Howard County Judge Mark Barr listens to comments during the Howard County Commissioners' meeting Monday morning.

Officials mull jail expansion

By STEVE REAGAN
 Staff Writer

Officials are eyeing possible expansion of the Howard County Jail. During their Monday meeting, county commissioners discussed seeking a "variance" from the state jail commission which would be the first step toward expanding the jail by as many as 12 beds. Howard County's jail, while relatively new, is getting crowded. The 96-bed facility has been near capacity at several times the past few months, and officials don't see a likely decrease in the number of prisoners at the jail anytime soon.

The county jail is legally bound to operate with 96 beds, officials said. A "variance," in this context, is basically the jail commission giving its approval to a jail expansion plan.

Howard County Judge Mark Barr doesn't anticipate any trouble receiving the variance, but added it comes with a catch.

"If you apply for a variance, you're showing the jail commission you're dead set on adding beds to your jail," Barr said. "If you don't expand, the commission will take the variance away from you after six months."

Adding the additional beds to the jail won't be cheap — Barr said the expansion would cost just shy of $2 million — but would greatly ease fears of overcrowding at the facility.

"Twelve beds would help tremendously," Barr said. "The biggest trouble we're having right now is with the jail's female population. With the boom ... we're also seeing an increase in

Commissioners consider speed limit for county road

By STEVE REAGAN
 Staff Writer

A speed limit likely is in store for a Howard County road. County commissioners reacted favorably during their Monday meeting to a request by County Engineer Brian Klinksiek to post a 35-mph speed limit on Oil Mill Road, a horseshoe-shaped street that connects State Highway 176 with the north service road of Interstate 20. Currently Oil Mill has no posted speed limit, meaning drivers can go as fast as 65 mph on the roadway. Klinksiek said he agreed with a resident's request for the speed limit. "That area is getting a lot of traffic," Klinksiek said. "And the road runs by the city's sports complex. A lot of people park there and there's always kids running around." Commissioners took no formal action on the request Monday. Officials will publish a public notice on the matter and action is anticipated within the next few weeks. In other action, commissioners approved: • A contract with the Department of Public Safety secretary in Martin County.

Police putting citizens on notice about scam

Special to the Herald

Recently, the Big Spring Police Department has received complaints from citizens regarding a phone scam. BSPD officials said the complaints are regarding phone calls people are receiving from subjects who claim to be law enforcement officers. "They tell the citizen that they have missed a court date and owe fines and attempt to collect those fines over the phone," a news release stated. "Neither the police department nor the Howard County Sheriff's Office are contacting citizens about fines." If you receive one of these calls listen carefully to the name and agency given. Do not give any personal information to the callers.

Washington school shooter remembered with victims

By GENE JOHNSON
 Associated Press

MARYSVILLE, Wash. — Among the balloons and flowers tied to the chain-link fence outside Marysville-Pilchuck High School are these: a white wrestling shoe; a youth football team photo, with one player encased in a red-marker heart; and a candle covered with a plastic cup bearing the name "Jaylen." They are all tributes to Jaylen Fryberg, the popular 15-year-old freshman who texted five friends to invite them to lunch Friday and then gunned them down at a table in the school's cafeteria. Two girls died in the attack, and three other students — including two of Fryberg's cousins — were gravely wounded. Fryberg died after shooting himself. While families or friends of shooting victims sometimes express sympathy or forgiveness for the perpetrators, the notion of a mass shooter being memorialized alongside his victims is unusual, experts say. It speaks to the unique grief this community is feeling, even in a nation where such horrors are becoming ever more common.

"Usually there's so much anger and frustration in the aftermath, and generally the shooter is not someone who was this loved over time," said Carolyn Reinach Wolf, a mental health attorney who studies mass shootings. "This is a very different response. Some of that is a credit to the community: People are able to get past the grief of the victims and see that the shooter's family is grieving and horrified just as much."

Fryberg, a football player who was named a prince on the school's homecoming court one week before the killings, was a member of a prominent Tulalip Indian Tribes family. He seemed happy, although he was also upset about a girl, friends said. His Twitter feed was recently full of vague, anguished postings, such as "It won't last ... It'll never last," and "I should have listened. ... You were right ... The whole time you were right."

On Friday, he pulled out a handgun in the cafeteria and started shooting. The victims were Zoe R. Galasso, 14, who died at the scene; Gia Soriano, 14, who died at a hospital Sunday night; Shaylee Chuckulnaskit, 14, who is in critical condition; and his cousins, Nate Hatch, 14, and Andrew Fryberg, 15.

