A ceremony to honor and remember those who lost their lives during the 9/11 terrorist attacks on the United States, and for those who have given the ultimate sacrifice for our country in the fight against terror will be held at Scenic Mountain Medical Center. "Prayer at the Pole" starts at 8:30 a.m. Sept. 11 with a Grab and Go Breakfast from 8:45 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. This memorial is to honor all military heroes and first responders. Young Marines to hold Drug Demand Reduction 5K

By ROGER CLINE
Staff Writer

The Crossroads Young Marines are holding a 5K run to encourage young people to stay off drugs. The event is the Young Marines Drug Demand Reduction Dash, and it will be run Oct. 27 near the Vietnam Memorial in Big Spring. Registration starts this weekend and will run through Oct. 22. "It's part of our Drug Demand Reduction curriculum," said Carrie Rodman, Cross Roads Young Marines adjutant. "Through our national headquarters, all Young Marine units across the country are all doing this race on the 27th of October to promote a drug-free, healthy lifestyle in our youth. It's a way to battle drugs in your community. It also coincides at the same time with Red Ribbon Week, that goes through that last week of October." Rodman said the local race will divide runners into several divisions. "We have the Young Marine division, and then there's a Youth Division that's 12 and under; a Teen Division that's 13 through 17; an Adult Division, 18 and up; and then there's a Senior Division that's 60 and up," she said. "We have some T-shirts available. We have a bag that we'll be giving out; it's got some Young Marine stuff and a T-shirt." Rodman's husband Roger Rodman is the unit commander of the Cross Roads Young Marines. "We are doing this to raise awareness. In the Young Marines, one of our major emphases is to teach these kids about drugs, and teach them how to stay off of them, and teach them how to stay away from them," said Commander Rodman. "What they are, how they affect the body, and what the long-term effects are. That's what we do as Young Marines. That's one of the main reasons I'm doing this. There are too many kids on drugs." Registration for Young Marines is $15, for non-Young Marines is $25, and late registration is $30. Sponsors for the event include Cross Roads Young Marines, Permian Basin Events, and the Fraternal Order of Eagles Aerie Lodge #3188. For more information or to register, check out the Young Marines Facebook page at www.facebook.com/CrossRoadsYoungMarines/.

Obituaries

J.O. Haney Jr.

J.O. Haney Jr. arrived on a cold Sunday morning January 27th, 1935 to John Oliver and Hester Weems Haney in the Luther community, north of Big Spring, TX.

In 1937 Johnnie and Hester opened the Luther Country Store on Texas HWY 669 in Big Spring. It was there J.O. developed skills to make change at an early age. He started school at age 6 and by the age of 11 started at Big Spring High School – graduating in 1950 at the age of 15. He then attended John Brown University in Siloam Springs, Arkansas, where he would complete two years of college before his life was forever changed. Then that fateful day arrived – the meeting of Patricia Ann Snider in Bentonville, Arkansas June of 1952 at summer camp and his world was never the same. J. O. and Patricia Ann were married with parent's written permission on January 17th, 1953 both at the age of 17. Their union would last over 65 years until his passing on August 27th, 2018.

J. O. Haney Jr. is survived by his wife Patricia Ann Haney, daughter Patricia Jan Haney (Jan), son J. O. Haney III (Joey) and wife Cindy Haney, daughter Jenna Lisa Burns and husband Dan Burns, six grandchildren – Dana Lane Stanfield, Clinton John Haney, Kayla Ann Gresham, Garrett Thomas Haney, Krista Burns Veiga, Aaron Thomas Burns, and ten great grandchildren; brother Don Hal Haney and wife Judy and family. He is predeceased by his parents John Oliver and Hester Weems Haney.

He started a family, traveling around the country as a religious musician until settling in the San Antonio area in 1963 as the automotive manager at Sears & Roebuck Southside. In 1979 started Asphalt Maintenance Co of TX working with apartment complexes and strip centers for twenty-five years. J. O. retired in 2005 to reside in the ever-growing City of Bulverde.

His love for cars, travel, technology, and informing you on the latest ideas will be greatly missed. Never a dull conversation, you were always left with more knowledge than you needed to know and insight into your daily life. Traveling with his family over most of the continental United States in style – whether in a four door Studebaker or a 42ft bus – experiencing new places and meeting new people was always an adventure for him. His lifetime of stories and memories will live on thru the lives of his family and friends.

Friends and Family may visit Wednesday, September 5th from 6-8 p.m. with the Memorial Service held on Thursday, September 6th at 2 p.m. both at Porter Loring Mortuary North. Following after the Memorial service, a reception will be held Friendship Church Fellowship Hall located at 14015 San Pedro Ave.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be made to either two charities: St. Jude's Ranch for Children of Texas (SJRC) or the Battered Women and Children's Shelter of San Antonio.

Future gathering to remember J. O. Haney Jr. in Big Spring, TX at a later date.

Obama, Bush – not Trump – give McCain presidential farewell

By LAURIE KELLMAN

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The memorial service for John McCain is underway at the Washington National Cathedral, where the late Republican senator is getting a presidential farewell, but not from the actual sitting president.

Three former presidents, scores of members of Congress, current and former world leaders and family and friends have gathered Saturday morning to eulogize McCain as an American hero. His flag-draped casket was escorted by military body bearers up the cathedral steps under gray skies.

Among those in the front row at the cathedral are Barack and Michelle Obama, George and Laura Bush, Bill and Hillary Clinton, as well as Dick Cheney and Al Gore. McCain's motorcade arrived from the Capitol, where he laid in state overnight, and the procession made a stop at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, where McCain's wife, Cindy, placed a wreath.

At McCain's request, Obama, a Democrat, and Bush, a Republican, are among those speaking about the six-term senator during Saturday's service.

It is the last public event in Washington, where McCain lived and worked over four decades, and part of McCain's five-day, cross-country funeral procession. He died Aug. 25 at age 81.

Trump was told to stay away but isn't far. The president planned to remain in Washington this weekend. Two of his top aides, White House chief of staff John Kelly and Defense Secretary James Mattis, flanked Cindy McCain as she approached the memorial and joined the service. Trump's daughter Ivanka Trump and son-in-law Jared Kushner are also in attendance.

McCain was a decorated veteran who was held for more than five years as a prisoner of war in Vietnam. He refused early release. Trump obtained deferments for his college education and a foot ailment.

The memorial stop provided another contrast with Trump in McCain's carefully designed funeral procession, but the speeches by the former presidents are expected to carry special weight.

McCain had long urged the Senate and the polarized nation to recognize the humanity even in bitter political opponents. McCain's request for speeches by the former presidents, to some, represents that ideal.

"We weaken our greatness when we confuse our patriotism with tribal rivalries that have sown resentment and hatred and violence in all the corners of the globe," McCain wrote in his farewell letter to the nation, read posthumously by a longtime aide. "We weaken it when we hide behind walls, rather than tear them down, when we doubt the power of our ideals, rather than trust them to be the great force for change they have always been."

By all accounts, McCain ended up liking both Bush and Obama but was not especially close to either man.

"John McCain and I were members of different generations, came from completely different backgrounds, and competed at the highest level of politics," Obama said in a statement after McCain's death. "But we shared, for all our differences, a fidelity to something higher — the ideals for which generations of Americans and immigrants alike have fought, marched, and sacrificed."

Bush delivered McCain a decisive defeat in the race for the GOP presidential nomination in 2000. Obama defeated McCain eight years later in the general election.

After his death, Bush called McCain "a man of deep conviction and a patriot of the highest order. He was a public servant in the finest traditions of our country. And to me, he was a friend whom I'll deeply miss."

McCain's service and dedication to working across the aisle — even as he sometimes infuriated his opponents — was a major theme of Friday's ceremony in the Capitol Rotunda.

Of those who spoke at Friday's ceremony, fellow Republican Mitch McConnell had perhaps the fullest sense of the McCain experience. The two had served in the Senate together since McCain's 1986 election.

"Depending on the issue, you knew John would either be your staunchest ally or your most stubborn opponent," McConnell recalled. "At any moment, he might be preparing an eloquent reflection on human liberty — or a devastating joke, served up with his signature cackle and that John McCain glint in his eye."

But just about anyone who worked in the Capitol over the past 35 years could attest to McCain's iron will and what House Speaker Paul Ryan called his "distinct brand of candor."

"With John, it was never feigned disagreement. The man didn't feign anything," Ryan said. "He just relished the fight."

"This," Ryan added of McCain, "is one of the bravest souls our nation has ever produced."

McCain is to be buried Sunday at his alma mater, the U.S. Naval Academy, next to his best friend from the Class of 1958, Adm. Chuck Larson.

"Back," McCain wrote on the last page of his recent memoir, "where it began."

Calls for respect for black America at Franklin funeral

By ERRIN HAINES

WHACK

AP National Writer

DETROIT (AP) — As Aretha Franklin was remembered at her funeral Friday as a proud black woman who also used her magnificent voice to stand up for the black community she loved, several speakers used the moment to continue to demand respect for black America.

Amid the gospel, personal reflections and grief were calls to register and turnout to vote in November and condemnation of President Donald Trump, who, upon her death, referred to Franklin as "someone who worked for me" — a comment that rankled many African-Americans.

"No — she used to perform for you," the Rev. Al Sharpton said to cheers and applause from the crowd. "She worked for us. Aretha never took orders from nobody but God."

Franklin's civil rights legacy was mentioned often during the eight-hour service, and was tied to her faith and roots in the black church. Many also mentioned her father, the Rev. C.L. Franklin, and his civil rights leadership, which influenced his daughter from a young age.

Late Friday, Franklin was laid to rest in a mausoleum at Woodlawn Cemetery, the final resting place of her father.

None of the politicians present — including former President Bill Clinton and former Attorney General Eric Holder — took the opportunity to turn the event partisan. Michigan Democratic House Rep. Brenda Lawrence took a moment to recognize Arizona Republican Sen. John McCain, whose funeral is Saturday.

But others seized on Trump's comments and Franklin's message of dignity to speak to the present social and political climate. In pointing out the long lines to pay tribute to Franklin this week, the Rev. Jesse Jackson lamented that the lines to vote often aren't nearly as long.

"Aretha was on the battleground for 60 years," Jackson told the audience. "We have long lines to celebrate death, and short lines for voting. Something is missing. If you leave here today and don't register to vote, you're dishonoring Aretha."

Also the public will be able to see and read articles of huge moments in history, nationally and locally, from Big's Spring own past locals stories and interviews.

"I am taking major moments from each decade since The Herald, or the Daily Herald as is was called when first started, in 1904," said Tammy Scrcengost, Heritage Curator. "I'm going to blow up these stories and articles large enough so that the public can be able to read them, and really get a sense of the people of that time and what was happening."

There will also be a Newspaper Dress Contest, made out of newspapers naturally, to the public going on during the exhibit, with a grand prize going to the person who can fashion the best full size dress made of newspapers. The Texas Country Music Hall of Fame

Tommie Ritter Smith of Carthage is kin to legendary country musician Tex Ritter. “Tex and my dad were first cousins,” says Tommie. “Their dads were brothers.” Tommie has been the chamber exec in Carthage since 1982. Her office is in a historic old antebellum home. In the early 1990s Tommie got the idea to start the Tex Ritter Museum upstairs in the chamber building. She gathered a lot of Tex’s memorabilia and put it on display. Tex was born in Panola County. So was Jim Reeves, another giant in country music. “We think we’re the only county that can lay claim to being the birthplace of two country music hall of famers and international country music stars.” So some Jim Reeves memorabilia was added to the Tex Ritter items.

“In 1997 we started the Texas Country Music Hall of Fame to recognize the importance of country music in the state,” says Tommie. “We began inducting two Texas country musicians every year. We made a list of 300 when we started and that list keeps growing.”

Every year the induction ceremony turns into a concert featuring big names in country music. The crowds have reached more than 2,000 and the inductions are now held in Carthage High School’s new 15 million dollar performing arts center. This year’s honorees were Leon Rausch and the original Chuck Wagon Gang.

“The museum was a popular destination but it was upstairs in an old home,” says Tommie. “We got a group together and approached the city to build a separate museum.” The forward thinking city fathers approved spending two and a half million dollars to fund the project. Since then, another million and a half dollars were approved for improvements. It has been a good move. The museum visitors log shows people from every US state and 50 foreign countries.

It’s a state of the art facility with some valuable items on display loaned by families of the inductees. “They trusted us to take good care of the things they let us display,” says Tommie. “We have 50 displays of Texans that are famous country music stars. We have guitars, cowboy boots and hats, very valuable records and sheet music with the stars’ handwritten notes on them. We have suits tailored for the stars.” A consultant from Nashville does the displays, making the trip to Carthage three times a year to spruce up the displays and add new ones.

Tommie says people who visit the museum on bus tours get special entertainment. “We have several volunteers that come out to entertain the bus tours. We have a little stage set up and they sing the songs of our inductees. My husband is one of them. I talked him into dressing up like Tex Ritter and singing for bus tours and he does a great job.”

Tommy is amazed at what has happened over the years. “It all started because I wanted to honor Tex Ritter in his hometown and it has escalated way beyond my expectations. I cannot believe we are where we are.”

Letters to the Editor

What you can do to help bring I-27 to Big Spring

Dear Editor,

It could be said that Big Spring was politically covered by time and discovery of oil during its initial Big Spring phase. The end result was a refinery. It had its own born Big Spring citizen State Representative to promote water (CRM-WD) and an area citizen to push for a government facility that naturally attracted another facility and jobs.

While we have Federal and State representatives, who all are good and fine peoples, none live or call Big Spring home. They owe allegiance to many other cities in addition to Big Spring. Sufficient it to remark, Big Spring may not be personally represented as it may have been in the past. Yet, we can make a difference with a pen, paper and visiting the voting box in great numbers.

