Hang gliding competition to begin this weekend

By JULIE BASS
Staff Writer

This weekend will begin the 2015 Hang Gliding National competition.

Hang gliders have been coming to Big Spring since 2001 thanks to the weather and the community said Belinda Boulter, spokesperson for the 2015 Hang Gliding Nationals.

"There are very few places in the world with such consistent, excellent flying conditions," said Boulter "And the support of the community is unique; no other place has a standing committee of non-pilots who work to provide the resources we need to put on an event like this, and even help in the launch. Visitors from other regions or other countries are always amazed at the genuine welcome we find in Big Spring and will agree there's no place like it."

The fun will kick off Saturday with the hang gliding competitors getting in some practice runs at 1 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Tandem hang gliding rides will be available throughout the competition most mornings and evenings, weather permitting. The cost of a tandem ride with a USHPA certified tandem instructor is $100 and the video of the flight will be available for $40. Space and availability will be limited and offered on a first come first served basis. For reservations contact Lori Brown at 352-874-5742.

The competition itself will take place from Aug. 2 through Aug. 8. The tow lifts will begin around noon and the competition start time will be around 2 p.m.

"The actual starting line is an imaginary circle with a radius of perhaps three or six miles, centered around the airport. Once in the air, the pilots stay inside the circle until the official start time," said Boulter.

Each day's task for the competition will alter throughout the week and the competitors will go over these tasks each morning at their briefing.

The community is invited and encouraged to come watch the hang gliders compete. The city provides shaded bleachers at the McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark and there will be restrooms, food and drinks available to the public inside the airport terminal to make the event enjoyable for all.

The competitors will all have GPS trackers to monitor their progress and keep track of the race.

Few clues emerge on fate of teens missing on fishing trip

By MATT SEDENSKY
Associated Press

JUPITER, Fla. — Rescuers endured a fourth night of an anxious search for two young Floridians born and bred as boaters who went missing on the high seas.

The Coast Guard scoured an area the size of West Virginia with no sign of the boaters by early Tuesday. Petty Officer Anthony Soto said Tuesday that the search area remains 50 miles off the coast of Jacksonville and expands as far north as Savannah, Georgia, and as far south as Cape Canaveral.

The 14-year-old boys' vessel was found capsized on Sunday morning. But relatives and friends of the teens were clinging to hope that the expertise they acquired boating and fishing in their short lives was enough to keep them alive while apparently lost in the Atlantic.

"This isn't something that he's new at," said Carly Black, the mother of Austin Stephanos, in an interview with the television station WPBF. "I think they feel better on the boat than they do on land."

The mother said

she wouldn't even "bat an eye" about the boys' ability to survive at sea.

Nick Korniloff, stepfather of the other teen, Perry Cohen, said the boys had been "raised on the water," knew how to navigate safely, and were more passionate about the sea than anything else.

"If you put two pretty girls in front of them and two fishing rods, they'd grab the fishing rods first," the stepfather said.

The ordeal began as a teenage summer adventure: The boys were last seen Friday afternoon buying $110 worth of fuel near Jupiter and were believed to have been heading toward the Bahamas. Thunderstorms and heavy rains were forecast in the Jupiter area later Friday afternoon. However, Coast Guard Capt. Mark Fedor called it "typical South Florida weather" that didn't provide an immediate answer to what happened to the teens.

The Coast Guard was alerted at 5 p.m. that the boys were overdue, and the search began. The 19-foot boat was found Sunday, capsized, off Ponce Inlet, more than 180 miles north of where the boys started their journey.

The search has continued, day and night, with areas of concentration moving based on the Gulf Stream and ocean conditions. Coast Guard officials have most recently been focusing on waters off northeast Florida and said they had no intention of quitting yet.

"Our intentions are to continue to search aggressively," Fedor said Monday evening, adding that the decision is being reevaluated daily. Earlier Monday, Coast Guard Petty Officer Steve Lehmann said the search was going on under "the highest level of optimism." He declined to say how long it would continue. Searchers were using helicopter, boat and airplane, and local authorities and the USS Carney also joined the efforts to locate the boys.

"We need every clue and we need everyone's help," Korniloff said.

