Drug-war-style violence comes to Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Burnt-out vehicles. Road blockades. A raging gun battle between armored marines and gang members that left eight dead.

Such scenes have been common in border cities like Reynosa and Nuevo Laredo, and figures released Friday show the death toll from Mexico's drug war has reached new heights this year. But residents of the capital were stunned this week to see that kind of mayhem in their own city.

Perhaps most shocking was the appearance of organized roadblocks put up by gang members or sympathizers to impede the movements of police. City officials said gang members hijacked about five buses or trucks, and video images showed teams of motorcyclists parking their vehicles to shut down an expressway and then setting fire to a bus after the passengers fled.

"The narco-blockades come to Mexico City," the newspaper El Universal wrote in a front-page headline Friday.

The nation's capital once looked on the drug war as a battle fought in outlying states. Not anymore.

Catherine Diane Fowler

Catherine Diane Fowler, passed away of pancreatic cancer on Monday, July 17, 2017, in Midland, Texas.

The family will receive friends on Tuesday, July 25, 2017, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Nalley-Pickle and Welch Funeral Home, 3800 N. Big Spring St. in Midland, Texas. A private family service will take place at the Columbarium at Trinity Memorial Park in Big Spring, Texas, at a later date.

Catherine was born Jan. 18, 1955, in San Lorenzo. Calif., to Virnette (Reid) Fowler and Peter Anthony Fowler. After the birth of twin siblings Cindy and David, the family moved to Big Spring, Texas. She attended schools in Big Spring and graduated from Big Spring High School in 1973. In 1978, she earned her B.A. in journalism with concentrations in advertising, public relations, and broadcasting from Texas State University (formerly SWTSU) in San Marcos. Over her 40-year career, Cathy worked in Lufkin, San Angelo, Big Spring and Midland. Starting as a radio news reporter, she also held positions with advertising agencies, in hospital public relations and broadcast commercial copywriting and production. In recent years, she worked at Susie's South 40 Confections Candy and spent many years in production and sales for West Texas Radio Group, including her favorite station, KMCM 97 Gold Classic Hits. She served on the board of Palmer Drug Abuse Program for many years. PDAP is free and helps young people and their families fight the disease of addiction on all fronts through education, prevention, intervention and recovery. Cathy was a Methodist.

She is survived by her sister, Cindy Wilson and brother-in-law Steve of Denton, Texas; her brother, David Fowler and sister-in-law DiAnn of Midland; her nephews, Brian Fowler (wife Julie), Michael Fowler (wife Kelly) and Robert Fowler (wife Jennifer), and Isaac Hernandez; and her nieces, Ashley Wilson (fiancé Tristram Dodds) and Lauren Isaacson (husband Evan). The next generation continues to grow, and at present includes greatnieces and -nephews, Morgan, Waylon, Addison, Elva, Jacob, and Austin.

She was preceded in death by her parents.

Cathy would be honored if you directed remembrances to PDAP, 1208 W. Wall St., Midland, Texas, 79701; or to the church or charity of your choice.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle and Welch Funeral Home and Crematory of Midland. Online condolences can be made at npwelch.com.

Don was born on Aug. 8, 1945 in New Orleans. He is survived by his older brother, Harry Richard and wife Sue of Las Vegas, Nev.; his little sister, Gail Sellers and husband Rusty of Baton Rouge; two nephews, Devereaux Sellers II and wife Madelie, and Ory Sellers and wife Tiffany; a niece Alicia-Gail Sellers and husband Matthew Rhoads; a great-niece, Abigail Sellers; and a great-nephew, Spyder Sellers.

Don was preceded in death by his grandparents, Josephine and W.H.J. Ory; and his parents, Alice and Jessie Richard. He graduated from New Orleans Saint Aloysius

High School in 1963, and from the University of Southern Louisiana in 1968 with a degree in engineering.

In 1974 he received his Juris Doctor from St. Mary's University in San Antonio.

He moved to Big Spring in 1977 and served as assistant district attorney for several years before going into the private practice of law here in Big Spring.

Don was an educator as well, having taught at Howard College for many years and serving as a guest lecturer for the Texas Criminal Lawyers Association in their Huntsville program.

Memorial service will be held to celebrate Don's well-spent life on Thursday, July 27, at 4 p.m. in the 118th District Court room. In keeping with Don's nature, it will not be a sad occasion, but one in which we "Laissez les bon temps rouler!"

Frank D. Newton Frank D. Newton was called Home by his Savior

on July 19, 2017, in San Angelo, Texas. Waiting to welcome him in a joyous reunion > his oldest son, Billy Frank. Frank was born Dec. 29, 1929, in a little farmhouse, to Willard and Gussie Newton, in Coryell County, Texas. Times were hard, and the country doctor assisting with delivery received chickens as payment. Frank was the baby of the family, with three older brothers and one sister to guide him through life on was his beloved wife, Carolyn, and the farm, as they worked hard to make ends meet during the Depression years.

Frank was taught the value of hard work very early in life. He was given plenty of responsibility, which included driving a mule team at the age of five. That work ethic stayed with Frank for the rest of his life. He was committed to his job, always, and made sure it was done right. During his elementary school years, Frank attended country schools in Purmela and Plainview, forming friendships that lasted a lifetime. He attended high school in Gatesville, proudly playing football and basketball, and running track for the Gatesville Hornets. Frank also served as president of the FFA his senior year. When Frank was a junior, a lovely blond sophomore with sparkling blue eyes captured his heart. Frank married his high school sweetheart, Carolyn Blankenship, in 1948, and they spent a lifetime together raising a family as Frank pursued his career.

In 1951, Frank was hired by Halliburton Oil Services as a mechanic. Leaving family, and the home they had always known, Frank and Carolyn moved to West Texas and embarked on the adventure of a lifetime. Their growing family was on the move over the years, throughout southeastern New Mexico and West Texas, including the booming oilfield towns of McCamey, Rankin, Goldsmith, and Odessa, Texas. In New Mexico, Frank worked in Lovington and Artesia. Lifelong friendships were formed with the close-knit extended Halliburton family. Frank excelled, working his way up the ranks, and ultimately became a District Superintendent before retirement in 1986, in Big Spring, Texas, after 36 years of service. After retirement, while living in Big Spring,

Frank worked for Napa Auto Parts, delivering tools throughout West Texas. Later, Frank worked for Shroyer Motor Company, delivering vehicles. These jobs were a perfect fit for Frank, because he loved driving down the highway on a job, knowing that he could be counted on for a job well done. For many years after retirement, Frank enjoyed spending time with his "Tractor Buddies," a great group of men that enjoyed traveling throughout Texas to attend antique tractor shows, fairs, and parades. You can bet that Frank knew the make and model of every tractor at the event. He took many photos to document these events, and loved every minute spent with these terrific men.

Frank loved life-busy and on the go. He was always ready to enjoy a cold beer, tell a good story, or zip down the highway on an adventure. His zeal for life made his family grin. He was hard to keep up with!

Family members preceding Frank in death are his wife, Carolyn; his parents, Willard Newton and Gussie Dooley Newton; brothers, Robert, Nelson, and Lawrence; his sister, Mary Koch; his son, Billy Frank; and his grandson, John Frank.

Surviving family members include daughters, Nancy Sallee and husband David of Las Cruces, N.M., and Laurie and husband Jim of San Angelo; son Chris of Big Spring; and daughter-in-law, Sherry Newton of Dallas.

Grandchildren include Kevin Roberts, Erika Pettit, Kent Sallee, Reid Franklin, and Conner Franklin; and five great-grandchildren.

Graveside services are planned for Monday, July 24, at 1:30 p.m. in Restland Cemetery in Gatesville, Vernon O'Neal Squires went to his heavenly home on July 19, 2017, surrounded by his loving family.

Services will be 2 p.m. Monday July 24, 2017, at McCoy Chapel of Memories in Sweetwater with Rev. Scott Burns and Rev. Keith Clower officiating. Interment will follow at Garden of Memories Cemetery under the direction of McCoy Funeral Home. Visitation will be from 6 until 8 p.m. on Sunday. Neal Squires was born on July 13, 1929, in Placid, Texas, to John William and Unabell Squires. He was the seventh of 14 children, having 5 brothers and 8 sisters. He attended school in Placid until going to work as a sharecropper and ranch foreman to help support his family. Upon moving to Sweetwater, Texas, Neal met Marjorie Taylor and they were married on Nov. 24, 1951. In 1952 Neal was drafted into the armed forces, but enlisted into the Marine Corp. Upon discharge, Neal returned to Sweetwater and worked there over the years for USG, Flintkote, Lone Star Cement, and J.C. and Stanley Morris. In 1982, Neal and Marjorie moved to Big Spring, where he eventually retired as a government trapper. In 2007, Neal and Marjorie returned to Sweetwater where he lived a long life of ranching, fishing, and enjoying many family visits, especially from his grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Neal was active in church life over many years, recently ordained as a deacon of Highland Baptist Church.

Neal is survived by his wife, Marjorie, of 65 years son, Lynn Squires and wife Melody of Sweetwater; daughter Donna Bennett and husband Jerry of Big Spring; daughter Sandra Burns and husband Scott of Indio, Calif.; son, Robert Squires and wife Lisa of Weatherford; 10 grandchildren, C.J. of the year increased 31 percent over the same period last year, in the worst bout of such violence in at least 20 years — even worse than the previous peak year of 2011. But unlike 2011, when the violence was largely concentrated in border states like Chihuahua and Tamaulipas — where Reynosa and Nuevo Laredo are located homicides are now on the rise throughout the entire country, making much of the country look like a hotspot. In Thursday's clash, swarms of motor-

He has spent a lifetime outdoors fishing and hunting. He has notebooks filled with his writings. Leon told me a story about hunting birds in south Texas.

