E. C. KING MAKES LAST MINUTE APPEAL TO PRECINCT VOTERS

TO THE VOTERS OF PRECINCT NUMBER ONE:

I take this method of expressing my appreciation for the courtesy you have shown me in my race for Commissioner of Precinct One. I have tried to see each one of you and if I have failed it was not because I would not appreciate your support. I have tried to run a clean race and present my claim as I have seen it. I certainly realize the responsibility of the office and after thirty-one years as a farmer in this precinct I feel that I have a practical knowledge of what we need in Floyd County in the way of roads and other economical improvements. I have always been interested in the welfare of the Floydada trade territory. I believe in Floyd County as an agricultural county and in the business enterprises of Floydada.

I am making this plea to the voters for their support, first that I might receive the remuneration that the office pays and second that I might serve the people next term and give them the benefit of some lessons I have learned in the last thirty years working with men and machinery and that we might have an even more economical administration for the money that is available. I am no super-man but I do believe I know the worth of a dollar and come near as the average placing it where it will be worth the most to the taxpayers. Assuring you that if elected I will work with the Commissioners' Court in giving you an economical administration.

I am, yours respectfully,
E. C. KING.

Swimming Hazards That Should Be Heeded By All Persons

In Texas, during 1935, there were 371 deaths from accidental drowning, according to records in the State Bureau of Vital Statistics. This is an increase of 54 over the number reported for the year 1934, and an increase of 85 over the number reported for 1933.

"While water sports are the greatest of all sports during the summer season, they present certain hazards which should be heeded," said Dr. John W. Brown, state health officer. "Accidental drowning would not occur if each individual respected the fact that water is not man's natural element, and governed his activities in the water by standards of safety. 'Certain precaution should be taken by all swimmers:

1. Never swim alone—especially in deserted places where no rescue is available in case of an emergency.
2. Do not let young children go out in deep water even if they know how to swim, unless some older person proficient in life saving, is with them.
3. Do not go in bathing directly after eating. Wait two hours before taking the plunge.
4. Do not dive in unfamiliar places until you are sure of the depth of the water and the absence of rocks.
5. Do not overtake your strength—work up gradually to a long swim by strengthening the muscles first.
6. Do not swim when fatigued.
7. Do not create a hazard for other swimmers by childish pranks and smart tricks.

"Accidental drownings, with few exceptions, occur through lack of proper safeguards of in places without adequate supervision. Take your swim in one of the approved sanitary swimming pools now available in most communities, and help reduce the deaths in Texas from drowning."

Meat Cuts and How to Cook Them BEEF CHART

Every housewife is confronted with the three-day question of variety in the meals she serves. Beef becomes addicted to roasts or steaks and forget all about the other good beef cuts which will give pleasing variation and be easy on the pocketbook, too. Perhaps our trouble lies in the fact that we are not as familiar as we should be with many of the possibilities offered by beef. If you are one of those whose use of beef is limited to a roast or a steak, the chart given above will be invaluable in learning to identify and locate the many retail cuts of beef. The chart will show you at a glance just how each one should be cooked. You will want to preserve this chart for ready reference.

Lovely "Sweetheart of Texas"

To millions of people throughout the nation, who have read with interest the Texas Centennial's booklets describing the beauties of Texas, lovely Janice Jarratt was known simply as the "girl on the cover". But in response to a wide public demand Centennial officials revealed her identity as the San Antonio girl who won fame in New York as America's best-loved model and became ranked as one of the world's most beautiful women. Back to Texas she came last week, and in an elaborate ceremony attended by hundreds Governor James V. Alfred bestowed upon her the official state commission as "Sweetheart of the Texas Centennial." Texas Beekeepers Give Low-Down n Life Of Bees At Exposition

You get the low down on bees at the Texas Beekeepers Association exhibit at the Hall of Agriculture at the Texas Centennial Exposition.

A queen is never selected after being born. Her Majesty is chosen while she is still an egg. When the bees elect a queen they pick out an egg and surround it with the sweetest of sweets to appease the royal baby's first appetite.

A queen bee only mates once in a life time. She spends the remainder of her days laying eggs.

The honeymoon is over when the queen quits the embrace of her drone mate. He dies instantly.

Ladies in waiting push food into Her Majesty's mouth while Her Queenship deposits eggs.

The digestive machinery of a queen is so highly geared that food is almost instantly converted into eggs.

