City warns:
Cars, yards do not mix
Officials to start ticketing those not in compliance with parking ordinance

By STEVE REAGAN
 Staff Writer

The grace period is over, the cordial reminders a thing of the past. For those who are still parking their vehicles in their yards, the City of Big Spring is promising that there's no more Mr. Nice Guy.

City Manager Todd Darden said code enforcement inspectors are ready to begin implementing the city council's decision to ban automobiles from front yards, unless they're parked on concrete or gravel driveways.

Darden said inspectors have been putting in plenty of overtime recently identifying violations and more than 170 letters have been sent to homeowners requesting they take steps to remove the vehicles from the yards.

The next step, Darden promised, will be fines. "This is an ordinance the city council spent a lot of time getting right and we feel the time we've given people to get in compliance with the ordinance has been adequate," he said. "Now, we're going to start handing out tickets ... We just want people to know that we won't tolerate this anymore."

Parking your car on an unpaved yard could get very expensive; Darden said the ordinance provides for fines up to $2,000 for repeated violations.

City officials have long complained that front yards littered with cars served as both an eyesore and helped drive down property values. The city has had an anti-yard parking ordinance on the book for several years, but fines were minimal and enforcement was spotty, at best.

"We feel like this has been a blight on our city for too long, and now we're going to do something about it," he said. "Just in case anyone thinks we're being unfair about this, they should know that I had to call a wrecker to tow a car from my mom's front yard."

For more information on the new ordinance, contact city code enforcement at 264-2505.

'Green Eggs and Ham' on the menu as students celebrate Dr. Seuss' birthday

By JULIE BASS
 Staff Writer

The kids at Washington Elementary got to spend Monday celebrating Dr. Seuss' 111th birthday by hearing his stories

Adrian Calvio, of State Farm Insurance, was scheduled to come in later in the week for career day, but when he discovered that the kids would be celebrating Dr. Seuss on Monday, he asked to come in and share in the fun.

"When I found out about the Dr. Seuss reading, I was excited," Calvio said. "I love Dr. Seuss, so I volunteered to come and read. It was a lot of fun."

His choice of book to read to the kids? "Oh, the Places You'll Go."

The second graders got to listen to Calvio read, then he asked them about their own reading and challenged them to read every night. After some questions

NWS forecast:

Enjoy the warm weather — it won't last

Foggy conditions greeted motorists this morning, but fog is expected to be replaced by frigid cold as an arctic front is expected to arrive in this area Wednesday.

The sun should come out today or at least peak out for a bit, according to forecasts, unless Mother Nature decides to be contrary.

And when it comes to Mother Nature, she is rather known for being unpredictable.

Crossroads residents woke up to another foggy morning although the condensed moisture lifted before 9 a.m. today. The National Weather Service is forecasting a mostly cloudy day with a high near 70 degrees. However, the warming trend is not expected to stay very long.

Netanyahu to use bully pulpit in Congress to issue stern warning about Iran nuclear talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is seizing the bully pulpit of the U.S. House to deliver his stern message about the danger Iran poses to his nation's survival and voice reservations about any nuclear deal President Barack Obama and international negotiators might sign with Israel's archenemy.

Netanyahu insists he is privy to emerging details of a deal and is expected to lay out specific concerns in Tuesday's speech to a joint meeting of Congress. It will be a last-ditch effort for Netanyahu to speak out against any agreement that would leave open a chance for Tehran to develop nuclear weapons.

The controversial speech comes just two weeks ahead of a tight national election in which Netanyahu is fighting to hold onto his job. It has already aggravated strained relations between Israel and the Obama administration and it comes as negotiators are rushing to reach a nuclear agreement by the end of the month.

"I plan to speak about an Iranian regime that is threatening to destroy Israel, that's devouring country after country in the Middle East, that's exporting terror throughout the world and that is developing, as we speak, the capacity to make nuclear weapons — lots of them," Netanyahu told America's leading pro-Israel lobby on Monday in what amounted to a warm-up to his speech to Congress.

