees. Tonight the area has a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms with a predicted low around 71 degrees.

Community Foundation awards community grants, scholarships

By ANDREIA MEDLIN

Staff Writer

The Big Spring Area Community Foundation came together Saturday at the dress at the meeting.

Local entities such as the YMCA, the Heritage Museum, the Hangar 25 Museum, Howard College, Food 2 Kids, Keep Big Spring Beautiful and the Howard County Library each received generous donations. The foundation that was founded by local philanthropist and businessman Charles Beil and Kimble Guthrie, has established 15 permanent funds that will be given grants as needed for perpetuity. "They will be there forever," Mouton said. "This will ensure the future of Big Spring." With assets of almost $500,000, the foundation helps finance a variety of community improvement projects, both big and small as well as individual grants such as college scholarships. When Beil first approached Guthrie about starting a foundation of philanthropy, "Kimble said 'It'll never work," said Mouton. But Beil didn't give up and the group was incorporated in 2001. "We owe a great debt to Charles," Mouton continued. Funds also included 10 scholarships totaling $16,000 to area youth. A fact of the foundation's life is that the more money it has in permanent funds, the more projects it can

Drew Mouton during his ad- help. Persons can donate any amount to the the foundation's discretionary fund, while a restricted fund can be established for $10,000. And what the foundation has to offer is a sort of helping hand to qualified community improvement projects. Agency Fund Grants include: The Heritage Museum, $866.08; Big Spring Symphony, $1,185.54; Hangar 25 Air Museum, $4,099.23; and the YMCA, $14,010.83. In total there were $454,167 requests for funding, but only $55,000 was available. Other grants came from the following funds administered by the Foundation -General Discretionary Fund, Jerry and Louise Worthy Beautification Fund, Alon Energy Fund, Keep Big Spring Beautiful Fund, the Polly Mays Memorial Fund and the Kimball and Sue Guthrie Memorial Fund. The following agencies received grants from those funds were: Food for Kids Project $2,000; Keep Big Spring Beautiful $2,500; Hangar 25 Air Museum $10,000; the Heritage Museum $ 8,250; Big Spring Main Street $7,775; Howard College $11,500; YMCA $10,000; and the Howard County Library $2,800. Total funds awarded were $54,825. "This is how we keep Big Spring going," said Mouton. "Anyone can philanthropy."

Old Settlers Reunion to take less formal approach this year

By STEVE REAGAN

Staff Writer

The emphasis will be more on the "reunion" part of the Howard-Glasscock annual Old Settlers' Reunion this vear.

A less formal, more low-key reunion will be held from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. Saturday at the Heritage Museum.

Museum Curator Tammy Schrecengost said the event will not feature honoree families or formal awards as in past years. Instead, the reunion will focus more on people getting together and swapping tales of the "good ol' days.'

"The entire focus of this is for people to get together and reminisce," she said. "We started honoring specific families in the '90s, so it's not like that was something we've al-

Critical blood drive slated 10 to 2 Friday

Herald Staff Report

According to representatives with the United Blood Services (UBS), the O-Negative blood supply for the area is at a dangerously low level.

"Most blood shortages occur in the summertime, and our O Negative blood supply is dangerously low,"said Linda Grace, Senior Donor Recruitment representative with United Blood Services. "We should have 67 pints on hand, and we only have two.

"It's no secret," she continued. "People simply are much busier than they are at other times of the year. Plus, about 20 precent of all blood that is donated comes from schools that are out for the summer. Although donors might have other things to do, patients continue to need blood."

The city of Big Spring will be hosting a blood drive from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday, in Council Chambers 307 E. Fourth. Call Stacie King at 264-2347 to What: UBS Community Blood Drive.

Where: Big Spring City Council Chambers, 307 E. Fourth.

When: 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday.

schedule an appointment.

"With each donation, donors receive a free total cholesterol test and earn points in United Blood Services' Hero in Me rewards program," Grace said. "It takes less than an hour from the time you walk up to the blood drive until you finish your snack and juice."

Volunteer blood donors must be at least 16, weigh a minimum of 110 pounds and be in good health. Additional height/weight requirements apply to donors 22 and younger, and donors who are 16 must have signed permission from a parent or guardian. For information, visit www. UnitedBloodServices.org.

