Vacation time is over around here and we are somewhat relieved. It's always unnerving to be short-handed and in the newspaper business you are forced to jump two pages when that last minute ad comes in about deadline time. This throws everyone into a frenzy. You've either got to come up with enough late minute news to fill up or get out and sell enough extra ads to fill up. I guess you could just leave it blank, but I don't believe I've ever seen it done.

Anyway, last week while one of our regulars was on vacation, we set up for six pages Monday, Monday afternoon we jumped to eight and Tuesday about deadline time, we jumped to ten. Haste makes waste and believe me we heard about it the next day. When you don't have time to proof read, you really get into a peck of trouble. We had more mistakes than the San Angelo daily.

A boring job, proof reading, but I guess about the most necessary function in the process of putting out a newspaper. Sometimes the proof reader does get a few laughs, and no doubt would like to just let it go as is for the fun of it. While proof reading a report of a ladies club meeting late one night, I came across this. "Members present were Mrs. John Jones, Mrs. Tom Smith, etc. etc. and one beast (guest) Mrs. John Doe." Another "The first county fall (fair) was a huge success." Then there was the one about the Historical Society that started out like this "The Hysterical Society appointed..." Sometimes the proof reader wonders if the type setter isn't trying to put one over on him.

Then there are the headlines. This is the last thing you do before pasting up the paper and I can always sympathize with the weary headline writer. Your words and characters must fit the space and they are supposed to tell the story as well. Sometimes this seems an almost impossible task, especially in writing heads for one-column stories. I know we've probably had some dandies, but I get most of my laughs from other papers. Somehow I fail to see the humor in our errors or ridiculous headlines. My favorite bad headline was in one of our dailies. In big bold letters it read: "St. John's Head Released." As it turned out it was a story about the head of a hospital being released from the hospital following a car accident. Mr. White's favorite was a headline reading "Heart Rendering Story Told." This one speaks for itself, doesn't much matter what the story was about.

Then there's the trouble you have with spelling. You can be a perfectly accurate speller, but as deadline time nears words tend to look wrong even if they are spelled right. By the time the deadline gets past you can't even spell kat.

Just had a second-hand complaint from Trooper Joe Miles. He has informed me through Tom, that kids do not get drivers licenses at the tender age of 14, they must be 16 even with drivers' ed. I stand corrected. However, I know for a fact that there are many 14-year-old drivers in Ozona. I presume they are driving without licenses.

The second complaint was about a story we had in the June 30, edition giving the account of a wreck which involved a DPS car. I think it's strange that Trooper Miles complained about this one. We took the story from a uniform report made out by Trooper Miles himself. I believe the complaint was

Ozona All Stars Beat Pecos 6-1

The Ozona Little League All Stars got off to a good start Monday night by beating Pecos 6 to 1, in the first game of the play-offs in Crane. They were scheduled to play Crane Tuesday night at 8 p.m. and results were not known at press time. Crane beat Big Lake 38-0 in their first game. Winner of the Tuesday night game will advance to the play-offs in San Angelo, July 22, at a site yet to be determined.

In Monday night's game Blake Simpson scored the win for the Ozona stars. Kent Hokit led the hitting with a home run and a single. Robert Flores had a single and a double for Ozona while Simpson added the other hit. Hokit also led the scoring for Ozona with 2. That day the number of confirmed screwworm cases in Texas livestock for this year (31) fell behind 1970 levels. This makes 1977 the best year on record, says the program director.

"Each day since has seen an improvement over the 1970 situation," comments Dr. Meadows. "By July 15 that year Texas had tallied 54 cases. We still stand at 31 for this year."

Meadows credits the impressive 1977 showing to many factors, all part of the "Mission '77: Stamp Out Screwworms" effort. The "S.O.S." campaign features rancher care of animals and prompt submission of samples of all worms found in livestock wounds. Backing up the rancher effort is work by the Texas A&M Cooperative Extension Service, the Texas Animal Health Commission, and distribution of sterile screwworm flies by the USDA program.

"We were aided tremendously by cool weather which suppressed the over-wintering population in south Texas last winter," says Meadows. Also helping create this year's pleasant situation is production of 200 million sterile screwworm flies in Mexico each week. Half of these flies are distributed in northern Mexico while the other half are distributed in the southwest U.S. along with the 200 million produced weekly at the Mission insectary.

The regular show for qualifying 4-Hers will get into full swing Friday with semifinals in showmanship beginning at 7 a.m.