"A friend and I were hunting in the chaparral down near Cotulla. It was rather warm and we were driving one of the roads in my Suburban and the dog trailer when 2 or 3 birds flew across the road from left to right. We stopped and started walking down towards them and 2 more came across. I killed one and my hunting partner killed the other one. So I went back to let a dog out and 2 of them got out.

"There was broomweed all over the place and quail use it like an interstate. They can run through it and you can't see them. We started into a patch of that stuff and the dogs went in, but came out in a hurry. We heard a rattlesnake. Now a rattlesnake rattles in 2 ways: one to let you know it's there and two to let you know it's mad. And when it's mad it sounds like a doorbell buzzer. And this dude was buzzing. I shot 5 times into were I thought gauge auto loader. I'd shoot, the snake would quit, snake would start, I'd shoot and I emptied my gun. That snake was still going. So I told the guy with me that I was going to put these dogs up before they get snake bit. I took them back to the trailer and started back to where he was and he velled, 'come here quick.' I trotted over to where he was and he said, 'look at that snake.' I said where. He said, 'up there.' That rattlesnake was six feet off the ground up in a mesquite tree. I told him I was going for the camera. I made about four steps back toward the Suburban and he shot the snake out of the tree. Now every time I see him I ask him if he remembers that million-dollar picture we didn't get.

"When we got back down to where the fellow was who runs the place I asked him what that snake was doing up in a tree. He said javelinas. The only protection a rattlesnake has from a javelina is to get off the ground. He said it's not common, but it does happen. That experience added another dimension to hunting in south Texas. Not only do you look right and left, you look up."

A stop at the wrong house

't is a story from decades ago that I've retold countless times. Its punchline--wadded up into a few words--sums up the conundrums that hit us daily tornadic with force.

Allow me, please, to set it up: At a country shack--one that a "poster house" poverty--a government guy knocks on the door.

A "mountain man" (or womresponds with a curt, "Whadda ya want?" greeting. (After all, the ramshackle residence far out in the woods is not easily accessed. No one passes it on the way to town.)

Don

Newbury

"I've come to take the census," the visitor says, pen and pad at the ready to "enter" data. (Obviously, this occurred long before there were iPhones and iPads for entering data.) The host (or hostess) was bumfuzzled. "Census" was a foreign word--one the mountaineer had never heard before. "What's airy census?" Somewhat frustrated, the recordkeeper responds, "Don't you realize that every 10 years, the government tries to find out how are living in this country?"

many men, women and children "That's well and good, I guess," the guy answers. But you've come to the wrong house, 'cause

I don't know."

John Q. Public, it seems, is expected to know far more about a myriad of issues, challenges and outright dangers.

The citizenry is frustrated.

And when the guy from the government--or wherever--pellets us with questions, there are worse answers than the one from the mouth of the mountaineer a hundred years ago: "You've come to the wrong house, 'cause we don't know."

We really don't. Mass media--both "real" and "fake"--provide us with more material than we can process.

Throw in social media--and a bunch of other stuff--and our eyes cross these days. We suffer from information overload, most of us spiraling downward in a vortex of bewilderment.

We shudder at the prospect of upcoming news segments, certain that almost all of them will begin with "breaking news."

At times, about the most we can hope for is comic relief. Recalled is a favorite story of the incomparable Jerry Clower. The late country comedian told about the guys hunting for raccoons late one night. A hound dog seems certain he's "treed" one, so one of the hunters scales the tree, where he expects to encounter a raccoon in the upper branches.

Soon, a scuffle near the tree top breaks out. The brave hunter isn't handling things so well, since his foe, it turns out, is a bobcat. "Shoot up here," he begs his friend, who yells back, "What if I hit vou?"

"Shoot anyway," the tree climber answers. "One of us has got to have some relief." Christians believe genuine relief, comfort and assurance in the midst of all we face is provided by Jesus Christ, who stands at the door and knocks.

A pastor who told of his Savior in sermons and songs was the late Rev. Ira Stanphill, who may be most remembered as a composer of many hymns. Many of them became favorites since his death a quarter-century ago.

"I Know Who Holds My Hand" is a comfort to many Christians these days. The second verse seems to be a particularly good fit: "Every step is getting brighter as the golden stairs I climb; Every burden's getting lighter; Every cloud is silver-lined. There the sun is always shining, There no tear will dim the eye; At the ending of the rainbow, Where the mountains touch the sky. Many things about tomorrow I don't seem to understand, But I know who holds tomorrow, And I know who holds my hand." I think this day of angels. God's Word says we were created a "little lower than the angels," a standard worthy of our stretching to reach.

The Bible includes 270 references to angels, who've been around since Creation.

And, they've never been more needed than in our world today.

Pickens, the famed 89-year-old oilfield wildcatter, financier and corporate raider, has taken a turn for the worse after a "Texas-sized fall" put him in the hospital last week.

China announces goal of AI leadership by 2030

na's government has announced a goal of becoming a global leader in artificial intelligence in just over a decade, putting political muscle behind growing investment by Chinese companies in developing self-driving cars and other advances.

Communist leaders see AI as key to making China an "economic power," said a Cabinet statement on Thursday. It calls for developing skills and research and educational resources to achieve "major breakthroughs" by 2025 and make China a world leader by 2030.

Artificial intelligence is one of the emerging fields along with renewable energy, robotics and electric cars where communist hope to take an early lead and help transform China from a nation of factory workers and farmers into a technology pioneer.

They have issued a series of development plans over the past decade, some of which have prompted complaints Beijing improperly subsidizes its technology developers and shields them from competition in violation of its free-trade commit-

Chinese Already, companies including Tencent Ltd., Baidu Inc. and Alibaba Group are spending heavily to develop artificial intel-finance, e-commerce, self-driving cars and other applications.

Manufacturers also are installing robots and other automation to cope with rising labor costs and improve efficiency.

Thursday's statement gives no details of financial commitments or legal changes. But previous initiatives to develop Chinese capabilities in solar power and other technologies have included research grants and regulations to encourage sales and exports.

"By 2030, our country will reach a world leading level in artificial intelligence theory, technology and application and become a principal world center for artificial intelligence innovation," the statement

That will help to make China "in the forefront of innovative countries and an economic power," it said.

The announcement follows a sweeping plan issued in 2015, dubbed "Made in China 2025," that calls for this counhigh-tech components and materials in 10 industries from information technology and aerospace to pharma-

That prompted complaints Beijing might block access to promising industries support its fledgling suppliers. The Chinese industry minister defended the plan in March, saying all competitors would be treated equally. He rejected complaints that foreign companies might be required to hand over technology in exchange for market access.

China has had mixed success with previous strategic plans to develop technology industries including renewable energy and electric cars.

Beijing announced plans in 2009 to become a leader in electric cars with annual sales of 5 million by 2020. With the help of generous subsidies, China passed the United States last year as the biggest market, but sales totaled just over 300,000.

Exxon fined $2M for Tillerson-era breach of Russia sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) - Exxon Mobil Corp. must pay a $2 million fine for showing "reckless disregard" for U.S. sanctions on Russia while Secretary of State Rex Tillerson was the oil giant's CEO, the Treasury Department said Thursday. Exxon sued the U.S. government to stop the fine.

Treasury said that Exxon violated sanctions when it signed contracts in May 2014 with Russian oil magnate Igor Sechin, chairman of government-owned energy giant Rosneft. The U.S. blacklisted Sechin, Tillerson's longtime business associate, as part of its response to Moscow's actions in Ukraine and annexation of Crimea.

The same month that Exxon signed the deals, Tillerson said the company generally opposes sanctions and finds them "ineffective."

maintained Exxon it had done nothing wrong. Hours after the fine was announced, the Texas-based company sued Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin and the government, saying the U.S. had clearly told companies that doing business with Rosneft was allowed — just not with Sechin himself.

As America's top diplomat, Tillerson has insisted the sanctions will stay in place until Russia reverses course in Ukraine and gives back Crimea. Still, the sanctions breach on his watch raises significant questions about his ability to credibly enforce the sanctions and to persuade European countries to keep doing so.

Yet the Treasury Department said that Exxon's "senior-most executives" knew Sechin was blacklisted when two of its subsidiaries signed deals with him. The Office of Foreign Assets Control, or OFAC, said Exxon caused "significant harm" to the sanctions program.

The dispute between Exxon and the government centers on whether the sanctions differentiated between "professional" and "personal" interactions with Sechin, who had been blacklisted only weeks earlier.

Exxon, in its lawsuit, noted that the former Obama administration had said the sanctions strategy was to identify individuals like Sechin who were contributing to the Ukraine crisis and to "target their personal assets, but not companies that they may manage on behalf of the Russian state," according to a White House fact sheet from the time.

The company pointed out that Treasury had even said it would be permissible for an American CEO to attend a Rosneft board meeting with Sechin as long as it wasn't related to Sechin's "personal business." Rosneft itself was not subject to sanctions at the time.

"OFAC seeks to retroactively enforce a new interpretation of an executive order that is inconsistent with the explicit and unambiguous guidance from the White House and Treasury," Exxon said in the suit.

The Treasury Department disagreed, arguing that it never said there was an "exception or carve-out for the professional conduct of designated or blocked persons." The government noted that its website at the time explicitly warned companies not to enter any contracts signed by people on the blacklist.

The U.S. said that the presidents of two Exxon subsidiaries and Sechin had signed eight legal documents in May 2014. That same month, Neil Duffin, president of subsidiary Exxon Mobil Development, signed several deals to continue their work on the massive Sakhalin oil and natural gas project on Russia's eastern coast.