Bees have a keen sense of selecting the choicest of sweets for the queen's menu. The workers are content with coarser stuff.

A queen has a corps of servants as extensive as a dowager.

A queen's daily egg production is bigger in size than the queen herself.

She will produce between 2,000 and 3,000 eggs every twenty-four hours.

In Texas a queen spends ten months laying eggs and takes her vacation during the two coldest months.

A working bee always commits suicide, works herself to death. Her normal span of life is eight weeks. There are more than 200 practical uses for bee products.

Lights of New York
By L. L. STEVENSON

Prowling around New York—and feeling restless every time he hears a liner whistle—your correspondent encountered Ray Henderson who devotes the greater part of his time to writing about Katherine Cornell. Knowing that at this season, his employer spends many hours reading manuscripts, naturally the question asked concerned the outlook for young dramatists. The answer was a bit surprising. On an average, only one in 200 manuscripts received at the Cornell offices from unknown dramatists is there an original idea. Still, an editor once stated that in five years, during which time he'd read thousands of unsolicited manuscripts, he had found only three worth buying and of the three, one turned out to have been plagiarized. Oh yes, another thing Mr. Henderson mentioned that during the last few weeks, the Cornell play department had received a preponderance of anti-war manuscripts.

Proceeding along Broadway, your correspondent stopped for a word or two with Phil Baker. The conversation concerned complications caused by copyrights in music which, as everyone knows, has been responsible for the revival of many songs of the past because if the new ones were put on the air, there would be law suits. The Baker comment was that the way things are now, if Gabriel wanted to blow his trumpet, nine chances out of ten, the tune would be restricted and Judgment day would have to be postponed! Which brought to mind the charge made by Phil Duedy that song writers have banded together in a campaign against public utilities with electric companies as their chief target. As proof, he cited, "Lights Out," "After Dark," "Early to Bed," "Sleep," "A Perfect Day" and "At Dawning."

In one of those vacant lots on Eighth avenue, your correspondent encountered two youngsters playing a game they called "night club." Their equipment was an old table on which stood a number of assorted bottles all empty. Asked where they got the idea, one little girl spoke up and said they'd heard their parents discussing such places and had followed the details so far as they were able. "And if we could only get that goat over there to stand still near our table, we'd get the right smell, too," added the other little girl solemnly. Incidentally, a number of the night clubs have added telephones to the table equipment.

One of the habits of inhabitants of this town to which your correspondent is unable to become accustomed is that of going to a store and buying dirt or rather "earth" as it is termed by those who sell it. New Yorkers spend regular money for a little black soil for window boxes or flower pots and spend much more to make those penthouse gardens. At current retail prices, shoe scrapings of boyhood days would have sold for enough to have bought a new cane fish pole. Even the residue from face washings, under maternal supervision, would have brought considerable. Instead of buying dirt, we had to work hard to get rid of it. But this is New York.

At lunch recently with a few friends, Frank Buck explained how East Indian fakirs are able to handle even the most poisonous snakes without endangering their lives or their health. Before giving a demonstration of his control over reptiles, the fakir irritates his snakes to such an extent that they are so fighting mad they will bite anything that gets in their way. The fakir allows them to vent their ire on some harmless object, such as an orange, until their venom sacks have been emptied. Then for the next few hours, he handles them without risk. It may be all as the "Bring-Em-Back-Alive" Buck says, but I wouldn't want to try it. Some old snake would be just mean enough to hold back a few drops for my benefit.

The truly rural again is being shown New Yorkers by means of that "traveling farm" which made such a hit last year. There are cows and chickens and a red barn with a milkmaid, which by no means are commonplace in a city where kids know the country only through pictures. Each month this year there will be a 10-day vacation for the exhibit so that the animals may rest, continual stares tiring them no end.

Newly Hatched Gulls Taught to Fear Man

Ottawa, Ont.—A sea-gull captured three or four days after hatching can never be tamed because its mother or other grown birds have taught it fear. Dr. John Tait of McGill University Montreal, told the biological section of the Royal Society of Canada. A gull taken just after hatching, he said, may grow up without fear of man.

