Finding lots of common ground

District 19 candidates disagree about very little during forum

By STEVE REAGAN

Staff Writer

On the issues, there is little separating the two Republicans vying for the Texas District 19 U.S. congressional seat. From border security to Social Security, Jodey Arrington and Glen Robertson virtually see eye-to-eye on what will be the major priorities facing the next Congress.

Both candidates, who will face each other in a runoff election May 24, were in Big Spring Monday to address the Howard County Republican Club. During their opening remarks and a question-and-answer session that followed, it became clear that they agree on just about everything — except who people should vote for.

Only when they were asked why people should vote for them and not their opponent did Arrington's and Robertson's paths diverge. Arrington said leadership qualities honed under former President George W. Bush and as a vice chancellor at Texas Tech University gave him an edge over Robertson. "When I was given leadership responsibilities under President Bush (at the FCIC), I helped reduce agency expenditures by tens of millions of dollars. I reduced the regulatory burden on small businesses and community banks and I helped prepare major

Keep Big Spring Beautiful (KBSB) is in the business of making Big Spring green. And in return, the green has been given right back to them. Monday afternoon, the club, along with the City of Big Spring, was awarded a $10,000 grant and a $15,000 grant, respectively, from Union Pacific Railroad.

County tightens private road acceptance policy

Howard County Commissioners voted Monday to take a "thanks, but no thanks" approach to accepting private roads into the county system.

During their Monday meeting, commissioners approved a new policy which will greatly restrict the number of private roads the county will accept responsibility for in the future.

The reason, Precinct 2 Commissioner Craig Bailey said, was num-

"Weare constantly being asked to accept (private) roads into our 529-mile system, and, frankly, we don't have the money to take care of the roads we have," Bailey said, noting that the county road and bridge department has a

Sanders lags in delegates but leads in likability

WASHINGTON (AP) Bernie Sanders is still behind when it comes to delegates and votes, but he has one clear advantage over his Democratic and Republican presidential rivals — a lot of people actually like him.

By 48 percent to 39 percent, more Americans have a favorable than an unfavorable opinion of Sanders, giving him the best net-positive rating in the field, according to a new Associated Press-GfK poll. Unlike the other candidates, Sanders also is doing better as more Americans get to know him: His favorable rating is up from an earlier AP-GfK poll.

The numbers speak to Sanders' rapid rise from a relatively unknown Vermont senator to a celebrated voice proclaiming political revolution. They also reflect just how unpopular the rest of the field is.

But the growing popularity may be coming too late for Sanders, who lags behind Democratic front-runner Hillary Clinton, with time running out in the primary cam-

After winning the Democratic caucuses in Wyoming on Saturday, Sanders has now won seven of the past eight state contests. Still, to win the Democratic nomination, he must take 68 percent of the remaining delegates egates, which would require a sudden burst of blowout victories.

"I just like everything that he talks about and that he wants to do," said Brian Cane, 54, of Spokane, Washington. "I think Hillary, she's too mainstream government. Bernie Sanders is fresh and new and the Republicans are freaking idiots." Still, Cane echoed the sentiments of many Democrats, saying that if Clinton wins the primary, "Yeah, I'll vote for her."

The poll was conducted March 31-April 4, before the debate between Sanders and Clinton over who was best qualified to be president grew more intense.

Sanders' popularity stands in contrast to the rest of the remaining candidates. Clinton gets unfavorable ratings from 55 percent of Americans, while just 40 percent have a favorable opinion. A whopping 69 percent of Americans have an unfavorable view of Republican leader Donald Trump, and just 26 percent have a favorable opinion.

Among Democrats, 72 percent have a favorable opinion of Sanders and 20 percent have an unfavorable opinion. That's similar to Democrats' rating of Clinton. It's also improved from 61 percent who had a favorable view of Sanders in February, while his unfavorable rating remained stable.

Twenty-three percent of Republicans and 38 percent of independents have a favorable view of Sanders, while 67 percent of Republicans and 32 percent of independents give him negative ratings. Just 7 percent of Republicans and 21 percent of independents rate Clinton positively.

About 61 percent of registered voters say they'd at least consider voting for Sanders in a general election, while 38 percent said they would definitely not. The percentage saying they would not vote for him is the lowest in the entire field.

legislative reform," Arrington said.

"When I came back to West Texas and signed on at Texas Tech, I helped turn around recent declining enrollment. We brought thousands of new students to Tech, which brought millions of dollars to the region ... I always say leadership is about results, and I think I've shown I have the leadership qualities to help reduce the size of the federal government."

Robertson, on other hand, pointed to his more than two decades of public service, including two terms as Lubbock mayor.

"I'm the only one in this race with a proven track record in the public and private sector. I have grown three businesses and spent 25 years in public service," Robertson said. "Public servants can hold a great deal of power and I believe that power can be corrupting, so it's critical to elect a person who has held that power before you send them off to Congress."