The Israeli leader is deeply suspicious of international efforts to reach a nuclear deal. Netanyahu fears the U.S. and its negotiating partners will give Iran too many concessions, leaving it on the cusp of developing an atomic bomb.

Body-camera maker has financial ties to police chiefs; questions of influence are raised

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Taser International, the stun-gun maker emerging as a leading supplier of body cameras for police, has cultivated financial ties to police chiefs whose departments have bought the recording devices, raising a host of conflict-of-interest questions.

A review of records and interviews by The Associated Press show Taser is covering airfare and hotel stays for police chiefs who speak at promotional conferences. It is also hiring recently retired chiefs as consultants, sometimes just months after their cities signed contracts with Taser.

Over the past 18 months, Taser has reached consulting agreements with two such chiefs weeks after they retired, and it is in talks with a third who also backed the purchase of its products, the AP has learned.

Taser is planning to send two of them to speak at luxury hotels in Australia and the United Arab Emirates in March at events where they will address other law enforcement officers considering body cameras.

The relationships raise questions of whether chiefs are acting in the best interests of the taxpayers in their dealings with Scottsdale, Arizona-based Taser, whose contracts for cameras and storage systems for the video can run into the millions of dollars.

As the police chief in Fort Worth, Texas, successfully pushed for the signing of a major contract with Taser before a company quarterly sales deadline, he wrote a Taser representative in an email, "Someone should give me a raise."

Mourners line up to view body of slain Russian opposition leader Boris Nemtsov

MOSCOW (AP) — One by one, thousands of mourners and dignitaries filed past the white-lined coffin of slain Kremlin critic Boris Nemtsov on Tuesday, many offering flowers as they paid their last respects to one of the most prominent figures of Russia's beleaguered opposition.

Nemtsov was shot to death late Friday while walking on a bridge near the Kremlin with a companion.

No suspects have been arrested.

The killing has deeply shaken Russia's small and marginalized opposition movement. Many opposition supporters suspect the killing was ordered by the Kremlin in retaliation for Nemtsov's ardent criticism of President Vladimir Putin, while authorities have suggested several possible motives, including a provocation aimed at tarnishing Putin's image.

With an hour to go until the scheduled end of the viewing, the line of mourners stretched for hundreds of meters (yards) and included mourners both young and old.

"He was our ray of light. With his help, I think Russia would have risen up and become a strong country. It is the dream of all progressive people in Russia," said 80-year-old Valentina Gorbatova.

service, another arctic airmass will drop south into the region Wednesday and may bring a mix of rain and sleet for the northern Permian Basin as early as Wednesday morning.

"Some freezing rain may also occur in these areas, but it appears most of the precipitation will fall as sleet or snow especially during the afternoon," according to a special weather bulletin by the National Weather Service.

A mix of rain, sleet or snow could fall on Interstate 20 as the front spreads and continue Wednesday night with wintery weather and freezing precipitation occurring in the Big Bend area before it ends late Wednesday night.

The weather service is forecasting a possible inch of accumulations north of Interstate 20 to only trace amounts south of the highway.

Another bout of freezing weather could create hazardous road recalling my inventory allowed me to reply, "There certainly is! Come on over!" In 2012, having completed a seminar in Abilene, Scott Cutler was driving home to El Paso. He had found my listing with Parks & Wildlife and realized I was the only wild bird rehabilitator along the way.

As curator of ornithology, he was continuously looking for any unusual specimens. They might become welcome additions to the collection at the Centennial Museum that is part of the University of Texas at El Paso campus.

For over an hour, Art and I enjoyed hearing about his research with various species. With Scott when he left was a Sora that had been found in the middle of our front yard in 2011. The mystery of the water bird's being there had puzzled all of us.

Was it in need of rest and landed during the night, or had it literally fallen from the sky?

About a year and a half later, we were able to provide an immature peregrine falcon for the collection.