Andrew Fryberg also remained in critical condition. Hatch, who was shot in the jaw, is the only victim who has shown improvement. He was upgraded to satisfactory condition Monday in intensive care at Harborview Medical Center in Seattle, where he posted a message of forgiveness on Twitter.

"I love you and I forgive you Jaylen rest in peace," he wrote. A friend confirmed the feed's authenticity to The Associated Press.

Wolf said she urges parents, teachers and others to look for changes in children that could indicate something is wrong — such as Fryberg's Twitter postings.

"I'm very big on training people to watch for the change, watch for the red flags," she said. "Yes, he was popular, but there came a time when something changed. If people are educated to look for those, these are things they can do intervene."

Dan Gross, president of the Brady Center to Prevent Gun Violence, said the Marysville shooting fit a pattern: In two-thirds of school shootings nationally, the attacker used a gun from their own home or from a relative. Authorities have confirmed the gun was legally owned by one of Fryberg's relatives; it's not clear how he got it.

"There's a fine line between suicide and school shooting," Gross said. "We've talked to many parents whose kids took their own lives who say to us there were no warning signs. But there's a risk just by being an adolescent and going through a break-up or other kind of crisis — you have what's often a fleeting thought of suicide, and access to a weapon that's at your disposal to make it happen."

The Snohomish County medical examiner on Monday ruled Fryberg's death a suicide. There had been some question over whether he might have shot himself accidentally as a teacher tried to intervene, but Snohomish County Sheriff Ty Trenary said there was no physical contact between the teacher and the gunman.

At the memorial outside the school Monday, a group of mourners hugged each other tightly at 10:39 a.m. — the minute the shooting was reported Friday. Flowers and signs were zip-tied to a chain-link fence lined with red and white balloons, reflecting the school's colors. Many referenced the victims and said they would be missed.

"Jaylen where do I begin, you were my brother my best friend love you bro," read one message scrawled on a balloon.

"Jaylen, I will never forget you and your beautiful smile," read another.

Rows of plastic cups covered candles for each of the students — Fryberg included.

the number of female prisoners."

The good news, financially speaking, is that the jail was built with expansion in mind — "In fact, we can expand one more time after that if we need to," Barr said — and officials would not have to hire any additional personnel to oversee the extra prisoners, two factors which would mitigate expansion costs to a degree.

Barr said county officials have tentatively scheduled Feb. 6 as the date they will travel to Austin to speak to jail commission representatives about a variance.

Solution -- If Weirdly had been asleep in the tub for the last hour, the water would not be steaming hot, and there probably would not be the present volume of bubbles.

Bird Poop: A farmer's avian harvest

A trip to the wildlife center the first week of October was an opportunity to rejoice in the successful farmland crops this year. Fields of sorghum would attract wintering sandhill cranes. Acres of cotton were either green leaved or defoliated. The latter led one to imagine they were snow capped amid the ninety-degree weather. Sunflower plantings offered a brilliant yellow against brown fields that lay fallow. With the elderly trees beside the road offering a hint of change in their leaves, the drive to Lubbock was colorful.

On our return trip, we noticed cotton strippers amid the brown stalks that offered their bolls of white fluff. It reminded us of another fall, another harvest.

In Midland County, equipment had come to life. It had been questionable as to whether the crew would work that day. But with a delayed rain forecast, the farmer made his decision: Strip the cotton.

Gathering row after row left bare stubble to guard against wintry winds. As the farmer's stripper turned toward the few remaining furrows, the glaring late afternoon sun was momentarily blinding. After regaining his vision, he drove the massive equipment forward.

To see something suddenly standing between the rows ahead made him wonder what it could be.

During previous harvests, he had noticed that cotton-tails, and especially ground squirrels, would often stretch themselves upward when they saw equipment coming their way. So thin they appeared to look like sticks was their way of reacting to a perceived danger.

Inner feelings prompted him to stop, climb down, and walk toward the critter. Anticipating a scurrying departure, he was startled when the object fluttered clumsily between the nearest plants.

Realizing it was a bird, and possibly injured, he concentrated on its every move. To lose it amid the rows of cotton left to harvest might insure injury or death by its being caught within the stripper's unrelenting jaws.

He waited, then took a step, and waited again. The bird didn't move. If he could continue this approach, he might have a chance to grab it.

