Hundreds line up to cast early ballots Monday

Staff Writer

Early voting for the Nov. 8 general election is off to a brisk start, with more than 1,100 early and mail-in ballots accounted for.

County Elections Administrator Saundra Bloom said 790 people voted in-person during the first day of early voting Monday. That figure, combined with 353 mail-in ballots, brings the first-day total to 1,143.

At times, the line of voters wait-the length of the county courthouse, and some voters were already in line when the elections office opened at 8 a.m., observers said.

Early voting for the Nov. 8 election will run through Nov. 4 in the county elections administrator's office, located on the first floor of the Howard County Courthouse. Voting hours will be 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, except for Nov. 1 and Nov. 3, when ballots can be cast from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

As has been the case for the past suitable ID before they will be allowed to cast their ballots. If they do not have one of the seven state-approved forms of photo identification, they can sign an affidavit that will allow them to vote, as long as they can provide documentation which includes their name and address, Bloom said.

Questions about suitable identification can be answered by calling Bloom's office at 432-264-2273.

City: Stop reselling water By STEVE REAGAN

Staff Writer

When it comes to providing water service, the city of Big Spring is taking steps to eliminate the middle man.

City officials will propose an amended ordinance which would prohibit residential customers from reselling water to other residences when the city council meets at 5:30 p.m. today at 307 E. Fourth St.

Unauthorized use of city water has been a concern for officials over the course of the past few years, and they've taken steps ranging from boosting penalties for such infractions to making water meters more tamper-proof.

This latest step is aimed at stopping customers who furnish or resell their water to other residences.

While it is currently legal for residential customers to resell their water, officials consider that practice a public health risk.

"Water treatment and distribution are a very important part of city provided services," City Manager Todd Darden said. "If done incorrectly, it can pose health threats to the user. We feel that this ordinance could help eliminate those types of health concerns."

Under the new ordinance, private

BSHS band marches to top rating

By LYNDEL MOODY

Staff Writer

ABILIENE — Steer pride was evident when officials at the UIL Regional Contest announced the Big Spring High School band received a Division I rating for its marching show Monday night.

Now it's time to march on to the second round.

The contest was held at Abilene Wylie. The band now heads on to Area contest on Saturday in Lubbock. If the band makes the cut in this next round of competition, Rocky Harris and his students will have qualified twice in a row for a state marching contest.

The band earned a trip to UIL state contest in 2014, the last time a state contest was held for Class 4A schools. Before then, the last time a BSHS band qualified was in 2001, the first time the band made a state showing since the 1988 and 1987

Iraqi forces battle IS in western town, far from Mosul

BAGHDAD (AP) - Iraqi forces, backed by U.S.led coalition airstrikes, battled Islamic State militants for a third day on Tuesday in a remote western town, hundreds of kilometers (miles) to the south of the operation to retake Mosul, U.S. and Iraqi officials said.

The clashes underway in Rutba, in Iraq's western Anbar province, are apparently part of the extremist group's tactics to divert attention — as well as Iraqi and coalition resources — from the battle to retake Mosul from Islamic State militants.

News in brief

Militants attack Pakistan police academy, killing 59

QUETTA, Pakistan (AP) – Militants wearing suicide vests stormed a Pakistani police academy in the southwestern city of Quetta overnight, killing at least 59 people, mostly police cadets and recruits, and waging a ferocious gunbattle with troops that lasted into early hours Tuesday.

Pakistani officials feared the death toll could rise further, as the four-hours-long siege — one of the deadliest attacks on Pakistan's security forces in recent years — left 117 wounded, some of them in critical condition.

The assault caught many of the recruits asleep in their dorms and forced cadets and trainers to jump off rooftops and run for their lives to escape the attackers.

By mid-day Tuesday, conflicting claims of responsibility emerged. The Islamic State group, which is waging war in Syria and Iraq where it has declared a self-styled caliphate, posted a claim on the group's media arm, the Arabic-language Aamaq news agency. It said three IS fighters killed 60 police recruits in Quetta but the claim was not confirmed by Pakistani officials and IS did not offer any previously statement claiming responsibility for the at-the U.S.-led coalition.