Sewing Program To Begin

The first back to school sewing program will take place Thursday, July 28, at the Ozona Community Center at 7:30. The series of sewing programs will be offered for homemakers that want to begin getting their children's clothes ready for school.

Homemakers will learn how to make children's hand-me-downs look fashionable and fit good. New fashion trends, applying trims and decorative stitching will be discussed. Participants will bring their children's garments and work on them in the last class.

Ozonans Suffering From Heat

Ozona and Crockett County have been suffering along with the rest of the nation from the prolonged heat wave. Temperatures have hovered around the 100-degree mark for the high for the day since July 1, with the low around 70.

So far in July there has been no rainfall recorded, making it the driest month this far in the year.

Lawrence & Associates, Inc., Midland, No. 1 Harwood "A", 1/2 mile southwest of the discovery and 16 miles east of Iraan, for a daily pumping potential of 26 barrels of 29 gravity oil, no water.

Production was through perforations at 2,111-141 feet which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons and fractured with 18,000 gallons, and 18,000 pounds.

The following tops were picked on ground elevation of 2,719 feet: Yates, 1,226 feet; Queen, 1,622 feet; and San Andres, 2,060 feet.

Third Century Meditation

Remember when the Fourth of July was a big day? Americans used to be proud of their country and would sacrifice for it. We thought it was the best country in the world and we would defend it fiercely and with pride.

The situation has changed. The fate of the United States and its people is written large on one page of the WALL STREET JOURNAL, May 6, 1977.

1. During the month of April, wholesale prices advanced at a seasonably adjusted annual rate of 13.2 percent. These monthly increases in the cost of living will continue month after month, not at the same rate, but at a rate sufficient to double the cost of living every few years. If Mr. Carter gets two terms, it would be conservative to guess that before he leaves the White House, the value of the dollar will be around ten cents. This means it will have lost half of its present purchasing power.

The proper definition of inflation is "an increase in the quantity of money." As long as we keep issuing more money and credit, we cannot stop inflation. It will stop immediately when we stabilize the quantity of money. To do that, we must balance the budget and put an end to deficit spending. This will stop the increase of debt and stabilize prices.

Since the close of World War II, the quantity of money in our country has shot up from $36 billion to $322 billion. Meanwhile the national debt, wages, prices and interest charges have increased roughly in about the same proportion. If we do not stop deficit spending and the resulting increase in the quantity of money, this process will continue until the dollar is destroyed. This is what we call runaway inflation. We cannot escape it unless we stop increasing the quantity of money.

2. The budget for the fiscal year beginning next October has been fixed at $464.5 billion and the deficit for that year will be $66.4 billion. Actual figures for both budget and deficit usually run far over preliminary estimates. It is quite safe to assume, therefore, that these figures will be substantially more than those just noted. It seems altogether likely that our budget is now running more than $1.5 billion a week in the red. Yet Congress talks about appropriating money. We are not appropriating money. We are increasing our indebtedness. (During the month of April, the supply of money as measured by M-1 rose at an annual rate of 22.2 percent.)

3. During the month of March the quantity of consumer credit rose $2.72 billion. Interest on that increased amount of credit will amount to over half a billion dollars a year. It will be seen that in addition to increasing the federal, state and local indebtedness, we are also increasing the amount of private debt. This also adds to the quantity of money, increases interest charges, and makes it more difficult each succeeding year not only to pay the actual cost of living, but to try to keep up on the interest of previously incurred debt—plus something for reducing it. If we cannot live on our income this year, what leads us to believe we can do so next year, plus dragging along the dead horses—both interest and principle—of debt previously created?

4. A bill to strip the oil companies of the right to purchase foreign oil is in the House. This would be another long step toward control of the oil industry. It would mean less oil and higher prices—as government control or ownership always does.

5. Government ownership is sought in the name of taking natural wealth out of the hands of rich operators and corporations and bringing it back to the people. This is said to be for the purpose of letting all the people, instead of just a few wealthy ones, benefit from these natural resources.

Actually, government ownership does not bring anything back to the people, but in fact takes it farther away from them. It brings the operation and control of our industries that are developing natural resources into the hands of the bureaucrats. Not to the people at all. What benefit do the people get from government operation of Amtrack, Tennessee Valley Authority, Penn Central Railroad, coal mines, steamships, or any other form of entrepreneurial activity?

