Minding the median

KBSB looking for help in maintaining downtown project

By JULIE BASS
Staff Writer

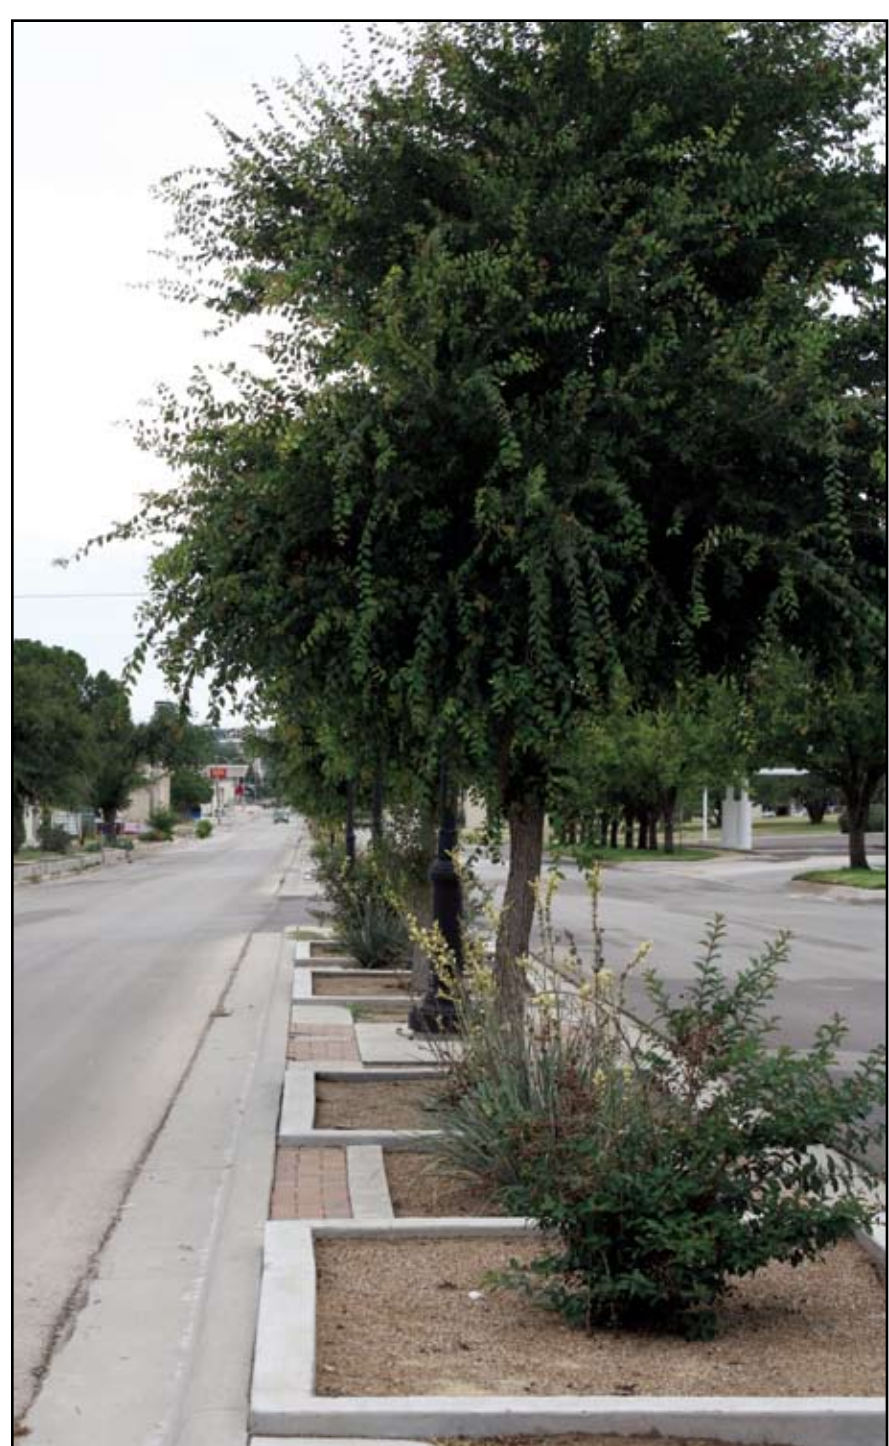

One of Big Spring's main thoroughfares is receiving a much-needed spruce-up, thanks to a group of local citizens.