Astute 1930’s President Roosevelt just wanted to make jobs for 3,000 poverty-stricken people with the development of Bonneville Dam. Neither he or anyone present at the dedication ceremony could foresee the enormous economic, wonderful and massive social change to many Western states. Some were immediate, some decades away.

That, Big Spring neighbors, is how we should view the possibility of an interstate 27 to replace U.S. 87. It could take decades to develop, but we could likely center it if we were willing to work for it. We, absent of native representation, must tell every day the advantages of Interstate 27 through Big Spring to Federal and State representatives, the Texas Department of Transportation, and the four Highway Commissioners of Texas. (There will be 5, see below)

What exactly can an Interstate 27 connecting Canada, the US and Mexico do for us in Big Spring? There are so many good examples that it would strain the length of this article. But, I would like to mention a few.

The 18 cents or so of federal tax of every gallon of gas, even that in your lawn mower, would suddenly be dedicated in part to Big Spring. It would retain and remake Big Spring as a national crossroads, and attract the eyes of thousands of various businesses and investors as an important place to locate. It could even focal Big Spring as a form of a trade embassy to demonstrate products of three nations.

Imagine the magnetic tourist attraction of such a place out on the loop. It could attract the next kinds of transportation systems (train or hyper loop perhaps?) and become a mainstay route for EVERYTHING that would feed of other avenues. Other industries come and go, but transportation routes tend to remain. What we do today will be our tomorrow.

First Words at Last Rites

If ordered to stop and think, opposition to the edict would emerge quickly. There’d be protests, fist-shaking, social media barrages and other assorted demonstrations, like lines drawn in sand.

“You can’t make us stop and think,” some would growl. Such angst might remind many of violinists playing while Rome burned to the ground.

The growing gulf between thinkers and non-thinkers must instead become an ocean of growing understanding on important topics which should draw us together. One such topic is patriotism.

We have several calendar dates denoting patriotism, and one approaching on Sept. 11 is Patriot Day. That 9/11/2001 date-living on in infamy-marked the beginning of Americans’ keen awareness of terrorism. The clear call is for all Americans—military or otherwise—to be patriots when our freedom is at stake.

Such awareness should result from lessons learned during World War II. Sadly, too few details were shared by combatants—even with closest family—because many who fought on foreign soil simply couldn’t speak of the atrocities that sometimes were just one rifle swing away. Authenticating their repeated battles, however, were nightmarish screams in the night, when daytime clarity of mind kept memories hidden.

One such combatant was H. C. Pruet, whose National Guard outfit was mobilized for World War II. He, and thousands of others 18 or younger, was a member of the battle-tested 36th Infantry Division.

The heroic acts of this Brown County native they called “Skinny” earned him his country’s Silver and Bronze Stars. For the remaining 35 years of his life, however, he simply didn’t talk about the war. Nor did he ever own a firearm again—or roam the fields as a hunter—as he had done as a youth.

He was just 59 when death came his way. Thankfully, some of his fellow servicemen attended the funeral.

They told Skinny’s family about his repeated acts of bravery, often when the platoon he eventually led was greatly outnumbered.

One spoke of their confidence in Pruet. “Even though there was an officer present, and Skinny hadn’t yet gotten sergeant stripes, we voted to stick with him, even as our landing craft neared battle-torn Italy. If he went, we’d go; if he got down, we would, too,” he said. “We knew who’d get us through.”

As they neared the beaches of Salerno in September, 1943—nine months before the US invasion of Normandy—artillery fire filled the air. Pruet took charge when the landing craft operator lowered the landing gate 200 yards from shore. He knew many would drown if they left the craft so far from shore. Brandishing an Army pistol to emphasize his intent, he ordered the operator to “take us as close as you can, or I’ll shoot.” The guy complied.

Pruett and others endured much, including hunger, atrocities, failing weapons, hand-to-hand combat, loss of limbs and disease. And many paid the ultimate price.

This is but one account of military heroes. If our national moral fabric is to be re-stitched, we must honor sacrifices—then and now—recommitting to true patriotism. At the flutter of a flag, playing of the National Anthem or even the drawing of a breath, surely we should be grateful. All of these are “part and parcel” of the massive debt we owe to Skinny Pruet and his kind who kept freedom alive. Let us first be patriots—reasonable people committed to working out differences in a climate of civility.

I appreciate friends like Tommy Pruet, who was gracious to share stories about his dad—accounts he’d never have known if comrades hadn’t shared “war-time accounts” at the funeral of this blue-collar American hero. Skinny did what he could for as many as he could as long as he could, in both war and peace. He’s the kind of man Tom Brokaw wrote about in his book, The Greatest Generation.

Video shows explosion that killed Austin bombing suspect

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The first publicly released video of Texas police closing in on the suspect in a series of deadly Austin package bombings shows officers approaching his SUV before the vehicle explodes.

Aerial footage released Friday by the Texas Department of Public Safety comes five months after police say 23-year-old Mark Conditt blew himself up inside the SUV along an interstate highway. The package bombings terrorized Austin for three weeks in March, killing two people and badly wounding four others.

The video shows the SUV erupting in a bright flash as an officer says, "Got an explosion. Got an explosion inside the vehicle."

Authorities haven't revealed a motive for the bombings. Investigators say Conditt left a 25-minute cellphone recording in which he allegedly confessed, but they haven't released it to the public.

Federal judge rules against states, says DACA can stay

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge in Texas has declined to order that the U.S. government stop the Obama-era program shielding young immigrants from deportation.

U.S. District Judge Andrew Hanen's ruling on Friday is a blow to opponents of the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program. They filed a lawsuit in hopes Hanen would rule the program unconstitutional.

That would have triggered a conflict with three federal orders that have required the U.S. government to keep accepting DACA renewals even after President Donald Trump tried to end the program last year. Legal experts say such a conflict would have drawn the attention of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Texas led a group of seven states suing the U.S. government to end DACA. With federal officials also now opposing the program, other states intervened to defend it, as did the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

Texas officer who pointed gun at kids cleared of wrongdoing

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A Texas police officer who was captured on video pointing a firearm at children is back on duty after a disciplinary review board cleared him of wrongdoing.

El Paso Police Chief Greg Allen announced the decision Thursday. Allen says the 13-member board of civilians and police officers found El Paso Officer Jose Rios did not wrongfully draw and point his weapon. He says Rios only pointed his gun at one boy who he thought was a "deadly threat."

A video viewed millions of times online shows Rios pointing the gun at the children then arresting a teenager who was recording the confrontation.

Allen says an accusation that the officer choked a boy at the scene was unfounded.

High school team in North Texas breaks 77-game loss streak

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A high school football team in North Texas has broken its 77-game losing streak that dragged on for nearly eight years.

Fort Worth Diamond Hill-Jarvis on Thursday night defeated Dallas Conrad 40-12.

Fort Worth Independent School District spokesman Clint Bond said Friday that the last victory for the Eagles had been on Sept. 18, 2010, in a 31-7 win over Thomas Jefferson, another Dallas school.

Bond says Diamond Hill-Jarvis students celebrated Friday morning by lining the school hallways to welcome the victorious players, who marched through to the sound of drums and cheers.

The Eagles on Sept. 7 play North Dallas.

Court declines review in Texas cheerleaders banner lawsuit

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has declined to review an appeal of a lower court's decision that said cheerleaders' banners with Bible verses at football games are protected private speech.

The Kountze (koontz) School District had appealed last year's ruling by the 9th Court of Appeals in Beaumont that had said the Bible verses on the banners were not government speech that could be regulated by school officials.

David Starnes, an attorney for the cheerleaders, tells KFDM-TV Friday's ruling means that cheerleaders throughout Texas "can freely express their sincerely held religious beliefs while representing their school."

The cheerleaders filed suit in 2012 after the school district said the banners couldn't be displayed. The district later allowed the banners but said it retained the right to restrict their content.

Trump to stump for one-time rival Cruz in Texas in October

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — President Donald Trump is coming to the aid of a one-time rival, Sen. Ted Cruz, suggesting that the Texas Republican is facing a tougher than expected re-election fight.

Trump tweeted Friday that he will headline "a major rally" for Cruz in October and is "picking the biggest stadium in Texas we can find."

He added, "Ted has my complete and total Endorsement," and he called Cruz's Democratic opponent, Rep. Beto O'Rourke, "a disaster for Texas - weak on Second Amendment, Crime, Borders, Military, and Vets!"

O'Rourke's bid to oust Cruz has attracted national attention and he has even drawn comparisons to a young Barack Obama.

Cruz had said he wouldn't be surprised if Trump campaigned in Texas, but he insisted he wouldn't need him to beat O'Rourke.

Texas hasn't elected a Democrat to statewide office since 1994.

Audience members laugh as U.S. Senator Ted Cruz makes joke about the Democratic Party during a campaign stop Thursday, Aug. 30, 2018, in Abilene, Texas. The event at the south Abilene Betty Rose's Little Brisket restaurant was the senator's first public campaign event in Abilene for the 2018 election.

Abuse charges raise pressure to reunite immigrant families

By JULIE WATSON and MARCOS ALEMAN

Associated Press
SAN DIEGO — The Trump administration is under increasing pressure to speed up the reunification of immigrant families it separated at the Mexican border, following allegations three youngsters were sexually abused while in U.S. custody.

The government of El Salvador said the three, ages 12 to 17, were victimized at shelters in Arizona, and it asked the U.S. to make their return a priority.

"May they leave the shelters as soon as possible, because it is there that they are the most vulnerable," Deputy Foreign Relations Minister Liduvina Magarin said in San Salvador on Thursday.

The U.S. government is already facing heavy criticism over its slow pace in reuniting more than 2,600 children who were separated from their parents last spring before the Trump administration agreed to stop the practice. Most have since been reunited, but hundreds remain apart more than a month after the deadline set by a federal judge.

Before the Trump administration reversed course, many of the parents had been deported to their home countries while their children remained in shelters in the U.S. Attorneys for the U.S. government and the immigrant families were scheduled to discuss how to accelerate the process at a hearing Friday in San Diego in front of U.S. District Judge Dana Sabraw, who set the deadline.

Magarin gave few details on the three cases other than to say they involved "sexual violations, sexual abuses." She said

US attorney: MS-13 gang terrorized California farm town

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — More than two dozen MS-13 gang members and affiliates were arrested and charged following a monthslong murder and drug trafficking investigation centered on a rural California farm city, U.S. and state prosecutors said Friday.

The investigation also helped solve killings and assaults in New York, Las Vegas, Los Angeles and Houston, said McGregor Scott, the U.S. attorney in Sacramento.

The notorious street gang took advantage of an understaffed police department in Mendota and terrorized the city, Scott said during a telephone interview on Thursday.

Mendota, with a population of roughly 11,000 people, lies 35 miles (60 kilometers) west of Fresno in California's agriculturally rich Central Valley. Nearly the entire population is Hispanic, with many immigrants from El Salvador.

"The nationwide tentacles of this going out from this little town in Fresno County is dramatic," Scott said Thursday.

MS-13, or La Mara Salvatrucha, was formed in Los Angeles in the 1980s by refugees from El Salvador and is linked to many slayings in certain parts of the U.S. In California, the gang has clashed with rival Nortenos gang members. It also targets its own members for violating gang rules.

President Donald Trump has singled out the gang as a threat to the U.S. and blames weak border enforcement for the group's crimes. But many gang members were born in the U.S.

One indictment accuses two MS-13 gang members of kidnapping and murdering a Fresno County man in December, authorities said. Another federal indictment accuses two other people affiliated with MS-13 of assault.

Another 16 people affiliated with MS-13 in Fresno County are facing charges of drug trafficking in Fresno County and Los Angeles, according to U.S.

prosecutors. Additional charges have been filed in state court.

A wiretap obtained as part of the probe linked MS-13 gang members to slayings and assaults in the other four cities, and additional people were charged there, Scott said Thursday.

He said the crackdown on MS-13 in the Central Valley was not directed by officials in Washington, D.C. Scott said he made the investigation of MS-13 a top priority after receiving a briefing about the gang's brutality upon returning to head the U.S. attorney's office in Sacramento.

Scott became U.S. attorney there for a second time in December. He previously headed that office from 2003 to 2009.

The investigation also included the California attorney general's office and local law enforcement agencies, Scott said.

US ends funding of UN agency for Palestinian refugees

AP photo

By SUSANNAH GEORGE

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States is ending its decades of funding for the U.N. agency that helps Palestinian refugees, the State Department announced Friday, a week after slashing bilateral U.S. aid for projects in the West Bank and Gaza.

The U.S. supplies nearly 30 percent of the total budget of the U.N. Relief and Works Agency, or UNRWA, and had been demanding reforms in the way it is run. The department said in a written statement that the United States "will no longer commit further funding to this irredeemably flawed operation."

The decision cuts nearly $300 million of planned support.

It comes as President Donald Trump and his Middle East pointmen, Jared Kushner and Jason Greenblatt, prepare for the rollout of a much-vaunted but as yet unclear peace plan for Israel and the Palestinians, and it could intensify Palestinian suspicions that Washington is using the humanitarian funding as leverage.

The Palestinian leadership has been openly hostile to any proposal from the administration, citing what it says is a pro-Israel bias, notably after Trump recognized Jerusalem as Israel's capital in December and moved her government is ready with lawyers and psychologists to help the families, adding: "The psychological and emotional impact is forever."

"It's unbelievable that children who were fleeing violence here were met in the United States with the worst violence a child could encounter," said Cesar Rios, director of the Salvadoran Migrant Institute.

In trying to reunite families, the Trump administration has put the onus on the American Civil Liberties Union, asking that the organization use its "considerable resources" to find parents in their home countries, mostly Guatemala, El Salvador and Honduras.