The teens' families pledged a $100,000 reward in the search and a famous neighbor — NFL Hall of Famer Joe Namath — promised to continue searching local beaches in hopes of finding clues.

Libyan court sentences Gadhafi's son, Seif al-Islam, to death over killings in 2011 uprising

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — A court in Libya's capital sentenced a son of Moammar Gadhafi to death in absentia on Tuesday over killings during the country's 2011 uprising.

The Tripoli court that sentenced Seif al-Islam, who is being held by a militia that refuses to hand him over to the central government, also sentenced to death eight others, including former Libyan spy chief Abdullah al-Senoussi. It was unclear whether the sentences would be carried out.

Libya has slid into chaos since the overthrow and killing of Gadhafi. It is now bitterly divided between an elected parliament and government cornered in the country's east, with little power on the ground, and an Islamist militia-backed government in the west that has seized Tripoli.

Since the end of the civil war, Seif al-Islam has been held by a militia in Zintan, which is allied with the Tobruk-based internationally recognized government against the Tripoli one. He is also wanted by the International Criminal Court in The Hague on charges of crimes against humanity.

Charges in the trial included recruiting mercenaries who were given Libyan nationality, planning and carrying out attacks on civilian targets from the air, forming armed groups and shooting into crowds of demonstrators.

Obama closes Africa trip with first speech to African Union by sitting American president

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — President Barack Obama highlighted his administration's efforts to combat hunger worldwide on Tuesday as he prepared to end a historic return to the land of his father's birth with a speech to the African Union.

Obama toured a plant operated by Faffa Foods, which participates in the U.S. Feed the Future program. The initiative focuses on helping smaller farmers in 19 countries, including Ethiopia and 11 other African nations, grow their businesses.

Faffa, in the Ethiopian capital, is the chief supplier of baby food for children in Ethiopia, where child malnutrition is a serious problem.

Obama said the "huge percentage" Africans who still get their income from agriculture can improve their yields with a few interventions. He said a woman he met at the factory had increased her yield threefold, providing enough money for her to buy a cow and send her children to school.

He said Feed the Future "is making a difference in some very concrete ways."

At Shiite militia 'summer camps', Iraqi children undergo training to fight Islamic State

BAGHDAD (AP) — A quiet middle-class Shiite neighborhood in western Baghdad was transformed recently into a mini-boot camp, training teenagers for battle against the Islamic State group.

The Shiite boys and young men ran through its normally placid streets carrying out mock exercises for urban warfare since the toughest battles against the Sunni extremists are likely to involve street fighting. They were taught how to hold, control and aim light weapons, though they didn't fire them.

In cities from Baghdad to Basra, summer camps set up by the Popular Mobilization Forces, Iraq's largest militia umbrella group, are training teens and boys as young as middle school age after the country's top Shiite cleric issued an edict calling on students to use their school vacations to prepare for battle if they are needed.

With dozens of such camps around the country, hundreds of students have gone through the training though it is impossible to say how many went on to fight the Sunni extremists since those who do so go independently. Of around 200 cadets in a training class visited by The Associated Press, about half were under the age of 18, with some as young as 15. Several said they intended to join their fathers and older brothers on the front lines.

It's yet another way minors are being dragged into Iraq's brutal war as the military, Shiite militias and Kurdish fighters battle to take back territory from Islamic State militants, who seized much of the country's north and west over the past year. The Sunni extremists have aggressively enlisted children as young as 10 for combat, as suicide bombers and as executioners in their horrifying videos.

Boy Scouts of America to allow gay adult leaders; church-run units can keep the exclusion

NEW YORK (AP) — The Boy Scouts of America has ended its blanket ban on gay adult leaders but will allow church-sponsored Scout units to maintain the exclusion for religious reasons.

The new policy, aimed at easing a controversy that has embroiled the Boy Scouts for years, takes effect immediately. It was approved Monday by the BSA's National Executive Board on a 45-12 vote during a closed-to-the-media teleconference.

"For far too long this issue has divided and distracted us," the BSA's president, former Defense Secretary Robert Gates, said. "Now it's time to unite behind our shared belief in the extraordinary power of Scouting to be a force for good."

