BSJSH robotics class gets hands on robots thanks to company's donation

 When SM Energy donated $10,000 to Big Spring Junior High last spring, the money was earmarked for the initiation of a robotics program. Billy Morgan, the science department head at the junior high, volunteered to lead the effort on-campus. The 22 BSJHS students accepted to the program started programming as soon as the school year started. The robots were ordered during the summer, and arrived about a month ago. The students have been learning how to make the robots perform simple tasks. An event held Monday at SM Energy in Midland was led by a Texas Tech University professor, and was intended to introduce the students to the kinds of challenges they'll face when they travel to robotics competitions in the spring.

Big Spring High School golfer receives scholarship, plans to go pro

By ERIN STEPHENS
 Staff Writer

The first school semester of 2017 is coming to a close and the holiday season is here. For Big Spring High School senior Nolan Otto, Christmas came a little early this year. On Nov. 11, Otto was presented with a golf scholarship from the University of Texas at the Permian Basin in Odessa.

Otto

"It's not too uncommon for high school golfers to receive scholarships, but they're extremely difficult to obtain," said BSHS golf coach Ariel Falcon. "Most colleges don't just look at your high school resume alone, but also consider how a student performs at what are called 'junior tournaments' like the West Texas Junior Open, New Year Classic, and Sherwin Cox Shootout, to name a few." The organizations named by Falcon hold tournaments for junior high and high school golfers, but aren't associated with the high school golf team. The Sherwin Cox Shootout was Otto's first national win, and after playing at the New Year Classic, he realized he could play at the most elite level.

asked Otto how he played against the prospective golfer. After Otto explained that he performed just as well as the other golfer, the recruiter offered him a scholarship right away.

"I noticed that Otto was gifted within the first week of working with him," said Falcon. "He strikes the ball like a PGA professional and his bad days are what most golfers wish their good days were like. I was out there practicing with him every day, and it was easy to tell this kid just had a different aura about him."

Otto has aspirations of becoming a PGA Tour professional.

"Due to his unparalleled work ethic, I fully see his dreams coming true," said Falcon. "Along with being a phenomenal golfer, he's an intelligent and extremely likable person," he went on. "He's very involved with his church, is third in his senior class, and I feel blessed to have him as one of my student athletes; he's definitely the golf standard of students here at Big Spring High."

Falcon has been coaching the golf team and teaching English at BSHS since July of 2016. The high school team's

According to Falcon, Otto competed against a golfer that was recruited by UTPB earlier this year. After the tournament, the recruiter asked for Otto's contact information. During his first phone call to him, the recruiter

'This is happening': GOP revels in all-but-certain tax deal

By STEPHEN OHLEMACHER and MARCY GORDON

Associated Press
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans working to execute their first major legislative achievement of Donald Trump's presidency appear to have secured the votes to pass a massive tax overhaul that Trump hoped to present to the American people for Christmas.

"This is happening. Tax reform under Republican control of Washington is happening," House Speaker Paul Ryan of Wisconsin told rank-and-file members in a conference call Friday. "Most critics out there didn't think it could happen. ... And now we're on the doorstep of something truly historic."

It's the widest-ranging reshaping of the tax code in three decades and is expected to add to the nation's $20 trillion debt. The tax cuts are projected to add $1.46 trillion over a decade. The GOP plans to muscle it through

Deadly California wildfire continues to grow

Los Angeles Fire Department Fire Arson Counter-Terrorism investigators check a burned out homeless camp after a brush fire erupted in the hills in Elysian Park in Los Angeles Thursday, Dec. 14, 2017. The National Weather Service said extreme fire danger conditions could last through the weekend due to lack of moisture along with a likely increase in wind speeds.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Calming winds Friday gave firefighters a chance to gain ground against a huge wildfire in coastal mountains northwest of Los Angeles but the blaze continued to surge west, endangering thousands of homes, as forecasts called for a renewal of gusty winds.

The so-called Thomas Fire, the fourth-largest in California history, was 35 percent contained Friday night after sweeping across 400 square miles (about 1,036 sq. kilometers) of Ventura and Santa Barbara counties since it erupted Dec. 4.

Between Thursday night and Friday morning, the blaze claimed another 3,000 acres as it fed on brush and timber killed by California's long drought or a week of hot, dry weather.

Santa Barbara has had only a tiny amount of rain since Oct. 1, the start of the new water year, and is more than 3 inches (7.6 centimeters) below normal to date.

Firefighters continued to carve firebreaks above the communities of Santa Barbara, Carpinteria, Summerland and Montecito and state fire officials said evacuations would be called as needed as flames advanced.

The fire already has destroyed more than 1,000 buildings, including well over 700 homes, and threatens 18,000 more structures.

Another focus of firefighting was on the eastern flank in canyons where a state firefighter was killed Thursday near the agricultural town of Fillmore.

The death of Cory Iverson, 32, was announced by Chief Ken Pimlott of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection but he released no information about the circumstances, citing an ongoing investigation by an accident review team.

Iverson was an engineer with a strike team from the San Diego area and had been with Cal Fire since 2009. He is survived by his wife, who is pregnant, and a 2-year-old daughter, as well as his parents and other family.

The National Weather Service forecast extreme fire danger or "red flag" conditions through at least Saturday evening, with winds gusting to 40 mph in the Santa Barbara County mountains where the fire is burning. Firefighters were facing first northerly "sundowner" winds through the night that could turn into northeasterly Santa Ana winds, driving the flames in another direction.

Everything about the fire was massive, from a footprint larger than that of many cities to the sheer scale of destruction that cremated entire neighborhoods or the legions attacking it: more than 8,000 firefighters from nearly a dozen states, aided by 32 helicopters and 78 bulldozers.

Firefighting costs were approaching $89 million.

Meanwhile, firefighters continued to deal with the loss of their own. All 17 of the firefighters on Cory Iverson's five-engine strike team were pulled off the fire lines after his death.

On Thursday night, Ventura County Sheriff Geoff Dean called for a moment of silence during a meeting for Fillmore residents.

"As I was up in the canyon and I watched his fire brethren remove his flag-draped body from the canyon in the hills above where we sit right here, I couldn't help but think about his pregnant wife and his young daughter who will never see their husband and father again," Dean said.

TAX

Congress next week before its year-end break.

Under the bill, today's 35 percent rate on corporations would fall to 21 percent, the crown jewel of the measure for many Republicans. Trump and GOP leaders had set 20 percent as their goal but added a point to free money for other tax cuts that won over wavering lawmakers in final talks.

The legislation would lower taxes on the richest Americans. Benefits for most other taxpayers would be smaller.

The bill would repeal an important part of President Barack Obama's Affordable Care Act — the requirement that all Americans have health insurance or face a penalty — as the GOP looks to unravel a law it failed to repeal and replace this past summer.

Only on Friday did Republicans cement the needed support for the overhaul, securing endorsements from wavering senators.

Marco Rubio of Florida relented in his high-profile opposition after negotiators expanded the tax credit that parents can claim for their children. He said he would vote for the measure next week.

Rubio had been holding out for a bigger child credit for low-income families. After he got it, he tweeted that the change was "a solid step toward broader reforms which are both Pro-Growth and Pro-Worker."

Sen. Bob Corker of Tennessee, the only Republican to vote against the Senate version earlier this month, made the surprise announcement that he would back the legislation. Corker, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has repeatedly warned that the nation's growing debt is the most serious threat to national security.

"I realize this is a bet on our country's enterprising spirit, and that is a bet I am willing to make," Corker said.

The White House said Trump "looks forward to fulfilling the promise he made to the American people to give them a tax cut by the end of the year."

The bill embodies a long-standing Republican philosophy that a substantial tax break for businesses will trigger economic growth and job creation for Americans in a trickle-down economy.

Skeptical Democrats are likely to oppose the legislation unanimously.

"Under this bill, the working class, middle class and upper middle class get skewered while the rich and wealthy corporations make out like bandits," said Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer of New York. "It is just the opposite of what America needs, and Republicans will rue the day they pass this."

The bill would drop today's 39.6 percent top rate on individuals to 37 percent. The standard deduction — used by around two-thirds of households — would be nearly doubled, to $24,000 for married couples.