Beautiful Glacial Gorge Charmed Indian Hunters

It was in March, 1851, that a group of pioneers, organized as the Mariposa Battalion, followed the trail of a band of Yosemite Indians into the valley to avenge the deaths of settlers killed by the Indians in raids on Savage's trading post near Mariposa. Early day historians record that the discovery of the magnificent glacial gorge so thrilled members of the battalion that they gave up their Indian hunt and went back to Mariposa to spread the news of what they had seen, according to a writer in the Los Angeles Times.

They told of sheer walls of granite rising from 3000 to 5000 feet on either side of a wide gorge. Roaring down from dizzy heights over the perpendicular cliffs were six of the most spectacular waterfalls ever seen by man, one of them the highest in the world. In the valley below the Merced River wound its swift way through lush meadows carpeted with wild flowers, and through groves of majestic pine, fir, cedar and oak trees.

Ahwahnee, "deep grassy valley," the Indians called it. A melodious name expressive of the distant roar of the falls, the whisper of the wind through the forest and the magnificent solemnity of the place. They had other mystic names, too, for the mighty granite monoliths that towered above the valley and for the waterfalls. But to the Mariposa Battalion it was Yosemite, "full grown grizzly bear," named for the tribe of Indians who inhabited it.

Ruminant Animals Have Two Stomach Compartments

Ruminant animals such as cows, sheep, goats, antelopes, giraffes, deer and camels have two compartments in the stomach, observes a writer in the Indianapolis News. As a cow eats, the food is not at first thoroughly chewed and passes immediately into the large compartment of the stomach, or paunch. Later while the cow is standing or lying down this undigested food is regurgitated from the paunch and masticated. This process is called rumination. The cud is the quid or returned bolus of food in the cow's mouth.

Sometimes a cow will lose her cud; that is, rumination stops because the food ceases to come up from the paunch into the mouth. This is frequently one of the first indications of sickness in ruminant animals. Rumination is resumed when the animal returns to a normal state of health. In such cases some farmers give a cow an artificial cud, such as a dried herring, or a strip of salted pork, in order to aid the animal to recover her natural cud. The United States Department of Agriculture, however, says the method is impractical.

Species of Arborvitae

There are five species of true arborvitae, known to the botanist as thuja, but more generally spelled thuja, notes a writer in the Los Angeles Times. This is an ancient Greek name given to some resinous tree or shrub and its meaning is not understood. One of the best known species is Thuja occidentalis, erroneously called white cedar in some Eastern states where it is native. It is found in Canada, and south to North Carolina on the Eastern Coast and to Illinois in the Mississippi Valley. The normal type attains a height of sixty feet, with a slender pyramidal growth and straight central shaft which makes the tree a favorite with lumbermen seeking telegraph or telephone poles. Like the oriental species, Thuja occidentalis has many segregated and named forms, at least fifty. Some of these are very dwarf, with two distinct kinds of foliage.

Early Steel Manufacturing

Kane's "More First Facts" says that steel manufacturing is claimed to have been accomplished in 1728 by Samuel Hingley, of Simsbury, Conn., and Joseph Dewey, of Hebron, Conn., both of whom are believed to have converted small quantities of bar iron into steel. A slab of cast plow steel was rolled by William Woods at the steel works of Jones and Quigg in Pittsburgh in 1846 and was shipped to John Deere, plow-maker, of Moline, Ill.

First Doctor in Virginia Colony

The first doctor in the Virginia colony was Lawrence Bohone, who arrived in 1610 and was killed in 1622 when the vessel "Margaret and John" was attacked by Spanish ships. There may have been doctors attached to previous expeditions but these cannot be considered to have practiced in this country. The first doctor in New England was Dr. Samuel Fuller, who arrived on December 21, 1620, on the Mayflower.

Phi Sigma Lambda fraternity is a law fraternity, organized in 1926 by the union of two professional fraternities, Chi Lambda Sigma, founded at Cleveland Law School in 1920, and Pi Ep, founded at the Detroit College of Law in 1926. Huntley Castle

Huntley castle, in the highlands of Scotland, was once the headquarters of the Roman Catholic faith in Scotland. Much of the castle has been in ruins, but its great halls have been preserved through the efforts of the ancient monument board and the Aberdeen Antiquarian society. It epitomizes the development of the Scottish castles from the earliest Norman fortresses of earthen timber to the stately buildings of the Seventeenth century.

Gray Uniforms

Research among the archives of Fort Monroe, Va., reveals that the high-powered rifle was responsible for the change in color of uniforms of the United States army from blue to olive drab. Blue, it was discovered, is visible at a longer distance than any other color, and makes an easy target for sharpshooters. Until after the Spanish-American war there were no guns accurate or high-powered enough to make any difference.