The Main Street median, part of the 2010 street bond project, features native Texas grasses, trees and plants, but was in need of clean-up before Keep Big Spring Beautiful entered the picture.

This year, KBSB adopted the Main Street median as their project.

"We need volunteers to help weed the median and clean it up. Then we are going to try to find a way to maintain it," said Lisa Brooks, KBSB president. "The businesses along the median have been out there helping us as we clean it and weed it. We need more help, though."

KBSB members are currently looking at options such as turf grass that could hold back the weeds and make the medians look grassy all of the time. Other suggestions have been rocks or potted plants.

"We need volunteers with weed eaters, volunteers who have time to check on the median once in a while and make sure that all of our clean-up can be maintained. We are looking at trying to do something more permanent so that the Main Street median will continue to look nice." Brooks said.

KBSB meets the first Monday of each month in the Cactus Room at Howard College at noon.

For more information, there is a Facebook page for Keep Big Spring Beautiful, or people may call the Chamber of Commerce at 263-7641.

Contact Julie Bass 263-7331 ext 232.

SLYLOCK FOX and COMICS FOR KIDS

BY BOB WEBER JR.

When Slylock Fox ventured out this evening in search of Count Weirdly's desert hideout, he noticed the moon was rising above the horizon. On this night it will take the moon 10 hours to sink below the opposite horizon. By the time Slylock reached Weirdly, the moon had crossed the sky and was a quarter of the way above the opposite horizon. Approximately how long has Slylock been traveling?

Solution -- Seven and a half hours.

BIRD POOP: The ingenuity of a barn swallow's nest is lost on some

The nest of the barn swallow is deep enough that the nestlings can crouch on the bottom if frightened. The rim keeps the eggs and babies from rolling out of the nest.

Long before the din of US Highway 87 becomes a constant monotone during the morning, they have taken flight. While the neighborhood slowly awakens to another day, the avian wonders glean a harvest of insects for their young.

To walk out on our driveway for the morning paper is to hear the familiar “wit wit,” or twitter of barn swallows. After courting up and down our street, each veers momentarily to circle front yards before returning to the nest.

With appreciation is my look at the front porch of our neighbors’ house across the street. In spite of droppings half in the flower bed and the rest splattered on the tile entrance, they welcome the yearly arrival of these little denizens.

Safely ensconced underneath the overhang of their roof, the birds’ mud nest is a tribute to structural integrity. Its presence and endurance reminds me that not all nests are free from human, or nature’s intervention.

A recent year was especially difficult for barn swallows.

Finding a nest already constructed by the birds on the porch of a hospital building, an employee called. After stressing the benefits of mosquito and insect control by these swift flyers, I added the nest could be removed as soon as soon as the birds migrated.

Admitting young were in the nest, the employee complained about the mess on the porch. Suggestions of materials to place underneath the nest to ease the cleaning situation were accepted with hesitancy. Even being told how to prevent their nesting in the same location again was curtly acknowledged.

Later that afternoon, another employee of the hospital confirmed my suspicions. The nest had been torn down and we were being asked to take the young.

A week or two later, another caller mentioned a nest having been knocked down and left where it landed. Parent birds had come to the nest for three days to feed their young and then were seen no more. After asking if we would take the nestlings, the person could not remember the events leading to the discovery of the birds.

Underneath eaves on exposed ledges or porch lights, or on the undersides of concrete highway bridges, barn swallow nests are usually protected from wind, storms, hail, and rain. Naturally, after several years, time may lend to the deterioration of the binders that hold the structure together.

Then a new nest is built.

To have watched the construction of a “cup of mud” is to appreciate the innovative skills of these birds. Location is everything!

Laboring tirelessly in gathering the building materials from nearby mud puddles and open fields, the barn swallows have two options. Some will carry each small pellet of mud pressed against their forehead on top of their bills. The parents we watched chose to carry wet earth in their mouths and throats.

Having mixed pieces of dry grass with the mud, the birds look as if they are squeezing cookie dough from an applicator. The mud oozes into place on one of the many rows it takes to erect the high wall that will protect their eggs and young. It took nearly two weeks for them to finish tapping each glob of mud into place with their bills.

