Bonner, now veteran ranchman of Dalhart, dons makeup and costume at Dallas in the dressing room of Cavalcade of Texas, the Texas Centennial Exposition's greatest show, in order to portray the era of which her father was a vital part. Assisting her in the process is Jan Isabelle Fortune, author of the Cavalcade and daughter of the late Judge J. M. Isabelle, Wellington, Texas.

Lights of New York
By L. L. STEVENSON

It seemed mighty queer to go down the bay the other morning without having my cutter pass inspection by Matthew P. Cassidy. He has been doing that for so many years that it seemed an absolutely essential part of the trip. For the first two or three years, he not only made me sign my name on the back every trip, so that he could check up on the handwriting, but also made me show my police card. The government is careful concerning cutter passes. It has to be or it would be running a free ferry to Quarantine and there wouldn't be any room for the customs and immigration officers and the public health service doctors. In Mr. Cassidy's mind, his duty to the government was always uppermost, so he took nothing for granted and overlooked nothing. Not only did he check passengers as they boarded the cutter, but also after the boat got under weigh. If he found a phony, he talked to the captain, with the result that there was a stop at Rosebank, on Staten Island, and the intruder was put ashore.

When the cutter reached the liner for which it was bound, Mr. Cassidy was always the last one to climb the ladder or cross the plank. He inspected and counted every one who went aboard and until that was done he remained on the cutter's deck. Then he went up and with his associates became busy with the declarations of passengers. In the course of time, he became known as "Old Reliable," and as has been indicated, lived up to that name faithfully. For 46 years, he served in the customs. In that time, he boarded more than 83,000 liners and traveled many thousands of miles on Coast Guard vessels. But he never went to sea on a ship. Last week he reached the age of seventy and with that came compulsory retirement.

In all these years, Mr. Cassidy met practically every celebrity, in one way or another, that came to these shores. He also had considerable to say about who met the celebrities, as none could board the liner until he gave the word. Observation brought the conviction that celebrities were merely passengers to him. His only concern was that all the customs requirements were met and he always saw to it that they were. Every newspaper man who ever covered ship news knew him. But he made them show their passes just the same.

With repairs to existing bridle paths and the opening of some new ones, the prominent citizens who enjoy early morning canters in Central park are out in force these days. The sport was recently given a revival with an English hunt breakfast and everything. Of the various riders, Jefferson Seligman, the banker, is the dean. He has been riding around the paths at dawn for the last half century. Various attempts have been made to cut down the bridle paths and even to abolish them, but the horse lovers have so far won out in their fight to maintain them.

According to a report that just reached my desk, that Rockefeller Center hairdresser who discovered a way to make women's hair give off light in the dark had occasion the other night to put his invention to practical use. A fuse blew in his fashionable salon and left the place in darkness. So he got out wigs he had treated and obtained illumination in that manner. No radium is used in the treatment, though the effect is said to be the same.

Minister Goes 610 Miles for Sermon Each Week
Tacoma.—Rev. Oakley Rhay thinks nothing of a weekly jaunt of 610 miles to preach a sermon. He travels that distance each week in a round trip from Eugene, Ore., to Tacoma to preach at the Roosevelt Heights Christian church. He will continue commuting until summer, when he is to receive a degree from the University of Oregon. He then becomes a regular pastor at Tacoma church.

Clever Lad Builds His Own Telescope
Pasadena.—Here in the lee of the famous Mt. Wilson observatory is a fifteen-year-old youth, whose hobby is building telescopes. Dick Cale built his first reflector by pilfering papa's shaving mirror and using some cardboard tubing and a Christmas tree stand. His latest effort, built for the Pasadena Junior Astronomical society, which he founded among junior high school students, is a more expensive six-inch reflector. It cost $2.50. It is strong enough to reveal sunspots.

AGE-ILLS OF PAPER CURED AT CLINIC
Old Document Seals Also Made Good as New.

London.—Some years ago the registrar of the public record office, London, was ordered to produce in haste a document desired by a member of the government; all he could do was to submit a handful of illegible scraps of paper and dust.