4 killed on river rapids ride at Australian theme park

SYDNEY (AP) - Four people were killed on Tuesday in an accident at a popular theme park on Australia's east coast, officials said.

Two men and two women died while on a river rapids ride at Dreamworld, a park on Queensland state's Gold Coast, Queensland police officer Todd Reid told reporters.

The Thunder River Rapids ride whisks people in circular rafts along a fast-moving, man-made river. A malfunction caused two people to be ejected from their raft, while two COWBOYS STEAKHOUSE others were caught inside the ride.

He repeats that sentence a halfdozen times in a $4\frac{1}{2}$ -minute rant that darts from fear of crime to outsourced jobs to political correctness. He pans soulless politicians and has-been celebrities and psycho-babble hug-atree experts; he pines for a time when everyone spoke English and looked you in the eye and meant what they said. It's a fervent soliloquy that dismisses transgender people and calls for faith to regain public footing and for economic opportunity to return. "I want America to be America," he says. "I want some semblance privilege, from the Founding Fa-of what this country used to be. It's worth protecting. It's worth defending. I don't recognize this country anymore."

This is a white male voice preaching to a largely white male audience that has expressed many of the same sentiments, in dribs and drabs, in hushed watercooler conversations and boisterous barroom exchanges, around kitchen tables - and most of all, in the course of a presidential campaign in which Trump has become their champion and their hope.

Certainly, not all white males agree. But at this moment in American history, to be white and male means, for many, to question what happened to the opportunities once theirs for the taking, to see others getting ahead and wonder why, to feel centuries of privilege and values slipping away.

"They're taking everything from us," says one of the day's callers, Stephen Sanders. "I don't want my community changed."

The callers express resentment of immigrants who came here illegally. suspicion of Muslims, disdain for gays. They rail against a coarsening of culture, while backing a man who brags about making unwanted sexual advances. They voice bitterness toward a society they see as rallying to save an endangered animal or to lobby for the bathroom rights of transgender children, while seeming to ignore their own pain. To many, the notion of white men being marginalized is ludicrous, their history a study in power and thers to the "Mad Men" era and through their continued dominance in boardrooms and government. Yet they have suffered some real losses, even as they maintain advantages:

-Whites saw their household net worth fall from a median of $192,500 before the Great Recession to $141,900 in 2013, according to a Pew Research Center analysis. (The declines of blacks and Hispanics were far larger. and whites still have an average net worth about 13 times greater than blacks and 10 times greater than Hispanics.)

-Factoring in inflation, white men's salaries have barely budged in the past decade, according to Bureau of Labor Statistics data. (Still, they cash paychecks, on average, far larger than those of women, blacks and Hispanics, and have a lower rate of unemployment.)

-The home ownership rate for whites, 71.5 percent in the second quarter of this year, is down from the same period a decade earlier, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. (Black and Hispanic home-ownership, already lower, dropped at a far sharper rate.)

-White women have overtaken men in earning college degrees, according to census data. (White men still hold a big educational advantage over blacks and Hispanics.)

—The number of incarcerated white men has ballooned, according to the Bureau of Justice Statistics. (Black and Hispanic men remain far more likely to be jailed.)

-Fueled by suicides, drug overdoses and alcohol-related illnesses, mortality rates for middle-age whites have increased even as they continue to fall among middle-age blacks and Hispanics, a shift recorded in a landmark study last year in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences. (Still, white men continue to have a longer life expectancy than black men, according to Centers for Disease Control data, though shorter than Hispanics.)

These are among the changes that have sent white men to Tea Party gatherings, to fractious town hall meetings and, more recently, to Trump's rallies. Some argue, though, that their rage has been misplaced.

"What's made their lives more difficult is not what they think," said Michael Kimmel, a Stony Brook University professor who studies masculinity and wrote the book "Angry White Men." "LGBT people didn't outsource their jobs. Minorities didn't cause climate change. Immigrants didn't issue predatory loans from which they now have lost their houses and everything they ever had. These guys are right to be angry, but they're delivering the mail to the wrong address."