A photo posted on Rosneft's website shows Sechin and Duffin smiling broadly and shaking hands at a conference table with documents and a pen in front of them. A few days later, Tillerson was unambiguous about Exxon's opposition to the sanctions during his company's annual meet-

"We do not support generally. sanctions, because we don't find them to be effective unless they are very well implemented comprehensibly and that's a very hard thing to do," Tillerson said.

Tillerson had played a central role over the years in developing that multibillion dollar deal. Tillerson knew both Sechin and Russian President Vladimir Putin for more than a decade before he became secretary of state.

The Treasury Department called the violation an "egregious case" and noted that Exxon "is a sophisticated and experienced oil and gas company that has global operations" and should know better when it comes to U.S. sanctions. It leveled the statutory maximum civil penal of $2 million for the breaches. Exxon's suit asks the court to set aside the fine.

After the Ukraine-related sanctions were put in place under President Barack Obama, Tillerson saw Exxon's stake in a lucrative offshore drilling project with Rosneft come under threat. Tillerson visited the White House numerous times as CEO in the immediate aftermath of the sanctions being announced, but they remained in place.

Concerns about Tillerson's potential conflict of interest dominated his confirmation hearings in January, and the secretary has recused himself from matters dealing with his former company.

Brain scans may change care some people with memory loss

WASHINGTON (AP) – Does it really take an expensive brain scan to diagnose Alzheimer's? Not everybody needs one but new research suggests that for a surprising number of patients whose memory problems are hard to pin down, PET scans may lead to changes in treatment.

The findings, reported Wednesday, mark a first peek at a huge study under way to help determine if Medicare should start paying for specialized PET scans that find a hallmark of Alzheimer's — a sticky plaque called amyloid.

Alzheimer's is the most common form of dementia, and classic symptoms plus memory tests often are enough for a reliable diagnosis. But unusual symptoms could mark another form of dementia that, while there are no cures, could require different symptom care. And on the other end of the spectrum, it's hard to tell if mild memory loss might be an early Alzheimer's signal, a more treatable condition such as depression, or even age-related de-

"We're not accurate enough," said Dr. Gil Rabinovici of the University of California. San Francisco, who is leading the new re-

"Patients know there's something wrong. Often they can sense in their gut that it's not normal aging," he added. Without a clear-cut test, "doctors are very reluctant to make the diagnosis in many cases."

Until a few years ago, amyloid build-up could only be seen during autopsies. Older types of PET scans show what region of the brain appears most affected, of limited help.

Yet it's not clear how best to use the new amyloid-detecting scans, which can cost up to $6,000. They can rule out Alzheimer's if there's little amyloid. But cognitively healthy seniors can harbor amyloid, too, and Medicare won't pay for the new scans outside of a few research studies.

Hints that lifestyle changes might guard against dementia

WASHINGTON (AP) life, the brain changes - Seek a good education. Control blood pressure and diabetes. Get off the couch. There are some hints, but no proof yet, that these and other lifestyle changes just might help stave off de-

A provocative report in the British journal Lancet Thursday raised the prospect that a third of dementia cases around the world could be delayed or even prevented by avoiding key risks starting in childhood that can make the brain more vulnerable to memory loss in old age.

A recent U.S. report was much more cautious, saving there are encouraging clues that a few lifestyle changes can bolster brain health and that more research is critical.

Still, it's never too early to try, said Lancet lead author Gill Livingston, a psychiatry professor at University College London.

"Although dementia usually begin to develop years before," she not-

Early next year, a $20 million U.S. study will begin rigorously testing if some simple day-today activities truly help older adults stay sharp. "We are in a frustrating position sciencewise in terms of what are our options?" said cognitive neuroscientist Laura Baker of Wake Forest School of Medicine in North Carolina, who will lead the new study to find out.

In the meantime, Alspecialists zheimer's say there's little down side to following some common-sense recommendations.

Consider physical activity, crucial for heart health. "If in fact it should also improve the prospects for cognitive function and dementia, all the better," said Dr. Richard Hodes, director of the U.S. National Institute on Aging and an avid exerciser.

"Increased health of is diagnosed in later the body supports increased health of the brain," Baker added.

Here's the latest from this week's Alzheimer's Association International Conference on possible ways to guard your brain:

KEY RISKS

Lancet-appointed panel created a model of dementia risks throughout life that estimates about 35 percent of all dementia cases are attributable to nine risk factors — risks that people potentially could change.

Their resulting recommendations: Ensure good childhood education; avoid high blood pressure, obesity and smoking; manage diabetes, depression and agerelated hearing loss; be physically active; stay socially engaged in old

The theory: These factors together play a role in whether your brain is resilient enough to withstand years of silent damage that eventually leads to Alzheimer's. DOES CHANGING

THESE OR OTHER LIFESTYLE FACTORS REALLY HELP?

Last month, the U.S. National Academies of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine reported there's little rigorous proof. That report found some evidence that controlling blood pressure, exercise and some forms of brain training keeping intellectually stimulated — might work and couldn't hurt.

Why? What's good for the heart is generally good for the brain. In fact, high blood pressure that can trigger heart attacks and strokes also increases risk for what's called "vascular dementia."

And exercising your gray matter may bulk up the brain, whether it's from childhood education or learning a new language as an adult. The more you learn, the more connections your brain forms, what scientists call cognitive reserve. Some U.S. studies have suggested that generations better educated than their grandparents have somewhat less risk of dementia.

Other factors have See DEMENTIA, Page 8A

One of those is the IDEAS study, which is testing the impact of amyloid-detecting PET scans in more than 18.000 Medicare beneficiaries. To enroll. patients either must have atypical dementia with an unclear cause — or have particularly puzzling "mild cognitive impairment," or MCI, early memory problems that raise the risk of later developing dementia. Researchers check if doctors' initially recorded treatment plans — medications, counseling or additional testing — were altered by patients' PET results.

That happened in about two-thirds of the cases. according to preliminary findings from nearly 4,000 patients who were the first to enroll.

Most changes involved medications that can temporarily ease Alzheimer's symptoms, said Rabinovici, who presented the findings at the Alzheimer's Association International Conference in London. The PET scans found 70 percent of the dementia patients indeed had amyloid build-up, pointing out those who might benefit from those drugs and those who won't.

less scientific support. Studies show people with hearing loss are more likely to experience memory problems, and have speculated that it's because hearing loss leads to depression and social isolation — or that the brain works harder to deal with garbled sound, at the expense of other thinking skills. But so far there aren't studies proving hearing aids reverse that risk.

In fact, the strongest evidence that lifestyle changes help comes from Finland, where a large, randomized study found older adults at high risk of dementia scored better on brain tests after two years of exercise, diet, cognitive stimulation and social activities.

HUNTING PROOF

Would those strategies help Americans, who tend to be sicker, fatter and more sedentary than Scandinavians? The Alzheimer's Association is funding a study to find out, with enrollment of 2,500 cognitively healthy but high-risk older adults to begin next year.

Want to try on your own? They'll test:

• Walking — supervised, so no cheating. Wake Forest's Baker puts seniors on treadmills at the local YMCA to avoid bumpy sidewalks. She advises exercise newbies to start slow — about 10 minutes a day for a few days — and work up to longer walks, and go with a buddy so it's harder to back out.

• A diet that includes more leafy greens, vegetables, whole grains, fish and poultry than the typical American menu.

• Certain brain games and what Baker called an "intellectual stimulation barrage," outings and other steps that keep people social, not sitting home on a computer, while they exercise their brains.

Andrus snaps 10th-inning tie, Rangers beat Rays 4-3

By FRED GOODALL

AP Sports Writer

PETERSBURG, Fla. — Elvis Andrus picked a nice time to break out of a hitting funk.

The Texas shortstop drove in his first runs since July 2, smacking a solo homer to stop an 0-for-16 skid and then snapping a 10th-inning tie with a two-out infield single that gave the Rangers a 4-3 victory over the Tampa Bay Rays on Friday night.

"It was a resilient win for us," Andrus said after Texas rallied from a 3-1 deficit in the ninth and stopped a five-game losing streak. "Even when we were down, we still feel that we were in the game. ... It was really a team effort right there top to bottom. Hopefully we can carry that momentum."

Andrus, who homered in the first inning, hit a sharp grounder off Brad Boxberger (2-1) that forced Evan Longoria to make a diving stop. Pinch runner Delino DeShields scored when the third baseman was unable to complete the throw to first base for the third out.

Alex Claudio pitched two innings in before the Rangers ralrelief of Yu Darvish to get the win. The lefthander gave up a leadoff single to Steven Souza Jr. in the 10th, but avoided further damage by getting Adeiny Hechavarria to bunt into a double play and Mallex Smith to fly out.

Rays starter Alex Cobb took a three-hitter and two-run lead into the ninth, but couldn't finish off the Rangers, who erased their deficit with Joey Gallo's double and Shin-Soo Choo's 14th homer within a threepitch span.

"Probably the most upset and angry I've been walking off the mound in a long time," said Cobb, who was seeking his first complete game in four years. "I was given an opportunity ... to go shut the door and didn't execute a few pitches in a row. It turned south quick."

Other than allowing a trio of solo homers, Darvish was outstanding for the Rangers.

The All-Star righthander yielded five hits, walked one and struck out 12 over eight innings, yet was in line to drop a career-high fifth consecutive decision lied against Cobb in the ninth.

The Rays built their lead on homers by Brad Miller, Corey Dickerson and Smith, whose eighth-inning made it 3-1.

Things shifted quickly when manager Kevin Cash decided against turning the game over to closer Alex Colome, who leads the AL with 26 saves, to begin the ninth.

"I was confident the way he was throwing the ball," Cash said of Cobb. "I had the confidence for him to go back out there and get three more outs. No slight to anybody in the bullpen, especially Alex Colome."