Those differences aside, however, Arrington and Robertson expressed agreement on most of the issues raised during the meeting, including:

• Abortion — Both men stated they believe life begins at conception and oppose abortion, with Arrington calling it "a stain on the moral fabric of our nation." Robertson said he would sign off to only one exception to an abortion ban — when the life of the mother was at stake.

al deficit — Robertson has a simple solution to massive federal deficits require Congress to pass a balanced budget, "with no exceptions."

· Reducing the feder-

Arrington agreed, calling the federal debt "the greatest threat to our national security, because we can't fully address the other major issues facing this country."

· President Obama's terms in office — Both men railed against the sitting president. Ardenounced rington Affordable Care the Act, popularly known "Obamacare", "spending money we don't have on programs we don't need." Robertson, on the other hand, took a more humorous tack, saying, "President Obama has never disappointed me — he's done he'd do." • Medical care for veterans — Calling reports of exorbitant wait times for appointments at VA medical centers "a national disgrace," Arrington called for reforms that would incentivize and modernize health care for veterans, including increasing veteans' choice when choosing their providers. Robertson agreed massive change at the Department of Veterans Affairs is needed. "The quickest way to fix it is to force the people in Congress to live under the VA system," he said. "I guarantee you, within 24 hours, it would be

· Expansion of Interstate 27 through Big Spring — Robertson and Arrington both support efforts to extend the interstate south of Lubbock through Big Spring, saying it is vital for this area's economic well-being.

• Border security — Again, both men were in agreement. Robertson called for securing the border, enforcing immigration laws already on the books and reducing or eliminating entitlement payments to illegal immigrants. Arrington agreed that existing immigration laws are sufficient to deal with issue; the problem is getting Congress and the President to agree to enforce those laws.

COUNTY

In the past, the county has been fairly amenable to bringing private roads into its system, even though it is under no legal obligation to do so, County Judge Kathryn Wiseman said.

While the county isn't shutting the door entirely to the idea of taking over care of private roads, commissioners put a big roadblock in that path — in the future, the county will not consider accepting any road that isn't paved, a condition that automatically eliminates a goodly number of private byways in this area.

Commissioners also voted on a new policy on requests to rename county roads, instituting a three-step review process before granting such requests. The move was in response to past efforts which inadvertently resulted in duplication of road names.

In other business. commissioners:

• Approved an agreement with the city of Big Spring to share its fiber-optic line at the county law enforcement center.

• Approved a request to go out for bids for alternate road shoulder widening material.

- · Agreed to hold a special session on April 27 to open bids for road work.
- · Conducted a closed session to discuss personnel matters. No action was taken.

· Approved routine financial matters.

When you say or do something wrong, it

JULIE

Bass

Heaven knows I am not the perfect wife, my husband can attest to this. And I can honestly say that my husband isn't perfect. However, despite our differences and the mistakes that we make with our marriage, we are perfect for each other. He has the ability to balance me out. When I'm about to go off half-cocked, he calls me back and lends his support to center me again. When he is out of sorts and going too far, I am able to again. When done with love and respect, it is a wonderful balance with amazing results.

My husband is the head of the household and I do feel he should have the last say. But if I am earnest and I feel very strongly about the situation, he will heed my request and do things my way. When I am struggling, when I have a bad day or think that I have really messed up, he is there to comfort me and assure me that things will work out. When he struggles and has a bad day, I am there to reassure him and give him strength to carry on. We are not living the same life, but we are sharing a life together that we help each other through.

During our marriage, we have brought two beautiful baby girls into this world. Together, we have nurtured and cared for them. They are now lovely young ladies that are amusing, fascinating and attempting to take on the world themselves. Luckily, we have a little time with them before they venture into the world and learn the harsh reality of work, taxes, bills and human nature. My husband and I have made mistakes with our daughters as well. Sometimes a minor infraction will get blown out of proportion and we probably come down on them and discipline them a little too harshly. Other times we probably let them get away with too much. I know that they have lied to us or done things they shouldn't have, and while I have called them out on many of these, sometimes I let them get away with little things. I don't do this because I get tired of dealing with them, but because I believe that if I let them and they get caught up on the situation, that sometimes the life lesson they learn from it is far more educational than a lecture could be. I would never let them get away with something major that could harm them or someone else, but I will let them get away with little ones once in a while to see how it plays out. At least then when they fall, I can help them stand back up and show them where their mistakes were. Later I let them know that I knew of their deception, but wanted to let them see the results of their actions first hand.

There are many books out there that have wonderful marriage and parenting advice. I have read several over the years. I have found some wonderful tips and advice in some while others have seemed like pure nonsense. With each one you look at or read, remember that each situation is different for different people. Pick and choose which tactics and advice you use carefully. The best advice I can give on the subject is to always communicate openly and honestly. You may not like what they have to say, and they may not like what you have to say, but a true partnership and marriage will strengthen each other and make each other a better person.

Goodbye, Lake Wobegon: 'Prairie Home' is getting a new host season is planned at

By JEFF BAENEN

Associated Press ST. PAUL, Minn.