The governments of those countries and nonprofit organizations have been trying to locate the families. Those efforts have included posting public notices and putting hotline numbers on billboards in the hope a parent missing a child might see the signs and call.

"Every day that these children are separated and left in government facilities does more damage," said Lee Gelernt, an ACLU attorney representing separated families. "Even if the facilities were palaces, the separation of young children from their parents causes potentially permanent trauma."

More than 300 parents who have been deported are waiting for their sons and daughters to be returned to them in their homelands. Many are growing increasingly anxious.

Among them is Evelin Roxana Meyer, whose 11-year-old son, Eduardo Almendarez Meyer, was told this week that he won't be leaving the U.S. until Nov. 27. He has been held at a government-contracted shelter in Brownsville, Texas, since he was separated from his father in early June.

The boy's mother said her husband was told when he signed his deportation papers that his son would be waiting for him in Honduras.

"Now it'll be six months before we see him? Oh my God," Meyer said Friday, crying during a telephone interview from her hometown of La Union. "I don't know why it's taking so long. My son is worried. He tells me, 'More time here, Mommy? Oh, no. Why?' I don't know what to tell him."

Child psychologist Barbara Van Dahlen, founder of Give an Hour, a network of mental health professions that is offering to counsel the separated families, said the reports of abuse are likely to worsen the immigrant parents' anxieties.

"I can't imagine the stress, the anxiety, the terror, if I was separated from my child, and then the thought that possibly some of these kids are being abused," Van Dahlen said. "It would be so debilitating and destructive that it would be hard for some parents to function."

3 kids among dozens injured in deadly New Mexico bus crash

By SUSAN MONTOYA BRYAN

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Three children, including two infants, were among the dozens of passengers seriously injured when the commercial bus they were riding in was hit head-on by a semitruck on a New Mexico highway, killing eight people, hospital officials said Friday.

Officials at University of New Mexico Hospital in Albuquerque said 10 patients are hospitalized there, including three adults who are in intensive care, one of whom is in critical condition.

Some patients were expected to undergo surgery Friday and Saturday. While doctors declined to offer specifics, they said the patients that came in during the hours that followed Thursday's crash on Interstate 40 near the Arizona border had injuries that ranged from head trauma to spine fractures and other broken bones.

"Several of them will have a long road of recovery ahead," said Sonlee West, director of the hospital's trauma unit. "We have been in contact with family members of several of the patients, and several of them have been able to talk to their families."

The crash killed eight people and injured many of the 49 people aboard the Greyhound bus heading to Phoenix from Albuquerque. Several passengers were being treated Friday at hospitals in the Gallup area, about 30 miles (48 kilometers) from the crash site.

Authorities said Friday they were working on positively identifying those who were killed through fingerprints and other means.

The semitrailer was headed east on the freeway Thursday afternoon when one of its tires blew, sending the rig carrying produce across the median and into oncoming traffic, where it slammed into the bus, New Mexico State Police said.

Passing motorists described a chaotic scene with passengers on the ground and people screaming.

New York attorney general: No backing down on Trump lawsuit

By TOM McELROY

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Lawyers for President Donald Trump asked a judge to dismiss a lawsuit brought against his charitable foundation by New York's attorney general, arguing that it was politically motivated.

In the motion Thursday, Trump attorney Alan S. Futerfas argued that former New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman "made it his stated mission to 'lead the resistance' and attack Mr. Trump whenever possible" and "used his public antipathy for Mr. Trump to solicit donations for his own re-election campaign and advance his career interests and aspirations."

Trump very publicly announced his intention to dissolve the foundation and donate all of its remaining funds to charity, but the AG "actively stonewalled dissolution," Futerfas wrote.

"At the same time, the NYAG turned a blind eye to serious and significant allegations of misconduct involving the Clinton Foundation, including claims that it, and its subsidiaries, violated New York law by failing to disclose $225 million in donations from foreign governments," Futerfas wrote.

Schneiderman began investigating the Trump Foundation in 2016 following Washington Post reports that its spending personally benefited the presidential candidate. Schneiderman ordered the foundation to stop fundraising in New York.

FUNDING

the U.S. embassy there from Tel Aviv in May. The Palestinian Authority broke off contact with the U.S. after the Jerusalem announcement.

In 2016, the U.S. donated $355 million to the UNRWA, which provides health care, education and social services to Palestinians in the West Bank, Gaza Strip, Jordan, Syria and Lebanon, and it was set to make a similar contribution this year. In January the Trump administration released $60 million in funds but withheld a further $65 million it had been due to provide. The remaining amount — around $290 million — had yet to be allocated.

"When we made a U.S. contribution of $60 million in January, we made it clear that the United States was no longer willing to shoulder the very disproportionate share of the burden of UNRWA's costs that we had assumed for many years," the statement said. "Several countries, including Jordan, Egypt, Sweden, Qatar, and the UAE (United Arab Emirates) have shown leadership in addressing this problem, but the overall international response has not been sufficient."

The statement criticized the "fundamental business model and fiscal practices" of UNRWA, and what the department characterized as the "endlessly and exponentially expanding community of entitled beneficiaries."

Hundreds of thousands of Palestinians fled or were forced from their homes during the war that led to Israel's establishment in 1948. Today, there are an estimated 5 million refugees and their descendants, mostly scattered across the region — a figure that has become a point of contention. Palestinian leaders assert the right of those refugees to return to land now under Israeli control.

Last Friday, the State Department announced the U.S. was cutting more than $200 million in bilateral aid to the Palestinians, following a review of the funding for projects in the West Bank and Gaza. Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas' spokesman called that U.S. decision an attempt to force the Palestinians to abandon their claim to Jerusalem.

Speaking before the announcement on UNRWA, its representative in Washington, Elizabeth Campbell, said the withdrawal of U.S. funding would leave the agency facing a financial crisis, but noted that Saudi Arabia, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and others have provided more than $200 million in new funding to help cover its budget this year.

In recent days, senior Trump administration officials publicly expressed dissatisfaction with UNRWA but stopped short of saying the U.S. would defund the agency.

On Tuesday, Nikki Haley, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, complained that "Palestinians continue to bash America" although it's the main donor for UNRWA. Speaking at the Foundation for Defense of Democracies think tank, Haley also said, "we have to look at right of return" of those classified as Palestinian refugees. She called on Middle East nations to increase aid.

There is deepening international concern over deteriorating humanitarian conditions in the West Bank and Gaza, and the U.S. decision to defund provoked strong and polarized reactions in Washington.

Jeremy Ben-Ami, president of J Street, a liberal advocacy group, said Trump's decision "has the potential to harm millions of innocent civilians" and "will ratchet up the risk of greater destabilization and conflict across the Middle East."

But Richard Goldberg, senior adviser at the Foundation for Defense of Democracies, called it "a win for U.S. taxpayers and peace" that would make Palestinians more self-sufficient and prepare them "for a true peace with Israel."

The State Department statement said the U.S. will intensify dialogue with the United Nations, host governments and international stakeholders about new models and new approaches to help Palestinians, especially schoolchildren, which may include direct bilateral assistance from the U.S. and others.

Smallest North Dakota city to double in population to 4

RUSO, N.D. (AP) — North Dakota's smallest incorporated city was on the verge of dissolving after the death of its longtime mayor. But now it's rebounding, with expectations to double its population — from two residents to four.

The McLean County community of Ruso was on the verge of disincorporation when its population dropped following the July death of 86-year-old Bruce Lorenz. It takes a minimum of three residents for a community to be incorporated, according to the North Dakota Century Code.

"We want to keep it going for Bruce's sake," Laurinda Roloson, the city's auditor and one of Ruso's two remaining residents, told the Minot Daily News. Her husband, Terry Roloson, is the other Ruso resident.

The city discovered that Greg Schmalz qualifies as a resident because he has a Ruso mailbox and makes daily checks on his horses and chickens on land within city limits. So

This undated photo shows the old jail at the center of Ruso, N.D. North Dakota's smallest incorporated city is rebounding after the death of its longtime mayor. On the verge of collapse, the McLean County community of Ruso now expects to soon experience a doubling of its population, from two residents to four.

"Other people have expressed interest in moving out there. We don't want things to slow down," he said. "I'm about preserving what little is left of Ruso. I'm proud of being out there."

on Thursday, he's expected to become the city's next mayor.

Schmalz and his wife, Michelle, currently live in Velva but plan to move later this year to Ruso, where they have a residence under construction.

"We're looking at fall to finish everything up," Greg Schmalz said.

Ruso was first incorporated in 1909, and it had a population of 141 a year later. The city's population dwindled when its last remaining business, the grain elevator, took its last load in 1956.

Schmalz hopes others will follow him to Ruso, which is about 40 miles (64 kilometers) southeast of after allegations that he physically abused women he had dated; he denied the claims.

His successor, Democratic Attorney General Barbara Underwood, filed the lawsuit in June, claiming the Trump Foundation "was little more than a checkbook for payments from Mr. Trump or his businesses to nonprofits, regardless of their purpose or legality." The suit seeks $2.8 million in restitution and the foundation's disbandment.

The filing said Underwood continued the "inflammatory rhetoric, stating publicly that she considers her battles with the President 'the most important work (she) has ever done' and has vowed that such 'work will continue.'"

Trump's lawyers also argued that several impermissible donations by the foundation were due to clerical errors and were all corrected when brought to the attention of foundation officials.

In a statement Thursday, the attorney general's office said it won't back down from "holding Trump and his associates accountable for their flagrant violations of New York law."

"As our lawsuit detailed, the Trump Foundation functioned as a personal piggy bank to serve Trump's business and political interests," the statement said.

Eric Huff was heading to the Grand Canyon with his girlfriend when they came across the crash. The semi's trailer was upside down and "shredded to pieces," and the front of the bus was smashed, he said, with many of the seats pressed together.

Truck driver Santos Soto III shot video showing the front of the Greyhound sheared off and the semi split open, with its contents strewn across the highway. He saw people sobbing on the side of the road as bystanders tried to comfort them.

"I was really traumatized myself, because I've been driving about two years and I had never seen anything like that before," Soto said.

Chris Jones was headed west on Interstate 40 when he caught his first glimpse of the semi turned over. He stopped to help and came across the driver of the semi.

"He was sitting there on the shoulder on the front road, still in shock, trying to figure out what was going on," Jones said.

He said the driver told him that one of his front tires had popped, forcing the truck to veer into oncoming traffic, where it slammed into the bus.

Authorities have not identified the truck driver or the trucking company, saying the investigation is ongoing. The National Transportation Safety Board is helping investigate.

Greyhound spokeswoman Crystal Booker said in a statement that the company was cooperating with authorities and will also complete an investigation of its own.

A pile of debris remained on the shoulder of the highway Friday, but transportation crews had yet to clear it because they said it contained evidence and belongings from the bus passengers.

Steers lose hard-fought season opener to Greenwood 21-12

By JORDAN PARR
Sports Editor

The Steers put up a great effort Friday night. Big Spring hung in the game till the very end and gave Greenwood a real run for their money. The Steers definitely made a few mistakes in the game and had a chance to pull ahead on multiple occasion, but the Rangers kept finding a way to make big plays in big situations to hold off Big Spring and get the win. That said, the Steers look like a good football team ready to change the narrative around their program this season. In the first quarter both defenses stepped up and put their mark on the game each forcing a punt by the opposing offense during their first possession. After forcing a turnover on downs by the Steers on their second possession of the first quarter, Greenwood put together an eight play 67 yard scoring drive to take the lead 7-0 on a 16 yard TD run by Rangers' quarterback #14 Weston Wilber with 5:15 left in the first quarter.

On the ensuing possession the Steers picked up one first down before the Ranger's defense stiffened and forced a punt from Big Spring's own 16 yard-line. As #19 Jeremiah Coolley stepped into the kick, Greenwood came around the edge and blocked the punt and made the recovery on the Steer's 5 yard-line. Two plays later Ranger's running back #4 Trey Cross took the ball across the goal-line on a 3 yard sweep to the left, out flanking the Steers defense and giving Greenwood a 14-0 lead with only 1:02 remaining in the opening quarter. It would have been easy for the Steers to pack it in and get in the "here we go again" mindset, but instead they bowed their necks and fought like heck to get back in the game.

On their next possession Big Spring started the drive with a huge 68 yard bubble screen from #10 Ethan Cortez to his wide receiver #14 DJ Molina all the way down to the Greenwood 13 yard-line, to put the Steers in scoring position to end the first quarter. Unfortunately the Steers were unable to punch it in and turned the ball over on a big sack by the Rangers on fourth down on the Greenwood 21 yard-line. The Steer defense responded and recovered a fumble by Greenwood's QB Wilder two plays later on the Ranger's 25. But Big Spring couldn't capitalize on the mistake and four plays later were forced into another turnover on downs at the Greenwood 21 yard line.

The Steers defense again stopped the Rangers from getting anything going on offense and forced a Greenwood punt. Four plays into Big Springs next, drive on a second and eight from their own 40 yard-line, Cortez hooked up with Molina again for a 60 yard TD strike down the sideline. The score brought the Steers to within eight trailing 14-6 with 5:38 left in the half after missing the extra point.

LEADING OFF: Shaved McCutchen joins Yanks, Donaldson moves

Associated Press

A look at what's happening around the majors today:

CLEAN-CUT CUTCH

Andrew McCutchen is expected to join the Yankees when they host Detroit, a day after being acquired from San Francisco. The 2013 NL MVP will take over right field duties with slugger Aaron Judge still recovering from a broken right wrist. McCutchen was one of the game's most recognizable faces in his younger days with Pittsburgh because of his shoulder-length dreadlocks and well-crafted beard, but old friend and current Yankee infielder Neil Walker informed him Friday the beard had to go — New York has a longstanding policy banning facial hair.