The $1,000-per-child tax deduction would grow to $2,000, with up to $1,400 available in IRS refunds for families who owe little or no taxes. Parents would have to provide children's Social Security numbers to receive the child tax credit, a measure intended to deny the credit to people who are in the U.S. illegally.

Those who itemize would lose some deductions. The deduction that millions use in connection with state and local income, property and sales taxes would be capped at $10,000. That's especially important to residents of high-tax states such as New York, New Jersey and California. Deductions for medical expenses that lawmakers once considered eliminating would be retained.

The bill would allow homeowners to deduct interest only on the first $750,000 of a new mortgage, down from the current limit of $1 million.

People who inherit fortunes would get a big break. The bill would double the exemption, meaning the estate tax would apply only to the portion of an estate over $22 million for married couples.

Members of a House-Senate conference committee signed the final version of the legislation Friday, sending it to the two chambers for final passage next week. They have been working to blend the different versions passed by the two houses.

Republicans hold a slim 52-48 majority in the Senate, and two ailing GOP senators missed votes this past week.

John McCain of Arizona, who is 81, is at a Washington-area military hospital being treated for the side effects of brain cancer treatment, and 80-year-old Thad Cochran of Mississippi had a non-melanoma lesion removed from his nose earlier this week. GOP leaders are hopeful they will be available next week.

The North Pole of Texas

Alan Screws grew up on his family's dairy farm 4 miles north of Pickton in northeast Texas. He has turned part of the farm into what he calls THE NORTH POLE OF TEXAS which features lighted Christmas scenes and a fifteen minute train ride that goes across a couple of bridges and right through the middle of a toy shop.

“It’ll stop in the toy shop,” says Alan, “which is a twenty-four by forty foot building. “I got the idea from the mine train at Six Flags, which goes through an old saloon. The toyshop has animated elves in it. Every night Santa is there and talks to everybody on the train and gives them a bag of jellybeans. The words Happy Birthday Jesus are printed on each bag.”

The place has become a major tourist attraction. Thirty volunteers help.

TUMBLEWEED SMITH

“Back in 1997, we built a small train and I thought it would just be to carry children around in our yard at Christmas time. I found out pretty quick that adults like to ride, too. So we built a bigger train for the adults. We soon ran out of room in our front yard to run the trains so we got permission from the county commissioners to build a bridge over the county road to get to the other side of our property. Soon we built another bridge. The crowds kept growing and we started having two or three hundred a night, then four hundred and six hundred, then a thousand. We’ve had up to two thousand people ride in one night. Some folks have waited up to two or three hours for a ride. This is our twentieth year. Last year we hit our one hundred thousandth ride. It’s all free. We’ve got four trains now so we can give about four hundred rides an hour. While people are waiting in line we have big TV monitors that show me reading the Christmas story. We’ve had as many as 800 waiting in line. Commissioners have let us build a by-pass on the county road so traffic can be diverted and people can stand in line on the county road. We have a Christmas cabin where the people can come in and visit with Mrs. Claus and take pictures with her. We have Kim’s hot chocolate factory, Kim’s my wife, where we give away the best hot chocolate you’ll ever want to drink. We always have a live nativity scene. We have a huge Texas-sized sleigh that you can put your whole family in and take pictures.”

Alan, who used to race cars and pickups on dirt tracks, is mechanically minded and built the trains. One of the displays features racecars. One on a pond has jet skis.

“The train engine is a Kubota tractor that we built a cab around and put a nose on it like a train. We put a smoke machine on the front so it smokes like a train. And it has a bell on it. Each train has three passenger cars that carry 8 to 10 people each.”

The ride starts Thanksgiving weekend and operates until December twenty-third. It runs from six to nine PM. The address is 227 CR 3378, Pickton.

“It an experience. People need to come out and enjoy the true meaning of Christmas with us.”

Dear Lord, teach us to forgive and not judge others, but to love them as You love us. Amen.

More than a timepiece

Now and again, a news story piques our consciousness with greater impact than carefully prepared ads. Such was the case a few months ago when ABC News ran a story about a couple whose appreciation for a physician runs deep. They credited a doctor for saving both the mother's life, as well as the baby she birthed. Months later, they were indebted for his saving the infant's life a second time. To express their thanks, they gave him a handsome wristwatch. A close-up provided by TV cameras revealed the “Bulova” name on the watch face.

This account evoked many long ago memories. It served to remind me how much I missed my Bulova Accutron watch I've worn for more than 25 years. No, the watch didn't fail, but a well-intentioned drugstore sales guy did almost two years ago when he insisted on installing my new battery. Figuring I'd botch the installation—and was several hundred miles away from my jeweler in Texas—I appreciated the offer. Hours later, retiring for the evening, I noticed the back of my watch was missing when I placed it on the nightstand.

Striving to remain optimistic, I sought a jeweler with an extra back for a watch manufactured almost 30 years ago. For months, I struck out, until chancing to visit “Best Jewelers” in Tyler, TX. There, owner Aaron Berry offered a glimmer of hope, suggesting that the part might be found on the Internet. It wasn't.

However, Bulova officials in New York City thought they could locate one, and sure enough, they did. It was sent immediately to Aaron, and my watch is now back on my wrist.

I consider it a Christmas present to myself, and am grateful that Bulova's Robert Christiano, Executive Vice President, Global Marketing, was immediately empathetic. As we spoke on the phone, he said he was viewing his own favorite wristwatch; it happens to be an Accutron.

This vignette ignited memories of “growing up” years in Brown County, TX, when we gathered around radios (dining on frozen radio dinners, of course) for nightly entertainment provided by network programming (mostly 30-minute comedy shows).

Bulova ads led the way. One proclaimed, “Bulova watch time-B-U-L-O-V-A-is 7:30 p.m.,” or whatever time it was.

Another one pitched the timepiece to be “on your wrist faithfully forever.”

Modest research reveals that Bulova watches date back to 1875, when Joseph Bulova introduced what has become an iconic brand.

Bulova remains headquartered in NYC, and now has eight international offices and distribution in 65 cities. It remains at the forefront of the timepiece industry.

“Firsts” by Bulova include radio and television ads, 1926 and 1941, respectively. They proclaimed that “America runs on Bulova time.” The company introduced clock radios in 1928 and has provided timing instruments for satellites. Also, pilots in the fastest airplane ever made have depended on these timepieces. (More about the company's “history of firsts” at www.bulova.com)...

*****
I know. There are many ways today to learn exact time. Grandchildren today cock their heads when I speak of asking my late grandfathers to pull out “pocket watches” so I could hear them tick. (They don't care that my Accutron is the first watch I've owned that doesn't tick, and probably wouldn't be impressed if Niagara Falls started running backwards.)

I recall asking silly pre-school questions, such as, “What happens when the watch quits ticking?”

Each grandfather's answer was, of course, “I wind it.”

As more than a “Christmasy twist,” I offer these suggestions. Don't try to impress grandkids with your watch, unless it does animal tricks. Use the children mostly to help out with computer and smart phone usage.

When your watch battery “kaps,” visit a jeweler. If I'm in Tyler, I'll visit Best Jewelers. If in Burleson, TX, my hometown, I'll head to Bobby Woolard's store.

I trust them both, but may apply Scotch tape to the watch back for a few days, just in case.

Grand jury: Penn State showed 'shocking apathy' to drinking

AP photo

District Attorney Stacy Parks Miller holds a news conference regarding a grand jury's report in the wake of a fraternity pledge's drinking death on Friday, Dec. 15, 2017 at the Courthouse Annex in Bellefonte, Pa. Twenty-six people face criminal charges related to the Feb. 4 death of 19-year-old Tim Piazza, after he consumed a dangerous amount of alcohol during a pledge bid night.

By MARC LEVY

Associated Press
BELLEFONTE, Pa. (AP) — A grand jury's report in the wake of a fraternity pledge's drinking death said Friday that Penn State officials displayed "a shocking apathy" to dangers from excessive drinking and that its inaction allowed criminal acts to occur.

Penn State strongly objected to that characterization in a 144-page report released by a district attorney in Pennsylvania, saying it made extraordinary efforts to combat drinking and hazing.

The report recommends a series of changes that the school should undertake in the wake of the death of 19-year-old Tim Piazza in February.