The clock hits 2 p.m., and the top-ofthe-hour headlines at WBAP advise of a hurricane swirling in the Pacific and a new poll on the Trump-Clinton race. Roberts' show begins every day with the sounds of the country duo Big & Rich.

"I ain't gonna shut my mouth," they sing. "Don't mind if I stand out in a crowd. Just wanna live out loud. Well I know there's got to be a few hundred million more like me."

The host is authoritative but genial. He doesn't yell, hears out the occasional liberal who dials in, sometimes corrects a caller's inaccuracies. He hands a huge swath of his airtime over to listeners.

Fifteen minutes into the broadcast, Roberts reminds his audience he's a registered independent, not a Republican, though he can't recall the last time he gave a Democrat his vote.

"Let's go to Bill in Garland," Roberts says.

The caller dismisses Hillary and Bill Clinton as "liars, cheats and thieves" and says he doesn't think he could vote for the Democrat even if his three grandchildren were held hostage.

Reached by phone three days later, he conceded to a reporter that he used an alias. His name is Jim Drahman and he's a 70-year-old computer technician.

"People are afraid to say anything in public," he says, for fear of offending. "They've got to worry about everything they say."

He just wants to be able to go to work and live freely, he says. He doesn't want the government telling him what he can drink or smoke or drive. He knows taxes are a necessity, but believes they should be lower. He views things through his grandchildren's eyes, and worries about terrorism and the economy, but most of all, about the U.S. maintaining its status in the world.

"I just want them to have a country that I can be proud of," he says.

Calls come in at a steady clip, and when Stephen Sanders dials in, he's enraged by a poll showing Clinton making gains in Texas. "Sir, stop yelling," the show's producer says, before typing in a summary of Sanders' tirade for the host: "Allowing illegals to vote is treason.'

Sanders is no calmer a day later. He rages against illegal immigration. The media and most politicians have been co-opted into accepting open borders, he says. Those who came here illegally are "continuing to suck on the labors of people who are contributing.'

Sanders' father worked in a warehouse but was able to give his family a life of abundance. Jobs were everywhere. You didn't need a college degree or the resulting load of debt. He misses the simplicity of those times, and laments today's pervasive sex, the tattoos and body piercings and bright blue hair. He is 49 and was once an X-ray technician. He says his skill and years of seniority were ignored when he applied for a supervisory job that ultimately went to a black candidate he said "walked right off the street." He later fell into depression and now receives a disability check.

"You're white, you're male, you're the least considered," he says. "As far as white privilege, I see it. I would think it was there if I went to Princeton or Yale or if my name was Hillary or Clinton. As far as me, no."

Despite Trump's privileged upbringing and Ivy League education, Sanders was pleased when the billionaire announced his candidacy; he was thrilled to hear someone give voice to his feelings about immigration and outsourcing and restoring opportunity for guys like him. It felt, he said, like seeing decades of painful history starting to be reversed. He wants to return to work. He wants to be productive. He wants to live a better life than his now that there used to be," he says.

He's far from alone in his pessimism. A Kaiser Family Foundation-CNN poll released in September compared white college graduates and the white, black and Hispanic working class. Working-class whites were least likely to say that they're satisfied with their influence in the political process, that the federal government represents their views, and that they believe their children will achieve a better standard of living than themselves. They were most likely to say it has become harder to get ahead financially and find good jobs in recent years, and most likely to blame economic problems on the federal government and immigrants working here illegally.

WBAP estimates Roberts' audience is about two-thirds male and overwhelmingly white, though women and minorities also call in on this day and you needn't look far, even in Roberts' own studio, to find a white man who doesn't subscribe to conservative orthodoxy.

On the other side of the glass from the host, mondio board, is Randy Williams. Roberts says he's a conservative and a social progressive, but mostly a disaffected American.

