Infrastructure discussion on tap at tonight's city council

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Despite a recent downturn in oil activity in this area, Big Spring is still expected to experience growth in the near future. Just what that growth will mean in infrastructure needs and costs will be the subject of a report given to the local city council when it meets at 5:30 p.m. tonight in council chambers, located at 307 E. Fourth St. The engineering firm of Freese and Nichols, which earlier this year compiled a master plan to plot and anticipate future growth in the community, will present a capital improvement plan, calculated to anticipate future infrastructure costs in two key areas. The first area includes the northern sector, a roughly fan-shaped area spreading from State Highway 350 in the east to State Highway 176 and Interstate 20 in the south and west. The second area includes the airport sector, which encompasses the area surrounding the Big Spring Airport. Those two areas are expected to be the sites of the lion's share of future growth in the future, Freese and Nichols officials told the council earlier this year. The new study will attempt to give city leaders a firmer idea of just how much this growth will cost Big Spring in terms of infrastructure (roads, water and sewage), based on anticipated growth in population and industry. In other business Tuesday, the council will consider: Casting the city's votes for directors of the Howard County Appraisal Board. Bids for broadcasting equipment and purchase of a sanitation and roll-off truck. An agreement with American Fidelity Assurance Co. for an excess stop-loss policy. An agreement with CGG Land, Inc. to conduct seismic surveys on city-owned property. Leasing city-owned property to Big Star Oil & Gas, LLC. for security cameras inside and outside of places such as the Howard County Courthouse and the tax office. The proposition included discussing cost for the cameras as well as discussing their location.

Expanding surveillance would not be meant to prevent crimes, but would allow law enforcement to be able to go back and see what happened, Howard County Sheriff Stan Parker explained. Wiseman also mentioned that there was a need for surveillance cameras in the annex and outside the door of the annex in the County Courthouse where prisoners are escorted in for hearings.

The proposition was approved by the commissioners to purchase three cameras, three sets of cables, and to expand surveillance in the annex of the courthouse.

Presentations for plans to widen and sealcoat Howard County roads by Brian Klinksiek, manager of the Howard County Road Administration, were pushed to the next Howard County Commissioners Court. Commissioner Craig Bailey of Precinct 2 brought up that the problems with the roads are the same ones faced before, high road use from increased oil field traffic and difficulty receiving state funds to upkeep and repair the damage.

Bailey encouraged citizens to contact their local representatives in order to receive the money voted on last November in order to use it for road repairs.

Wiseman reminded citizens that the courthouse will be closed Wednesday, Nov. 11 for Veterans Day and encouraged those in attendance to go to one of the many local Veterans Day events in the county. "

Thank you for your service to our country," Wiseman said to five veterans in the room, including Precinct 1 Commissioner Oscar Garcia and Precinct 4 Commissioner John Cline.

The Youngest Pilgrims

When the Mayflower set sail for the New World in 1620, several children were onboard. Some were toddlers, some were teens and some were in-between. One baby, Oceanus Hopkins, was born on the ship. Another, Peregrine White, was born after the ship had docked.

Having children in the New World was important to ensure the survival of the Pilgrim colony. The first winter in the New World was very cold, and many of the adults got sick. Some even died. Many of the children, however, survived, and they helped take care of the sick and do whatever other else was needed.

Eventually the young Pilgrims grew up, got married and had children of their own. Peregrine White, for example, lived to age 83 and had three children and several grandchildren. He and the other young Pilgrims helped the colony grow.

Busy weekend in Big Spring

This past weekend proved to have lots of activity from the Veterans Day Run held by the Big Spring Correctional Facility to the Big Spring Junior High School Cheerleader Color Blast run, and that was just in the in the early morning. The local Cub Scouts held its annual push cart derby, Coahoma was buzzing with the Lion's Club Coahoma Trade Days, and volunteers were out during the day at WalMart and H-E-B collecting donations for the annual Howard County Adopt a Military Hero: Christmas for the Troops.

Marriage, is the good worth the bad?

I feel very blessed to be able to start my weekly column the same week that we celebrate Veterans Day.

My husband is a disabled veteran. We have a great number of family members that have served and many friends that have served or are serving still. Thank you to all of those who have served and those who are still serving.

So, as I said, I will be writing a weekly column. I plan to focus on marriage and parenting, but who knows where my mind will wander off to in the mean time.

My husband was only 17 and I was 18 when we exchanged vows to become husband and wife in April of 1999.

The day of our wedding, about 8 of our closest friends took bets as to how long our marriage would last. We were given anywhere between 3 weeks and 3 years. Mind you, these were our friends. I would hate to think of what others were saying that day.