It pointed to numerous assaults, injuries or alcohol-related emergencies in the last several years involving fraternities, and said it is unreasonable for Penn State to disavow all accountability for its failure to reform the fraternity system.

Centre County District Attorney Stacy Parks Miller said the grand jury found that Penn State officials knew enough about the abuse of drinking and hazing in the fraternity system to have been more proactive to stop it.

"They found that they knew a great deal of it, and that they should know the rest. If they didn't know, it was a deliberate, like, 'don't want to know,'" Parks Miller said at a news conference.

As far back as 2009, Penn State officials were "remarkably undisturbed" by allegations of heavy alcohol consumption at one particular fraternity and showed a "shocking apathy to the potential danger associated with doing nothing."

In a 70-page response to the report submitted to the judge, Penn State said it has aggressively promoted safety and accountability in the fraternity system, in 2009 and before that, and should not be criticized for not doing more.

However, Penn State said its efforts are limited by the unwillingness of national fraternities, their associations, undergraduate members and alumni "to challenge behavior that has been accepted for years across the nation" and accept major change.

It said parents have at times aided fraternity efforts to violate school rules and state laws over underage drinking. State hazing and underage drinking laws are weak, Penn State said, and contended that the grand jury had struggled to provide a single recommendation to help the university fight dangerous student drinking and hazing.

Parks Miller called Penn State's response to the report "defensive and somewhat demeaning."

Penn State permanently banned Beta Theta Pi in March, saying its investigation after Piazza's death found a persistent pattern of excessive and forced drinking, hazing and drug use and sales. Piazza's death occurred two days after he suffered a series of falls and consumed a dangerous amount of alcohol during a pledge bid night.

Nationally, the deaths of at least four fraternity pledges this year have helped fuel a re-examination of Greek life at some colleges.

The report calls on state lawmakers to pass stronger laws to deter hazing and underage drinking. It also calls on Penn State to regulate drinking itself, rather than make a fraternity council responsible, and for the university to expel students involved in hazing after they are "afforded full due process rights."

"Anything less will fail to operate as a truly effective deterrent," the report said.

The fraternity council's system of monitoring fraternity parties employs a private security firm that is unable to stop dangerous behavior. Parks Miller called them "glorified baby-sitters" and the grand jury said the guards' testimony "paints the picture of a brazen Greek

Trump touts loyalty to police but delivers attack on FBI

By JONATHAN LEMIRE and ZEKE MILLER

Associated Press
QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Taking aim at the credibility of the FBI, President Donald Trump unleashed a blistering attack on the bureau's leadership even as he praised state and local police officers as a bulwark against rising violence and crime.

Trump denounced the bureau for its handling of the Hillary Clinton email investigation, calling it "really disgraceful" and continuing his practice of questioning his country's intelligence and law enforcement institutions like no president before.

"It's a shame what's happened with the FBI," the president said. "We're going to rebuild the FBI, it'll be bigger and better than ever, but it is very sad when you look at those documents, and how they've done that is really, really disgraceful and you have a lot of very angry people that are seeing it."

The president's broadside appeared to originate in anger over revelations that senior FBI officials exchanged anti-Trump and pro-Hillary Clinton text messages while working on last year's Clinton probe and during special counsel Robert Mueller investigation into whether Trump associates colluded with Russian officials in the 2016 election.

In a head-spinning sequence, Trump laced into the bureau as he was set to depart for its training academy in Virginia, where he lavished praise on graduates of a weeks-long FBI National Academy program for law enforcement leaders from around the country.

He praised the graduates, who were trained on FBI standards, touting their accomplishments and pledging his unwavering support. Trump told law enforcement leaders he is "more loyal than anyone else could be" to police.

"Anti-police sentiment is wrong and it's dangerous," he added. "Anyone who kills a police officer should get the death penalty."

Trump depicted a nation besieged by violence, using dark rhetoric that was a stark departure from the language of his predecessors. He evoked this week's attempted terror attack in New York when he called for stricter immigration policies. He also delivered a stern warning to members of the international gang MS-13 that his administration will root them out and arrest them.

Trump celebrated his decision to make it easier for local police forces to purchase surplus military equipment, and questioned rising violence in Chicago.

"What the hell is going on in Chicago? What the hell is happening there?" asked Trump returning to a favorite campaign target.

The law enforcement crowd often chuckled and applauded its approval. Trump has often appeared at ease in front of police groups and loves to suggest that they supported him in last year's campaign.

Violent crime has increased nationally the last two years but has dropped precipitously over the last quarter century. Gun violence in Chicago has dropped in 2017 from 2016 and of Dec. 10 there had been 620 homicides compared to 730 at the same time last year.

Hours before Trump's speech, White House Deputy press secretary Hogan Gidley told Fox News Channel that edits to former FBI Director James Comey's statement on Clinton's private email server and anti-Trump texts from a top agent are "deeply troubling."

"There is extreme bias against this president with high-up members of the team there at the FBI who were investigating Hillary Clinton at the time," Gidley charged, as Mueller pushes on with a probe of possible Trump campaign ties to Russia. Gidley says Trump maintains confidence in the FBI's rank-and-file.

Edits to the Comey draft appeared to soften the gravity of the bureau's finding in its 2016 investigation of Hillary Clinton's use of a private email server while secretary of state.

"It is very sad when you look at those documents, how they've done that is really, really disgraceful, and you have a lot of really angry people who are seeing it," Trump said of the document.

Gidley said the disclosure of politically charged text messages sent by one of the agents on the Clinton case, Peter Strzok, were "eye-opening." Strzok, who was in the room as Clinton was interviewed, was later assigned to special counsel Robert Mueller's team to investigate potential community who freely flout (fraternity council) regulations and criminal laws without any fear of reprisal."

When the fraternity council received reports of violations, it controlled whether to pass the information on to Penn State, and what sort of penalties to mete out, the grand jury said.

Penn State said it has taken over the primary role in monitoring and disciplining fraternities for alcohol-related violations, hazing, sexual assault and disruptive social gatherings. If it finds that a chapter jeopardized a student by hazing, the school will permanently revoke its recognition, it said. Penn State said it has revoked recognition of 13 fraternity and sorority chapters in the past two years, or one in six.

After Piazza's death, Penn State imposed an immediate ban on alcohol and social functions at fraternities.

A police lieutenant told the grand jury that, during the crackdown, the St. Patrick's Day holiday was quiet and without the usual reports of public urination, blowout parties and public disturbances.

White House signals Western Wall has to be part of Israel

By KEN THOMAS

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP)

— Senior Trump administration officials outlined their view Friday that Jerusalem's Western Wall ultimately will be declared a part of Israel, in another declaration sure to enflame passions among Palestinians and others in the Middle East.

Although they said the ultimate borders of the holy city must be resolved through Israeli-Palestinian negotiations, the officials — speaking ahead of Vice President Mike Pence's trip to the region — essentially ruled out any scenario that didn't maintain Israeli control over the holiest ground in Judaism. The issue is sensitive because the wall is beyond Israel's pre-1967 borders and abuts some of the Islamic world's most revered sites.

"We cannot envision any situation under which the Western Wall would not be part of Israel. But as the president said, the specific boundaries of sovereignty of Israel are going to be part of the final status agreement," a senior administration official said. Another official later added by email, "We note that we cannot imagine Israel would sign a peace agreement that didn't include the Western Wall."

The officials spoke on condition of anonymity to discuss details of the vice president's upcoming trip.

Nabil Abu Rdeneh, a senior adviser to Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas, reacted indignantly to the comments.

"We will not accept any changes on the borders of east Jerusalem, which was occupied in 1967," Abu Rdeneh told The Associated Press. "This statement proves once again that this American administration is outside the peace process. The continuation of this American policy, whether the recognition of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel, or moving the American embassy, or such statements, by which the United States decides unilaterally on the issues of the final status negotiations, are a violation of international law and strengthen the Israeli occupation. For us, this is unacceptable. We totally reject it. And we totally denounce it."

Pence plans to visit the Western Wall next week. The administration officials said he would be accompanied by a rabbi to preserve the spiritual nature of his planned visit to the hallowed wall in Jerusalem's Old City. The officials said Pence's Wednesday visit would be conducted in a similar manner to when President Donald Trump visited in May.

