Farmers of Nation Are Turning More and More To Rubber Says Goodyear

Akron, Ohio, February 17.—With farmers of the nation turning more and more to rubber tires for their tractors and farm implements, announcement of a new tractor type tire by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, was being received with intense interest in rural sections.

"Having pioneered big air tires for tractors, it was only natural for Goodyear to continue testing, studying, developing, improving, until absolutely sure it could offer farmers the very last word in traction, wear and cushioning", declared a Goodyear engineer. "Goodyear tests, not only on actual farms under actual farming conditions, but on a field especially flooded for days, making it soggy and miry, proved the new tire has more traction and enabled the tractor to deliver more drawbar pull than ever before achieved with pneumatic tires.

"With its 15 per cent wider tread, and long lug-bars with which to contact the ground, it is easy to see why the Goodyear tractor type tire delivers fully 50 per cent more traction," he continued. "The tires are better in mud, up hill, down hill, in sand, loam and clay—more traction in every kind of footing.

"Among other features is the scientific tread design, which forces mud and sand out through the 'channels,' allowing 30 per cent faster cleaning. There is almost 100 per cent more shoulder tread, to dig in and hold, and to prevent side slip, while the diamond blocks of the center tread stick up 67 per cent higher. Draw-bar pull has been increased 30 per cent, and the new tire has 48 per cent more rubber throughout, giving longer life, greater strength, longer wear and more freedom from punctures.

"One of the important facts about the tire is that it provides sure-footed traction both forward and backward," the Goodyear official concluded.

H. O. Cline, local Goodyear dealer, is greatly enthused with the improvements made in the new line of tractor tires.

Wisconsin Governor, Phillip La Follette, to Address Student Conference

Austin, February 17.—Governor Phillip LaFollette of Wisconsin will address the Student Government Conference to be held at the University of Texas February 28 and 29. This conference will be the first of its kind ever held in Texas. It is expected that approximately seventy representatives of student government will attend.

Only 38 years of age, Governor LaFollette is peculiarly adapted to address the youthful collegiate officials, it is believed. When he began his campaign for governor in 1930, he was termed "the boy candidate."

A Widow's Name
Emily Post's "Etiquette" says: "A widow no less than a married woman should always care to use her husband's Christian name, or his name and another initial, engraved on her cards. She is Mrs. John Hunter Titherington Smith, but she is never Mrs. Sarah Smith; at least, not anywhere in good society. In business and legal matters a woman is necessarily addressed by her own Christian name, because she uses it in her signature. But no one should ever address an envelope, except from a bank or a lawyer's office, Mrs. Sarah Smith." As to the signature, Mrs. Post declares "a married woman should always sign a letter to a stranger, a bank, business firm, etc., with her baptismal name, and add, in parentheses, her married name."

Channel Islands
The Channel Islands of Britain, only 75 square miles in area, have a long and glorious history behind them. From the most ancient days the law allows a citizen to shout for help against an alleged aggressor and history records how in the year 1087 the burial of William the Conqueror was delayed thus by a humble citizen whose home had been wrecked by the king without compensation. More than 800 years later, in the year 1918, some one who objected to a telephone pole being planted near his gate, went into the street, called for help according to old usage and custom, and the telephone people had to stop work until the matter was adjusted.

Value of Punctuality
There is no more desirable business qualification than punctuality, and no other so indispensable to a man of affairs, or to anyone who would save his own time and that of others. Napoleon once invited his marshals to dine with him, but as they did not arrive at the moment appointed, he began to eat without them. They came in just as he was rising from the table. "Gentlemen," said he, "dinner is over."

PLAN HUGE LINERS FOR U. S. SERVICE

Ships Would Revolutionize Transatlantic Travel.

New York.—Two "super-cabin liners" for the American merchant marine—ships of such size and speed that they would revolutionize transatlantic travel as it is now known—have been designed and their construction proposed by Paul W. Chapman, banker and former president of the United States Lines.

As designed by Chapman and his associates each ship would have a displacement of 100,000 tons, a length of 1,250 feet, a beam of 144 feet, a cruising speed of 34 knots with 4 knots reserve power and would accommodate 1,000 passengers, exclusively cabin class.

First Time Designed.
Ships of this magnitude have heretofore existed only in the dreams of the shipping world, but have never yet been built or even, as far as is known, designed.