With the nest ready and waiting, the couple begins swift flights. Constant twittering can be heard throughout the day. After landing at the nest site, the female begins to twitch her wings and tail. The male lands close beside her. Then they rub their heads and necks together. After interlocking their bills, they preen each other’s plumage. Following courtship, the couple searches for feathers to line the nest. Soon, incubation begins. Each shares this duty as well. In a little over two weeks, the parents are seen rushing in and out of the nest. A family has begun.

It’s not long until nestlings are hanging their heads out over the edge of the nest. Adults perch on the rim as if they were the proudest of parents.

Three weeks after hatching, the young are eager to fly, but may return to the nest to roost for several nights. Weather and availability of insects will determine if the parents have a second, and possibly a third brood, and their timing of fall migration to South America. First born will assist in nurturing any other broods, and learn future parenting skills in the process.

Our mornings in June still continue with the colorful parents “all a twitter.” Once again, they are seen darting down the street and through the yard. The male, a metallic bluish-black above, sports a reddish-brown forehead and throat that is bordered by a darker shaded breast band. His remaining breast and belly are a delicate cinnamon to pale buff. His deeply forked tail is obviously longer than that of his mate.

As I turn to walk back to the house, the twitter social networking, or chatter of the barn swallows reminds me that humans aren’t all that advanced in current technology. In our neighborhood, we have specie representatives that have been sending tweets for eons.

Bridge closed for second night over swarms of mayflies, crashes

WRIGHTSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — A bridge has been closed for a second straight night because of swarms of mayflies so thick they caused accidents, authorities said.

Wrightsville fire officials said the Route 462 bridge over the Susquehanna River between Columbia and Wrightsville closed at about 10 p.m. Sunday.

Chief Chad Livelsberger said a vehicle slowing because of the cloud of insects led to a crash, though he didn’t believe anyone was seriously hurt. The bridge reopened overnight.

The bridge was also shut down Saturday night after three motorcycle crashes attributed to the flies. Livelsberger says the department was dispatched to deal with one crash and saw two more crashes while on the scene. All three victims were treated at the scene.

“It was just crazy,” Livelsberger told the York Dispatch on Sunday afternoon. “It was an inch to 2 inches of mayflies on the road.”

Mayflies are attracted by light and congregate on roads, bridges and other surfaces. When cars hit them, the females’ eggs release liquid that makes roads slick.

Livelsberger said motorists driving through a mayfly swarm should treat it like an actual blizzard, expecting zero visibility and remains creating a slick coating on the ground.

“If they’re going through something like that, err on the side of caution,” he said.

Lt. Sean Montgomery of the Columbia Borough Fire Department compared driving on the bug-covered surface to driving on ice or snow — but he said the winter scenario doesn’t include the horrendous smell, “like dead fish.”

Tom Smith of the Penn State Extension in York County said despite the hazards and annoyance that the swarms are causing, it’s actually a good thing in the broad scheme of things.

“They’re indicators of clearer water,” Smith said. “It’s indicating that the Susquehanna River’s getting cleaner.”

News in brief

Al-Qaida confirms deputy leader, who headed its Yemen affiliate, killed in US strike

CAIRO (AP) — A U.S. airstrike has killed Al-Qaida's No. 2 leader, who commanded its powerful Yemeni affiliate, dealing the global network its biggest blow since the killing of Osama bin Laden and eliminating a charismatic leader at a time when it is vying with the Islamic State group for the mantle of global jihad.

In a video statement dated June 14 and released Tuesday by the Yemeni affiliate, a senior operative announced the death of Nasir al-Wahishi, a veteran jihadi who once served as bin Laden's aide-de-camp, and said his deputy, Qassim al-Raimi, has been tapped to replace him.

"Our Muslim nation, a hero of your heroes and a master of your masters left to God, steadfast," Khaled Batrafi said in the video, vowing that the group's war on America would continue.

"In the name of God, the blood of these pioneers makes us more determined to sacrifice," he said. "Let the enemies know that the battle is not with an individual... the battle led by crusaders and their agents is colliding with a billion-member nation."

Yemeni security officials had earlier said a U.S. drone strike killed three suspected militants in the al-Qaida-held southern port city of Mukalla last week. U.S. officials had said they were trying to verify whether al-Wahishi was killed.