Obama moves forces into Iraq to secure US interests as he weighs broader response

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 300 armed American forces are being positioned in and around Iraq to help secure U.S. assets as President Barack Obama nears a decision on an array of options for combating fast-moving Islamic insurgents, including airstrikes or a contingent of special forces.

The U.S. and Iran also held an initial discussion on how the longtime foes might cooperate to ease the threat from the al-Qaida-linked militants that have swept through Iraq. Still, the White House ruled out the possibility that Washington and Tehran might coordinate military operations in Iraq.

Obama met with his national security team Monday evening to discuss options for stopping the militants known as the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant. Officials said the president has made no final decisions on how aggressively the U.S. might get involved in Iraq, though the White House continued to emphasize that any military engagement remained contingent on the government in Baghdad making political reforms.

Still, there were unmistakable signs of Americans returning to a country from which the U.S. military fully withdrew more than two years ago. Obama notified Congress that up to 275 troops would be sent to Iraq to provide support and security for U.S. personnel and the American Embassy in Baghdad. The soldiers — 170 of which have already arrived in Iraq — were armed for combat, though Obama has insisted he does not intend for U.S. forces to be engaged in direct fighting.

About 100 additional forces are being put on standby, most likely in Kuwait, and could be used for airfield management, security and logistics support, officials said.

Powerful Iranian general in Iraq to help roll back Sunni militants who captured key city

BAGHDAD (AP) — In a sign of Iran's deepening involvement in the Iraqi crisis, the commander of Tehran's elite Quds Force is helping Iraq's military and Shiite militias gear up to fight the Sunni insurgents advancing across the country, officials said Monday.

Washington signaled a new willingness work with Iran to help the Iraqi government stave off the insurgency after years of trying to limit Tehran's influence in Baghdad — a dramatic shift that would have been unthinkable a few weeks ago.

The United States is deploying up to 275 military troops to Iraq to protect the U.S. Embassy and other American interests and is considering sending a contingent of special forces soldiers. But the White House insisted anew the U.S. would not be sending combat troops and thrusting America into a new Iraq war.

The insurgents seized the strategic city of Tal Afar near the Syrian border Monday, part of its goal of linking areas under its control on both sides of the Iraq-Syria frontier. West of Baghdad, an army helicopter was shot down during clashes near the city of Fallujah, killing the two-man crew, security ofwere injured.

"More than half of the town is gone — absolutely gone," Stanton County Commissioner Jerry Weatherholt said. "The co-op is gone, the grain bins are gone, and it looks like almost every house in town has some damage. It's a complete mess."

Victims were taken to three regional hospitals, and at least one had died from unspecified injuries, hospital officials said. The Stanton County Sheriff's Office confirmed late Monday that the person killed was a 5-year-old child. It didn't specify the child's gender.

Extremist attack in Kenya leaves 9 dead in same region as previous night's slaughter

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Extremists attacked a coastal area of Kenya for the second night in a row, killing at least nine people a day after the deaths of nearly 50, an official said Tuesday.

Police spokesman Masoud Mwinyi said that al-Shabab militants attacked Majembeni village. The Somali militant group also claimed responsibility for the Sunday night attack in nearby Mpeketoni that killed 48 people.

The back-to-back attacks underscore the weak security around the Lamu area, which lies just south of the Somali border. Lamu once attracted swarms of foreign visitors but its tourist sector has been suffering in recent years because of increasing violence.

On Sunday night the gunmen went door to door demanding to know if the men inside were Muslim and if they spoke Somali. If the extremists did not like the answers, they opened fire.

The U.S. ambassador made Kenya's entire coastal region off-limits for embassy employees after the attack.

FDA preparing long-awaited plan to ask food industry to lower levels of salt in foods

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food companies and restaurants could soon face government pressure to make their foods less salty — a long-awaited federal effort to try to prevent thousands of deaths each year from heart disease and stroke.

The Food and Drug Administration is preparing to issue voluntary guidelines asking the food industry to lower sodium levels, FDA Commissioner Margaret Hamburg told The Associated Press. Hamburg said in a recent interview that the sodium is "of huge interest and concern" and she hopes the guidelines will be issued "relatively soon."