"Just gonna take me a sec to get used to my freshly shaved face," McCutchen joked on Twitter.

WELCOME

Josh Donaldson, Ryan Madson and David Freese were part of the 10 trades that contenders made on the final day they could acquire players and still have them eligible for postseason rosters.

The Brewers were busy Friday, getting starter Gio Gonzalez, outfielder Curtis Granderson and reliever Xavier Cedeno. Milwaukee last reached the playoffs seven years ago has been active since the All-Star break, adding infielders Mike Moustakas and Jonathan Schoop in July.

HE'S BACK

Cardinals outfielder Marcell Ozuna is ready to come off the disabled list. He's been out with right shoulder inflammation, and manager Mike Shildt said Ozuna will see limited action for the near future. ... Yankees catcher Gary Sanchez is set to be activated off the DL — he hasn't played since July 23 because of a groin injury. The 2017 All-Star is hitting just .188 with 14 homers in 66 games this season.

WEST WRANGLING

Patrick Corbin (10-5, 3.15 ERA) pitches for the NL West-leading Diamondbacks at Dodger Stadium. He is 1-0 with a 0.98 ERA in three starts against Los Angeles this season. The Dodgers trail Arizona by one game and will start Clayton Kershaw (6-3, 2.39), who is 3-1 with a 1.85 ERA, 46 strikeouts and three walks since the All-Star break.

TEMPER, TEMPER

Managers A.J. Hinch, Ron Gardenhire and Aaron Boone will try to stick around a little longer after they all got ejected.

Boone made the most animated argument Friday, squatting behind home plate like a catcher and pretending to frame a pitch to illustrate his point in the Yankees' 7-5 win over Detroit. Tigers skipper Ron Gardenhire was tossed soon after that, disputing a check-swing.

Hinch got the heave-ho when he became upset over a couple calls on Houston star Jose Altuve.

San Francisco Giants' Andrew McCutchen, center, is congratulated in the dugout after scoring during the eighth inning of a baseball game against the Cincinnati Reds, in Cincinnati. The playoff-contending New York Yankees are close to completing a trade for San Francisco Giants outfielder Andrew McCutchen. A person familiar with the negotiations told The Associated Press on Thursday night, Aug. 30, 2018, the Yankees would send infielder Abiatal Avelino and another minor leaguer to San Francisco for McCutchen. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the deal wasn't finalized.

US OPEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Serena Williams equaled her most-lopsided victory ever in 30 professional meetings with sister Venus, beating her 6-1, 6-2 in the third round of the U.S. Open.

Serena shook off an early ankle injury to win seven straight games and seize control in perhaps her most dominant performance since giving birth to her daughter a year ago Saturday.

The sisters' earliest meeting in a Grand Slam tournament in 20 years was over early, with Venus unable to do anything to blunt Serena's power, even after the crowd tried desperately to get behind her early in the second set.

Earlier, top-ranked Rafael Nadal overcame a shaky start and used his customary relentless style to wear down No. 27 seed Karen Khachanov physically and mentally, eventually getting to the fourth round with an entertaining and back-and-forth 5-7, 7-5, 7-6 (7), 7-6 (3) victory that took 4 hours, 23 minutes.

Nadal was two points away from falling into a two-set hole. Then he was two points away from dropping the third set. And then he was one point from losing the fourth set and being pushed to a fifth. As all of those key moments presented themselves, he managed to come through.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Andrew McCutchen is shaving his beard for a possible World Series run. Ryan Madson is switching bullpens, trying to help another team win a title. And Josh Donaldson is hoping he's healthy enough to contribute.

The Milwaukee Brewers? They were a busy bunch, swinging trades to get starter Gio Gonzalez, outfielder Curtis Granderson and reliever Xavier Cedeno.

Several contending teams swung into action, making trades to bolster potential playoff rosters. A player must be on a club by Aug. 31 to be eligible for the postseason.

McCutchen was sent from San Francisco to the New York Yankees for a pair of minor leaguers.

The Dodgers, having seen closer Kenley Jansen wobble since coming off the disabled list, got Madson from the Nationals for a minor league pitcher.

The Indians' trade for Donaldson might've been the most intriguing of the day. Cleveland is running away with the AL Central, but it's not certain how Donaldson, a third baseman who was the 2015 AL MVP, might be used. Donaldson hasn't played in the majors since May 28 because of a strained calf and only began a minor league rehab assignment this week.

GYMNASTICS

DENVER (AP) — Not a month into her new job as CEO of the U.S. Olympic Committee, Sarah Hirshland has seen enough from USA Gymnastics. She's calling for yet another shake-up in the federation's leadership as it tries to remake itself in the wake of the Larry Nassar sex-abuse scandal.

Hirshland sent out a statement calling for changes in the USA Gymnastics leadership, only hours after the federation awkwardly fired the coach it had hired only three days earlier as its elite program coordinator. The coach, Mary Lee Tracy, was an early supporter of Nassar when allegations against him began to surface. Then, without permission this week, Tracy reached out to one of her fiercest critics, gold-medalist Aly Raisman, who is suing USAG.

GOLF

NORTON, Mass. (AP) — Justin Rose missed the cut in the FedEx Cup playoffs opener and decided to make the most of it. He stayed home in the Bahamas for six days, opting out of the pro-am and not arriving to the Dell Technologies Championship until the evening for the opening round.

And then he was off and running at the TPC Boston.

On a breezy day that kept scoring unusually high, Rose putted for birdie on all but two holes and made his six birdies count by keeping bogeys off his card. Three birdies over his last four holes gave him a 6-under 65 and a one-shot lead.

Russell Knox and Abraham Ancer were one shot behind with strong finishes of their own.

In his first time back at the TPC Boston in five years, Tiger Woods had a 72, the 10th time in his last 11 tournaments he didn't break par in the opening round.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Georgia Hall shot a 9-under 63 to take a three-stroke lead in the Cambia Portland Classic and break the tournament 36-hole record.

The Women's British Open winner four weeks ago for her first LPGA Tour title, the 22-year-old Englishwoman made five straight birdies in the middle of the back nine. She missed a chance to match the course record of 62 when her long birdie try went to the right on the par-4 18th.

Hall had a 15-under 129 total. She had four birdies on the front nine, three in a row on Nos. 5-7, and began the birdie streak on the par-5 12th at tree-lined Columbia Edgewater.

Minjee Lee was second, following her opening 64 with a 68. Marina Alex, the first-round leader after tying the course record with a 62, had a late bogey in a 71 to fall into a tie with Megan Khang at 11 under.

SOCCER

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — Tiarna Davidson scored her first career goal, Christen Press added a second-half goal and the U.S. women's national team extended its unbeaten streak to 20 games with a 3-0 victory over Chile in an exhibition match.

Four weeks after winning the Tournament of Nations in Illinois, the Americans looked fairly sharp in their first-ever meeting with Chile in front of a large and lively Southern California crowd.

The U.S. improved to 17-0-3 since last year's Tournament of Nations. Ellis used 17 players and experimented with combinations in this comfortable friendly for the world's No. 1-ranked team. Those experiments should yield results that will aid Ellis' preparations for games that matter against tougher opponents.

The sides will play another exhibition in San Jose on Tuesday in the Americans' final warmup match before the start of World Cup qualifying in early October.

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — Tiarna Davidson scored her first career goal, Christen Press added a second-half goal and the U.S. women's national team extended its unbeaten streak to 20 games with a 3-0 victory over Chile in an exhibition match Friday night.

Four weeks after winning the Tournament of Nations in Illinois, the Americans looked fairly sharp in their first-ever meeting with Chile in front of a large and lively Southern California crowd.

"This was a good game in terms of our preparation for qualifiers," coach Jill Ellis said. "It was two good halves. But I think we've got room for improvement."

The U.S. improved to 17-0-3 since last year's Tournament of Nations. Ellis used 17 players and experimented with combinations in this comfortable friendly for the world's No. 1-ranked team. Those experiments should yield results that will aid Ellis' preparations for games that matter against tougher opponents.

The sides will play another exhibition in San Jose on Tuesday in the Americans' final warmup match before the start of World Cup qualifying in early October.

"When you're planning for a tournament or for World Cup qualifiers, you want to put a lot of clubs in your bag," Ellis said. "There are just things that players have to execute in a game to get a feeling for it."

Chile is already ticketed for its first World Cup next year due to its second-place finish in the Copa America, but the Americans demonstrated superior speed and organization from the start. The U.S. went ahead early when the 19-year-old Davidson got her head on Tobin Heath's corner.

The U.S. extended its lead on a Chilean own-goal, and Press scored on a tap-in in the 59th minute. Press also had two apparent goals taken off the board by a zealous American referee, disappointing a near-capacity crowd of 23,544 at StubHub Center, the team's most frequently used home venue. The crowd was the second-largest to see the U.S. women this year.

Davidson, who is fresh off an NCAA title at Stanford, is getting regular call-ups this year as the youngest player on the U.S. roster. She is only the second teenager since 2013 to play for the team.

The U.S. went up 2-0 in the 32nd minute when Chile defender Carla Guerrero blocked Julie Ertz's header with her chest, but couldn't stop the ricochet from crossing the line.

Before the game, US Soccer recognized Press, who grew up a short drive from Carson, for becoming the 37th woman to play in 100 matches earlier in the year.

Press, who wore the captain's armband, then caught Julie Foudy for 13th place in team history with her 45th career goal — but only after having two scores denied by the officials.

Colorado rolls to 4th straight win over Colorado State

DENVER (AP) — Steven Montez ran the offense at an energetic, up-tempo pace. Colorado piled up points at that rate, too.

Montez threw for 338 yards and four touchdowns, including an 89-yard strike to Laviska Shenault Jr., as the Buffaloes beat Colorado State for the fourth straight time with a 45-13 rout on Friday night.

It's the most points Colorado (1-0) has scored against the Rams (0-2) since 1996.

"This team could be special," Montez said.

Montez had the offense clicking early, completing his first 12 passes to tie a school record to begin a game. He began the scoring spree with a 38-yard TD run on Colorado's opening possession. It's the longest scamper for a score by a Buffaloes quarterback since Kordell Stewart went 60 yards on Oct. 22, 1994.

The mobile Montez found wide-open receivers all evening in a game played at the home of the Denver Broncos. He was in complete rhythm with Shenault, who caught 11 passes for 211 yards. On his long touchdown, Shenault hauled in a short pass over the middle, made a player miss and was off to the races.

Behind the play, Montez raised his hands in celebration.

"That game was extremely fun," Shenault said. "Steven, he's great. He's just great. His work ethic and just how hard he always works behind the scenes."

Phillip Lindsay, who's now with the Broncos.

Colorado rolled up 596 total yards against a porous Rams defense that surrendered 617 in a 43-34 loss to Hawaii last weekend.

Rams coach Mike Bobo hobbled along the sideline as he continues to deal with numbness in his feet. Bobo had an assistant shadowing him just in case the action got too close. He watched from the coaches' box last weekend.

"Give Colorado credit, they came out and exploited us in a lot of ways," Bobo said. "No. 1 would have to be speed on the perimeter, they did a great job of getting the ball outside and made play after play. ... At the end of the day we got whipped."

It was a rough night for Colorado

State QB K.J. Carta-Samuels a week after throwing for a program-best 537 yards. Under constant duress, Carta-Samuels threw for 176 yards, a TD and an interception. He was spelled at times in the second half by Collin Hill, a redshirt sophomore who's returning from a knee injury.

THE TAKEAWAY

Colorado: It wasn't all smooth — Montez threw an interception and receiver K.D. Nixon lost a fumble — but as far as openers go, coach Mike MacIntyre will gladly take this one. He's 5-1 against Colorado State as the coach of the Buffaloes.

Colorado State: A streak of five straight bowl appearances could be in serious jeopardy. The Rams have a brutal schedule ahead, including games against Arkansas, at Florida and at Boise State.

THIS & THAT

Montez matched Joel Klatt's school record of 12-straight completions to open a game. Klatt set his mark on Nov. 12, 2005. ... Lindsay was in attendance wearing a Buffaloes ball cap. "They're looking sharp for the first game," he said. ... The attendance was 70,158, down 3,774 from a season ago. ... Colorado now leads the series 66-22-2.

TACKLES GALORE

Colorado sophomore linebacker Nate Landman finished with 16 tackles and an interception.

"I see the Nate Landman I see every day in practice," MacIntyre said. "He's a football player that arrives in an angry mood and makes plays."

GUT CHECK

Back-to-back losses aren't sitting well with Colorado State senior safety Jordan Fogal.

"Some guys care more than others and it can't be like that," he said. "You get blown out at home, get embarrassed at home. You come out here against a big rival and get embarrassed again. What more do you need to perform better? Got to get to work."

UP NEXT

Colorado: Travel to Nebraska a week from Saturday for the Buffaloes' first meeting with the Cornhuskers since 2010 when they were Big 12 rivals. Colorado trails the all-time series 18-49-2.

Colorado State: Return to Canvas Stadium for a game against Arkansas a week from Saturday. The Rams have hosted an SEC school only once — in 1981 against No. 19 Mississippi State.

Taylor scores twice, No. 4 Wisconsin beats W. Kentucky

By GENARO C. ARMAS

AP Sports Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Jonathan Taylor took the handoff and went left as the Wisconsin offensive line and three tight ends cleared a path to the end zone.

The dynamic back waited patiently for the holes and weaved through traffic. The closest any defender got to tackling Taylor was when defensive back Kyle Bailey reached out but could only tug at his jersey.

For openers, not a bad start for the fourth-ranked Badgers and their star tailback.

Taylor had two long touchdown runs, Alex Hornibrook threw for 257 yards and two scores and Wisconsin opened the season with a 34-3 victory over Western Kentucky on Friday night.

