Valiant sacrifice by military heroes, and honoring those who paid that sacrifice, has been part of the American way of life since our country's beginning. Every year, the last Monday in May – Memorial Day – is set aside to pay special tribute to those who have paid the ultimate sacrifice. This past Monday, a large crowd gathered at Trinity Memorial Park to do just that.

"Today is our 34th annual Memorial Day celebration here at Trinity Memorial Park," said Trinity's president, Kasi Welch Baker. "It's a service that we have for the community and are so grateful to be able to provide for many years. We have many veterans' organizations that come out every year to represent. Also the Boy Scouts, who placed our flags to help us honor each and every veteran buried at the cemetery."

Welch said she was quite pleased with this year's ceremony.

"Today was wonderful," she said. "We had a beautiful turnout, the weather was wonderful, and we were just grateful to be able to be here and honor our veterans and pay tribute to those who have lost their lives serving us."

Baker, who served as master of ceremonies for the event, started things off by welcoming guests to the ceremony before Pastor Ken McMeans of College Baptist Church gave the invocation. The Honor Guard of the Howard County Volunteer Fire Department posted the colors.

"It's truly an honor to be here for our fallen vets. They gave their all, and the least we can do is come honor them," said HCVFD Chief Tommy Sullivan. "My honor guard...I have military people on my honor guard. My brother was a Devil Dog in Vietnam. He was my hero, so being here today for him...It's a little bit of extra pride to come do this and be part of the community while we're doing this."

Sullivan said the honor guard consisted of himself, Honor Guard Commander and

Manchester police seek clues in concert bomber's suitcase

By GREGORY KATZ
 Associated Press.

LONDON (AP) — Police in Manchester, England issued a picture of the arena suicide bomber holding a blue suitcase and asked anyone who might have seen him with it before the attack to call a confidential hotline.

Counter-terrorism squads are trying to re-create Salman Abedi's movements in the days before he detonated a bomb at an Ariana Grande concert in Manchester, killing 22 people. Police believe Abedi had the wheeled suitcase with him at two locations in Manchester.

The suitcase was not used in the attack, which was carried out when Abedi detonated an improvised bomb minutes after the concert ended, Greater Manchester Police Detective Chief Superintendent Russ Jackson said.

Jackson tried to reassure nervous residents of Manchester that the bag does not pose a risk to public safety. But if any members of the public find it, they should not approach it, but call police immediately, he said.

"We have no reason to believe the case and its contents contain anything dangerous, but would ask people to be cautious," Jackson said.

BOMBER

He said Abedi may have had the blue suitcase with him when he visited the Wilmslow Road area and the Manchester city center in the days before the blast.

"Did you see Abedi with this suitcase between the 18 and 22 May 2017? Where did you see him with it during that time?" Jackson said.

The bombing investigation expanded early Monday when police arrested a 23-year-old man on the south coast of England, hundreds of miles south of Manchester.

Greater Manchester Police said the man was arrested in Shoreham-by-Sea on suspicion of terrorism offenses and an address there was being searched.

The arrest means that 14 men are now in custody in Britain for suspected roles in Britain's worst attack in a decade.

The suspects have not been identified or charged. All are being held on suspicion of violating the Terrorism Act.

Police and security services have said very little about the network believed to be behind Abedi, a Manchester native whose parents had moved to Britain from Libya.

Abedi's elder brother Ismail is among the suspects being held in Britain, and a younger brother and Abedi's father have been detained in Libya.

Britain's intelligence services have launched an inquiry into how warnings about the 22-year-old Abedi's radical views were handled amid indications that vital warning signs were missed. Police are scouring 12,960 hours of closed circuit TV recordings in their search for clues, have collected more than 630 pieces of evidence and have searched 21 addresses.

Authorities say Abedi returned to Britain from Libya on May 18, and likely completed assembling his bomb at a rented apartment in central Manchester.

Britain's official terror threat level was set at "critical" in the days after the attack but was downgraded Saturday to "severe."

The country remains on high alert, however, as officials caution that some suspects who helped Abedi may still be at large.

New Cowboys player suspected of DWI after own welcome party

DALLAS (AP) — Newly acquired Cowboys cornerback Nolan Carroll has been arrested on suspicion of a driving while intoxicated after leaving a promotional event welcoming him to Dallas.

Dallas police say the 30-year-old Carroll was arrested early Monday after being stopped for a traffic violation. He was booked into the Dallas County jail and posted bail later in the day.

The Dallas Morning News reports Carroll was arrested after leaving a club that hosted the promotion in his honor.