"We believe we can make a big impact working with the industry to bring sodium levels down, because the current level of consumption really is higher than it should be for health," Hamburg said.

The food industry has already made some reductions, and has prepared for government action since a 2010 Institute of Medicine report said companies had not made enough progress on making foods less salty. The IOM advised the government to establish maximum sodium levels for different foods, though the FDA said then — and maintains in the switch is at the heart of the other recall.

GM is in the midst of a companywide safety review, and has now issued 44 recalls this year covering more than 20 million vehicles — nearly 18million the U.S. The latest recall is likely to spark more questions about GM's commitment to safety when CEO Mary Barra testifies for the second time before a House panel investigating why it took GM 11 years to recall the small cars.

Barra endured some harsh questions in April, but refused to answer most pending the release of an internal investigation. GM released those results on June 5, blaming a dysfunctional corporate structure and poor decisions by some employees for the crisis. The company also announced plans to establish a fund to compensate the families of those who died, plus those injured in more than 50 crashes.

AP Exclusive: Pablo Picasso's 'The Blue Room' from 1901 reveals hidden portrait of mystery man

WASHINGTON (AP) - Scientists and art experts have found a hidden painting beneath one of Pablo Picasso's first masterpieces, "The Blue Room," using advances in infrared imagery to reveal a bowtied man with his face resting on his hand. Now the question that conservators at The Phillips Collection in Washington hope to answer is simply: Who is he?

It's a mystery that's fueling new research about the 1901 painting created early in Picasso's career while he was working in Paris at the start of his distinctive blue period of melancholy subjects.

Curators and conservators revealed their findings for the first time to The Associated Press last week. Over the past five years, experts from The Phillips Collection, National Gallery of Art, Cornell University and Delaware's Winterthur Museum have developed a clearer image of the mystery picture under the surface. It's a portrait of an unknown man painted in a vertical composition by one of the 20th century's great artists.

"It's really one of those moments that really makes what you do special," said Patricia Favero, the conservator at The Phillips Collection who pieced together the best infrared image yet of the man's face. "The second reaction was, 'well, who is it?' We're still working on answering that question."

In 2008, improved infrared imagery revealed for the first time a man's bearded face resting on his hand with three rings on his fingers. He's dressed in a jacket and bow tie. A technical analysis confirmed the hidden portrait is a work Picasso likely painted just before "The Blue Room," curators said. After the portrait was discovered, conservators have been using other technology to scan the painting for further insights.

Charitable giving surges for colleges, hospitals; flat for churches, social service groups

NEW YORK (AP) — Wealthy donors are lavishing money on their favored charities, including universities, hospitals and arts institutions, while giving is flat to social service and church groups more dependent on financially squeezed middle-class donors, according to the latest comprehensive report on how Americans give away their money. The Giving USA report, being released Tuesday, said Americans gave an estimated $335.17 billion to charity in 2013, up 3 percent from 2012 after adjustment for inflation. Reflecting the nation's widening wealth gap, some sectors fared far better than others. Adjusted for inflation, giving was up 7.4 percent for education, 6.3 percent for the arts and humanities, and 4.5 percent for health organizations, while giving to religious groups declined by 1.6 percent and giving to social service groups rose by only 0.7 percent. Experts with the Giving USA Foundation and its research partner, the Indiana University Lilly Family School of Philanthropy, said it was the fourth straight year of increased overall giving, and predicted that within two more years the total could match the pre-recession peak of $347.5 billion. During and immediately after the recession, some wealthy donors shifted their giving to social service groups working to combat hunger and homelessness, according to Patrick Rooney, associate dean of the school of philanthropy. Now, many of those donors — including some making multimillion-dollar gifts — are refocusing their attention on higher education, the arts and other sectors long patronized by the affluent, he said.

Residents in tiny northeast Nebraska town brace for cleanup after tornado devastation

PILGER, Neb. (AP) — Residents of Pilger braced for a massive cleanup after a storm with dual tornadoes tore through their tiny northeast Nebraska town, killing a 5-year-old and damaging more than half of the community's structures.