Another opportunity for the museum was tentatively discussed during several phone calls with Diane Tracy during November 2014.

From the tone of her voice, our San Angelo contact had been doubtful if a long-eared owl could survive.

Having picked up the small raptor in someone's front yard in Ballinger, the game warden for Runnels County had identified it and tried to feed it during the two days that he had kept it.

Then he heard from another game warden of Diane Tracy's association with Parks & Wildlife. When he and Diane met, the officer said in his attempt to save the bird, he had offered the owl some ground meat; it would not eat.

Although she described the owl as extremely small and thin, "just skin and bones," Diane was more concerned about its eyes. "The pupils aren't the same," she continued. Then she added, "And its feet are clinched." The symptoms were indicative of head trauma. Medications and intervention could not undo, however, what an impact had done to the bird.

Since Diane had been asked to freeze it, if it died, the first step in the process of providing such a secretive predator for study at the museum in El Paso had begun.

Usually, she has waited to bring specimens when we transfer live birds. The interval of time stretched further than we anticipated. Then in early February, Diane's husband was coming to Big Spring with a friend. She was finally able to send the frozen long-eared owl to us.

The bird had been vacuum-packed for freezing. A call to Scott Cutler affirmed that he receives specimens in everything from Zip-Loc bags to vacuum pouches.

When her husband, Dale, handed me the owl, I was startled by how compression had reduced the owl's presence in the bag. To remember that owls are more fluffy feathers than weight reassured me all was fine.

The plastic enclosure hid much of the bird. From what I could see, I eagerly recognized the distinctive tawny-orange accents surrounding the outside of the bird's eyes, and decorating a part of one wing.

The next identifying factor were the feathers covering the owl's toes.

What I could not see were its long feathery tufts, called "horns" or "ears." They had been firmly pressed to its head by the vacuuming process. However, with the streaking on its chest, it was definitely a long-eared owl.

Since the specie only hunts at dusk, early morning, or on moonlit nights, it may have been hit by a vehicle or flown into something. Hidden during the day, the owls survive because they are so elusive.

Thanks to United Parcel Service, an overnight trip placed the frozen long-eared owl at the doorstep of the museum by mid-morning of the following day. Scott later called to say it fluffed right up when taken from its plastic enclosure.

Established in 1936, the museum is an integral part of the University of Texas at El Paso. It also serves a bi-national community. Permanent exhibits focus on the natural and cultural history of the Chihuahuan Desert area.

Now, through the efforts of many, a seldom-seen raptor can contribute to the ongoing research and study of regional bird life in the southwest.

Bebe McCasland is author of The Scoop from Bird Poop. She is federally and state licensed to rehabilitate wild birds.

Woman admits digging up dad's grave in search of 'real will'

LANCASTER, N.H. (AP) — A New Hampshire woman who told police she dug up her father's grave in search of his "real will" but found only vodka and cigarettes has pleaded guilty.

Melanie Nash was one of four accused in the plan to open Eddie Nash's vault in Colebrook, then rifle through his casket last May in a scene a prosecutor compared to an Edgar Allan Poe story.

Police said she felt she was shorted in her share of the inheritance after her father died in 2004.

They didn't find a different will in the casket.

The 53-year-old Nash pleaded guilty Monday to charges of criminal mischief, interference with a cemetery, conspiracy and abuse of a corpse.

Nebraska police find pot inside container labeled 'Not Weed'

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A man in Lincoln, Nebraska, has been cited for possessing pot inside a container that had been slapped with a label reading: "Not Weed."

The Lincoln Journal Star reports that Lancaster County deputies stopped the man's vehicle around 9 p.m. Saturday. Officers found the plastic sour cream container during a search of his car, and the driver acknowledged that the pot belonged to him.

He was cited for having less than an ounce of marijuana.

Joint birthday party for NY couple married 82 years

SPRING VALLEY, N.Y. (AP) — A husband and wife thought to be one of the oldest married couples in New York have celebrated their birthdays — and their combined ages will be 212.