NAACP leader Rachel Dolezal's world crumbles after parents say she has been posing as black SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Rachel Dolezal carefully constructed a life as a black civil rights activist in the last decade in the inland Northwest, but that world is falling apart following the disclosure by her parents that she was a white woman who for years has posed as African-American.

Dolezal has resigned as president of the local branch of the NAACP, lost her position as a part-time African studies instructor at a local university, lost her job as a freelance newspaper columnist and become the subject of a probe by the city Ethics Commission.

The furor has touched off national debate over racial identity and divided the NAACP itself.

"In the eye of this current storm, I can see that a separation of family and organizational outcomes is in the best interest of the NAACP," Dolezal, who was elected the Spokane chapter's president last fall, wrote on the group's Facebook page Monday. "Please know I will never stop fighting for human rights."

Dolezal, a 37-year-old woman with a light brown complexion and dark curly hair, graduated from historically black Howard University and was married to a black man. For years, she publicly described herself as black and complained of being the victim of racial hatred in the heavily white region.

Activists, Kurdish commander say Kurds in full control of Tal Abyad dealing major blow to IS BEIRUT (AP) — Kurdish fighters took full control on Tuesday of the border town of Tal Abyad, dealing a major blow to the Islamic State group's ability to wage war in Syria.

Haqi Kobane told The Associated Press that Kurdish units known as the YPG along with their allies from the Free Syrian Army were starting to clean up the town along the border with Turkey from booby traps and mines planted by the extremists so that residents can return. The militants had been in control of the key town for more than a year.

"Daesh has been broken at the hands of the YPG... it is a victory for all Syrians," he said by telephone from northern Syria, using the Arabic acronym for the Islamic State group.

The Kurdish advance caused the displacement of some 20,000 people who fled to Turkey in the past two weeks.

An Associated Press team on the Turkish side of the Akcakale border crossing said a large black and white Islamic State group flag was taken down from a pole in Tal Abyad Tuesday and replaced with a yellow, triangular YPG flag.

The $9 billion man? Donald Trump set to announce if he'll contest GOP presidential primaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a presidential field approaching 20 high-profile Republicans, the GOP's 2016 class offers voters a little bit of everything.

There is the top-tier, a group that includes former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, who formally launched his candidacy on Monday. There are the single-issue candidates such as South Carolina Sen. Lindsey Graham, who talks about national security and little else. There are even the quixotic underdogs, such as Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal, ambitious against all odds.

And then there is Donald Trump.

The Donald, as he is known as a celebrity, will announce his 2016 intentions on Tuesday at a Manhattan skyscraper that bears his name.

He is a businessman, a reality television star and a master of self-promotion. And should he decide to run, Trump is positioned to have a greater impact on the early months of the Republican presidential primary contest than many GOP leaders would like.

Escaped murderers elude capture as woman charged with helping them makes 2nd court appearance

DANNEMORA, N.Y. (AP) — Two escaped murderers remained at large as a woman charged with helping the killers flee from a maximum-security prison by providing them hacksaw blades, chisels and other tools made a second appearance in a New York court.

More than 800 law enforcement officers on Monday kept up a methodical search for Richard Matt and David Sweat, who escaped from the Clinton Correctional Facility near the Canadian border on June 6.

Prosecutors say Joyce Mitchell, a prison tailoring shop instructor who had befriended the inmates, had agreed to be the getaway driver but backed out because she still loved her husband and felt guilty for participating.

Mitchell, 51, made her second court appearance in Plattsburgh on Monday wearing a striped prison jumpsuit and a bulletproof vest. She waived a preliminary hearing, and the case headed to a county court.

"Basically, when it was go-time and it was the actual day of the event, I do think she got cold feet and realized, 'What am I doing?'" Clinton County District Attorney Andrew Wylie said Sunday. "Reality struck. She realized that, really, the grass wasn't greener on the other side."

Colorado theater shooter's university psychiatrist expected to testify against him

CENTENNIAL, Colo. (AP) — The mental health professional with the most access to James Holmes' mind before he carried out his deadly attack on a Colorado movie theater is expected to testify in his death penalty trial on Tuesday.

