Pops parking space to be at a premium

BY LYNDEL MOODY
 Staff Writer

Those coming late to the annual Pops in the Park Fourth of July celebration this Friday may want to bring along a pair of good walking shoes. You are going to need them.

According to Big Spring Police Lt. Brian Gordon, early traffic will be directed to the Russ McEwen Water Park parking lot on event day, which is the closest of the six designated parking spaces to the Big Spring Amphitheater located in the Comanche Trail Park.

Once the Water Park parking lot is at capacity, traffic will be then sent on to the next designated area located a little farther from the main event stage. Each designated area is located increasingly away from the Amphitheater and vehicles will continue to be directed farther away from the main activities until the last parking space is filled and police declare the park is at its capacity, Gordon said.

At that time, the park will be closed to vehicle traffic.

"We start parking when we get there. We're already starting about 3 p.m.," Gordon said. "The majority of the crowd comes around 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. all the way up until we shut the gates to the park."

Handicapped parking will be available for vehicles with a state issued placard or plate, Gordon said.

"A designated handicapped parking area is on top of the Amphitheater next to the vendors as well as along east side of the Aquatic Center," Gordon said. "If that fills up, which it usually does, we also have shuttles. If we see an elderly person or someone having trouble walking then we try to get them a shuttle to get them a ride up there."

Gates to the Amphitheater open for Pops in the Park at 5 p.m. Food and novelty vendors will also open at that time. Also by this time, many of the open fields will have families set up to enjoy the evening with a picnic.

By 6 p.m. at the Amphitheater Donny Green and Los Greengos will take the stage for the pre-show.

The main event begins at 8 p.m. when the Big Spring Symphony and Chorus take the stage to begin the patriotic portion of the evening with the presentation of colors. Also scheduled is a pa-

A new city ordinance may take the bite out of some spectators July Fourth festivities at the annual Pops in the Park concert and fireworks display on Friday but officials cite public safety as factor on a ban on dogs in the Comanche Trail Amphitheater.

Earlier this year, the Big Spring city council approved a ban on dogs allowed in the Amphitheater citing public safety as the reason. The new ordinance does not include service animals and dogs are still allowed in the park as long as they remain on a leash.

"You can not predict the reaction of a dog, an animal from a loud noise," said Big Spring Police Lt. Brian Gordon. "This law also addresses those irresponsible pet owners that bring four or five large dogs and try to handle that many dogs with one person. This wasn't created to penalize the responsible pet owner but it is in consideration of the safety of the public."

Several thousands of people will make their way to the park Friday in anticipation of the patriotic annual concert featuring the Big Spring Symphony and Chorus and fireworks display to celebrate the country's anniversary date of declared independence from England and its monarchy. The highlight of the evening is a large fireworks display.

News in brief

Greece in limbo: Shuttered banks keep lifeline while Athens, lenders wait for referendum

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Greece braced for more chaos on the streets outside its mostly shuttered banks Thursday, as Athens and its creditors halted talks on resolving the country's deepening financial crisis until a referendum this weekend.

Banks have been closed all week to prevent a crash from mass money withdrawals, while a few have been reopened to help pensioners without ATM cards.

But they are still in business. The European Central Bank left the terms of its emergency $100 billion cash support to Greece unchanged, a day after Athens slipped into arrears with the International Monetary Fund and its bailout program expired.

The move kept chances alive for a settlement between Greece and creditors. And Finance Minister Yanis Varoufakis publicly thanked the ECB and its president, Mario Draghi, for the decision.

What crisis? Greek troubles that terrified markets in 2012 seem manageable now

The prospect of a Greek crackup isn't so terrifying anymore.

In 2012, financial markets were rattled by the possibility that Greeks would elect a left-wing government, default on their debts and drop the euro currency. The fears pushed the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index down nearly 10 percent that spring.

Here's how things look now: The left-wing party, Syriza, holds power in Athens. Greece actually did miss a loan payment to the International Monetary Fund late Tuesday. And the nation's future in the eurozone hinges precariously on a referendum Sunday.

Yet investors seem to be taking events in stride. Stocks around the world mostly rose Wednesday.

Part of the calm reflects hope that Greece ultimately will reach a deal with its creditors and that Greeks will vote Sunday to accept their demands and keep the euro. But investors also have been reassured by the defenses the Europeans have built the past three years to limit potential damage. Improving economic conditions in Europe and America help too.

Another solid month of hiring is expected for June as US job market nears normal

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. employers likely hired at another strong pace in June, a sign that the job market is nearing full health and giving the Federal Reserve reason to raise interest rates as early as September.

Economists predict that employers added 233,000 jobs and that the unemployment rate dipped to 5.4 percent from 5.5 percent in May, according to data firm FactSet.

The June employment report will be released at 8:30 a.m. Eastern time Thursday.