As compared with the French liner Normandie, now the largest ship in service, these proposed vessels would be roughly 20 per cent larger in all specifications except speed, and would carry more than 100 per cent more passengers. They also would be larger than the Queen Mary, England's latest giant of the seas, now nearing completion.

If put into operation in the North Atlantic they would compete with all passenger ships except the largest and fastest luxury liners, and because, as proposed, they would make weekly sailings, crossing the ocean in four days at a standard rate of $50 per passenger, the doom of the smaller passenger ships might easily be seen.

Demand for Liners.

Chapman said: "The great demand today is for ships like these. They must be built, and they will be built by some one. The question is, shall we, who contribute 85 per cent of the transatlantic passenger traffic, construct them first, or let some foreign nation do it?"

The cost of constructing and equipping both ships, estimated at $100,000,000, was suggested by the Chapman organization to be advanced by the federal government, to be paid back to the government by the operating company which chartered the vessels in annual payments of $10,000,000 for ten years.

Riddle of Delphi Oracle Still Baffles Solution

Delphi, Greece.—The riddle of the oracle here, which was known throughout the ancient world for its prophecies, remains unsolved although excavations and research in the ancient city have gone on for more than forty years.

According to the story of the origin of the oracle, its site was discovered by a goat herder, who found his herd crying and prancing wildly about a chasm from which issued a stream of intoxicating air. The cavern has disappeared in modern times, or else never existed.

Many archeologists today hold to the last theory, despite records left by the ancient geographer Strabo and the Greeks themselves. Some, on the other hand, believe it was filled in with debris after the temple connected with it was demolished, toward the end of the Fourth century. Another theory has it that the cavern was closed by an earthquake.

Scores of travelers visiting Delphi to see the ruins continue to search for the chasm, basing their hopes on ancient writing about the procedures before the oracle gave its prophecies. According to these records, the priestess in charge did not prophesy until she had breathed the air of the chasm and became intoxicated by it. A priest then took down her words, later putting them into verse. Thus the message of the oracle was given out.

Unique Clock Found in Hawaii Was Queen's Gift

Honolulu.—Recent discovery in Hawaii of an extraordinary clock given by Queen Liliuokalani to a church in 1890 recalled days when Hawaii was a monarchy rather than an integral part of the United States. Liliuokalani was the last royal ruler of the islands, now American territory.

The royal gift is a round wall clock, 32 inches in diameter. Figures around the outside of the 24-inch dial are numbered 1 to 31, telling the day of the month. An eight-inch dial above the center tells the hours and minutes, but instead of the numerals the 12 letters in the queen's name record the hours. Another dial gives the phases of the moon. A still smaller dial indicates years and leap years. The complete device is operated by a single spring.

Woollegging Is Latest

Marine City, Mich.—The latest in smuggling is the bootlegging of raw wool. United States customs officers recently seized 1,000 pounds of scoured wool in a cottage at Broadbridge Beach, near Algonac, and arrested a woman whose name they are withholding. The wool, which can be bought for 15 cents a pound in Canada, sells on the Detroit market at 30 cents.

Moon Receives Light of Sun on One Side at Time

The moon being a sphere, like the earth, it receives the light of the sun only on one side at a time. The dark of the moon is simply its night; the illuminated side, its day.
Since the moon revolves about the earth, we see it in varying positions with relation to the sun.

Sometimes, states a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, when the moon is "behind" the earth, and hence in such a position that we can see all of its illuminated side, the sun, the earth and the satellite come into a single line. It is then that the earth throws its round shadow on the moon's face, depriving it of part, or even all, of its light. This is an eclipse.

The moon revolves on its axis, and thus presents all sides of itself to the sun. But the pull of the earth is so strong that it can never turn its face away from us. Its revolution on its axis is achieved therefore in the same length of time it takes the moon to travel around the earth—27,321,068 days.
We can never see the other side of the moon, therefore, and a day on that body is almost a month long.
What we speak of as a lunar month is more than 27 1/2 days, however. In consequence of the moon's motion in common with the earth about the sun, the time between one "new" moon and the next is a little less than 29 days and 13 hours.

Ship Models, Oars and Anchors Are in Churches

Ship models have been presented to cathedrals and churches for many centuries, and this old custom was revived when a model of the Mary Rose, a vessel with a notable war record, was hung in Portsmouth cathedral.

Then a large model of a lifeboat hanged from the ceiling of the parish church at South Shields, to commemorate the fact that the first lifeboat was built and launched at that town in 1780. Another model lifeboat has been placed in South-well church.