Initial reactions to the decision from groups on both sides suggested the issue would remain divisive. The Mormon church, which sponsors more Scout units than any other organization, said it was "deeply troubled" by the decision. Church officials suggested they would look into the possibility of forming their own organization to replace Boy Scouts.

Movie theater shooting: No red flags reported in man's background check at time of encounter danger. "Regardless of how experienced you are in the water, things can happen," he said. "Things befall even the most surefooted of mariners."

gun sale CARROLLTON, Ga. (AP) — John Russell Houser's mental problems were well known to many, though perhaps not to the store that sold him the .40-caliber handgun used in a deadly attack on a Louisiana movie theater. A federal background check came back clean, the pawn shop said, with no red flags raised at the time of sale.

Yet Houser's own family worried he was dangerous in 2008 and sought court protection. His wife was so worried that she removed his guns from their home, her attorney said. A probate judge in Georgia signed an order allowing sheriff's deputies to detain Houser and bring him to a hospital for a mental evaluation.

But the judge who ordered Houser detained said Monday that she did not — and legally could not — have him involuntarily committed. That may explain why he was able to legally purchase the gun used to kill Jillian Johnson and Mayci Marie Breaux in a theater in Lafayette. He wounded nine others before killing himself.

Houser's case underscores concerns raised in the aftermath of other mass shootings involving suspects with mental health issues — and the gaps in the system meant to "red-flag" people ill-suited to own or carry a firearm.

Funeral services for Johnson and Breaux were held Monday. Johnson was remembered as an artist who worked to beautify her neighborhood while Breaux was looking forward to a new job and married life with a long-time boyfriend.

of Mormon' finally comes to heart of Mormonlandia

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The biting satirical musical that mocks Mormons has finally come to the heart of Mormonlandia, starting a sold-out, two-week run Tuesday at a Salt Lake City theater two blocks from the church's flagship temple and headquarters.

The Tony Award-winning "The Book of Mormon" has earned rave reviews while appalling some with its crudeness. But this will mark the first time the show's gleefully naive missionaries come to Utah, where about two-thirds of residents are estimated to be Mormon.

The show's creators, Trey Parker and Matt Stone of "South Park" fame, told The Associated Press that bringing the show to Salt Lake City feels like validation, and also brings the creative process full circle.

Parker and Stone used to "trip out" on Mormon stuff while taking Temple Square tours in the 1990s. They made their first research trip for the show to Salt Lake City with fellow creator Bobby Lopez in the mid-2000s. They waited to bring the show to Salt Lake City until they were invited by a theater.

"It feels like a really cool thing that it finally gets to play Salt Lake City," Stone said. "It just feels very much like it's coming home."

"It's a lot of water out there," Namath said. "We just keep on looking till we get an answer."

Though the boys' boat was overturned it did not appear damaged. No foul play was suspected. One life jacket was found near the boat, though it was unclear how many life jackets had been on board.

Water temperatures were warm and not cited as a factor in the boys' survival.

Florida requires minors to have boating safety instruction in order to operate a boat of 10 horsepower or greater, but no licenses are issued. It was not immediately clear whether the boys had undergone a safety class. Korniloff said he was focused on finding the boys and wouldn't comment on questions about whether 14-year-olds should be allowed to venture so far alone.

Still, Lehmann said boaters of any age and experience level could

SLYLOCK FOX and COMICS FOR KIDS

BY BOB WEBER JR.

Everyone thinks Buster Bear is a funny fellow. He refuses to work at a job and lives off the offerings of strangers. But when offered a choice between a quarter and a $5 bill, he always chooses the quarter. The bill is worth 20 times as much, so why does Slylock Fox think Buster never takes it?

Solution -- As long as Buster keeps everyone laughing at his choosing the quarter, they will continue to offer the choice. If he started taking the $5 bills, they would no longer be amused and stop offering any money.

BIRD POOP: Mid-summer ushers in Kite season

June this year was but a prelude to our next encounters. Broken bones, pellet and BB holes were the primary injuries seen concerning adult Mississippi kites. Knowing July and August would bring infants and fledglings, we and other rehabbers braced for the youngest of the specie.