For the first five months of 2015, monthly job growth has averaged 217,000, a healthy streak that is steadily absorbing the unemployed as well as part-time workers looking for more hours.

Many but not all in GOP grouse, showing obstacles and openings as US, Cuba ready embassies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Loud but hardly universal catcalls from Republicans underscored the obstacles and opportunities ahead as U.S. and Cuban leaders announced an opening of embassies in Havana and Washington and a resumption of diplomatic relations severed the year President Barack Obama was born.

Obama also called on Congress to lift the economic and travel embargoes that the U.S. has used for decades in an attempt to force Cuba's leaders toward democracy. Obama has partly eased those restrictions on his own, but continued opposition from many Republicans and some Democrats makes it unlikely that lawmakers will fully revoke those bans quickly.

Labeling the moment "a choice between the future and the past," Obama on Wednesday revealed the latest steps in a half-year of rapid-fire improvements in relations between two nations that lie 90 miles apart but have spent nearly six decades separated by light years diplomatically and economically.

1 dead, 2 injured in Stanton head-on collision

Herald Staff Report

Two Stanton residents were injured in a two-vehicle, head-on accident Wednesday evening near Midland that left one man dead.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Craig Mitchell McDowell, 26, of Kemper, Texas was pronounced dead at the scene of an accident which occurred about 6 p.m. Wednesday 12 miles south east of Midland on state highway 158.

Also injured in the accident were Bonifacio D. Navarette, 61, of Stanton, Anthony Rene Padron, 22, of Stanton and Roland Domingo Delgado, 18, of Lamesa. All three were taken to Midland Memorial Hospital for treatment, the DPS said.

According to information released by the DPS, McDowell was driving a 2014 Volkswagen Jetta traveling east bound in the westbound lane of highway 158 when the vehicle collided head-on with a 2014 International 4300 driven by Navarette. Padron and Delgado were passengers in the 18-wheeler, the DPS said.

Road conditions were play drawing an overflowing crowd to amphitheater which seats a little less than 7,000 people.

Not everyone will enjoy the fireworks at the Amphitheater. Many families choose to picnic or view the fireworks in several of the park's open fields. One refreshment all spectators will need to leave at home is alcohol beverages as the city does not allow any alcohol in the park unless a permit has been obtained. Even then, the consumption of alcohol limited to certain areas of the park.

"You can have alcohol if you have a permit at the amphitheater, Old Settlers Pavilion and of course the Golf Course clubhouse has a permit," Gordon said. "Anywhere else in the park it is illegal to be in possession of alcohol."

Gates open for the annual Pops in the Park at 5 p.m. Friday. The main event begins at 8 p.m. with the fireworks display scheduled to begin about 9:30 p.m.

triotic salute to U.S. military veterans, posting and retiring of the colors and a missing man fly over by the Commemorative Air Force.

The highlight of the evening is the large fireworks display with accompany music played by the Big Spring Symphony.

Thousands of spectators pack Comanche Trail Park each year to view the Fourth of July celebrations and major fireworks display held annual by the Pops in the Park committee. Tight control on parking helps city employees, volunteers and police officers allow as many people to attend the event safely, Gordon said.

"When people park where they want to park, we lose thousands of parking spaces," he said. "They double park, triple park. They park where emergency vehicles can not get through. It creates a safety issue."

The flow of traffic usually continues throughout the evening until police declare the park is at its capacity for vehicle traffic. Gordon said that is usually around 9 p.m. By that time, the Amphitheater which seats a little less than 7,000 will be overflowing with spectators, many who come specifically for the fireworks show.

About 15 to 16 police officers on duty at the park during the evening along with many volunteers will be helping to keep traffic running as smooth as possible, Gordon said.

"We want everyone to have a good time," said Gordon.

Following the Pops and Pops fireworks finale, long traffic lines leaving the park occur each year when gates reopen to the park to release outgoing traffic.

The flag and South Carolina

When I went off to college in 1972, leaving Texas for New England, I took something to remind me of home: a large Confederate flag. With my roommates' indulgence, it hung on the wall of my freshman dorm suite the entire academic year.

It seemed harmless at the time. I didn't intend any racial message, and I didn't feel any sympathy for racial bigotry. Although I had attended segregated public schools all my life, when my high school integrated my senior year, I co-chaired a student human relations committee to address racial conflicts.

Like a lot of people below the Mason-Dixon Line — white people, anyway — I saw the emblem as a token of regional pride. I didn't revere slavery and Jim Crow.

But I thought there was much about the South to love.

And if the flag annoyed the Yankees a little, that was OK. They were not as noble and blameless as they pretended to be. They were not going to make me repudiate my native region.

But when I recently ran across a photo of me and a friend hanging that flag out the dorm window, I winced. The banner, the familiar red rectangle with a blue X, hadn't changed. But my understanding of what it signified had.