In this Dec. 6, 2017, photo, Vice President Mike Pence listens as President Donald Trump speaks in the Diplomatic Reception Room of the White House, Wednesday, Dec. 6, 2017, in Washington. Senior Trump administration officials outlined their view on Dec. 15, that Jerusalem's Western Wall ultimately will be declared a part of Israel, in another declaration sure to enflame passions among Palestinians and others in the Middle East. Although they said the ultimate borders of the holy city must be resolved through Israeli-Palestinian negotiations, the officials, speaking ahead of Pence's trip to the region, essentially ruled out any scenario that didn't maintain Israeli control over the holiest ground in Judaism.

Jerusalem's status has been a central issue in the decades-long Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Trump's announcement last week declaring Jerusalem to be Israel's capital shook up decades of U.S. foreign policy and countered an international consensus that Jerusalem's status should be decided in negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians, who claim east Jerusalem as the capital of their future state.

Pence plans to depart for the Middle East on Tuesday after presiding over the Senate's vote on a sweeping tax overhaul. The vice president will meet Wednesday with Egyptian President Abdel-Fattah el-Sissi in Cairo and then travel to Israel. Pence's two-plus days in Israel will include meetings with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, a speech at the Knesset and a visit to the Yad Vashem Holocaust memorial.

Trump's recognition of Jerusalem as Israel's capital has sparked protests in the Middle East, and Abbas pulled out of a planned meeting with Pence. Abbas had originally been scheduled to host Pence, a devout Christian, in the biblical West Bank town of Bethlehem.

A third senior administration official noted the reaction to the Jerusalem decision and "a lot of the emotions that have been displayed on that." The official said Pence's trip is viewed as part of "the ending of that chapter and the beginning of what I would say the next chapter."

Trump officials said Pence would reinforce Trump's announcement coordination between Russia and the Trump campaign. He was re-assigned after the messages were uncovered this summer.

With the attack, the White House joined a growing movement among the conservative media and some Republicans to question the integrity of Mueller's investigation.

About 200 leaders in law enforcement from around the country attended the weeks-long FBI National Academy program at Quantico aimed at raising law enforcement standards and cooperation. Coursework included intelligence theory, terrorism and terrorist mindsets, law, behavioral science, law enforcement communication, and forensic science.

2-time terror survivor's message to attackers: I forgive you

By WILLIAM J. KOLE

Associated Press

BOSTON (AP) — A man who survived two terror attacks has a message for the assailants: I forgive you.

Mason Wells was a short distance from one of the two bombs that exploded near the finish line of the Boston Marathon in 2013, killing three spectators and wounding 260 others.

Three years later, Wells was wounded when a bomb exploded at the airport in Brussels.

On Friday, the 20-year-old missionary from Sandy, Utah, released a video addressing the attackers. In the clip recorded for the news website Mic, Wells said: "What you did was evil. You killed innocent people and you ended meaningful lives."

"I still carry scars from that day," he said, adding: "But I have chosen to forgive you. I have learned that the decision to forgive is ours and ours alone."

Wells said he's chosen not to live in fear "and I've chosen to make every single day another day to be grateful for."

Wells narrowly escaped injury in the attack at the marathon, where he was standing with his father 60 yards (55 meters) from one of the bombs to cheer for his mother, who was running.

In the 2016 attack at Brussels' Zaventem International Airport, he suffered burns to his face and hands, shrapnel and blast wounds to his legs and other injuries that required extensive treatment and rehabilitation. Wells was serving as a Mormon missionary in Belgium at the time. Thirty-two people were killed and more than 300 wounded in explosions at the airport and in a subway.

At the time, acknowledging his two brushes with death, Wells told reporters from his hospital bed — his face wrapped in bandages — that he's convinced "there's someone greater than us who's watching over us."

Wells recovered and wrote a book about his ordeal. He's now enrolled at the U.S. Naval Academy, where he's studying engineering.

Friday's video was directed primarily at the Brussels suicide bombers, brothers Khalid and Ibrahim El-Bakraoui.

"By forgiving you and getting past the events of that day, I've become a stronger person," he said.

"It's about letting go of yesterday and not letting the hardest moments of our lives define us."

on Jerusalem, but the administration also understands the Palestinians may need a cooling-off period.

Israel captured the Old City, home to important Jewish, Christian and Muslim religious sites, along with the rest of east Jerusalem in the 1967 war. The U.S. has never recognized Israeli sovereignty over territory occupied in 1967, including east Jerusalem. For this reason, U.S. officials have refused to say explicitly that the wall is part of Israel.

The Western Wall, a retaining wall from the biblical Jewish Temple, is considered the holiest site where Jews can pray. Israel controls the wall and treats it like Israeli territory, routinely holding solemn state ceremonies there.

It is widely assumed that Israel would retain control over the site under a potential peace deal. But complicating any deal is the adjacent hilltop site revered by Muslims as the Noble Sanctuary and Jews as the Temple Mount. The compound is home to Al Aqsa Mosque, the third-holiest site in Islam, and is where the Jewish Temple once stood. It is considered the holiest site in Judaism.

The Forsan Lady Buffaloes got their first district win of the season, dominating the Winters Blizzards 47-29 Friday night at the Forsan gym.

The win ups Forsan's record to 1-1 in district play and 11-5 overall. This was Winters' first district game, and the loss moves them to 12-6 for the season.

After suffering a district loss to Christoval on Tuesday, the Lady Buffs stamped back with authority in front of the home crowd. The Forsan front line was simply too much for Winters to deal with. Chasidy Grantham, Emily Garcia, and Jenna Evans had a big height advantage over Winters and they put it to good use. Forsan controlled the boards, at times getting two and three shots at the basket.

Forsan held a decisive 32-17 rebounding edge. Evans, who stayed in foul trouble, fouled out in the fourth quarter, but still contributed seven points. Garcia led Forsan with 13 points and 13 rebounds. Grantham added nine points and 11 rebounds. Forsan coach Lloyd Vedder liked the way his team ran their offense.

"We took advantage of what we had," said Vedder. "We ran the offense and started working the pick and roll really well. Against

The message from head coach Byron Seal to his team was clear during the final minute of the game Friday afternoon after his Bulldogettes came back from an 11 point deficit in the second half of play.

"Just pass the ball," he said as he looked into his players eyes.

"You don't have to shoot. Just pass the ball. Be smart basketball players."

Following his order was a little more difficult as the Wellmon-Union Wildcats drew multiple fouls in a desperate attempt to get Coahoma to turn over the ball.

However, it was the Bulldogettes who walked away with the win 44-38 at the Sands Lady Stangs Holiday Hoopapalooza in Ackerly.

After Wellman-Union went on a run to pad their lead in the second, Makayla Overton nailed a goal behind the arc to put three more points up for the

Junior High Girls

Both Bulldogettes 7th grade A and B teams lost to the Clyde Lady Bulldogs in junior high basketball action Monday night at home.

Successful baskets were hard to come by in the first quarter of play of the 7th Grade A team. Shae Long, who was quick on steals all game long, successfully sank one in to put up points for Coahoma but the Bulldogettes would head into the second quarter behind 5-2.

Coahoma's Christian Everett nailed a successful field goal for the first points of the second quarter, followed shortly after by Sterling Clanton to narrow Clyde's lead to 1 point. However, the Lady Bulldogs went on a scoring run and kept offensive control of the rest of the game.

The Bulldogettes were unable to take over the lead in the second half even with strong efforts by Long, Marianna Glover and Jocelyn Young, who accounted for three points stemming from her success at the charity stripe. The 7th Grade Bulldogette A team lost the match with a final score of 27-16.

Coahoma's Paige Carlile was able to bury a shot off in the last seconds of the 7th Grade B game, but the score wasn't enough to overcome the 12 point deficit created by Lady Bulldogs in basketball action held at the Coahoma High School gym. The B team lost with a final score of 22-10.

The Lady Bulldogs were quick to rack up 8 points in the first quarter without an answer from Coahoma. Delaney Chandler dropped in two field goals for the 'Dogettes in the second, and one more in the fourth. Chandler was tough all night on

Boys JV

The Coahoma High Schools boys JV team lost to the Midessa Warriors 43-21 in basketball action held in the Coahoma ISD competition gym Tuesday night.