After celebrations of "The 4th" had faded, phone calls began. By the 10th of July, we had a nestling, a fledgling and a juvenile molting into its adult plumage. After escorting the trio to a volunteer from South Plains in Lubbock, we anticipated more to come.

BEBE McCASLAND

By July 16, another nestling and fledgling had arrived. Found in someone's yard, the youngest was covered with white down.

Eager to leave the nest area, and also found in a residential neighborhood, the older bird didn't look anything like its parents, even though it had replaced its natal down with plumage. Its white head was streaked with black. Marked with rusty-brown hues, its creamy breast was a notable contrast to its gray wings and darker primaries.

Whatever their youthful adventures had been, the nestling and fledgling had found themselves alone, and far away from their familiar nesting area. Both had been dependent upon their parents for food and protection.

Without being able to adopt their parents' behavior and guidance in the weeks to come, the twosome's success in migrating to South America in the fall was questionable.

Along with the arrival of youngsters also came a few phone calls.

"Dive-bombing" swoops from treetops by protective parents with young in the nest were worrisome.

The callers then learned of another incident several years ago.

Western kingbirds made an impressive assault on county residents trying to enter the courthouse from the east. To prevent someone from falling on the descending, curving sidewalk, county officials locked that entry for nearly two weeks until the adult birds succeeded in luring their young from the nesting area to other environs.

For the few residents that were encountering this problem with kites came an easy solution.

Most had umbrellas, though seldom used. Opened, the contraptions were perfect for fending off the flight of an outraged avian parent.

With the feeding of the nestling and the fledgling during the day came the realization that both would, in the new year, soon resemble their parents.

Their heads would become a light gray accented with dark eye patches and red eyes.

The soft, darker gray of their bodies, and charcoal colored wing parts and tail would give them a striking appearance.

The twosome would also be given to a volunteer from South Plains. Upon arrival, they would begin the lengthy process toward release. By the last of August, or even mid-September, they could hopefully be riding thermals, soaring, and beginning the process of migrating for a rendezvous with other members of their specie in South America.

The care of young kites will always be a yearly occurrence for a rehabber. The intensity of the birds' arrivals lessens by mid-August.

By the last of that month, summer skies usually lack the delightful whistling, "phee-phew," "phee-phew," heard previously from high above. To know that the young raptors have an opportunity to attain the skills, graceful maneuvers, and flight abilities of adult birds is encouraging.

Bebe McCasland is author of The Scoop from Bird Poop. She is federally and state licensed to rehabilitate wild birds.

Beat the heat with pet safety tips

(Family Features) — Sunny, warm days bring the welcome opportunity to change up your routine and spend more time outdoors with your beloved pets. However, soaring temperatures bring risks from heat and sun exposure, making your furry friends rely on you to help keep them healthy and safe.

Make these warm-weather adjustments to keep your pets in top condition and ready to enjoy all the season has to offer with these safety tips from PetSmart experts:

Keep them hydrated. Dehydration and heatstroke can be fatal to pets, so access to a clean water bowl both inside and outside is critical in the summertime. While you're on the go, be sure to bring water for your pet in a suitable drinking container.

Serve up healthy meals. Warmer weather invites opportunities, such as enticing picnic spreads, for pets to nab tasty treats. Protect your pet's health by preventing them from ingesting food intended for humans, and opt instead for food and treats that fit their special needs and preferences.

The varieties offered by Natural Balance, which is now available at PetSmart, span dry and wet food made with premium quality ingredients in formulas such as limited ingredient, grain-free and weight management.

Never leave your pet in a parked car. Studies show that on a hot day, the temperature inside a car can reach more than 160 degrees in five minutes. Leaving the windows cracked for fresh air or parking in the shade don't keep temperatures from soaring in record time, either. Leaving pets in the car "just for a minute" is never a good idea.

Groom regularly. One of the best ways to keep a dog's coat healthy and help prevent matting and summertime skin irritation is regular grooming.

The right grooming tool can dramatically reduce shedding by removing the undercoat and loose hair without sacrificing the healthy top coat.

Provide skin protection. Just like humans, dogs can experience sunburn and even skin cancer. To prevent sunburn, apply a sunscreen where hair is thin and skin lacks pigment (nose, ears and sensitive areas) every day your dog is outside.