The Badgers had some ups and downs. Taylor fumbled, while the vaunted offensive line was challenged early by Western Kentucky's surprising pressure. Hornibrook missed what looked like a couple easy throws to open receivers.

"Offensively we were doing some good things and then we'd kind of sputter," coach Paul Chryst said. "But they kept their poise and that you appreciate because no game is going to go perfect."

Taylor finished with 145 yards on 18 carries, even watching most of the fourth quarter from the sideline with the game well in hand for Wisconsin. He picked up where he left off last year, when he rushed for an FBS-record 1,977 yards as a freshman.

Three tight ends and the Badgers' burly offensive line helped spring Taylor for a 47-yard touchdown run in the first quarter.

"He gave us a heck of a spark, and that first touchdown he didn't do it alone," Chryst said. "There were a lot of guys that made that happen."

Taylor scored from 30 yards with 3:48 left in the second quarter as the Badgers closed the first half with 14 consecutive points.

He had 100 yards and 11 carries by the half, when the Badgers held a 24-0 lead.

"You look at that team and it's a complete team in every way, shape and form," Western Kentucky coach Mike Sanford said.

Drew Eckels was 15 of 26 for 167 yards in his first career start for the Hilltoppers, while also running for 38 yards on seven carries.

Known as a passing team last year in Sanford's first season, Western Kentucky tried to keep Wisconsin off-balance early with read-option plays.

It didn't really work. The Hilltoppers punted on the first six possessions, including four three-and-outs.

A trick play flopped, too, when receiver Quin Jer-nighan's fluttering pass for Eckels from the 10 was picked off by cornerback Faion Hicks in the third quarter.

AP Photo

Wisconsin quarterback Alex Hornibrook looks to pass the ball as Western Kentucky linebacker Der'Quione Mobley watches during the first half of an NCAA college football game Friday, Aug. 31, 2018, in Madison, Wis.

"We just tried to overthink some things. We did a good job but just have to capitalize more," Eckels said.

BADGERING DEFENSE

A young defense working in seven new starters forced two turnovers inside Wisconsin's 5.

"It was just the ability to carry over what we did in practice," said linebacker Ryan Connelly, one of four returning starters. "The young guys behind us, the fact that they were communicating and talking al; game just really makes you feel confident in them."

CATCHING UP

A.J. Taylor paced the short-handed receiving corps with five catches for 85 yards, while Garrett Groshek turned a screen pass into a 43-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter for a 31-point lead.

The Badgers finished with a flurry, scoring on five of six drives after punting on three of their first four possessions.

TOP THIS

Defensive back Drell Greene finished with seven tackles and recovered Taylor's fumble in the third quarter. ... Linebacker Ben Holt had six tackles, including a career high-tying 1 1/2 for a loss.

POLL IMPLICATIONS

The Badgers probably had a convincing enough win to allow them to stay at fourth in the poll.

THE TAKEAWAY

Western Kentucky: The defense posed an early challenge up front with pressures and blitzes against Wisconsin's line. Hornibrook was sacked three times in the first half. But a Conference USA team picked to finish fifth in its division couldn't take advantage of the Badgers' slow start.

"I did like a lot of things, starting with the way they fought against the best offensive line in the country and the best running back in the country hands down. It was something to be seen," Sanford said.

Wisconsin: A young secondary featuring three first-year starters had a solid opener. Safety Scott Nelson, in particular, played well with seven tackles and two pass breakups, and showed a propensity to deliver hard hits. It was a confidence-building night for a unit that will face tougher tests later this season.

Serena matches her easiest win over Venus in US Open rout

By BRIAN MAHONEY

AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Serena Williams kept booming big shots for winners, never allowing herself to feel sorry for the overmatched player on the other side.

So what if it happened to be her big sister?

The Williams sisters, long ago in careers that have spanned 20 years and 30 meetings as professionals, learned they had to view each other only as opponents — and in Serena's eyes, Venus is the best one she's ever played.

"Even though it's difficult, especially for me," Serena said, "we just do the best that we can."

On Friday, it was perhaps the best she's ever done against Venus.

Serena equaled her most-lopsided victory against her sister with a 6-1, 6-2 rout in the third round of the U.S. Open.

Serena shook off an early ankle injury to win seven straight games and seize control in perhaps her most dominant performance since giving birth to her daughter a year ago Saturday.

The sisters' earliest meeting in a Grand Slam tournament in 20 years was over early, with Venus unable to do anything to blunt Serena's power, even after the fans that were part of Friday's single-day record crowd of 70,162 tried desperately to get behind her with pleas of "Come on, Venus!" early in the second set.

"I think it's by far the best match I ever played against her in forever," Serena said of the match that lasted just 1 hour, 12 minutes. "But I don't know about ever, ever. It probably was. I played much better tonight than I have since I started this journey on my way back."

They hadn't played this early in a Grand Slam since Venus won in the second round of the 1998 Australian Open in their first meeting as pros, and only once over the next two decades had either won so decisively. Serena won by the same score in a semifinal victory in Charleston, South Carolina, in 2013.

"I think it's the best match she's ever played against me," Venus said. "I don't think I did a lot wrong. But she just did everything right."

Serena, the No. 17 seed, will face Kaia Kanepi of Estonia, who knocked out top-ranked Simona Halep in the first round.

Serena, who turns 37 next month, leads the series 18-12 with her sister, 11-5 in Grand Slam tournaments. But this one wasn't expected to be so easy, not with Serena still working her way back into form after returning to the tour in the spring.

But this was the type of tennis that has brought her to 23 Grand Slam singles titles, the ability to pound balls all over the court and chase down the rare shots that looked like they might get past her.

"Obviously that level is definitely where she's going to want to stay during this whole tournament," Venus said.

Serena pounded 10 aces to just one for Venus, the No. 16 seed who was perhaps a little drained after two tough matches to begin the tournament, including a three-setter against 2004 U.S. Open champion Svetlana Kuznetsova in her opener.

Serena had an easier time in the first two rounds, though that was expected to change Friday under the lights in Arthur Ashe Stadium. They had combined for eight titles in Flushing Meadows, six by Serena, and each had beaten the other in a U.S. Open final.

But there was no beating Serena on this night, and the discouraged look on Venus' face across much of the match indicated she seemed to realize it.

"I mean, she played so well, I never got to really even touch any balls," said Venus, a semifinalist at the U.S. Open last year. "When your opponent plays like that, it's not really anything to be upset about."

It looked as if Serena could have trouble when, in the second game of the match, her right ankle turned awkwardly when Venus hit behind her on a shot. Serena stood near the baseline with her back to the court for quite a few seconds, then motioned to the chair umpire that she wanted to see the trainer at the next change-over.

Serena had the ankle treated with a 2-1 lead, then broke in the next game, helped when Venus missed an easy swinging volley wide. She would break again for a 5-1 lead, then pound two aces in the next service game to wrap up the first set in 31 minutes.

Press converted a penalty in first-half injury time, but the goal was waved off. In a curious interpretation of soccer rules, the referee made the call because Crystal Dunn had committed a foul at the top of the box before the kick.

"It was really weird after the penalty," Press said. "I thought it was a goal. No idea what happened, and then (the Chileans) were off transitioning. No time for explanations, and then we were off to halftime. I think the focus for us was just to raise the level and bring more quality."

Press then banged home a clean header off

Davidson's corner kick in the 56th minute, but it too was waved off, apparently for an unrelated foul in the box.

Megan Rapinoe is skipping both friendlies against Chile to rest her injured rib from NWSL play.

UCLA defender Hailie Mace made her second career appearance for the U.S. as a second-half substitute.

Neither team was able to put together another scoring drive in the half. Greenwood's possession following the Big Spring touchdown ended with a punt after a huge third down sack by Steer's linebacker #7 Able Clark put them way behind the chains and ended a pretty good drive up to that point. With less than two minutes left in the half and the ball deep in their own territory the Steers were content to run the ball and go into half-time trailing 14-6.

Big Spring received the second half kickoff and returned it out to the 38 yard-line giving them good starting field position. But the Steers were unable to get anything going to open the second half and had to punt the ball after a quick three-and-out. Greenwood got the ball for their first possession of the second half at their own 46 yard-line. The Rangers put together another impressive drive working the ball all the way down to the Steers 10. However, once again Big Spring's defense rose to the occasion and got a huge stop on 4-6 to force the turnover on downs and keep the score at 14-6.

The Steers, invigorated by the play of their defense, really started to move the ball well led by their outstanding running back #2 CJ Harris who made big plays all night. Five plays into the drive Harris made a great play on a screen pass to get the ball across mid-field before he was hit hard in the legs and according to the officials fumbled the ball before he hit the ground, a contentious call at best.

Greenwood took over on their own 41, following the fumble, and went on a 10 play 59 yard scoring drive to start the fourth quarter. The drive was capped off with a TD pass on a corner route from Rangers' QB Wilber to WR #11 Brody Ray to extend the lead to 21-6 with 10:12 left in the gam and the extra point being good.

Big Spring got the ball back on their own 12 yard-line after a block in the back call brought back a huge kick return. The Steers put together their best drive of the game, an 18 play 88 yard scoring drive that ended with an amazing leaping catch over a defender in the end-zone by Steers wide-out #19 Jeremiah Cooley for a 12 yard touchdown. With a failed two point conversion Big Spring trailed 21-12 with only 2:39 remaining in the game.

Cooley kicked the ensuing kickoff out of the back of the end-zone for a touchback. Greenwood took over at the 25 yard-line and the Steers D did it again, forcing another three and out. Using their timeouts effectively Big Spring was able to get the ball back with on their own 45 with 1:34 seconds left in the game. The Steers drove the ball all the way down to the Greenwood seven with only 38 seconds left before Cortez tried to force a throw into the endzone and was picked off by Greenwood's #30 Gaique Marquez to ice the game.

It was a hard fought game and the Steers were right there in it the whole time against a team projected to make a deep playoff run in 4A this year. No matter what happened there was no quite in this team and they looked like a team that not only could have beat Greenwood but had the opportunities and talent to do so. A few plays break the other way and this is an entirely different game. Coach McLemore said of his teams performance after the game that "We made way to many mistakes, but I told our kids, 'if you give us the effort we can fix the mistakes' and I can't fault their effort, everyone of our kids played hard the whole game. So now its up to us as a staff to fix our mistakes and clean some things up, I think we have a great football team and once we get some of those penalties and turnovers figured out I believe we are good enough to be right there as the season moves along".

Spread the Music

Giving a new life through melody

By AMBER MANSFIELD
Staff Writer

I've always been in awe of people who can sing and play guitar. As a young girl, I would get up in the middle of the night and secretly listen to singers and bands like Patsy Cline, Whitney Houston and Queen into the wee hours of the morning.

As a teenager, instead of the rebellious rock music, I rebelled to Frank Sinatra. I've always connected with music, and I always felt great afterwards – now I know why. There have been a lot of recent research that shows, listening to music improves mental well-being and boosts physical health in surprising and astonishing ways.

"I don't sing because I'm happy; I'm happy because I sing." – William James.

If you're looking for an easy way to transform your mood, then cue the music. When someone listens to music they like, research proves that the brain releases dopamine, a "feel-good" or "high" feeling, neurotransmitter.

In a 2013 April addition of Science Magazine, Valorie Salimpoor, a neu-roscientist who at the time worked at McGill University in Quebec, Canada, injected eight music-lovers with a radioactive substance that binds to dopamine receptors after they listened to their favorite music. A PET scan (a type of nuclear medicine imaging, I had to Google that one), showed that large amounts of dopamine were released, which BIOLOGICALLY caused the participants to feel emotions like happiness, excitement, and joy. This also confirmed that dopamine is the source of such intense experiences, such as "the chills" when listening to music. Studies have also shown that music can buoy your mood and fend off depression, improve blood flow in ways similar to statins, lower your levels of stress-related hormones like cortisol and ease pain. A lot of doctors even listen to music during an operation, and some doctors say listening to music before surgery can even improve post-surgery outcomes.

Albert Einstein declared, "If I were not a physicist, I would probably be a musician."

How can music do so much good? Music seems to "selectively activate" neurochemical systems and brain structures associated with positive mood, emotion regulation, attention and memory in ways that promote beneficial changes, says Executive Director Dan Cohen, founder of Music and Memory.

"There's also no single "music center" in the brain," says Cohen on his website Music & Memory. "One thing people find surprising is that music activates nearly every region of brain we've mapped so far."

To me, this hints at music's universality and power to affect us. Parkview Nursing and Rehab also believes in the power of music since they have brought Cohen's Music and Memory Program to the Residents at Parkview.

"An estimated 5.7 million Americans of all ages have Alzheimer's. An estimated 5.7 million Americans of all ages are living with Alzheimer's dementia in 2018," said Laurie Martinez, Activities Director at Parkview. "Dan was, well is a social worker who would go to facilities and put head phones on these people who have either dementia or alzheimer's with crazy positive results."

Martinez went on to say that she went to training in Austin, Texas, for Music and Memory and said they showed an example of how amazing music really is for these patients. Martinez saw a documentary called, Alive Inside: A Story of Music and Memory.

"So there is one man who suffers from dementia, named Henry. In the film it shows him just sitting in his wheelchair, he doesn't move or talk. Dan asked his family what kind of music he used to listen, Jazz I believe, and when they put those headphones on Henry he literally came alive again going little dances and singing," said Martinez. "What's even more astounding is that even after taking the headphones off for a short period Henry is able to recall memories and can tell you his favorites songs. This coming from a man who didn't even speak." With more than 11 million views, you can see Henry's documentary, Alive Inside: A Story of Music and Memory on YouTube today, boosting awareness about Music and Memory.