The Journal News reports Duranord Veillard turned 108 on Saturday. His wife, Jeanne Veillard, won't turn 105 until May.

The couple celebrated Saturday at the Spring Valley home they share with their daughter.

Study: Parents increasingly ask doctors to delay vaccinations

CHICAGO (AP) — Parents have increasingly pressured doctors to delay vaccines for young children, making their kids and others vulnerable to preventable diseases, a study suggests.

The findings are in a national survey of pediatricians and family doctors asked about parents wanting to postpone some of the many shots recommended for children younger than age 2. Nearly all doctors said that at least some parents had requested vaccine delays in a typical month; and 1 in 4 said those numbers had increased since the previous year.

More about the survey in Monday's Pediatrics and delaying childhood vaccines:

THE STUDY

The researchers surveyed 534 doctors by email or regular mail in 2012. Participants were doctors who are members of the American Academy of Pediatrics and the American Academy of Family Physicians — the two leading groups of doctors who treat young children. One in 5 doctors said at least 10 percent of parents had requested vaccine delays by spreading them out over more months.

Most doctors said the practice puts kids at risk for getting vaccine-preventable diseases and might lead to disease outbreaks, but most also said they at least sometimes agreed to the delays. Only 3 percent said they often or always tell parents who insist on vaccine delays to seek care from another doctor.

THE CONCERNS

The potential repercussions are worrisome and are happening "right now with the measles outbreak," said Dr. Allison Kempe, a University of Colorado researcher and a member of the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's vaccine advisory committee. Kempe is the study's lead author. More than 150 people in several states have been infected with measles.

Steers to face Estacado for 3rd time

By TOMMY WELLS

Sports Editor

The Big Spring High School Steers are hoping the third time really is a charm ... especially when it comes to facing the Lubbock Estacado Matadors.

The Steers, fresh off a dominating victory over Clint on Saturday, will make a quick turnaround tonight when they face off with District 2-4A rival Estacado in a regional quarterfinal showdown. The contest is scheduled to tip off at 6 p.m. in the Andrews High School gymnasium.

Tonight's meeting with the Matadors will mark the third time this season the two teams will have played. Big Spring and Estacado are both members of District 2-4A

"They know us and we know them," said Big Spring head coach Ian Ritchey. "They know what we are going to try and do, and we certainly know what they will try and game with plenty of momentum. The Matadors, 25-7 overall, have won their last 12 outings, including a pair of wins over the Steers in district action. The Matadors edged Big Spring on Jan. 30 by a 59-44 margin in Lubbock, and then dealt the Steers a tough 56-46 setback on Feb. 17 in the regular season finale for both squads.

The Steers comes into tonight's game sporting a 20-11 record.

Rodriguez named district's Offensive MVP

By TOMMY WELLS

Sports Editor

The Big Spring High School Lady Steers had a bunch of didn't's this season. They didn't get as many wins as they wanted. The season didn't last as long as they had hoped. Through it all, however, the one thing Big Spring Lady Steers could depend on was the firepower of senior Julianna Rodriguez.

And there was more than plenty of that.

The district's coaches recognized Rodriguez for her stellar season recently by naming her one of District 2-4A's top athletes. She was one of four players receiving high praise when the 2-4A all-district teams were announced on Monday.

A three-sport standout at BSHS, Rodriguez was named the District 2-4A Offensive MVP following a season in which she led the Lady Steers in almost every offensive category.

En route to powering the Lady Steers to a Class 4A state playoff berth, the 5-foot-7 senior guard was among the district's most explosive players, averaging better than 15 points per contest.

Overall, the Lady Steers put four players on the all-district roster, including Dominique Mayes on the first-team, and Jackie Castillo and August Alexander on the honorable mention squad.

A junior forward, Mayes was one of 12 players named to the first-team roster.

Perhaps the best rebounder in the district, Mayes averaged more than 10 rebounds per game during District 2-4A action.