Coahoma's Justin Marsh dropped the ball into net as the buzzer sounded to end the first quarter, which helped narrow the 'Dogs deficit to only 10 points. Marsh also started off the second quarter nailing a goal behind arc but the Warriors had an answer as they quickly sank a three-pointer of their own. Damian Bulldogettes before they headed to the locker room for the half.

Returning for the third quarter, the Coahoma girls came back energized and went on a four-goal run thanks to the accurate hands of Overton, Abbie Lopez, and Caitlyn Corley. The 'Dogettes continued to chip away at the Wildcats lead coming within a 1 point deficit thanks to a field goal by Jovi Gonzales and a solid three-point basket from Cassie Grant.

Corley would push Coahoma over to a one point lead by burying a basket for 2, but Wellmon-Union answered right back and surged ahead once more. Makynee Overton would then step up to the charity stripe to tie up the game.

Fouls definitely played a factor in this physically tough game. Both teams racked up at least 10 fouls a piece before the game ended. Gonzales put the lead back into Coahoma's favor at the free throw line just to see it tied again by a Wellmon-Union. The game went into the last quarter with the score knotted at 32s.

However the tie was quickly broken by Gonzales with a field goal early in the fourth quarter. With Wellmon-Union playing aggressive basketball, the 'Dogettes met the challenge and began to pull ahead slowly.

After catching a throw from across the court, Makayla Overton successfully dropped the ball into the net for 2 while being fouled by a Wellmon-Union player. The senior Bulldogette easily sank her free throw to convert the three-point play.

Fouls began to cost the Wildcats as Coahoma took advantage of the easy scores to extend their lead. The win put Coahoma 1-1 for the tournament. The Coahoma girls were scheduled to play Smyer Saturday at noon.

Winters played Forsan close the first quarter thanks to a hot start from Monica Smith, who scored the first five points of the game. Smith would lead Winters with nine points in the contest. The Lady Buffs came back as Mikahela Willard fed Grantham inside for a basket and Grantham did likewise to teammate Haley Patterson for a bucket. Forsan led 16-12 after one.

Forsan took control of the game after that, limiting the Blizzards to nine points the next two quarters. Meanwhile the Forsan guards got the ball inside to Garcia, Grantham nailed a three-pointer and Forsan remained well in control. After a basket by Macey Evans, Forsan led 40-19 late in the third quarter. The game was well in hand.

Winters coach Val Acree had high praise for Forsan. "Forsan is not just tall, they are very good," said Acree. "Coach Vedder does a good job with them. We've seen some good teams this season and Forsan is one of them. Oh well, we get one more chance at them."

The Lady Buffs will host Miles Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.

Paul, Rockets rout Spurs 124-109 for 12th straight victory

Houston Rockets forward P.J. Tucker, left, is guarded by San Antonio Spurs guard Tony Parker (9) in the first half of an NBA basketball game Friday, Dec. 15, 2017, in Houston.

HOUSTON (AP) — Chris Paul delivered on a night James Harden had one of his worst shooting performances of the season.

Paul had 28 points, eight assists and seven steals to lead the Houston Rockets to their 12th straight victory, a 124-109 win over the San Antonio Spurs on Friday.

Paul became the first player in NBA history to post 28 points, eight assists and seven steals in a game against the Spurs. In the past 11 seasons, that stat line has been achieved just 10 times — Paul has done it six of them. The Rockets are unbeaten when he plays this season.

"What I lack in athletic ability, I just try to make up for it in anticipation and knowing the game," Paul said of his steals. "I'm not jumping and dunking on nobody and all that stuff like that, but I've got a pretty good idea how to play."

Paul's dazzling performance came with Harden making 6 of 18 from the field, including 2 of 11 from 3. Harden still had 28 points, seven rebounds and six assists, scoring half his points on 14-of-16 shooting from the free throw line.

"We complement each other, and we're staying good at getting guys involved while we're being aggressive as well," Harden said. "Obviously, Chris had his shot going tonight, but he got Clint (Capela) dunks and Trevor (Ariza) and Eric (Gordon) 3s, and Ryan (Anderson) 3s. Nights aren't going to be perfect, and we just got to figure it out. Keep pushing and keep grinding."

The Rockets are on the fourth-longest win streak in franchise history and the longest since a franchise-best 22 straight in 2007-08.

The Rockets beat the Spurs for just the third time in their last 12 meetings.

LaMarcus Aldridge led the Spurs with 16 points.

"I thought our starting group, our veteran group, started out the game very badly with fouls that were unnecessary, bad communication, turnovers, that sort of thing," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said. "But as the game

Matt Moore dealt from Giants to Rangers for minor leaguers

By JANIE McCAULEY

AP Baseball Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Texas acquired Matt Moore in a trade with the San Francisco Giants on Friday, raising the possibility of four left-handers in the Rangers' rotation.

"As far as the four lefties, generally it's a good thing," Rangers general manager Jon Daniels said. "I realize there's some very heavy right-handed clubs in our division. With the exception of Martin (Perez), the other three guys have been very effective against righties in their career."

Texas sent minor league right-handers Israel Cruz and Sam Wolff to the Giants. The Rangers also received $750,000 in international signing bonus pool allotment from the Giants.

Perez, a 13-game winner, and Cole Hamels, another lefty who won 11 games, were the only holdover Texas starters when the offseason started. Counting Moore, the Rangers have added three options to their rotation.

Right-hander Doug Fister agreed to a $4 million, one-year deal that could be worth up to $11.5 million over two seasons, and lefty Mark Minor received a $28 million, three-year contract.

Minor was a reliever for Kansas City last season but previously was a starter for Atlanta before missing the 2015 and 2016 seasons with shoulder issues. Daniels said the club still intends to prepare Minor as a starter in spring training.

"We talked about when he signed, both he and us are aware that that could change based either one the club, kind of how it's shaping out, or if he has any issues getting stretched out," said Daniels, who is interested in acquiring even more starting pitching.

Right-hander Andrew Cashner, another 11-game winner for Texas, became a free agent after completing a $10 million, one-year deal.

San Francisco last month exercised Moore's $7 million option for 2018. He went 6-15 with a 5.52 ERA in 174 1/3 innings last season, setting a career high for losses, as the Giants finished last in the NL West. He allowed a career-worst 107 earned runs.

"This move allows us to reallocate our resources to address our position player needs," Giants general manager Bobby Evans said. "In addition, we are pleased to add two power arms to our system. Our focus remains to strengthen our outfield defense and our everyday lineup."

Texas went 78-84 and finished third in the AL West behind the World Series champion Houston Astros and the Los Angeles Angels.

San Francisco — last in the NL West in 2017 and having lost out in pursuits of Giancarlo Stanton and Shohei Ohtani — acquired Moore at the 2016 trade deadline from Tampa Bay for third baseman Matt Duffy. The lefty's best season came in 2013, when he was 17-4 with the Rays.

Daniels said the Rangers were interested in acquiring Moore when the Giants got him.

"Part of what was attractive at the time was the contract as well as getting him in his prime years," Daniels said. "It felt like circumstances, the situation allowed us to pick him up for a little bit less than we would have been looking at in the past."

In 2011, Moore pitched seven scoreless innings at the Rangers in his play-off debut in Game 1 of an AL Division Series, allowing just two hits in a 9-0 Tampa Bay victory. The Rangers won the next three games to take the series.

In his only postseason start for the Giants, Moore had 10 strikeouts in eight innings to help San Francisco to a 5-2 lead over the Chicago Cubs in Game 4 of the 2016 NL Division Series. The Cubs rallied in the ninth for a 6-5 victory to win the series on their way to the World Series title.

The 20-year-old Cruz was 3-2 with a 5.91 ERA in three starts and nine relief appearances for the Arizona League Rangers in 2017 this year. Wolff, 26, was 2-3 with a 3.54 ERA and three saves in 16 games at Double-A Frisco this year and 2-2 with a 2.38 ERA in 24 games at Triple-A Round Rock. He had surgery in August to repair a torn right flexor tendon.

went on, I thought the younger guys and the guys that haven't played as much, the energy was great. They took better care of the basketball and were more physical and focused. Our starting group let us down."