Authorities evacuated Pilger overnight but were expected to let residents return Tuesday morning to survey the damage and gather any immediate valuables. The Stanton County Sheriff's Office said residents would gather at a staging area around 7:15 a.m., where law enforcement would then escort them into town.

The National Weather Service said the two twisters touched down within roughly a mile of each other. Emergency crews and residents spent the evening sifting through demolished homes and businesses in the community of about 350, roughly 100 miles northwest of Omaha. At least 19 people now — that it favors a voluntary route.

Americans eat about $1\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoons of salt daily, about a third more than the government recommends for good health and enough to increase the risk of high blood pressure, strokes and other problems. Most of that sodium is hidden inside common processed foods and restaurant meals.

General Motors recalls 3.4M more cars in North America due to ignition switch problems

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors is recalling another 3 million cars because of a defect that causes a similar problem to one that led to an earlier massive recall of small cars, and is linked to 13 deaths.

The ignition switches in Chevrolet Impalas, Cadillac Devilles and five other models can slip out of the "run" position if the keychain has too much weight on it and the car is jarred, for example, by hitting a pothole. To fix the problem, GM will revise or replace the key.

Similar to the 2.6 million small cars GM began recalling in February, drivers of the newly recalled models could experience an engine stall, loss of power-assisted steering and brakes, and the air bags may not inflate in a crash. GM says the latest recall involves six injuries and no deaths, and is related to the design of the key. A mechanical defect publican governors from oil-and-gas rich states said Monday that new federal rules designed to cut global warming pollution from power plants by 30 percent by 2030 will kill jobs and growth.

Carbon dioxide is the chief gas linked to global warming from U.S. power plants.

But Dalrymple, whose state has enjoyed unprecedented economic growth, said he and Mead recently met for breakfast with EPA Administrator Gina Mc-Carthy and told her that there was no feasible and economic way to capture carbon dioxide.

Bird Poop: Well-meaning kidnappers fitting prelude was the absence of rain. In the previous three years, the declining presence of familiar species had been noticeable. Hardly anyone, however, could have expected the extremes of the summer of 2011.

Instead of moisture, we were inundated with fledglings. Well-meaning individuals were kidnapping youngsters that were away from their nest, but not their parents.

The frantic ringing of our doorbell often signaled a new arrival. Through human error, another specie would have been snatched away from its lessons on survival. Early one morning was yet another squirming, well-feathered bird held inside someone's hand.

By my slightly turning the grayish-brown fledgling, its captor was enabled to see it had a much lighter underbelly. More distinct spotting on its breast and sides as a juvenile would denote this curve-billed thrasher was a member of the thrush family

After noting that its long beak was for capturing insects, I shared the fact that its gaping yellow mouth was nature's way of telling me it was also a songbird.

Hatched from pale blue to bluish-green eggs with tiny spots of brown, the bird would have remained in its nest for at least 18 days. Then eager to be with its parents, it would have begun to fly and learn how to hunt for its food.

In a strange environment, this thrasher had been momentarily inattentive to its surroundings. While trying to mimic its parents' skills, the vital lessons all young birds must experience had been interrupted.

Hoping the person would tell others about the tedious process birds must endure to become successful, I then carried the new arrival through the house and to a large container. A continued lack of parents and avian nurturing would only slow its progress. Needing the company of other thrashers and space for strengthening flight, this bird would soon join others at South Plains in Lubbock.

The days the curvebill stayed with us brought memories of nests we had watched in our side and front yards in previous years. Secreted inside Spanish daggers, the parents had constructed a nurturing environment of twigs, dry grasses, and leaves.

Watching the parents come and go with insects, we knew the nestlings would thrive. The sharp tips of each lengthy leaf dared even the most adventuresome squirrel or cat to approach. To be pierced by these natural weapons was enough of a deterrent.

Often heard but not seen, the curve-billed thrasher appreciates the tops of local mesquites. Its melodious song is often interrupted by a perceived danger. At that time, the bird utters a sharp "whit, whit, whit, wheet."

When borer-like grubs slowly penetrated the girth of these stately giants, the yuccas were suddenly found lying on the ground. With their demise, or so we thought, was the apparent departure of the curve-billed thrashers.