TRAINER'S ROOM

Rangers: Manager Jeff Banister said Joey Gallo, who has been slowed by a sore left hamstring, is not ready to play on a regular basis in the outfield. Gallo is playing first base and DH.

Rays: Souza, who injured his left hip sliding Wednesday, was out of the lineup but pinch-hit in the 10th. ... CF Kevin Kiermaier, BALTIMORE — A commanding lead had been reduced to one run during a wild ninth inning, and the Houston Astros found themselves turning to their closer to hold off the Baltimore Orioles.

In the end, the best team in the American League found a way to win – again.

Rookie Yuli Gurriel had a careerhigh four hits, including a home run, and the Astros squeezed out an 8-7 victory on Friday night to end Baltimore's four-game winning streak.

Houston took an 8-2 lead into the ninth before Adam Jones hit a tworun double off James Hoyt and Jonathan Schoop homered with two on against Chris Devenski.

After Chris Davis was thrown out trying to bunt against the shift, Ken Giles struck out Mark Trumbo to earn his 21st save.

"It was a mess of an inning from the beginning," Astros manager A.J. Hinch said. "They obviously put some good at-bats together. It can happen fast in this park.

"All's well that ends well with a win albeit a stressful one in the end."

Colin Moran hit his first major league homer and first triple for Houston, and Brian McCann also went deep.

Working in 90-degree temperatures on a steamy night at Camden Yards, Mike Fiers (7-4) threw 105 pitches over seven innings. The right-hander struck out nine, including Jones three times, and allowed one run and

"My hands were getting a little moist there. It was kind of hard to grip the ball a little bit," Fiers said. "I

ARLINGTON, Texas — Clint Dempsey is back in his home state of Texas, one goal away from a national scoring record for the United States team that is one win from playing in another CONCACAF Gold Cup final.

The Americans play a semifinal game Saturday night against Costa Rica in a stadium synonymous with American football — the home of the NFL's Dallas Cowboys, the Cotton Bowl and where the first College Football Playoff championship game was played three seasons ago.

That is only about 180 miles from Dempsey's hometown of Nacogdo-

"It's always great to be home and play in front of family and friends, especially for a big game," Dempsey said Friday. "I have a lot of great memories of playing in Dallas as a kid, and I'm proud to represent Nacogdoches. Being from there made me who I am today."

In a 2013 semifinal game there when the Americans were on the way to their fifth Gold Cup championship, they beat Honduras 3-1. Donovan scored twice in that game — his 55th and 56th goals for the national team – and assisted on the other goal. About two months later, Donovan scored his final goal in a World Cup qualifier win over Mexico.

Spieth turns in a beauty on a nasty day at British Open

By DOUG FERGUSON

AP Golf Writer

SOUTHPORT, England  Jordan Spieth expected a rough time at the British Open before he even got to the golf course.

He spent Friday morning at his rented house in front of the television, watching players battle a relentless wind at Royal Birkdale, all the while checking a forecast that was even worse for when he played in the afternoon.

"It wasn't a great feeling knowing we were coming into something harder than what we were watching," he Spieth did more than just survive.

With a short game as sharp as it has been all year, and a 3-wood that turned out a lot better than it looked and led to an eagle, Spieth seized control with a 1-under 69 that gave him a two-shot lead over Matt Kuchar going into the Spieth turned a bogey or worse into an unlikely par by chipping in from just short of the 10th green. And he learned enough from watching TV to know that going a little long on the par-5 15th would give him a better birdie chance than playing short. So he switched from a 3-iron to a 3-wood, hit it a little off the neck and watched it run hot and fast some 100 yards along the wet turf to about 18 feet away.

"I mishit the shot, which is probably why it looked so gross," Spieth said. "I hit it low off the heel, which is easy to do when you're trying to carve a cut. And it just ... one hop, scooted around the group of bunkers there, and then it was obviously fortunate to get all the way to the

The flight of that 3-wood looked as ugly as the weather. The outcome was as bright as his chances of getting his name on another major championship trophy.

Spieth was at 6-under 134. It was the 12th time he has been atop the leaderboard at a major, including the fourth rounds of the Masters and U.S. Open that he won in 2015. Spieth is the sole leader at a major for the first time since the third round of the Masters last year, when he was runner-up to Danny Willett.

"Anytime you're in the last group on a weekend in a major ... you get nervous. And I'll be feeling it this weekend a bit," he said. "But I enjoy it. As long as I approach it positively and recognize that this is what you want to feel because you're in the position you want to be in, then the easier it is to hit solid shots and to create solid rounds."

Kuchar played in the morning in steadily strong wind, but without rain, and pieced together a solid round until a few mistakes at the end for a 71. He was at 4-under 136, and it would have been a good bet that he would be leading with the nasty weather that arrived.

"I think that's what people enjoy about the British Open is watching the hard wind, the rain, the guys just trying to survive out there," Kuchar said. "Today is my day. I get to kick back in the afternoon and watch the guys just try to survive."

He wound up watching another short-game clinic from Spieth.

The key to his round came in the middle, starting with a 10-foot par putt on No. 8 after he drove into a pot bunker. The biggest break came at No. 10, when the rain was pounding Royal Birkdale. Spieth hit into another pot bunker off the tee, could only advance it out sideways, and came up short of the green in light rough.

"Massive," he said about the chip-in par. "Nothing said '4' about this hole. I feel a little guilty about taking 4 on the card."

And he wasn't through just yet. Spieth rolled in a 35-foot birdie putt across the 11th green, and then after watching Henrik Stenson's tee shot on the par-3 12th land softly, Spieth realized he could take on the flag. He hit 7-iron to 2 feet for another birdie, and followed that with a beautiful pitch to tap-in range for par on the 13th.

Even so, his work is far from over.

The chasing pack features U.S. Open champion Brooks Koepka, who failed to make a birdie but stayed in the hunt with 16 pars in a 72, and Ian Poulter with his newfound confidence, which is growing even higher with the support of the English crowd. Poulter shot 70.

Not to be overlooked was Rory McIlroy, who recovered from a horrific start Thursday to salvage a 71, and then kept right on rolling. McIlroy, who was 5 over through the opening six holes of the tournament, ran off three birdies with full control of every shot on the front nine.

And much like Spieth, he kept his round together with crucial par saves early on the back nine when the wind was at its worse. McIlroy posted a 68 and was at 1-under 139, only five shots behind with only five players in front of

"To be in after two days and be under par for this championship after the way I started, I'm ecstatic with that," McIlroy said.

Not everyone got off so easy. Justin Thomas, who started the second round just two shots behind, drove into the gorse on the first hole and took double bogey. That wasn't nearly as bad as the sixth hole, where he tried three times to hammer out of the thick native grass well right of the fairway. He couldn't find the ball after the third one, and he wound up taking a quintuple-bogey 9. Thomas made another double bogey on the 13th hole and shot 80.

Spieth never looked as if he was under any stress, except for his tee shot into the bunker on No. 8. A British writer suggested a lip-reader could have detected some choice words coming out of his mouth. Spieth smiled and replied, "I speak American. You probably didn't understand

Ledecky prepares for another big week at world championships

By PAUL NEWBERRY

AP National Writer

BUDAPEST, Hungary Katie Ledecky shrugs off the notion that she's doing anything special over the next week.

For the 20-year-old American star, the improbable has become the expected.

"It's really just putting in the work, putting in the training," Ledecky said Friday, sounding so nonchalant that she might as well have been describing a leisurely afternoon swim in one of those thermal baths along the Dan-

Of course, there's nothing restful about her plans for the world championships in Budapest, where the swimming competition begins on Sunday.

Ledecky will race every day for seven straight days, a total of 6,300 meters if all goes according to plan. That's nearly 4 miles in total, encompassing freestyle races that range from 200 meters (essentially, a sprint) to 1,500 (the grueling metric mile).

To add a little perspective, Michael Phelps put in 3,300 meters — roughly half the distance of Ledecky's program — on his way to a record eight gold medals at the Beijing Olympics. No one is aware of a pool swimmer ever covering so much distance within the confines of a single major meet.

For anyone else, it would seem ludicrous to even consider such a daunting plan.

But Ledecky did 6,200 meters at the last world championships, two years ago in Kazan, Russia, where she won five gold medals. She's added the 4x100 free relay to her repertoire since then.

At the Rio Olympics last summer, Ledecky captured four gold medals and a silver. That must have seemed like a breeze, a mere 3,300 meters for the week since the 1,500 wasn't part of the women's program.

That will change at the 2020 Games in Toyko, so this will be the first test of what her program will probably look like at the next Olympics.

"I feel like I'm really prepared," Ledecky said. "I was confident two years with what that schedule would be like and how I could handle it and manage it so I would have good energy throughout the week."

Life has changed quite a bit since her triumphant performance in Brazil.

A native of the Washington, D.C., suburbs, she moved away from home for the first time to attend Stanford, an experience that has given her a whole new balance and perspective. The change of scenery forced her to change coaches, as well. She left Bruce Gemmell and is now working with her college coach, Greg Meehan, who is serving as the head U.S. women's coach in Budapest.

Meehan knew he was inheriting a special tal-

He tweaked a few things in her training regimen, and worked to make her stroke a bit longer and more efficient, but Ledecky certainly didn't need a major overhaul.

"She knows how to handle that racing load," Meehan said. "Nothing prepares you for that other than experience and hard work. She did a great job with Bruce Gemmell. Bruce prepared her in that regard. We've just taken the ball and continued to run with it. She's in a great spot."

Ledecky will have the spotlight largely to herself in Hungary.

Michael Phelps retired again (except for racing sharks), Ryan Lochte was suspended for his antics in Rio and Missy Franklin is taking the year off after a disappointing Olympic perfor-

- Ledecky has definitely taken on more of a leadership role, especially with teenage swimmers such as 15-yearold Regan Smith and 17-yearold Dakota Luther.