Carroll joined the Cowboys in March as a free agent from NFC East rival Philadelphia on a three-year, $10 million.

The team issued a statement saying it's aware of his arrest and is "gathering information at this time."

Carroll is an eight-year NFL veteran who began his career in Miami.

Texas Legislature ends session, may be back soon

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State lawmakers have adjourned their 140 day legislative session — but they could be headed back to work soon.

Monday concluded a session that began in January. Lawmakers are barred from passing most legislation the final day so it's mostly reserved for group photos and hugs goodbye. Protesters briefly interrupted the House session to decry Texas' new anti-sanctuary cities law.

Republican Speaker Joe Straus adjourned the House shortly after 1 p.m. Republican Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick adjourned the Senate about an hour later.

Lawmakers may not be gone long. The next regular session isn't until 2019, but Gov. Greg Abbott hasn't said yet if call lawmakers back this summer to address some agency oversight bills. Some Republicans want to keep working to address a so-called "bathroom bill" and property taxes.

Fleeing Texas suspect causes nearly $1M in damage at plant

BORGER, Texas (AP) — Authorities in West Texas say a man fleeing from sheriff's deputies caused nearly $1 million in damage at a chemical plant when he crashed a pickup through several gates and ran inside.

Hutchinson County Sheriff Kirk Coker told the Amarillo Globe-News that 22-year-old Angel Vasquez slammed into the gates Sunday at a Chevron Phillips plant in Borger, northeast of Amarillo.

The sheriff says a deputy earlier had attempted to pull over the stolen pickup Vasquez was driving but Vasquez fled and later drove through the gates.

Coker says he tried to hide inside the plant and eventually was found in possession of up to $15,000 worth of Chevron Phillips radios.

He was being held Monday at the Hutchinson County jail on theft and other charges.

It's not clear if he has an attorney.

Are 140 days enough? Abbott delays special session decision

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Greg Abbott says he won't make a decision until later this week on whether to call state lawmakers back to work as their 140-day legislative session ends Monday.

Abbott says he's pleased that the Republican-controlled Legislature approved his priority legislation, including an anti-"sanctuary cities" measure compelling local police to enforce federal law.

He didn't say whether he'll drag lawmakers back to work to tackle another issue he's endorsed, a North Carolina-style "bathroom bill" targeting transgender people.

Only the governor can call "special" legislative sessions lasting 30 days apiece.

Abbott has long said he's wary of calling special sessions. But battles between the Republican heads of the Texas House and Senate meant legislation involving oversight of several state agencies never passed — and that could make a special session inevitable.

Protest sparks Texas lawmaker threats of gun violence

Demonstrators march in the Texas Capitol on Monday, May 29, 2017, protesting the state's newly passed anti-sanctuary cities bill in Austin, Texas. Opponents call Texas' anti-sanctuary cities law a "show your papers" law since it empowers police to inquire about peoples' immigration status during routine interactions such as traffic stops.

By MEREDITH HOFFMAN and WILL WEISSERT

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Hundreds of protesters opposing Texas' tough new anti-"sanctuary cities" law launched a raucous demonstration from the public gallery in the Texas House on Monday, briefly halting work and prompting lawmakers on the floor below to scuffle — and even threaten gun violence — as tense divides over hardline immigration policies boiled over.

Activists wearing red T-shirts reading "Lucha," or "Fight," quietly filled hundreds of gallery seats as proceedings began. After about 40 minutes, they began to cheer, drowning out the lawmakers below. Protesters also blew whistles and chanted: "Here to stay!" and "Hey, hey, ho, ho, SB4 has got to go," referring to the bill that Gov. Greg Abbott signed into law this month.

Some unfurled banners reading: "See you in court!" and "See you at the polls!"

State House leadership stopped the session and asked state troopers to clear the gallery. The demonstration continued for about 20 minutes as officers led people out of the chamber peacefully in small groups. There were no reports of arrests.

Texas' new law is reminiscent of a 2010 Arizona "show your papers" measure that allowed police to inquire about a person's immigration status during routine interactions such as traffic stops. It was eventually struck down in court.

A legislative session that began in January concluded Monday, and the day was supposed to be reserved for goofy group photos and sappy goodbyes. Lawmakers are constitutionally barred from approving most legislation on the last day.

But even after the protest ended, tensions remained high. Rep. Ramon Romero, a Democrat from Fort Worth, said he was standing with fellow Democratic Rep. Cesar Blanco of El Paso when Republican colleague Matt Rinaldi came over and said: "This is BS. That's why I called ICE."

Rinaldi, of Irving in suburban Dallas, and Blanco then began shouting at each other.