Castillo, also a senior, and Alexander both starred for Big Spring, too. Castillo was among the team's top scorers. Alexander was one of Big Spring's top shooters, especially from behind the three-point arc.

Levelland's Elizabeth Cera, a 5-foot-6 guard, was named the district's MVP this season. She helped lead the Loboettes to the district championship.

Levelland's Sujei Cera and freshman Peyton Himango also received superlative accolades. A 5-foot-8 senior, Cera was selected the 2015 Defensive MVP, while Himango was tabbed the 2-4A Newcomer of the Year recipient.

Levelland head coach Clay Barnett earned the Coach of the Year honors. He led the Loboettes to a 27-4 record and a spot in the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches' top 10.

Joining Mayes on the first team roster were Lamesa's Kaylee Jackson and Tavy Maxwell, Estacado's Neke Hardrick, Fabe Dunn and Shatorian Wright, and Snyder's Bailey Garcia and Chelsea Lamberan. Also making the first-team were Sweetwater's Maddie Jones and Levelland's Hayley Jackson, Maeci Scott and Paris McCoy.

Snyder's Danielle Lamberan and Priscilla Guzman joined Castillo and Alexander on the honorable mention squad.

Texas keeps hopes alive

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Isaiah Taylor didn't play a lot for Texas on Tuesday night. He was on the court when it mattered most.

The sophomore guard made a tear-drop shot in the lane with 4.8 seconds remaining in overtime to give Texas a 61-59 victory over No. 14 Baylor, snapping the Bears' four-game winning streak and the Longhorns' four-game losing streak.

Texas (18-12) improved to 7-10 in the Big 12 with one game remaining, keeping its hopes for an NCAA tournament bid alive. Last season, Oklahoma State became the first Big 12 team to get an at-large bid with a losing conference record (8-10).

Baylor (22-8, 10-7) had a chance to tie, but Kenny Chery's shot was blocked by Myles Turner with 1 second left.

"Coach (Rick Barnes) said this gives us another breath," Texas guard Javan Felix said.

Taylor, the Longhorns' point guard, played only 6 minutes in the first half because of foul trouble. He was on the bench for all but 5 minutes in the second half and that was Barnes' choice.

But Taylor was back for overtime, making another tear-drop shot early in the extra period before the game-winner.

Seven players from both teams were ejected in the overtime for leaving the bench during a brief skirmish between Taylor and Baylor's Royce O'Neale. Taylor said he was hit in the mouth by O'Neale's elbow.

Demarcus Holland led Texas with 12 points.

Grady, Sands set to return to playoff action tonight

The Big Spring Steers won't be the only Crossroads area team in action tonight when high school playoff action gets under way. The Grady Wildcats and Sands Mustangs will also be playing key postseason contests.

Grady, the 4th-ranked team in the Class A polls, will face Borden County tonight in Lamesa. The game, which is part of a playoff doubleheader, will tip off at 6:30 p.m. Levelland and Lamesa will play in the other game, starting at 8 p.m.

Sands will play Ira tonight in Post. The game is slated to start at 7 p.m.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Cosmic Fire of Fortune

HOLIDAY
MATHIS

A cosmic fire graces the sky today in the form of a relatively rare and auspicious alignment of Jupiter and Uranus in fire signs. There will only be one more aspect like this between now and 2019. The good-luck trine invites us to share our stories in an effort to entertain and inform one another and form beneficent emotional connections.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You don't have to understand things to get used to them. This truth will show up in your relationships. Your loved one has qualities that baffle you, and eventually those will be the same qualities that endear her to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You appreciate the privileges of your years, of which there are many. Don't spoil this by wishing for a "do-over." The past is gone. Jonathan Swift said, "No wise man ever wished to be younger."