In 2015, anyone displaying that flag knows what it means to viewers, particularly black ones. It's an expression of hostility, not only toward black people, but to broader ideals of how the nation should come to terms with the legacy of racism.

It's a gesture of defiance by many whites who feel victimized by the growing visibility and influence of minorities. It's a giant middle finger, aimed at anyone who would find it offensive.

In a free society, expression of that sort is protected. So it's not surprising to know that the flag can be seen in many places in the South. But it is jarring to be reminded that it still flies at the state Capitol of South Carolina. There, it's justified as a tribute to the state's Civil War heritage and history.

Except it's not, really. The flag didn't fly over the state Capitol until the early 1960s, and it was revived in direct reaction to the civil rights movement.

It was a token of whites' attachment to segregation.

South Carolina's impulse was not unique in the South. In 1956, Georgia changed its state flag to incorporate the Confederate flag. In Texas, at least, there was a fear of naming schools after Robert E. Lee, another coded message.

Dylann Roof, the accused shooter in the massacre of nine parishioners at a black church in Charleston, had a car with a Confederate flag license plate. It's not hard to guess why: He was a white supremacist, flaunting a symbol of white supremacy.

South Carolinians and others have been arguing over this flag for years. In 1999, the NAACP mounted a campaign to boycott the state as a protest of the state Capitol display. The city's mayor urged its removal. The legislature agreed that instead of flying over the building, it would hang at a monument to Confederate soldiers on the grounds.

But that mild concession was not enough to satisfy the NAACP. And Gov. Nikki Haley has refused to reopen the issue.

It arose in the 2000 GOP presidential primary, when George W. Bush and John McCain refused to utter a bad word about the Capitol flag, insisting it was something for South Carolinians to decide.

But there is no way to justify its continued place of honor in Columbia. Getting rid of it would be a step toward acknowledging that the history many South Carolinians revere was oppressive, brutal and unconscionable. Its enduring fallout is a burden on whites as well as blacks.

After losing the 2000 primary, McCain admitted he was dishonest in defending the flag. But he didn't just reverse the position he had taken to win votes in South Carolina.

The Arizona senator said his Confederate ancestors "fought on the wrong side of American history. I don't believe their service, however distinguished, needs to be commemorated in a way that offends, that deeply hurts, people whose ancestors were once denied their freedom by my ancestors."

McCain didn't force South Carolina's defenders of the flag to admit the obvious. Maybe Dylann Roof will.

There's too many tourists

At the Vatican, the crowds breathing out carbon dioxide and emitting body heat are so tough that they are threatening the glorious Renaissance frescoes that drew them in the first place. Vatican officials are trying to limit the damage through climate-control systems, but also by reducing the number of people coming through.

ROME, Italy — On a recent June day, about 24,999 other tourists and I squeezed into the Vatican's Sistine Chapel. Seeing the Vatican and its museums is one of the most visually magnificent experiences on Earth. Clearly, the word has gotten out.

The chapel's ceiling — where Michelangelo painted God sending the spark of life to Adam — remains unforgettable, but its splendor does not entirely block the distraction of sweating humanity pressing on you.

Hypertourism has degraded sightseeing's five-star experiences. As the word suggests, hypertourism refers to the crush of transients into places built for more intimate encounters. And although the long lines and chaos surrounding such venues as the Louvre Museum in Paris and the Duomo in Florence are legendary, hypertourism is growing everywhere there's a bucket-list site, including in America's national parks.

The factors fueling the phenomenon are obvious. Not only are more people inhabiting the planet, but many more of them have the wherewithal to travel. Add to that cheaper airfares and easy online booking.

Hypertourism can endanger the sights themselves. The famous ruins at Peru's Machu Picchu are under assault by the more than 2,500 visitors a day. The sacred Inca city doesn't have the facilities to handle all that human waste.

At the Vatican, the crowds breathing out carbon dioxide and emitting body heat are so tough that they are threatening the glorious Renaissance frescoes that drew them in the first place. Vatican officials are trying to limit the damage through climate-control systems, but also by reducing the number of people coming through. The latter is a painful step for a holy place reaching out to all humanity.

In this country, anyone who visits Bear Lake in Rocky Mountain National Park on a warm day knows that our national parks are not immune to the discomforts of hypertourism.

The national parks have a lot of space, but they are also supposed to provide wilderness experiences. It can be hard to find solitude in a park that last year saw 3.4 million visitors — unless you're prepared to hike far from the beaten track.

At Yellowstone National Park recently, a bison lying on the grass near Old Faithful Lodge and minding his (or her) own business was crowded by a group of tourists. An Australian man wielding an iPad-type device got into the bison's face, and the animal butted him into the air reportedly several times. This was the second violent human-bison encounter at Yellowstone this year, and the summer has hardly begun.