Dr. Lynne Fenton saw Holmes five times in 2012 while he was a neuroscience graduate student at the University of Colorado. She prescribed him medication for depression and anxiety, concerned that he had a social phobia after he confessed thoughts of killing people, according to testimony from other witnesses.

Her testimony is among the most highly anticipated, as Fenton has never spoken publicly about their sessions. She remains bound by the trial judge's gag order, and a civil suit says she should have done more to stop Holmes. But Holmes waived his patient-client privilege when he pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity, opening the door for her to take the stand.

Holmes is charged with killing 12 people, wounding 58 with gunfire and leaving 12 others injured in the attack on July 20, 2012. Questions remain about whether anyone could have stopped him.

Holmes said he pointedly kept Fenton uninformed as he plotted his attack. He never told her about the arsenal of weapons he was assembling. His elaborate schemes and to-do lists were kept in a journal that he didn't send to her until hours before his assault, and it lingered in a campus mailroom for days thereafter.

Man of peace tapped to be Afghanistan's defense minister as war intensifies

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — War-torn Afghanistan may soon have a defense minister, nine months after the new government was formed and amid some of the toughest fighting since the Taliban's insurgency began 14 years ago.

Masoom Stanekzai is better known as a peace-maker than a battlefield strategist, having led the High Peace Council negotiating body charged with ending the conflict with the Taliban, but now he is directing the war. He is expected to be confirmed soon by parliament, though the law allows him to assume the post in an acting capacity.

His appointment will complete President Ashraf Ghani's Cabinet and finally bring what one Western military official called "strong, positive, legitimate civilian leadership" to the military as it tackles an invigorated Taliban without the backing of international forces, which ended their combat mission last year.

The official was not authorized to speak publicly so spoke on condition of anonymity.

Stanekzai takes the job as the Taliban are redefining their war against Kabul, joining forces with other militant groups and spreading the fight to every corner of the country. A change in tactics has taken Afghan security forces by surprise and forced them to spread ever-thinner as their casualty rates soar.

Millions of Muslims with diabetes face hard choice between health and faith during Ramadan

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — For years, diabetic Shawkat al-Khalili ignored his doctor's orders not to fast during the holy month of Ramadan when most of the world's 1.6 billion Muslims abstain from food and water from sunrise to sunset.

Islam exempts the sick from fasting, but the 70-year-old al-Khalili said he couldn't bring himself to violate one of the five pillars of his religion, even after he lost a toe to diabetes.

Like the retired teacher in Amman, tens of millions of diabetic Muslims struggle each year with such stressful choices. Increasingly, physicians team up with preachers or look for new methods to educate and protect the faithful.

The stakes are rising, particularly in the Arab world, where diabetes is spreading rapidly because of growing obesity caused by a more sedentary lifestyle and easy availability of processed food.

The Middle East and North Africa, which are overwhelmingly Muslim, have the world's highest comparative prevalence of diabetes, according to the International Diabetes Federation. In 2014, some 38 million people in the region, or one in 10, were diabetics, a figure expected to double in a generation, the federation says. Another 18 million suspected sufferers have yet to be diagnosed.

$10K donation nets hockey fan chance to use Taser on mayor

GLENDALE, Ariz. (AP) — An Arizona Coyotes fan got to take out her frustration on the mayor behind the decision to send the hockey team packing.

KPNX-TV reports that disgruntled fan Ronda Pearson used a stun gun on Glendale Mayor Jerry Weiers on Saturday as part of a charity pledge.

Weiers volunteered to be stunned with a

Taser at the mall event if a $10,000 donation was made to an Arizona charity that supports first-responders.

Firefighters determined Weiers was not injured.

Organizers say Pearson and another Coyotes fan showed up with a $10,000 money order.

Weiers and the Glendale City Council voted Wednesday to end an arena lease agreement with the Coyotes. A judge on Friday temporarily halted its termination.

Pearson gained attention on social media for a public rant directed at Weiers.

Distracted GOP lawmaker accidentally OKs California budget

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A Republican lawmaker accidentally cast his party's first vote for the California budget in years because he was distracted by Facebook.

Assemblyman Scott Wilk was the sole Republican to vote for California's record $117.5 billion spending plan Monday.