The people have nothing to say about these operations, and nothing to say about how the profit, if any, will be divided. As a matter of fact, there won't be any profit in government-owned businesses. There never has been, so what would lead one to believe there ever will be? The bureaucrats will find a way to absorb what otherwise might have been profit. Wages among government workers at all levels are higher than for their counterparts in private industry. This is one reason why nationalization or further control of industry will never be profitable but will continue to operate at a loss.

How, and wherein, have the people profited from government ownership and operation of any industry? Do we want more Post Offices? The nationalization of industry results in waste on a gigantic scale.

Nevertheless, the slogan "Let the people own their industries," remains very popular—although in reality the public does not own nationalized property. It may be held in the name of the government, but it is not operated by the people, nor for the people. It is operated by and for the bureaucrats. They draw big salaries, more than their peers working in private industry and when the industries they operate no longer earn a profit, the deficits are made up by the taxpayer.

The people can control free, private ownership by voting for what they want, when they make their purchases, and getting it. They cannot so control government-owned and bureaucratic-operated properties, for they have nothing to say about what shall be produced, or how much. These all-important functions are discharged by the bureaucrats.

GREAT MOMENTS IN SPORTS IN A NUTSHELL

Brief Stories Of Long-Remembered Triumphs
A great moment in sports occurred on March 6, 1976 when Toni Innauer of Austria completed the longest ski jump on record—577 feet 5 inches.

A great moment in sports occurred in the 1976 Montreal Olympics when Rumanian Nadia Comaneci, 14, became the first gymnast to be awarded a perfect score in Olympic games. Up-and-coming American gymnasts can eat Butterfinger® and Baby Ruth® snack bars to raise their energy levels.

A great moment in sports occurred on Nov. 5, 1966 when Roger Taylor of Great Britain beat Wieslaw Gasiorek of Poland for the Kings Cup and set a tennis singles record of 126 games. They played for 4 hours and 35 minutes.

STATE CAPITAL Highlights AND Sidelights

by Lyndell Williams
TEXAS POLITICAL ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Atty. Gen. John Hill and Gov. Dolph Briscoe have rival polls which convince them they can win the 1978 governor's race. Hill's pollsters concede Briscoe is still out front, but they claim his advantage of incumbency is receding. The attorney general's problems, the Hill survey maintains, "is to penetrate the consciousness of the masses who don't know him, to impress them favorably and to gain their support while maintaining the support of those who already prefer him over Briscoe."

The Hill poll concluded in one segment that 44 percent of likely Democratic primary voters surveyed favored Briscoe, while 29 percent favored Hill, and 27 percent were undecided. Pollsters for Hill also found a majority of voters are balking about re-electing a governor who would have served 10 years in office by the end of his next four-year term. Briscoe's campaign manager said the governor has lost no basic strength and even has made gains since November, based on another private survey's findings.

Both Briscoe and Hill have campaign headquarters open here—although Hill has not formally announced. Former Gov. Preston Smith is regarded as another possible candidate for governor in the 1978 Democratic primary election.

Judges Busy
Texas Court of Criminal Appeals judges and commissioners wrote nearly 19 times as many opinions as State Supreme Court justices last year, according to Texas Judicial Council statistics. The top criminal court judges turned out 2,177 opinions, compared with 115 (and 667 dispositions of applications for writs of error) by the nine Supreme Court justices.

Fourteen courts of civil appeals wrote 1,562 opinions last year, while 329,373 cases were disposed of in 261 district, domestic relations and special juvenile courts—a two per cent increase over 1975. Another 286,415 cases were disposed of in county courts, and 918,000 traffic cases were filed in reporting justice of the peace courts—70 per cent of all cases for the j.p.s.

The Court of Criminal Appeals must write an opinion in every case it decides.

Economizing?
Twenty per cent of Texas visitors travelling by auto last spring stayed in homes of friends or relatives. The percentage is five times above the in-home visiting level last year. In spite of generosity of Texas hosts, the visitors did lots of spending, however. The average group traveling by car left $443.46 in the state, an increase of more than $40 above the spring of 1976. The visitors stayed an average of 10.2 days this spring, 9.91 days in 1976.

