Volunteers raise almost $2K for Adopt a Military Hero program

By JULIE BASS
Staff Writer

On Saturday, city and county leaders volunteered their evening to raise money to show American military personnel their appreciation and support. Volunteers with the Howard County Adopt a Military Hero were at Sonic Drive-In, along with Mayor Larry McLellan, Chief Craig Ferguson and the Big Spring Fire Department, Chief Chad Williams and the Big Spring Police Department, the Howard County Sheriff's Department and McGruff the Crime Dog. Thanks to some generous tips, these people raised $1,259.10 to assist with postage in mailing off hundreds of care packages to service members deployed during the Christmas holidays.

DA: Too early to tell how woman died in Texas jail

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press

HEMPSTEAD, Texas — A Texas prosecutor says there are many unanswered questions about the death of a black woman whose family disputes authorities' finding that she hanged herself in a jail cell three days after a confrontational traffic stop, and that the case is being examined as thoroughly as a murder investigation. Waller County District Attorney Elton Mathis said at a news conference Monday that a Texas Rangers investigation the death of Sandra Bland is being supervised by the FBI. Authorities have said the 28-year-old woman from Naperville, Illinois, hanged herself with a plastic garbage bag July 13. Her death at the Waller County jail, about 60 miles northwest of Houston, comes amid increased national scrutiny of police after a series of high-profile cases in which blacks have been killed by officers. "It is very much too early to make any kind of determination that this was a suicide or a murder because the investigations are not complete," Mathis said. He said he's asked the Texas Rangers to do extensive scientific testing for finger-

Life's a (tea) party during the Mad Hatters' meetings

By JULIE BASS
Staff Writer

You don't have to be mad to be a Mad Hatter, but a hat is more or less mandatory. This small group gathers on the third Monday of each month to wear hats, drink tea (and other refreshments), have their nails done and enjoy a luncheon where they can visit and reminisce. "The ladies like the hats and we get to spend time visiting and having fun," said Sherry Hodnett, Volunteer Director with Home Hospice. The Mad Hatters meet at Marcy Place under the direction of Betty Richardson, care services manager. On Aug. 12 at 6 p.m., there will be a program, Memory Lane. "If the families would like to bring in anything that belonged to these ladies, anything they used to keep house or raise their families with, we would love for them to bring it and help these ladies," said Hodnett. "Anything like old hats, a dress, irons, a rolling pin ... anything that would help the ladies reminisce and share with others about their lives." The Mad Hatters meet at Marcy Place at 11:30 a.m. on the third Monday of the month.

prints, DNA and to use any other valid investigative techniques "so we can figure out and say with certainty what happened in that cell."

"This investigation is still being treated just as it would be in a murder investigation. There are many questions being raised in Waller County, across the country and the world about this case. It needs a thorough review," Mathis said, noting, "It will go to a grand jury."

Capt. Brian Cantrell, head of the sheriff's department criminal investigation division, said at the same press conference that Bland's death "was a tragic incident, not one of criminal intent or a criminal act" but that he welcomed the investigation.

Although a medical examiner has ruled Bland's death a suicide, supporters insist she was upbeat and looking forward to a new job at Prairie View A&M University, where she graduated in 2009. She was in the area last week to interview and accept the job. Bland's family and clergy members have called for a Justice Department probe, and an independent autopsy has been ordered.

Bland's death has resonated on social media, with posts questioning the official account and featuring the hashtags #JusticeForSandy and #WhatHappenedToSandyBland. Others have featured #SandySpeaks, referring to the hashtag Bland had used in monologues she posted on Facebook. In them, she talked about police brutality and what she said was a calling from God to speak out against racism and injustice.

Also on Monday, authorities released a three-hour video taken from outside Bland's jail cell and said they expected to release dashcam footage of her arrest Tuesday.

The jail video shows a period of about 90 minutes with no activity in the hallway leading to Bland's cell. The video does not show the inside of her cell or even her cell door.

It then shows a deputy reacting to what she sees while looking in the cell, triggering a frenzy of activity. An EMT crew arrives with a wheeled stretcher. Deputies and medical personnel are seen coming and going, but a body isn't visible.

