City Council plans to say 'no' to Oncor rate hike

By ROGER CLINE

Staff Writer

A dispute with Oncor Electric Delivery Company will be on the table at the Big Spring City Council Meeting

VOLUME 113, NUMBER 173

The council will meet at 5:30 p.m. in their Council Chambers, 307 E. Fourth St.

According to the posted agenda for the meeting, Oncor has filed an application with the city for "Approval of a Distribution Cost Recovery Factor," abbreviated DCRF, amounting to a surcharge to reimburse Oncor for lowerthan-expected electricity service revenues. The factor would increase electricity distribution rates citywide by about $19,002,177, according to the agenda.

A proposed resolution included in the meeting's agenda would deny the applica-

Home Hospice honored cancer survivors, and with the help from several local boutiques, the survivors got to dress up and walk the catwalk. Not only did they show off different clothes from around Big Spring, but also showed the crowd that they are survivors. Audrey was diagnosed with cancer at 16 months of age, and now at three she is cancer free.

Cars, Stars, and Handlebars is an annual event that has been a long-running fundraiser conducted by the Big Spring State Hospital Volunteer Services Council with the help of the Greater Big Spring Rotary Club. This event, which has become a yearly tradition, has a mission to generate funds for the patients of Big Spring State Hospital, and also to assist with the children of Howard County's literary needs.

Coahoma Elementary School (CES) students joined children across the state to kick-off the fourth annual Texas Reads One Book program last Wednesday.

Texas Reads One Book encourages students to read one chapter a day with their parents at home from a selected book each year. This year, the book is "The Mouse and the Motorcycle," by well-known children's author Beverly Cleary.

On Wednesday, elementary children gathered in the high school auditorium to hear CES librarian Kandi Burris give highlights of the life of the famous children's author.

Born in 1916, Cleary spent her early childhood living on a small farm in Oregon and her access to books was limited, Burris told the crowd. At the time, mass communication was mostly non-existent. The first electronic television

Dear Lord, we seek you with prayer in our hearts. We meet you when we consider your Word. Amen.

SAUNDERS book, "A Higher Loyalty: Truth, Lies and Leadership," he learned he had been fired in Los Angeles in front of a room of potential FBI recruits when the words "Comey resigns" flashed across TV screens along a back wall. At first, Comey laughed off what he thought was a joke. Then he saw the headline, "Comey fired," and he wasn't laughing any more. News crews in helicopters captured his car ride to the airport as if Comey were O.J. Simpson on the run.

A month later, Comey charmed the Senate Intelligence Committee with his aw-shucks demeanor, and phrases like, "Lordy, I hope there are tapes" — a response to a Trump tweet that suggested the commander in chief might have taped their talks. On his book tour, Comey is

Mr. Nice Guy no more. He has outgrown his "Leave It to Beaver" lexicon and replaced it with the sort of trash talk that served Trump so well on the campaign trail. Comey seemed like such a gentleman — not so now with his swipes at Trump's physical appearance.

Comey writes of his first meeting with Trump: "His face appeared slightly orange, with bright white half-moons under his eyes where I assumed he places small tanning goggles, and impressively coiffed, bright n odd thing is happen- blond hair, which upon close inspection looked to be all his."

Trump likes to brag about his big hands, and how his crowdsize, poll numbers or whatever are bigger than anyone else's.

During the 2016 GOP primary, Florida Sen. Marco Rubio — whom Trump dubbed "Little Marco" — tried the same gambit, as he talked about Trump's "small hands" and "spray tan." Alas, for Rubio, Trump's tactics don't transfer well to others. Rubio's rhetoric didn't dent Trump's hold on Florida voters, who favored the

to their homegrown native son.

Both Trump and Comey are known leakers who have no problem trashing others for doing what they've been doing. A master at self-promotion, Trump famously talked off the record to reporters under the phony name John Barron years ago when he was hyping his net worth.