Courts Speak
The State Supreme Court unanimously removed from office District Judge Garth C. Bates of Houston, who was convicted of accepting a bribe. In other recent action, the high court: Invalidated an antiquities code provision used to stop demolition of three downtown Dallas buildings. Took under consideration an appeal in an $800,000 judgment against Bristol-Myers drug company favoring a Corpus Christi man who lost his hearing after using an antibiotic for a hip injury. Heard an argument that a Wichita Falls man should be compensated by Mexico for 218,000 acres of land confiscated from him in the Mexican state of Zacatecas. A federal judge ordered a stay of execution for Wilbur Charles Collins sentenced to die in the electric chair Sunday for killing a Waco convenience store operator. The State Court of Criminal Appeals earlier had turned down the stay.

AG Opinions
In guidelines to the legislature on school finance, Atty. Gen. John Hill noted that property taxes must be assessed on the basis of market value and that one kind of property cannot be assessed at a lower percentage of value than others. Hill said he would have to see a specific bill on school tax values before he could decide its constitutionality. In another recent opinion, Hill held Dallas school district information on disciplinary action against students involving corporal punishment is open to the public, as is certain other data on teachers, administrators and student body composition.

Offices Filled
Sen. Peyton McKnight of Tyler was elected new president pro tempore of the Texas Senate. He will take the oath of office after Sen. Don Adams of Jasper, the outgoing president, has served as governor for a day. Tanner T. Hunt Jr., Beaumont attorney, is parliamentarian of the Senate during the 65th legislature's special session on school finance.

Short Snorts
An attorney general's special advisory committee has launched an investigation of nursing homes. Insurance Board Chairman Joe Christie has decided to remain in office.

PRESENTED BY THE STATE BAR OF TEXAS

Q: My daughter's been dating a boy for three years. Now she's decided to marry him. Can my daughter get married without my permission?

A: A person who is 18 years old or older does not need a parent's consent to marry. If the person is 14-17 years old, the parent's consent is required. In the event the parents are divorced, the parent who is given custody of the child must give permission before the child may marry.

Q: My two grandchildren are living with my ex-husband and his wife as the result of a divorce custody suit. The children cry to be with their mother, but the court says, "No". Isn't there anything that can be done to make these children happy?

A: The test the courts apply in awarding custody of a child is the child's "best interests". Even though the court earlier refused to award custody of your grandchildren to their mother, she could now ask the court to change the award and give her custody on the basis of "changed circumstances". This requires proving that continued custody of the children with your "ex" and his wife is injurious to the children's welfare, and a change to the mother's custody would be a positive improvement for them.

Q: Last weekend I was arrested for felony possession of marijuana. The search warrant stated that I was the owner of the house to be searched. That's not true—it belongs to my parents. Should the police have shown the warrant to my parents before searching the place? In other words, was it an illegal search?

A: The constitutional protection against unlawful searches and seizures protects only against unreasonable search and seizure. What's an unreasonable search and seizure? It depends on the circumstance. Generally, the Code of Criminal Procedure says that a search warrant must describe the place to be searched and the item to be seized. It is served on the person who has charge of the place to be searched, after being given notice of the purpose of the search. In your case, your lawyer may want to raise these questions at the proper time.

Q: We're planning to sell our home. If we find a buyer who wants to assume our mortgage, instead of arranging for a new mortgage, could our mortgage company come back to us for payment of the mortgage if the buyer can't make the monthly payments?

A: Yes, any time you sell your home by having someone assume the balance of your mortgage, the mortgage company retains the right to look to you for the monthly payments if the buyer fails to meet them. To protect yourself in a sale of this type, the contract between you and the buyer should be written to include provisions allowing you to have title to the home returned to you in the event the buyer defaults; then, you would resume responsibility for paying off the mortgage.

Send your questions to "You and the Law," State Bar of Texas, P. O. Box 12487, Austin, 78711. Answers may appear in columns in hypothetical terms; person's answers not possible.

Jottings From Jan

By: Jan Naron

Standing on a footpad at 10:56, Sunday, July 20, 1969, Neil Armstrong put his foot on the moon and said, "That is one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind."

It was eight years ago that the crew of Apollo II, (Neil Armstrong, Edwin E. Aldrin, Jr., and Michael Collins) made history as the first men to set foot on the moon.

John F. Kennedy promised men on the moon by 1970, and despite our preoccupation with the war in Vietnam and the memory of the tragic Apollo I fire in which three astronauts died, we met the pledge. We not only met it, we beat it. Thus is the capacity of the American people and their government.

A year before projected, men landed on the moon, collected soil samples, and stationed two instruments to operate after their departure. Then, after eight days, they splashed into the Pacific Ocean, 950 miles southwest of Honolulu. They were home.