Avoid hot surfaces. Dogs' pads may seem tough, but sidewalks, pavement and sand can get so hot in the summer that dogs' feet can burn and blister. To prevent this, schedule walks for the morning or evening, when sidewalks are cooler, or purchase protective boots designed just for dogs.

Practice smart snacking. After exercising and in between meals, a sensible snack can provide a boost of energy. Treats such as Natural Balance Dental Chews do double duty by giving a little help with oral care between brushing. Scientifically formulated with unique grooves, these tasty treats encourage natural, healthy chewing to help reduce and remove tartar and plaque.

Provide outdoor relief. The best spot for your pet to cool off in the yard is a shaded grassy area because grass releases moisture and keeps your pet cooler than concrete, dirt or gravel. For added comfort, provide a raised bed that increases the flow of cooler air underneath the bed mat to help your pet beat the heat.

Keep water safety top of mind. Even if you consider your dog a good swimmer, a life jacket is very important if you take him with you on the boat or trips to the beach.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Moon of Greener Grass

There is no one standard MATHIS of success that applies to all people. The people who wonder why "so-and-so" hasn't "made it big" are frustrated in their own lives. As the moon moves from Sagittarius, the station that sees greener grass on the other side, to ambitious Capricorn, try to stay focused on what makes you (and only you) happy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You've gotten good at relating to people who are very different from you. Your style works in multiple circumstances. Your soft words spoken with firm confidence will produce impressive results.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). What you don't understand far exceeds what you do understand. Recognizing all you don't know is a mark of high intelligence. As for what you do know, you'll be asked to teach some of that today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You may feel that your efforts are neither focused nor persistent enough to make a difference. But it's the fact that you're making an effort at all that makes the biggest difference.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). When it comes to being you, you're the master. Others will make suggestions that you're not too keen on following. You're not beholden to anyone and only have to please yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Arrogance is the daddy of all sins. Belittling others is a sign of feeling little inside. When dealing with victims of a superiority complex, just remember that pride is often the hallmark of those with the least to be proud of.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). If you can't change your mind, you can't change anything. That's why any effort you make to expand your realm of influence should be considered important, even if it seems more like play than work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Your thoughts of a certain person make you forget to do the ordinary things you would usually do. That's how you can tell you're smitten. And when you're smitten with the same person for a very long time, it's even more wondrous.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You have the bright ideas today. But you also have a difficult group of strong-willed people to contend with. When you make it seem like their idea, they like it more.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You wouldn't be trying if you didn't care. That's what they sense from you now. So don't worry too much about whether you're saying or doing it right. It's a beautiful day when your good intentions effortlessly shine through.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're not dreaming it. There really is a lack of organized creativity out there. You're just the one to capture and apply the stellar ideas before they drift off into the ether.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Reconsider your contacts. It's not who you know; it's who you can influence. Knowing someone doesn't count for much if that person isn't willing to support, help and generally act like a friend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). The thing about achieving exceptional accomplishments is that after a brief moment of glory you begin to worry about what they'll expect from you next. Keep doing the work that makes you happy.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 28). Your loved ones will consider you to be among the brightest and strongest they know, and you'll spend much of the year living up to the reputation. That's why it's so important to take time for yourself over the next six weeks. Rest and revel in fun. September brings a career boost. October introduces you to new friends. Aries and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 12, 1, 44, 17 and 38.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "I'm a Sagittarius (12/7/56) who is in love with a Capricorn (1/3/55). From what I've gathered, both of our Venuses are in Scorpio. We've been together off and on for 30 years. He just got out of a long-term relationship and hasn't moved forward emotionally. Should I give up?"