(AP) — No more Guy Noir, Private Eye. No more tales of Dusty and Lefty, the luckless cowboys. And no more weekly "News From Lake Wobegon," the imaginary Minnesota town famous for strong women, good-looking men and above-average children. Those signature comedy sketches will vanish from the airwaves when humorist and best-selling author Garrison Keillor retires as host of his popular public radio show, "A Prairie Home Companion," this summer. After Keillor, whose sonorous voice and witty writing entertained millions of listeners for four decades, steps down, mandolin ace Chris Thile of the bands Punch Brothers and Nickel Creek will step in as the first fulltime replacement host in October.

"I thought that the show should press the restart and not try to replicate what it has evolved into," Keillor explained, "but go back to the beginning and revive itself as a music show with comedy add-

Some things won't change, Keillor and Thile say. The show's name will remain Prairie Home Companion" (for now), its home base will stay at the 1,000-seat, elegantly restored Fitzgerald Theater in downtown St. Paul, and the live show will keep its twohour Saturday evening time slot. Keillor says he will remain as executive producer and "a remote, benevolent gray eminence who phones in his thoughts every so often."

'Garrison created a template that I think is immortal," an effervescent Thile said during a recent interview on the Fitzgerald stage. "It doesn't feel like any kind of constraint. It's like a license. I feel like I have my license to go and make some good radio."

But if the shows Thile guest-hosted in January and February are any indication, listeners can expect a hipper batch of musical performers. Singer-songwriter Ben Folds, alt-country singer Brandi Carlile, multiinstrumentalist and whistler Andrew Bird and Paul Simon - perhaps the biggest musical name to ever perform on "Prairie Home" — were among the guests. Thile just had to pick up the phone and see if Simon was available.

Keillor praises Thile's musical connections as well as his respect for old-time bluegrass

"It seems to me if anybody was meant to host and produce a musical variety show that has real intensity and integrity, it's him," Keillor said in a telephone interview. At 35, Thile is three years older than when Keillor, now 73, started the show in 1974. The sandy-haired singer gushes when talking about succeeding Keillor. "The prospect of getting to make things for people on a weekly basis ... is beyond compare. It's what I love to do," said Thile, who began listening to "Prairie Home" as a boy. Thile was 15 when he made his first appearance on the show in 1996 and has made a dozen or more visits since then.

Instead of Keillor's weekly monologue about Norwegian bachelor farmers and other residents of his fictional hometown of Lake Wobegon, Thile plans to write a new song every week that may take into account who is on the show. "Prairie Home" pianist and composer Richard Dworsky will remain, and Thile plans to bring back regular performers Tim Russell, Sue Scott and sound-effects guy Fred Newman but perhaps pair them with guest actors or comedians.

"Prairie Home" undoubtedly will lose its Minnesota worldview with Anoka native Keillor gone. Thile was born in San Diego, grew up in Idyllwild in the San Jacinto mountains of Southern California and has lived in Kentucky; Nashville, Tennessee; San Francisco and New York. He now lives in Portland, Oregon, with his wife, actress Claire Coffee of the TV show "Grimm," and their young son. Thile plans to stay in Portland, where "Grimm" is filmed, and commute for "Prairie Home."

Thile said the new "Prairie Home" will reflect "the increasingly diffuse experience that most people have."

Keillor will tape his final "Prairie Home" on July 1 at the Hollywood Bowl in California for broadcast the following day in its regular time slot. Thile makes his debut as replacement host Oct. 15 at the Fitzgerald. A 13-show first, about half a normal 26-show run. A big part of the show's revenue comes from stations that pay to carry it. Bill Thomas, director of radio for Prairie Public season to give Thile a chance. "I suspect a lot of people will say they don't like it, it's not Garrison Keillor," Thomas said. "Of course it won't be. We'll just have to see."

Broadcasting in North

Dakota, said he plans to sign up for the new

Both Thile and Keillor say public radio stations need to rally around the new show. "Prairie Home" has a weekly

3.5 million listeners on 700 public radio stations in the U.S. When Keillor originally tried to retire in 1987, a substitute show, "Good Evening," hosted by Noah Adams of public radio's "All Things Considered," lasted just a year. "I think ("Prairie audience of more than

Home") needs to be handed off to somebody and not just go into rerun purgatory," Keillor said. "I really think this guy (Thile) brings something to public radio that public radio needs."

Ex-justice of the peace in Texas gets prison for embezzling

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — An ex-judge in North Texas must serve two years in federal prison for stealing more than $133,000 in payments meant to settle minor court cases.

Former Archer County Justice of the Peace Joseph Charles Boyle was sentenced Monday in Wichita Falls and must repay the money.

The 64-year-old Boyle served as an elected justice of the peace since 2003. Boyle in November pleaded guilty to theft from programs receiving federal funds. He resigned a day before his guilty plea.