Comey has leaked as well. He admitted that, after Trump fired him, he gave a law school professor an unclassified memo about a meeting with Trump and instructions that the professor "share the substance of the memo — but not the memo itself – with a reporter." Comey's book tour candor has not enhanced his reputation. A Rasmussen Reports survey found that 41 percent of likely voters believe he should be prosecuted for leaking to the media. Trump talks endlessly about his many triumphs and how much other world leaders tell him that they like him and respect him. In memos Comey wrote to himself after talking with Trump, the former FBI chief repeats Trump's blandishments — such as that Comey conducted himself "honorably," "had a great reputation" and "that the people of the FBI really like me." Read the memos and you'd almost think the president and lawman talked more about Comey than Russia.

On CNN Thursday, Comey told anchor Jake Tapper that "it's possible" the Kremlin has compromising information on Trump. Comey admitted he had no proof, but observed that Trump protests too much the allegation that he consorted with Moscow prostitutes, and Trump does not like to pan Russian president Vladimir Putin.

"Now, those aren't definitive, those aren't conclusive facts, Comey told Tapper, "but the reason I say it's possible is there are things that lead my common sense to believe it's possible."

It was a cheap shot — reminiscent of Trump's nasty insinuation during the GOP primary that the father of Sen. Ted Cruz, R-Texas, somehow might have been associated with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

"His father was with Lee Harvey Oswald prior to Oswald's being — you know, shot. I mean, the whole thing is ridiculous,' Trump told Fox News. And: "I mean what was he doing with Lee Harvey Oswald, shortly before the death — before the shooting? It's horrible."

In that spirit, it's possible that Comey is turning into Trump bigly — although to complete the transformation, it would help if Comey could lose some of his sanctimony.

Collusion, Anyone?

the Trump campaign privilege. colluded with Russia zero, the likelihood of proof of a different form of collusion seems headed upward toward certainty. The Russia collusion charge had some initial credibility because of businessman Donald Trump's dealings in Russia and candidate Trump's off-putting praise of Vladimir Putin.

It was fueled by breathless media coverage of such trivial events as Jeff Sessions' conversation with the Russian ambassador at a Washington reception — and, of course, by the appointment of former FBI Director Robert Mueller as special counsel. But Mueller's prosecutions of Trump campaign operatives were for misdeeds long before the campaign, and his indictment of 13 Russians specified that no American was a "knowing participant" in their work. Now there's talk that Mueller is winding up his investigation. It seems unlikely that whatever he reports will fulfill the daydreams so many liberals have of making Trump go the way of Richard Nixon. Meanwhile, the evidence builds of collusion by Obama administration law enforcement and intelligence personnel in trying to elect Hillary Clinton and defeat and delegitimize Trump in and after the 2016 election. The investigation of Clinton's illegal email system was conducted with kid gloves. FBI Director James Comey accepted Attorney General Loretta Lynch's order to call it a "matter" rather than an "investigation." Clinton aides were allowed to keep her emails and destroy 30,000 of them, plus cellphones. They were not subject to grand jury subpoenas, and a potential co-defendant was al-on his plane at the Phoenix airport — a meeting that became known only thanks to an alert local TV reporter. Lynch supposedly left the decision on prosecution to Comey, who on July 5 announced publicly that Clinton had been "extremely careless" but lacked intent to violate the law, even though the statute punishes such violations whether they are intentional or not.

Contrast that with the collusion of Obama offi-MICHAEL cials with the Clinton cam-BARONE paign-financed Christophe Steele/Fusion GPS dossier alleging Trump ties with Russians. Comey and the Justice Department used it, without divulging who paid for it, to get a FISA warrant to surveil former Trump campaign operative Carter Page's future and past communications — the "wiretap" Trump was derided for mentioning.

Similarly, when Comey informed Trump in January 2017 of the contents of the then-unpublished Steele dossier, he didn't reveal that the Clinton campaign had paid for it. Asked on his iatrogenic book tour why not, he blandly said he didn't know. And maybe he doesn't actually realize he was employing J. Edgar Hoover-like tactics to keep his job. Maybe. In any case, after he was fired, he immediately sent four of his internal memos, at least one of them classified, to a law professor friend to leak them to the press, with the intent of getting a special counsel appointed — who turned out to be his longtime friend and ally Robert Mueller. Collusion, anyone?

Comey and McCabe have produced contradictory accounts of events, and Comev's public praise of McCabe contrasts with his referral of McCabe to Justice's inspector general, who found him guilty of "lack of candor" — a fireable offense for which he was indeed fired. Longtime Clinton friend Lanny Davis charges that Comey's statement was responsible for Clinton's defeat, and Comey, on his book tour, admitted that he may have made it only because he assumed Clinton would win.