Sagittarius women are attracted to Capricorn men for that elusive Sagittarian word: security. When mama's in the mood to nest, he's your man. Responsible and successful, as the years pack on the wisdom, Capricorn gets smarter, better looking and tends to loosen up a bit, too. Communication and honesty are the larger issues between you - mainly, the more withdrawn he becomes the more in-your-face you get. Uh-oh, I see a pattern. Capricorn men are big on tact and timing. He'd rather keep you at arm's length than hear "Why aren't you confiding in me?" again. The good news is, you can work on this. I don't see anyone giving up soon. The Venus-in-Scorpio connection has actually kept you two together this long. It would be silly for me to advise you to let this strong love die, because you already have -- and you've resurrected it every time.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Immortally glamorous, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis remains a subject of adoring fascination. Her sun and Mercury in Leo suggests she was destined for the spotlight, and though ever poised in its glare, her Mars and Neptune in Virgo intimates that it wasn't a comfortable place for her. That Virgo energy is always striving for perfection -- and Jackie O made it seem attainable.

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My daughter is getting married in two weeks. My 80-year-old mother-in-law is unable to attend, but she called us with a request. Her daughter, "Donna," the bride's aunt, will be flying across the country with her two young children to attend the wedding. She asked whether Donna's two children could have a role in the celebration because she thinks Donna assumed they would be asked to participate after going to the expense of buying three tickets to attend.

We do not feel this is an appropriate request and it puts us in an awkward position. My mother-in-law is trying to make us feel bad for saying no to something that was never a consideration. Donna has a history of being manipulative. No other children were invited and we do not want other parents to feel bad that their children were not included at all.

If we say no now, my mother-in-law will push even harder, adding more stress to an already stressful event. Can we simply say we are "taking under advisement" and let it go? -- Stressed in Shrewsbury sumptuous request. You also can bite the bullet and say firmly, but politely, "No, but we appreciate that Donna is coming and bringing the children." What someone spends to attend the wedding is up to them. It should not be used as blackmail to get a starring part in the production.

Dear Shrewsbury: Yes, that is one way of dealing with a pre-

Still, you might consider finding a small role for the children, possibly handing out programs, asking guests to sign a welcome book or directing them to their seats if the kids are old enough to handle the responsibility. It's a minor effort that will make the children feel important and assuage your in-laws. And please don't worry about not having invited other children. The bride's first cousins are in a separate category. But you should not be held hostage by someone else's inappropriate demands on your daughter's big day.

Dear Annie: I read the letter from "Artist's Wife," whose husband was asked to do a portrait for a family member who has yet to pay him. She has at least one real boar for a relative.

My niece is an artist. I like her work, family or not. When I saw something on her website I really wanted to own, I approached her about it. She offered to sell it to me at a discount. I refused her kindness and bought two pieces from her at the same price she was asking for her other work.

One family member did not take advantage of another on either side of this transaction. If I couldn't afford my niece's prices, I wouldn't have asked her to sell me anything.

When all was said and done, she was so grateful for the decent treatment that she created a third piece of art for me as a gift. It was her choice, and I appreciated it tremendously.

-- Grateful Family Member

Dear Grateful: Thank you for demonstrating how relatives should behave toward one another. Taking advantage of someone because you are related not only is unfair and unkind, but it poisons the well for future family encounters.

The bidding:

Opening lead — five of hearts.

Assume you're East and partner leads a heart against three notrump. You take the ace and realize that a heart return would be pointless, since it is impossible for partner to have a holding where a heart return would be beneficial. Your best chance, therefore, is to shift your attention to your own suit, spades.

But it is also clear that in returning a spade you should not make the normal lead of your fourth-best card. There is too good a chance that declarer has three to the king, in which case he would play low from his hand and acquire an extra spade trick.

The best way to try to beat the contract is to lead the queen of spades at trick two. You hope to find South with K-x-x or K-x of spades and partner with an entry card, in which case he can eventually return a spade through dummy's J-9 after South has taken the queen with the king.

In the actual case, this approach would succeed if declarer went along with your scheme by playing his king at trick two. He could cash eight tricks in a row, but would then run out of steam and finish down one.

But South can defuse your scheme by ducking the queen of spades when you lead it. He might see what you are trying to do and apply the suitable countermeasure by allowing your queen to win the trick.

Once declarer does this, he will inevitably prevail, but you should nevertheless feel satisfied that you gave your all to stop the contract and unfortunately met a foe worthy of your steel.

Tomorrow: The evasion principle.