Boyle was authorized to impose fines and assess fees for violations such as a minor having alcohol and traffic violations. Prosecutors say Boyle stole the funds since 2013, often requesting cash and keeping some money before turning in the rest and adjusting court records.

He's also an ex-state prison guard.

Authorities tell the Amarillo Globe-News that the women are both students at West Texas A&M who told officers they attended a fraternity party Saturday and believed they may have been assaulted after drinking. The party began Saturday afternoon at the Sigma Nu house.

US requests extradition of Mexican suspect in Texas slaying MEXICO CITY (AP) — A Mexican official says the United States has formally requested the extradition of a Mexican citizen who is accused of arranging the killing of her ex-boyfriend's new girlfriend in Texas.

The federal official said Brenda Delgado, who made the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List, was informed of the request Monday. Mexican authorities arrested her last week in northern Mexico and she is being held in a Mexico City prison.

The official says that if Delgado does not appeal the request she could be extradited in about two to three months. The official was not authorized to speak about the case and insisted on anonymity.

The 33-year-old Delgado allegedly hired two people to kill dentist Kendra Hatcher in September. She faces charges of capital murder and unlawful flight in Dallas County.

San Antonio district fires officer who body-slammed girl

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A San Antonio school officer caught on tape body-slamming a middle-school student was fired Monday by the district, which said the officer's misstatements about what happened were revealed by the video.

Officer Joshua Kehm's statements on the March incident were "inconsistent" with the video and his response was "absolutely unwarranted," the San Antonio Independent School District said in a statement.

Superintendent Pedro Martinez said Kehm's case has been referred to the Texas Rangers, the state law enforcement agency, for possible criminal

The Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas will represent Kehm and plans to appeal his firing, the group's executive director, Charley Wilkison, said Monday.

There's two sides to every story," Wilkison said. "We intend to fully, fully defend this officer and make sure that all of his rights are upheld

Martinez said in an interview that he didn't find out about the incident until seeing the video on the Internet, and that staff at Rhodes Middle School also face discipline for not immediately reporting what happened.

The video shows Kehm struggling with the 12-year-old girl before body-slamming her to the ground. He then appears to handcuff the girl before having her stand and leading her away. She had been fighting with another girl before Kehm body-

Kehm first told the district that the girl's fall was accidental, then that she had been fighting an arrest in some way, Martinez said.

"Our conclusion was the action wasn't warranted," he said.

The district is supposed to be notified whenever a student is restrained, and officers are strongly discouraged from using physical force unless absolutely necessary in the case of "imminent danger," "It never should have gotten to this point," Mar-

Martinez also faulted school staff for not calling the parents of the two fighting students or taking other action before the incident. An assistant principal has been placed on paid leave, he said.

According to state records, Kehm had been a school police officer for just over a year.

Abbott picks new leaders for embattled child welfare agency

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Greg Abbott named the former head of the Texas Rangers to lead the state's embattled child welfare agency Monday, calling the status quo "unacceptable" while making the unusual move of putting a career law enforcement officer in charge of the foster care system. Henry "Hank" Whitman takes over as the Texas Department of Family and Protective Services commissioner five months after a federal judge ruled that the state's foster care system is so flawed that it violates the constitutional rights of more than 30,000 youngsters. Recent newspaper investigations have also revealed deep failings within the "I've insisted on overhauling a broken system, and I applaud the leadership changes that will provide a new direction and focus that puts protecting children first," Abbott said in a statement. Whitman had nearly 35 years of law enforcement experience before retiring from the Rangers in 2012. His appointment is a departure from a decade of agency commissioners who were either elevated state bureaucrats, judges or those with backgrounds in juvenile services. Abbott, a former Texas attorney general, also named Kristene Blackstone as assistant commissioner for Child Protective Services. She had been deputy director of the attorney general's child sup-

Texas attorney general charged with federal securities fraud

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Federal securities regulators charged Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton Monday with four counts of civil fraud, piling on more legal troubles for the Republican already under criminal indictment for allegations that he deceived friends and wealthy investors — at least once with high-pressure tactics.

The lawsuit filed by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission provoked new calls from critics that Paxton should resign but no public response from state Republican leaders, including Gov. Greg Abbott. Paxton, who has pleaded not guilty to two felony counts of securities fraud handed up by a Texas