Cantrell said the video was motion sensitive, indicating if nothing is taking place after a certain amount of time, it turns off. He said the FBI has been given hard drives to determine if there's been any manipulation.

Cantrell said a guard checked with Bland about two hours before she was found dead and Bland told her, "I'm fine." About an hour later, Bland asked to make a telephone call and was advised over an intercom that the phone was on a wall in the cell, according to Cantrell. There is no record of her ever making a phone call, he said.

Cantrell declined to describe Bland's death in detail, though he said she was found with her feet touching the ground. He described the plastic garbage bag used as a ligature by extending his hands about 5 to 6 feet apart.

The bags, he said, had been approved by a jail inspector, but have since been removed from all cells.

Mathis also said Monday that jail records show Bland had been offered a medical checkup while in custody but declined.

Bland's sister, Shante Needham, has said Bland called her from jail the afternoon after her arrest, telling Needham an officer had placed his knee in her back and she thought her arm had been broken. The Department of Public Safety has said Bland "became argumentative and uncooperative" during the stop and her subsequent arrest for assault on a public servant, and that paramedics were called to the scene but Bland refused a medical evaluation.

Mathis said the dashcam video is consistent with information the officer has provided about the traffic stop, though he said it shows only restricted views of the encounter. The trooper's dashcam shows a view forward toward Bland's car, but not inside and not to the side, where she wound up on the ground after authorities said she kicked the officer.

Cantrell said the video doesn't show how Bland got on the ground.

"Sandra Bland was very combative," Mathis said. "It was not a model traffic stop ... and it was not a model person that was stopped on a traffic stop. I think the public can make its own determinations as to the behaviors that are seen in the video."

A cellphone video posted online purporting to show part of Bland's arrest shows an officer pinning a woman to the ground with one knee. At one point the woman can be heard yelling that she can't "feel my arm."

"You just slammed my head into the ground," she says. "Do you not even care about that?"

DPS has said the trooper who stopped Bland violated traffic stop procedures and the department's courtesy policy but hasn't elaborated further. The trooper is on administrative leave pending the outcome of an investigation.

Bird Poop:

The Ramadan rumble

Having completed a Ramadan service the previous evening, the chaplain said she had heard a commotion as she walked out of the chapel. With her way well-lit by prison lights, she saw what appeared to be a mound of small birds on top of something. Pecking relentlessly at the shape beside and beneath them, the avian attackers appeared to be wrens.

At 11:30 p.m., the sight of birds normally seen during the day was quite a surprise to her. Approaching the set-to, she startled the attackers and shooed them off. Flying to a safe distance, the wrens left behind their quarry.

"It was a burrowing owl!" she said during her phone call. Dazed, it did not move. "When it wouldn't fly, I just reached down and picked it up."

Not knowing whether or not it was injured, she took it home. Trying to think of something to place with it inside a cardboard box, she poured some Gatorade into a container and set it in a corner. During the night, at least the owl would have something to drink that might give it some energy. Barely standing the next morning, it was mostly unresponsive. It had gained orange feet, however, from the coloration added to the drink.

The chaplain's phone call had brought an enlightening comparison to an event that was reported to us the previous week. In that instance, Western kingbirds had attacked an American kestrel. The act of "mobbing" a specie, in an attempt to protect the nest and young, had yet another example.

As we continued the conversation, the chaplain said that she had to go to the prison in Colorado City. She promised to deliver the owl on her return to Big Spring.

It was just as she had described, unresponsive. It was probably battered and bruised. As we stood looking into her box at its pitiful stance, I noted the bird's wings and back were the typical color of dirt, a blend of tan and brown.

On top, its feathers were spotted with white. Underneath, its creamy plumage was heavily barred with brown. A black streak divided its white throat from its upper chest.

Its long legs and stubby tail lent to its comical appearance. Although it had no ear tufts, its round head with large, yellow eyes and white eyebrows was captivating.

After thanking the chaplain, I was grateful for her intervention. Enough birds, given enough time, could have mortally wounded this little raptor.

Finding no visible injuries, but wanting to observe it, caused me to hunt for our "hidey-hole" that Art had made years ago for burrowing owls. At that time, he had found a cardboard box that was just the right size. In it he had cut an arched doorway to allow entry.