Davis may be right, though no one can prove it. But one could also say that the Democratic Party lost the presidency because it nominated a candidate under investigation for committing a felony. And it seems as certain as these things can be that if Hillary Clinton had followed the law and regulations, there would be today no President Trump, no Attorney General Sessions, no EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt, no Justice Neil Gorsuch. The blame ultimately belongs to Barack Obama, who knew of Clinton's private email system and who could have ordered her to follow the law. But that's one bit of collusion that didn't occur.

Teen fugitives caught after escaping juvenile prison

GIDDINGS, Texas (AP) — Two teen inmates have been caught a day after escaping from a juvenile prison in Giddings, Texas, about 100 miles northwest of Houston.

The Texas Juvenile Justice Department said in a release that 16-year-olds Brice Ryan Karalis and Bryan Ernando Villanueva were arrested Sunday evening in Montgomery County. The two disappeared from the Giddings State School around 9 p.m. Saturday.

The teens' mode of escape was not released, and additional details about their apprehension were not immediately available.

It was not immediately clear why Karalis or Villanueva were being held at the prison.

5 arrested on murder charges stemming from Texas arson case

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Authorities have arrested five people on murder charges stemming from an arson investigation in Grand Prairie, Texas, about 13 miles west of Dallas.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reports that 25-year-old Elizabeth Delude, 40-year-old Claire Harrington, 34-year-old Clayton Miller, 33-yearold Christopher Cornell and 41-year-old Paul Rogers were arrested Friday. Harrington was held on $500,000 and the others on $750,000 bonds Sunday at the Grand Prairie Detention Center. It was not immediately clear whether they had attorneys.

Detectives investigating an April 10 Grand Prairie house fire determined that someone was slain inside. Two days later, the Erath County Sheriff's Department discovered a charred body inside of a burned car believed to be the victim in the Grand Prairie homicide case. The Tarrant County Medical Examiner's office had not yet identified the victim.

filed in the death of an 11-year-old boy struck by a pickup truck in El Paso during a school-organized walkout to protest gun violence. El Paso police spokesman Darrel Petry said Sunday that the investigation into Jonathan Benko's death continues. But no charges have been filed against Jesus Diaz, the 61-year-old driver who struck Benko as he attempted to walk across a highway on Friday with several other students.

Authorities say the sixth-grader and other students had left the designated walkout area to go to a park across the highway from Parkland Middle school has apologized after a teacher asked students in an eighth grade American history class to list the positive and negative aspects of slavery. The Great Hearts Monte Vista teacher who distributed the worksheet titled "The Life of Slaves: A Balanced View" was placed on leave and the school said it would audit the textbook associated with the lesson, said Aaron Kindel, the superintendent of Great Hearts Texas, which operates 28 public charter schools in Texas and Arizona. "To be clear, there is no debate about slavery. It is immoral and a crime against humanity," Kindel said in a statement posted Thursday on the Great Hearts Facebook page. He said the school's headmaster plans to explain the mistake to the history Scott Overland, a spokesman for Pearson, which published the textbook, said the company didn't create and doesn't endorse the worksheet assigned to the students, KENS-TV reported. "We do not support the point of view represented in the worksheet and strongly condemn the implication that there was any positive aspect to slavery," Overland said.

A parent of one of the students in the class posted the worksheet Wednesday on Facebook.

4 dead in Waffle House shooting in Tennessee; suspect sought

Law enforcement officials work the scene of a fatal shooting at a Waffle House in the Antioch neighborhood of Nashville, Sunday, April 22, 2018.

By SHEILA BURKE Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A nearly naked gunman wearing only a green jacket and brandishing an assault rifle stormed a Waffle House restaurant in Nashville early Sunday, shooting four people to death before a customer rushed him and wrestled the weapon away. Authorities were searching for the 29-year-old suspect, Travis Reinking, who they said drove to the busy restaurant and killed two people in the parking lot before entering and continuing to fire. When his AR-15 rifle either jammed or the clip was empty, the customer disarmed him in a scuffle.

Four people were also wounded before the gunman fled, throwing off his jacket.