Gifts of ship models are not confined to Christian churches. They are to be found also in many shrines and temples on the coast of Japan.
There they take the form of models of picturesque Japanese fishing-craft. Japanese fishermen also sometimes present anchors and oars to the temples where they worship.

Discoverer of Blood Circulation

William Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, was born at Folkstone, England, April 1, 1578. He was educated at Cambridge and at the University of Padua, Italy, then the most celebrated school of medicine in the world. In 1602 he was appointed physician to St. Bartholomew's hospital, and in 1615 was made lecturer at the College of Physicians.
It was here that he developed and demonstrated his theory of the circulation of the blood, which he announced to the world in a treatise published in 1628. In the meantime he had been appointed physician to King James I, and continued in the service of James' successor, Charles I. He contributed funds for the erection of an addition to the College of Physicians, and was elected its president, but declined to serve. In 1650 he resigned his lectureship after 40 years. He died in London June 3, 1657.

Carbon Monoxide

Carbon monoxide is composed of 12 parts, by weight, of carbon to 16 of oxygen. It is a colorless, odorless gas, a product of the incomplete combustion of carbon, is an abundant constituent of water gas, and burns with a pale-blue flame, forming carbon dioxide. It is very poisonous, since it combines with the hemoglobin of the blood, expelling oxygen, and its presence in the exhaust gases from internal-combustion engines, in the gases from the detonation of explosives and so on, has caused many fatalities. Carbon monoxide is slightly lighter than air, 28 grams equaling in volume 29 grams of air. Carbon monoxide in a room will diffuse with the air until the percentage of one equals the percentage of the other.

Dog Latin

The phrase dog Latin dates from 1770 or thereabout. It was used by Lord Hailes in his "Ancient Scottish Poems," published in 1770:
"The alternate lines are composed of shreds of the breviary mixed with what we call 'dog Latin' and the French, Latin de cuisine." Vulgar Latin, the every-day speech of the Romans, was as different from the Latin of Cicero as every-day English is from the English of Milton, Macaulay, or Ruskin. The Lat-inization of non-Latin words is dog Latin.—Literary Digest.

Caribou Disappears

The woodland caribou, once fairly plentiful in Maine and the Maritime provinces, probably has disappeared entirely from the Pine Tree state and has become exceedingly rare in the forests of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. It still is found on the Gaspe peninsula and in the province of Quebec some remote herds are found in the more remote regions north of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

John Paul Jones Never Defeated, Never Wounded

John Paul Jones on the ocean during the American Revolution was as General Washington was on land—never known to be defeated in battle or to have received a wound, states a writer in the Washington Post. He displayed the fierce temerity of ancient sea kings in skirmishes and also possessed the knightly courage of medieval chivalry. In a day when seamen considered a capacity for picturesque and plentiful profanity as a mark of professional aptitude, he was distinguished by refraining from oaths and curses. He was never known to inflict punishment on his seamen by using a "cat of nine tails," or any similar weapon.

He was born at Arbigland, Scotland, on July 6, 1747, the son of humble parents. Without encounagement or protection, he, at twelve years, rose in a profession by employing his spare moments in study, readily overcoming disadvantages of education, to appear in a position his own energy advanced him. He embarked on a sea career. Years later he came to America to settle his dead brother's estate in Virginia.
When he was twenty-nine years of age, patriotism swept through his veins, and he joined the American navy.

He resolved to save the "Thirteen Colonies," wabbling in infancy after leaving England's apron string, from oblivion. He became first lieutenant of the Alfred flagship, and hoisted her flag in 1775.

Ferris Wheel "Big Show" at Columbian Exposition

The Ferris wheel was invented by George W. G. Ferris, an American engineer and steel bridge builder.
His imagination was fired when Daniel H. Burnham, chief of construction for the World's Columbian exposition in Chicago in 1893, challenged the civil engineers of America to design something novel and unusual to rival the Eiffel Tower at the Paris exposition in 1889. Ferris conceived the idea of constructing a gigantic revolving wheel on which to carry people into the air for amusement. His friends and business associates advised him against its construction. The country was in the midst of a business depression and financing the undertaking was a difficult task. Even those in charge of the exposition at first regarded the scheme as fantastic and waited several months before granting Ferris the concession, with the result that the fair had opened when the wheel was completed. It proved to be the chief attraction at the exposition and a profitable investment. Engineers from all over the world admired the daring of its design and the perfection of its construction. The wheel was 250 feet in diameter, 825 in circumference and 30 in width. It was equipped with 35 carriages with a seating capacity of 40 persons each.