Thus inspired the laboratory of the office was inaugurated, and the other day, before the British Record association, it gave a demonstration of repairing old documents, bringing new life to seals and parchments, and rejuvenating ancient records generally.

Royal charters, early treaties and the innumerable legal records in the care of the office are all liable, as the result of past mishap and neglect, to require "treatment." In the case of their seals, particularly, many years' patient research has been necessary to discover the best "prescriptions."

Such is the reputation of the office for this type of work that a visitor from an important American library is working as a member of the repairing staff to "learn the job."

Illa of Seals Diagnosed.
Members of the association learned, among other things, that old seals "need less air" than papers or parchments; how to mend "fractures" with heated steel pins; and that cotton-wool draws the "greasy nature" of a seal, so that wrapping a seal in cotton-wool is one of the surest means of ensuring that it will in due course crumble. Bags made of linen and cloth have also a weakening effect.

For this reason the public record office has invented a special type of "quilt," made of wool wrapped in waxed tissue paper, for the protection of their more important seals.

Lead seals have their special "disease." The vapor given off by oak attacks them, reducing them in time to a white powder. Any lead seals at the record office are encased in air-tight glass boxes.

In repairing "fractures" in wax seals heated steel pins are pushed into the side of the seal to join up the two halves, much as a cook uses a skewer to hold a joint of meat together. Any cavity is at the same time filled up with wax made according to the traditional medieval recipe, but of a different color to the original.

There is no faking at the public record office, and the "restorative mixture" used for painting weak seals consists of beeswax and turpentine—the two chief ingredients of all early wax seals.

Tonic-Bath Treatment.
So also with the "tonic-bath" given to debilitated papers and parchments. They are subjected to a soaking in warm "size," made by simmering down warm parchment. The effect is to make good that part of the original material which has been lost in the course of decay.

Parchment consists of animal fibers, with the interstices filled with "size," and in all papers of Western manufacture, although their fibers are vegetable, animal "size" was until recent years used. The "size" made in the office by simmering down parchment is therefore a natural tonic for old papers as well.

The warm "size" bath is normally, however, only the final stage of treatment. Old papers which need strengthening are mounted on handmade "linen rag" paper and any holes filled on the front side with patches of new paper, torn neatly to shape; or a new sheet of paper may be used to frame the front of the document, its center being carefully torn away so that there is no roughness at the joint of paper and document.

Ocean Will Yield Vast Supplies of Magnesium
New York.—Scarcity of magnesium deposits in the United States has caused scientists to turn to the ocean for this mineral, valuable to man's health and industry.

"Limitless supplies of magnesium recovered from the ocean," the American Chemical society said, "will strengthen human resistance to cancer and other diseases."

Commercial recovery of minerals from the sea, for centuries the goal of science, is proceeding on the east and west coasts of the United States. Bromine for anti-knock gasoline is being extracted off the coast of North Carolina, the magnesium reports. Production of magnesium from sea water is progressing at South San Francisco.

The production of magnesium salts inexpensively, it is believed, will open new fields for their use medicinally.

Cafe Owners Are Worried Over Requests for Crow
Toledo, Ohio.—Dr. Blaine I. Talbot, president of the Ohio Crow Hunters' association, seems to have Ohio restaurateurs worried. Shortly after introducing crow as a culinary delicacy at a banquet in a Columbus hotel he received this appeal from the maitre d'hotel: "Since your meeting we have had several requests for crows in our dining room. We shall appreciate it if you can let us know where we can buy crows and about what the price will be."

- On calls to points over 234 miles distant, the charge for a 3-minute conversation is reduced by amounts ranging from 5¢ to $1.50, depending upon the distance.
- Overtime charges on "person-to-person" calls are reduced after three minutes of overtime to the lower "station-to-station" overtime rate. (Overtime charges begin after three minutes of conversation.)

This is the seventh time in ten years that voluntary reductions in long distance rates have been made. It is estimated that the new reductions will save telephone users in Southwestern Bell territory $1,100,000 a year.