Since this specie is notorious for wanting to hide when it feels threatened, the box, when placed inside a large carrier, would offer a place of refuge. Food could be placed outside the entrance.

As I reached inside the Gatorade stained box, the owl stood as erect as possible. It appeared to be insulted by its captivity. Suddenly, it puffed itself up by ruffling its feathers. As quickly as it had seemed to enlarge its presence, the bird lessened in size as its plumage settled back in place.

Inside the large carrier, and retreating to its new abode, the owl remained in the "hidey-hole" for the rest of the day. Toward sunset, a mouse and four baby mice were placed about an inch from the door.

The next morning, the head of the mouse was missing. The remains of the rest indicated that it had previously eaten before encounter-

High-tech aerospace exhibit starts world tour

By BRETT ZONGKER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

With space shuttles now housed in history museums, innovators in aerospace are thinking of newer, better ways humans could reach space. One idea: What about a space elevator?

This real idea is one simulation that's part of a new high-tech interactive exhibition about the future of flight opening Aug. 1 at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum. The exhibit also will serve as an important test case for new technologies to overhaul the popular museum with more interactives.

Designers at Evergreen Exhibitions in San Antonio, Texas, have been developing the new exhibition "Above and Beyond: The Ultimate Interactive Flight Exhibition" with Boeing, NASA and the Smithsonian to explore new innovations and ideas. It uses immersive videos, simulations, virtual reality, touch-tables and a 180-degree theater experience to create a hands-on, immersive experience. Curators said it is more interactive technology than the Smithsonian has ever had in an aerospace exhibit.

"Above and Beyond" will debut at one of the nation's most popular museums. The National Air and Space Museum draws nearly 7 million visitors each year on the National Mall. The exhibit runs until early January and then begins a worldwide tour through 2020. Stops will include museums in Dubai; St. Louis; Charleston, South Carolina; Riyadh, Saudi Arabia; London, Tokyo and Chicago.

One exhibit capsule will simulate the idea of a space elevator with video screens surrounding visitors to give them the feel of rising above Earth.

Researchers are developing such an idea to see if it's possible to create a real capsule that could crawl up a cord from the ground to the level of orbiting the Earth.

The Smithsonian's Air and Space Museum is planning to overhaul all of its exhibit galleries in the coming years, and the temporary exhibit will help the museum test what works.

This artist rendering provided by the designers, Evergreen Exhibitions, shows "Immersive Theater," part of new high-tech interactive exhibition, "Above and Beyond: The Ultimate Interactive Flight Exhibition," about the future of flight opening soon at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in Washington.

Some current galleries date back to the museum's opening in 1976. The museum has mostly shied away from integrating much technology into its exhibits because the galleries receive heavy traffic, and technology tends to break down, said Roger Launius, the museum's associate director of collections and curatorial affairs.

"In the future as we're re-envisioning the museum, we're putting more and more of these kinds of things in, but this is sort of taking us to a level we haven't had," Launius said. "One of the things we want to do is kind of test the technologies."

Beyond the gee-whiz technology, the exhibit is rooted in the themes of how to fly higher, farther, faster and smarter to challenge visitors with the real problems of how to make space flight more efficient and less expensive, Launius said.

Curators planning the museum's overhaul are also looking at how to use new technology to give visitors a better look at space history. The museum is considering a future simulation that could recreate what it was like to land on the moon during the Apollo era.

John Tracy, the chief technology officer for Boeing, which is funding the "Above and Beyond" exhibit and part of the museum's overhaul, said the company wants to work with the museum to inspire the next generation of innovators.

BIRD

ing the wrens. Filled with insect fragments, a pellet it cast later in the day confirmed my suspicions.

The next night one and half mice were eaten. Toward the end of the third day, the owl became restless around 4:30 p.m. After trying to fly within the confines of the carrier, it finally settled down.

The next morning, our offering of mice the night before had disappeared. That afternoon, a repetition of activity and wanting to fly occurred at about the same time. Since burrowing owls hunt during the afternoon and evening, its behavior was indicative of the needed time of release.