Cave Bear of Ice Ages

Scientists maintain that many of the "monsters" with which we grapple in our dreams are dim memories of the great beasts which roamed the earth when the human race was young. Among these ancient giants of the animal world was the cave bear of the Ice ages, nearly as big as an elephant.

Whistle From Organ

A London, England, organ builder designed and manufactured, according to officials of the South Kensington museum, what is believed to be the first whistle used on a locomotive. Until the whistle was invented at the suggestion of George Stephenson trains had no way of signaling their approach.

"Basket Makers," Weavers of Non-Leakable Vessels

When the cliff dwellers, from whom the Pueblo Indian of the Southwest is descended, came to Mesa Verde, now a National park in Colorado, says a writer in the New York Times, they found earlier occupants, who had perhaps been there for centuries. These were known as "Basket Maker III." One of their circular, subterranean houses originally thatched over, resembles the kivas, ceremonial rooms of the cliff dwellers and the Pueblo Indians of today.

The Basket Makers were experts at weaving baskets, some of which are so tight that they will hold water. The Basket Makers also made sandals and were perhaps the first to fire pottery.

The Pueblo Indians took over the cliff dwellings, changing and adapting them to their own needs. They improved on the building of houses, constructing them above ground so solidly that the walls in many cases are standing firmly.

The houses were built in clusters, sometimes one on top of another. The rooms are small, with small windows and doors, some of which are found sealed, the chambers having been used as tombs. In the back of the houses, against the canyon walls, are smaller rooms where grain was stored and turkeys were cooped (probably that their feathers might be used in making robes).

Women of the Stone Age Had Own Beauty Secrets

The ladies of Cleopatra's court took milk baths regularly. The idea wasn't, as you may suspect, originated by more modern beauties. Neither did the sirens of the modern stage figure out for themselves that mascara makes lashes look longer, eyes more luminous. Women who lived hundreds of years ago didn't have fine, scientifically made mascara and eyelash dyes, but they did have burnt cork and wood, and they blackened their lashes and brows with these, states a writer in the New York World-Telegram.

It is said that women of American Indian tribes smeared their lips with black paint for state occasions. Generally, however, they used the juice of wild berries to dye their lips bright red.

Women of ancient Rome and Egypt had no tissue cream, but they anointed their bodies and their hair with oil, painted lips and cheeks with red berry juice. Long before, women of the stone age crushed bits of white rock and powdered their faces with the dust.

Variety of Flavors

A classification of many of the eucalyptus trees reads like a catalog of flavoring extracts for cake-making. Some of them, says the Los Angeles Times, are the peppermint gum, lemon-scented gum, apple-scented gum and sugar gum. The crushed leaves of these trees actually have the designated odors. The peppermints are the tallest trees in the world. The almost unbelievable heights of the tallest eucalyptus trees vary from 400 to almost 600 feet. It is said that there is a eucalyptus tree near Sydney 325 feet high. One of the modest cousins of these giants of the eucalyptus family is known as Eucalyptus polyanthemos, or the Australian beech. It is one of the hardiest and most drought resistant of the small types of eucalyptus.

Bees Do Not Sting You if You Display No Fear

According to the popular notion, insects are physically unable to penetrate the human skin no matter how hard they may ply their stingers, because the pores are then closed, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News. The United States bureau of entomology investigated and reported that the belief has no foundation in fact. The stinger of a bee does enter the skin through the pores, and these tiny openings may be slightly affected by breathing, but the difference is not sufficient to interfere with the operation of the bee's stinger. If bees do not sting a person while he holds his breath or clenches his fists it is not because they can not sting under such conditions, but because the person is then likely to be more quiet.

Bees seem to be able to detect the slightest sign of fear in a human being and are stimulated to sting by any quick, nervous movements. A person who remains quiet and who shows no fear is not in great danger of being stung. Bees, however, are repelled by certain body odors, and some persons do not excite and anger bees as others do.

Early Coins

In the reign of William and Mary copper coins were struck in England for New England and Carolina. Lord Baltimore had silver shillings, 6 pence and 4 pence made in England to supply the demands of his province of Maryland. Vermont and Connecticut established mints in 1785 for the issue of copper coin. New Jersey followed a year later. But Congress had under advisement the establishment of a mint for the confederated states, and in this same year agreed upon a plan submitted by Thomas Jefferson. The act went into operation, on a small scale, in 1787. After the adoption of the Constitution in 1789 all the state mints were closed.