The Rockets jumped to a 31-16 lead at the end of the first quarter and led 60-43 at the half. The Rockets entered the fourth quarter with a 92-72 lead.

At 23-4, the Rockets are tied for their best 27-game start in franchise history, matching the 1993-94 season when they won their first championship.

"We can get better," Paul said. "The scary part is when you think you've arrived. We can get better offensively and defensively, but right now, it's just about piling up wins."

Kawhi Leonard played in his second game back after making his season debut on Tuesday night in Dallas after missing the first 27 games of the season with a right quadriceps injury. Leonard, who has been recovering from a quadriceps condition that causes pain and weakness in the knee, started and had 12 points in 17 minutes, all in the first half.

"I want to play and do what I can do to help the team win, but I know the situation I'm in and I've got to take the right steps to get back," Leonard said. "Playing 16 minutes and not playing a full game, it's hard to tell where I'm at. But I think we're taking the right steps."

Before the game, Popovich hinted that Leonard and Tony Parker were unlikely to play Saturday night in Dallas in the second half of San Antonio's back-to-back.

TIP-INS

Spurs: SF Kyle Anderson missed his sixth straight game with a sprained left MCL, but he is progressing well and could return after San Antonio's back-to-back in Houston and Dallas, possibly as early as Monday when the Spurs host the Clippers. ... Danny Green started and played through left groin tightness, scoring two points in 19 minutes.

Rockets: Houston played its first game without Luc Mbah a Moute, who suffered a dislocated right shoulder on Wednesday night against Charlotte. Mbah a Moute could be out 2-3 weeks with the injury. ... The Rockets improved to 19-1 when leading after the third quarter, winning by double digits for the 17th time in 27 games.

SCORING ON THE SPURS

Houston's 124 points were the most San Antonio had allowed in a regulation game since Mar. 8, 2013, in a 136-106 loss to Portland. It was also the most points the Rockets had scored in a regulation game against the Spurs since Apr. 3, 1986, when Houston scored 136.

SAGER STRONG

On the one-year anniversary of the passing of NBA sideline reporter Craig Sager, the Rockets hosted Sager's wife, Stacy, along with other family and friends at the game. There was a tribute video played in the first quarter, and both the Rockets and Spurs donated $25,000 to the Sager-Strong Foundation. The First Shot was attempted by Sager's daughter, Riley Sager. Sager swished her pre-game free throw attempt, securing a $5,000 donation from the Rockets to the SagerStrong Foundation.

ANOTHER ONE

The Rockets hit a Spurs opponent season-high 18 3-pointers. Houston improved to 18-0 when making 15 or more 3s. The 18 games with 15 or more 3s made is already the fourth-highest single-season total in NBA history.

Retiring NYT publisher to be replaced by his son

NEW YORK (AP) — The publisher of The New York Times Co. is stepping down after 25 years and will be succeeded by his 37-year-old son, the Times announced Thursday.

Arthur O. Sulzberger Jr. will retire as of Dec. 31 but will remain as chairman of the board of directors, the Times said. His son and current deputy publisher, Arthur Gregg Sulzberger, will take over as publisher.

"It is the greatest honor to serve The Times — and the people who make it what it is — as the next publisher," the younger Sulzberger, known as A.G., said in a staffwide email.

Sulzberger praised his father as "the only publisher of his generation who took the reins of a great news organization and left it even better than he found."

A.G. Sulzberger will be the fifth generation of the Ochs-Sulzberger family to serve as publisher since Adolph Ochs, his great great-grandfather, bought the Times in 1896.

The outgoing publisher, who is 66, took over from his own father, Arthur O. Sulzberger, in 1992 and went on to preside during an era of rapid change brought on by the rise of digital media.

The Times published its first color photo in 1993 and its first web edition in 1996.

The newspaper's 2011 move to charge online readers through a pay wall was watched closely, with some doubting consumers would pay for content they were used to getting for free. The Times now has 3.5 million subscribers, 2.5 million of them paying for digital-only content.

"It has been an extraordinary honor to serve as publisher of The New York Times and I will step down at the end of the year prouder than I have ever been of the strength, independence and integrity of this institution," Sulzberger said in a statement.

Roger's Reviews: Star Wars: The Last Jedi

By ROGER CLINE

Staff Writer

Eight down, one to go. In 1977, "Star Wars Episode IV: A New Hope" was released, and changed the way movie-goers saw cinematic science fiction. Forty years later, we have "Star Wars Episode VIII: The Last Jedi." It's a worthy addition to the Star Wars saga.

ROGER CLINE

I'm not going to follow my usual format, in which I give a brief synopsis of the beginning of the movie and then share a few of my thoughts about the film. Instead, I'm going to do my best not to spoil too much about "The Last Jedi" while still offering a few thoughts about it.

One criticism that was leveled against "Star Wars Episode VII: The Force Awakens" was that its structure basically mirrors that of "A New Hope," with a lower-class resident of a desert planet and his or her droid(s) discovering Force abilities and leaving the planet on the Millennium Falcon to avoid Imperial/First Order entanglements, having an important encounter in a space bar (not, mind you, a spacebar, that's something different), witnessing a planet or planets being destroyed by a giant enemy superweapon, and then fighting to destroy that weapon before it can wreak more havoc. Both featured a powerful, dark-masked villain, a shadowy evil emperor, and base with rebel resistance fighters. True enough, they were pretty similar in a lot of ways.

I don't think that's a bad thing, though, in that it's been a long time since Episode 4 came out; it wasn't the exact same story, just one with an identical bone structure; and, well, Episode 4 is my favorite movie of all time, and Episode 7 certainly did it justice.

"The Last Jedi" isn't quite as direct an analog of "The Empire Strikes Back" as "The Force Awakens" is of "A New Hope," but there are definitely some nods in that direction. The rest of this paragraph contains the only spoilers in the entire review; they're (in my opinion) minor, but if you want to remain completely spoiler free, skip to the next paragraph. Both of the movies start with a Rebel/Resistance base being evacuated in the face of an oncoming Imperial/out and follows a different path from "Empire."

"The Last Jedi" focuses strongly on questions of despair versus hope, and how the two can seem to ally and work together for a time, given the right circumstances. While "Empire" had Luke discovering things about himself and his ancestry; we see Rey (Daisy Ridley) in "The Last Jedi" (as well as millions of nerds around the world) looking for similar answers. I won't give away whether she finds them or not; I will say the outcome is both very similar and yet very different from "Empire." Is that cryptic enough for you?

The slight downgrade I'm giving the movie is for a couple of scenes that are just a little too silly, and for a couple of questions that remain unanswered and seem (I could be wrong) that they might never be.

Anyway. Bottom line: If you have a "Star Wars" bone in your body at all, go see "The Last Jedi." Hey, it's better than the prequels. Eight and a half stars out of 10.

First Order force. Both feature a Jedi master training a young learner. During that training, there are some clear references to "Empire"; an X-wing fighter underwater...a dark cavern where a student of the Force encounters him/herself...a student who leaves before that training is complete. That's it! But "The Last Jedi" branches

80 years helping people help the land: A brief history of NRCS – Part one

CC projects like the Big Spring Comanche Trail Amphitheatre are still enjoyed today.

By JUDY TERELETSKY

Howard SWCD District Clerk

For 80 years the Natural Resources Conservation Service has been a pioneer in conservation, working with landowners, local and state governments, and other federal agencies to maintain healthy and productive working landscapes.

On April 27, 1935 Congress passed Public Law 74-46 establishing the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) as a permanent agency in the USDA. It recognized that “the wastage of soil and moisture resources on farm, grazing, and forest lands... is a menace to the national welfare”. The creation of the Soil Conservation Service represented the culmination of the efforts of Hugh Hammond Bennett, “Father of Soil Conservation” and first chief of SCS, to awaken public concern for the problem of soil erosion. Early in his career as a surveyor for the USDA Bureau of Soils he observed how soil erosion by water and wind reduced the ability of the land to sustain agricultural productivity and to support rural communities who depend on it for their livelihoods. He launched a public crusade of writing and speaking about the soil erosion crisis. His 1928 publication “Soil Erosion: A National Menace” greatly influenced Congress to create the first federal soil erosion experiment stations in 1929.