Origin of Lighthouses

The earliest lighthouses of which records exist were the towers built by the Libyans and Cuschites in Lower Egypt, beacon fires being maintained in some of them by priests. Lesches, a Greek poet (600 B. C.), mentions a lighthouse at Sigeum, now Cape Ischiar, in the Troad, which appears to have been the first light regularly maintained for mariners. The famous Pharos of Alexandria was regarded as one of the wonders of the world. The tower is stated to have been 600 feet in height. It was destroyed by earthquake in the Thirteenth century, but remains are said to have been visible as late as 1350. The name Pharos became the general term for all lighthouses, and the term pharology has been used for the science of lighthouse construction.

Skyscrapers Need Solid Base

Skyscrapers in New York city are built in two clusters, one on the lower tip of Manhattan island and the other about four miles uptown near the middle of the island.
The reason for this is the presence of bed-rock near the surface on both these portions of the island to form solid foundations for these huge structures. The ground between these two points was once a big marsh, since filled in and covered with buildings of lesser height and weight. It is unsafe for the tall ones, which are inclined to settle because of unstable foundations.

Careful for Bride

A Hungarian trousseau consists of 18 pillows, nine with linen and nine with silk covers; three mattresses, five richly embroidered sheets, three bed covers, 30 shirts, 27 blouses, 12 silk kerchiefs, 12 scarfs and a dress for baking bread.
On the wedding day everything is loaded high on a cart and driven through the whole village, so that all can admire.

Migrant Shrike

Unlike the sly Cowbird, the Migrant Shrike is frank in his ways.
He will catch a large beetle, grasshopper, field mouse, or even a small songbird, and hang it on a sharp thorn of a haw or other thorn tree where the world may see his cruelty. His habit of hanging up his prey has won him the common name of Butcher Bird.

IT WORKED FOR ME

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation.

Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use a liquid laxative, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes any sluggishness or biliousness, your money back.

NOSE IS IMPORTANT LABORATORY TOOL

Sense of Smell Is More Delicate Than Taste.

New York.—Smelling is so useful a practice in the laboratory that the nose merits greater recognition as a tool of science, Dr. E. C. Crocker declares in Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, publication of the American Chemical Society.

The sense of smell, far more delicate than the sense of taste, detects one one-hundred billionths of a milligram of a strongly odorous substance such as vanillin diluted in a sniff of air, Doctor Crocker says. Five billionths of a milligram of artificial musk concentrated in a liter of air is within its range.

Keen as the nose is, it does not approach single molecule sensitivity, for in a just perceptible sniff there are 40,000,000 molecules.

"If only one molecule in 1,000 of those sniffed falls on the sensitive area, some thousands are necessary to give a smell impression even with the most actively odorous agent," Doctor Crocker explains in a plea for "nasal education." "An instrument that can detect a millionth of a milligram, and in some cases less than a billionth of a milligram, of the vapor of hundreds of kinds of organic substances should inspire admiration."

Compared to this refinement of perception, the sense of taste which has a limit of about 0.01 milligram, is gross, Doctor Crocker declares.

Valuable to Chemist.

"It does not take much argument to convince an organic chemist that his sense of smell is of great value to his work," he continues. "But very few chemists, without a careful appraisal of the matter, give this lowly and despised sense even a portion of its proper credit."

Too little is known of either smells or smelling to render them valuable for scientific purposes, according to Doctor Crocker, who finds that the lack of adequate language to describe odor accurately is hampering needed research which would make the nose more useful to both scientists and laymen.

The public, meanwhile, is growing increasingly odor-conscious, he points out, and is demanding a perfection in the odors of consumer goods comparable with the great improvements that have taken place in their physical qualities and appearance.

"Whatever commercial products cannot be made strictly odorless must at least be made to smell pleasant," he adds.

Important as odors are both aesthetically and industrially, the present description of odors is wholly unsatisfactory, Doctor Crocker asserts, and nowhere nearly approaches the exactness possible with the senses of sound and sight.

"The odor descriptions given in chemical handbooks are pitifully inadequate. To find the odor of a chemical described as peculiar, nauseating, foul, characteristic, or pleasant, gives but a trace of the help reasonably expected.

Nasal Education Needed.

"Such rough comparisons as spicy, tarry, anise, musty or aromatic at least specify the class, even though much more information is usually desirable, especially where an odor may have the qualities of several such classes simultaneously, only one of which is mentioned.