A scuffle nearly ensued before other lawmakers separated the two.

Later, a group of Democratic lawmakers held a press conference to accuse Rinaldi of threatening to "put a bullet in the head" of someone on the House floor during a second near scuffle. They said the comment was made in the direction of Democratic Rep. Poncho Nevarez, from the border town of Eagle Pass.

In a subsequent Facebook statement, Rinaldi admitted saying he'd called federal authorities and threatened to shoot Nevarez — but said his life was in danger, not the other way around.

"Nevarez threatened my life on the House floor after I called ICE on several illegal immigrants who held signs in the gallery which said 'I am illegal and here to stay,'" Rinaldi wrote. He said Democrats were encouraging protesters to ignore police instructions and, "When I told the Democrats I called ICE, Representative Ramon Romero physically assaulted me, and other Democrats were held back by colleagues."

Rinaldi said Nevarez later "told me that he would 'get me on the way to my car.'" Rinaldi said he responded by making it clear "I would shoot him in self-defense," adding that he is currently under Texas Department of Public Safety protection.

Texas' new law requires police chiefs and sheriffs — under the threat of jail and removal from office — to comply with federal requests to hold criminal suspects for possible deportation.

Police also can ask the immigration status of anyone they stop. The bill was viewed as a crackdown on Austin and other "sanctuary cities," a term that has no legal meaning but describes parts of the country where police are not tasked with helping enforce federal immigration law.

Monday's protest was organized by activists who canvassed over Memorial Day weekend in Austin. They informed anxious immigrants about the rights they

Things to know as Texas Legislature adjourns amid rancor

By PAUL J. WEBER

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A raucous end to a divisive Texas legislative session erupted Monday when a large protest over a "sanctuary cities" crackdown provoked a heated scuffle between lawmakers on the House floor, including a Republican lawmaker saying he told a Democratic colleague he would "shoot him in self-defense."

The animus was a fitting finish to a combative 140-day session splintered by tensions over immigration, transgender rights and an escalating power grab within the Texas GOP between uncompromising social conservatives and Republican moderates.

They probably won't get the summer to cool off.

Republican Gov. Greg Abbott signaled Monday he might quickly order lawmakers back to Austin for unfinished business — which could include reviving a so-called "bathroom bill" targeting transgender people — instead of letting the Legislature adjourn until 2019 as scheduled. Abbott said he will announce a decision later this week.

Here's what else to know as the Texas Legislature calls it quits for now:

'BATHROOM BILL' DEAD FOR NOW

Social conservatives who drive Texas politics fell short of placing North Carolina-style bathroom restrictions on transgender people. It was torpedoed by House Republicans, who heeded direct appeals from Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg, Apple CEO Tim Cook and others from companies that panned the proposed law as discriminatory and bad for business.

Abbott went against other GOP governors nationwide in calling for a "bathroom bill." But it's unclear whether he will put it on lawmakers' to-do list if he hauls them back for a special session.

This is Abbott's last chance to make a mark before facing re-election in 2018. On Monday, Abbott said he felt no pressure to revive a "bathroom bill" from Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick, who championed the issue and has denied speculation that he might go after Abbott's job next year.

RACIAL TENSION

In this April 26, 2017, file photo, students gather in the Rotunda at the Texas Capitol to oppose SB4, an anti-"sanctuary cities" bill that already cleared the Texas Senate and seeks to jail sheriffs and other officials who refuse to help enforce federal immigration law, as the Texas House prepares to debate the bill in Austin, Texas. Immigrant activists who lived under a now-overturned anti-"sanctuary cities" law in Arizona that empowered police to inquire about peoples' immigration status during routine interactions like traffic stops are visiting Texas to offer tips on how to cope with similar restrictions the state's Republican-controlled Legislature recently approved.

Republican state Rep. Matt Rinaldi acknowledged on Facebook that he called federal immigration agents on some demonstrators in the Capitol protesting a "sanctuary cities" ban, which lets police inquire about immigration status during routine stops.

Rinaldi alleged he was "physically assaulted" by Democrat Ramon Romero over making the phone call and said he told Democratic state Rep. Pancho Nevarez that he would defend himself with a gun after Nevarez allegedly threatened him.

Democrats say the so-called sanctuary ban and commitment to a voter ID law was part of a racial undercurrent that marred the session. Republicans said they never tried to intentionally discriminate, despite rulings by judges over Texas voting rights laws, and defended the "sanctuary city" crackdown as necessary to keep communities safe.