Perhaps no event did more to emphasize the severity of the erosion crisis in the popular imagination than the Dust Bowl. Beginning in 1932, persistent drought conditions on the Great Plains caused widespread crop failures and exposed the region’s soil to blowing wind. That same year Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected as President and the conservation of the soil and water resources became a national priority in the New Deal administration. The National Industrial Recovery Act of June 1933 included funds to fight soil erosion and with this money the Soil Erosion Service (SES) was established in the Department of Interior with Hugh Bennett as Chief in September 1933. The SES demonstrated projects in critically eroded areas across the country to show landowners the benefits of conservation.

A large dust storm on May 11, 1934 swept fine soil particles over Washington, D.C. and three hundred miles out into the Atlantic Ocean. More intense and frequent storms swept the Plains in 1935. On March 6 and again March 21, dust clouds passed over Washington, D.C. and darkened the sky just as Congress commenced hearings on proposed soil conservation law. Hugh Bennett seized the opportunity to explain the cause of the storms and offer a solution. He urged the creation of a permanent soil conservation agency and the Soil Conservation Act creating the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) was signed into law by President Roosevelt on April 27, 1935.

After 1935, SCS expanded its soil conservation program nationwide with a several-fold increase in the number of demonstration projects. Labor provided by the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC), the Civil Works Administration (CWA), and the Works Progress Administration (WPA) supported this work. SCS’s technical experts worked to advance scientific understanding of erosion processes and to develop effective conservation practices. SCS’s network of regional nurseries selected and increased the seeds and plants necessary for conservation work.

As early as 1935 USDA managers began to search for ways to extend conservation assistance to more farmers. They believed the solution was to establish democratically organized soil conservation districts to lead the conservation planning effort at the local level.

To create a framework for cooperation, USDA drafted the Standard State Soil Conservation Districts Law, which President Roosevelt sent to the governors of all the states in 1937. The first soil conservation district was organized in the Brown Creek watershed of North Carolina on August 4, 1937.

Today there are over three thousand conservation districts across the country. Howard County is represented by the Howard SWCD#243 which works closely with the NRCS.

On a modern note the recent restoration of the Big Spring in Comanche Trail Park was strongly influenced by the look of the original CCC work projects like the State Park and the Amphitheatre which are still in use today.

HOUSTON (AP) — The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the U.S. slipped by one this week to 930.

That's well above the 637 rigs that were active this time a year ago.

According to Houston oilfield services company Baker Hughes, 747 rigs were drilling for oil and 183 for natural gas this week. Baker Hughes released its tabulation Friday.

Among major oil- and gas-producing states, Pennsylvania gained three rigs and North Dakota and Wyoming each added one.

New Mexico and Texas each lost two rigs while Louisiana declined by one.

Alaska, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Kansas, Ohio, Oklahoma, Utah and West Virginia were unchanged.

The U.S. rig count peaked at 4,530 in 1981. It bottomed out in May of 2016 at 404.

Annie's Mailbox

Victim of Family Gossipers

Dear Annie: My husband has a large family. For the past 20 years, we have attended all the family gatherings. A few months ago, we found out my husband's two brothers and their wives have been gossiping about me.

We saw the conversations by accident. Apparently, these two couples get together quite often, and it seems I'm the main topic of conversation. They were basically stalking me on Facebook and monitoring my posts. All the conversations would go like this: "Did you see what Emily said about how she had to go to the hospital?" "Did you see what Emily said about how she has faith in God?" This went on and on. Every word I said was analyzed and mocked.

Needless to say, I immediately blocked all of them on Facebook, and I no longer post anything personal. But now the problem remains that I don't care to see these people anymore. I have forgiven them, but I would be uncomfortable being in the same room with them, knowing somehow I'd be giving them more fuel for the gossip fire. My husband is angry about this situation, too, but at the same time, he doesn't want to disappear off the portion of the earth that his family populates. I've had people advise me to take the high road and go to the gatherings and not worry about what they think of me. But I feel too uncomfortable to do that. I guess my question is: Do I have the right to go invisible? Because that's what I want to do. I have plenty of family and friends to spend the holidays with who love me. -- Betrayed

Dear Betrayed:

If anyone should be practicing a disappearing act, it's your gossiping in-laws. They ought to be ashamed of themselves. But avoidance isn't the answer here. Have your husband talk to his family members about how their gossiping has hurt you. Let's hope that given the chance, they'll apologize and use this as a moment to reflect, because their gossiping says far more about them than it does about you. As Eleanor Roosevelt said, "great minds discuss ideas; average minds discuss events; small minds discuss people."

Dear Annie:

With the holidays fast approaching, I'd like to ask that you please remind your readers not to make promises they will not keep. I work in an assisted living facility. Recently, I took care of one gentleman who sat all day dressed up waiting for his volunteer to come take him out for a meal. He sat and waited and waited.

The volunteer called later, around 7 p.m., and said he could not get his car started. I will always remember that incident. We as staff were not allowed to take patients out, or we would have arranged something. Plus, we did call to verify and did not get an answer. So please do not make promises you will not keep. -- Heartbreaking to See

Dear Heartbreaking to See: I'm heartbroken just hearing it. I'd like to take this opportunity to encourage readers to help seniors in their community have a happy holiday season. If you're not sure where to start, visit <https://www.mealsonwheel-samerica.org>.

Opening lead — King of clubs.

How to play a particular suit combination is governed not only by the composition of the suit itself but also by the reality of what will give you the best chance to make the contract. Take this typical case where declarer is faced with a crucial guess in trumps. West leads a club, ruffed by South. There is no good reason not to draw trumps, so South leads a low spade to the queen, leading to Fast's ace. Back comes a club, and after ruffing, South leads a heart to dummy's queen and returns a trump. When East produces the eight, declarer has to decide whether to play the ten or the king. Ordinarily, he would play the king, because mathematically there is a slight advantage in playing for the jack to fall. But in this deal, South should play the ten, because doing so assures the contract, while playing the king jeopardizes it. If the ten wins (because East has the jack), declarer cashes the king and loses at most two diamond tricks to make the contract. If the ten loses (because West has the jack), South still has the situation firmly under control. Whatever West returns, declarer can eventually cash the A-K-J of hearts and discard three diamonds from dummy. He thus loses only a diamond to the ace, ruffing his third diamond in dummy to avoid a second loser in the suit.

Note that if in the actual deal South plays the spade king instead of the ten at trick five, he goes down. When East gains the lead with the ace of diamonds, he cashes the jack of spades, removing dummy's last trump, and declarer winds up losing two diamonds and two spades to go down one.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

New-Moon Travel Blessing

Mercury is still retrograde, so we can't expect a perfectly smooth transition from place to place during one of the biggest travel times of the year. Yet the energy of the new moon will place a kind hand on our travel arrangements. This is especially true for those who have an easy-going attitude about that which cannot be controlled.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You've been psyching yourself up for something, and it's almost game time. Just don't let your enthusiasm blind you to other things and people. Pay attention to your environment; that's always the first step. Skip it at your own risk.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). To do the right thing for the wrong person is still a fail. It's like bringing the right key to the wrong door. Anyway, maybe it's time to stop thinking in terms of right and wrong and start thinking in terms of a good fit or a bad one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). People around you would like to think that you only see what they choose to show you about themselves; however, that's simply not the case. You see all. Well, maybe not all. You see most.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). For sensitive people like you, there doesn't have to be a great deal of physical evidence that a person you love is hurting. The first thing you'll notice when you walk into a room is the feelings that were left behind there.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). This will be a day of juxtapositions and opposites. You'll experience having and not having. You'll see beauty and ugliness. You'll appreciate both the known and the unknown.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You've been known to spread joy indiscriminately, though if you get more focused, you could do some real good today, because someone in your realm is in dire need of a lift.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Work and wait, wait and work. It seems to you that doing your duty shouldn't require so much patience. Better tools will bring faster results. Do your research; this could be a game changer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). There's something to be gained from dabbling casually in different worlds and interests. A little contact here, some knowledge there, a sprinkle of practice time now and then -- before you know it, you're an expert!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You're willing to sacrifice sweetness if that's what's necessary for health, but what if the two aren't mutually exclusive? You'll find a way to get it all, at least for the day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). As for those emotions that are not so easily defined or understood, there's healing power there. The benefit will be released through expression. If you can't talk about it, could you write, dance or draw about it?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You think, Now why would a person behave like that? The truth is that people act unconsciously all the time. You'll strive to be extra alert and mindful -- a counterbalance to what you see in the world.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You've been known to attract what you want without ever asking out loud, but that's not the norm, and it's really not today. If you're uncomfortable talking about it, practice in a mirror, but don't stay silent. Ask aloud!