LUTHER FRY
Cleaning and Pressing

Freight trains nowadays act like express specials. New freight schedules are so fast, sometimes wonder if everything has to be delivered day before yesterday.

Many of our passenger trains are running faster schedules, too. Well, one thing is sure. We make faster runs, but the first railroad commandment is still "Safety First." That's one rule they won't change.

Western railroads and allied industries provided jobs for 750,000 workers last year. Some of them live in our town. Good neighbors.

Passenger fares are now the lowest in history with substantial reductions on round trips. And no more surcharge for riding in sleeping cars.

This new Free pick-up-and-delivery of less than carload freight—I heard some traveling salesmen talking about it on the train yesterday. They said it saves shippers a lot of money and centers all responsibility on the railroad. The railroad picks up the freight at shipper's door and delivers to receiver's door. Of course, local delivery men get the haul from door-to-car and car-to-door at both ends. The railroad handles the whole transaction.

When railroads are busy, I notice towns along the railroad are prosperous. The merchants put more ads in the newspapers.

We are proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and pledge continued progress.

Origin of Corn Unknown;

Indians First Growers
The origin of corn is unknown. No plant of it has ever been found in the wilds, declares a writer in the Los Angeles Times. When the first white men set foot in the New World corn was cultivated by the North American Indians on the Atlantic coast. It was their main reliance on hunting trips or in warfare against rival tribes. They carried it as parched corn in buckskin pouches. Often it was their only food for it was adequate. The squaws grew it in small fields, sufficient for each tribe. They were the first American farmers.
Corn's origin is no nearer solution today than it was then. Plant explorers have searched every bit of the available wilds of the western hemisphere without finding a trace of corn. The average garden enthusiast's guess is as good as that of the most noted scientist. The first explorers found corn cultivated on down to Peru and Chile. It is not native to the United States, for it is easily harmed by frosts and cannot be planted early in the corn-growing states, for cold wet spring weather rots the seed and fields must be replanted. It was therefore, of more than tropical origin.

Oyster Three Years Old Before Yielding Pearl

An oyster cannot be expected to turn out a pearl until it is at least three years old, according to a writer in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. It will do it naturally only if some foreign matter accidentally gets under its skin. Then as a form of protection it begins to secrete nacre, which coats the irritant and makes a pearl out of it in time. First of all, the oysters are brought up from the sea bottom, by women divers, scantily clad in winter, and completely nude in the warm months. Then by a delicate surgical operation the shells are partially opened and the foreign nucleus, a piece of mother-of-pearl, is inserted between the valves of the mollusk.
The oyster is returned to the water and allowed to remain for about seven years. At least, it takes that long at the culture station at Toba, Japan. The pearl-breeding oysters are carefully selected, protected in wire cages as they rest on the sea bottom, and brought up twice a year for a thorough rub-down.
In spite of such vigilance, only about 60 per cent of the systems will form pearls, and of those not more than 4 or 5 per cent are marketable.

Quakers Purchase From Indians

Original land purchases from the Indians on behalf of English settlers were made in the fall of 1677 by commissioners acting for two groups of Quakers, respectively from Yorkshire and London. Title to the lands between Big Timber and Oldman's creeks, covering present Gloucester county, says the Philadelphia Bulletin, was granted by Chief Mohocksey on September 27, 1677, with three Swedish colonists—Peter Rambo, Lacey Cock and Israel Helmes—acting as interpreters. The consideration stated in the deed is typical of such early transactions with the aborigines, including 30 matchcoats, 20 guns, 30 kettles and one great one, 30 pairs of hose, 20 fathoms of duffels (a popular cloth of the day), 30 petticoats, 30 narrow hoes, 30 bars of lead, 15 small barrels of powder, 70 knives, 30 Indian axes, 70 combs, 60 pairs of tobacco tongs, 60 scissors, 60 tinshaw looking-glasses, 120 awl blades, 120 fishhooks, 2 grasps of red paint, 120 needles, 60 tobacco boxes, 120 pipes, 200 bells, 100 Jewsharps and 6 anchors of rum.