Nashville Police Chief Steve Anderson said there was no clear motive, though Reinking may have "mental issues." He may still be armed, Anderson told a mid-afternoon news conference, because he was known to have owned a handgun that authorities have not recovered.

U.S. Secret Service agents arrested Reinking last July for being in a restricted area near the White House, officials said. Special Agent Todd Hudson said Reinking was detained after refusing to leave the restricted area, saying he wanted to meet President Donald Trump.

State police in Illinois, where Reinking lived until last fall, subsequently revoked his state firearms card at the request of the FBI and four guns were then taken from him, including the AR-15 used in Sunday's shooting as well as a handgun, authorities said. Sheriff Robert Huston in Tazewell County, Illinois, said deputies allowed Reinking's father to take possession of the guns on the promise that he would "keep the weapons secure and out of the possession of Travis." Huston added that, based on past deputies' encounters with Reinking, "there's certainly evidence that there's some sort of mental health issues involved."

While Huston said it was unclear how Reinking reclaimed the guns, Nashville Police spokesman Don Aaron said that his father "has now acknowledged giving them back to his son."

Phone calls to a number listed for the father, Jeffrey Reinking, went unanswered. Meanwhile, authorities hailed the customer who intervened to stop a further bloodbath, 29-year-old James Shaw, Jr., as a hero though the father of a 4-year-old girl demurred and said he was just trying to survive. One hand bandaged,

Shaw told reporters he first thought the gunshots fired around 3:25 a.m. were plates falling from a dishwashing sta-When he realized

They cursed at each other as they scuffled, Shaw said, and he was able to grab the gun and toss it over a counter. The gunman then ran away into the dark of the working- and middle-class Antioch neighborhood of southeast Nashville.

Authorities said he shed his jacket nearby and police found two AR-15 magazines loaded with bullets in the pockets. He was seen walking, naked, on a road, officials said, but later was spotted wearing pants but no shirt after apparently returning to his

Another witness, Chuck Cordero, told The Tennessean newspaper he had stopped to get a cup of coffee and was outside the Waffle House when the chaos unfolded.

"He did not say anything," Cordero said of the gunman, who he described as "all business."

Cordero said Shaw saved lives. "There was plenty more people in that restaurant," he said. The dead were identified as 29-year-old restaurant worker Taurean C. Sanderlin, and restaurant patrons Joe R. Perez, 20, Akilah Dasilva, 23, and DeEbony Groves, 21. A police statement said Sanderlin and Perez were killed outside the restaurant, Groves was fatally shot inside, and Dasilva was critically wounded inside and later died at Vanderbilt University Medical Center. Aaron, the police spokesman, said two of the wounded were being treated for gunshot wounds at the medical center, where spokeswoman Jennifer Wetzel said one was in critical condition and the other was in critical but stable condition.

TriStar Southern Hills Medical Center spokeswoman Katie Radel in Nashville said two people were treated for minor injuries and released.

Aaron said Reinking had been employed in construction and lived near the restaurant, and police used yellow crime scene tape to block public access to an apartment complex about a half-mile from the Waffle House.

This weekend while celebrating the Sophomores in the program, in a four game series where three of the four games were decided by only a single run. The Hawks found a way to come away with all four victories in an impressive sweep of the Midland College over the weekend. Howard college outhit the Chaparrals 37 to 34 in the series and outscored Midland 34 runs to 26 in the sweep. Head Coach Stephen East said of his team after the game "The kids played well today. We have tried to focus on cleaning up our defense and the kids did a good job today. We had one error and with today's windy conditions that was pretty impressive. Our pitching was good with Kolby Watson getting the start and going 3 innings and only giving up 3 runs. Jordan Enriquez pitched for his first time in a varsity game today and went 3 innings. We closed with Bryce Hergert and he was solid like he is every time. Rotan pitched the Van Poppel kid and he does a good job. He has a big arm with a good fastball and a great curve. We were able to get to him early and get 7 hits off him. Our guys are seeing the ball well right now and making good contact. We finish the regular season Tuesday against Ira at Snyder's Moffett Field at 7 pm. We are still waiting to see who we will play in the first round of the playoffs".

The Buffs are the #1 seed in District 6-2A and we will play the #4 seed out of District 5, which will be either Van Horn or Ft. Hancock.