"I still feel pretty young on this team," Ledecky said with a smile. "But I do feel like I can have a little bit more of a leadership role this year."

When she hangs out with Smith and Luther, both competing in their first international meets, she's reminded of her first big competition — the 2012 London Olympics, stunned everyone by winning gold in the 800 free.

"I was wide-eyed for that whole experience," she recalled. "There were people on that team I had looked up to for so long. Now, it's so cool to see (a new wave of swimmers) have that experience. They always know they can come to me or any of the older swimmers for advice."

By adding another event to her already crowded schedule, Ledecky has a shot at matching Franklin's female benchmark of six gold medals at the 2013 worlds in Barcelona.

She's already got plenty of

"The bottom line is: I started swimming just for fun, and that's what it's all about," Ledecky said. "It's a lot of fun to be with Team USA, see them succeed, cheer them on. If I come away from this week having a lot of fun, it will be a successful. I don't really well, 'care' is not the right word — but I don't really focus on winning gold medals and breaking world records. It's all about enjoying this process and being with my teammates."

Monty Dawson, A.C. and the Heaters, and Little Joe shook the dust off the newly renovated Howard County Fair Barn last weekend for Victim Services

ast Saturday night, the walls at the Howard County Fair Barn throbbed, the lights flashed, and the people danced.

It was a benefit concert for Victim Services in Big Spring, and opening acts Monty Dawson of Bowie, Texas, and Big Spring's own A.C. and the Heaters opened for five-time Grammy winner Little Joe Hernandez and La Familia.

"I had a lot of fun, and it appeared like the people did as well. The more fun the people have, the more fun I have," said Little Joe after the concert. "I think that it's a great cause, and I hope that we get to do it again. The more the community gets involved, the better. I was happy that I could make a small donation there at the end of the show."

Joe personally donated $500 to the cause, and signed two guitars which were auctioned off, drawing $400 apiece.

Turnout for the show was modest, drawing only about 150 people to the venue.

"I'm disappointed in the sense that we need to make as much money as we can for the cause," Hernandez said. "But as for me on a personal basis, if it's 100 people or 1,000 people or 10,000 people, I perform with the same feel, you know? I'm there to entertain the people. But a small show like that, it makes it kind of intimate, and I enjoy that."

Along with Little Joe y La Familia, R&B singer Neal Sharpe from Chicago took the stage for a few

Joe said he met Sharpe in his hometown of Temple, Texas.

"He was in the Army here in Killeen, Ft. Hood," he said. "When he was out of the Army, he decided to stay in Temple. But he's worked with a lot of the groups. He worked with a lot of the big names at the beginning of their career. The Drifters is one of the main groups that he did a lot of work with. And he's got several recordings, and stays busy. He's a real likable guy, and a great entertainer. I only wish we'd had more time to feature him more. Maybe we'll get another chance to do it again."

Joe said he would be performing in Midland and San Angelo this coming Saturday, July 29.

Adrian Calvio of A.C. and the Heaters said his regular band was on vacation, so he tagged in a few substitutes, and said the group picked out a temporary new band name.

"I had the very talented Eddie Austin up there," Calvio said. "It was pretty much his band. Braedyn Alaniz, a great guitar player; and also a great drummer, Chris Ackery, tonight. And myself. We didn't really have a name, but we just kind of made up 'Whooo!''

Calvio said he feels like Victim Services is a great cause, and not just because his aunt, Linda Calvio, is the organization's executive director.

"What a great cause, you know?" he said. "They are really one of the best places to go if you need some help, actually probably the place to go. Anybody that's needing help, any type of pain that they're going through, they're not alone. My aunt

Speaking after his set but before Little Joe went Calvio said he was looking forward to the Grammy-winner's set. "I am a huge Little Joe fan, absolutely! My parents grew up listening to Little Joe, and I can totally remember being in my little bedroom dancing around," said Calvio. "He's a great guy, I had the pleasure to meet him a couple of different times. He's a legend you know? The 'King of the Brown Sound.'

Dawson said Becky Justice, owner of the Coyote Store in Gail, which organized the concert, is his tour manager. He said he's glad to be playing for the Victim Services cause.

"I think it's a good cause," he said. "I know (Justice is) trying to raise money for these people that are in these bad situations."

Dawson said he's performed most of his life.

"On and off, probably since I was about 18 years old," he said. "We probably didn't get rolling good until about a year and a half ago."

Apollo 11 bag laced with moon dust sells for $1.8 million

The Apollo 11 Contingency Lunar Sample Return Bag used by astronaut Neil Armstrong, to be offered at auction, is displayed at Sotheby's, in New York, Thursday, July 13, 2017. The lunar dust plus some tiny rocks that Armstrong also collected are zipped up in a small bag and are worth an estimated $2 million to $4 million.

NEW YORK (AP) - Abag containing traces of moon dust sold for $1.8 million at an auction on Thursday following a galactic court battle.

The collection bag, used by astronaut Neil Armstrong during the first manned mission to the moon in 1969, was sold at a Sotheby's auction of items related to space voyages.

The buyer declined to be identified. The presale estimate was $2 million to $4 million.

The artifact from the Apollo 11 mission had been misidentified and sold at an online government auction, and NASA had fought to get it back. But in December a federal judge ruled that it legally belonged to a Chicago-area woman who bought it in 2015 for $995.

Sotheby's declined to identify the seller.

However, details of the 2015 purchase were made public during the court case. Investigators unknowingly hit the moon mother lode in 2003 while searching the garage of a man later convicted of stealing and selling museum artifacts, including some that were on loan from NASA.

The 12-by-8½-inch (30-by-20-centimeter) bag was misidentified and sold at an online government auction.

Nancy Carlson, of Inverness, Illinois, got ordinary-looking bag made of white Beta cloth and polyester with rubberized nylon and a brass zipper.

Carlson, a collector, knew the bag had been used in a space flight, but she didn't know which one.

She sent it to NASA for testing, and the government discovering its importance, fought to keep it.

The artifact "belongs to the American people," NASA said then.

U.S. District Judge J. Thomas Marten, in Wichita, Kansas, said that while it shouldn't have gone up for auction he didn't have the authority to reverse the sale. He ordered the government to return it. The judge said the importance and desirability of the bag stemmed solely from the efforts NASA employees whose "amazing techachievements, skill and courage in landing astronauts on the moon and returning them safely have not been replicated in the almost half a century since the Apollo 11 landing." When it comes to moon landings, Thursday's auction is far from the final frontier.

A group called For All Moonkind Inc. mentioned the moon bag this week while campaigning for "measures to preserve and protect the six Apollo lunar landing sites." It plans to take up the issue next month at the Starship Congress 2017 in California. Also getting out-of-this-world interest at the auction was the Flown Apollo 13 Flight Plan, with handwritten notations by all three crew members. It sold to an online bidder for $275,000, well above its pre-sale estimate high of $40,000.

Creators of new HBO series address fears it glorifies racism

NEW YORK (AP) -No scripts have been written not even an outline.

But HBO's announcement on Wednesday that the creator-showrunners of "Game of Thrones" will follow up that massive hit with an HBO series in which slavery remains legal in the modern-day South drew fire on social media from those who fear that telling that story will glorify racism.

The series, "Confederate," will take place in an alternate timeline where the southern states have successfully seceded from the Union and formed a nation in which legalized slavery has evolved into a modern institution. The story follows "a broad swath of characters on both sides of the Mason-Dixon De militarized Zone." HBO said — "freedom fighters slave hunters, politicians, abolitionists, journalists the executives of a slave-holding conglomerate and the families of people in their thrall."

In surrealist twist, Dali exhumed in paternity lawsuit

The sensitive exhumation by a team of forensic experts followed two decades of court battles by Abel. In June, a Madrid judge finally ruled that a DNA test should be performed to find out whether her allegations were true. "I am amazed and very happy because justice may be delivered," she had told The Associated Press when the judge ruled in her favor. Abel

In order to respect the privacy of the artist's remains and to lessen the risk of contaminating any biological samples, only five people — a judge, three forensic experts and an assistant— stayed during the hour and 20 minutes that the coffin

Regional Catalan officials previously told the AP that experts planned to remove four teeth, some nails and the marrow of a long bone, if the corpse's condition allowed it. A coffin from a funeral home was delivered earlier in the day to the museum premises. The public foundation that manages Dali's estate failed to halt the exhumation but convinced Workers bring a casket to the Dali Theater Museum in Figueres, Spain, Thursday, July 20, 2017. Salvador Dali's eccentric artistic and personal history took yet another bizarre turn Thursday with the exhumation of his embalmed remains in order to find genetic samples that could settle whether one of the founding figures of surrealism fathered a daughter decades ago.