Types of Corn

The types of corn grown in garden culture are sweet corns and pop corns, all others being of agricultural value, known as field corn. The plattate or female flowers are borne on cob, with long styles, known as "silk." The staminate or male flowers are borne at the top or terminus of the stalk, on the "tassels." The pollen falls on the tassel on the silk or flows on to the silk from other stalks and so effects fertilization, without which the cob would have no kernels. The color of the kernels ranges from white, through light and dark shades of yellow, red and purple to nearly black.

Chamois, Hoofed Mammal

The chamois is a hoofed mammal intermediate between the goats and the antelopes. Its home is in the high mountains of Southern Europe. The animal's horns are about six or seven inches long, round, almost smooth, perpendicular and straight until near the tip they suddenly terminate in a hook directed backward and downward. Its flesh equals venison in quality, the horns are valuable and the hide makes fine leather.

Rain Does Not Clear Air

Contrary to popular belief, rain does not clear the air, according to records made by health authorities in 14 of the largest cities in the United States. Automatic air filters, used to measure the degree of atmospheric pollution in these towns, failed to show any increase in cleanliness either during or after the fall of rain.

French Beds Elaborate

During Day of Louis XIV
In France during the time of Louis XIV the bed frequently stood in an alcove provided for it with a balustrade in front, giving it a position of importance and also separating it from its boudoir-like surroundings. These rooms reached great heights of elegance. Usually, notes a writer in the New York Sun, the woodwork was painted white and gold with panels of finest silk brocade, often blue and silver or blue and white or blue ground and varied colors kept subservient to the ground. The elaborate bed hangings and coverlet were of the same material as the walls and were effectively trimmed with silver or gold braids.

In England, Chippendale designed many beds familiar to us from the few originals and many copies. Most effective was the large four-post bed with cornice not unlike the fine fabric-covered gadroon-bordered design, but now of richly polished, carved and pierced mahogany. Graceful and handsomely carved columns supported the canopy and fine damask or brocade or embroidery of lighter character hung on newly invented pulleys to provide for their being easily drawn.

During the reign of Louis XVI in France, beds continued to suggest extravagance and elegance and in tribute to Marie Antoinette they became more graceful and feminine. Columns supporting canopies were supplanted by beds with paneled head and footboards of wood or of silk or cane with surrounding frame of painted carved wood. They stood free of their draperies, which usually hung from a crown or segment of a circle or ellipse attached to the wall above them.

Mice in Milady's Hair

Common Many Years Ago
As a result of historical study of the Eighteenth century, a writer in the Journal of the Royal Society of Arts says that during that period in England women wore most elaborate headdresses. A head generally lasted three weeks before it was "opened" and nine weeks was as long as it could safely go in summer. One went to bed in a nightcap of the extinguisher variety, made of stiffened linen or pasteboard, or, at any rate, in a strong net fillet. According to contemporary art, a lady sleeping in all this artificiality of coiffure could still look delightful.
An advertisement of 1777 shows, however, that it provided fresh work for the ingenuity of the silversmiths and jewelers: "The many melancholy accidents," it reads, "which have lately happened in consequence of mice getting into ladies' hair in the night time induced the Society of Art, at their last meeting, to offer a premium to the person who should invent the neatest and most useful bedside mousetrap. A silver trap is now invented by Mr. Moses Martingo, in New Bond street, price 3 guineas. He also sells nightcaps made of silver wire, as flexible as gauze and yet so strong that no mouse or even rat can gnaw through them."

Imitation Pearl

Pearl essence or oriental essence, is a substitute made from the scales of certain fishes. It was formerly made from a fish found chiefly in Russian waters, but is also made from the shad and herring of United States waters, in a very careful process which yields the fine grayish dust of the pearl essence. If the beads are hollow, the essence is mixed with gelatin and used to coat the inner surface, then the beads are weighted with wax. For solid head the essence is applied on the outside with airbrush or dipping.

Jefferson Davis in Politics

Jefferson Davis first became prominent in politics as a member of the house of representatives and later as a senator from Mississippi. He served in the Mexican war, having been educated at West Point. During President Pierce's administration Davis was secretary of war, and was said to rule both President and cabinet. In 1857 he was returned to the senate, where he remained until chosen president of the Confederacy in 1861.