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). When you don't like where the fates are leading you, dig in your heels. Sometimes the fates should be wrestled to the ground -- exhausting work, but it makes you stronger, too.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Put yourself out there with a story about who you are, where you come from and what you want. You'll speak to people's emotions. At the end of your story, the applause will come in the form of an opportunity.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You're not imagining things: Someone is checking you out or putting you to the test. There are good reasons for this. Relax, smile and do your thing. You'll tip the scale in your favor just by being happy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You're transitioning into a new phase, and there will be some discomfort to go along with it, but nothing you can't handle. You can't be born without going through birth!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). More than the money, the kinship of others is what makes your work joyful. You'll demonstrate your appreciation for your colleagues so that there is no question as to how you feel.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Your need to communicate is strong, and you'll do it so well. Even that horrible listener you know will pay attention as you engage him or her in the juicy details of your journey.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-

Dec. 21). You believe in the power of love, and you put action behind that belief. It's what will allow you to let go of a problem relationship and adopt an inspired relationship, all with the same person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). When it comes to love, you hold out for an equal. You want to be wanted, not needed. There are exceptions to the rule, but for today, hold fast to your preferences and expectations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Before you break out your wallet, ask your friends for help. You can borrow what you need so you don't have to rent or buy it. Also, you may be able to swap instead of shop.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). No one cares like you do. Someone wants that special kind of attention you give and is too proud to ask for it directly. Address the situation with your renowned sensitivity, and you'll be rewarded in kind.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (March 3). This year you're grateful not to have everything you need, because the fun is in reaching out and connecting with others. A collaboration that comes together over the next six weeks will bring love and money into your world. You'll ink a deal in May. July is your chance on the world stage or at the higher levels of a difficult endeavor. Sagittarius and Virgo people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 30, 28, 9, 44 and 16.

STORYTELLING BY THE STARS: Inside everyone and everything is a fascinating story, but it takes a stellar storyteller to find it. Today's trine of Jupiter in Leo and Uranus in Aries will bring good fortune to those who can captivate an audience with a good story. Yesterday we explored the importance of using blocks of emotion instead of relying on the retelling of events and stressed the importance of editing. (See the archives.) Here are additional tips to help you hone this crucial life skill.

Find the Twist
The very nature of a story is that it's about something out of the ordinary. If the audience knows what's going to happen, it's not a story. Identify the surprises in your story -- the parts that fly in the face of what's expected -- and set them up with a contrast: "Normally when I go to feed my bird he's in the cage, but this time he wasn't, and the door was closed!"

Know the Stakes
Good stories involve something important to be gained or lost. If there's nothing at stake, the listener has no incentive to get involved in the story. Take a tip from Hollywood, where often the hero is fighting for life itself or perhaps to save the entire planet from destruction.

More on storytelling tomorrow!
CELEBRITY PROFILES: Pisces Jessica Biel and her Aquarian husband Justin Timberlake are excitedly anticipating the birth of their first child. The superstar couple is an example of astrological neighbors becoming best friends and lovers. Aquarius is the realm of friendship, and Pisces of spiritual connection, so this relationship balances real-world fun with deep meaning.

Annie's Mailbox

KATHY MITCHELL
MARCY SUGAR

Dear Annie: I am a 51-year-old man and have been unemployed for the past three years. Last year, my wife asked for a divorce.

My question is: What can I do to revitalize my relationship with my three teenage children? I have to initiate all phone calls and texts. They never ask how I am. The youngest is forthcoming about events in his life, but my daughters require extensive questioning, and all I get are brief answers. I understand that they are angry with me, but I am trying my best to get a new job and move on with my life. Every time I see them, I tell them that I miss them, but only my son says he misses me, too.

It is so frustrating that I don't want to do this much longer. I have started applying for jobs out of state so I won't have to deal with the disappointment. I feel that they are trying to keep me out of their lives. If so, I should just stop trying so hard. I don't like spending my days thinking about them and feeling hurt. What do you suggest? -- Feeling Unloved

Dear Unloved: Please do not cut your children out of your life because they are angry and confused and taking it out on you. No matter how upsetting their behavior, they still need you. They also need to know that you will not give up on them.