One possible solution for crowded national parks is to create more of them. Another would be a strategy to discourage drive-through visitors, especially on the busiest days.

No one visits New York City for a wilderness experience — "wild" is another matter — but even in the land of hustle-bustle, the crowds are getting oppressive. Huge jets from every continent are now disgorging millions of summer tourists. Pedestrians have to walk into Fifth Avenue traffic to get around the throngs taking selfies and preparing Facebook posts in front of Tiffany's flagship store.

The gorgeous Grand Central Terminal has rightly become a must-see on the New York tour, but it's still a train station. Commuters now struggle to get around tourists commandeering staircases for group photos.

A reality check is in order. New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art may seem jammed, but the nearly 6 million visitors it attracted last year equaled the number that packed into the Vatican Museums, a fifth its size.

Still, it's undeniable that hypertourism has come to America. And its bags are unpacked.

U.S. seeks extradition of 7 arrested FIFA officials

GENEVA (AP) — The United States has submitted a formal request for Switzerland to extradite seven FIFA officials arrested in Zurich as part of a corruption probe that has rocked soccer's world governing body.

Switzerland's Federal Office of Justice said Thursday that the requests were received from the U.S. embassy in Bern. The expected demands submitted late Wednesday met a 40-day deadline since the seven were detained early May 27 in raids on a luxury hotel in FIFA's home city.

All seven men detained in Zurich, including three current and former members of FIFA's executive committee, have already objected to extradition. They face around 20 years in prison.

The widening American investigation alleges bribery and racketeering worth more than $150 million involving high-ranking FIFA officials over a 24-year span.

The U.S. Department of Justice published an indictment of 14 soccer and marketing officials in May which alleged bribery linked to awarding broadcast rights for international tournaments in North and South America.

"These crimes are thought to have been agreed and prepared in the USA, and payments were allegedly routed through US banks," the Swiss justice ministry said in a statement Thursday.

The seven will be heard by Zurich cantonal (State) police and granted a 14-day period to respond to federal officials about the extradition request, the Swiss justice ministry said.

Swiss justice officials will then rule "within a few weeks" on whether to extradite them. That ruling can be appealed to Switzerland's top criminal court and supreme court.

The seven men include FIFA vice president Jeffrey Webb of

Williams makes all-academic team

Postseason honors continue to roll in for Forsan High School's baseball team.

The latest announcement is the inclusion of senior Trevor Williams to the Class 2A all-academic team.

Williams was one of the keystones for the Buffaloes, helping to lead them to the state playoffs this season.

Aggie Club to host golf tourney

The Jerry Foresyth Golf Scramble, sponsored by the Howard County A&M Club, will be held July 11 at Big Spring Country Club.

The four-person tournament will begin with an 8 a.m. shotgun start. Entry fee is $400 per team, which includes a golf cart. Players can purchase a maximum of two mulligans for $5 each.

Awards for mulligans drive and closest to the pin will be presented. Prizes will be country club Pro Shop credits.

Rangers' homers continue, but Orioles prevail

BALTIMORE (AP) — Facing a pitcher who had given them fits in the past, the Texas Rangers continued their long-ball barrage against the Baltimore Orioles.

In spite of that, Wei-Yin Chen again proved to be too tough for the Rangers to handle.

Chen pitched eight innings of four-hit ball and the Orioles got a tiebreaking two-run homer from J.J. Hardy in a 4-2 victory Wednesday night.

After hitting four home runs in each of the first two games of the series, the Rangers got solo shots from Shin-Soo Choo and Ryan Rua. That, unfortunately, was the extent of their damage against Chen.

Chen (4-4) needed only 87 pitches to get 24 outs and improve his lifetime record against Texas to 5-0 with a 1.80 ERA.

"Chen with the fastball and changeup was really tough on our guys," manager Jeff Banister said. "We did clip him for a couple home runs, but it wasn't enough."

Zach Britton struck out the Texas Rangers' Shin-Soo Choo, center, is mobbed by teammates after he hit a home run against the Baltimore Orioles during the third inning of their baseball game in Baltimore Wednesday.

Houston sweeps away Kansas City

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros statement sweep of the Kansas City Royals came at a cost, as center fielder George Springer could be heading to the disabled list with an injured right wrist.

Jose Altuve had three hits and scored the tiebreaking run in the seventh inning to help the Astros complete the three-game sweep with a 6-5 win on Wednesday night.

Springer, who is hitting .264 with 13 homers and 29 RBIs, was plunked on a 95 mph fastball thrown by Edinson Volquez in the fifth inning. He left the game shortly after and was having X-rays after the game. But manager A.J. Hinch wasn't optimistic about the injury.

"We're going to get more and more tests with some specialists," Hinch said. "It was painful for him, there was some swelling. It was in a tricky area; anything around the hand and the wrist area is cause of great concern. We'll see how it goes but, I do think it's going to be a DL."