Although we had thought they had deserted our property, we were elated in 2011 to see them relishing the insects they found from our landscaping with crushed granite. Underneath our oaks, acorns and leaves provided only a temporary hiding place for their next meal. They also continued to scour the side yard and its wildflowers.

The delivery of the curve-bill to the wildlife center was to know that when mature, it would be larger than a mockingbird.

Its long tail, dark curved bill, and yellow eyes would add to its distinguishing characteristics. In flight, its buff-white wing bars and the white corners of its tail would be evident.

Eventually, its muscle tone would be strengthened, and its hunting instincts refined and improved. Having been exposed to the more mature thrashers at South Plains, this songbird would imitate their behavior and be seen running and hopping over the ground before taking flight and upon landing. When released it would devour not only insects, but also their larvae.

It would search for fruits and berries. On the ground, it would hunt for grubs and ants by digging with its strong beak while tossing dirt and leaves aside.

After the long drive home and with the turn into our driveway came the realization that our younger Spanish daggers were now gaining in height and width. Perhaps in the future, they would convince the curve-billed thrashers to return to our yard for nesting. Feeling these secretive birds had probably found the thorniest brush in our neighborhood in which to raise their families, we hoped once again to welcome these mobile mysteries.

towns across the northern United States, that's where the best watches were found. Why were the best watches found at the train station? The railroad company wasn't selling the watches but the telegraph operator was.

DARRELL

Most of the time the telegraph operator was located in the railroad station because the telegraph lines followed the railroad tracks from town to town.

It was usually the shortest distance and the right-of-ways had already been secured for the rail line.

Most of the station agents were also skilled telegraph operators and that was the primary way that they communicated with the railroad. They would know when trains left the previous station and when they were due at their next station. And it was the telegraph operator who had the watches. stores combined for a period of about nine years. This was all arranged by "Richard," who was a telegraph operator himself.

He was on duty in the North Redwood, Minn. train station one day when a load of watches arrived from the East. It was a huge crate of pocket watches. No one ever came to claim them.

So Richard sent a telegram to the manufacturer and asked them what they wanted to do with the watches. The manufacturer didn't want to pay the freight back, so they wired Richard to see if he could sell them. So Richard did.

He sent a wire to every agent in the system asking them if they wanted a cheap, but good, pocket watch. He was told he could have the watches for $12 each, so he offered them to the other agents for $14 each. Regular retail was $25.00 each. He sold the entire case in less than two days and at a handsome profit. That started it all.

He ordered more watches from the watch company and encouraged the telegraph operators to set up a display case in the station offering high quality watches for a cheap price to all the travelers. It worked! It didn't take long for the word to spread and, before long, people other than Within six months Richard had made $5,000 and his watch business started and was much greater than his railroad salary.

He moved to Chicago and hired a watchmaker, Alvah, to assist him in his new business. The newly formed watch company grew rapidly into a general mail-order company that used high volumes to enable low prices. It was a recipe perfect for the time, when millions of rural Americans were disgruntled with their general stores. A barrel of flour in 1891 was $3.47 wholesale, according to the company, but $7-plus at a local country store.

The company used comforting ads to overcome farmers' fears. "Don't be afraid that you will make a mistake," read one catalog. "We receive hundreds of orders every day from young and old who never before sent away for goods."

Richard Sears and Alvah Roebuck had cashed in on a new way of shopping and by 1905, their sales had surged past $38 million, passing Montgomery Ward, the Chicago company that had invented the mass mail-order catalog. And you know the rest of the story.

Rose manages team for first time in 25 years

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Pete Rose stood behind the batting cage Monday, joking as former major leaguer Joe Mather hit ball after ball to center field during batting practice for the Bridgeport Bluefish. "I asked him, 'What are you working on, a sacrifice fly?"" Rose said.

Charlie Hustle's jersey was too big and he was wearing slacks as he exchanged lineup cards Butch Hobson at home plate. But Rose was back in his element, managing a baseball team, if just for one day.