"Among perfumers, the situation is not so helpless, for a rigid nasal education and discipline are required in the business. Memorizing the odors of all the ordinary flowers, fruits, and even animals, as well as of vast numbers of pure chemicals, gives a rich background against which the odor in question is projected and compared."

If an analytical system of classification were agreed upon, Doctor Crocker says, even slight differences in defining odors could be expressed. Odors could be simplified to a few elemental types, as colors are known in sight, and the tones in sound. The same system would be applicable to flavor, which is odor plus taste.

Fundamental types of stimuli which excite the taste buds on the tongue have been found to be sour, sweet, salty and bitter. But no such studies have been completed for the sensitive nasal zone, "no larger in area than two fingernails, located inaccessibly high in the nose, just behind and beneath the eyes," a place particularly difficult of access for experiments.

Rare Book Worth $5,000 Is Bought for Trifle

Closter, N. J.—A rare edition of "Pilgrim's Progress," said to be worth $5,000, was bought for 8 1/2 cents by Mayor William A. Oliver at an auction of the personal effects of the late Mrs. Ellen Jane Ackerman, wealthy recluse.

Mayor Oliver bid 25 cents for three books, among them the John Bunyan work, which was published in 1846. Mayor Oliver, who is a bibliophile, as well as a borough executive, said he recognized the value of the book as soon as it was offered for sale. In the volume were newspaper clippings saying Mrs. Ackerman had once refused an offer of $3,200 for it, according to Mayor Oliver.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

A bunch of newspaper men were sitting at a table discussing titled persons and even royalty they had met in the course of their work, when one of the group told an incident that occurred when he and his wife, and another couple were returning from Europe on a crack liner. One evening, as they were sitting in the smoking room, an Englishman—he was the type who knows who everybody is aboard the ship within 24 hours—came up and said that a most distinguished passenger was desirous of joining the group, buying a drink and, if permissible, dancing with the ladies. He was informed that the stranger would be made welcome, so he brought forward a youngish man whom he introduced as the prince of Denmark. With the introduction, the prince clicked his heels, saluted and carried himself quite in the proper manner.

The Americans, however, were sure they were being spoofed a bit, so one of the ladies replied, "Glad to meet you, prince, I'm the Queen of Sheba," and the prince merely smiled. "And I am glad to meet you, too," said a Chicago member of the party. "I've been wanting to meet somebody from your country for some time because I've been wondering what is rotten in Denmark." The prince smiled, bowed and replied, "There is plenty rotten in Denmark." Whereupon the Americans took him for a good sport and made a place for him at the table.

By and by the conversation got around to the ship's barber and the prince said he hated to go to barber shops. That was the newspaper man's opportunity, "Prince," he said, "with that mug of yours, you don't need to go to a barber shop. Just get one of the sailors to holdstone that upper deck of yours." That evidently appealed to the sense of humor of the prince. He laughed heartily.

Well, things went along like that for several days, with the Englishman who had introduced the prince looking p-d-p-eyed at all the joshing. But it evidently appealed to the prince, as he stuck around and took it. You've guessed the answer, of course. Investigation showed that he was really Prince Eric of Denmark, though several times removed, still in direct line to the Danish throne.

More than nine years ago—August 6, 1926, to be exact—Gertrude Ederle set a new record by swimming the English channel in 14 hours and 31 minutes. That was a battle that left her deaf. Now she is fighting another battle. This time it isn't against buffeting waves, but against the effects of a fracture. Two years ago she slipped on a rug in the home of a friend and suffered a broken pelvis. Eleven months in a plaster cast followed. Then came daily massages and many visits of doctors. Eventually, she was able to walk, but even now her legs give way after a short distance.

The spirit of Gertrude Ederle hasn't given way, however. Not only does she go through a prescribed course of exercises, which she hopes will make it possible for her to swim again, but to while away the time she makes all her own clothes. She holds 29 records of different kinds, and when she returned from Europe, after setting her channel record, she was received with the blare of bands and showers of ticker tape.

A curious passenger engages him in casual conversation and learns that the priest has a parish in the thick of the ghetto section and has been there so long that he has not only learned to read but also to speak Yiddish.

Morgan's Raid Costly
Gen. John Morgan's raid through southern Ohio during the Civil war cost the citizens individually and the state government more than $100,000,000. This included the damage done to property and the cost, borne by the state, of course, of maintaining troops in the field. It was one of the most costly military raids in history.