The Word "Dun"

The word "dun" is supposed by some to be derived from the French "donnez." The British Apollo of 1780 says, however, that the word owes its origin to a Joe Dun, a famous bailiff of Lincoln in the time of Henry VII. He is said to have been so successful in the collection of debts that his name became proverbial. Whenever it seemed almost impossible to make a man pay, people would say, "Why don't you Dun him?"

Memorial Stones Recall Clan Wars in Scotland

At Barvas, a few miles north of Carlouay, Scotland, stands a memorial stone erected in memory of some event that happened in the days of races themselves long lost in oblivion. Numbers of them are found among the islands, but the largest, known as the "Thrush Stone," a monolith 20 feet high is more modern and is supposed to commemorate a battle fought centuries ago between the clans Macaulay and Morrison.

A large cairn on an eminence by the road side is an example of the chambered burial cairns, locally known as "barvas," which form another prehistoric group of these isles. The most imposing is the Langass Barva, which crowns a small hill by the side of the main road in North Uist. These cairns are attributed to Neolithic times and probably are the tombs of famous chieftains. Some of the stones used for the chambers in these tumuli are colossal and the handling of them has presented a problem of extreme difficulty.

The gigantic caves used once upon a time as dwelling places with their kitchen-middens, with sub-chambers exhibit interesting clues to the lives of the inhabitants. In addition to the caves are the great tunneled underground structures found in tiers to the north of Uist, and known as the "earth tunnels."

In these a long, narrow stone gallery, sometimes extending to a depth of 80 feet, leads to round stone rooms, perfectly chiseled as living apartments. The heights of the galleries and rooms vary from three to six feet. Some of them are so low, with their devious curves, that they suggest the possibility of being hiding places.

Considering how fine this railroad transportation is nowadays, you can't travel any cheaper. Fares lowest in history—substantial savings on round trip tickets. So why not take the train? It's safer. It's more dependable.

You can't beat the improved travel comfort in coaches and sleeping cars. It's a good thing movies don't have such restful seats—most folks would sure fall asleep.

Ever hear about the new Free pick-up-and-delivery of less than carload freight? It's a great convenience to shippers and receivers alike. Western railroads pick up at the door, ship by fast freight, and deliver to door at no extra charge.

Railroad trains are running on faster schedules these days. Seems like the iron horse wants to show these new streamlined diesels that he can step out, too. Both passenger and freight schedules have been speeded up.

What's more, the railroads believe in "safety first." Last year not one passenger was killed in a train accident on western railroads.

Talk to your local railroad agent. He's full of information about traveling and shipping.

We are proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and pledge continued progress.

Attend to Your Shadow Contrasts

Strong shadow contrasts, plus foreground objects and a foreground "frame," all combine to give these pictures depth and perspective.

WHAT makes some pictures seem real enough to walk right into, while others appear to be little more than a design on a flat wall?

The thing that makes the difference is that quality in a picture, variously called "perspective," "depth," or "third dimension effect," that puts objects in relief so that they appear solid, and makes it possible to perceive their relative size and position.

In photography, this quality of reality is created chiefly by proper attention to contrasts in lights and shadows. Remember that to achieve reality in a painting, the artist creates light and shadow contrasts, but that in nature such contrasts do not always come ready made. They must be looked for. In nature what often seems a good picture to the eye is not a good picture for the camera lens, because of the absence of contrasts. The eye is aided by our imagination but not so the lens. In the print, the scene may turn out flat and uninteresting, especially if we try to include the whole country side in the picture.

Hence, to get perspective, pay attention to light and shadow contrasts. Look for vantage points that best reveal them. Usually the longer and more sharply defined the shadows the greater is the third dimensional effect and the appearance of reality of objects depicted. In outdoor photography there is value in taking pictures when the sun is low, because then shadows are long and accentuate the perspective. Always remember, too, the photographer's maxim: "Expose for the shadows and the high lights will take care of themselves." That, however, does not mean always to expose for a very deep shadow, but, in general, to expose to record detail in the intermediate shadows.