When he felt he was close enough, he realized the only thing he had to use was his cap. After extending his arm with the bill grasped tightly in his fingers, he eased one foot forward.

This slight movement caused the bird to sidle out of the plants and into an open furrow. By the time his knees sank into the dirt his cap had pressed the bird to the ground.

Startled and trapped, it began to protest with shrill, ear-piercing screams. Having pushed the edges of his cap under and around the bird helped contain its wiggly body and flailing talons until he could climb back into the cab.

Old rags, supplied by his wife for whatever emergency

Although duller in color than her counterpart, the female American kestrel is longer, has a wider wingspan, and out-weighs any potential mate.

or task he encountered, were soon offering a quiet, dark area in which to rest. The haven of cloth the man created allowed air, and movement, while still confining the bird.

A call from Parks & Wildlife alerted us of a small hawk that would be brought to them early the next morning.

From the description of size, coloration, beak, and talons, we guessed it was probably a female, American kestrel.

Before leaving to pick it up, we made the decision to ferry it on to Lubbock if it appeared releasable in the future. After taking it out of a carrier, I extended its narrow, pointed wings. No obvious breaks were found. Its wingspan of nearly 24 inches would allow it to hover and glide with ease. Noticeable, however, were some feathers missing from the left wing near the wrist. Skin had also been scrapped.

Assuming that the little falcon was in the process of healing when the farmer discovered it, we felt it would benefit from an aviary and flight cage during its recovery. Temporarily unable to fly and hunt for its natural food of mice, grasshoppers, and sparrows, the kestrel was fortunate to have been found.

Colored in a rusty hue, with black barring on her wings, back, and tail, this smallest of our country's falcons had a buff-colored breast and belly that had streaks with a cinnamon shade leading downward. Accenting her cheeks were two black, vertical stripes. Her crown was gray.

At South Plains, the prognosis had been good.

Recovery was assured. The farmer's finding the kestrel had been fortuitous.

To have recalled an earlier October was also to reminisce about the times before the use of defoliants and later harvest seasons. Stripping was dependent upon a hard freeze, followed by colder weather, and waning daylight.

One year, we had been given an arduous task. Knee to waist-high cotton stalks in fields around St. Lawrence were overwhelming. In a sea of white stretching for miles, we had been asked to search for a lone whooping crane in the frigid aftermath of an early November storm.

Singing the praise/of long-gone days/Burma Shave

When I was a kid, I was amused by signs along the highway, almost everywhere we went. They were Burma Shave advertisements, and nearly everyone enjoyed them so much that as you began to pass them along the roadway you would not hesitate to read them, even if you had read them many times before.

Such signs said: If you dislike/ big traffic fines / slow down/ so you can read/ these signs /Burma Shave. I recently saw an advertisement that reminded me of the Burma Shave signs, so I decided to do some research. This is what I discovered.

In 1925, people were beginning to do a lot of traveling because of the new invention called the automobile, and folks were taking to the roadways. The Burma Shave company was in financial difficulty, so they decided to try a new advertisement gimmick called roadway signs, and set their very first signs on the two roads leading out of Minneapolis.

Shortly afterwards Burma Shave sales began to flourish and it was determined that the increased sales were from the road signs, so the company incorporated and 49 percent of the stock was sold to raise capital. Within three weeks, the shares had been sold, and by early 1926 the first sign shop was set up.

The signs continued to bring success and became more and more humorous. The entertaining signs helped make long journeys more enjoyable, and people became addicted to reading them.

By having the rhymes build suspense until the final sign, Burma Shave forced their readers to focus their attention on reading the full series of signs so that the message could be understood and savored like a good joke. Such as: The bearded lady/ tried a jar/She's now/a famous/movie star/ Burma Shave

Eventually, the signs spread to every state, with a few exceptions. No "official" signs appeared in Arizona, New Mexico or Nevada because of low traffic density. Massachusetts received no signs because winding roads and excessive foliage made it hard to find enough locations to justify placing them there.

The slogans were so powerful that the Burma Shave Company did not even feel the effects of the Depression. The rhymes aimed at motivating potential purchasers of Burma Shave were not just cute, but were probably some of the best advertising slogans ever written.

It is said that all good things must come to an end, and this was the case with Burma Shave. There were a number of factors that led to the decline of the product. After World War II, increasing costs and decreasing sales began to be felt by the company. People were travelling faster on the highways and times were changing.