The 73-year-old whose 4,256 hits are the most in major league history served as guest skipper for the Bluefish of the independent Atlantic League during their 2-0 win over the Lancaster (Pennsylvania) Barnstormers. He also coached first base for innings.

The game at the 5,300seat stadium was his first managing job since 1989, when as the skipper of the Cincinnati Reds he agreed to a lifetime ban from Major League Baseball for betting on baseball. He later admitted that he bet on Reds games while running the team.

Rose could take this one-game job because the Bluefish are not afleague team. He said the appearance wasn't about bringing attention to the ban or getting reinstated.

Rose said he would never consider managing an independent league team full-time.

Spurs could stick around, even if Duncan decides to go

SAN ANTONIO (AP) never believed it was — Tim Duncan conducted his postgame interview flanked by his two children. Someday soon he may decide that they, and not Tony Parker and Manu Ginobili, will be his fulltime running mates.

Longhorns oust Cards from CWS, 4-1

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) â A workmanlike victory over Louisville has Texas coach Augie Garrido confident his Longhorns are in the right frame of mind to make a deep run at the College World Series.

Parker French and Travis Duke limited the Cardinals to four hits, and Texas manufactured runs in three straight innings to win 4-1 in an elimination game Monday.

The performance eased Garrido's concern about his team's state of mind after a 3-1 loss to UC Irvine in Saturday's CWS opener.

The Longhorns (44-20) ended a four-game CWS losing streak dating to 2009 and will play UC Irvine in another elimination Wednesday. game have been married for four vears. In that time, we have split up twice, and it wasn't pretty either time. We have kids together. I pushed getting married when I became pregnant at 19. Then he claimed to fall out of love with me, stopped coming home after work and began treating me like his maid. So I left and took our child. He followed me and swore he'd do better. The second time we split, we fought so much that things were being thrown, and our throats were sore from screaming at each other. For the (now two) kids' sake, I said we can't keep fighting and left again.

Dear Annie: I

Here's the problem now. While we were separated. I fell deeply in love with a married man. We would talk about our troubled lives and build each other up. Every time I see him, the feeling is like thunder in my heart. But for the sake of our marriages and our children, we went back to our spouses. That was mainly his choice, and although I hung on his every word with disappointment, I agreed.

It's been a year since my husband and I

reconciled, and I stopped speaking to the other man. But I wake up with him on my mind, and he's in my thoughts 24/7. What's wrong with me? -- Guilty Conscience Dear Guilty: It's understandable that you miss the way the other man made you feel, especially because your marriage still seems shaky. However, you have made a commitment to your relationship (and the other man has done the same for his), and you must try to find a way to redirect your emotional energy back to your husband. Problems within a marriage do not magically disappear. Please get counseling, with or without your husband, and work on the issues that undermine your focus. Do it for your children, if not for yourself.

Dear Annie: Who is responsible for the headings on your column? The one I read the other day said, "Son can't get pass his anxiety issues." If it is someone on your team of editors, please tell them the correct word is "past." -- C.W.

Dear C.W.: Normally, we would direct editing questions (and spelling mistakes and other such errors) to our editors. However, we receive so many questions about the headings above our column that we would like our readers to know that the headlines, good or bad, are written by someone at your local newspaper. This is not an easy assignment. We think these folks do an outstanding job, and we'd like to take this opportunity to thank them. Of course, that doesn't mean an occasional mistake doesn't slip through. If the mistakes happen frequently, you can write or phone your newspaper and mention it.

Dear Annie: This is in response to "Concerned Grandparents," who complained that their daughter and her husband are poor housekeepers.

I have high standards of cleanliness, but am completely unable to attain them. My mother-in-law is horrified that our home is not pristine. I have five children. Imagine the clutter: shoes, coats, sports equipment, you name it! We also have pets and farm animals. We do not have many closets, and we do our best to have organizational systems. There is certainly no mold or bugs, but life is exhausting, and we are trying to enjoy some of it.