The Santa Clarita lawmaker later clarified he accidentally supported the bill in the Capitol while opposing it on Facebook. He posted on Twitter "My wife is right — I can't multi-task!"

California's budget is being negotiated between Gov. Jerry Brown and Democratic legislative leaders.

They have yet to reach a final deal.

Steer wrestling will be just one of many events on the schedule when the 82nd Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo begins Thursday.

Carr has put together one of nation's top rodeo teams

Special to the Herald

Over the years, Pete Carr's Classic Pro Rodeo has been recognized as one of the premier stock contracting firms in the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association.

The backbone of any strong company is its people, and the Carr staff is strong and steady, he said.

"We have the best crew in rodeo," said Carr, owner of the Dallas-based livestock company. "I believe if you want to be successful, you have to surround yourself with good people. Everything we've ever accomplished is because of the team that we have."

The staff is made up of rodeo veterans, who will be on site for the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo, set for Thursday-Saturday at the Encana Big Spring

"We have the best crew in rodeo. I believe if you want to be successful, you have to surround yourself with good people. Everything we've ever accomplished is because of the team that we have."

Pete Carr

Rodeo Bowl. From the behind-the-scenes labor to making sure the arena is in perfect condition, they take their jobs seriously.

"We've got a terrific group of people I get to work with all year long," said John L. Wagley of Alexandria, La., who has been selected to work as the timed-event chute boss at the Ram Prairie Circuit Finals Rodeo for several years. "We all know what it takes to get everything done, and we work good together."

"When you haul across the country, it's good to know you've got a good crew that's got your back. If any of us needs any help, we don't have to look too far for it."

That type of work ethic has paid off. For the past two years, Carr has been nominated for the PRCA Stock Contractor of the Year Award. In 2014, the firm received the Women's Professional Rodeo Association's Stock Contractor of the Year.

"The awards say a lot about the work our staff puts in together," Carr said. "It's more than the great bucking stock. These awards show that the hours everybody puts in has a reward."

The crew received numerous awards in the 2014 ProRodeo season. While Wagley worked the Prairie Circuit Finals, a couple of other Carr crew members, bullfighter Clay Heger and pickup man Jeremy Willis, were selected to work the Ram Southeastern Circuit Finals Rodeo. Willis also will be one of the pickup men at the Ram Annual Circuit Finals Rodeo in 2015.

The husband-wife team of John and Sandy Gwatney were honored at the Clem McSpadden National Finals Steer Roping; John was the event's chute boss, while Sandy was the secretary.

Each selection was a tribute to ability but also was a tip of the hat to each member of the Carr crew puts in at every rodeo they work..

Area youths to compete at 4H national event

Special to the Herald

Two Howard County teenagers will be part of the Texas 4H Compound Archery Team that will compete in the 4H Shooting Sports National Championships in Grand Island, Nebraska this summer.

Andrew Paredez and Erin Bagnall were both selected to the team. Erin's father, Keith, is the team's coach.

These youths were chosen to represent Texas through an application process. Criteria being not only their shooting abilities, but their ability to represent Texas 4H and the state as a sample of our positive youth activities and growth through the local 4H program.

The National Championships is much like the Olympic Games with a state flag grand entry, as well as award presentations and closing ceremony. State teams compete at the national level for the various shooting events and for the overall title, of which Texas has won the 4H National Overall Title 15 ft he last 16 years.

Notice of Application for a Commercial Disposal Facility On April 29, 2014, Petro Waste Environmental LP filed an application with the Railroad Commission of Texas to operate a Commercial Disposal Facility to Treat and Dispose of Non-Hazardous Oil and Gas Waste at the Howard County Disposal & Reclamation Facility in multiple disposal pits.

on the T & P Railroad Co. Survey, Abstract A-532, Section 7, Block 34, Township 1 South in Howard County, Texas. The site is located on real property owned by Pyote Well Service, LLC and is located approximately 10 miles southwest of Big Spring, Texas. Wastes to be accepted for disposal include:

- Water-based drilling fluid and associated cuttings;
- Oil-based drilling fluids and associated cuttings;
- Tank bottoms from gas plants, crude oil reclamation plants, and crude oil production/separation facilities;
- Waste material from produced water collecting pits;
- Produced formation sand;
- Non-injectable waste waters;
- Soil contaminated with produced water, crude oil, or condensate;
- Solid waste from gas dehydration and sweetening;
- Iron sulfide;
- Spent activated carbon and other filtering and separation media; and,
- Inert waste as defined by Statewide Rule 8 such as contaminated concrete or wood.