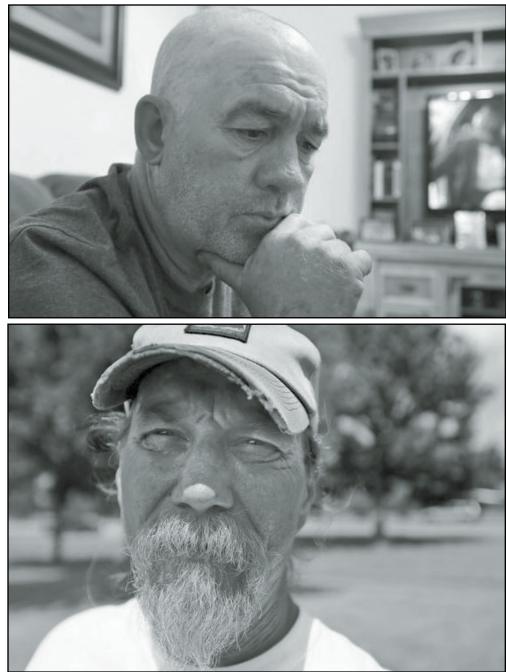

"Nobody the far left and the 5 percent on the far right and in the middle."

"Ken in Dallas. Ken, I appreciate your patience."

Ken from Dallas is Ken Hindman, a 57-year-old gas tanker driver. He tells Roberts that Clinton is like mobster John Gotti.

Later, he takes a break from driving his 18-wheeler toward Dallas Love Field, pulling over to a rest stop to expand on his views.

He says he doesn't "feel one iota of responsibility" for the wrongs committed against black Americans. When filling out a form asking his race, he checks "other." He's tired of labels; when he opposed Obama, he complains, he was branded a racist. Trump, he admits, was not his first choice. But he has earned Hindman's fervent support.

father, but he doesn't.

"The theme about the American experience is to get better and to do more," he says. "I've never experienced it. I've always struggled.'

Roberts' show breaks for the news again (a highway accident, a missing man with dementia, more hot weather). He plays a clip of Trump insisting he'll build a border wall and returns to the air calling Clinton "the Teflon mom" before going to a caller — "Jon in Cedar Hill" — who says the former secretary of state should be convicted.

Jon Hayes is deep into his daily radio routine, a listening marathon that starts with the midnightto-5-a.m. "Red Eye Radio" and ends with Roberts' show, which wraps up at 5 p.m. For Hayes, sleep comes in spurts, including an extended nap during Rush Limbaugh's time slot.

He wonders where the tear-down-this-wall strength of the Reagan era went. He sees modernday America as an internet-governed, me-me-me culture. Tired of political correctness, he sometimes wears a T-shirt that says, "Prepare To Be Offended."

Hayes once had his own construction business, but he said it folded and he lost his house when it became impossible to compete against the cheap labor of immigrants who came to the U.S. illegally. He fell back on his knowledge of auto mechanics. Though he is 55, he had hoped to retire this year; he has put it off. A grown son still lives at home, and for all the setbacks Hayes has had in his life, he believes he's still able to say something that he's not sure the 29-year-old will: He achieved a better life than his parents.

"I just don't think the opportunity is out there

"He says the things that a lot of people that I know feel," he says.

There was a time when white men were the ones earning the paychecks and deciding who pulls the levers of power. Now, many of them say they're just looking to be heard. So when they amass in arenas to hear Trump, or call into Roberts' studio to share their thoughts, their voices carry more than anger. Here, they say, is a wisp of the respect and validation they long to regain.

Roberts sees his "I want my country back" monologue as a tonic for that despair. When you're on the air three hours a day, five days a week, the listener angst can be overwhelming. It was about two years ago when he delivered the rant, impromptu, on a day when he reached a saturation point.

He feels that same anguish. Roberts says his parents were never in his life. He was raised by grandparents and, when they grew too old, he was emancipated at age 15 and landed at a boys' ranch. "I fell on my ass more than I can count,'

He clicks the file and it begins to play:

"I want my country back, and the only way, the only way I'm ever going to be able to get this country back is if I reach out to the brothers and sisters that all feel the very same way and say, 'Hell, no, you can't have the country.""

Denver gives Osweiler rude welcome in 27-9 win over Houston

By ARNIE STAPLETON

AP Pro Football Writer

DENVER — Brock Osweiler took one last dig at Denver's fans after Houston's 27-9 loss to the Broncos. He figured they would "be a little bit louder with the boos."