The signs just weren't working anymore, and the company started to advertise with other media.

The final end to the roadside rhymes came in 1963, when the company was sold to Phillip Morris. The decision was made to remove all the signs as soon as possible.

And so, the demise of an American institution; however, a set of signs was donated to the Smithsonian Institution to preserve this part of Americana. It was fun while it lasted and we can still remember: Within this vale/ Of toil and sin/Your head grows bald/But not your chin/Burma Shave.

Opening lead — ten of hearts.

Most players would rather be the declarer than a defender — largely because they find declarer's role more interesting. But a defender's role is frequently crucial, and on many deals good defense will overcome declarer's best efforts.

Consider this case where West led the ten of hearts against five diamonds. Declarer won with dummy's king, played a spade to the ace, led the nine of diamonds and finessed. East took the nine with the ace and returned the queen of hearts!

This was the killing play. Any other return — whether a spade, a club or a low heart — would have allowed South to win in his hand, repeat the diamond finesse and so make the contract. The only two tricks for the defense would have been East's two minor-suit aces.

But the queen-of-hearts return left South without recourse. Forced to win the heart in dummy, he had no ready-made way of returning to his hand to take another trump finesse.

If he played a club from dummy (his best shot), East would rise with the ace and play a third heart to convert West's queen of trumps into the setting trick. And if declarer tried to ruff a heart instead, West would likewise score the queen of trumps.

Granting that East's play was spectacular, it was nevertheless based on sound reasoning. He knew that West had the queen of diamonds. It would not have made sense for South to lead a spade to his ace at trick two had he held the Q-J of trumps. He would have led a diamond from dummy instead.

When East took the ace of diamonds, he knew that his only hope was to play West for a singleton heart, or a doubleton heart and the Q-x-x of diamonds. Since in the latter case a low heart return would not do the job if South had the nine, East very properly returned the queen.

Tomorrow: Playing the percentages.

Lady Steers look to get back on track today

By TOMMY WELLS
Sports Editor

For the Big Spring Lady Steers, the 2014 volleyball season comes down to a simple mathematical formula: 1=1(t)+ or 0=2v.3+.

It might seem odd, but a win tonight could give Big Spring a share of the District 2-4A lead and force a one-game district playoff with Levelland to determine the No. 1 playoff seed. A loss, on the other hand, would in all likelihood, give Big Spring the No. 2 seed and a showdown against the No. 3 seed from the District 1-4A race.

Playoff positions, however, wasn't the main thing on the mind of BSHS head coach Lynn Osborne as she went into the Lady Steers' final two games.

"We have to take care of these regular season games," she said on Friday.

Big Spring, one of three District 2-4A teams that could finish the season with 20-win campaigns, will try and clinch a share of the 2-4A title this evening against the Sweetwater Lady Mustangs. The game will be at 6 p.m. in the Sweetwater High School gymnasium.

Sweetwater, which has already locked up the No. 3 playoff berth, rolls into the showdown fresh off a 3-0 win

The Lady Steers, too, are on a role. Big Spring, 19-18 overall, have won nine of their last 10 outings, including eight of nine in district play. In district, the BSHS girls have lost just four sets while putting together a 27-4 margin.

Big Spring will be led into the game by seniors Erin Pollard and Leksey Yarbar. Pollard, who recorded seven blocks in Big Spring's 25-22, 25-23, 25-13 victory over the Snyder on Friday.

The freshmen and JV teams will start tonight's action at 5 p.m.

Trinidad Ramirez turned in a pair of solid outings in the 50-yard freestyle and the 100-yard breaststroke this past Saturday and led the Big Spring High School swim team to a sixth-place finish at the Monahans Invitational Swim Meet.

Ramirez splashed his way to a fourth-place in the 50-yard freestyle race with a time of 25.82 seconds, and took fourth in the 100-yard breaststroke race with a mark of 1:13.98.

Myles Jones added to the boys' efforts by finishing sixth in the 100-yard freestyle. He turned in a time of 58.99 seconds.

Overall, the BSHS boys scored 40 points.

The Lady Steers swim team rolled up 52 points in the meet and also garnered sixth.

Shasta Phipps paced the BSHS girls individually by taking sixth in the 100-yard backstroke race. She also finished 11th in the 200 freestyle.