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Dec. 17). Your intelligence will be sought time and again. You'll be invited to boards, think tanks and elite groups. The first part of the year, you'll be a tourist or feel like a tourist in someone else's life. How far do you go with an exciting quest in April? As far as you dare! Your social life goes from warm to sizzling in the summer. Libra and Taurus adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 7, 40, 4, 44 and 20.

FORECAST FOR THE WEEK AHEAD: Even though Mercury is still retrograde at the top of the week, the Sagittarius new moon counteracts the effects with a mighty fantastic omen for travelers. What it suggests is that though travel won't be without hiccups, the unforeseen events will lend texture, interest and opportunity to our journey, especially if we maintain a positive attitude about it. Furthermore, our travels aren't just location changes; rather, they are potentially life-altering events.

US stocks move broadly higher in late-afternoon trading

By ALEX VEIGA

AP Business Writer

U.S. stocks moved broadly higher in late-afternoon trading Friday, placing the major indexes on course for new highs. Technology companies, banks and health care stocks were among the biggest gainers. Investors were encouraged by signs that the Republican-backed tax overhaul bill was making progress in Congress. They also weighed the latest batch of company earnings news.

KEEPING SCORE: The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 27 points, or 1 percent, to 2,679 as of 3:17 p.m. Eastern Time. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 178 points, or 0.7 percent, to 24,687. The Nasdaq added 88 points, or 1.3 percent, to 6,945. Small-company stocks, which stand to benefit most from lower corporate tax rates, rose more than the rest of the market. The Russell 2000 index of smaller-company stocks picked up 28 points, or 1.9 percent, to 1,535.

THE QUOTE: "The tax bill seems to be the driver right now," said Erik Davidson, chief investment officer at Wells Fargo Private Bank. "The market just thinks it will get done."

TAXING TIME: Congressional Republicans finalized their sweeping tax package Friday, expanding its child tax credit to placate a reluctant GOP senator as they pushed to muscle the bill through Congress next week. Sen. Marco Rubio of Florida, who had been a potential holdout, signaled that he intends to now support the bill. The move provided a major boost for Senate Republicans who are trying to hold together a razor-thin majority to pass the bill.

T E C H R A L L Y: Technology stocks, which are leading the market this year, were notching solid gains. Intel rose $1.48, or 3.4 percent, to $44.74.

"We had seen some rotation out of it the last few weeks," said Jim Davis, regional investment strategist at U.S. Bank Wealth Management. "We're starting to see more of a change back to some of the sectors that have done well this year."

BANKING ON FINANCIALS: Banks and other financial companies were among the biggest gainers. Navient added 56 cents, or 4.4 percent, to $13.18.

BIG-BOX BEAT: Costco Wholesale rose 3.7 percent after the warehouse club operator's latest quarterly earnings and sales came in well above financial analysts' expectations. The stock added $6.84 to $193.37.

SPARKED: Shares in Jabil gained 1.6 percent after the electronics manufacturer posted a bigger profit and better revenue than analysts had anticipated. The stock picked up 43 cents to $27.88.

BUY BUY BUY: Discovery Communications was up 4.3 percent after John Malone, one of the company's directors, disclosed that he had bought more stock in the cable channel operator. The stock added 86 cents to $20.90.

CLOUDY SKIES: Oracle fell 4.4 percent after the second-quarter performance of the business software company's cloud-computing business and its forecast for its current quarter disappointed traders. The stock slid $2.21 to $47.98.

OFF THE RAILS: CSX slumped 7.4 percent after the railroad operator said CEO Hunter Harrison is on leave "due to unexpected complications from a recent illness." The stock was the biggest decliner in the S&P 500, shedding $4.24 to $53.07.

BOND YIELDS: Bond prices were little changed. The yield on the 10-year Treasury held steady at 2.35 percent late Thursday.

ENERGY: Oil futures finished mixed. Benchmark U.S. crude rose 26 cents to settle at $57.30 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Brent crude, used to price international oils, fell 8 cents to close at $63.23 per barrel in London.

METALS: Gold added 40 cents to $1,257.50 an ounce. Silver added 13 cents to $16.06 an ounce. Copper gained 6 cents, or 2 percent, to $3.13 a pound.

CURRENCIES: The dollar rose to 112.63 yen from 112.18 yen on Thursday. The euro weakened to $1.1757 from $1.1792.

THE BITCOIN TRADE: Bitcoin futures surged on their fifth day of trading, climbing $1,260, or 7.5 percent, to $18,020 on the Cboe Futures Exchange. The futures allow investors to make bets on the future price of bitcoin. The average price of an actual bitcoin was $17,670 in trading on private exchanges, according to Coindesk. The price of the digital currency has soared this year, having begun 2017 under $1,000.

MARKETS OVERSEAS: Major stock indexes in Europe were mixed. Germany's DAX rose 0.3 percent, while France's CAC 40 shed 0.2 percent. Britain's FTSE 100 rose 0.6 percent after European Union leaders said they would allow the Brexit talks to move on to the next stage, including trade. Earlier in Asia, Japan's benchmark Nikkei 225 index dipped 0.6, while South Korea's Kospi climbed 0.5 percent. Hong Kong's Hang Seng shed 1.1 percent.

SpaceX 1st: Recycled rocket soars with recycled capsule

By MARCIA DUNN

AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — SpaceX racked up another first on Friday, launching a recycled rocket with a recycled capsule on a grocery run for NASA.

The unmanned Falcon rocket blasted off with a just-in-time-for-Christmas delivery for the International Space Station, taking flight again after a six-month turnaround. On board was a Dragon supply ship, also a second-time flier.

It was NASA's first use of a reused Falcon rocket and only the second of a previously flown Dragon.

Within 10 minutes of liftoff, the first-stage booster was back at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, standing upright on the giant X at SpaceX's landing zone. That's where it landed back in June following its first launch. Double sonic booms thundered across the area. At SpaceX headquarters in Hawthorne, California, cheers erupted outside the company's glassed-in Mission Control, where chief executive Elon Musk joined his employees.

The Dragon reaches the space station Sunday. The capsule last visited the 250-mile-high outpost in 2015.

This time, the capsule is hauling nearly 5,000 pounds of goods, including 40 mice for a muscle-wasting study, a first-of-its-kind impact sensor for measuring space debris as minuscule as a grain of sand and barley seeds for a germination experiment by Budweiser, already angling to serve the first beer on Mars.

Ven Feng, a NASA manager, said he had "a little sense of deja vu" watching Friday's launch and landing of the same rocket he saw take off and return in June.

"Quite an achievement," he said.

For the past two years, the private SpaceX has been salvaging as much as possible from rockets following liftoff. Rather than letting first-stage boosters sink in the Atlantic, as other orbital rocket makers do, SpaceX flies them back to Cape Canaveral for vertical touchdowns or, when extra rocket power is needed to propel a satellite extra high, to a floating ocean platform.

Reusability is the future for spaceflight, ac-ording to NASA's station program manager Kirk Shireman.

"The reality is, the business of space is dominated by launch costs ... so getting the costs down is important for everyone," Shireman said.

NASA flew its first reused capsule back in June. But managers waited until SpaceX had three rocket reflights under its belt, before putting NASA's station equipment and experiments on a secondhand Falcon. After extensive reviews, the risk of flying a reused rocket, versus a brand new one, was judged to be pretty much equal, he said.

Friday's booster recovery was the 20th for the company.

Jessica Jensen, a SpaceX manager, said the company aims to reuse rockets — and capsules — far more than twice. The only way to get thousands of people into space — the ultimate goal of Musk — is by drastically cutting launch costs, she said.

This was the first launch from the SpaceX-rented Complex 40 in more than a year. The last time a Falcon rocket stood at the pad ready to fly, in September 2016, it blew up during a fueling drill. SpaceX spent $50 million rebuilding the pad.