Denver's defenders ruined Osweiler's homecoming by hurrying, hit-otherwise running for his life from Miller & Co.

Miller wore a "REVENGE" hoodie to his postgame interview, but he said it was a shoutout to Drake, who wore Miller's No. 58 jersey at a recent concert in Colorado.

"Me and Brock, we're good. I love the guy. I wish him the best," Miller said.

ting and harassing their ex-quarterback Monday night, even if his ears weren't ringing from the crowd noise.

Osweiler famously declared upon signing his $72 million, four-year deal that he chose Houston over Denver because the Texans gave him the better chance to succeed.

"It's not all about money in life," said Broncos cornerback Chris Harris Jr., who recovered one of Osweiler's three fumbles. "He had a great situation, great team here, better receivers to me. So, I think he already knows he made the wrong choice."

Not so, said Osweiler.

"I never live my life looking in the rearview mirror," Osweiler said after a night in which his head was on a constant swivel with the likes of Von Miller, Shane Ray and Derek Wolfe coming after him.

Coach Gary Kubiak returned to the sideline following his second health scare in three years, and he liked what he saw as the Broncos (5-2) snapped a two-game skid in sending Osweiler and the rest of the overwhelmed TexAP Photo/Jack Dempsey ans home at 4-3.

C.J. Anderson and Devontae Booker energized Denver's sputtering ground game, both running for a touchdown. Anderson gained 107 yards on 16 carries and Booker had 83 on 17 hand-offs.

But the big story was Trevor Siemian, Peyton Manning's surprise successor, outplaying Osweiler, who was groomed to be Denver's next QB for the last four years.

Osweiler left for bigger numbers in Texas — both in his bank account and his stat sheet — but he spent the whole game quickly getting rid of the ball, constantly overthrowing DeAndre Hopkins in double coverage and Osweiler was just 22 for 41 for 131 yards with no TDs and no interceptions. Siemian was 14 of 25 for 157 yards, a TD and no interceptions.

Osweiler also lost a fumble at his own 25-yard line. It was scooped up by Harris on the first play of the fourth quarter and led to Brandon McManus' chip-shot field goal that made it 24-9.

Of the dozen passes thrown his way, Hopkins caught just five of them, covering 36 yards, and no other Texan gained more. And Houston was limited to Nick Novak's field goals from 43, 43 and 39 yards.

Anderson scored on a 7-yard run and Siemian hit Demaryius Thomas from 4 yards out as the Broncos took a 14-6 halftime lead.

Novak's 29-yarder made it 14-9, but Darian Stewart punched the ball from running back Alfred Blue's grasp and linebacker Todd Davis plucked it out of the air . That led to Booker's 1-yard

Cleveland ready to rock sports world

By TOM WITHERS

AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND — Always up for a party, Cleveland's about to rock like never before.

For more than 50 years, fans agonized while waiting for one their three major professional teams to win a championship, a drought that defined the city and its people. All the parades, the trophy presentations, the visits to the White House happened for other teams, in other places.

Cleveland was always left out. Those days are done.

And on Tuesday night, Cleveland will be center stage for the sports universe with a celebration that once seemed inconceivable.

The spotlight has never been so warm or welcoming.

LeBron James and the Cavaliers got Cleveland's first championship since 1964 by beating Golden State with a historic comeback in the NBA Finals in June. The Cavs will receive their rings and raise a banner at Quicken Loans Arena before their season opener Tuesday night against the New York Knicks, and the emotional ceremony will be but a first act.

Thirty minutes later next door at Progressive Field, the Indians will host the Chicago Cubs in Game 1 of the World Series.

It's an almost unimaginable doubleheader on Ontario Street. Two Cleveland teams at the top of their games — a dream beyond dreams for fans.

"There won't be any place better in the sports world than Cleveland, and a lot of people in Cleveland have been waiting a long time to hear those words," said Indians second baseman Jason Kipnis. "It will be the No. 1 place to be in sports. What a special day."

Even fans without tickets for either event are expected to flood downtown because of a concert across from the Q by rapper Wiz Khalifa.

Plus, there will be dessert.