A quick trip to the closest area of prairie dogs and owls thirty minutes later was rewarding. Not only were the prairie dogs outside their holes and sunning. A burrowing owl was perched on a power line above. To release it in like company was imperative.

Back at the house, we loaded the large carrier with its "hidey-hole" and occupant. To see that the owl had remained above on the line when we returned was heartening.

Parking a short distance beyond the still perching owl, so as not to frighten it, we took the carrier out of our vehicle. Opening the gate, we removed the "hidey-hole" and placed it on the ground facing the direction of the other owl.

Once clear of the arch, the burrowing owl took flight. Flying low over the ground, it covered approximately twenty feet before setting down. Taking flight again, and setting down, was typical of the specie's habit of frequent landings as it continues to search open land.

When it quickly took flight again, a gust of wind assisted it in banking slightly to the west. After it landed, the owl above decided to join it.

Once the carrier and its magic box were back inside the vehicle, we turned to watch the owls. They were nowhere to be seen.

Since burrowing owls accept vacant prairie dog holes for shelter and nest sites, we felt the welcoming committee of one had offered our charge a new place to stay. It just proved that summer has its own surprises.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

While Venus Is Still Direct...

There are two kinds of games: HOLIDAY MATHIS determine games and indeterminate games. In determinate games, such as chess, the starting player can win if she knows the strategy. In indeterminate games, two perfect players could play on forever. Before Venus turns retrograde, forget about winning or losing. Play your love life like an indeterminate game. ARIES (March 21-April 19). It hurts you that you do not possess the magic wand to make your wish happen today, but don't worry. You will accomplish through perseverance what you couldn't make happen through power. TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The spirit of play is awakening inside you. There are certain people who bring it out more than others. The right playmates help you keep your buoyant energy throughout the day. GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You're in the mood to rock the boat. This makes things more interesting. The question: How hard should you rock it? The answer: Hard enough to move it, but not so hard that people will tumble out. CANCER (June 22-July 22). As you lose yourself in the activity that draws up your passion, there will be no wondering about whether you're doing it right or worrying about how you'll be received when you're done. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Don't let financial issues throw you off balance. Your current paycheck is merely an income channel, not the source of abundance, which is the universe itself. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Usually love is a priority, but today isn't the usual kind of day. Romance may seem an unwelcome distraction, even a hindrance to your quest to better yourself. Paradoxically, this makes you all the more attractive. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). In your current state of ultra-efficiency, there are a few things that will bother you: people who amble, dawdle or have a generally cavalier attitude about time. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). That you feel so deeply is an asset in many situations; however, today's situation presents an exception. The more emotionally removed you are from a conflict the stronger your position will be. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You'll be drawn to those who have a mind as flexible as yours. Bonus: You're also open-minded enough to realize that close-minded people have something to teach you, too. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're all on the same team, though it won't appear that way at first. Let the others know that when you win, they win. Your sense of humor will help to resolve any issues.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). As a rule, you'd prefer that people not make a fuss over you. It's embarrassing! If they have to do it (and today they probably do), grin, bear it and say thanks. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Friends don't see you as you see yourself. They may have a point. Even though you tend to think of yourself in a certain light, stay open to other lighting schemes, too. TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 21). Someone you're crazy about will set your mood sailing. Your personal life bubbles with excitement over the next 10 weeks. A talented partner can make all the difference in your work, drawing out your best and helping you get paid for it, too. Your path veers in November -- this is what you wanted in disguise. Aquarius and Scorpio people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 17, 28, 1 and 42. ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "I made a mistake in letting him go -- I know that now. But how do I convince him? He's seeing someone else, but I don't think it's serious. He's a Taurus, I'm a Virgo, and she's a Pisces." Are you sure you don't just want him back now because someone else has him? That wouldn't make you a bad person; it's human nature to respond to cues of scarcity. The threat of missing out can be a powerful motivator. The only decent thing to do is to be very sure of your motives. Think about why you broke up with him in the first place. Those reasons are probably still valid. You're just not focusing on them now that the Pisces has entered the picture. Getting a Taurus to change his mind after he's made it up is difficult but not impossible. The key is in appealing to his senses, not his intellect. Do not provide reasons why he should get back together with you. But if you are still friends, and the time you spend together happens to be appealing on a sensory level (good food, good music, soft light, etc.), at some point the good feelings will override the bad, and he'll be susceptible to influence. CELEBRITY PROFILES: It has been nearly a year since the untimely death of beloved actor and comedian Robin Williams sent a shockwave of grief through the world. Williams was born under a soulful Cancer sun and an empathetic Pisces moon. Mercury and Pluto in the entertaining and playful realm of Leo are the mark of a natural-born performer -- one who is now terribly missed. *If you would like to write to Holiday Mathis, please go to www.creators.com and click on "Write the Author" on the Holiday Mathis page, or you may send her a postcard in the mail. Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: When is it OK for a child not to want to be touched by anyone, including his parents? My 10-year-old grandson doesn't want to hug anyone, nor does he like people putting their hands on his back, shoulder or head. Should this just be accepted? Should we use behavior modification so he will let us be affectionate, or are we just supposed to respect his wishes on this? If I put my arm on his shoulder, he will move away. If my wife pats him on the arm, he flinches. When he tells his parents that he doesn't like being touched, they either laugh or get angry. What do you say? -- Miffed