Dunkirk

n May and June of 1940. about 400,000 British troops were penned English against the channel near the northern French town Dunkerusually que, Anglicized as Dunkirk. Having these men killed or captured would have crippled the British war effort in World War II. the Germans halted to consolidate their

position, confident that the British had nowhere to run, hundreds of British and Allied ships of all descriptions, including tugboats and "other small craft" including sailboats and pleasure yachts, crossed the channel and spirited away more than 330,000 troops over a nine-day period. It was absolutely a heroic, critical moment in the early days of the war and certainly deserves its own movie. I'm not sure that the new Christopher Nolan film "Dunkirk," released this week, is quite the treatment the evacuation

So there are three main perspectives in "Dunkirk" that weave together throughout the movie. The first, labeled "Land" in the titles, follows a young British soldier named Tommy (Fionn Whitehead). We catch up with Tommy as he's wandering through the streets of Dunkrk with his unit. They come under fire, and the rest of Tommy's comrades are killed. He crosses through a machinegun nest of French soldiers (who take a few shots at him before realizing he's English) and finds himself on the beach, where thousands of troops are lined up, waiting to be evacuated. Tommy spots another soldier, whose uniform bears the name "Gibson." Gibson (Aneurin Barnard) is burying a friend, and remains oddly silent, though the two stick together throughout the

The second story arc, "Sea," follows Mr. Dawson (Mark Rylance), who is apparently a charter boat captain; his son Peter (Tom Glynn-Carney); and another village boy George (Barry Keoghan). These guys have been mobilized by the Navy and are preparing to cross the Channel to Dunkirk in Dawson's yacht, the Moonstone, to rescue some troops. During the crossing, the trio discover a soldier (CillianMurphy) sitting atop a partially sunken Dunkirk and not back to England, he insists that they turn around, becoming violent when Dawson refuses. In the third arc, "Air," three British Spitfire pilots, Farrier (Tom Hardy), Collins (Jack Lowden), and an unnamed third, are bound for Dunkirk to help protect the men there from German air attacks. During the crossing they encounter some German planes, and the unnamed pilot time it is, how much time has passed, etc. There are scenes where it's pitch dark at Dunkirk, but only a relatively short distance away at the Spitfires, it's bright daylight. I get the impression that it's that way on purpose, and perhaps the point is to make the audience feel the uncomfortable confusion that war creates, but it came across to me as annoying.

Also, for an incident in World War II which bolstered British spirits and gave them the morale to continue on fighting, it's a pretty depressing movie. Major characters die. Swaths of troops are killed by aircraft gunfire or bombs. We see prejudice on the part of (admittedly panicked) British troops against their French allies. Yes, when Commander Bolton first spots the fleet of small boats on the horizon, it's a heartwarming moment, but it's kind of underplayed in the film amidst all the horror.

"Dunkirk" is a disjointed, confusing movie. With the major ones.

Don't get me wrong, I understand that war is horrifying; I'm just saying that this was a major strategic coup for the British and I feel like that aspect of things could have been played up a bit more.

One other quibble. Somebody, probably Nolan himself, decided that there weren't going to be any Germans in this movie. Oh, sure, there are German fighter planes and bombers. There are the effects of the German attacks.

But except for a brief glimpse of a few shadowy soldiers at the end of the movie, I don't remember seeing an actual German in the film. I kept wanting there to be a face to go along with all the horror we kept seeing, but Mr. Nolan consistently replied (by his movie, not in so many words), "Nope. These are invisible, faceless foes. None of the troops on the ground can see them, so why should you?" Yeah, I get the point, but (like a lot of things about this movie), it's irritat-

I understand that certain online review sites are raving for this movie, so you may enjoy it. I found it underwhelming.

There are some good parts to "Dunkirk," but overall, its flaws keep it from being the really great movie such an example of civilian bravery in wartime deserves. Five stars out of 10.

A new way to pay? Scammers asking for iTunes gift cards

irst it was wire transfers, then it was prepaid debit cards, and now scammers are trying to steal money by asking for payment in the form of gift cards to the popular media service, iTunes.

The trend began to appear in reports to BBB's Scam Tracker system late 2015. This year, there have been 231 reports nationwide of scammers asking people for iTunes gift cards. There Heather have been 29 reports of the Massey practice here in Texas.

Scammers typically contact people through phone calls, text messages and emails. Some scammers may pretend to be with the IRS, demanding people pay back taxes with iTunes gift cards. Others asked people to pay advance fees with iTunes gift cards in order to get a loan, or will pose as a family member or online love interest who are in need of help immediately.

According to the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), once you tell a scammer the code on the back of an iTunes gift card, you give them access to the amount on the card. The scammer can then use the code or sell it. However, as soon as you put money on an iTunes card or once the card is redeemed, the money is gone for good.

To avoid getting scammed, Better Business Bureau serving the Heart of Texas offers the following tips:

• Never pay with an iTunes gift card. If you're not shopping at the iTunes store, you shouldn't be paying with an iTunes gift card. Don't pay with any gift cards, including Amazon gift cards, or reloadable cards. Scammers may even ask you to pay through PayPal.

 Never wire money. Scammers are known to ask for payment via wire transfer through services like Western Union or MoneyGram. Government offices won't require you to wire transfer money as a method of payment.

 Call Apple Support. If you think you may be a victim of this type of scam, call Apple Support right away and explain to them what happened. They may be able to disable the card. Also, consider going back to the store that sold you the iTunes gift card and talk with their customer service staff. • Report it. If you are targeted by a scam like this, you can file a complaint with the FTC or report it to BBB Scam Tracker.

Remember, government agencies, financial institutions and reputable retailers will not accept iTunes gift cards as a form of currency, except for iTunes.

Hackers had access to millions PERMITS of Social Security numbers

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Hackers who breached a Kansas Department of Commerce data system in March had access to more than 5.5 million Social Security numbers in 10 states, along with another 805,000 accounts that didn't include the Social Security numbers, according to records obtained from the agency.

The department will be required to pay for credit monitoring for most of the victims of the hacking,. Besides Kansas, the other states affected by the hack are Arkansas, Arizona, Delaware, Idaho, Maine, Oklahoma, Vermont, Alabama and Illinois.

The suspicious activity was discovered March 12 by America's Job Link Alliance-TS, the commerce department division that operates the system.

It was isolated March 14 and the FBI was contacted the next day, according to testimony from agency officials to the Legislature this spring. The Kansas News Service filed its open records request May 24 and the commerce department fulfilled the request Wednesday.

A commerce department representative didn't immediately return a call Friday from The Associated Press seeking comment.

The data is from websites that help people find jobs, such as Kansasworks.com, where people can post resumes and search job openings. At the time of the hack, Kansas was managing data for 16 states but not all the states were affected. After the hack, AJLA-

TS officials called in a third-party IT company specializing in forensic analysis to verify the coding error the hackers exploited was fixed and to identify victims. The documents show the commerce department also contracted with private companies to help victims, provide IT support and to provide legal services. The state is paying $175,000 to the law firm and $60,000 to the IT firm. The commerce department didn't provide the cost of the third contract.

Earlier testimony to lawmakers indicated

Texas-based Denim Group, was contracted in April to review code and provide advice for improvements, which has since been implemented.

The agency didn't provide documents related to that contract.

Kansas will pay for up to a year of credit monitoring services for victims in nine of the affected states. Delaware residents are eligible for three years of services because of contractual obligations to that state. The agency said in May this was the first known breach of AJLA-TS' databases and the contractor's response exceeded requirements in Kansas law.

UAW, Nissan pressing high-stakes campaign for worker votes

By JEFF AMY

Associated Press

CANTON, Miss. (AP) — The United Auto Workers faces a strong anti-union campaign from Nissan Motor Co. as it tries to gain a foothold in the union-averse South by organizing workers at the Japanese automaker's Mississippi

As many as 4,000 workers will vote Aug. 3 and Aug. 4 at the vehicle assembly plant in Canton, just north of Jackson. The union promises it would help negotiate better working conditions, benefits and wages at the plant. However, managers warn that the UAW will ultimately hurt both the company and the workers.

Union supporters tried to pressure Nissan for years into staying neutral, or at least toning down its antiunion stance. But managers, while saying workers get to decide, are pushing against the UAW. The company is broadcasting anti-union videos inside the plant, and the UAW says supervisors are pulling workers into private meetings to gauge UAW support and persuade workers against unionizing.

The UAW has tried to bolster support among the majority-African American workforce by linking union support to civil rights, but even union supporters admit management's message is causing some pro-UAW workers to waver.

"People who were for the union are now undecided," said Shanta Butler, a union supporter.

The stakes are high. The UAW has never organized an entire foreign-owned auto plant in the South, although it did win an election among technicians maintenance at a Volkswagen AG plant Chattanooga, Tennes-Foreign automakers came South in part to avoid unions, and most benefit from lower labor costs.

Workers at Nissan's plant in Smyrna, Tennessee, rejected the UAW in 1989 and 2001 votes, but this is the first election in Canton. Though unions have struggled to crack southern auto plants owned by foreign companies, unions have prevailed nationwide in 65 percent of elections from October through June, National Labor Relations Board figures

The top Nissan executive in Canton appeared in the first video urging rejection of the UAW barely a day after the union announced that it had filed a petition with the labor board to hold the election.

"We know the union will make promises it can't keep to get you to vote for the UAW." Marsh said in a recorded video message to workers. "But when you see the UAW's empty promises for what they really are, and get the complete facts, the choice is clear."

Anti-union messages from managers aren't unusual in labor elections, but the pressure can be very uncomfortable for workers.

"It is often very tense," said Vanderbilt University sociologist Dan Cornfield, who has studied unions. "It's tense because both sides feel a lot is riding on it for them."

Secretary-Treasurer Gary Casteel said the union's goal is to help wavering union supporters "have enough fortitude" to stick with the union in the face of anti-union messages. Nissan contends the UAW history of strikes and other actions have caused economic losses for workers and automakers; Nissan maintains its workers already have good pay and benefits.

In this March 4, 2017 file photograph, thousands march to Nissan Motor Co.'s Canton, Miss., plant, following a pro-union rally. The United Auto Workers faces a strong anti-union campaign from Nissan Motor Co. as it tries to gain a foothold in the union-averse South by organizing workers at the Japanese automaker's Mississippi plant. As many as 4,000 workers will vote Aug. 3-Aug. 4, 2017 the vehicle assembly plant in Canton, just north of Jackson.

"I've never seen a more aggressive campaign," Casteel said in a phone interview. "I've seen a lot as aggressive."