LEAN BUDGET FOLLOWS OIL SLUMP

A new $217 billion budget better funds Texas' beleaguered child welfare system but puts little new money into public schools and doesn't fully restore Medicaid therapy cuts for disabled children. Republicans say a prolonged energy slump demanded touch choices and they refused to raid $11 billion that is in Texas' emergency coffer.

WEAKENED 'SANDRA BLAND ACT'

A "Sandra Bland Act" that was softened to remove police accountability measures disappointed the family of the black Chicago-area woman who died in a Texas jail in 2015 following a traffic stop in which she had a confrontation with a white state trooper. Texas police officers will get $25 million worth of new bulletproof vests.

NO SCHOOL OVERHAUL

The Texas Legislature remained unfriendly to supporters of vouchers, which give public money to private schools, despite having a prominent new cheerleader in U.S. Education Secretary Betsy DeVos. Lawmakers also left without tinkering with a widely derided school finance system that the Texas Supreme Court lukewarmly upheld last year as constitutional but flawed.

RELIGIOUS OBJECTIONS

Two years after the U.S. Supreme Court legalized gay marriage, Texas Republicans responded by moving to let county clerks refuse to sign marriage licenses on religious grounds, but only if someone else in their office can fill in. A federal judge blocked a similar law in Mississippi last year.

PROTEST

retain despite the law and urged grassroots resistance against it.

Abril Gallardo rode 15 hours in a van to Austin to urge fellow Hispanics to fight back.

"Fear motivated me to get involved," said Gallardo, a 26-year-old Mexican native who entered the U.S. illegally at age 12.

Texas cities and immigrant rights' groups have challenged the legality of the law, hopeful for a legal victory like the one in Arizona, but that could take months to have any effect.

But even as some vowed to fight, others have begun fleeing the state. Their ranks are still too small to quantify, but a larger exodus — similar to what occurred in Arizona — could have a profound effect on the Texas economy. The state has more than 1 million immigrants illegally in the country, according to the Migration Policy Institute.

Some are abandoning Texas for more liberal states, where they feel safer — even if it means relinquishing lives they've spent years building.

Jose, a 43-year-old Mexican living in the U.S. illegally since 2001, and his wife Holly left Austin for Seattle in January in anticipation of Texas' immigration crackdown. That meant parting with Jose's grown son, their community of friends and their beloved home of eight years.

"I felt like we ripped our roots up and threw ourselves across the country," said Holly, a 40-year-old Kentucky native who wanted to protect her husband.

Holly said as soon as Donald Trump was elected president, she and her husband began preparing to move. They expected Texas would "follow Trump's agenda trying to force local law enforcement to do immigration's job." And when they heard Texas had approved a crackdown on "sanctuary cities" she said they "finalized the decision."

Federal audit finds more lapses in Texas foster care system

By PAUL J. WEBER

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A federal audit released Tuesday heaped more criticism onto Texas' troubled child welfare system and warned of foster kids potentially put in jeopardy over missed deadlines during abuse and neglect investigations.

The report was published a day after the Texas Legislature ended a session in which lawmakers approved an extra $500 million for a beleaguered system that a federal judge called unconstitutional and has worsened despite major shake-ups.

The findings by the inspector general of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services are far from the scathing newspaper investigations or a ruling by U.S. District Judge Janis Graham Jack in December 2015 that ordered an independent overhaul of Texas' foster care agency.

But the 18-page report still points to bureaucratic lapses that could put children in danger.

Of 100 Texas child welfare cases reviewed by federal auditors, they said 46 did not comply with federal state requirements, including investigators not discussing findings with supervisors in a timely manner.

Those failures "undermines the State agency's internal controls for providing oversight of the investigation and could place foster care children at risk," the report read.

Texas Department of Family and Protective Services Commission Charles Whitman called the title of the audit — which says that Texas didn't always ensure that allegations of abuse and neglect were investigated in accordance with state and federal statutes — "inflammatory" and sensationalized, while defending the thoroughness of his agency's investigations.

"There is no suggestion that there were any actual problems in the investigations caused by delay in obtaining supervisory approval," Whitman wrote.

Republican Gov. Greg Abbott had declared additional child welfare spending and reforms a priority for the Texas Legislature.

State data last year showed the state was failing to check on thousands of children who are at the highest risk of abuse or neglect.

More recently, the number of Texas foster children staying in agency offices or alternate sites due to lack of placement more than doubled from February to March, according to state figures.

Astros rally for 11 runs in 8th inning, overwhelm Twins 16-8

By PATRICK DONNELLY

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Once Carlos Beltran and the Houston Astros began battering away, there was no relief for Minnesota's beleaguered bullpen.