Angelica Delgado was 13th in the 200 freestyle and 16th in the 50-yard freestyle, while teammate Michelle Webb swam to a 10th-place finish in the 5- and a 13th-place mark in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Steers' take third at Area team tennis meet

Big Spring's Fall Team Tennis season came to a close in Lubbock at the Area Team Tennis Tournament held Oct. 23-24.

Thursday's play was one-and-done with all teams competing having to win every match in order to qualify to play the second day. Big Spring defeated Pampa 10-2 in Thursday's afternoon match to advance to the semifinals on Friday.

Friday morning's opponent was Snyder, the district champion. Big Spring lost to Snyder in a hard-fought match, 10-4, a very similar outcome.

In Friday afternoon's third-place match, Big Spring faced off against Levelland, a team to whom Big Spring had lost in district play earlier this season by a 13-6 margin. This time, the Steers turned the tables on the Lobos, winning a very closely contested match, 10-8 to become the Area alternate.

"We have worked hard on our doubles play," said BSHS coach Dana Jones. "The first time we played Levelland, we were down 5-2 after doubles. Today, we were up 4-3. That gave us a shot to win

Redskins end Cowboys' 6-game streak

ARLINGTON (AP) — Colt McCoy did it again. The small-town West Texas kid calmly led a winning drive at the home of the Dallas Cowboys.

McCoy's successful return to his home state trumped Tony Romo's dramatic return to the game.

McCoy directed Washington to Kai Forbath's 40-yard field goal in overtime and Dallas was unable to answer after Romo came back from an injury to his surgically repaired back, sending the Redskins to a 20-17 victory on Monday night that snapped the Cowboys' six-game winning streak.

Playing in Dallas' stadium for the first time since his Texas-record 45th victory in the 2009 Big 12 championship game against Nebraska — 13-12 on a last-play field goal — McCoy won in his first NFL start in nearly three years after beginning the night with a career record of 6-15.

"Last-second wins, right?" McCoy said, laughing. "But I grew up as the game went on. I felt more and more comfortable and I started seeing the defense right. We made some plays down the stretch that good teams have to make to win games."

It might be McCoy's only start if Robert Griffin III is ready to return from a dislocated ankle that has sidelined him since Week 2. The Redskins go to Minnesota on Sunday, and then have their bye week.

"Robert's our starter," coach Jay Gruden said. "I haven't wavered off of that in my mind. When he's ready, he'll be ready to go."

The Cowboys (6-2) had one last chance after Forbath's kick, but didn't get a first down. Romo's final pass on fourth down was knocked away by Bashaud Breeland.

Dallas running back DeMarco Murray extended the record he took from Jim Brown a week ago with his eighth straight 100-yard rushing game to start the season. He had 141 yards rushing and another 80 receiving, but also had his fifth fumble of the season at the end of a 36-yard screen pass inside the Washington 10 in the first half.

"Well, it's terribly disappointing," owner Jerry Jones said. "Jay Gruden and his staff, their organization, they came in here and took it to us and they won the game. We couldn't get it done."

Romo left after getting sacked by Keenan Robinson in the third quarter. He lay motionless for several minutes but returned for the final

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: When I was a teenager, one of my cousins tried to molest me when we were at our grandmother's house. He tried to force a kiss on me and said because I was older, I should learn about sex and teach it to him. I fought him off.

KATHY MITCHELL
MARCY SUGAR

I was afraid to tell our grandmother, because she would have been so upset. Grandma is gone now. The problem is, this cousin told his parents I tried to molest him. Consequently, they have treated me terribly. His mother told me she didn't want me around her daughter because I might hurt her. She is nasty and belligerent around me, even now. I don't like that they have repeated this false accusation to other relatives, telling them I am a bad person. I don't think talking to my cousin would get me anywhere. Should I speak to my uncle about what happened, even at this point in time? -- Concerned

Dear Concerned: We hope you have told your parents, as well as your aunt and uncle, the truth about this accusation. It's not uncommon for young cousins to "practice" on each other, and it's very likely that your overly hormonal cousin was embarrassed by your reaction and blamed you to deflect his own culpability. It's also understandable that his parents would believe him, especially if you didn't tell your side of the story at the time. If your cousin is an adult now, he might be more amenable to taking responsibility for his actions, especially if you approach him without blame, simply asking him to do the right thing and help you clear this up.

Dear Annie: My wife and I are in our late 50s, married for 30 years, and we have no children. Several years ago, the issue of wills came up. We had different opinions on the way our estate should be divided. The end result is, we still don't have wills or trusts set up.