grand jury last summer, has said he won't step down and has faced no public pressure from state leaders to do so. But questions about his private financial dealings have made for a tumultuous first 16 months on the job. The new federal lawsuit essentially mirrors the charges in Paxton's criminal case — that in 2011 he defrauded investors in a high-tech startup called Servergy Inc., a data server company. But a new 26-page federal court filing provides a far more detailed narrative of Paxton's alleged misdeeds than what has previously been made public. The SEC describes how Paxton allegedly betrayed a friend, raised $840,000 and pressured one investor to make a "hasty decision" to immediately invest, thereby increasing the value of Servergy stock that Paxton received as commission. Paxton's investor recruiting took when he was still a state legislator. SEC investigators say Paxton claimed he planned to invest $100,000 of his own money into Servergy but that company founder Bill Mapp refused. The lawsuit alleges Paxton said Mapp told him, "I can't take your money. God doesn't want me to take your money." Paxton claimed he accepted Servergy shares as a gift, according to the lawsuit. But both state prosecutors and now the SEC accuse Paxton of never telling investors Servergy paid him to raise money. The investors wouldn't have invested had they "known Paxton was being paid to promote the company," the lawsuit reads. Those same allegations led to Paxton's indictment in his hometown and facing a possible sentence of five to 99 years in prison if convicted. By filing a civil lawsuit, federal regulators aren't seeking prison time but instead want Paxton to pay back "any ill-gotten gains or unjust enrichment" and be ordered to pay additional financial penalties.SEC investigators allege that one investor considered Paxton "a personal friend" and believed that Paxton was also investing in the company. According to the lawsuit, that investor "grew worried" when promises about product shipment failed to materialize, and that Paxton "did nothing" to determine whether those company milestones were true.

Paxton attorney Bill Mateja said he was surprised the SEC chose to file the charges a year after Paxton's criminal indictment.

"Like the criminal matter, Mr. Paxton vehemently denies the allegations in the civil lawsuit and looks forward to not only all of the facts coming out, but also to establishing his innocence in both the civil and criminal matters," Mateja said.

The Texas Democratic Party, which hasn't won a statewide office in more than two decades, said in a statement that "enough is enough" and again called for Paxton to step down.

Paxton took office in January 2015 with strong tea party support. A year earlier, Texas Sen. Ted Cruz, now a GOP presidential candidate, called him a "tireless conservative warrior" as Paxton trounced a moderate Republican challenger on the way to becoming Texas' top law enforcement officer.

Mavs clinch playoffs with win over Jazz

By KAREEM COPELAND

AP Sports Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) The Dallas Mavericks clinched a Western Conference playoff spot for the third consecutive season and the 15th time in the last 16 years.

Dirk Nowitzki scored 22 and the Mavericks earned the No. 7 spot Monday with a 101-92 win over the Utah Jazz, leaving one remaining postseason

The postseason is nothing new for the organization, but the team seemed to be in dire straits when it dropped 10 of 12 during a stretch in March and lost Chandler Parsons for the season after surgery on his right knee on March 25.

Dallas made a playoff push by winning seven of its last eight games.

"Well, it's been a lot of work," Mavs coach Rick Carlisle said. "It's been an amazing two weeks. Our guys looked like they were down and out, and we all dug in. Everyone dug in, especially the players, and we found a way to get into the playoffs.

Dallas (42-39) rode its two biggest stars to victory as Nowitzki hit four 3-pointers and added 11 rebounds. Deron Williams scored 23 of his own against his former team.

"Coming in here, we knew it was going to be like a playoff atmosphere," said William, who was booed throughout. "In a sense, (it) was a playoff game because there was so much at stake.

The Mavs took a 50-46 lead into halftime after leading by as much as eight in the first half. The Jazz struggled to keep up with Nowitzki in the first quarter, in which he scored 10, and Williams in the second, when he scored 16.

its own destiny and needs to Lewis, Nicholas lead way in Rangers win

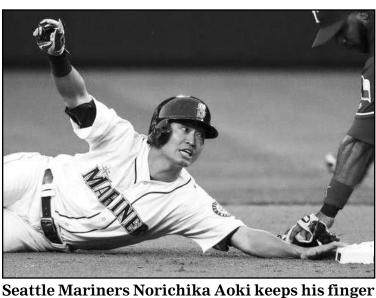

SEATTLE (AP) — It took an inning for Colby Lewis and rookie catcher Brett Nicholas to get in sync, but after that it was a successful night for both of them and the Texas Rangers.

Lewis allowed one run on four hits over six innings against Seattle's struggling offense and Nicholas had two hits and threw out a runner at second in his major league debut to lead the Rangers to a 7-3 victory over the Mariners on Monday night.

"Hats off to Brett," Lewis said. "He did a great job back there tonight, just setting up. I felt comfortable with him catching. I wasn't worried

Lewis (1-0) allowed a first-inning run on Nelson Cruz's two-out RBI double, then retired 13 straight before allowing an infield single to open the sixth when he failed to cover on Leonys Martin's bouncer

It was the fourth straight loss for Seattle, which scored just four runs while being swept at home by Oakland in a three-game weekend series. Texas built a 7-1 lead before Cruz's second homer of the season, a two-run shot off Keone Kela in the eighth.

"We struggled to put consistent quality at-bats together," Mariners manager Scott Servais said. "It just isn't happening right now. What are you going to do? You just got to keep battling, keep fighting through it, and eventually we will come out of it."

Rick Bowmer) Freshman arms giving upstart Red Raiders big lift in Big 12

By ERIC OLSON

AP Sports Writer

With an all-freshman weekend rotation and a powerful offense, Texas Tech is one of the biggest surprises in college baseball so far this season.