But anyway, here we are, 16 1/2 years later. In the meantime, all of our friends (except one) that were taking bets that day have been divorced since then. It is a sad truth that marriages can be so easily discarded.

My husband and I don't feel that we are special because we haven't been divorced, but we do feel proud. We work at our marriage to stay together and keep each other happy.

Our marriage isn't perfect, we make mistakes with each other and with our daughters.

We do not always agree on how our daughters should be raised.

Sometimes I get agitated with my husband's "in your face," aggressive attitude.

Sometimes he gets annoyed with me that I joke about everything and don't take things seriously that he finds important.

We are different people with different personalities, and that can cause a lot of issues.

However, we love each other and enjoy each others company. We want each other to be happy, to feel safe, and to feel loved. There are lots of activities that we enjoy doing together and we share a lot of the same dreams.

Sometimes days fly by with no glitches and all of the pieces fall into place. Other days, it feels like half the pieces are missing. It is easy to enjoy the easy and happy days ... but it is the day the pieces are missing that cause a person to give up.

My husband and I have come close to giving up and getting divorced. In the end, we decided that we would rather put up with the handful of missing puzzle piece days in order to have all of the perfect puzzle piece days that we get in exchange.

You have to decide if the good is worth the bad, and if the bad can be made a little better in the end.

Marriage is each one giving 100 percent, divorce is 50/50.

Chicano Golf Association Fall Junior session culminates tournament

By Taylor Ellis
Sports Editor

On Saturday the Chicano Golf Association held their grand tournament for their fall junior league, where six kids in the community won trophies. The program is for kids between the ages of 7-13 in an effort to teach them both the basics of golf as well as life lessons through the sport. "Some kids go to the high schools and they've never even hit a ball," board member Luis Porras said.

The kids have been attending weekly practices throughout the fall, as well as five tournaments. During the tournaments, the children's parents caddy for the kids as they compete.

The kids are split up into a major and minor group, with minor being ages 7-10 and major being 11-13.

This year's participants include Jake Myers, Marcu Cervantes, Mikayla Chavez, Charlie Huff, Roger Hernandez, Jacob Marquez, Ason Ortega, Emery Doporto, Mason Ornelas, Cayhill Lewis, Esperanza De Los Santos, Analisa De Los Santos, and Zac Vela.

Winners of the minor league were Isabella De Los Santos, Alisa Ortega, and John Michael Farr.

By Taylor Ellis
Sports Editor

Monday night the Howard College Lady Hawks pulled out a 64-56 win over Hill College at home.

Hill College led 32-31 at half shooting an impressive 41.9 percent from the field and 30.8 percent from beyond the arc.

In the second half the Lady Hawks stepped up the defensive pressure and held Hill College to just 32.3 percent from the field. Once again Howard's active hands forced steals, 14 in total which they converted into 25 points.

Aubrie Elliott led all Lady Hawks with 10 points on 4-of-9 shooting including a perfect 2-of-2 from three. She also tallied two assists and a steal.

Three Lady Hawks, Marie Tsoungui, Tamara York, and Shazay

Norris finished with nine points. York finished one point away from a double-double as she recorded a team-high 15 rebounds including seven offensive boards.

Howard shot an unbelievable 66.7 percent from beyond the arc and 38.7 percent from the field Monday night.

The Lady Hawks held Hill College to just nine points in the third quarter and were able to hold Hill College at bay throughout the final quarter.

Now 4-0 on the season, Howard will rest up for a three-day trip to Garden City, Kansas, where they will play three schools in three days.

Lady Buffs gearing up for start of new season

By Taylor Ellis
Sports Editor

The Forsan High School girls basketball team had two scrimmages last week. On Tuesday, the Forsan Lady Buffs took on Borden County at home, and on Saturday the girls took on the Stanton Buffaloes at home.

In both games the girls played solid defense, while the offense looked promising.

"We have 11 girls on varsity this year, and all 11 saw some valuable minutes," head coach Lindsey Schmidt said. "We have five seniors (Kaylee Kemper, Lindsey Boeker, Madi Roman, Bailey Wright, and Kaytlin Brock), three juniors (Kendall Phillips, Sterling Freeman, Rhian Cunningham), two sophomores (Chasidy Grantham and Jenna Evans), and lone freshmen Macey Evans on varsity. The five seniors, one of the juniors, and two sophomores are returners from last season."

The future is looking bright for these girls that played a lot of basketball and put in a lot of time in the off-season getting better and working together.