Telling Someone She Stinks

Dear Annie: | have a very sensitive office environment problem. My office mate smells, and the smell permeates the entire office and even gets stuck to my clothes. And I'm not the only one who can smell it. Other co-workers have noticed it, too. I think it's a matter of not changing clothes enough or not bathing well or often enough. She is such a nice lady that I really can't mention it to her. It would hurt her feelings. Because our office has only five employees in it (we're out in the boondocks), we have very limited office space. So there's no possibility of moving desks and putting more space between her and the rest of us. And no air freshener or scent diffuser we've tried works. What can be done? Again, she's very nice and friendly, and I don't want to hurt her. -- Stinky Outside Seattle

Dear Stinky Outside Seattle: This is the sort of delicate personnel matter best handled by the human resources department. Talk to whoever is in charge of HR for your company, even if that person isn't located in the same office.

If you don't have an HR department, then try talking to your co-worker yourself. At the end of the day, ask your co-worker whether she has a minute before she leaves. Go into a private space, and say something to the effect of: "It may just be my sensitive nose, but I've noticed there's sometimes a strong smell near your desk. I just wanted to make you aware of the issue, because I hope you would do the same for me." It's going to be awkward no matter which way you slice it. But telling her is a noble act. You're bearing a minute of discomfort to spare her further embarrassment and your co-workers further unpleasantness. Do be sure to have this talk at the end of the day, as telling her earlier, when she can't do anything about it, would be cruel.

Also, as this is the second letter I've received this month about a co-worker's olfactory offenses, a public service announcement: To anyone thinking of skipping that pre-work shower, please don't.

Dear Annie: I'm just a normal adult who is sick and tired of hearing the F-word out in public. Why is this word permitted at public events, at the shopping mall and in movie theaters? When my grandchildren were very young, we had this happen at a baseball game. The person behind us repeated the word many times, until finally my husband politely asked the person to stop. Luckily for us, he wasn't attacked for the request -- which is always a concern these days.

Can we start a national campaign to stop the use of the F-word in public? Here's an idea: If you wouldn't say a certain thing in church, then don't say it in public. I hope others will agree with this idea, and perhaps the security guards at public events could help out. -- Grandma

Dear Grandma: I couldn't find any data to verify the claim, but I also have noticed more people using the F-word in recent years. It may be because many popular shows are on cable or streaming platforms and therefore not subject to the strict censorship laws that govern network TV, allowing the shows to have a free-for-all with the cussword, which may have trickled down into society. But we can't just blame TV. In any case, let's keep it clean, folks.

 [omorrow's Horoscope (Dec. 22-Jan. 19).

By Holiday Mathis to think that you have lots of options, yet in reality, three to five will be better than endless possibilities. You don't have the time to investigate today, for one.

> GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Your intuition is working, and you may pick up on the tiniest signal or come up with a strange, accurate bit of information from out of the blue. Take it as a sign that you're headed in a good direction.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). We sometimes create a false boundary just so that we can play a game, but the reality is that life is often more of a circular scenario in which there really is no choosing sides.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). There is no "whatever" in your vocabulary today because you know your preferences, and you're not afraid to explain them to people in the nicest way possible. Much good comes of your command of language.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The venture has to be exciting enough to pull you forward, or you're not likely to investigate further. This has more to do with what fits into your life and meshes with your current interests than anything

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). When will you finally get time to spend on the thing that really matters to you? When you make the time. Willfully take control of the schedule and you'll make this happen.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You can cut down on the chaos, wonder and worry of human interaction when you follow this communication pattern: Tell them what you're going to do. Do it. Tell them what you PROCESSING THE PAST WITH PLUTO: The retrograde status of Pluto begins a five-month cycle of processing the past. If you dread facing the "yuck" in your yesterdays, have no fear. There is more than one way to overcome emotional baggage.

Tip No. 1: Work from the outside in.

You can break the hold that the past has over you by freshening up your environment at home and at work. This keeps you moving in current time instead of reliving yesterday's same old flow. New paint or a rearrangement of furniture won't take all that long, but such rearrangements will change your feng shui and, by extension, your fortunes.