Dear Miffed: Please do not try to force a child to be physically affectionate if he does not wish to be touched. There could be many reasons for this. Is this a recent development? Has the child been touched inappropriately by anyone? Is the child autistic? Is his skin sensitive and the touching too painful or irritating? And some children that age become extremely embarrassed by any public displays of affection, especially from family members. The parents should neither laugh nor get angry. They should speak to the child's pediatrician and ask for guidance. There could be a serious reason (earlier molestation) or something as simple as needing to be tolerant and respectful of this stage of his development. As we hope you will be. Dear Annie: A friend is getting married soon and the invitation states that it is going to be a potluck reception. I have never heard of such a thing for a wedding. Is this new? I have always believed that the bride and groom should have the wedding they can afford and not ask the guests to bring food to the reception. Also, I found out that she is having the bridesmaids help set up and clean after. I understand the bride and groom don't have a lot of money, but come on! She also had put a lot of pricey items on her bridal registry and when I spoke to her later, she told me she was upset that she only received half the stuff she wanted and they were mostly the less-expensive items. What is your take on all this? Should someone say something to her about her being so cheap? She already knows that most of her family doesn't like the man she is marrying. -- Friend's Wedding

Dear Friend: In some cultures and areas of the country, potluck weddings are perfectly fine. In those places, the entire community comes together to prepare the wedding celebration. It isn't a demand on an invitation. It is simply how things are done. Unfortunately, this doesn't sound like the case with your friend. Some folks won't mind the request and will be happy to show off their cooking skills. And we are certain that some guests will prepare and bring a lovely dish and consider it their wedding gift. Your obligation is simply to respond "yes" or "no" to the invitation.

Contract Bridge

By Steve Becker

The Bidding Points the Way

West dealer. North-South vulnerable.

NORTH		EAST
♠ K 9 4	♥ Q 7 3	♠ 8 7 6 3	♥ 9 8 6 5 4
♦ K 9 8 2	♣ A 4 3	♦ —	♣ 10 9 8 6
WEST		SOUTH
♠ Q J 10 5 2	♥ A J 10	♠ A	♥ K 2
♦ 5 3	♣ K J 7	♦ A Q J 10 7 6 4	♣ Q 5 2