The game was tied at 5 in the seventh when Kelvin Herrera (1-2) plunked Altuve on the forearm. Altuve stole second and reached third on a lineout. He put Houston on top when he beat the tag at the plate on a fielder's choice by Chris Carter.

The play was reviewed and upheld.

"I knew it was a close play," Altuve said. "With those plays you never know if you are safe or not. But I was hoping to be safe because I know our bullpen is really good and I think that run will be enough to win the game."

The Astros trailed early before taking a 5-3 lead after a four-run fifth inning. A two-run triple by Jarrod Dyson off Josh Fields tied it in the seventh before Altuve scored the go-ahead run.

Luke Gregerson (3-1) pitched a perfect ninth for the win.

Carter and Marwin Gonzalez hit solo homers for Houston and Evan Gattis drove in two runs.

Japan to face USA in World Cup final

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — The pressure is off now that Japan gets the opportunity to defend its Women's World Cup championship.

And not even the prospect of facing the suddenly surging United States in the final in Vancouver on Sunday is enough to worry Norio Sasaki.

Japan's coach was in a philosophical mood after his normally fluid-passing team showed uncharacteristic tentativeness in pulling out a 2-1 win over England in the semifinal on Wednesday night. It was a game decided with about a minute left in second-half stoppage time, when Laura Bassett directed the ball into her own net.

"I think they desired too much to go to the final and that might have affected the mentality in some players," Sasaki said through a translator. "But now we are going to the final, and I don't think that kind of pressure is there anymore because they're in the final."

There was also a personal objective that played a factor, Sasaki added.

His players wanted to win for injured defender Kozue Ando, who broke her left ankle in a tournament-opening 1-0 win over Switzerland.

After having surgery in Japan, Ando is scheduled to rejoin her teammates in Vancouver.

"We can invite her back, so we can fight together," Sasaki said.

Fourth-ranked Japan will face what's become a

"In order to be the best team in the world at the World Cup, you have to beat the best teams.

We just beat the No. 1 team in the world in Germany and now we face Japan, another team that we have so much respect for."

familiar foe with a championship on the line. It beat the Americans on penalty kicks after a 2-2 draw in the 2011 World Cup final.

The U.S. responded by beating Japan 2-1 to win the gold medal at the 2012 London Games. Overall, the U.S. is 24-1-6 against Japan.

"Only the god knows the outcome," Sasaki said. "And Japan needs to build up on our power. And that's what I take away from this game."

Japan came out flat against sixth-ranked England, which bottled up the middle to prevent the Japanese from gathering momentum from their ball-control approach.

The teams traded penalty kick goals in the first half. Japan's Aya Miyama scored in the 33rd minute, and Fara Williams tied it in the 40th.

Then England took control in the second half, in which it dominated much of the play.

and sent a cross into the middle for Yuki Ogimi. Bassett was in full stride when she reached out with her right foot, caught the ball flush and inadvertently directed it toward her net. The ball struck the crossbar and bounced in just before goalkeeper Karen Bardsley could get across.

"I was very happy," said player of the match Saori Ariyoshi, referring to watching the ball go in. "Well, we did it. That's how I felt."

It was a withering moment for England, which had no time — or energy — to gather itself and make a comeback.

After the final whistle, Bassett lay face-down on the field sobbing, and had to be helped off by her teammates and coach Mark Sampson.

"Oh, what a tough one, what a tough one to take," a red-eyed England Sampson said. "I can't speak about the game. I can only speak about how incredibly proud I am of my group."

The sixth-ranked Lionesses made their deepest run in four World Cup appearances. England, which had never won an elimination game until this year, will remain in Edmonton to play top-ranked Germany in the third-place match Saturday. Germany lost 2-0 to the U.S. on Tuesday.

Japan is 6-0 this tournament, and has won nine consecutive World Cup games since losing to England in the preliminary round in 2011.

Bring it on, U.S. players said after learning they'll face Japan.

"In order to be the best team in the world at the World Cup, you have to beat the best teams," star forward Abby Wambach said. "We just beat the No. 1 team in the world in Germany and now we face Japan, another team that we have so much respect for. They have an amazing team and they're the reigning World Cup champions, so I think it's going to be a fantastic final."

The second-ranked Americans are 5-0-1 this tournament, with a preliminary-round tie against Sweden.

U.S. defender Ali Krieger likes the way her squad is performing heading into the final. The Americans have played, by far, their best soccer in their last two matches, wins over China and Germany.