The Red Raiders (24-9) have won 11 of 12 Big 12 games for their best conference start in program history. They're coming off one of their best weeks ever, having split two games at top-10 Florida State and taking three at Oklahoma State for their third straight league sweep.

The team picked by coaches to finish fifth out of nine teams in the Big 12 was ranked Monday as high as No. 10 nationally in the major polls.

"In our league, you don't expect to go sweep three series in a row, so yeah, we're definitely further along," fourth-year coach Tim Tadlock said. In Big 12 play, Friday night starter Davis Martin (4-0, 1.70 ERA) has allowed two earned runs over 22 1/3 innings and Saturday starter Steven Gingery (3-1, 2.87) has allowed three earned runs in 23 innings. Sunday starter Ty Harpenau (1-0, 5.88) has been solid over his last two starts after a rocky outing against Oklahoma.

Tech's offense is providing plenty of support, batting .303 and averaging 7.4 runs a game. Sophomore center fielder Tanner Gardner is batting .405 and has a .507 on-base percentage and senior first baseman Eric Gutierrez is batting .345 with a team-high 32 RBIs.

Gutierrez, junior right fielder Stephen Smith and senior left fielder Tyler Neslony are holdovers from the 2014 team that was Tech's first to reach the College World Series. The Raiders lost a pair of one-run games at the CWS and finished with 45 wins. Last year, they went 31-24 and failed to make the NCAA Tournament.

The Raiders are No. 12 in the most recent RPI on the strength of their split at Florida State, a split at Pac-12 co-leader California and their performance in the Big 12. Tadlock said he doesn't want his players to dwell on their success, especially with two weeks until their next Big 12 series.

Tadlock said his team's focus

Love Triangle

Venus in Aries and Mars in Sagittarius HOLIDAY form a fiery

MATHIS triangle to pull some passion and enthusiasm from the heavenly realms. The exciting endeavors move front and center, romantic love being the star of it all. No matter how old the relationship or endeavor is, it will be touched by the incomparable freshness of youth.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The hardest kind of criticism to take is honest criticism. Only the strong (that means you) can handle it, and handle it you will -- because there's something just beyond your usual awareness that will be incredibly helpful for you to know.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Those moments in which you feel happy, healthy, safe and protected from all harm -- those shouldn't be rare. If those moments are not abundant for you, why not? Today is a fine time to turn the trend around.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Life will make you change for the better, and there's nothing you need to do about that now. Just relax and believe. If you can't believe, that's fine, too, but you'll be more comfortable if you at least relax.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Those who know you well are expecting you to succeed, and so are those who don't know you. That's because success is your vibe these days! Anyone who isn't rooting for you in an obvious way doesn't belong on your team.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your perfect blend is out there. When the music of your thoughts mixes with the music of a compatible individual's thoughts, the result will be a beautiful, layered symphony you both can dance to.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Stressful moments have a way of constricting your creativity and thought processes. Laughter is an experience of opening up and getting everything flowing again. You'll be at your best when you keep looking for the humor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Maybe it sounds a little harsh, but the fact is that some people in your life nourish you while others deplete you. Recognize this reality and plan your day accordingly to stay buoyant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Take a moment to gently acknowledge the feeling you're having; it's human. You're not the only one. Whatever you feel, it's acceptable. Does that help you soften into the moment instead of resisting it?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Address the concerns you have about your image. It's not selfish to want to put your best foot forward. This is the moment to nip a problem in the bud or make an easy improvement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You get to decide just how close you want people to be to you. Sure, they may have their own ideas, and there is a bit of negotiating to do (most of it informal and implied), but ultimately you're in charge. Don't forget AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). For moments it will be as though your ordinary mind and sense of personal identity have dissolved into a dream. The question is: How much of this dream are you able to influence? Test it out. Assert yourself and see.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You didn't go wrong; you went right. Anyway, it's best not to think about it now. This is different from the original plan, but assume that it's different in a good way and move forward.

TODAY'S BIRTH-DAY (April 12). You've a talent for finding helpful people. The most attractive aren't always the best for you. Wishing to be a bright light in the world, you keep asking what would yield the highest good for the most people. You'll be at the center of the social swirl in May and June. August brings different work for excellent pay. Scorpio and Capricorn adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 6, 41, 49, 22 and 48.

ASTROLOGICAL

QUESTIONS: "I'm a 20-year-old Aries entering the work force for the first time. I have a business degree, but I'm not sure what I want to do. Any ideas or advice?"

One of your superpowers in the workforce is the fact that you're not afraid to try on a job for size. While some might turn down a job that's obviously not in line with career objectives, you think, "What's the harm? Strawberry picking might be a fine way to spend a few days. Answering the phones for a bookie? Hmm. Interesting character study!" You don't think it's the slightest bit weird to do a job for a week and then decide it's not for you. You'd rather have that experience than never know for sure what might have been. And so your pre-edited resume is colorful and mind-boggling. But every "No way is this for me" leads you closer to "This is so my thing!" Trajectories to add to your list of considerations: activist, ambulance driver, barista, doula, DJ, journalist, reality-show producer, real estate developer, soldier, T-shirt designer, teacher, youth counselor, etc.