Beltran homered and singled during an 11-run burst in the eighth inning and Houston overwhelmed the Twins 16-8 Monday in a matchup of AL division leaders.

The Astros won their fifth in a row, improving the best record in the majors.

"We have shown that, no matter how far behind in the game we fall, we're going to try to preach good at-bats and I think that's what we did," Beltran said. "We were able to put good at-bats out there and got good results."

The Astros combined eight hits, two walks, a hit batter and a balk in the eighth to rally from an 8-2 deficit. The Twins tried three pitchers in the inning, a day after they used eight relievers in a 15-inning loss to Tampa Bay.

"We were affected by yesterday's game in what we could do today. The guys we had were a little bit taxed," Twins manager Paul Molitor said.

Beltran finished with four hits and Carlos Correa had three, including a home run. Alex Bregman also homered for Houston, which had a season-high 18 hits, 13 of them in the last two innings.

Jordan Jankowski (1-0) got his first major league win with 2 1/3 innings in relief of starter Brad Peacock. He allowed four earned runs and gave up home runs to Miguel Sano and Robbie Grossman but he benefited from the Houston hit parade.

Craig Breslow (1-1) took the loss.

Minnesota's bullpen worked 17 1/3 innings in a three-game weekend series against Tampa Bay, and they needed a long start from AL ERA leader Ervin Santana against Houston. Santana delivered, working seven strong innings before leaving with a six-run lead.

But Ryan Pressly faced six hitters and got just one out, with Marwin Gonzalez's two-run single pulling the Astros to within 8-6. Breslow was up next and eventually Matt Belisle took over and gave up Beltran's three-run homer.

Pressley, Breslow and Belisle each made their third appearance in four days.

ARLINGTON — Another long game for Tampa Bay, and another win for the resilient Rays.

Tim Beckham hit a go-ahead three-run homer in the seventh when the Rays scored five runs in a span of three pitches for a 10-8 win at Texas that took nearly four hours Monday, a night after needing 15 innings and nearly 6 1/2 hours to win in Minnesota.

"Shows how much heart we have as a team and we're not going to go down easy," Beckham said. "We're going to make some noise and keep winning."

Pinch-hitter Colby Rasmus hit a two-run double on the first pitch thrown by reliever Tony Barnette (1-1), tying the game at 7-all.

"I let it snowball from there," Barnette said.

The Rangers then issued a no-pitch intentional walk to Kevin Kiermaier, who had already struck out three times, before Beckham hit a 1-0 cutter over the 14-foot wall in left-center field.

"That fired me up," Beckham said of the intentional walk. "I wanted to see a pitch I can drive and he gave it to me."

Ryan Hollingshead would be the first to say he's not a hero.

Yet the humble midfielder for FC Dallas keeps playing that role, whether it's for his brother's church, for kids at a Haitian orphanage or for an accident victim in a North Texas ice storm.

"Life takes you in different directions," said Hollingshead, who is working his way back from broken vertebrae he suffered while helping a motorist in January.

Hollingshead and his wife were on the way to pick up a friend who had become stranded in the storm when they witnessed another driver slam into a median.

Hollingshead jumped out to help but another car lost control and hit him, throwing him about 35 feet into a guardrail and then onto the pavement.

He immediately sensed something was wrong.

Tampa Bay Rays starting pitcher Erasmo Ramirez (30) delivers a pitch against the Texas Rangers in the first inning of a baseball game in Arlington, Texas, Monday, May 29, 2017.

Rays' Ramirez 1st pitcher since '84 to start day after save

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Tampa Bay right-hander Erasmo Ramirez became the first pitcher since 1984 to start a major league game the day after recording a save, then didn't make it out of the third inning Monday night.

A day after pitching a perfect 15th inning on 12 pitches in the Rays' 8-6 win at Minnesota, Ramirez allowed four runs and six hits in 2 1/3 innings at Texas while throwing 31 of his 43 pitches for strikes.

Ramirez was the first pitcher since Cleveland's Steve Farr in June 1984 to have a save one day and the start the next day for his team, the Elias Sports Bureau said.

The last player to record a save and then start his team's next game was Dennis Martinez, a fellow Nicaraguan who was Ramirez's childhood hero. Martinez saved a game for Montreal on July 11, 1993, and started four days later in the Expos' next game after the All-Star break.