"Concerned" says that her daughter does not invite people into her home. I wonder whether the daughter got tired of being berated and stopped inviting the in-laws. That's what happened to me. I would recommend that "Concerned" be more understanding of the situation and perhaps take the kids for an outing so that the parents have a chance to organize without mess-makers underfoot. My kids are learning to clean, but it certainly isn't up to my mother-in-law's standards. -- Busy Mom

Lunar Art Quest

Some say they can't live without beauty, that they need it to live as much as they need food. What do you think? Is beauty the fuel that keeps you producing and creating? If so, you will find sympathizers, allies and new sources of loveliness once the moon slips into artistic Pisces this afternoon. Make beauty your quest this evening.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). It truly is better to receive criticism than praise. It doesn't feel better. In fact. it sometimes stings. But it makes you better, and therefore, it's a far greater gift. Count on it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You'll either be filling a position or assessing the choice you made to fill it. Bad habits can be corrected or compensated for, so don't be too quick to judge today's imperfect contenders.

HOLIDAY

CANCER (June 22-MATHIS July 22). Maybe you don't have to fight for freedom in the same way that your ancestors did, but you're still fighting for it in some way -- a way that will be important to your ancestors.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Today feels like a game of limbo in which you're being asked to bend backward as far as you can without hitting the limit or falling down. You're flexible, indeed but should they really be asking this much of you?

there will be time to get it think about whom you all in.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). People say that internalizing emotions isn't good for you, but you have your own sense of timing and will open up only when you are good and ready. Much depends on your decisions about whom you can trust.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You will attract that which you focus on. It's like you know what you were meant for and are perfectly aligned with having it. Therefore, the day's challenge feels like a no-brainer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You'll work well with people who are very different from you. You can be quite productive together without sharing the same sensibilities. You'll mesh in interesting ways.

might run into and what you might small talk about.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You don't expect the energy to center on you, and yet it will -maybe because you have so much to give these days and the others are eager to check that out.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). There is no point in trying to make your life predictable. It can only be as predictable as the rest of the world, whose predictability level varies between delightfully spontaneous and mildly chaotic.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY

(June 17). Go on and tackle the goal you weren't quite able to reach last year. You're smarter this time around, and your hard work will 30, 11, 28, 37 and 1.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "My wife is a Taurus, and I'm a Sagittarius. She believes that money is meant to be spent and that if you have extra money after you've earned enough to survive you should use it to enjoy your life.

"I believe that material things don't make your life better; in fact, they make it worse. Everything you buy makes you spiritually heavier, and the accumulation of things is like a jail cell. You have to maintain all of this stuff, and you're not free anymore. You have to think twice before you decide to go off on an adventure because 'who will guard the house and take care of the pets?' You can't up and move anywhere because you have 10 tons of stuff, and

"stuff" to her. Try to be sensitive to the material expression of her values as you come up with a financial plan that suits both of you. If you can agree on a plan and stick to it, you will once again feel free.

CELEBRITY

PROFILES: "Duck Dynasty" was the highest rated show on television last year, which changed the life of Gemini reality star Sadie Robertson in interesting ways. She even got to sing with Alison Krauss on her family Christmas album, Duck the Halls: A Robertson Family Christmas. Her sun and Mercury in Gemini indicates quick wit, bright levity and a communicative personality. Sadie is happiest when talking and sharing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You are so full of information and ideas that it will be hard to hold anything back. Good news, though: If you give away everything you know, it comes back to vou threefold.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). What you do to work out your mind will be just as crucial to your well-being as what you do to work out your body. Because you plan so well,

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Forethought leads to good business. Avoid forgetting the name of someone you should know well. Before leaving for an event, culminate in an August win. July sees you buying or selling something big. Sweet connections become dearer in September. Friends will envy your position in October. Taurus and Virgo people adore you. Your lucky numbers are:

it's too much of a hassle.

"I feel trapped. How can my wife and I come together on this?"

As the sign of money, Taurus has an appreciation for quality things and will assign deeper meaning to them than you do. It's not just Opening lead — five of spades.

It is not unusual for declarer to have more than one way to play a hand. Usually he makes his choice by relying on percentages or on information gained from the opponents' bidding or play. Of course, if he could see the defenders' cards, he would have no problem.

Regardless of the factors on which declarer bases his play, one constant is always present: He always dismisses from consideration those distributions that render the contract unmakable. He also ignores those hands where his play makes no difference. Instead, he concentrates on cases where what he decides to do can make or break the contract.