The words spoken by Neil Armstrong as he stepped onto the moon's surface are meaningful, and permanently embedded into our history and our hearts—but when on September 16, the Apollo II crew addressed a joint session of Congress, Edwin Aldrin spoke words of even greater profundity. He said, "It is with a great sense of pride that I say to you what no men have been privileged to say before: We walked on the moon. Those footprints belong to the American people, and you...who accept...and support...the inevitable challenge of the moon. And since we came in peace for all mankind, those footprints belong to all the people of the world."

Nice words.

Tips For Gardeners

From the Ozona Garden Club
by
Mrs. Bailey Post

Though July and August are perhaps the most difficult months for successful gardening, we are fortunate to have plenty of good water available to keep our yards green and growing well. I notice several places are being asked to conserve water to avoid a shortage later on; if drought continues.

If the extended dry, hot days stay in the forecast, be sure to keep evergreens, both shallow and dry rooted varieties, well watered, as they need moisture the same as flowers and smaller plants.

July and August are the months to plant Oriental poppies if you have a good open place or room for them. They will thrive in most any good garden soil with sufficient drainage. Once established in the garden, they need little but clean cultivation. No strong fertilizer is required, their favorite food being leaf mold. Since they are deep rooted, they rarely suffer from lack of moisture after the first year, or after they are well established. Clumps increase in size with age, and may be left in the same place for years. Mulch new plants under the leaves the first winter. The poppy season may be extended over period of nearly six weeks with different varieties. Seed pods should be removed as soon as the petals have fallen, and the entire top cut back as soon as it has turned brown. The pods are quite attractive and often used in dried arrangements. There are a number of varieties that will harmonize with other flowers and make a beauty spot in form of evergreens. If your poppies are crowded, clumps should be divided this month before planting. Look for new seed varieties in catalogs.

If you want face zinnias, now is the time to plant them. There are many new improved varieties in all heights and colors. Rotate the location of zinnias, which may prevent troubles and disease by not planting in the same place for two years. Soak to keep moist, rather than sprinkling.

Debra Says

by Debra Price

Children learn right from wrong mostly at home—during three major periods, researchers say.

It is important that parents understand—and influence—these "stages" of their children's moral development.

During the first stage, from birth to age eight, children cannot understand the needs of others. Their main concern is meeting their own needs. However, children are completely dependent on adults for guidance—so this is the time to begin teaching obedience, because the child wants to please others.

Firm—but gentle—is the discipline is the first step in teaching obedience. Other ways include reading stories to young children about real people dealing with real moral decisions.

However, excessive amounts of "moral reasoning" in young children is usually wasted, as they are too young to understand this type of thinking.

In the second stage—between ages eight and 12—children develop respect for rules. They express this in their play—listen to them say things like "it's not fair" or "But those are the rules".

This is a good time for parents to teach children to help out around the house, take responsibility, and learn to cooperate with others. Parents must continue to teach their children moral values and judgment during these years or the moral conscience will weaken.

During this stage children begin to establish values which will follow them throughout life—for example, who they will associate with, what kind of living they plan to make, how they will choose friends, and who they feel comfortable with. Such training also will help them weather the storm when adolescence occurs.

The third stage begins in adolescence and continues to adulthood. What may appear to be "ornerness" during these years is actually the adolescent's striving for independence. He is expanding his own moral awareness and questioning many of the injustices he sees in adult's lives. The question "why?" becomes the key in his life.

Adolescents will only accept rules and authority if they believe that the principles behind them are sound.

Discipline for children should be in accordance with the child's development. His parent's expectations of him should be consistent with what the child is capable of understanding.

TRANQUILITY

Mrs. Baxter looks as if she doesn't have a care in the world. She is always perfectly groomed. Her house and her garden, with its beautiful flowers, are always just so.

She isn't trying to give a false impression; in fact, she would be horrified at the thought. But the truth is that things have not been all that easy for her. Her husband is a semi-invalid; their only son was killed in a tragic accident. She works in her husband's business three days a week, to help keep things going.

Where does she get her serenity? How has she had the courage to accept so much adversity with so much grace? A friend asked her one day, and she pointed to the tall, white steeple at the end of the street.

Many people have found their answer in the Church. Have you looked there?

High Fat Diet Is Healthy Livestock Producers Told

Livestock producers have been beleaguered for years by claims that their meat and animal fat products were killing people, chiefly through high blood pressure and heart disease. Seldom is the other side heard.