HOLIDAY MATHIS

Delayed Impact of Cosmic Wonders

This dramatic Leo moon features impactful wonders. Maybe that awe-struck feeling won't come right away. It may take years before it creeps up on you -- that moment of profound understanding that you've seen something truly magnificent. Regardless of how long the realization takes to find you, the inspiration will hit this evening.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You want to go on adventures, but you also realize that each adventure has its cost. There's a dollar amount and an energetic amount to be settled. Today's adventure will be worth the price of admission.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The depth of a loss is measured by how long it takes you to get over it. This is a highly personal equation. What one person shrugs off another carries around for years. You can expect everyone's healing pace to be different.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Sound of mind, sound of body -- what more could you ask for? Sure, you can think of a few other things you might like to request. But is that the right thing to do? Give, give, and give more. The sun is in your sector, and generosity is your nature.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). To flatter isn't always to put yourself in a lower position. After all, it takes one to know one. And a little more on the subject: Doing the opposite is also a form of imitation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The tone of a thing will be much more important than what the thing does or is. The representation is what will matter. This isn't right; it's just what's happening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). When you see something that's inconsistent with your belief system, by your definition it's absurd. Yet you might find yourself doing that very thing -- which is equally absurd. And there's really nothing wrong with either.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Progress is a hard thing to nail down, because who knows which nuisance is better than the last? You'll figure it out. Some praise will come to you on the matter, not that it will mean much, since you've an agenda beyond all that.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You do not strive to be generous in order to satisfy a social quota. You give what you feel like giving. That's honest. The special charisma that swirls around you today has a lot to do with that honesty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Neglect is an under-used concept. Use it now. Problems fade from neglect. Ignore them and they go away. Maybe they were never problems to begin with, merely situations, or even non-issues. Buh-bye.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). There's something a little weird afoot. You think, "I don't have time for this!" But then "this" is all you're doing. Well, that means "this" is important to your development as a person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Transitions are precarious parts of life, represented in big happenings and also in the day to day. Be tender to those in the middle stages, as they are particularly vulnerable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). The call of duty -- some dread it. But to you, this is an entry point. You like to go beyond the call of duty, in fact. Going beyond the call is your aim in many regards these days.

Opening lead — five of clubs.
Top-notch defense would be impossible to achieve without the use of certain helpful conventions, such as fourth-best or top-of-sequence leads, and encouraging or discouraging signals.

Perfect defense also requires careful partnership cooperation. By accurately signaling their holdings in various suits, it often becomes possible for both defenders to determine the makeup of declarer's hand and thus garner all the tricks to which they are entitled.

Take this case where West leads his fourth-best club against three notrump. East wins with the king and returns his next highest club, the eight, covered by South with the nine. If West makes the mistake of winning the nine with the ten, South makes the contract, losing only three clubs and a diamond.

But if West allows the nine to hold, South goes down one. When East regains the lead with the king of diamonds, he returns the four of clubs, and South loses four clubs and a diamond.

The winning defense is easy to find if East-West employ standard signals. The one that applies to this situation stipulates that after a defender has played his highest card in his partner's led suit, he returns the next highest card if he started with three cards in the suit, and his original fourth-best card if he started with four or more cards in the suit.

In the actual deal, East cannot have four clubs to the king since he would have returned his original fourth-best club, not the eight. West therefore reasons that East started with either the K-8 or K-8-x of clubs. In the former case, the contract is almost surely unbeatable, so West assumes the latter and ducks South's nine of clubs at trick two.

West also has to assume that East has another entry — hopefully the king of diamonds — in order to achieve the desired result.

Pattern of Abusive Relationships

Dear Annie: My 35-year-old daughter can't seem to meet a decent man to have a relationship with. She has never married but has had several long-term relationships. The men were very charming in the beginning but turned out to be physically and emotionally abusive.

It's hard for me to wrap my mind around why she stays in these relationships so long and why she puts up with the abuse. She wasn't abused and didn't see anyone being abused while she was growing up. She was loved and supported in everything she pursued.

She recently started a new relationship, and though I don't know whether this person is abusive, I do see that the relationship is starting out with her making all the concessions and changing her life to meet his needs. This is very much a pattern for her. She goes out of her way to help and do things for them and gets very little in return.

What can I do to help her see what she is doing? I just can't stand to see her go down the same road over and over. I don't think she has ever had a man who went out of his way to do anything for her. I realize she must have some sort of low self-esteem to get into these one-sided relationships. She's beautiful and smart, with a college degree and a great job. I want her to realize her worth and quit settling.