War Memorials

Every war leaves behind it memorials of generals, battles, and sieges in the names of new streets, and a curious instance of this is afforded by Stratton street, Bruton street, and Berkeley square, all lying together on the north side of Piccadilly. Sir John Berkeley of Bruton won a battle at Stratton in Cornwall in the Civil war, and, when his London estate was developed, these names all appeared.—London Tit-Bits Magazine.

Athlone and Literary Shrine

Athlone, gateway to that part of Ireland west of the River Shannon, is also the gateway to two of Ireland's literary shrines—Lissoy and Edgeworthstown. Lissoy was the boyhood home of Oliver Goldsmith and was made famous by him as "Sweet Auburn" in "The Deserted Village." Its commercial decline is illustrated by Goldsmith's former house, which is now used as a cattle shed.

Taj Mahal Regarded as

World's Handsomest Tomb
Dated history of India begins about 600 B. C., but little was known of that country by Europeans until Alexander the Great's invasion in 326 B. C., says the Detroit News. The Mohammedans conquered most of the country during the Twelfth century and this was succeeded by a great Mongolian invasion.

The Mogul dynasty was established in the Sixteenth century, ruling India for about 200 years. French and British trade rivalry by the middle of the Eighteenth century led to the ascendancy of the British East India company, under Clive and Hastings. The Indian mutiny of 1857 led to the transfer of the country from that company to the English crown. In 1877 Queen Victoria was proclaimed empress of India.

The Taj Mahal near Agra, India, considered by some to be the most beautiful building ever constructed, was built by the Shah Jehan as a tomb for his favorite wife, Mumtaz-Mahal. It is of white marble, octagonal, and has an exquisite dome. Its construction required the labors of 20,000 men during a period of 21 years, from 1632 to 1653. Its architect was Ustad Isa.

Belgian Horse Believed

Oldest of Pure Breeds

With the exception of Merino sheep, the Belgian horse probably can claim to be the oldest pure breed in the world, says the Montreal Herald.

Records show that draft horses have been bred pure in the Flemish lowlands of Northern Europe since 770 A. D. While they have not always been as heavy as they are today, the Flemish horses have served to carry knights in armor, pull chariots of war, and take part in flat races, as well as cultivate and harvest crops. It is even recorded that some Belgians have been noted for their speed and endurance, and some speeds recorded 100 years ago or more are very creditable.

Of the three well-known British draft breeds, the Clydesdale, the Shire, and the Suffolk, the first two owe much to occasional infusions of blood of the Flemish horse during recent centuries. As long ago as the Fifteenth century the Flemish horse had its well-muscled, close-knit body, but its legs at that time were presumably much finer than they are today.

"Feather in Your Cap"

The phrase, "feather in your cap," means that something is an honor to you. The allusion is to the very general custom in Asia and among the American Indians of adding a feather to the headgear for every enemy slain. The ancient Lycians, and many others had a similar custom, and it is still usual for the English sportsman who kills the first woodcock to pick out a feather and stick it in his cap. The custom in one form or another seems to be almost universal. In Hungary at one time none might wear a feather but he who had slain a Turk, and it will be remembered that when Gordon quelled the Taiping rebellion he was honored by the Chinese government with the "yellow jacket and peacock's feather."

Law of Life That Enriches

It is a law of life that what we give unselfishly multiplies and returns to us. In helping others we enrich ourselves in the real things—the things that endure. We develop character—we grow in power and usefulness—we become real men and women, not dwarfs. The moment you fling open the door of your heart, and let your sympathy and helpfulness flow out to shed their fragrance and beauty upon lives that are starving for human fellowship, you begin to develop power. The moment you bottle them up you begin to strangle the best things in you, and you begin to dwarf power and possibilities. Give and grow!