Here is a typical case. South is in three notrump, and West leads a spade, on which East plays the ten. Let's first assume declarer wins with the king and tries a club finesse. East takes the king and returns a spade, and South goes down two.

But declarer makes the contract if he ducks the ten of spades. That's what he'd do if he saw the adverse cards, but, more importantly, it's what he should do even if he doesn't see them.

Why? Because by ducking he succeeds when the spades are divided 6-2 and East has the king of clubs. This is because East won't have a spade to return after he takes the club king.

South likewise succeeds if the spades are divided 4-4, in which case what he does doesn't really matter, since the defenders can't score more than three spades and a club.

Finally, if West has five spades and East three, the duck again does no harm, though it does no good either. Assuming best defense, declarer can't make three notrump if the spades are 5-3 and East has the club king, since West would duck the spade return at trick two and eventually defeat the contract.

WNBA rookie class already making an impact

NEW YORK (AP) -Chiney Ogwumike keeps an eye on games around the WNBA. Not just to see how her sister Nneka is doing, but also to check out her fellow rookies.

Sitting on the bus to the WNBA draft this April, Ogwumike and the other first-year players really bonded. Then again, most of them have known each other for years competing as teammates and opponents in high school, AAU and college.

"Our class, we've known each other for a long time," said Ogwumike, who was selected No. 1 overall by Connecticut. "We definitely have personality in our class. We talked about leading our teams, and we give each other advice. I do root for them."

So much hype surrounded the 2013 rookie class led by Brittney Griner, Elena Delle Donne and Skylar Diggins that it would have been nearly impossible for that group to live up to expectations in its first season. This year's crop of first-year players faces the same challenge.

"Not having the big name helps," said Ogwumike, who is averaging 16.5 points and 8.5 rebounds — most among rookies. "That's different, we don't have that. There's no pressure on me per se. I'm at an organization that I feel really comfortable with. Failure is helping you learn. That makes you sort of fearless."

Ogwumike and fellow rookie Alyssa Thomas have the Sun on a roll lately with wins in four straight games.

So far this season, 23 rookies have played in a game, that's the sixth most over the last decade according to STATS and the season is only a third of the way done.

"It's been fun to watch everyone go out there and show what they can do," said Atlanta's Shoni Schimmel, who is averaging 5.4 assists — fifth best in the league. "We did some impressive things in college and we're all trying to adjust to being professional basketball players."

General managers and coaches throughout the league saw this year's class as a talented group that could supplement teams, but didn't expect many players to make immediate impacts.

"I'm pleasantly surprised by the way they've played so far across the league," San Antonio Stars coach and general manager Dan Hughes said. "We've seen a few of them already and they've been difference makers."

Hughes has his own young star in Kayla McBride, whom the Stars took with the third pick in the draft. She's averaging 11.8 points and already had a 30-point effort this season.

McBride became the 18th rookie to reach that scoring mark.

Cav's Irving tries hand at baseball

CLEVELAND (AP) -Cavaliers All-Star point guard Kyrie Irving tried his hand at baseball, at least for one night.

Irving took fly balls and participated in batting practice with the Cleveland Indians before Monday's game against the Los Angeles Angels. Irving, wearing an Indians No. 2 batting practice jersey with his name on the back, dressed in an empty locker in Cleveland's clubhouse before taking the field.

Irving was greeted warmly by several of Cleveland's players. He was hugged by Nick Swisher, who referred to him as "Uncle Drew," the character Irving plays on television commercials. Irving also received a glove from Mike Aviles and a bat from Michael Bourn to go along with some good-natured pointers on how to handle himself when he was on the field. After listening for several minutes, Irving laughed and said, "Let's take this slow, guys."

Irving autographed a Duke basketball jersey for pitcher Trevor Bauer, who started Monday's game. Irving also threw out the first pitch to outfielder Michael Brantley and was given a loud ovation when introduced.

Irving's future with the Cavaliers is one of several issues the team will deal with this summer. Cleveland must decide whether to offer him a maximum, five-year contract extension next month.

The Cavaliers have the No. 1 pick in this month's draft and are also still searching for a new coach to replace Mike Brown.