Parkview started up Music and Memory in June this year, and when Martinez came back to share with the whole staff of Parkview about Music and Memory and the staff were just in tears, not because they were sad, but because they were so happy to do something that will benefit the residents. Martinez also stated that since June already those who use the program have shown amazing results.

"We have one lady resident here who suffers from dementia, and before this program, she would cry a lot, get agitated, would hardly even eat. After talking with her family we were surprised to find out she used to listen to rock in roll," said Martinez. "Now she hardly ever cries, smiles all the time, and can now eat hamburgers instead of barely finishing an Ensure Shake like before." Martinez also confirmed that music can really have an impact on mood and well-being.

An April 2018 study reports that "objective evidence from brain imaging shows personally meaningful music is an alternative route for communicating with patients who have Alzheimer's disease." The research, published in The Journal of Prevention of Alzheimer's Disease, demonstrates that familiar music may facilitate attention, reward and motivation, which in turn makes it more possible to manage emotional distress in Alzheimer's.

While the study's small sample size and single imaging sessions leave room for more research to be done, the findings mark a significant step toward demonstrating how Music & Memory's personalized music program is a therapeutic mechanism to address measurable improvement in mood, awareness and quality of life for people with dementia.

"We were approached by a resident's daughter who asked if her dad could also have a pair of headphones for himself. Now this resident doesn't suffer from anything, but before he started listening to music, he would hardly interact with other, wouldn't even come to eat in the cafeteria room, and would just always eat and be in his room, and I would have to get him for anything," Martinez said. "Now he comes to Bingo and other activities and is already there waiting before I even have a chance to go get him. He likes to come eat with everyone else, and likes to flirt with our ladies. I keep going back to Henry's story, just like Henry, it's like he came alive inside."

Charles Darwin once remarked, "If I had my life to live over again, I would have made a rule to read some poetry and listen to some music at least once every week." Spread the music and give a new life.

Going to the Chapel

Mr. Andrew Jason Trent-Nichols and Mrs. Jennifer Dolan Trent-Nichols were married in a private wedding ceremony in the afternoon of June 30, 2018, at the Victorian Chapel at the Chapel of the Flowers in Las Vegas, NV.

Their candlelight, double heirloom-band ceremony was officiated by The Reverend Robb Greer. Music for the ceremony was provided by harpist Emily Montoya. Following the ceremony, the newlyweds were received at the Eiffel Tower Restaurant for an intimate haute cuisine dinner overlooking the Bellagio dancing fountains. On the eve of the wedding, the couple dined beneath the kinetic 'Moon' sculpture at Mr. Chow. A cheerful al fresco brunch was hosted at Mon Ami Gabi on the morning of the wedding. The prenuptial brunch featured espresso, crêpes, and France's World Cup match victory over Argentina.

The wedding chapel was adorned with opulent bohemian-style altar sprays featuring Duchesse de Brabant pink tea roses, New Dawn pink floribunda roses, Texas bluebells, lavender Madame Butterfly snapdragons, Aurora Deep Purple delphiniums, Endless Summer blue hydrangeas, hanging amaranthus, petite ivory wax flowers, bells of Ireland, salal, and silver dollar eucalyptus. The pew markers featured desert wildflowers and hanging amaranthus. Blush and bashful pink rose petals were strewn down the aisle of the chapel nave.

The bride wore an Edwardian-style full-length white satin wedding gown with a vintage Irish lace train and detailing, as well as an elbow-length iridescent tulle veil with pearl inlays, Tiffany diamond halo earrings, and Lanvin ballet flats. She carried a bridal bouquet featuring 24 pink-promise hybrid tea roses, hand-tied with a white satin ribbon and iridescent tulle overlay, secured with pearl push buttons.

Rainbow Connection, the ceremony prelude, was played as the bridegroom took his place at the altar. At the entrance of the bride, Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring played as she walked in procession through the chapel nave to the altar. Upon the bride's arrival at the altar, the bridegroom presented her with a yellow rose, in honor of their shared Texan heritage. The harpist played Perfect by Ed Sheeran as the minister officiated the ceremony that featured an exchange of personalized wedding vows that were written by the bridegroom and edited by the bride. Mendelssohn's Wedding March from A Midsummernight's Dream, Op. 61, No. 4 played during the recessional.

At the wedding dinner, Mrs. Trent-Nichols wore a dusty rose lace wrap dress with Swarovski-covered kitten heels and a Pearl of the Concho necklace. As part of their post-nuptial fête, the newlyweds were presented with a heart-shaped lemon chiffon wedding cake topped with pink-promise rosebuds, recalling the same pink-promise roses featured in the bridal bouquet. The cake was served with a raspberry coulis, alongside chocolate-covered strawberries, pâte de fruits, and petite macarons. After the dinner, the newlyweds enjoyed a front row-viewing of The Beatles LOVE by Cirque du Soleil.

The bride is a native of the Permian Basin and a former teacher for Big Spring ISD. She currently serves as the content specialist for USC Learning Support at The University of Southern California. She is a graduate of Texas Tech University and The University of Southern California. At Texas Tech, she earned a bachelor of arts degree in social work and a master of education degree in special education with a focus in educational diagnostics. At USC, she earned a master of social work degree. She is presently completing her doctor of philosophy degree in English with a focus in technical communication and rhetoric at Texas Tech.

The groom is native of Snyder, Texas. He currently serves as a high school English teacher for Snyder ISD. After living in places like San Marcos, Austin, Fort Lauderdale, Los Angeles, and France, he chose to come back to his hometown to teach and share his enthusiasm for reading and writing with a new generation of West Texans. He is a graduate of Texas State University, where he earned a bachelor of arts degree in English and French and a master of education degree in secondary education with a focus in education technology.

After enjoying their extended weekend in Vegas, the newlyweds embarked on a summer-long Texas road trip. Their overseas honeymoon in Paris and Amiens, France, will take place at a later date. The couple will make their home in Scurry County.

50 Years of Love

Doug and Jackie (Welch) Shelly, of Big Spring, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception held on Sept. 1, 2018, hosted by their children.

The Shellys were married on Aug. 31, 1968, at Bible Baptist Church in Grand Prairie, Texas. The couple have two children, son Chris of Big Spring, and daughter and son-in-law Angela and Paul Platt of Canyon Lake, Texas.

The Shellys have served the Lord in various ministries over the last 49 years, serving the last 28 as Pastor of East Side Baptist Church. The couple have always looked to the Lord to guide them through everyday, and thank him for allowing them to continue to fall in love with each other again and again through the years.

Eminem drops new album 'Kamikaze'

By MARK KENNEDY

AP Entertainment Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Eminem picked a busy day to surprise the world his new album — "Kamikaze" was released only hours before the funerals of Aretha Franklin and the Washington tribute to the late Sen. John McCain.

The 13-track CD includes the song "Venom," which will feature in the upcoming film of the same name. The disc also includes two songs featuring Jessie Reyez.

The cover shows the rear end of a fighter plane — recalling a similar cover of the Beastie Boys' 1986 album "Licensed to Ill." The rapper dropped the album just after midnight Thursday, tweeting: "Tried not 2 overthink this 1... enjoy."

The album doesn't find Eminem in a peaceful place. It kicks off with "The Ringer," in which he says he wants to "punch the world" in the face.

Emmy Rossum exiting 'Shameless' after upcoming 9th season

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Emmy Rossum is saying goodbye to "Shameless" after the show's upcoming ninth season.

In an emotional Facebook post Thursday, Rossum said playing her complex character was a "gift" and called the past eight years the best of her life.

Showtime Networks programming chief Gary Levine said the network was saddened by Rossum's decision to leave and praised her work as Fiona, daughter to William H. Macy's dysfunctional patriarch, Frank.

In 2016, Rossum reportedly sought pay parity with fellow series star Macy.

Executive producer John Wells said work is underway on a season finale aimed at giving Rossum and her character a worthy send-off.

As the series continues, Wells said, the door will remain open for Rossum's Fiona to visit or return home.

The ninth season of "Shameless" debuts Sept. 9.

Roger's Review: Crazy Rich Asians

I'm going to preface this with a caveat: I don't particularly like romantic comedies. Those of you who read Roger's Reviews regularly know I tend to cleave more to the action/adventure/sci-fi/superhero genres. To be honest, I only went to see "Crazy Rich Asians" this week because it was the only movie left at the Cinemark Cinema 4 that I hadn't yet seen and reviewed for this column. All that said, it wasn't as bad as I thought it would be.

The movie focuses on the Chinese-American couple Nick Young (Henry Golding), a businessman; and Rachel Chu (Constance Wu), an economics professor at New York University. The young couple are planning to visit Singapore for the wedding of Nick's best friend Colin's (Chris Pang) wedding to his fiancée Araminta (Sonoya Mizuno). Word of their impending visit spreads quickly through random gossip, and Nick's family, including his mom Eleanor (Michelle Yeoh), learns he's bringing outsider Rachel to Singapore with him.

Rachel is surprised to learn that they'll be flying to Singapore in the first-est of first classes, with their own private sleep suite. Questioning Nick about the expense, she manages to learn that his family is "well-off."

When they arrive in Singapore, they meet up with Colin and Araminta, and have a great evening eating dinner at street vendors.

The next day, Rachel visits her friend and former college roommate Peik Lin (Awkwafina), a fairly wealthy Singapore resident who accompanies her to meet Nick's family at a party at their home. Arriving at the mansion, Rachel quickly realizes that Nick's assessment of his family's wealth was a huge understatement – Nick's family is "crazy rich," and the mansion is palatial and opulent.

At the party, Rachel fails to impress Eleanor, but seems to make a good impression on Nick's grandmother (Lisa Lu).

The next day, the couple splits up to attend the bachelor party and the bachelorette party, respectively. Colin's bachelor party is held aboard a party barge arranged by Bernard (Jimmy O. Yang), an over-the-top school friend of Colin and Nick. The bachelorette party is held at a resort owned by Araminta's family. While there, Rachel meets Amanda (Jing Lusi), who seems to befriend her, but is secretly working to undermine her confidence in the relationship. At the end of the day, Rachel discovers that some of the women have put a dead, gutted fish in her bed, and scrawled a profane, insulting message on the wall.

Nick's cousin Astrid (Gemma Chan) comforts Rachel and helps her dispose of the fish without causing a scene.

I'll stop the narrative there, but that's the basic conflict – will Rachel be able to win Nick's crazy rich family over, or at least find a way to happiness with Nick despite their interference.

The biggest factors in whether a movie like this is any good are the casting choices and the interaction between the main characters. Golding and Wu have definite chemistry in the lead roles. Yeoh is exactly as cold and distant as she should be in the role of Nick's mom Eleanor. Awkwafina is pretty funny as the star-struck Peik Lin, who carries garment bags.

It's a well-made movie. I enjoyed my viewing, but it's still not the type of movie I'd choose to see. I'm going to give "Crazy Rich Asians" seven and a half stars out of 10. I hope you understand that, for a rom-com, that's like me handing it an Oscar. I guarantee, if you're into this genre, you'll enjoy it more than I did.

Aretha Franklin, John McCain and the 1960s

By TED ANTHONY

AP National Writer

"Hope I die before I get old," the Who sang at Woodstock as the 1960s hurtled to their end. Indeed, the decade and its echoes made premature legends of so many — Kennedy to King, Hendrix to Joplin to Morrison. They became emblems of an era, and the packaging of their virtues and vices has never really stopped.

But then there were those who didn't die, who did get old and emerged from that crucible and carried themselves through the arc of a life unabbreviated. They moved across decades and changes and navigated a culture that their younger selves would not have recognized.

That's the crossroads where both Aretha Franklin and John McCain stood — shaped by the decade that reshaped so much of American life but propelled into the 1970s and all the way to 2018, carrying some of the fundamental storylines of the 1960s as they progressed forward.

Think of the most dominant, most kinetic narratives of the 60s, the fiery combustion engines that drove the decade: from race, gender and music (Franklin) to war and politics (McCain), they are contained in the two figures to whom we bid farewell this week.

They exit the stage together in an American moment not unlike the period when each emerged. Fifty years after the cataclysmic year of 1968, today we are in a similar period of upheaval and polarization — a time when American society's foundational pillars are being questioned and people of all political persuasions are deeply angry and uncertain about the nation's path.

At a juncture like this, faced with this pair of memorials of a man and woman so very different and yet so uniquely representative of the American experience, what better time to stop and think about such figures, about what they meant and mean?

Sure, we're doing that. But are we doing it effectively?

In the past few days, the American packaging machine has pulled these two lives into slick renditions of who they actually were. Video montages, photo slide shows, memories and even the pleasingly compact monikers we throw around — the "Queen of Soul" and the "Maverick" — are sweet and nostalgic, yes. But they tend to reduce whole lifetimes to their clichéd sharpest edges: the most popular hit songs, the most pointed quotes, the most outsized moments.

The United States is often accused of being an ahistorical nation, and these fragmentary, Twitter-feed-like glimpses of entire lives make that assertion easier to prove. Sort of like we've come to view the 1960s themselves through the prism of reductive, Halloween-party buzzwords like "flower children," "sit-in" and "Summer of Love."

"If there were ever a moment for us to talk and sit down and reflect about who we are, where we came from and where we're going, this weekend should give us that moment," says Ron Pitcock, assistant dean of the John V. Roach Honors College at Texas Christian University, who teaches about American cultural memory.

"We need to not compartmentalize these two people into these convenient narratives," he says. "We have two giants who waded through these muddy waters for us. If we settle for just making them an icon or giving them celebrity, then we've completely failed in this moment of reflection."

The places where those muddy waters flowed were sometimes even muddier. Since the 1960s, the country has only gotten more complicated and, many believe, even more fraught.