"I'm excited," Krieger said. "It is fun to face Japan again, but we are really focusing on ourselves. We have good momentum."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Full-Moon Aftermath

HOLIDAY MATHIS cross your mind that you wish wouldn't have. It's not all in your control. Just because you think it doesn't mean it's right or that you should believe it. In the aftermath of the full moon, test your thoughts. Take them to inquiry. Intellectual exploration may just lead you to the knowledge that your heart is pure.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The wise don't care about being first in line. Whatever your place today, you'll hold it with the kind of detached confidence that attracts the very best. Your way will be made easily.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You'd like to have more self-discipline. This isn't a matter of forcing yourself to do what you don't want to do. It's about building rewards so luscious that they motivate you to follow through with your intentions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). What the day needs is an invigorating challenge to kick things off on the right note. Instead of making a list of things to do today, make a list of things to do before 1 p.m.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You're getting better, mostly because when you discover your errors, you rejoice at another opportunity to improve. This attitude will take you to mastery.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). This is the time of year when the Facebook pages are filled with vacations that look more glamorous than yours. Just know that everyone feels that way. As a matter of fact, someone is envying your posts today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Whatever your game, this is the start of a hot streak.

Between here and the weekend, there will be several small wins that add up to something you've wanted for a long time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You'll be choosing quickly and sometimes wrongly. That's fine, too. Wrong choices lead to right choices as long as you're committed to learning from them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). When you fear losing something, you hold onto it too tightly. What if you were to go the other way and let go? It might not be time yet, but you have to admit that this fear is no fun to live with.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). It's said that fate doesn't like to be tempted. And yet there is a curious provocateur in you who wants to push the fates and see just how far they will go before they retaliate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Keeping your skills current requires some dedication, and you're willing to put in the work. Doing so before it's really necessary will give you an advantage later. You'll be ready for an opportunity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Most people fail more than they succeed. Great people have failed greatly. Failure is part of life, and fearing it can only hold us back. Befriend it instead.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). With an enhanced ability to organize the future, you'll create a scenario so grand that even you are not sure you'll be able to pull it off. Leave room for spontaneous magic.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 2). It's time for some entertainment and fun. You'll get extra funds for this kind of thing over the next seven weeks. September has you heading up a family project. The investment of your time and energy will pay off in November as it should, and later in unexpected ways. Your love life heats up in January. Leo and Gemini people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 27, 39, 12, 24 and 18.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "How involved should I get in my child's play dynamics? She's an 8-year-old Scorpio. She and a few friends have formed a club at the day camp she goes to while I'm working. One of the girls is testing people to see who qualifies for the club, and club members decide who is in and out. Children are being excluded, and I don't like the sound of it. I told my daughter to find something else to play, but I can't be sure she is. Should I tell the camp teacher that these types of informal alliances shouldn't be allowed on the playground, or am I being an over-the-top helicopter mom? I'm a Virgo, by the way."

While working out conflicts and learning about social dynamics are key functions of recess, no good will come of this type of play, especially given the emotional development of most 8-year-olds. Without being too heavy-handed (thorough Virgos like you sometimes have trouble keeping it short), a breezy mention to the recess teacher or note of concern to the principal will likely be enough to put this clique and their activities on the radar and put the kibosh on the club.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Ashley Tisdale is racking up the producing credits, as well as acting credits, adding value to her name and production company. The Cancer overachiever was born when the moon was also in Cancer, suggesting that Tisdale is guided by strong intuition. Her Venus in Leo points to a true love of entertaining people, a playful nature and a special connection with children.

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: I am gay. Two years ago, my partner of 34 years told me that my brother-in-law had touched her breasts inappropriately. I didn't believe her and we had a huge fight over it. She never confronted him or told my sister, and she has continued to socialize with my family.

Last weekend, we attended my niece's graduation, and much to my horror, my brother-in-law rubbed his hand across my butt. Worse, I then had to get into the same car with him. I was shocked and said nothing, even though I was terribly upset. I avoided him the rest of the weekend, but things haven't been quite right since.

A year ago, I moved to another state and spend vacations with my sister and her family, either in her home or mine. Now I'm not sure I should continue.

I do not understand why he did this or what to do. Was it an act of power or hate or some kind of midlife crisis? This is my sister's husband, whom I have respected through the years. I now doubt everything about him, including his fidelity to my sister, his morals and whether he has touched other females in the family.

I am close to my sister and don't want to hurt her. We are not young anymore and don't have a tremendous amount of time left to be near each other. But I am not comfortable with the idea of staying in the same house with him. How do I explain that to my sister without causing more harm? -- Confused and Angry

Dear Confused: There is another possibility. Sometimes, sudden and peculiar changes in behavior or a loss of inhibition can indicate a medical problem, including a small stroke or early signs of dementia. In all the years you have known him, your brother-in-law has never behaved this way toward you.

Please talk to your sister. Say that you've noticed some disturbing changes in your brother-in-law's recent behavior and that you worry he may have some physical or neurological problems. You will have to tell her what you mean, but do so with concern and caring, instead of accusations and condemnation. Suggest to her that she get him to a doctor for a complete work-up and evaluation.