I think half of the estate should go to my side of the family and half to hers. She thinks more should go to her family because there are more of them. The nieces and nephews on her side are not doing as well financially as those on my side of the family. She also has earned a larger income for most of our marriage, and I'm certain it factors into her thinking, even if she won't voice it. I don't believe that should even be part of the argument.

I'm of the opinion that a marriage is a 50/50 proposition, and this should be no different. My inheritance from my parents went right into our account with no question, and we always have had shared bank accounts. What do you think? -- John inherit from the other, at which point, the deciding vote belongs to the surviving spouse. Please consult with an attorney who specializes in estate law and can help you sort through the "yours, mine, ours" aspect of your assets and distribute them in the most equitable way.

Dear John: You're missing one small reality: Unless you and your wife die together, one of you will

Dear Annie: The recent letters you've printed about children being disruptive in church have prompted me to offer a different view.

Several years ago, I was fortunate to be in a church service (Lutheran) in Mexico, and there I saw an entirely different approach. The children were allowed to wander freely around the sanctuary, run up and down the aisles, and, well, be children. Yes, they made a little noise, but not that much, and they were actually happy to be in church, rather than viewing it as something to be endured.

Maybe it's not the children who are the problem, but the adults who have unrealistic expectations of how children should behave. Should we not all "make a joyful noise"? -- An Old Grouch

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Showing up is enough today. If you can show up strong, all the better, but you don't have to. Take the pressure off, because you'll make a difference by simply checking in where you're supposed to.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Even the most skeptical person can benefit from some kind of faith. Think of your faith as a muscle that needs exercise. There is no shortage of unknowable things to believe in. Choose a few of your favorites and invest some faith.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Overgeneralization is a dangerous habit to watch out for in yourself and others. Nothing is all one way. Nuzzle up to life's ambiguities today because they will help you understand the very thing that will enrich you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Your rational mind leads the way for most of the day, but by evening this side of your brain is ready to take a break. That's when the emotional person inside will call out for comfort and security.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). It's pointless to anticipate the next cycle of life or the one after that, because the cycle you're in requires so much attention. Don't let yourself rush ahead in fear or excitement. Stay here. Here needs you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You have incredible powers of discipline in a certain area of your life and practically none in others. You'll have willpower to apply elsewhere when you stop needing so much of it to keep up with your regular life.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Oct. 28). You'll mature into a new stage of life in which you feel more powerful and independent. The special events that pepper the end of the year (concerts, parties, family gatherings) will make it so memorable. A dear friend will open professional or social doors for you in November. There's a windfall in May and August. Cancer and Libra people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 50, 2, 43, 19 and 16.

NEPTUNE UPDATE: Yesterday Neptune was in a trined position to Venus, and today the sea god of the sky will make the same kind of aspect with the sun. So what's it mean to us?

Consider that Venus is doing her runway model strut through Scorpio these days, and true to the current fashion ethos, she's not smiling. Her confident gait in this realm of the sky is self-assured, magnetic and maybe a bit intimidating. Venus in Scorpio would rather come off as ferocious than approachable; she'd rather be mysterious than cute.

The Scorpio sun has a similar intensity, and as Neptune comes into the same 120-degree angle with the sun as he did yesterday to Venus, the question we can extrapolate from this cosmic arrangement gets personal: How would you like to come off? How do you want people to perceive you? What do you want them to feel when they interact with you?

The current Neptune arrangement will help you figure out what social and aesthetic choices you might make to create just the effect you wish to have, or at least to experiment with your image and come a little closer to that result.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Superstar and producer Julia Roberts will join Gwyneth Paltrow in the upcoming film "The Secret in Their Eyes," a remake of the Oscar-winning Argentine film. Roberts is a Scorpio born when Mercury and Neptune were also in the magnetic sign. Five strong Virgo luminaries in her natal chart suggests that her work ethic is unparalleled and that she is happiest and healthiest in action.

Sun Trine Neptune

Neptune guides the realm of vision and in Pisces is particularly creative and spiritually aligned. Real insights are coming together as the sun and Neptune form the same 120-degree angle that occurred yesterday between Venus and Neptune. Strong themes around identity and self-esteem will be carried out in the hours and days to come.

HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Unexpected additions and requests are bound to make this day busier than expected. When the choice is between waiting and hustling, hustle. If you go at the suggested pace, you'll already be behind.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). They might not talk openly about it because it's hard to explain, but you might be surprised by how many successful people rely on intuition