Affected persons may protest this application. Protests must be in writing and must be received by the 15th day after the last date of publication of this notice. The last date of publication of this notice is expected to be April 22, 2015, which means protests should be received by May 7, 2015. Protests must be sent to the Technical Permits Section, Oil and Gas Division, Railroad Commission of Texas, P.O. Box 12967, Austin, Texas 78711 (Telephone 512-463-3840). #8755 June 16-29, 2015

Tomorrow's Horoscope

New Moon in Gemini

HOLIDAY MATHIS

Did you say the wrong thing and hurt someone's feelings? Did you accidentally give false information because you remembered it incorrectly?

Did you blab when you shouldn't have? Mistakes happen. Nobody's perfect. The new moon in Gemini is the gift of a clean slate. Don't be surprised if you fix it all by expressing yourself brilliantly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The saying is that "no news is good news," and yet more often "no news" is neither good nor bad; it just doesn't involve you. Go where the communication naturally flows back to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You have many friends, but sometimes it seems like you lack that one who gets you. That's why it's wonderful today when you tell your story and it is met with the response you were going for.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You're not a shallow thinker, but it's often more efficient to make assumptions based on the surface evidence. Make an effort to do some research that you believe will be a waste of time. Tonight, it won't be.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You can't be everywhere, and even if you could be, it wouldn't do you any good. As the Roman philosopher Seneca said, "To be everywhere is to be nowhere."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Think about what you are creating. When you find yourself focusing on what you need and want instead, correct your brain by gently telling your mind to go back to building on what you have.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The confusion is strong, and it comes from having too many choices. What would please you the most? What would do the most good for those around you? What feels right? Trust your answers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You started at your goal and planned backward. Now you're finding that several of the steps took longer and cost more than expected. Adjust the plan; don't abandon it. This will still work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You don't have to whack your way through the weeds, because there's a path. Ask around to find out where it is. Someone would love to guide you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). When you say "yes" to one thing, you are closing yourself off to all the other options. It's scary, but it's right. Make a commitment. Instead of restricting you, the decision will liberate you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Usually, you get a better perspective by backing off of your problem. Today is different. Getting closer will help you more. Bring your emotional magnifying glass to the situation

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The people some consider to be lost souls look more like free spirits to you. You've always been drawn to nontraditional thinkers, and that's why you've amassed such an eclectic group of friends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Don't be fooled into thinking you're getting the inside scoop. What you'll hear is the world according to the person speaking. There are many different truths to a situation. Listen without judgment.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 16). Decisiveness is your cosmic b-day gift. You know what you want, so decide how and move toward your goals. Friendships are the gold of July and August, and shared experiences will bond you for years to come. September brings a daring personal risk. Make sure you can trust someone before you give your heart. Pisces and Virgo people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 1, 28, 33, 19 and 5.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "What are the signs that a Capricorn guy is into you? I'm getting mixed signals. Sometimes he's extra flirty, especially in late-night texts. Then, when I follow up the next day, he sometimes doesn't answer at all. I'll see him when we're out, and it sometimes works out magically. It feels like we have something really special. But then he doesn't call for weeks, and he seems reluctant to make plans. It's as though the stars have to align for us to meet up, and when they do, it's amazing. When they don't, I start to obsess. How do I play this one? I'm a Leo."

The obsessive energy drives him away. This is true even if you don't act on it, because your Leo intensity (which is so helpful and positive when applied to many areas of life, but not to this) can be strongly felt on a spiritual and emotional level. It scares your practical Capricorn because he's not wanting a serious thing from you at this time. This ultra-casual connection can only be enjoyed by both parties if they have the same expectations of it. Release all expectations that this is "a thing," and see it instead as sheer fun in the moment.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Gemini Abby Elliott stars as a mom-bot Manhattanite in the new Bravo scripted comedy "Odd Mom Out." This "Saturday Night Live" alumna was the first second-generation cast member, following her father, Chris Elliott. Abby was born when the sun and Venus were both in Gemini, lending the kind of quick, sharp wit that's ideal for comedy.