Trust in government sits near historic lows after beginning to plummet around the time that Franklin's voice started becoming a household sound and McCain was enduring his years in North Vietnamese custody. Music, delivered on vinyl discs for Franklin's first recordings, is now more typically served up in bits and bytes. And the stories of race and gender in America remain raw, ragged and aggressively unresolved.

What's illuminating about McCain and Franklin, in the context of the formative eras and experiences that produced them, is this: Each navigated historical currents — rode them, you might even argue — and each figured out how to remain relevant and impactful on their communities. Lives of high drama, yes, but staying power, too.

"Years matter. The people from the '60s who end up shaping America were often the ones that lasted. Ted Kennedy shaped America much more than John F. Kennedy," says John Baick, a historian at Western New England University.

"So many figures from the '60s are caricatures of themselves," he says. "Aretha Franklin and John McCain didn't talk about the good old days. They wanted to bring the past into the present. They were living reminders."

The very youngest Baby Boomers are in their mid-50s now — despite the exhortation to never trust anyone over 30 — and more than half of today's Americans have no living memory of the 1960s. When personal experience ebbs, myth fills in the mortar between the bricks. But those who were shaped by the decade continue to influence it, both alive and dead. Sales of Franklin's music on the day after her death increased by more than 1,500 percent, Billboard Magazine reported.

"Music changes, and I'm gonna change right along with it," Franklin once said — or, at least, is widely quoted as saying.

Tariffs stirring fear at many US points of entry for imports

AP photo

In this Wednesday, Aug. 22, 2018, photo trucks travel along a loading dock at the Port of Long Beach in Long Beach, Calif. Between them, the California ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach account for a large amount of the seaborne goods that the United States imports from China, and the prospect of a widening trade war between the global giants has port executives and longshoremen worried.

By DAVID KOENIG
AP Business Writer

To understand why the impact of President Donald Trump's tariffs could be felt throughout the United States, consider this:

From the West Coast to the Great Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico, at least 10 percent of imports at many ports could be hit by new tariffs if Trump's proposals take full effect, according to an exclusive analysis of government data by The Associated Press.

Ports and ground terminals in nearly every state handle goods that are now or will likely soon be covered by import tariffs. And port officials fear this could mean a slowdown in shipping that would have ripple effects on truckers and others whose jobs depend on trade.

Since March, the U.S. has applied new tariffs of up to 25 percent on nearly $85 billion worth of steel and aluminum and various Chinese products, mostly goods used in manufacturing.

"Tariffs are working big time," Trump tweeted recently.

The president has argued that the tariffs will help protect American workers and force U.S. trading partners to change rules that the president insists are unfair to the United States.

At the same time, his administration is preparing to slap tariffs of up to 25 percent on an additional $200 billion in Chinese imports — many of them parts and materials U.S. companies depend on, along with consumer goods — after a public comment period ends Thursday.

These tariffs are the administration's response to its charges that Beijing uses predatory tactics to try to supplant U.S. technological supremacy. Those tactics include cyber-theft and a requirement that American companies hand over trade secrets in exchange for access to China's market.

U.S. manufacturers are beginning to respond to the tariffs. On Friday, Ford announced that it has abandoned plans to import a cross-over version of its Focus compact car from China to the U.S. because of tariffs that took effect in July. Ford has already said it will exit most of the U.S. car business as it shifts sharply toward trucks and SUVs.

In New Orleans, port officials say a tariff-related drop in shipments is real, not merely a forecast. Steel imports there have declined more than 25 percent from a year ago, according to the port's chief commercial officer, Robert Landry.

The port is scouting for other commodities it can import. But expectations appear to be low.

"In our business, steel is the ideal commodity," Landry said. "It's big, it's heavy, we charge by the ton so it pays well. You never find anything that pays as well as steel does."

The port of Milwaukee imports steel from Europe and ships out agricultural products from the Midwest. Steel imports haven't dropped yet because they are under long-term contracts, said the port director, Adam Schlicht. But there has been "an almost immediate halt" in outbound shipments of corn because of retaliatory duties imposed by the European Union on American products.

Much of the corn, he said, "is just staying in silos. They are filled to the brim."

Many other ports have been humming along and even enjoyed an unexpected bump in imports during June and July as U.S. businesses moved up orders to ship before the new tariffs took effect. That started with manufacturing goods and is now spreading to retail items for back-to-school and Christmas.

"Some of my retail customers are forward-shipping the best they can to offset proposed tariffs," says Peter Schneider, executive vice president of T.G.S. Transportation, a trucking company in Fresno, California.

Port officials were encouraged by this week's announcement that the United States and Mexico had reached a preliminary agreement to replace the North American Free Trade Agreement, hoping it might lead to reduced trade barriers. Canada's participation in any new deal to replace NAFTA, though, remains a major question mark.

The port officials continue to worry, though, that Trump will make good on a plan to expand tariffs to an additional $200 billion in Chinese imports — a list that includes fish and other foods, furniture, carpets, tires, rain jackets and hundreds of additional items. Tariffs would make those items costlier in the United States. And if Americans buy fewer of those goods, it would likely lead to fewer container ships steaming into U.S. ports.

The impact will be felt keenly at West Coast ports like Los Angeles and Long Beach.

Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti, relying on information from his port officials, said his

US stocks slide again as investors wait for trade news

By MARLEY JAY

AP Markets Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks are lower in afternoon trading on Wall Street Friday following a late loss the day before. Traders are keeping their eye on trade talks between the U.S. and Canada. There are hopes that the two sides will reach a preliminary trade deal later in the day, but there were few signs of progress.

Energy companies and banks slipped Friday while retailers edged higher.

Stocks slid Thursday afternoon after Bloomberg News reported that the Trump administration could escalate the U.S.-China trade war next week by putting tariffs on $200 billion in imports. Meanwhile the U.S. and Canada are resuming trade negotiations.

KEEPING SCORE: The S&P 500 index slid 4 points, or 0.2 percent, to 2,896 as of 3:05 p.m. Eastern time. Trading was very light ahead of the Labor Day holiday in the U.S. on Monday.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 63 points, or 0.2 percent, to 25,923. The Nasdaq composite rose 13 points, or 0.2 percent, to 8,101. The Russell 2000 index of smaller-company stocks gained 5 points, or 0.3 percent, to 1,737.

Despite its losses the last two days, the S&P 500 is on track to finish August with a gain of 2.9 percent, and the Nasdaq is up 5.6 percent this month.

THE QUOTE: Katie Nixon, chief investment officer for Northern Trust Wealth Management, said President Donald Trump will probably submit the outlines of a U.S.-Canada trade deal to Congress soon. But the trade war between the U.S. and China may drag on for months, and Nixon said that could stop businesses from investing and affect the economy and the stock market.

"These things will have to be resolved one way or another for investors to regain the kind of confidence it's going to take to propel the markets meaningfully forward," she said.

EARNINGS: Gun and hunting and camping gear maker American Outdoor Brands jumped 38.4 percent to $13.52. The company said sales picked up and it cut costs while offering fewer discounts. That erased the stock's big losses from earlier in the year, and it's up now 5 percent in 2018.

Traders Andrew Silverman, left, Gregory Rowe, center, and Robert Charmak share a laugh as they work on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, Friday, Aug. 31, 2018. Stocks are opening mostly lower on Wall Street, led by declines in banks and energy companies.

Lululemon Athletica jumped 13.6 percent to $155.62 after it raised its forecasts for the rest of the year following a strong second quarter. Shares in the yoga gear maker have doubled in value this year.

Discount retailer Big Lots sank 9.5 percent to $43.32 after its earnings and sales fell short of analysts' projections.

LOSING FOCUS: Ford declined 3 percent to $9.41 following reports the company canceled plans to import a version of the Ford Focus that is made in China, citing the tariffs proposed by the Trump administration.

ULTA IS KEEPING UP: Ulta Beauty climbed after the company announced a partnership with Kylie Cosmetics. It said the brand, started by reality TV port — the biggest in the United States — could suffer a 20 percent drop in volume if the additional $200 billion in tariffs are imposed against Chinese goods.

Jock O'Connell, an economist in California who studies trade, said he doubts a downturn would be so severe — that would match the slump that accompanied the global recession of 2008 — "but we will see a definite impact."

Here are some of the key findings from the AP analysis:

— U.S. tariffs will cover goods that are imported at more than 250 seaports, airports and ground terminals in 48 states.

— At 18 of 43 customs districts — including those representing ports around Los Angeles, San Francisco, New Orleans and Houston — at least 10 percent of their total import value could be covered by new tariffs if all Trump's proposals take effect.

— Retaliatory duties by China and other countries cover $27 billion in U.S. exports.

Eugene Seroka, executive director of the Los Angeles port, worries that "if tariffs make it too expensive to import, there will be an impact on jobs."

Seroka and others don't expect layoffs on the docks. Union longshoremen — whose average pay last year on the West Coast was $163,000, according to the Pacific Maritime Association, which negotiates for the ports — often have contract provisions ensuring that they are paid even if there's no work. And there are fewer of them than there were a few decades ago because the advent of shipping containers has reduced the need for people on the docks.

Dwayne Boudreaux, an International Longshoremen's Association official in Louisiana, said, though, that his stevedores are handling about 10 percent less steel from Japan because of the new tariffs.

"We don't think it's going to (get) worse," he said. But, he added, "who knows — that could change from the next press conference."

The impact might be greater on truck drivers and warehouse workers. Fewer will be needed, according to O'Connell.

Many drivers who deliver shipping containers from the dock to warehouses are independents contracted by trucking companies, and they don't get paid if there is nothing to haul. Some might leave the profession, said Weston LaBar, CEO of the Harbor Trucking Association in Long Beach, California.

"It's hard to retain drivers," he said. "If we don't have work for those drivers, we're worried they will leave for some other segment of the trucking business or go into another business, like construction."

Less shipping means less revenue for the ports — something that could limit their ability to pay for expansion and improvement projects, according to Kurt Nagle, president of the American Association of Port Authorities. He said U.S. ports are in the midst of a planned $155 billion in infrastructure spending from 2016 through 2020.

The current trade war was foreshadowed in January by steep U.S. tariffs on imported solar panels and washing machines. It exploded with the U.S. tariffs of 25 percent on imported steel and 10 percent on aluminum. Then came two rounds of duties targeting about $50 billion in imports from China.

Along the way, China, the European Union, Turkey, Canada and Mexico imposed retaliatory duties on U.S. goods including farm products and Harley-Davidson motorcycles.

On top of the $200 billion in additional Chinese imports that could face U.S. tariffs starting next week, Trump has said that if Beijing continues to retaliate, he may eventually slap tariffs on, all told, $450 billion in Chinese goods. That would be equal to nearly 90 percent of China's 2017 exports to the U.S.

Trade wars are usually temporary. President George W. Bush abandoned his steel tariffs after less than two years.

Milwaukee's port director worries, however, that damage from the current trade dispute could linger. Canada is increasing corn exports to Europe, and Brazil is trying to pick up the slack in soybean exports to China.

"Others are already picking up that business," Schlicht said.

Caffeine hit for Coca-Cola as it buys Costa coffee chain

Coca-Cola is buying the Costa coffee brand from British firm Whitbread for 3.9 billion pounds ($5.1 billion) in cash, a deal that will see the soft drinks company plug a big hole in its portfolio, it was reported on Friday, Aug. 31, 2018.

Associated Press

LONDON (AP) — Coca-Cola is hoping for a caffeine-fueled boost with the acquisition of British coffee chain Costa.

The soda giant said Friday it is spending 3.9 billion pounds ($5.1 billion) in cash for Britain's biggest coffee company. Costa has more than 2,400 coffee shops in the U.K. and 1,400 others in more than 30 countries, including around 460 in China, its second-biggest market.

It's Coca-Cola's latest move to diversify as health-conscious consumers, at least in America, move away from traditional soda. The company also recently said it's buying a stake in sports drink maker BodyArmor. Coca-Cola's other investments in recent years have included milk that is strained to have more protein and a push into sparkling water.

Rival PepsiCo, meanwhile, recently bought carbonated drink maker SodaStream, which produces machines that allow people to make fizzy drinks in their own homes.

Coca-Cola already owns the Georgia and Gold Peak coffee brands, which make bottled and canned drinks. But the Costa acquisition gives it a much bigger piece of the coffee market, which is growing by 6 percent a year, according to James Quincey, Coca-Cola president & CEO.

"Hot beverages is one of the few remaining segments of the total beverage landscape where

Trump intends to sign Mexico deal in 90 days, Trade Rep says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Donald Trump has notified Congress that he plans to sign a trade agreement with Mexico — and Canada, if it is willing — in 90 days, U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer said Friday.

Lighthizer made the announcement in a statement after high-stakes talks that the Trump administration and Canadian officials have been holding in Washington broke up Friday afternoon without a deal. Lighthizer said the talks will resume Wednesday.

The talks are intended to bring Canada into a new trade accord that would replace the North American Free Trade Agreement.

The flurry of events followed a preliminary agreement that the United States and Mexico reached Monday to replace NAFTA with an arrangement that is intended, among other things, to shift more auto manufacturing to the United States.

The Trump administration had insisted that it wanted a deal by Friday, beginning a 90-day countdown that would let Mexican President Enrique Peña Nieto sign the pact before leaving office Dec. 1.

But under U.S. trade rules, the U.S. team wouldn't have to make public the text of the revamped agreement for 30 additional days, possibly buying more time to reach a deal with the Canadians. Lighthizer's statement Friday said Trump intends to sign a new trade deal with Mexico, whether or not Canada is part of it.

Earlier Friday Trump was quoted as saying privately that he wouldn't make compromises with Canada in their trade talks. His remarks raised doubts about whether the two countries could quickly reach a deal to keep Canada in the 24-year-old trading bloc, along with the United States and Mexico.