Nova Scotia Scottish

Nova Scotia, the land of Longfellow's "Evangeline" and popularly believed because of that poem to be largely French and English, is primarily Scottish, according to a correspondent. The opening of Nova Scotia's parliament is accompanied by the skirl of bagpipes, and several newspapers are printed partly in Gaelic. In the Nova Scotian county of Inverness, 72 per cent of the inhabitants speak Gaelic, while less than half in the similarly named county in Scotland can speak that ancient tongue.

Work of Storage Battery

Storage batteries, as the name indicates, supply electric power which has previously been supplied to the batteries when charged. In charging electric current has produced a chemical change on the lead plates, so that it is chemical energy which is stored up. When the proper electric connections are made, this chemical energy is transformed into electrical energy. When the storage battery is run down, it has no more chemical energy to transform until it has been recharged.

Furniture Names Traced

to Far-Fetched Meanings

Often the names of pieces of furniture have strange origin. A divan is not a "carriage for two," as one might hastily guess, but a chair of state. It is from the Persian "dewan" and refers to a low couch without back or ends, on the authority of Webster's International Dictionary. Davenport has the familiar meaning of "large upholstered sofa often convertible into a bed" and also refers to a kind of small writing desk, both designs by the gentleman of that name. The word desk itself is rather strange, since it comes from the Latin "disceus" and is related to "dish."

The word chair comes from "kathedra" (Greek), a combination of roots meaning "sit" and "down," has been remarked often enough. Chest comes from the Greek "kiste," a box; table from Latin "tabula," a board; cabinet from "gabinetta," Italian for a small cage or basket, and commode is from the French word meaning convenient.

These are reasonable, but consider a bureau, a French word for desk with a Latin origin in "burra," a shaggy garment. Desks once were covered with woolen cloths, it appears. "Carpet" comes quite naturally from Latin words referring to carding and weaving, but rug is Norwegian. In Swedish "rugg" means entangled hair.—New York Sun.

Road Built by Napoleon

Engineering Masterpiece

Napoleon invaded Italy by crossing over the St. Bernard mountain. When he had ended the campaign by destroying the Italian army at the battle of Marengo and had returned to France, he determined to emphasize and render permanent his success by constructing a great military road into Italy, states a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The execution of the work was entrusted to M. Ceard, one of the foremost engineers of the day. It was begun on the Italian side in 1800 and on the Swiss side in 1801, and was finished in six years.

The road was made over a shoulder of the Simphon mountain, from Pyriag in Valais to Domo d'Ossolo, in the north part of Piedmont, Italy. The summit of the mountain over which it passed was 6,592 feet above sea level. The road was from 25 to 30 feet broad, and had nowhere throughout its extent a slope of greater than one foot in thirteen. It was carried across 611 bridges, over numerous gullies cut out of the solid rock or built of masonry, and through a number of tunnels. The road was one of the masterpieces of the engineering of that day, and cost about $3,500,000, half of which was borne by France and the remainder by Switzerland.

Joy of Accomplishment

Give thanks for the hard job! If it were not for the difficult thing there would be no joy in accomplishment nor any reward for effort. There is always room at the top because getting there is a hard thing to do. But bear in mind, once you are there it is the difficulty of reaching you that makes your place secure. If winning were always easy then the top would be crowned and where would be the challenge, the struggle that so stirs the spirit of a man? Difficulty is what saves the world from becoming but a mire of mediocrity.

Pony Express Forerunner

Although history has never made it quite clear, the Lyons collection of Pony Express stamps and "franked" envelopes reveals that that there were really two pony expresses, although the first was not officially known as such. This original organization was a Wells Fargo service that came into being in 1855 and undoubtedly paved the way for the official Pony Express, which made its debut April 3, 1860, financed by Senator Gwin and Alexander Majors, a pioneer freighter of the plains.

Washington, a Dog Lover

George Washington pioneered the breeding of the American foxhound. Washington, who was an ardent fox hunter, imported from the kennels of the Marquis de Lafayette, in France, a number of French hounds. He crossed these with his own English hounds and established the first strain of the American foxhound. The French dogs crossed the Atlantic in 1785, in the care of John Quincy Adams, who later became President of the United States. Like his predecessors and successors, Adams, too, was a dog enthusiast.