-- Frustrated Mom
Dear Mom: As difficult as it is to see your daughter going down the same road over and over, she has to be the one to take an exit. You can empower her to make that decision by building up her self-esteem and acting as a friend and confidante. Knowing that she has a loving refuge in friends and family will make the prospect of leaving an abuser less daunting -- but only slightly, and it's still not going to be easy. If she's expressed to you that she wants help, you might encourage her to go to a counselor. But if she's in denial, any help you try to give her will have the opposite effect.

I truly hope her current relationship doesn't become abusive. If it does, I encourage you to call The National Domestic Violence Hotline at 800-799-7233.

Dear Annie: To "Blah Birthday," the young newlywed who complained that her husband took her on her birthday to something he liked instead of her favorite: Get over it.

My husband has been dead for five years. We usually spent my birthdays at home together. I loved it! He was a romantic, and we spent time cuddling, maybe watching a movie on television, and it was beautiful because I was with the man I loved.

Did it occur to "Blah Birthday" to be grateful that her husband remembered her birthday? Did it occur to her that her husband did something he truly thought would be special? No, it only occurred to her to be a whining, selfish woman.

I would give anything to have my wonderful guy back. I would love to have our evening of cuddling. But that is all gone now.

Please get over your selfish self and thank the man who bothered to remember you at all on your birthday. One day, you just might wish you had, when it is no longer possible to tell him you appreciate him.

-- Loved My Guy
Dear Loved My Guy: I should certainly hope that a husband remembers his wife's birthday. However, I think most of us could use a reminder to be grateful, so I'm printing your letter. I'm sorry for your loss.

Steven Souza Jr. had four hits with four runs scored for Tampa Bay, while Evan Longoria's four RBIs included a two-run homer.

Jose De Leon (1-0) allowed three runs in 2-2-3 innings and still won his Rays debut. The right-hander was recalled from Triple-A Durham after Tampa Bay used eight pitchers Sunday, including Monday's starter as the closer

Alex Colome struck out the side in a perfect ninth for his 14th save in 16 chances. "Really impressive, two impressive wins back-to-back days," manager Kevin Cash said. "Asked a lot of the guys and can't express how much they came through."

Adrian Beltre singled in his first at-bat this season for Texas and Joey Gallo crushed his 16th homer. Shin-Soo Choo drove in three runs, all off De Leon, with a two-run single in the sixth and a solo homer in the eighth.

The Rangers were back home after a 3-6 road trip, which came after they had swept through their previous eight-game homestand. They led 4-1 in the second after Gallo pulled a pitch 430 feet down the right-field line.

Beltre had been out all season because of calf issues, but was activated from the disabled list to debut in his 20th major league season. His single in the first was his 2,943rd career hit, tying him with Frank Robinson for 34th all-time.

"Obviously adds excitement, energy and presence," manager Jeff Banister said of Beltre's return. "You saw it immediately just with all of our guys inside the dugout and on the field."

Tampa Bay RHP Erasmo Ramirez became the first pitcher since 1984 to start a major league game the day after recording a save. Ramirez had a perfect 15th inning on 12 pitches against the Twins. He allowed four runs and six hits in 2 1/3 innings while throwing 31 of his 43 pitches for strikes in Texas.

Longoria already had a pair of RBI grounders before his homer to straight-away center off Rangers starter Martin Perez tied the game at 5-all in the fifth. ... Texas is 2-7 since their 10-game winning streak that is still the longest in the majors this season. ... Tampa Bay has won five of six and is two games over .500 for the first time since April 10.

Gallo, the primary third baseman while Beltre was out, was at first base in place of Mike Napoli (back stiffness) and had a couple of nice defensive plays. He also had a double and scored on Robinson Chirinos' single in the fourth.

Rays: RHP Brad Boxberger (right flexor strain) threw 20 pitches during live BP at the Rays' spring training complex in Florida. 2B Brad Miller (abdominal strain) was among those who hit against him, and his catcher was Wilson Ramos (rehabbing from a torn ACL).

Rangers: RHP Tyson Ross (thoracic outlet syndrome) gave up six runs and walked five in 3 1-3 innings in his second rehab start with Triple-A Round Rock. Rangers manager Jeff Banister said Ross felt fine physically.

Rays: Matt Andriese is 4-0 with a 2.67 ERA in five May starts. The right-hander is 0-2 with a 6.28 ERA in three career appearances against Texas.

Rangers: RHP Nick Martinez is 1-3 in five May starts.

ASTROS

"We've still got to go out there and perform. It's embarrassing," Pressly said. "We've just got to go out there and continue to grind and put this one behind us."

The Astros have a double-digit lead in the AL West and their confidence seems to grow with every victory.