Another way to accentuate depth in a photograph, especially in scenic views, is to include a distinctive foreground object, which emphasizes the diminished size of objects in the distance, thus creating "depth." A human figure or tree, in the foreground at the right or left, will often serve the purpose and at the same time add interest.

Another way is to choose a vantage point which will give the picture a foreground "frame." Such a frame often serves where long shadows and distinctive foreground objects are absent. Foreground trees with lacy overhanging boughs are splendidly useful as frames. They are full of beauty in themselves, and, if in the print they show completely in silhouette, that is to say, in dark outline without interior detail, the effect is often all the better. Everything beyond is accented by the dark tone that strikes its deep note in front. Similarly a foreground archway in a bridge or other structure is not only an attractive element itself, but helps the eye to move forward into the picture to the scene beyond.

Study these points before you "shoot."

LINK TO MAYAS IS FOUND IN DAKOTA

Discover Stone "Telescope" 4,000 Years Old.

Bismarck, N. D.—The influence of Mayan culture upon the primitive peoples of the Great Plains has been further corroborated in North Dakota with the discovery of a stone "telescope" in a gravel pit north of Grand Forks in the Red river valley.

Edward A. Milligan, North Dakota archaeologist directing excavating of Indian village sites for the WPA, announced the discovery. He estimates the instrument was used by the aborigines who roamed this area about 4,000 years ago.

Hewn from a form of limestone that has become almost as hard as marble, the telescope is 8 inches long and 1 1/4 inches in diameter; it has a conical cylinder 1/2-inch in diameter at the eye end. On the exterior is a single carved symbol, the nature of which is unexplained.

The telescope was one of the numerous artifacts recovered from the gravel pit, a graveyard of prehistoric people. Archaeologists know tubes of this kind were employed for astronomical purposes, because carvings on the Mayan pyramids of Central America depict people of that era studying the heavens with the tubes in connection with their worship of the heavenly bodies.

Mr. Milligan believes that the Mayans, their relatives or offspring migrated by way of the West Indian islands to Florida, thence along the Appalachians to Ohio, and thence along the Ohio, Mississippi and Missouri rivers. He points out that artifacts of Mayan character have been found along this supposed route and as far west as Yellowstone National park.

Slouching Good for Some Folks, Doctors Declare

Kansas City.—"Chin up, shoulders back, chest out—" But the military bearing is not the best for every one, Drs. Louis B. Laplace and Jesse T. Nicholson of Philadelphia told the American Medical association at its recent convention here.

"Every person has a certain posture, determined by his particular build and function, which is best suited to him," they said. "Slouching" is good for some people, or, in the words of the doctors, "there are many persons whose optimum physiological function is attained in a posture which is not entirely correct by orthopedic standards."

In such persons, they believe, "the greater spinal curve" compensates for individual differences in body structure and physical activity.

Studies of twenty-three healthy men and women, they reported, showed that "vital capacity"—the functioning of the heart and blood system—can be diminished "by extreme correction of posture as well as by a marked slump."

They found two persons, however, whose blood circulation improved with corrected posture. "Flexibility of posture" results in the best vital capacity and each case requires individual study, they concluded.

New and Simpler High Power Air Fuel Produced

New York.—A new fuel for aviation engines was described by W. S. Farish, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, and F. A. Howard, president of the Standard Oil Development company.

The fuel is a synthetic one composed of gasoline, isopropyl-ether, itself a product of a gas now produced in large quantities in most large oil refineries—and a small quantity of tetraethyl lead. It is still called by its laboratory "incubator" name, "EL-435."

The discovery of the blend using so common a by-product as isopropyl ether, Mr. Howard explained, assured the aviation industry of being able to obtain in ample quantity and at commercially practical prices fuel of 100 octane rating which had heretofore been made in a different way and confined to military use.

Tests indicate that the new fuel will give an increase of 30 per cent in power.

New Device Junks Hand Cranked Rural Phones

Rochester, N. Y.—The old hand telephone on the farmhouse parlor wall, with its disturbing jangle of shorts and longs, is on the way out.

With a device perfected by William J. Vincent rural subscribers are promised the same type service as urban areas. Vincent's invention is a neon relay tube that eliminates the hand crank and the old code ringing system under which every telephone on the party line jingled. Now only the party wanted is summoned by the bell.

The tube is being installed on all rural lines served by the Rochester company. Officials predict it will be in general use throughout the country soon.