Proposed reforms reflect new reality of football recruiting

By RALPH D. RUSSO

AP College Football Writer

The NCAA committee that proposed football recruiting reforms, which include the addition of early signing periods, wants to create more transparency and access for coaches and players in a process that has been accelerated in recent years, said a key member of the group.

Nebraska athletic director Shawn Eichorst told The Associated Press the football oversight committee created an interconnected and comprehensive package of reforms while acknowledging the new realities of recruiting.

"I think you need to think about it in that more broad context," Eichorst said in a phone interview Monday. "I know people want to pull pieces and talk about the pieces, but really I think to understand and explain the rationale appropriately, you've got to understand the whole process."

The proposal would change when and where summer camps and clinics can be held and limit socalled satellite camps. High school players would be

Silver-Lined Clouds of Venus and Neptune

The square of Venus and Neptune is an opportunity. On the surface this can be like a dark cloud passing over your dreams, obscuring your original idea and dampening your drive. But there's a silver lining that could reignite your drive, too. It's the obstacle that makes you realize how badly you really want it, or don't, as the case may be.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Just because you know you're not going to touch that bird flying overhead doesn't mean you shouldn't reach up for it. It's the spirit of the reaching that matters. Stretch in joy instead of in longing

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Right when you start to teeter on the edge of becoming terribly bored (which is actually a more dangerous state than it sounds) something mysterious and improbable will inspire a sense of wonder in you.

GEMINI (May

21-June 21). So, a few myths have been dispelled, though you may not have wanted them to be. Now you're wondering what, if anything, you should believe in. A good place to start is with believing in belief itself.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You give your loved ones your tenderness, but you don't let them get away with lazy excuses or crummy attitudes, either. You'll uphold your self-given responsibility to keep it real in the relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). In some ways you have consented to play a role just as a hypnotized person consents to being hypnotized. The part of you that agreed to this may be having doubts. Wake up and change the dynamic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). When in doubt about what to buy, get back to simplicity and economy. It's very possible

Tomorrow's Horoscope that the item that tries to do too many things cannot do the one thing you most need it to do extremely well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). The same information will be offered to you in a hard copy or digital format. Today you're likely to give the hard copy a better quality of attention, because your physical interaction with it will touch you on a visceral level.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You will be asked to join in an activity that you may have been more interested in once upon a time, but that moment has passed. It now occurs to you, rather secretly and happily, that you've outgrown it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There are things you already know that conceptual thinking can't grasp. So maybe it's better not to mentally grapple as you surge with the connective energy that carries you through and that (SET ITAL) is (END ITAL) you at the same time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). There may be an issue of supply and demand. This in no way means that either party is flawed. One simply wants more than the other currentlv wants to give. The realization of this is the start of the solution.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). After all this time, you're actually still getting to know someone. If you assume to already know, you're sunk for learning. Go on and ask the questions you think you already have the answers to.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You prefer to have a great deal of control over the way you express your emotions, so you don't always show how you are feeling. Just be sure you're not pushing the feeling down. Acknowledge the emotion, if only to yourself.

TODAY'S BIRTH-DAY (Oct. 25). Know your priorities and get organized, because you're going to need to be to handle the gifts and opportunities coming your way. What was delayed will finally come to fruition in November and will prove sweeter for the wait. A victory in December brings new fans into your life in 2017. Capricorn and Aquarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 7, 21, 13, 5 and 45.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "If you had to say that certain signs are ruled by the left brain and others by the right, how would it play out for you?"

New science suggests that for maximum results and high-level functioning, even the most logical math problem or the most creative poem utilizes both sides of the brain. Still, the left brain rules all things verbal and logical, while the right brain takes over for creative and holistic purposes, and many tend to favor one side over the other. If forced to determine by sign, I would do it thusly, based on the vin and yang determinant for each sign.

Whoever pays fully is offering a gift to the other person; going Dutch makes it about "me" and "my part," and I can only interpret this as a selfish uncommitment. Keep Politics out of It

Dear Annie: I live in a town where the majority of people share one political viewpoint. I am in the minority on the other side. I have lived here for 50 years, have built my life here and love it here most of the time. Usually, I am able to avoid the topic of politics, as I know that it will only lead to arguments or conflict among my friends and family.