Dear Annie: This is for "Had Enough, Thanks," the 68-year-old woman whose husband still wants to have sex, but she isn't interested. I have the opposite problem.

My husband is in his late 60s, and I am 10 years younger. We have only been married for five years, and he has had no interest in sex or any other type of physical intimacy. He even told me that he has no need for this anymore and could easily live the rest of his life without it. This has caused extreme problems, as I still have a strong need and desire for marital intimacy.

Though I truly love him, it is almost more than I can bear to face the rest of my life with virtually no human touch. -- Married, Living Alone

Dear Married: We're certain a lot of women will tell you that in a few years, you may feel the same way your husband does, but that's not necessarily true. And in the meantime, you are miserable. Is your husband willing to discuss this with his doctor or a counselor? If not, counseling might help you make some decisions.

Opening lead — jack of clubs.

In nearly all hands, a good defensive player starts out by assuming that the contract can somehow be defeated. This assumption often turns out to be untrue, but that doesn't prove the approach was wrong. All it means is that what the defender hoped for didn't pan out — which is entirely different from giving up at the start on the erroneous assumption that the contract is unbeatable.

Consider this case where East is defending against four spades and wins the opening club lead with the ace. From East's viewpoint, it seems highly unlikely that the defense can score four tricks. However, he does not allow this to color his thinking.

Instead, East tries to picture what kind of hand his partner must have for the contract to be defeated. Eventually, it becomes clear that he must credit West with the ace of diamonds, as well as either the ace or king of spades. Both of these holdings are possible on the bidding, and East tailors his defense accordingly.

At trick two, he shifts to the nine of diamonds, and from then on, declarer is a dead duck. West wins with the ace and returns a diamond, hoping East's nine was a singleton, which would quickly put an end to South's chances.

This hope does not materialize when East follows suit with the deuce, but declarer is doomed anyway. Whether South elects to take a trump finesse or forgo it, as soon as West gains the lead with the king of trumps, he returns another diamond, and East's ruff sinks the contract.

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.

This Date In History

Today is Thursday, July 2, the 183rd day of 2015. There are 182 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 2, 1776, the Continental Congress passed a resolution saying that "these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States."

On this date:

In 1881, President James A. Garfield was shot by Charles J. Guiteau at the Washington railroad station; Garfield died the following September. (Guiteau was hanged in June 1882.)

In 1890, President Benjamin Harrison signed into law the Sherman Antitrust Act.

In 1915, a time bomb planted in a reception room of the U.S. Senate exploded shortly before midnight, causing considerable damage but hurting no one. Former Mexican President Porfirio Diaz died in exile in Paris.

In 1926, the United States Army Air Corps was created.

In 1937, aviator Amelia Earhart and navigator Fred Noonan disappeared over the Pacific Ocean while attempting to make the first round-the-world flight along the equator.

In 1943, Bing Crosby and the Ken Darby Singers recorded "Sunday, Monday or Always" for Decca Records.

In 1955, "The Lawrence Welk Show" premiered on ABC-TV under its original title, "The Dodge Dancing Party."

In 1961, author Ernest Hemingway shot himself to death at his home in Ketchum, Idaho.

In 1964, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed into law a sweeping civil rights bill passed by Congress.

In 1979, the Susan B. Anthony dollar coin was released to the public.

In 1982, Larry Walters of San Pedro, California, used a lawn chair equipped with 45 helium-filled weather balloons to rise to an altitude of 16,000 feet; he landed eight miles away in Long Beach.

In 1990, more than 1,400 Muslim pilgrims were killed in a stampede inside a pedestrian tunnel near Mecca, Saudi Arabia.

Ten years ago: Shasta Groene (GROH-nee), an 8-year-old girl kidnapped six weeks earlier, was rescued at a restaurant in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; the man with her, Joseph Edward Duncan III, was arrested and accused of kidnapping Shasta as well as killing members of her family. (Duncan later received three death sentences and multiple life sentences.)

Egypt's top envoy to post-Saddam Hussein Iraq (Ihab al-Sherif) was kidnapped in Baghdad (al-Qaida later announced it had killed him). The marathon Live 8 concert rocked the globe and the Internet, focusing attention on African poverty.

Five years ago: Gen. David Petraeus arrived in Afghanistan to assume command of U.S. and NATO forces after his predecessor, Gen. Stanley McChrystal, was fired for intemperate remarks he'd made about Obama administration figures in Rolling Stone magazine. British novelist Beryl Bainbridge, 77, died in London.

Thought for Today:
"The best way to find out if you can trust somebody is to trust them."
Ernest Hemingway (1899-1961).

the Cayman Islands and Eugenio Figueredo of Uruguay, who was arrested two days before his FIFA vice presidential term expired.

Costa Rican soccer federation president Eduardo Li was arrested two days before he was due to formally join FIFA's executive committee.