Casteel called management's efforts "intimidation," but Nissan spokeswoman Parul Bajaj rejected that description. Managers have said they're giving workers the facts about the UAW.

"Nissan respects and values the Canton workforce, and our history reflects that we recognize the employees' rights to decide for themselves whether or not to have third-party representation," Bajaj said.

The union hasn't alleged any new violations of federal labor law. Following earlier UAW allegations, the NLRB charged, among other things, that managers illegally questioned workers and threatened to close the plant if it unionized. That legal case is unresolved.

The 14-year-old plant is where Frontier and Titan pickups, Murano SUVs and NV vans are assembled. Its annual capacity of 450,000 vehicles is about 8 percent of all Nissan vehicles made worldwide last year.

UAW supporters have protested against Nissan's opposition to the UAW around the world, especially in France. French government owns nearly 20 percent of the Renault Group, Nissan's business partner. Carlos Ghosn, Renault Nissan Alliance chairman, told French lawmakers in 2016 that the alliance "has no tradition of not cooperating with unions."

Casteel said the union may raise Nissan's opposition with French officials, often much more sympathetic to organized labor than their American counterparts.

Judge OKs $11.2M settlement for hacked Ashley Madison users

By JIM SALTER

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal judge on Friday approved an $11.2 million settlement between the marital infidelity website Ashley Madison and users who sued after hackers released personal information, including financial data and details of their sexual proclivities.

U.S. District Judge John Ross in St. Louis gave preliminary approval to a class action settlement that was initially announced last week by Toronto-based Ruby Corp., the parent company of Ashley Madison. Lawsuits from around the country were consolidated in the Eastern District of Missouri.

A final approval hearing is scheduled for Nov. 20.

Douglas Dowd, an attorney representing users of the website, said the settlement is "fair and reasonable" for both sides. Robert Atkins, the lead attorney for Ruby Corp., declined comment after the hearing.

The lawsuits were filed after hackers outed millions of people who used the website two years ago. The suits said Ashley Madison misled consumers about its security measures and safeguards.

The company denied wrongdoing but said in a statement that it settled to "avoid the uncertainty, expense, and inconvenience associated with continued litigation."

Ashley Madison is marketed to people seeking extramarital relationships. Its slogan is, "Life is short. Have an affair." At one time, it purported to have about 39 million members.

The case is unique in that many website users not only want to remain anonymous but registered using false names, said James McDonough III, an attorney for the users. As a result, those eligible for the settlement won't be contacted directly. Instead, they will reach out to those who could benefit via magazine and web ads.

Ross agreed with that plan. "There's just no way to give direct notice to class members," he said.

McDonough said there is no estimate on how many people will seek part of the settlement money, which could range from as little as $19 for those victimized by the hack up to $2,000 for those who were victims of identity theft because of the hack.

Ashley Madison's systems were hacked in July 2015. Hackers posted the details a month later after the company didn't comply with their demands to shut down. The release of evidence of infidelity triggered extortion crimes and unconfirmed reports of suicides.

Notice of Public Hearing Howard County Appraisal District Budget

The Howard County Appraisal District will hold a public hearing on a proposed budget for the 2018 fiscal year.

The public hearing will be held on August 9, 2017 at 5:15 PM in the offices of the Howard County Appraisal District, 315 S. Main, Big Spring, Texas.

A summary of the appraisal district budget follows:

The total amount of the proposed budget. 1.050.002

The total amount of decrease over the current year's 19,352

The number of employees compensated under the proposed budget.

The number of employees compensated under the current year's budget.

Jobless rates fall below 4 pct. in nearly half US states

By CHRISTOPHER_ S. RUGABER AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hiring rose last month in 14 U.S. states in June, and the unemployment rate fell to record lows in two states, evidence that the job market is getting tighter across much of the country.

The Labor Department said Friday that unemployment rates fell in 10 states and rose in only 2. Rates were stable in the other 38 states.

After five years of steady hiring, unemployment rates have fallen below 4 percent in 23 states. Unemployment that low suggests that those states are at "full employment," when nearly everyone who wants a job has one and the unemployment rate reflects the normal churn of hiring and fir-The rate has fallen below 3 percent in five states: Colorado, Hawaii, Nebraska, New Hampshire and North Dakota.

When unemployment falls that low, businesses may be forced to raise pay to compete for scarce workers.

So far, wage gains nationwide remain at about 2.5 percent a year, below the 3.5 percent pace normally associated with a healthy economy.

The appraisal district is supported solely by payments from the local taxing units served by the appraisal district.

If approved by the Appraisal District Board of Directors at the public hearing, this proposed budget will take effect automatically unless disapproved by the governing bodies of the county, school districts, cities and towns served by the appraisal district.

A copy of the proposed budget is available for public inspection in the office of each of those governing bodies. A copy is also available for public inspection at the appraisal district office.

Public Notice

The State of Texas County of Glasscock

Before me, the undersigned authority, on this day personally appeared Deputy BRIAN PETERSON, who after being by me duly sworn deposes and says:

After the herein described estray was impounded, I made a diligent search of the register of record brands in our county where said estray was found. The search did not reveal owner.

I did then advertise the impoundment of said estray in the Glasscock County News and the Big Spring Herald and a duly verified printed copy thereof is returned here-

I also posted a copy of the Notice of Estray and Notice of Impoundment of Estray on the public notice board of the courthouse in which the estray were found.

Notice is hereby given that, if the ownership of said estray is not determined by the 31ST day of JULY, 2017, said estray will be sold at public auction/Sheriff's Sale at the GLASSCOCK COUNTY COURT HOUSE, GARDEN CITY, TEXAS 79739.

The said estray are listed and described as follows:

GRADED CALICHE BASE

Bid Requirements Sealed Bids for graded caliche base material will be received by the Glasscock County Judge, delivered to the Glasscock County Clerk at the Glasscock County Courthouse Annex, 209 S. Myrl Street, Garden City, Texas, until 9:00 a.m., August 14, 2017, at which time the bids will be publicly opened, read aloud and tabulated. These bids will subsequently be considered for award by the Commissioners Court of Glasscock County. The Commissioners Court may, at its discretion, award to more than one bidder.

Each bid should include: 1) the unit price per cubic yard (or per ton) bid for the specified graded base material and 2) the location in Glasscock County of the pit or stockpiled material; and shall be signed by the Bidder. Each bid must be submitted in a sealed envelope addressed to the Glasscock County Judge. The envelope should have the name of the Bidder and "Au-

The bidding: North East Pass Opening lead king of diamonds.

Some players employ a great variety of bidding gadgets. Many of these gadgets do more harm than good and should be quickly abandoned. Other such devices, however, are quite worthwhile. Consider this deal from a team-of-four championship where a valuable gadget was used. At the first table, Team A's North-South pair got to four spades as shown and made it because of poor defense. West led the K-A of diamonds, East playing the eight and then the deuce. West, noting his partner's high-low, continued with a third diamond, handing declarer the contract as he discarded a club from dummy and ruffed in his hand. South later lost a heart trick but scored 620 points for making four

When Team B held the North-South cards at the second table, the bidding went: South West North East

Pass 5 ♣ 4 💠 4 NT Pass East's four-notrump bid was a relatively rare application of the "unusual notrump," indicating great length in both minor suits. True, East had fewer high-card values than one would expect for making his partner bid at the five-level. But from East's viewpoint, it seemed that South might make four spades and that five clubs or diamonds could not be badly hurt.

As it happened, East's judgment was wrong on both counts, but screndipity nevertheless reigned supreme. His teammates at the other table should not have made four spades, and his partner easily made five clubs (losing only a spade and a heart).

Whether or not you agree with East's action at the second table which could easily have been wrong had his partner held a different hand - is left to the tender mercies of the reader. Whatever you think, though, East at the second table certainly demonstrated the value of the unusual notrump convention.

successful bidder(s) must submit to the county Judge a report from an acceptable testing laboratory certifying that the material to be purchased meets or exceeds these material specifications.

Questions concerning these specifications or bid procedures should addressed to Don W. Bonifay, Engineer for Glasscock County, at (432) 230-6815 or donbonifay@gmail.com.

Measurement and Delivery The specified material shall be supplied and measured by the cubic yard or by the ton. Material shall be loaded by the successful Bidder into trucks provided by Glasscock County. Material shall be located at the successful Bidder's location, which must be in Glasscock County. This location shall be stated in the bid document

There is no minimum or guaranteed quantity of material stated or implied with the award of this bid.

The term of this bid shall be one year from the date of award.

Payments

Bids submitted shall be a unit price amount (in U.S. Dollars), which shall constitute the total cost for each cubic yard or ton requested and received by Glasscock County.

Payment shall be monthly. Invoices submitted to the Glasscock County Treasurer at least seven days prior to the Glasscock County Commissioners Court's regularly scheduled meeting, will be paid within two days after that Court meeting.

gentleman. After a few dates, we were texting back and forth one day. After my talking about my family for a while, he started freaking out and told me that -- here goes -- he had dated my mom four years ago. Yep. This was a period of a few months when she and my stepdad were not together.

Of course, I immediately stopped communication with Jack. And I've been on a roller coaster of emotion since. First I felt denial and disbelief. Then came sadness. Now I'm angry. This guy seems to be perfect, and the opportunity to date him was ripped away because my mother already went there. My mom is young and was eligible at the time -- and I have no objection to her finding love and happiness. But I'm resentful of the fact that she was dipping into my dating pool, and I can see the issue affecting our relationship. Should I talk to her about this? Do I have a right to feel this way? -- Dating and Disturbed

Dear Dating and Disturbed: The first step toward letting go of resentment is realizing you're holding on to it. So though Jack wasn't meant for you, I think he was meant to come into your life. He's brought to the surface some complicated feelings you have toward your mother, and now you can finally talk to her about them. I'm sure Mom will sympathize with your frustration. Give her the opportunity to tell her side of the story. When you're ready, get back out on the dating scene with

Dear Annie: A few months ago, I messaged you about the issues that come with my speech problem, and you advised me on meditating. Since that letter was printed, I have noticed how a lot of people have been considerate about my "accent" and not really asked me about it. While meditating over these months, I have come up with some thoughts that I'd like to share with you and, if you find it necessary, the people who read your advice in the paper.