One of the more recent blows came from the U.S. Senate's "Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs", whose report attacking present meat consumption levels later had to be removed from circulation pending revision. The report relies on statistics and general correlations, but an interesting personal account made 20 years ago arrived at just the opposite conclusion, and its proof was in the flesh, so to speak.

The 1957 annual meeting of the National Livestock and Meat Board had as its featured speaker a colorful individual who maintained that his self-chosen, abnormally high-fat diet actually improved his heart condition and helped him keep healthy and trim.

Described as an Arctic explorer, anthropologist, author and student of food habits, the speaker, Dr. Vilhjalmur Stefanson, was then entering the third year of his latest run at a high-fat diet. He was a youthful 78 years of age.

"Except for intervals of (dietary) orthodoxy, I have been among the heaviest of fat eaters all my life," he told listeners.

Dr. Stefanson grew up as a cowboy in the Dakotas, where he "lived happily on a diet built around bacon, sow belly and hams". For most of the period 1906-1918 Stefanson lived with Eskimos within the Arctic Circle. His diet there was made up entirely of meat and fish, and he recalled during that time feeling "healthier than I ever felt and enjoying my meals more."

Ten years later, he and Arctic companion Karsten Anderson spent a year living in New York City on nothing but meat. The special diet was an experiment to give researchers a chance to study the effects of such a program under sedentary big-city conditions. It was carried out under the auspices of Cornell Medical School.

The two adventurers finished the year in better health, said Stefanson, than when they began. The study was conducted at Bellevue Hospital, and Anderson, who had entered the program under treatment for high blood pressure, left the hospital with normal blood pressure, Stefanson said.

Stefanson's 1955 diet program grew out of a stroke the previous year and suffering with rheumatism. He had been on a "normal" diet since 1929, and elected to revert to his high-fat ways when calorie-counting failed to produce a doctor-ordered weight loss.

Two years later, speaking at the Meat Board meeting, he claimed he had accomplished not only the weight loss, but had rid himself of joint soreness and stiffness. The blood clot that had caused his stroke was also gone.

"What startles me now is how much more pronounced my health improvement seems in this latest high-fat period of my life," he added. Those attacking red meat and fats today suggest that daily intake of such foods be restricted to less than 10 percent of total calories. Stefanson received 20 percent of his calories from meat, the remaining 80 percent from animal fat.

Physicians Recommend Vacations

The traditional summer vacation of the American family is highly recommended by your doctor. The family needs to get away from customary home and office chores, forget day-to-day worries for a short time and generally get rejuvenated and ready to face another year.

Whether your vacation will be a short trip to a nearby lake, camping out in a national park, a plane trip abroad, or what have you, there are a few things to keep in mind that will help avoid having the holiday spoiled by illness. Depending on where you're going, you may need some vaccination shots. Tetanus, certainly for anyone who expects to include some out-of-doors activities. Typhoid, if your journey includes areas where the water supply is uncertain. Ask your doctor about these, and possibly other immunizations.

The American Medical Association suggests that you remind yourself to use common sense about your vacation diet. Many a family trip has been spoiled by too many roadside hamburgers and soft drinks. A sound rule while driving crosscountry is to eat lightly. Be cautious about heavy, rich meals, particularly if you're not accustomed to such fare at home.

Know what sort of climate you will encounter at your vacation spot and dress accordingly. It can get cold in the mountains at night, even in midsummer. Good walking shoes are important to the travel wardrobe.

Wild Mushrooms Kill

Wild mushrooms continue to kill—last year, 21 Americans, warns Mary K. Sweeten, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

These are the seven groups of mushroom poisonings: cyclopeptide, ibotenic acid, muscarine, hallucinogenic indoles, gyromitrin, antabuse-like activity and gastro-intestinal.

Each type of poisoning produces a specific set of symptoms which follow the ingestion of certain types of mushrooms, the specialist says.

This warning: Do Not eat a wild mushroom from an unknown source. Also, Do Not rely on the so-called "silver spoon" test it proves nothing, the specialist cautions, and last year alone, it cost several lives.

This "mushroom myth" holds that if a silver spoon is placed in contact with a harmful mushroom, the spoon will turn black. In reality, the spoon turns black because of the sulphur in the mushroom—not because of poison produced by the mushroom.