The Lady Buffs will be competing in the Smyer Tournament beginning on Thursday morning at 8:30 a.m. against the Smyer Lady Cats.

The Lady Buffs first home game of the year will be on Nov. 17 against Winters High School as coach Schmidt and her experienced squad look to begin their long and exciting season.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

New Moon Pre-Show

Tomorrow's new moon in Scorpio has the added significance of falling on Veteran's Day. Change is in the air, the kind that's born of spiritual evolution. So if you knew you'd be a different person tomorrow, who would you want to be? This is the ideal time to imagine the possibilities.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Regarding the thing that was off-limits to you before -- it's worth another shot. Your luck has changed and so have the surrounding circumstances. This is likely about love.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). By focusing on the details you could improve the big picture markedly, or you could unnecessarily complicate your life by reading too much into things. The trick will be knowing when to pull back.

GEMINI (May 21-

June 21). The one who is sensitive to your needs isn't just being polite. He or she is showing you a quiet, noble version of love. Make sure you don't take for granted those who are inclined to serve you.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You have the guts to move on from a job that no longer holds intrigue, or a relationship that stifles you. Change doesn't have to be a drawn-out process -- it can happen in a snap.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). When things get chaotic, you're the one who can calm it all down. Start by making and guarding a peaceful place inside yourself. Inner tranquility will lead to tranquility in the world.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). There's a fine line between saving, collecting and hoarding. Look for better ways to use valuables -- ways that will energize you and cause a sense of flow in your life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-

Oct. 23). Don't waste a minute wishing you were someone else or that you had anything different from what you currently possess. What if you believed instead that everything you are and have is right, useful and perfectly suited to this day?

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Go on and dedicate yourself to a cause that's greater than you. The happy side effect will be personal success that, if you had aimed directly for it, would have eluded you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Be resilient. Don't ruminate. Blunders and absurdities are to be expected. The ability to forget them as soon as possible is among the most useful of human gifts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). What you do when you're in a lazy mood can help you for all the other moods. There's something you once thought of as a habit of idleness that is turning out to be quite a wellspring of inspiration.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). It's hard when you have to do it all by yourself, but that's the situation that teaches you the most, too. You'll be stronger because you had to pull yourself up and make something out of nothing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You will be dealt the perfect cards today; you just have to play them right. Believe in the integrity and value of your offerings. Your best move will be born out of high self-esteem.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Nov. 10). The end of the year brings such a departure from life as usual that you'll come back and view your lifestyle with fresh eyes. January is busy with improvements and upgrades. A new financial channel opens in March. The spring brings healing for your heart and a past wrong will be made right. Pisces and Taurus adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 15, 28, 30 and 1.

ASTROLOGICAL

QUESTIONS: "The man I want to marry is moving across the country. The timing is so wrong. We started dating three months ago and now his company is moving him. How can I get him to see that the distance will only hurt us? I'd like to move with him, but I don't want to scare him off by telling him so. What should I do? I'm an Aries and he's a Libra."

As an Aries you are naturally inclined to fight for what you want. The drama and difficulty only makes it more exciting for you. However, in this case, the fight cannot be so directly obvious. Your Libra needs time to adjust to the changes he's facing in his own way. Let him make the move without worrying about the added pressure of a new relationship. If he wants you to come, he'll ask. Stay connected, but do not appear the least bit needy. Focus on yourself and enjoy your life in the city of your choosing. Your relationship might devolve into a friendship for a while, but if the connection is really there, things will change in good time. I have seen it happen before!

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Fans are hoping for a stellar post-breakup album from country music star Miranda Lambert. The Scorpio songstress announced that the past months have been some of the most inspired of her life. This solar return will be good to her. With four luminaries in Scorpio, the sign of transformation, Lambert thrives on change and welcomes the opportunity to take her art to new levels.

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My wife and I have been together for 10 years and married for two. I still work full time, but my wife took early retirement last spring and now she spends weeks at a time visiting different members of her family.

When she is gone, she rarely answers her phone. I've noticed that when she's away, I sleep and eat more, rarely socialize and don't get things done that I should. I believe I'm depressed without her. Sometimes I pretend that I have no partner and don't care that she's away. I get through those weeks much better that way.

I believe it would be easier if she called me daily or at least answered my calls, so I don't feel cut off and alone. She doesn't understand this. She says phone calls interfere with her visits. Annie, wouldn't any normal person understand calling her spouse to touch base once a day?

Is it right for couples to be apart so much? I really want this marriage to work, but it seems rather one-sided. -- Lonely and Depressed in the Midwest.