Talk to your ex-wife. Explain how this hurts the children, and ask for her help in maintaining a better relationship -- for their sakes. Your contact at this moment in time will reflect on their feelings for you in the future, when they are more mature and able to gain perspective. We know it's hard. Please don't make it permanent.

Dear Annie: My sister and her husband have disowned us because we did not go to a memorial service for her husband's brother, who passed away after a long battle with cancer.

My wife and I saw this brother once every few years at family occasions. We were never at his home. The day of the service, my sister called and asked whether I was coming. I said no, that I had other things going on, and she hung up.

We are in our late 60s, and I think it's a shame for them to end a relationship over this. Were we wrong? -- Weighing on My Mind in Pennsylvania

Dear Weighing: The point of attending a funeral is to pay respects to the family. Your sister and her husband were "the family." While you are not obligated to go to the funeral of someone you barely know, it would have been a kindness to go for your sister's sake, or at least give her the impression that you wanted to be there but had other serious obligations.

We do think your sister overreacted in the moment, but we also know you'd like to fix this. So apologize to her. Tell her you are so sorry you didn't go to the funeral, that you should have been there for her and her husband, and that you deeply regret it and hope she can forgive you. It's not too much to do for a sibling relationship that you value.

Dear Annie: I read the letter from "Frustrated Wife," whose husband leaves the cabinet doors open and never puts tools away.

My wonderful, hardworking, intelligent husband exhibits these same tendencies. I would come home from work exhausted and find the cupboard doors open and things all over the countertops.

At first, I fumed. Then, God put the thought into my head: If my husband were dead, my cupboard doors would be closed, the screwdriver would be put away and nothing would be out of place. So, I started saying to myself, "Thank you. Hubby is still alive." The difference in my attitude makes a big difference in my life. - Petite Wife in Nebraska Opening lead — queen of diamonds.

There are times when the outcome of a contract depends on whether or not declarer makes his plays in the right order. This factor is called timing. Consider the present case where South got to four hearts and West led the queen of diamonds. Declarer won with ace and led the jack of trumps, West following low. South stewed a while — what he did made no difference in the actual hand — and then played low from dummy. East won with the queen and returned a diamond. Declarer eventually went down one, losing a spade, two trumps and a diamond.

South should have made the contract, however. The fault lay in the order of his plays. Instead of leading a trump at trick two, he should have led a spade, preferably the jack. The best West can do in that case is to rise with the ace and lead another diamond.

South wins with the king and cashes the queen of spades. He then leads a club to dummy's jack and discards his diamond loser on the king of spades. The only tricks declarer loses on this line of play are a spade and two trumps.

Note that the critical difference between the two methods of play is the question of timing. The successful line of play allows declarer to establish a spade winner before the defenders can establish a diamond winner, allowing declarer to win the race against time.

In most hands — unless there is a good reason not to — declarer tackles trumps as soon as possible. But it would be wrong to do so in the present case, as it jeopardizes the contract unnecessarily.

Tomorrow: Look for the silver lining.

No. 6 Baylor ends regular season 75-65 over Texas Tech

WACO, Texas (AP) — Nina, Niya and league champion Baylor are going to the Big 12 tournament back on the winning track.

Nina Davis scored 22 points, Niya Johnson broke the Big 12 single-season record for assists as the No. 6 Lady Bears rebounded from consecutive losses, beating Texas Tech 75-65 in the regular-season finale Monday night.

consecutive win in their last home game Feb. 21. Alexis Prince and Imani Wright each had 12 points.

Johnson, who came in the national leader with 8.7 assists per game, had 12 to push her season total to 255. The junior guard broke her school record of 244 set last year, and soon after halftime surpassed the league record 250 that Angel Goodrich set at Kansas three years ago.

"I can't get those assists without my teammates making the baskets," Johnson said. "I appreciate them putting the ball in the hoop."

Davis, the Big 12 scoring leader, and coach Kim Mulkey, a former championship point guard, were a little more emphatic about what Johnson does for Baylor.