Homeowners Need To Check For White Grubs

Now is the time for homeowners in Crockett County to check turfgrass areas in their home landscape for white grub infestations, according to Billy Reagor, County Agent. This soil insect is a very destructive pest of turfgrasses in homelawns, especially Bermudagrass and St. Augustine. This soil insect attacks the roots of the grass plants and when their numbers become excessive in a lawn, feeding activity of the insects can result in severe damage to the turfgrass.

The adults, known as May or June beetles, are about 1/2 to 5/8 inch long and vary from light brown to black in coloration. The adults emerge from the soil in turfgrass areas in late spring or early summer, mate and start laying eggs in June or early July in turfgrass areas. Eggs are laid in the soil and usually require about 2 to 3 weeks to hatch. The egg-laying period averages about 30 days. The larvae or grub worms are white with brown heads and the hind part of their bodies are smooth and shiny with dark body contents showing through. They usually lie in a curled position. The grubs feed on the roots and underground stems of grasses and other plants and in warm weather usually stay within one to three inches below the soil surface. For effective control of white grubs in turfgrass areas, insecticide application must be applied to the infested areas when the white grubs are less than 1/2 inch in body length. In order to determine proper time to apply insecticide applications, it is essential that turfgrass areas be checked periodically in the month of July for white grub infestations.

To check for white grubs take a shovel and cut a one square foot section of sod and examine all the roots and soil to a depth of 4 inches for white grubs. After examination, soil and sod should be put back in place. Examine several spots in the turfgrass area. White grubs normally are not distributed evenly in turfgrass areas because of a suspected aggregation on the part of females at the time of egg-laying. Therefore, several samples should be taken in order to make certain that an infestation justifies treatment.

An insecticide treatment usually is justified when more than 4 grubs per square foot are found. Diazinon, dursban or dylox are the insecticides suggested for control of white grubs in turfgrass areas in West Texas. Use of any other chlorinated hydrocarbon compounds (heptachlor and chlordane) is discouraged since many grub populations have become tolerant to these insecticides.

Granular formulations of the above mentioned insecticides are easier to apply and easier to wash into the soil than the liquid or spray formulation. When granules are used, follow the dosage rate listed on the insecticide container label. After application of the granules, the treated turfgrass area should be dragged with a tow sack, water hose, etc., to knock the granules down near the soil surface. Then apply enough irrigation water to wash the insecticide into the soil (1/2 to 1 inch of irrigation water). When liquid formulations are used, follow the recommended dosage rate listed on the Label of the chemical container. Spray formulations should be applied at the rate of 10 to 25 gallons of water per 1,000 square feet to wash the insecticide into the soil. Wetting the lawn before application also helps. The key to control is getting the insecticide through the grass to the root zone where it will be most effective. Keep children, pets and other animals off the lawn until the insecticide has been thoroughly watered into the sod and turfgrass has dried. Always use insecticides with care. Read the Label on the container and follow the directions carefully.

ticide has been thoroughly watered into the sod and turfgrass has dried. Always use insecticides with care. Read the Label on the container and follow the directions carefully.

Now is the time to check turfgrass areas for infestations of white grubs. Infested turfgrass areas should receive insecticidal applications prior to the 1st of August in West Texas in order to achieve an adequate degree of white grub control. For additional information on white grubs and their control, contact your local county Extension agent's office.

The Scientists Tell Me... Learning About Snakes Can Save a Life

By Robert L. Haney
TAES Science Writer

More than 90 percent of snakes are non-poisonous and quite useful to man, according to a noted herpetologist at Texas A&M University.

"And even the poisonous ones help keep down the population of rodents and other pests," says Dr. James R. Dixon who is engaged in research on snakes for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

From years of study and research and a wealth of field experience, Dixon is able to relate dozens of useful findings. Since Texas is blessed with an abundance of snakes, he finds that knowledge of snakes can do much to relieve anxiety and prevent indiscriminate killing of all snakes.

For example, two types of small snakes he often finds in flowerbeds around houses are quite harmless hunters of slugs and worms.

Other larger, harmless snakes may go in garages or other out-buildings after mice or rats. And if a house has any openings a snake may come inside for the same purpose.

Since there are so many different kinds of snakes in Texas, Dixon says it's easiest to learn to recognize the poisonous ones first.

He adds that in Texas there are four kinds of poisonous snakes: rattlesnake, moccasin, copperhead and coral snake. But, there are nine forms of rattlesnake in Texas, one of moccasin or "cottonmouth", four types of copperhead, and one type of coral snake.