I'm also part of a close knitting circle that meets about every week. Most of us have known one another since our kids were young, and we have a lot in common gry, and frankly, I don't feel like going anymore. I've tried politely changing the topic of conversation or laughing off just how crazy things have become, but the topic always seems to rear its ugly otherwise. Though I usually find the knitting relaxing and the company kind, lately it seems as though every week features a political discussion. Feeling alone in my views, I can become stressed out and an-

Opening lead two of hearts. It is said that in the long run, good bidding is more important than good card play. This is probably true enough, but even good contracts sometimes run into bad luck, and when the play is over, it might be wise to re-examine the bidding to see whether a still-better contract could have been reached

Consider this deal from a team-of-four match. At the first table, the bidding went as shown, and West led a heart against six diamonds. East took the ace, and West later scored a trump trick, so the slam went down

This was an unfortunate outcome, since South would have made the slam without a heart lead, and even with it he was a favorite not to lose a trump trick. Oddly enough, the bidding went exactly the same way at the second table, except that over five hearts South bid six notrump instead of six diamonds.

South thought he could probably make either contract. But he also felt there were more hands where he could make six notrump and not six diamonds than there were where he could make six diamonds and not six notrump

South's reasoning was greatly influenced by East's lead-directing double of five hearts. South expected to make 12 tricks in notrump with a heart lead, even if it turned out that he could not make six diamond tricks

In this he was dead right. West led a heart, and South took five spades, one heart, two diamonds and four clubs for a total of 12 tricks and a score of 1,440 points.

head. Annie, how do I deal with politics ruining something I love? -- Tangled

Dear Tangled: If only we all shared politicians' skill at deftly changing the subject!

You have three options when the conversation starts roaming into dangerously partisan territory: 1) Tell your fellow knitters that you're not comfortable discussing politics in polite company. 2) Change the subject as forcefully as you can without

I am not unaware of another person's ability to pay, but I want to give of myself anyway. If I'm not permitted to do this, then how can I truly enter into a relationship with someone, which demands self-giving?

As for going Dutch: When it comes down to it, I don't mind if the woman pays on the occasional date, but I strictly do not believe in going Dutch if you are dating someone.

allowed to take official recruiting visits in the summer before their senior years, conceivably creating opportunities for visits to be paired with attending a camp. The proposed changes, which could go into effect next year, would also allow a 10th assistant football coach and set a hard cap of 25 signees per year.

The piece of the proposal that has drawn the most debate is the creation of two early signing periods in June and December. The June period would allow prospects to sign binding national letters of intent before their senior years of high school. The Collegiate Commissioners Association, which administers the NLI, must approve and implement the new signing periods.

"I hear the reasoning is because there's so many de-commitments," Ohio State coach Urban Meyer said in September about early signing periods before the Division I Council passed the oversight committee's proposal in early October. "So because 17-year-olds are de-commiting, let's give them a legal document so they can't decommit. That's not very smart. Young people have a right to choose where they want to go to school. Period. Let them decommit 100 times."

said he was against early signing because it could put players who take big steps forward in their development as seniors at a disadvantage after early signees scoop up scholarships.

But there is no consensus among coaches. Michigan's Jim Harbaugh is in favor of an early signing period. Clemson's Dabo Swinney liked the idea, but prefers the period be in August. Arizona coach Rich Rodriguez has endorsed eliminating signing periods altogether, instead allowing schools and prospects to sign whenever both agree.

Mississippi coach Hug Freeze said the proposals make the recruiting process seem rushed.

Eichorst, who was chairman of the subcommittee that worked on the satellite camps issue, said the NCAA's research indicates the process already is moving faster than ever.

A recent survey showed 30 percent of more than 1,400 football players who signed a national letter of intent gave verbal commitments during their junior years or during the summer before their senior years.

"We wanted to get more transparency there," Eichorst said. "In order to do that you had to reorder things a little bit because what we know is there are a number of kids who are being identified, evaluated, offered and commit before they start their senior year. And they're doing that without the benefit of official visits. And they're doing that without the benefit of permissible off-campus contact."