CELEBRITY PRO-FILES: "Homeland" star Claire Danes knew she wanted to be an actress at age 5 and informed her parents early on of her true calling. Danes, who gravitates toward whip-smart and self-assured characters, was born when the sun and Mars were in assertive Aries. Her natal Mercury and Venus are in Pisces, the sign of old souls. And I have to yell over her to finish a sentence. I wonder if either of them will see themselves in this letter and at least attempt to change. I've heard of "listening classes" that can teach people how to actively listen. For now, I've got plenty of other friends who care enough to listen, so I've given up on the others. -- Middle Aged and

Finally Waking Up Dear Waking Up: Hearing problems are only one possibility for those who, over time. begin to talk nonstop. Another possibility, of course, is self-involvement or perhaps a fear that they won't remember what they intend to say if they don't say it immediately. So they interrupt and talk over

People who do this rarely recognize their actions. It is your choice to end the friendship over such annoying behavior. But how much kinder it would be to gently point out to Sally why this bothers you, and to remind her when she does it again. You could regain the friendship, and help Sally be a better listener. What do you have to lose?

Dear Annie: I'd like to provide a different perspective for "I'd Like My Wife Back Please," who has been married for 25 years and his wife suddenly hates him. He mentioned that she had been exercising quite a bit and had totally changed her diet.

I was married for 28 years. My husband was controlling, abusive with our children and wouldn't keep a job. As the kids left the nest, I realized that I was going to be living with this man for the rest of my life. It scared me to death. I couldn't stand it any longer. I turned the corner and knew the marriage was finished. I'm sure my husband thought it was a sudden change, but it had been building for years.

I've come to realize, as women, that we do what we have to do. We raise our kids, we go to work or stay home. whatever. But the bottom line is, when we are done, we're done. And it sounds like she is done. To this day, my ex doesn't think he ever did anything wrong. --Happily Ever After

Dear Happily: It's true that problems can fester and, over time, can destroy a marriage. When they are addressed early on, the relationship can often be salvaged because both parties are aware of the issues and are working on them. This is why we so often recommend counseling. But when one person suffers in silence, the result is built-up resentment and despair.

South crosses to dummy with a trump and tries a club finesse, losing to the king. If West, eyeing dummy's clubs, now gets panicky and plays the ace of hearts because he is afraid South will discard his heart losers on dummy's clubs, he hands declarer the contract.

West may make this play because he thinks the only chance to stop the contract is to find East with the king of hearts. However, this reasoning is unsound, to say the least. West should return a club instead, because he cannot lose anything by doing so.

West has all the information he needs to make the club return com-pletely safe. He knows South started with exactly five spades and one dia-mond, leaving declarer with seven cards in hearts and clubs. If South has two clubs, he must have five hearts; if he has three clubs, he must have four hearts; if he has four clubs, he must have three hearts. In all of these cases, South cannot escape whatever heart losers he has. Consequently, West's only correc action is to return a club at trick seven and let nature take its course, which in this case results in down one. The danger that South's heart losers will somehow disappear is more imaginary than real.

AP source: Suspended Gordon might have more trouble

By BARRY WILNER

AP Pro Football Writer Suspended Browns receiver Josh Gordon might be in trouble with the NFL again.

A person familiar with the situation tells The Associated Press that Gordon has "raised a red flag" because of a league-administered drug test. The person, who spoke on condition of anonymity because results of NFL drug tests are not made public, says Gordon didn't have a positive substance abuse test.

But a sample collected in March showed Gordon had traces of marijuana and a diluting substance in his system.

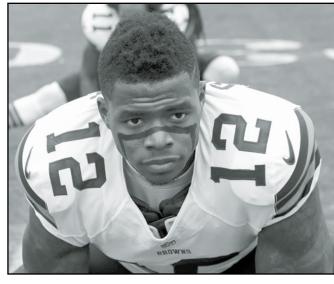

The level of marijuana was less than the minimum required by the NFL for a positive test.

Still, the test for Gordon, suspended for all of 2015 for testing positive for alcohol, raised concerns because, the person says, "in the state he is in (within the NFL drug program), anything above a certain amount, even if it is below the threshold, raises a red flag."

The league, a spokesman for the Browns, and Gordon's agent Drew Rosenhaus, all declined to comment.

Fox Sports first reported the story.

Cleveland's new front office has said little about Gordon, who applied for reinstatement in January. Last week, coach Hue Jackson said it was premature to talk about the former Pro Bowler because his situation had not been resolved. There is no indication when Commissioner Roger Goodell might rule on Gordon's application.

And now the situation is more muddled.