Trouble with the coral snake is that it can be confused with the king snake and the scarlet snake. All have bands of red, black and yellow or white.

Coral snakes though are the only ones that have yellow on each side of the red band.

A good handbook Dixon recommends is "Conant's Field Guide to Reptiles and Amphibians of North America". It's available in inexpensive paperback and pictures the different varieties of snakes and points out identifying characteristics.

Another good source of information is to check with your County Extension Agent for MP-1194, "Poisonous Snakes of Texas".

There are ever so many misconceptions about snakes Dixon says. In addition to the now well known ones about a milk snake can't milk cows, a hoop snake can't take tail in mouth and roll down hill, a "glass snake" (lizard) can't break in pieced and then reassemble, other misconceptions are:

1. A rattlesnake always rattles before it strikes. Not so, if he's asleep and you step on him or otherwise startle him, he'll strike and then rattle.

2. A poisonous snake strikes at a warm body because of a heat sensor. Actually, it's a temperature sensor and snakes use it to detect a difference in temperature. A snake may strike a cold-blooded reptile such as a frog, lizard or another snake.

3. A small poisonous snake is not dangerous. Definitely not so! Dixon says a small rattler is poisonous at birth and only the quantity of poison increases as it gets larger.

A coral snake is more to be feared than other American snakes because it has a cobra-like poison that works on the nerves.

Other American snakes do have a different type poison that works on the blood but the coral snake is not as deadly because of its small size and short fangs. It almost has to chew its poison in and its has little chance of doing this with a lethal dose.

about the phrase "without stop lights or siren." The report said the DPS unit was "accelerating south without lights or siren when it attempted to pass a vehicle." When I read this, I checked with the DPS communications because I couldn't believe a DPS unit was speeding at night without lights. I was told it meant the lights on top of the vehicle, not headlights, as the report lead me to believe, so I wrote "without stop lights." I don't know what else you call those revolving red lights on top of the car. I still have the report if anyone cares to check it out.

We've heard some flak about the proposed new signs being put up on I-10 by the chamber of commerce and the county. Some people think we might have thought of something more original than Ozona, Biggest Little Town in the World. They think it was copied from Reno, Nevada, whose motto is Biggest Little City in the World. However, since the letters and signs have already been ordered, we doubt there is much chance for change. I've been looking at this sign in the park for so long, I thought probably Reno had copied us. Not so, the old-timers tell me. In fact there was quite a bit of flak when the motto was put on the sign some 30 or 40 or more years ago they say. Too bad we didn't know about the proposal months ago and had a contest for a motto or a poll or something. But I guess we are too little, too late for this one.

Caulking Saves Money And Energy

"Caulk it," and chalk it up to money saved, but before buying caulking compounds, locate air-leak areas.

Sealing cracks around doors and windows can reduce cool air losses from 15 to 37 per cent, which saves money and cooling time, Ms. Moore says.

"Caulking will cut down cold air losses and keep out dirt, dust, noise and moisture. It is a tedious job, but most homeowners can do it themselves."

Critical exterior areas of house, mobile home or apartment that require sealing periodically are window frames and sashes, door frames, chimneys and joints between siding and windowsills. Also between eaves and moldings, chimney flashings and the roof—as well as between vent pipes, water faucets, wire connections,

Find Safe Storage For Pesticides

The peak season for using pesticides is at hand, so home gardeners should give careful consideration to safe storage of these materials.

Pesticides are often stored in a garage or shed without thinking that this place is as dangerous as an unprotected medicine cabinet, says Billy Reagor, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Curious youngsters often explore under kitchen sinks and low-to-the-floor places. These are the primary places to avoid for storing bleaches, pesticides and fertilizers.

High cabinets in the house or garage are suitable for storing pesticides if they can be locked. Often a symbol (skull and crossbones) that a child associates with "bad stuff" is helpful, reminds the agent.

Poison Control Center reports reveal that children under five years of age are involved in more than half of all accidental poisonings involving a variety of substances. But less than five per cent of all these poisonings are caused by pesticides.

Pesticides should not be kept in storage for more than a year to protect both children and plants from the aged chemicals.

All containers used to store the pesticides should be non-breakable and closed securely.

Remember, pesticides are just as safe as the person using them.

Sweatercoats for fall 1977 wear deep armholes, large collars and long sleeves in angora, mohair, shetland and other wool blends, says clothing specialist Marlene Odle-Kemp with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.