British Treaty

A sixty-three-year-old bishop of the Church of England, John Robinson, in 1718 made the most important treaty in British history. He represented Britain at the Congress of Utrecht and secured as spoils of the War of the Spanish Succession, Hudson's Bay territory, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Gibraltar. The latter was what was important, for it gave Britain command of the Mediterranean and was the rock on which was founded Britain's naval and colonial supremacy.

LONGEST NAME IN WORLD SHORTENED

Hawaiian Prince Lops Chunks Off Monicker.

Honolulu.—Bicentenary observances this year of the birth of King Kamehameha I will be attended by a direct descendant with the longest name in the world, officials of the ceremonies have announced.

King Kamehameha was the ruler and warrior who first welded the Hawaiian Islands into a kingdom. The descendant who is to be present at the ceremonies is the great-great-great-great-grandnephew of the king.

His name, which is declared to be without a parallel in the world, is: "Samuel Albert Friedrich Henry William Crowninburg Kapikau-mamookaonalani Kamehameha Amalu."

It is a combination of the names of Descendants of Hawaii's great king and a princely German family that intermarried.

In actual life the royal descendant does not lay much stress either on his lineage or on the length of his name.

He is known as Sam Amalu, which corresponds somewhat to the fashion whereby the present king of England, when prince of Wales, was known as David Windsor.

The desirability of this abbreviation is somewhat heightened by the fact that Sam Amalu is merely a freshman at the University of Hawaii, and freshmen here are treated by upper classmen about the same way that they are treated all over the world.

However, privately, Sam will admit his identity.

Sam follows the customs of his sires in that he never wears a necktie, but he concedes enough to modern life to wear a blue scarf around his throat and often a blue sash. Sometimes he carries a cane.

Proves Early Indians Not Primitive Savages

Tucson, Ariz.—Reconstructing in the laboratory life in North America centuries before the time of Christ, a botanical wizard in detective work established that the early Red Man was not quite the primitive savage many archeologists had pictured him.

According to the sensational finds of Dr. A. F. Hemenway, University of Arizona scientist, the Indian of 2,000 to 3,000 years ago wore attractive clothes not only from hemp and cotton, but also from mohair, kept dogs as pets and moved goods from tribe to tribe through regular trade channels.

Through chemical and microscopic analyses this Sherlock Holmes of the botany world has been studying articles which the Peabody Museum of Harvard excavated from ancient ruins in Arizona, New Mexico, California, Utah and Texas.

He found warm furs made from bears, goats and dogs—and a few pets made from human hair. He learned that mohair had evidently been bought and sold from tribe to tribe, finally reaching places where it is doubtful if the Indians could have possessed goats. He came across yucca and century plants where the fibers had been used in giving strength to garments.

At that time the name Marianne, derived from Mary Magdalen, was one applied to women of doubtful morals. According to this explanation, one of these women was once called upon to represent the goddess of reason in a republican fete at Montpelier. The chance was too good a one to be missed, and the hated "aristos" took it, and from then on dubbed the personification of the new regime with this name.

There is another similar version which says that a "Marianne" was the mistress of Chaudron-Rousseau, a member of the convention, who liked to see his partner parade at republican festivals representing the goddess of reason.

The two explanations are so similar, that there can be little doubt here lies the origin of the now respected name of "Marianne," whose ample figure personifies the republic of France.

None but German Names at German Christening. Berlin.—Babies born in Germany to German parents must be given Christian names of German origin. It is laid down in instructions issued to registrars of births.

Where foreign names have been adopted into the German language these may also be used, and as examples are given the names of Margot, Helene, Beate, Renate, Henriette, Alice, Charlotte, Dagmar, and Dagmara. Apparently it has not been so customary to adopt foreign names for boys, for only one—Charles—is mentioned. Charles, it is stated, may be employed to maintain a Huegenot tradition.

Foreign babies born in Germany are expected to be christened with foreign names provided they are "proper." Thus, no German registrar dare permit even a foreign baby to be given the name Lenia. Where foreign babies receive German names, then later when they grow up they must be impressed with the pride of possessing something that is part of the fatherland.