The bidding:
West 1♠ North Dble East 3♠ South 6♦
Dble Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead — queen of spades.
Let's say you reach six diamonds doubled on the bidding shown and West leads a spade. When dummy comes down, it occurs to you that North's takeout double was a tad light, but you concentrate instead on how to play the hand. At first glance, it seems you must lose a heart and a club and go down one. But when you think about it some more, you realize you actually have an excellent chance for the slam. West is bound to have the ace of hearts and king of clubs for his bids, and if he also started with the ten of spades to go with the Q-J indicated by his opening lead, you're a virtual shoo-in for the contract. So you win the spade with the ace and lead the heart deuce. West can't afford to go up with the ace — you'd have 12 tricks if he did — so he plays the ten. You win with the queen, discard your king of hearts on the king of spades and ruff a heart. Next you lead a low trump to the eight, ruff dummy's last heart, continue with a low trump to the nine and lead the nine of spades. But instead of ruffing, you discard a club! West wins the spade with the ten but is helpless. If he returns a spade or a heart (if he has one), you ruff in dummy and discard another club. If he returns a low club instead, you let it roll around to your queen. Either way, you make the slam. Actually, you should feel reasonably confident of making the contract from the start. The bidding and the opening lead tell you it is likely that you have West over a barrel, in which case there is no way he can escape his fate. As the cards lie, declarer can also make the slam after the queen of hearts wins at trick two by keeping the king of hearts and discarding a club on the king of spades, then running all his remaining trumps and conceding a heart to West's ace. But as this would involve guessing what West's last three cards are, the suggested line of play is preferred.

Tomorrow: A silent exercise.

This Date In History

Today is Tuesday, July 21, the 202nd day of 2015. There are 163 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On July 21, 1925, the so-called "Monkey Trial" ended in Dayton, Tennessee, with John T. Scopes found guilty of violating state law for teaching Darwin's Theory of Evolution. (The conviction was later overturned on a technicality.)
On this date:
In 1773, Pope Clement XIV issued an order suppressing the Society of Jesus, or Jesuits. (The Society was restored by Pope Pius VII in 1814.)
In 1861, during the Civil War, the first Battle of Bull Run was fought at Manassas, Virginia, resulting in a Confederate victory.
In 1930, President Herbert Hoover signed an executive order establishing the Veterans Administration (later the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs).
In 1944, American forces landed on Guam during World War II, capturing it from the Japanese some three weeks later. The Democratic national convention in Chicago nominated Sen. Harry S. Truman to be vice president.
In 1949, the U.S. Senate ratified the North Atlantic Treaty.
In 1955, during a summit in Geneva, President Dwight D. Eisenhower presented his "open skies" proposal under which the U.S. and the Soviet Union would trade information on each other's military facilities and allow aerial reconnaissance. (The Soviets rejected the proposal.)
In 1959, the NS Savannah, the first nuclear-powered merchant ship, was christened by first lady Mamie Eisenhower at Camden, New Jersey.
In 1961, Capt. Virgil "Gus" Grissom became the second American to rocket into a sub-orbital pattern around the Earth, flying aboard the Liberty Bell 7.
In 1972, the Irish Republican Army carried out 22 bombings in Belfast, Northern Ireland, killing nine people and injuring 130 in what became known as "Bloody Friday."
In 1973, Israeli agents in Lillehammer, Norway, killed Ahmed Bouchikki, a Moroccan waiter, in a case of mistaken identity, apparently thinking he was an official with Black September, the group that attacked Israel's delegation at the 1972 Munich Olympics and killed 11 athletes.

Thought for Today:
"We have too many high-sounding words, and too few actions that correspond with them."
Abigail Adams, American first lady (1744-1818).

Hammon, Spurs take Las Vegas Summer League championship

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Becky Hammon already made history when she became the first female head coach in NBA summer league.

Leading the San Antonio Spurs to the Las Vegas Summer League championship just made the experience that much sweeter.

Hammon coached the Spurs to a 93-90 victory over the Phoenix Suns in the title game on Monday night.

"It was a grind," Hammon said. "They've been together for 17 days. They really started to jell the last two or three games. They listened and they played really hard for me. I just really appreciate their attentiveness and alertness. They were tired but they fought through."

The Spurs participated in both the Orlando and Las Vegas summer leagues, but Hammon served as the head coach only in the higher profile Vegas event.

The Spurs lost the opener to the New York

"It's amazing. It was a humbling experience. For all of us. I really love her and I've only known her a couple days. She's a real cool coach. She's a player coach. That's something we all like."

Jonathon Simmons

Knicks, and then reeled off six straight victories.

Jonathon Simmons scored 23 points and took home MVP honors for the championship game. Treveon Graham added 22 points for the Spurs.

"It's amazing. It was a humbling experience," Simmons told NBATV of playing for Hammon. "For all of us. I really love her and I've only known her a couple days. She's a real cool coach. She's a player coach. That's something we all like."