Rockies trade SS Troy Tulowitzki to Blue Jays

DENVER (AP) — After all that speculation the past couple of years, the Colorado Rockies finally traded Troy Tulowitzki. Surprising spot, too — north of the border to a team loaded with bats. Tulowitzki was sent to the Toronto Blue Jays for Jose Reyes and three pitching prospects late Monday night in a stunning swap of star shortstops, according to a person with knowledge of the situation. The person spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity early Tuesday because the deal had not yet been announced. In addition to Tulowitzki, the Rockies sent 42-year-old reliever LaTroy Hawkins to the Blue Jays. Along with Reyes, the Rockies picked up rookie reliever Miguel Castro and two minor league pitchers in a blockbuster transaction — the biggest yet in the days leading up to Friday's trade deadline. FoxSports.com first reported the sides agreed to a swap involving Tulowitzki, Reyes and minor leaguers. The talented but oft-injured Tulowitzki is a five-time All-Star who is hitting .300 with 12 homers and 53 RBIs in 87 games this season. He helped the Rockies reach the World Series as a rookie in 2007. Tulowitzki was replaced on defense in the bottom of the ninth inning during Colorado's 9-8 loss to the Cubs in brother." Reyes is batting .285 with four homers, 34 RBIs and 16 steals in 69 games. He was acquired by Toronto in a November 2012 trade with Miami. The face of Colorado's franchise, the 30-year-old Tulowitzki has spent his entire career with the Rockies (42-55) but has been the subject of trade talk for some time. Still, the Blue Jays seemed an unlikely destination. "Tremendous player," Giants manager Bruce Bochy said in San Francisco. "Sometimes you're surprised when you have a guy like Tulo who's so iconic in Colorado." Before the 2011 season, Colorado made a big commitment to Tulowitzki by agreeing to a contract that guaranteed him $132 million over seven seasons from 2014-20. The deal included a $14 million team option for 2021 with a $4 million buyout. Combined with his previous deal, it meant the Rockies agreed to pay Tulowitzki $157.75 million over 10 years. The plan was to build around him and outfielder Carlos Gonzalez, who signed an $80 million, seven-year contract around the same time.

Shortstop Troy Tulowitzki, a five-time All-Star, was traded to Toronto after spending his first 10 years with Colorado.

"I don't worry about it. I've been through it multiple times. My job is to play for the Rockies. I signed up to play here for a long time. Until they tell me differently, which they haven't, I plan on being here."

Troy Tulowitzki

With the Tulowitzki trade, Gonzalez might be next — especially considering how hot he's been at the plate lately after an injury-riddled 2014 season. The speedy Reyes is signed through 2017 on a $106 million, six-year contract he received from Miami. A four-time All-Star with the New York Mets, Reyes also has struggled with injuries throughout his career. Hawkins is 2-1 with a 3.63 ERA in 24 games and is headed to his 11th major league team. There's no doubting the hitting prowess of the 6-foot-3 Tulowitzki. Staying healthy has been his biggest challenge. During his career, he's had stints on the disabled list for a quadriceps tendon tear,

Last season, Tulowitzki played only 91 games before undergoing hip surgery.

This year, he's been injury free, with Weiss resting him on occasion to save wear and tear. Tulowitzki was out of the lineup Sunday, which would've been his last appearance at Coors Field in a Rockies uniform. Asked about Friday's non-waiver trade deadline before leaving town, Tulowitzki responded: "I don't worry about it. I've been through it multiple times. My job is to play for the Rockies. I signed up to play here for a long time. Until they tell me differently, which they haven't, I plan on being here."

Chicago on Monday night. After the game, the slugger spent at least 30 minutes in manager Walt Weiss' office at Wrigley Field, but was unavailable to reporters. The deal gives Toronto (50-50) another powerful, right-handed bat in a dangerous lineup that includes Jose Bautista, Josh Donaldson, Edwin Encarnacion and Russell Martin. The Blue Jays, by far the highest-scoring team in the majors, sit three games behind Minnesota in the race for the second AL wild card. They are tied for second place in the AL East, seven games back of the New York Yankees. Toronto has not reached the playoffs since winning the 1993 World Series — the longest drought of any major league team. Donaldson bid farewell to Reyes on his Twitter account: "Going to miss my boy. ... Once a brother always a