I first noticed how, as you said in the column, one can't change how people act. People may say things that they themselves come to regret in the future. Though working in customer service can be frustrating, I find comfort in the fact that some people have "problems" like me. Some have ADHD, autism, etc., and I found myself (and my co-workers) judging them and making fun of them.

As I meditated, I noticed that, and it made me think about why I had the right to write to you about my problems when I was judging others for theirs. After I found that I was judging my customers, I felt horrible. People can't change certain parts of themselves any more than I can make my horrid speech problem better.

I started to treat the people who come in as I would like to be treated and have found that I am happier at the end of the day. I advise anyone to share a kind understanding and maybe just strike up a small conversation with someone. You never know what it could lead to. -- Working on My Perspective in

Pennsylvania Dear WOMPIP:

It's great to hear from you again. You seem so much more at peace with things than you did in your first letter. I hope your story encourages others to give meditation a try.

O.J. Simpson triumphant, others devastated as he gets parole

By KEN RITTER

Associated Press

LOVELOCK, Nev. (AP) — Barring any last-minute snafus, O.J. Simpson will walk out of prison a free man in about three months, having persuaded a Nevada parole board the bungled hotel-room heist he pulled nearly 10 years ago was a monumental error in judgment and one he will never repeat.

Although he still adamantly maintains he was trying to retrieve his personal property when he barged into a hotel room with five other men in September 2007, he acknowledged repeatedly Thursday that it was something he never should have done.

"I thought I was glad to get my stuff back, but it just wasn't worth it," he told the board. "It wasn't worth it, and I'm sorry."

After a nationally televised hearing that clearly revealed the public's fascination with Simpson continues, four parole commissioners voted unanimously to release him.

"Thank you, thank you, thank you," he said quietly as he buried his head on his chest with relief.

Then, as he was led down a hall and back to prison, the Hall of Fame athlete and 1995 murder defendant raised his hands over his head in a victory gesture and said: "Oh, God, oh!"

Some two hours earlier, Simpson, gray-haired but looking trimmer than he has in recent years, had walked stiffly into a small hearing room of the Lovelock Correctional Center in rural Nevada dressed in jeans, a light-blue prison-issue shirt and sneak-

He chuckled as parole board chairwoman Connie Bisbee began the hearing by mistakenly giving his age at 90 before quickly correcting

"Feels like it though," Simpson, 70, said as laughter

Bisbee and three other parole board commissioners were gathered in another hearing room about two hours away in Carson City, the state's capital. They questioned Simpson via video.

Several major TV networks and cable channels — including ABC, CBS, NBC, CNN, Fox, MSNBC and ESPN carried the proceedings live, just as some of them did two decades ago during a famous Ford Bronco chase over Southern California ways that ended in Simpson's arrest and again when a jury in his murder trial returned with its not guilty verdict.

During Thursday's hearing, the charisma and charm that once made Simpson one of the most popular figures in American pop culture was clearly on display.

By turns remorseful, jovial and defensive, he heatedly insisted the items he and five others took during the armed robbery in a Las Vegas hotel room in September 2007 were "my stuff."

Asked what he planned to do if released. Simpson said he would move to Florida to be close to two of his four adult children.

"I could easily stay in Nevada, but I don't think you guys want me here," he joked.

At one point, he set off a storm of sarcasm and mockery on social media when, assuring commissioners he would stay out of trouble, he said: "I've basically spent a conflict-free life, you know." He also insisted he never meant to hurt anyone during the 2007 confrontation, never pointed a gun and didn't make any threats during the holdup of two sports memorabilia dealers. "These were friends of mine, actually guys who helped me move and store some of this stuff," he said of the dealers, Bruce Fromong and the late Alfred Beardsley. Fromong testified that was men accompanying Simpson who pointed a gun at him. "He is a good man. He made a mistake," Fromong said of Former NFL football star O.J. Simpson appears with his attorney, Malcolm LaVergne, left, via video for his parole hearing at the Lovelock Correctional Center in Lovelock, Nev., on Thursday, July 20, 2017. Simpson was convicted in 2008 of enlisting some men he barely knew, including two who had guns, to retrieve from two sports collectibles sellers some items that Simpson said were stolen from him a decade earlier.

a ride from prison when he is released he will be there.

"I mean that," he said turning to face Simpson.

Simpson was widely expected to win parole, given similar cases and his good behavior behind bars. His defenders have argued, too, that his sentence was out of proportion to the crime and that he was being punished for the murders he was acquitted of in Los Angeles in 1995, the stabbings of ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Arnelle Simpson, at 48 the eldest of Simpson's four children, told the board, "We recognize that he is not the perfect man." But she said he has been "a perfect inmate, following all the rules and making the best of the situation."

Simpson said he has spent his time in prison mentoring fellow inmates, often keeping them out of trouble, and that he has become a better person during those years.

"I've done my time. I've done it as well and respectfully as I think anybody can," he told the board. Asked if he was confident he could stay out of trouble, he replied that he learned a lot from an alternative-to-violence course he took in prison and that in any case he has always gotten along well with people.

An electrifying running back dubbed "The Juice," Simpson won the Heisman Trophy as the nation's best college football player in 1968 and went on to become one of the NFL's all-time greats.

The handsome and charming athlete was also a "Monday Night Football" commentator, sprinted through airports in Hertz rental-car commercials and built a Hollywood career with roles in the "Naked Gun" comedies and other movies.

All of that came crashing down with his arrest in the 1994 slayings and his trial, a gavel-to-gavel live-TV sensation that transfixed viewers with its testimony about a bloody glove that didn't fit and stirred furious debate over racist police, celebrity justice and cameras in the courtroom.

Two years after his acquittal Simpson was found liable in civil court for the killings and ordered to pay $33.5 million to survivors, including his children and the Goldman family. Last year, the case proved to be compelling TV all over again with the ESPN documentary "O.J.: Made in America" and the award-winning FX miniseries "The People v. O.J. Simpson: American Crime Story."

The long prison sentence that resulted from the hotelroom stickup brought a measure of satisfaction to some of those who thought Simpson got away with murder. Among them were Ron Goldman's sister, Kim, and their father, Fred.

"The Goldmans are devastated," family spokesman Michael Wright said of Thursday ruling.

Bennington's death mirrors that of close friend Cornell

By MESFIN

FEKADU AP Music Writer

May.

NEW YORK (AP) -The death of Linkin Park frontman Chester Bennington came as a surprise to the world when it was announced, but it also struck similarities to the death of fellow rocker and close friend Chris Cornell, who killed himself in Authorities are investigating Bennington's death as an apparent suicide, Los Angeles County coroner spokesman Brian Elias said Thursday. Bennington, who was 41, was found dead in his home near Los Angeles. He had a strong bond with Cornell and died on what would have been the Soundgarden singer's 53rd birthday.

Bennington was also the godfather to Cornell's 11-year-old son, Chris. And Bennington sang Leonard Cohen's "Hallelujah" at Cornell's memorial.

"The Cornell family is overwhelmed by the heartbreaking news about Chester Bennington which tragically comes so soon after their family's own loss," said a Cornell family spokesperson. "They open up their loving arms to Chester's family and share in the sorrow with all those who loved him."

Cornell died by hanging after a concert in Detroit. Linkin Park was set to go on tour next week.

Bennington helped Linkin Park, whose sound mixed rap and rock, become one of the most commercially successful acts in the 2000s. The Grammywinning group sold more than 10 million copies of their 2000 debut, "Hybrid Theory," which featured the megahit and anthem, "In the End." They sold another 6 million with 2003's multiplatinum "Meteora." Both albums explored feelings of frustration and fury.

The success helped Linkin Park become Billboard's No. 1 act of the decade for rock songs and alternative songs.

Band co-founder and producer Mike Shinoda said on Twitter he was "shocked and saddened."

"Chester Bennington was an artist of extraordinary talent and charisma, and a human being with a huge heart and a caring soul. Our thoughts and prayers are with his beautiful family, his band-mates and his many friends," Warner Bros. Records CEO and Chairman Cameron Stang said in a statement.

Beijing says no to Justin Bieber over past 'bad behavior'

BEIJING China's capital says it won't be inviting Justin Bieber to perform in the country because of his past "bad behavior," although it did concede that the Canadian singer has talent.

In response to a question from a purported fan on its web page, the Beijing Municipal Bureau of Culture said it was acting in the interest of imposing standards and order and "cleaning up" the domestic performance market.

It said Bieber's "bad behavior," including in his private life abroad and while in China to perform, had caused "public dissatisfaction." It did not provide details.

Bieber performed in Beijing, Shanghai and the eastern city of Dalian in 2013.

"Justin Bieber is a young foreign singer ing but also controversial," the bureau said.

"Therefore, it's not appropriate to bring in artists who show bad behavior," it said. "However, in the process of growing up and improving his words and deeds, he can truly develop into a singer who is beloved of the masses," it added.

Bieber, 23, has had numerous run-ins with police around the who is talented at sing- world. During his 2013 visit to China he drew criticism when pictures showed him being carried up the Great Wall of China by a pair of bodyguards. Bieber's "Purpose World Tour" wraps up in Asia in September with performances in Tokyo, the semiautonomous Chinese territory of Hong Kong, the Philippines, Singapore and Indonesia.