Dear Lonely: Most couples check in once a day or at least every other day when they are apart. The fact that your wife doesn't want to do this for weeks at a time worries us. We know some readers will question whether she is even visiting relatives or doing something altogether different, but we think your wife considers time away from you to be her vacation, and she is reluctant to be reminded otherwise.

When she next returns home, you can ask her about this. You can consider counseling together. But we also recommend that you stay active while she's away. Find something to do that will keep your mind busy so you are less depressed and lonely. Take up a hobby. Work on a project around the house. Go to the gym -- exercise is good for raising endorphins and making you feel better.

Dear Annie: I have three adult granddaughters, and I have been sending them $50 for each of their birthdays and at Christmas. They never thank me, but I know they have cashed the checks. I also send gifts for my great-grandchildren with no acknowledgment.

I am struggling with whether to continue this tradition. I never get a Christmas card or birthday card from them. Also, I had breast cancer and a double mastec-tomy a few years ago and they never ask how I'm doing.

I feel bad if I don't send them a gift, but don't you think this relationship should work both ways? -- Disappointed in Them

Dear Disappointed: Many grandchildren think gifts and cards only flow one way. You have to tell them. But all gifts should be acknowledged in some form, and if your grandchildren don't do this, it's time to stop. When they ask why they didn't get a Christmas gift from Nana this year, simply say you never hear back from them, so you assume they don't particularly like your presents. That should take care of it.

Opening lead — jack of spades.

Most mistakes made by declarer are due more to carelessness than lack of skill. As a case in point, consider today's deal where South got to six hearts and West led a spade.

Declarer won the jack with the king, cashed the ace of trumps, then led a low trump to the queen. When West showed out, South realized that the slam was in jeopardy. Although he could get rid of his club loser on one of dummy's spades, he might still lose a diamond trick as well as a trump trick.

South therefore decided to leave a trump in dummy as he tested the diamonds. At trick four, he led a diamond to the ace and another to dummy's queen, but East ruffed and returned a trump, and South had to go down one.

Had declarer given a bit more thought to the matter after the hearts failed to break, he would have made the contract. Instead of leading a low diamond to the ace at trick four, he should have cashed dummy's queen of diamonds first before leading another diamond from dummy at trick five. This would have left East with no recourse.

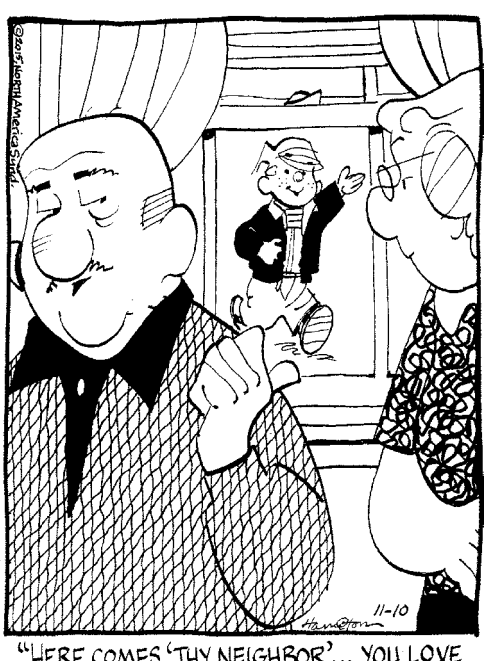

If he ruffed, declarer would follow low and later draw East's last trump to wrap up the contract. And if East did not ruff, South would win the diamond with the king, cash the A-Q of spades, discarding a club, and then lead dummy's last diamond.

Again East would find himself between the devil and the deep blue sea. If he ruffed, it would be all over; if he did not ruff, declarer would win with the ace and ruff the nine of diamonds in dummy. Whatever East did, South's only loser would be a trump trick.

Tomorrow: Bridge is a logical game.

Missouri just latest campus where athletes prompting change

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — College athletes are learning the power of teamwork goes beyond scoring touchdowns and winning conference titles.

The Missouri football team banded together to add some high-profile heft to a campus protest that resulted in Monday's resignation of Tim Wolfe, the president of the state university system. Wolfe was under scrutiny for how he handled complaints about racism and other student-welfare issues, and he was out of a job just two days after the football players indicated they wouldn't practice or play unless changes were made.

That plan included skipping Saturday's game against BYU in Kansas City, which would have cost the school more than $1 million.

It was an extraordinary declaration of solidarity coming at a time when the leaders of college sports are adjusting to more empowered and outspoken athletes than they've seen in years, emboldened by court victories against the NCAA — and now with the ability to vote on NCAA legislation — and more vocal than ever thanks to social media.