Opening lead — ten of diamonds.
Let's say you're in six hearts and West leads a diamond. You start with 11 tricks, and the problem is to find the best way to acquire a 12th. How far your thinking goes depends on how much experience you've had.
A beginner or near-beginner might stake the outcome entirely on the hope that East had the king of spades and would eventually try a spade finesse. This line of play would offer a 50 percent chance for the contract.

A more experienced player, having developed a natural aversion to relying on finesses, would recognize the potential of dummy's clubs. He might therefore cash the A-K of clubs and ruff a club high, hoping the opposing clubs were divided 3-3. If they were, he could later use the heart ace as an entry to discard two spades on the established clubs.
If everything went perfectly, declarer would make seven on this line of play. But even if the clubs turned out to be divided 4-2, he would still have the spade finesse to fall back on. The total chance of success of this approach would be about 66 percent — surely better than a straightforward finesse, but not nearly as promising as a third alternative:
Win the diamond, cash the king of hearts, lead a club at trick three and play low from dummy! Take East's probable spade return with the ace, cash the queen of hearts, lead a club to the king and ruff a club. Then lead a heart to the ace and discard the Q-4 of spades on the A-8 of clubs.
This method of play offers by far the best chance. It does the job whether the clubs are divided 3-3 or 4-2, a combined probability of about 84 percent, and renders the spade finesse virtually unnecessary.

Tomorrow: It pays to plan the play.

James confident Cavs can win, force seventh game

CLEVELAND (AP) — Wearing a leather Cavaliers cap and a steely look, LeBron James used his postgame platform to proclaim that he's "the best player in the world."

It's not as if his greatness was in dispute after five dominant games of these NBA Finals. James has shown no one challenges his on-court supremacy. However, while his game and confidence soar, James knows he must do even more, if possible, to stop Cleveland's inspiring postseason from crashing.

"I've got to be better," James said. Even that might not be enough.

Stephen Curry and the Golden State Warriors are one win from a golden trophy.

Up 3-2 in a scintillating series loaded with subplots and strategy, the Warriors can win their first title since 1975 on Tuesday night with a win in Game 6. James didn't blink after Game 5 when he declared he was not only the top player on seven continents, but prepared to raise his game.

"We've got enough to win it," he said. "I feel confident."

But so are the Warriors, and James' bravado — and his preposterous postseason statistics aside — won't matter if Curry, who found his stroke a few games back in Quicken Loans Arena, shoots the way he did in Sunday night's 104-91 win.

Curry scored 17 of his 37 points in the fourth quarter, when he answered every one of James' big baskets with stunning buckets of his own as the game's two biggest stars played a finals version of "H-O-R-S-E" to the delight of millions of TV viewers and a sonic crowd inside Oracle Arena.

Curry showed why he was the league's MVP this season, setting the Warriors up to take home the shimmering Larry O'Brien Trophy. Curry was treated for dehydration after Game 5, but he's expected to be fully recovered as the Warriors try to finish the Cavs.

"We fought hard all year and put ourselves in good position now to go to Cleveland and hopefully close it out," Curry said. "We're confident."

James stands in Golden State's way, and clearly intends to do everything in his power to force Game 7. It's unfathomable to think James can give any more than he already has, but he has no choice.

"I don't put a ceiling on what I'm capable of doing," he said. "I know I'm shouldering a lot of the burden, but it is what it is."

After a 40-point, 14-rebound, 11-assist performance, he's averaging 36.6 points, 12.5 rebounds and 8.8 assists — a mind-boggling statistical line never before seen in finals history. James is doing it all with All-Stars Kyrie Irving and Kevin Love recovering from post-season surgeries, sparking debate about whether he deserves to be the finals MVP — win or lose. Jerry West (1969) is the only player to win MVP honors for a losing team.

"He sets the pace," said Hall of Famer Oscar Robertson. "He's doing what defenses give him and he's playing smart."

Smart and sublime may not be enough.

Cleveland's supporting cast isn't pulling its weight. The Cavs got early baskets from J.R. Smith in Game 5, but the streaky shooter didn't score in the last 33 minutes. Guards Iman Shumpert and Matthew Dellavedova went a combined 5 of 18 and were tentative with the ball.