The Toronto Star obtained the president's comments from an interview that he gave to Bloomberg News on Thursday. Trump wanted the comments to remain private. Otherwise, the president reportedly said in the interview,

NEW YORK (AP) — The Village Voice, the Pulitzer Prize-winning alternative weekly known for its muckraking investigations, exhaustive arts criticism, naughty personal ads and neurosis-laden cartoons, is going out of business after 63 years.

Its publisher, Peter Barbey, announced Friday that the paper is ceasing publication altogether because of financial problems, a year after it stopped circulating in print and went to digital-only.

Eight of the Voice's 18 remaining staffers were laid off. Others stayed behind to digitize its print archive so that future generations can read it.

News editor Neil deMause said staffers were more saddened than shocked by the news.

Coca-Cola does not have a global brand," Quincey said.

The coffee market itself is hot at the moment. JAB Holdings, an investment holding company, has been buying up businesses and brands associated with Peet's, Caribou, Stumptown and Krispy Kreme Doughnuts. And in May, Nestle paid more than $7 billion for the rights to sell Starbucks coffee and tea in supermarkets and other stores outside its coffee shops.

Costa, which doesn't currently have a presence in North or South America, was the third-largest coffee shop chain globally in 2017, according to market research provider Euromonitor International, just behind McDonald's McCafe outlets but well behind Starbucks.

Without being specific about expansion plans, Quincey said in a video posted on Coca-Cola's website that the company would "over time" look to take Costa "to more people in more places."

In addition to its shops, Costa has self-serve coffee machines in grocery stores and gas stations. Quincey indicated that one potential early expansion route would be to use Costa's vending operation and expand the company's ready-to-drink products.

Nicholas Hyett, an equity analyst at London-based stockbrokers Hargreaves Lansdown, said Costa will get "lots of care and attention" from Coca-Cola.

"Its global reach should turbo-charge growth in the years to come, and hot drinks are one of the few areas of the wider beverages sector where the soft drinks giant doesn't have a killer brand," he said.

Coca-Cola does already have over 500 brands in its stable including Fanta, innocent smoothies and Powerade sports drinks. In 2017, it generated operating income of $9.7 billion on revenues of $35.4 billion.

Whitbread had bought Costa for 19 million pounds in 1995, when it had just 39 shops. It has invested heavily in Costa's expansion overseas recently, but had been looking to siphon off the business to generate funds for the expansion and for its other business, the budget hotel chain Premier Inn.

Then Coca-Cola got in touch with what Whitbread said was a "highly compelling" offer. The Whitbread board unanimously backed the deal, which is expected to close in the first half of 2019.

Whitbread will use a "significant majority" of the net cash proceeds — around 3.8 billion pounds after taking into account such things as transaction costs — returning cash to shareholders. Some will be used to pay down debt and make a pension fund contribution.

Doing so, Whitbread said, would "provide headroom" to expand Premier Inn in Britain and Germany.

Whitbread's share price soared 14 percent. Coca-Cola shares were little changed.

star Kylie Jenner, will be available in its stores and online later this year. The stock gained 6 percent to $259.19.

CUPPA JOE FOR COKE: Coca-Cola said it will pay $5.1 billion for the biggest coffee company in Britain. Costa has 2,400 shops in the U.K. and about 1,400 in more than 30 other countries.

Coca-Cola already owns the Georgia and Gold Peak coffee brands, which make bottled and canned drinks, but the purchase of Costa might be a step toward competing with Starbucks. In the last few years Coke has also acquired a minority stake in sports drink company BodyArmor.

Coca-Cola fell 1.1 percent to $44.44.

OLE! Argentina's stock index jumped 6.7 percent after a spokesman for the International Monetary Fund said the country has the IMF's "full support." The Merval index has climbed over the last two days after the government asked for the early release of $50 billion in rescue funds.

The index is still down 5.1 percent this year, and the Argentine peso has been trading at all-time lows.

ENERGY: Benchmark U.S. crude fell 0.6 percent to $69.80 a barrel in New York. Brent crude, used to price international oils, dipped 0.5 percent to $77.42 a barrel in London.

Wholesale gasoline was unchanged at $2.14 a gallon. Heating oil lost 0.3 percent to $2.24 a gallon. Natural gas gained 1.5 percent to $2.92 per 1,000 cubic feet.

BONDS: Bond prices rose for the second consecutive day. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note fell to 2.84 percent from 2.86 percent. Banks fell in tandem with the bonds yields, which force rates on loans like mortgages lower.

MEATLS: Gold rose 0.1 percent to $1,206.70 an ounce. Silver dipped 0.3 percent to $14.56 an ounce. Copper skidded 1.7 percent to $2.67 a pound.

CURRENCIES: The dollar rose to 110.97 yen from 110.05 yen. The euro fell to $1.1603 from $1.1663.

OVERSEAS: France's CAC 40 fell 1.3 percent and Germany's DAX lost 1 percent. Britain's FTSE 100 sank 1.1 percent.

Japan's benchmark Nikkei 225 recouped earlier losses to finish virtually unchanged. South Korea's Kospi rose 0.7 percent and Hong Kong's Hang Seng fell 1.1 percent.

of diamonds, on which dummy played the four, East the three and Weichsel the deuce! When West continued with another diamond, the fat moved irretrievably into the fire. Declarer won East's jack with the ace, led a low trump to dummy's ten and ruffed the seven of diamonds, felling East's king and establishing dummy's queen as a trick. Next came a trump to the ace followed by a heart discard on the queen of diamonds. Since Weichsel still had two trumps in his hand to ruff two of dummy's hearts, and since there were still three trumps in dummy to ruff the J-10-6 of spades, he wound up making the contract, losing only a diamond, a heart and a spade. West could, of course, have defeated four clubs doubled by shifting to a heart or a spade at trick two. To be fair about it, however, the fact is that most defenders with the West hand, not seeing declarer's cards, would have continued with a diamond at trick two after the ten held the first trick. The outcome was indeed more a tribute to declarer's skill than the result of a clear-cut error by the defense. Weichsel had quickly decided at trick one that on the bidding and opening lead, East was sure to have the K-J of diamonds, and he simply hoped that what did happen would happen.

Tomorrow: Famous Hand.

Fun By The Numbers
Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Mercury Moves in to Virgo

Improvement has been the theme of this solar journey in Virgo, and its implications will be even farther reaching once Mercury joins the sun in this part of the sky. It's important to remember that everyone's best looks different. Those who are comfortable with the ways in which they veer from the norm, seeing these differences not as imperfections but as intriguing parts of the whole of who they are, will have an easier time of it this week.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The achievement you wish for most will not be accomplished alone. The aim can only be reached through other people. Self-sacrifice, kindness, self-censorship... these are the social skills to employ in getting this goal. It is all within your ability. You're well liked. Go thoughtfully forward.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You're a shrewd investor these days, regardless of the currency you're operating with. And you will operate with many different currencies before the week is over. Do your research on the project, person or financial arrangement to make sure it's worthy of your attention, money and time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Not knowing what to do next isn't the same thing as doubting yourself. You hesitate, not because you don't believe in your talents, but because you're trying to figure out the best way to use them. Better to hang back and observe with an open mind than to rush into a mistake, or worse, a trap.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). No matter where you are, what you wear professes your style and how you feel about yourself. It will be as true in your own bedroom as it is at a grocery store, a museum, a gym, a park or a ball. There's no getting away from sartorial statements, so you may as well embrace and use them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your support group could use some rounding out. It's not a pressing issue, but if you make an intention out of it and quietly seek new members to add to Team You, you'll make progress on the matter this week. The sort of people you need are knowledgeable, creative and enthusiastic. Givers only need apply.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Someone who has lived a life very different from your own (and from most of the people you know for that matter) will figure prominently in your week, subtly influencing your decisions. You may know this person socially, or through the magic of media. Either way, the connection brings out your best and brightest.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Your intuition about the lives of others will be especially hot this week; however, this can only really help you if their lives are connected to your own. So focus on you. What is it you can give to them, and what is it you need from them? Work on your powers of persuasion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You are well acquainted with the sort of jobs in which, if you do well, you'll get no praise and if you get into trouble, you'll get no help. It will not bother you to go down this path again. In fact, there's dignity in it, as the work itself is what gives you everything -- adventure, strength, an interesting life and much more.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There's a time for selfless giving, and a time for reciprocity. This week, you'll be proactive in your endeavors, giving first but letting others know what your expectations are on the return. Worthy partners will step up. You'll cultivate a dynamic with the potential to serve both parties well into the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). New places will change and grow you. You'll soon become so comfortable traversing new territory that you'll no longer give two thoughts as to whether or not you're fitting in. It won't be necessary to blend into your environment, only to respect its features while you learn all you can about the rules that govern it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). If ever there were a week to be kinder than necessary, this is it. It will behoove you to extend something extra in the way of compassion, a gift to the world that will also happen to define you. It's not that you're going for sainthood, but you are trying to pave the way for a better future.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Share your stories and ask people for theirs. It's the mundane experiences that will turn out to be the most interesting. You'll be surprised at the responses you get to simple questions. You've a gift for pointing your curiosity to the heart of the matter. What is ordinary to you is intriguing and grand to someone else.

THIS WEEK'S BIRTHDAYS: This month your talent will meet the right audience and finally your excellent work will be appreciated in both broad and nuanced terms. This would satisfy you greatly were you to slow down and enjoy it, but chances are you'll be consumed with a new quest, one that will push your emotional range further than ever. In a sense, it's a solar return that leaves you feeling more alive than you've ever been before. Worries dissolve, problems diminish, and you'll come out of this spiritually enlarged.

journalism industry," said deMause, 52, who started reading the Voice as a teenager in the 1980s.
"As a longtime reader and fan of the Voice even more than as a writer and editor, I am deeply saddened that we won't have the Voice's voice anymore," he added. "It's a huge, huge loss."
The Voice was the country's first alternative newsweekly, founded in Greenwich Village in 1955 by a group that included writer Norman Mailer. It once had a weekly circulation of 250,000 copies and was home to some of New York's best investigative journalists and music writers.
The combative, left-leaning paper became known for its brash political reporting and its coverage of music and theater. It also became a powerful advocate for New York's gay community.

It won three Pulitzers, for editorial cartooning and feature writing in the 1980s and for international reporting in 2000 for a series on AIDS in Africa.
The Voice nurtured such talents as jazz maven and civil libertarian Nat Hentoff; investigative reporter Wayne Barrett, whose targets included Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and Donald Trump; and culture writers such as Manohla Dargis, now a film critic for The New York Times.
"This is a tragedy, and it hurts my heart," Dargis wrote on Twitter. "This is where I started my professional writing life and where I met brilliant writers — and many friends — too numerous to mention."
Cartoonist Jules Feiffer's jagged, satirical comic strip ran in the Voice from 1956 through 1997. His obsessions included psychoanalysis, sex and the manifold urban anxieties of Cold War America.
Barbey, also president of The Reading Eagle newspaper in Pennsylvania, bought the Voice in 2015 in an attempt to save it following a series of ownership changes, staff departures and losses in readership and advertising that had left it in a state of perpetual peril.

He tried to stem the paper's losses by giving up print publication last summer and publishing online only — a step that removed the Voice from the sidewalk boxes that were a fixture on New York street corners for generations.
It failed to stop the financial bleeding.
"In recent years, the Voice has been subject to the increasingly harsh economic realities facing those creating journalism and written media," Barbey wrote. "Like many others in publishing, we were continually optimistic that relief was around the next corner. Where stability for our business is, we do not know yet. The only thing that is clear now is that we have not reached that destination."

TRADE

"it's going to be so insulting they're not going to be able to make a deal."
Trump's comments, and the dim picture they drew of the U.S.-Canada negotiations, appeared to dishearten Wall Street, where traders sent stock prices falling in the wake of the report.
On Friday afternoon, Trump took to Twitter and appeared to confirm the Star's report:
"Wow, I made OFF THE RECORD COMMENTS to Bloomberg concerning Canada, and this powerful understanding was BLATANTLY VIOLATED. Oh well, just more dishonest reporting. I am used to it. At least Canada knows where I stand!"
Later, at an appearance in North Carolina, Trump railed against the disclosure of his private comments but again appeared to confirm them.
After the United States and Mexico reached its preliminary agreement Monday, Canada's top trade envoy, Foreign Affairs Minister Chrystia Freeland, rushed to Washington on Tuesday to try to negotiate Canada's way back into a new version of NAFTA. The U.S.-Canadian talks had been ongoing since then.

After sounding optimistic Thursday, Freeland appeared gloomier on Friday.
"We are looking for a good deal, not just any deal," she told reporters, "and we will only agree to a deal that is a good deal for Canada. We are not there yet."
The U.S. and Canada are wrangling over several tough issues, including American demands for greater access to the Canadian dairy market and Canada's insistence on maintaining NAFTA's existing procedure for resolving disputes.
The Star's report on Trump's off-the-record remarks appeared to complicate matters. In response, Lindsay Walters, a White House spokeswoman, said only, "The Canadian and American negotiators continue to work on reaching a win-win deal that benefits both countries."
Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau, who has endured a rocky relationship with Trump, fended off a question about the American president's comments at a news conference Friday.

"Over the past year and a half, there's a lot of things that have been said from time to time," Trudeau said. "Our government's approach is always to stay constructive, positive and engage on the substance of issues."

Likewise, Jerry Dias, president of the Canadian private-sector union Unifor, dismissed Trump's comments:
"It is Trump's bluster at best, but obviously he is not going to force anyone into a bad deal,"

Dias said. "It is clear the U.S. economy is much bigger than ours, but trying to embarrass the Canadian team, trying to insult Canadians, is not going to get him anywhere."