"These black football players understood that they have the power," said Shaun Harper, executive director for the Study of Race and Equity in Education at the University of Pennsylvania. "That is so rare. I don't know another class of black people on a university campus that has as much power as these guys, who generate millions of dollars for their institutions and billions of dollars for their athletic conferences. Not in our modern history have we seen black students collectively flex their muscle in this way."

Harper authored a 2013 study on black male athletes and racial inequities in Division I sports. According to the study, blacks make up 63 percent of Missouri's football and men's basketball players, but less than 3 percent of the total undergraduate population.

Because they are often sheltered and controlled within athletic departments, black student-athletes aren't always aware of their power, Harper said.

"Hopefully, this situation raises their consciousness about their authority," he said. "If black men on these teams and at other places that are like Mizzou do what these guys just did, it could be a form of activism that procures lots of benefits for them as well as for the black student collective they represent."

The rise of the empowered college athletes goes beyond race but there is no denying black athletes have been leading figures in some of the most significant recent examples.

Two seasons ago at Grambling, a historically black school, players refused to play a game against Jackson State because they were upset about the firing of a coach, long bus trips to games and poor facilities. The university then committed more than $30,000 to make improvements to the weight room.

Last year, football players at Northwestern, led by quarterback Kain Colter, who is black, tried to unionize team members. Colter's efforts ultimately failed, but many of the benefits the movement sought — guaranteed four-year scholarships and athletic scholarships that cover the full cost of attendance — are now a reality across wide swaths of Division I.

In March, Oklahoma's football team refused to practice for a week after members of the local Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity chapter were caught on video singing a song that used a derogatory term for black people and referenced lynching.

Sooners linebacker Eric Striker, who is black, responded with an angry call for change and became a de facto spokesman for the team. Striker's teammate, center Ty Darlington, said he's not sure what would have happened if the SAE incident had occurred during the season, like Missouri's situation.

"Thankfully, it never came down to us having to decide whether we were going to play games or not. But if it would have, that would have been such a difficult decision," Darlington said Monday. "And I can't say for sure what would have happened." At Oklahoma, football coach Bob Stoops supported his players and even joined in when they decided to hold a silent protest instead of practicing.

At Missouri, coach Gary Pinkel not only supported a group of about 30 players who announced they would boycott football, but he gathered the whole team the next day and united them all for the cause.

"They want to get more involved with the campus," Pinkel explained Monday. "I think that's a positive."

Receiver J'Mon Moore said he was the first player to visit the protesters last week in the tent city that had popped up on Carnahan Quad. Moore promised his support to Jonathan Butler, the grad student who decided he would not eat until Wolfe stepped down, and then shared his experience with his roommate, Anthony Sherrils.

Moore and Sherrils then spoke to defensive back Ian Simon and defensive end Charles Harris and a desire to support Butler began to spread.

"Our plan was to use our platform to make a difference and stand behind Jonathan," Moore said. "That's what we did at the end of the day."

The independence even showed Monday, as Pinkel held a news conference while his players were elsewhere: Out on campus, among other students celebrating Wolfe's resignation, and issuing their own statement.

"We just wanted to use our platform to take a stance as fellow concerned students on an issue that has special meaning as a fellow black man's life was on the line," senior defensive back Ian Simon said. "We love the game, but at the end of the day, it is just that — a game."

Harris stood nearby, wearing a T-shirt that read "I Can't Breathe," a reference to the words uttered by Eric Garner, an unarmed black man who died in a police chokehold in New York City in 2014.

"Let this be a testament to all of the athletes across the country that you do have power," Harris said. "It started with a few individuals on our team and look what it's become. Look where it's at right now."

FC Dallas wins PK shootout, advance to conference finals

By Taylor Ellis

Sports Editor

Sunday night FC Dallas won 4-2 on penalty kicks after three lead-changing goals in the final 10 of regulation time and 30 scoreless minutes of extra time. The result after the first 180 minutes of the two-leg series against the Seattle Sounders was a tie in both the aggregate score (3-3) and away goals (1-1).

With the win FC Dallas will face the Portland Timbers in the conference finals, with the first leg in Portland on Nov. 22.

"It was a very emotional game," Dallas coach Oscar Pareja said. "We are very happy for the youngsters who stepped up today in a very difficult situation. Today was all about heart and our players did it."

Walker Zimmerman forced extra time with a 91st-minute goal and scored the clinching penalty kick to help top-seeded FC Dallas reach the MLS Cup Western Conference Finals.

Dallas advanced to the Western Conference Finals for the first time since losing to Colorado in the MLS Cup final in 2010.