As you adjust your environment, think about the role of light. Letting light into your environment will lighten the heart, as well. You can also lighten up by getting rid of useless, worn and ugly physical possessions. As you purge the physical evidence of the past, your mind will follow the trend.

The name of Shri D.V. Gore may not strike a responsive chord, but Mr. Gore has earned a niche in the Bridge Hall of Fame as the result of an unusual play he made in a tournament staged many years ago in Calcutta. The hand was published in the Indian Bridge World Magazine.

Gore was East, defending against four hearts. West led the ace of clubs, a very fortunate choice for his side, and then shifted to a trump. Declarer was a liability as long as it remained in his hand, and he therefore got rid of it in a hurry. He knew from declarer's first spade play that his partner was practically certain to have either the K-J-10 or K-Q-10, since declarer would surely have played a higher spade than the nine if he had held the K-Q, K-J or Q-J.

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Landry wins Texas Open for first PGA Tour title

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Andrew Landry won the Valero Texas Open on Sunday for his first PGA Tour victory, pulling away with early birdies and holding on with par saves.

The 30-year-old Texan, busy at home in Austin with the recent birth of the family's first child, parred the final seven holes for a 4-under 68 and a two-stroke victory over Trey Mullinax and Sean O'Hair.

"It was obviously a tough week this week," Landry said. "Going into the last few weeks with the childbirth and just really getting back out."

Landry played at Arkansas after starring at Port Neches-Groves High School east of Houston. Many family members were at TPC San Antonio on Sunday.

"Everybody was out," Landry said. "It was pretty special to be able to snag a victory with everybody being here to share it."

Landry finished at 17-under 271. He earned $1,116,000 and a spot in the Masters next year.

"I didn't even really think about it, to be honest with you," Landry said. "There's a lot of perks for a tour win and you've just got to continue to stav focused and not think about those kind of things."

Landry took a two-stroke lead to the par-5 18th after Mullinax chunked a flop shot and bogeyed the short par-4 17th. Landry hit a 55-foot putt over a ridge to 3 feet for par on 17 and made an 8-footer on 18 after running a 50-foot downhill birdie try past.

Mullinax closed with a 69 a day after breaking the AT&T Oaks Course record with a 62.

"Just a lot of confidence. I know my game's there, I'm playing really well," Mullinax said. "Give all credit to Andrew. He played really well today, rock steady. He was putting great, hitting great shots."

O'Hair shot 66.

"When I'm good, I'm really good, and when I'm not good, I'm not so good," O'Hair said. "I've got to kind of get that a little bit better, but it's always nice to compete and be in the hunt.'

Andrew Landry holds the Texas Open trophy after winning the event with a score of 17 under par, Sunday, April 22, 2018, in San Antonio.

Tied for the third-round lead with Zach Johnson, Landry birdied the first three holes and added two more on Nos. 6 and 10. He bogeyed the par-4 11th before the closing par run.

"Made a couple putts and, unfortunately, Zach and Trey kind of had some hiccups there on the front nine and they didn't play it as well as I did," Landry said. "I think that that was really, really key to getting to where I am right now."

Landry won in his 32nd PGA Tour start. He earned his tour card last year on the Web.com Tour, and lost a playoff to Jon Rahm in January in the CareerBuilder Challenge.

"It helps because you get yourself in that situation and you continue to learn," Landry said. "Losing in that playoff when I was continuing to hit good shot after good shot, just not making any putts. Normally that's a strength of my game. Now here we are,

Jimmy Walker was fourth at 14 under after his second 67.

"From where I've been, it's nice to see a lot of red numbers, nice to see putts going in, nice to be in contention," said Walker, the 2015 winner. "It felt good and I felt like I could get it done today and that's been a while."

Johnson had a 72 to finish fourth at 13 under. He won the event in 2008 and 2009, the last two times it was played at LaCantera. The 42-year-old Iowan is winless since the 2015 British Open. "It's fun to compete against the so-called younger generation," Johnson said. "I still really do feel my best golf is in front of me. I know what I've got to clean up." Joaquin Niemann shot 67-67 on the weekend to finish sixth at 12 under in his pro debut. The 19-year-old from Chile was the top-ranked amateur "I never thought I was going to finish how I played this week, but I can't be more happy than this." Niemann said. "Just try to keep it up and hope to play well for the next weeks.'