Last year the Spurs made Hammon the first female full-time assistant coach in league history. Earlier this summer they told her she would lead the team in Las Vegas.

"She's a firecracker, she takes no prisoners, she's got a great personality," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said during a visit to Minnesota in the regular season. "She knows her stuff. She's competitive."

The Spurs have worked hard not to make too much of their hiring of Hammon. Popovich has said time and again that she was hired because of her coaching acumen and not because the team was looking to help a woman break the glass ceiling.

"I don't know if her perspective is unique. It's women instead of men, but it's the same game," Popovich said. "Becky knows what to do on a pick-and-roll just as much as what Tony Parker knows. So I don't think it's unique at all."

The players gave Hammon a Gatorade bath during the celebration in the locker room, and the Spurs were the third team to win the Vegas Summer League tournament, following the Warriors in 2013 and Kings in 2014.

"You never know what your journey has in store," Hammon said, according to Sports Illustrated. "You just work hard and keep your nose to the grind. You do things the right way, you treat people the right way, and good things happen. ... I'm just thankful that (Popovich) trusted me with the guys in that locker room, and that those guys trusted me back."

Tuesday. Harrison has started just seven games since 2012 because of four surgeries, three on his back.

Rockies: RHP Kyle Kendrick (3-10, 5.94 ERA) made his first relief appearance of the season against Atlanta on July 12. He has not recorded a win since beating Arizona on June 23, which is his only victory at Coors Field this season.

back into it. The Rangers chipped away with a two runs in the third and then made it a game in the fifth with some alert base running.

With runners on second and third and one out, Fielder grounded to first. Paulsen fielded it, touched the bag and started jogging to the dugout before realizing Rowned Odor was heading home from second. Paulsen's throw to the plate was late and Odor slid in safely to make it 7-5.

Fielder was awarded two RBIs on the play and he now has 57 on the season.

Beltre's double in the seventh made it 7-6.

Rockies starter Chris Rusin allowed five runs

— two earned — in six innings.

ON THE BAG
Adrian Beltre played his 2,413th game at third base, snapping a tie with Graig Nettles for second-most games played at the hot corner. Brooks Robinson is all-time leader with 2,870 games played at third.

UP NEXT
Rangers: LHP Matt Harrison (0-1, 13.50 ERA) will make his second start of the season par on the 17th with a 10-foot putt and made a 5-foot birdie on the final hole for a 69 to join the playoff.

Johnson opened with two quick birdies, kept a one-shot lead in the playoff when Oosthuizen missed a 5-foot par putt on the 17th hole and won the Open when the South African — the last player to lift the jug at St. Andrews in 2010 — narrowly missed a 12-foot birdie attempt.

"I'm grateful. I'm humbled. I'm honored," Johnson said. "This is the birthplace of the game, and that jug means so much in sports."

He knew Oosthuizen or Leishman easily could have won. And he felt the same about Spieth.

"I can't describe the magnitude as to what he was going through because I've never been in that position," Johnson said. "We haven't really seen that with the exception of Tiger. Truthfully, he could be hitting here."

"He's a phenomenal talent," Johnson said. "And I'm telling you right now, he's a better person than a golfer."

Golf hasn't seen such a player since the days of Tigermania. And there's no reason to believe that Spieth can't continue to contend — and win — major titles for a long time to come.

"I'm very pleased with the way I played," Spieth said. "I think the way that I played this week and especially today would have won the U.S. Open by more than just a shot. I didn't play as well there. It's just that's the kind of golf that was played by the field this week, it just took some special golf. Whoever comes out the champion, that's a hell of a major."

In other words, Spieth didn't lose the tournament. Someone else simply came along to beat him.

Spieth will take that attitude to Whistling Straits, the third straight links-style course among the year's majors. He'll be favored there again, with a chance to join some elite company as a winner of three majors in one year.

No sense thinking too much about what might have happened. No need to think about how close he came to be playing in Wisconsin for golf immortality.

"It's a tough feeling to be that close in a major," Spieth said. "I believe I'll have plenty of opportunities like I did today but, still, when it doesn't work out it's tough to swallow a little bit."