De-commitments and flipflopping by highly touted recruits gets a lot of attention, but it is still relatively uncommon. The survey showed 82 percent of football signees verbally committed prior to signing. Of those, 90 percent signed where they committed.

The NCAA also wants to better regulate so-called third parties, such as seven-on-seven coaches who are often not affiliated with high schools, in the recruiting process and keep the emphasis on high school coaches.

The reforms are also supposed to alleviate what can seem like nonstop recruiting for coaches.

"What we wanted to see was greater balance with our coaches and our current students,' Eichorst said. "And what we constantly hear from our coaches and others is often times I spend more time recruiting my next class than coaching my current."

Of 55 NCAA sports, football is one of four that does not have an early signing period.

According to the NCAA, 25,316 Division I student-athletes signed a national letter of intent in 2015-16. Of those, 18,103 had the opportunity to sign early and about 66 percent did.

"Why are we treating football players different from all the other students that come to us?' Eichorst said. "There's no good answer for that."

Blue Bunny Ice Cream delivered after James said last week that the night could be made better by ice cream trucks in the streets — a sweet treat on a sweet night.

For so long, championships remained just out of reach as the Cavs, Indians and Browns took turns breaking Cleveland's heart in the postseason.

But with their unexpected comeback to unseat the champion Warriors, the Cavs put Cleveland on top — and the city is enjoying the view.

Nearly one million people showed up for the Cavs' parade, pouring off the sidewalks on to the streets to show their affection for James and his teammates, who will always have the distinction of being drought busters. But the Cavs' victory did more, releasing a sense of civic pride that was on display while Cleveland hosted the Republic National Convention and right through the summer as the Indians began their run toward an AL pennant.

The potential conflict between the ceremony and Game 1 of the Series first appeared in August when Major League Baseball released its postseason schedule. Back then, the possibility was met with the usual skepticism from locals, who muttered it was only a matter of time before the Indians buckled. Well, not only did they not collapse, they ran away with the AL Central and have gone 7-1 in the postseason.

Now, it feels like the celebration was meant to be.

Until last week, there was a conundrum for Cleveland fans torn over being able to enjoy both events because they were starting simultaneously. But the NBA pushed the Cavs' ceremony up 30 minutes, allowing fans extra time to recover from one big moment and get ready for the next.

For many Clevelanders, that will require putting away their tissues before grabbing their Indians rally towel.

The images of the Cavs closing out Game 7 remain vivid to Cavs coach Tyronn Lue, who broke down in the mayhem after the horn sounded at Oracle Arena. Four months later, he's still touched by the video highlights of Kyrie Irving's 3-pointer, James' chase-down block on Andre Iguodala and Kevin Love pestering Warriors star Stephen Curry into a miss.

"I'm probably going to cry again," Lue said. "It's going to be a great night for us."

And for all of Cleveland.

Kubiak, who suffered a mini-stroke while coaching the Texans in 2013, missed Denver's last game after suffering a complex migraine, which can mimic a stroke.

Like Osweiler, this was his first game against his former team, and cornerback balls when players play good, I can tell you that," Kubiak said.

Osweiler, who skipped out on the Broncos' White House trip and ring ceremony, embraced Siemian, Kubiak and several other Broncos after the game.

"It was really great to see some familiar faces and give those guvs a hug," he said. STREAK BREAKER:

fense is a real dawdler , having allowed scores on five of six opening drives coming into the game. That didn't stop them from deferring when they won the toss. The Texans went three and out on their first two possessions. "It was a big emphasis for us," Miller said.

Denver's dazzling de-

OH NO, OKUNG: Broncos left tackle Russell Okung cleared concussion protocol to make the start. But he was rusty a week after his pair of penalties resulted in a nullified touchdown and a safety in a 21-13 loss at San Diego. This time, he was whistled for a pair of holds that negated a nifty first-down run by Booker and a 28-yard grab by Thomas.

INJURIES : Texans right tackle Derek Newton was carted off the field with what looked like serious injuries to both knees in the first half.