According to league policy, for Gordon to be reinstated he will have demonstrate tained abstinence during his suspension. His past includes several failed marijuana tests in college, too, at Baylor.

After Gordon pleaded guilty to driving while impaired on July 5, 2014, in Raleigh, North Carolina, he was required to submit to alcohol testing under the third stage of the league's mandated program.

Gordon said he drank on a flight to Las Vegas a few days after the 2014 season ended and failed a subsequent test. Gordon had assumed any restrictions ended after the season, but he didn't clarify that with the league.

Gordon was initially suspended for the 2014 season after testing positive for marijuana. His penalty was later reduced to 10 games after the league and NFL Association Players changed their substance abuse policies.

Gordon also had to sit out the two games in 2013 for a failed drug test, which he blamed on taking prescription cough medicine. Gordon led the league with 1,646 yards receiving in 2013 despite that suspension.

RANGERS

The Rangers erased a 1-0 deficit with runs in the second, third and fourth off Hisashi Iwakuma (0-1), who gave up three runs on eight hits in six innings.

Texas tied it in the second when Ian Desmond walked with one out and advanced on wild pitch on a swinging third strike to Mitch Moreland. Elvis Andrus then blooped an RBI single into shallow right.

Prince Fielder's sacrifice fly in the third put Texas up

The Rangers made it 3-1 in the fourth on singles by Moreland and Ryan Rua and an RBI double by Rougned

Nicholas, called up Sunday from Triple-A Round Rock, doubled to open the seventh off Mike Montgomery for his first big league hit. He scored on Fielder's line single to left just over the outstretched glove of Ketel Marte.

Seattle loaded the bases with two outs in the seventh, but Sam Dyson retired Norichika Aoki on a sharp grounder to first.

"We had the bases loaded and Aoki actually hits a ball OK down the line, they make a play, that happens, it's the big leagues," Servais said. "We need a little good fortune to turn our way. But we need to keep battling and we got to make it happen, nobody is going to give it to us. I think we got to be a little more aggressive and play with a little more edge."

The Rangers added three runs on four hits in the eighth, keyed by Odor's tworun single off the glove of Robinson Cano with the bases loaded.

Nicholas might have thrown the most important strike of the first inning. Aoki led off with a walk, but Nicholas threw him out at second on an attempted steal. Kyle Seager then walked and Cruz followed with the oneout double.

"He helped me out huge there in the first inning throwing out Aoki," Lewis said. "He definitely came up big tonight for us.'

ANOTHER HOT START outfield Texas Nomar

Mazara was 2-for-4 with an RBI. Since making his debut Sunday after being called up from Triple A. he is hitting .625 (5 for 8) with a homer and two RBIs.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Rangers: Delino DeShields was out of the lineup with a sore shoulder. It was a good day for DeShields to get a rest, as he is 0 for 10 lifetime against Iwakuma. With DeShields out, Odor hit leadoff for Texas.

Mariners: RHP Joaquin Benoit was unavailable for a second straight day while he deals with back and shoulder stiffness. Benoit said he did not consider it to be serious and was something he dealt with during spring training as well. ... LHP Charlie Furbush played catch at 75 feet on Monday. must be on the next game, which is Tuesday at home against a dangerous Sam Houston State team that swept three games from Oklahoma in late February.

"We've got the Bearkats rolling in licking their chops to play us," Tadlock said. "I think we understand we need to try to keep our feet on the ground."

A look around the country: MIAMI NEW NO. 1: Bad weather forced the cancellation of two of Miami's three games at Notre Dame, but the Hurricanes' 10-2 win on Sunday was enough to push them to the top of the major polls after former No. 1 Florida (29-5, 8-4) lost two of three to Mississippi State. The Canes (25-4, 11-2 ACC) have won nine straight and 20 of their last 22.

ABOUT THOSE BULL-DOGS: Mississippi State (23-9-1, 8-4), coming off its first series win in Gainesville since 2007, has won four straight SEC series for the first time since 2001. The Bulldogs are as high as No. 2 in this week's polls and are a game ahead of Texas A&M in the SEC West. RICARDO'S ON A ROLL:

Rice sophomore Ricardo Salinas pitched a two-hit shutout in his first complete game, a 3-0 win over UAB on Sunday. He allowed two singles, walked one and retired the last 16 batters. In his last 37 innings, Salinas (5-1) has a 0.97 ERA and has held opposing batters to a .176 average.

LASHING LOBOS: New Mexico Nos. 3 and 4 batters Chris DeVito and Carl Stajduhar were a combined 11 for 14 in a 14-13, 12-inning win over Fresno State on Saturday. DeVito was 5 for 7 with three home runs and six RBIs, and Stajduhar was 6 for 7 and hit for the cycle before the extra FEAR THE GOPHER: Minnesota (18-10), ninth in the Big Ten a year ago, has won four of its first five in conference play. The Gophers swept a doubleheader at nationally ranked Michigan on Friday. Two weeks ago, they won a nonconference series against a ranked Missouri State team.