"I don't think we ever think we're down and out of a game," said Josh Reddick, whose two-run double put the Astros ahead for good. "Yeah, it was frustrating the way they swung the bats against us and they took a huge lead. But we know what we can do. We've seen it before."

NUMBERS GAME

Molitor said he was reluctant to send DH/first baseman Kennys Vargas back to the minor leagues after Sunday's game, but the team needed help in the bullpen and Vargas was one of the Twins' few position players who still had options available. With reliever Justin Haley going on the 10-day DL, the Twins were able to add two pitchers, right-hander Drew Rucinski and lefty Jason Wheeler, both from Triple-A Rochester.

However, Molitor was reluctant to use either of the fresh arms, even with an 8-2 lead in the eighth inning. He explained his decision after the game, saying, "When (you're facing) one of the best offensive teams in the game with a six-run lead, you're going to go with your experience and guys that you feel should get people out."

Rucinski did pitch the ninth inning and gave up three runs once the game was out of hand. After the game, the Twins sent him back to Rochester and recalled lefty Buddy Boshers.

STREAKING STARS

Correa is now 12 for 21 in his last five games and has had multiple hits in each of them. After a slow start, his batting average is a season-high .311. Meanwhile, Sano had gone 1 for 18 with 13 strikeouts before launching his homer in a seven-run fifth.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Astros: Manager A.J. Hinch left the bench during the game due to an illness.

Twins: OF Byron Buxton left the game in the sixth inning with a lacerated ring finger on his right hand. He is considered day-to-day.

UP NEXT

Astros: RHP Mike Fiers (1-2, 5.21 ERA) will face the Twins after temporarily losing his spot in the starting rotation. Fiers gave up 10 hits in 4 2/3 innings against the Tigers on May 25, but he'll fill Morton's spot for at least one turn through the rotation.

Twins: RHP Jose Berrios (3-0, 1.66) is coming off his worst start of the year, but with him that's a relative term. After two dominant outings, Berrios gave up three runs in 6 1/3 innings in a win at Baltimore on May 24.

FC DALLAS

to get up, but I couldn't," Hollingshead said. "But after about 30 seconds I was able to move my hands again and I was able to push myself up and hobble down the road to my wife who was still in the car, because I was afraid another car was going to come through and hit her."

Hollingshead first thought he had broken his arms, but X-rays came back negative. That led doctors to check his neck and spine, where they found the damage: He fractured three vertebrae in his cervical spine.

Doctors believed the vertebrae would heal without surgery, but that meant spending an extended period in bed and keeping movement to a minimum, all the while wearing a neck brace. The hardest part of his recovery was not being able to hold his infant son, Henry.

"It was about five weeks in a brace, three of them I was doing nothing," he said. "It was a slow process back."

That Hollingshead stopped to help was of no surprise. He'd long been known for his charitable acts. A standout at UCLA, Hollingshead was named the Pac-12 Player of the Year in 2012, when he had seven goals and eight assists as a senior.

A future in Major League Soccer looked bright, and Hollingshead was expected to be drafted in the early rounds. There was just one problem: He had promised that once he graduated, he'd help his brother Scott establish a church back home in Sacramento, California.

Hollingshead didn't take part in the pre-draft combine and thought that word had spread that he'd be taking some time away from the game. Then he took off for Haiti, where he and his wife, Taylor, worked in an orphanage.

With no phone or internet, Hollingshead had no idea that FC Dallas hadn't heard and drafted him with the No. 20 pick in the second round. Once back in the U.S., he was surprised at Dallas' response to his promise to his brother: The team said it would wait for him.

Hollingshead went to work launching the church and Dallas kept tabs, calling every once and a while to see how he was doing. Some 10 months later, Scott assured him that the church, Harvest Bible Chapel, was on solid ground.

"He was like: 'This is the time for you to go. The church is in such good hands now, so you should go do it,'" he said.

Hollingshead made his FC Dallas debut in 2014. Last season, he started in 22 of the 29 games he appeared in and scored two goals. Known for his versatility, he played fullback last season.

After the accident, he returned to training in late March and has appeared as a substitute in three games. He's also met the motorist he stopped to help, Abiodun Shuaib, who fractured a rib in the accident but was otherwise OK.

"He's a good man with a good heart," Abiodun said when Hollingshead returned to training. "You don't really see people like that, stopping on the highway. It's not something that is very common."

FC Dallas has gone 5-2-5 this season to sit in third place in the Western Conference. After going unbeaten in its first nine games, the team has been winless in its last three.

Hollingshead said he's still not 100 percent, although he feels good.

"I still need some fitness to get back, I still need to get stronger and rebuild some of muscle that I lost,"