Indian Population Increases Fastest

Washington.—The Indian population is the fastest growing race in the United States, Indian Affairs Commissioner John Collier declares.

Interviewing graduate students registered for the race relations department of Yale university, he said, "In 1935 the excess of Indian births over deaths amounted to 9.2 per thousand, a higher percentage than that of the white or negro populations."

GET CHEAP HOMES IN MODEL VILLAGES

90 Cents a Month Cost to Coolies in Shanghai.

Shanghai.—The city government of Greater Shanghai has opened four model villages for the poor, with houses renting for 90 American cents a month.

This social housing scheme, under the direction of the labor welfare commission of Greater Shanghai, is the beginning of a construction program designed to provide sanitary, comfortable homes for the more than 150,000 Chinese poor who are now living in filthy mud and reed-bud dwellings in Shanghai's slums. The commission, under the chairmanship of General We Teh-chen, mayor of Greater Shanghai, was established in April, 1935, to improve housing of Shanghai's poor.

The problem has been aggravated by the influx of thousands of farmers, forced to desert the land because of drought or flood. These unskilled laborers generally become jirikisha pullers or wharf coolies, and earn a precarious living on the borderline of starvation. Jirikisha pullers alone number more than 80,000, and their dependents approximately 240,000. Most of these unskilled laborers live in mud or reed-bud dwellings, of which there are 30,000 in the slum districts of this city.

A survey of rents discloses that the average rental paid by the families of jirikisha pullers in the International Settlement is $2.43 (73 American cents) a month, the highest being $5.10 ($1.54, American currency) and the lowest 90 cents (27 American cents). The average monthly rent paid by 83 Chinese girls, working in one factory in the International Settlement, is 86 cents (26 American cents).

The four model villages recently populated have an aggregate of 956 "A" type houses and 44 "B" type dwellings. In addition, each village has two dormitories for unmarried persons.

The "A" type dwellings, fireproof and waterproof and provided with plenty of light, consist of a kitchen, toilet, living room and an upstairs sleeping room. These houses rent for $3 (90 American cents) a month. The "B" type houses, which rent for $4 ($1.21, American currency), have three rooms, in addition to a kitchen and toilet, and have no second story.

France Traces Marianne Back to the Revolution

Paris.—Like America's Uncle Sam and England's John Bull, France has her Marianne; and, like Uncle Sam's and John Bull's, Marianne's origin long has been a question of lively debate.

However, according to researches which have been carried out, it would appear that the name had its origin in Montpelier, in central France, at the time of the reign of terror.

At that time the name Marianne, derived from Mary Magdalen, was one applied to women of doubtful morals. According to this explanation, one of these women was once called upon to represent the goddess of reason in a republican fete at Montpelier. The chance was too good a one to be missed, and the hated "aristos" took it, and from then on dubbed the personification of the new regime with this name.

There is another similar version which says that a "Marianne" was the mistress of Chaudron-Rousseau, a member of the convention, who liked to see his partner parade at republican festivals representing the goddess of reason.

The two explanations are so similar, that there can be little doubt here lies the origin of the now respected name of "Marianne," whose ample figure personifies the republic of France.

None but German Names at German Christening

Berlin.—Babies born in Germany to German parents must be given Christian names of German origin. It is laid down in instructions issued to registrars of births.

Where foreign names have been adopted into the German language these may also be used, and as examples are given the names of Margot, Helene, Beate, Renate, Henriette, Alice, Charlotte, Dagmar, and Dagmara. Apparently it has not been so customary to adopt foreign names for boys, for only one—Charles—is mentioned. Charles, it is stated, may be employed to maintain a Huegenot tradition.

Foreign babies born in Germany are expected to be christened with foreign names provided they are "proper." Thus, no German registrar dare permit even a foreign baby to be given the name Lenia. Where foreign babies receive German names, then later when they grow up they must be impressed with the pride of possessing something that is part of the fatherland.

To meet the situation, one school has decided to abandon the classics and replace them with good reading matter with more appeal.