Former Brazilian federation chief Jose Maria Marin led the 2014 World Cup local organizing committee and is a member of the FIFA panel organizing the men's and women's tournaments at next year's Olympic Games.

The others are Venezuela FA chief Rafael Esquivel; FIFA staffer Julio Rocha, a development officer from Nicaragua; and Costas Takkas, a Briton who works for CONCACAF President Webb.

The other seven men among the 14 indicted include disgraced former FIFA vice president Jack Warner of Trinidad and Tobago, and former FIFA executive committee member Nicolas Leoz of Paraguay, the longtime former president of South American governing body CONMEBOL.

Warner and Leoz, who left FIFA in 2011 and 2013, respectively, to avoid sanctions for unethical behavior, are fighting extradition to the U.S. from their home countries.

A further four men have entered guilty pleas which were unsealed in May. They include American former FIFA executive panel member Chuck Blazer and two sons of Warner.

The indictment revealed that Blazer admitted being part of a $10 million bribe scheme with Warner for supporting South Africa's successful bid to host the 2010 World Cup. A third South American FIFA voter was also involved, Blazer alleged.

FIFA has acknowledged that its secretary general Jerome Valcke helped transfer the money through its accounts at South Africa's request. FIFA and Valcke said the cash was believed to be for soccer projects for the African diaspora in the Caribbean, and was approved by Julio Grondona of Argentina, the chairman of FIFA's finance committee who died last year.

American law enforcement officials have confirmed that FIFA President Sepp Blatter is a target of the investigation which is expected to bring more indictments.

"Whoever accuses me of being corrupt has to prove it to me first," Blatter said in extracts of an interview released Wednesday by German weekly magazine Bunte. "But nobody can do that because I'm not corrupt."

side in the ninth for his 23rd save.

Nick Martinez (5-5) gave up four runs, three earned, and seven hits in 6 2/3 innings for Texas. He has lost three straight starts.

"I think it was a really good step in the right direction," the right-hander said. "Even though it didn't turn out my way, I feel good."

With the score tied at 2, Chris Davis led off the Baltimore seventh with a single and with one out Hardy hit a 1-1 pitch into the seats in left field.

"I just felt like I saw it pretty well out of his hand," Hardy said. "I was able to put a good swing on it."

Choo put the Rangers up 1-0 in the third inning by homering in a third straight game. He pulled off that feat once before — in April 2013 with Cincinnati. He is the first Texas player to do it since Adrian Beltre in September 2012.

Rau made it 2-0 with a drive to right in the fourth.

Rangers outfielder Josh Hamilton was given the night off after returning from a hamstring strain Tuesday and playing in his first

Parent's Corner:

The origins of the phrase "to read the riot act."

If you have been watching the news lately you will have noticed that there have been riots in several towns. I get amused at riots and why people think that rioting ever accomplishes anything.

It appears to me that rioting only destroys what people have spent years building. I realize that people have rioted in protest for years, but I've yet to see where rioting has made a real difference.

Maybe someone should read the Riot Act to the angry mob and see if it still works. I know you have heard that old saying, Read the Riot Act, but do you remember where it came from?

The phrase actually means to speak sternly to someone and threaten punishment if the current behavior doesn't stop. But did you know that there actually was a 'riot act'?

The English Parliament passed a statute in 1714 in response to a civil uprising and called it "The Riot Act."

It was an act designated to prevent unruly assemblies, and for speedy and effectual punishing of the rioters. The act allowed local authorities to forcibly disperse any band of unlawfully assembled group of a dozen or more people.

It did have a strange provision, which said a fair warning had to be issued to the band of people that were targeted. The fair warning was given by reading a proclamation, as proscribed by the Act itself.

The specific paragraph read as follows: Our Sovereign Lord the King chargeth and commandeth all persons, being assembled, immediately to disperse themselves, and peaceably to depart to their habitations, or to their lawful business, upon the pains contained in the act made in the first year of King George, for preventing tumults and riotous assemblies. God Save the King!

If the group of people failed to disperse within one hour of the proclamation, the Act provided that the authorities could use force to disperse them. Anyone assisting with the dispersal of the crowd was not found guilty of any legal action in the event of someone of the crowd being injured or killed.

The punishments for ignoring the Act were severe.

Those who failed to disperse within one hour could be classified as guilty of a felony and punishable by death, or given penal servitude for not less than three years, or imprisonment with hard labor for up to two years. Prosecutions under the Act were restricted to within one year of the event.

Because authorities were required to read the proclamation before they could enforce it, the expression "to read the Riot Act" entered into common language meaning "to reprimand severely," with the added sense of a stern warning. The phrase remains in common use in the English language even though the Riot Act is no longer law but it has been replaced by statutes allowing for the arrest of rioters.

Now you know, so if you ever hear anyone 'reading the riot act' you understand that you had better pay attention, or something bad could happen.
