Looms Produce Many Materials

This photograph taken in the Ford Exposition building at the Texas Centennial in Dallas shows a loom producing materials for Ford V-8 cars. The exhibit collection of soft, pastel-colored materials for ladies' gowns shows the wide range of manufacturing processes engaged in by Shelton Looms, a co-exhibitor of the Ford Motor Company.

Feminine visitors to the Ford Exposition building at the Texas Centennial in Dallas are often surprised to learn that Shelton Looms, one of the co-exhibitors of the Ford Motor Company, manufacture soft, pastel-colored materials for ladies' gowns as well as a complete line of upholstery material for automobiles. Shelton's exhibit shows how mohair velvet, the most popular upholstery material for motor cars, is woven. Also a number of brilliantly colored pieces of material are displayed. Probably two of the most beautiful materials are La Loe Splendour and Crystelle, which are chosen by noted dress designers and fashioned into gowns by many of the leading manufacturers of the country. La Loe Splendour is a translucent velvet, while Crystelle is known as needlepoint velvet. Furniture fabrics also are made. Kinkimo is probably the best known material made by Shelton Looms. A large loom is operated at regular intervals weaving two pieces of fabric at one time, one at the top and the other at the bottom. This is called "double-shuttle" weaving or weaving "face to face." Weavers in charge of the Shelton Looms exhibit in the Ford building explain not only the manufacturing of the automobile upholstery but also the wide variety of gown and dress materials on display.

SKULLS SHOW SKILL OF EARLY SURGERY

Trepanning Was Practiced in Eighth Century, B. C.

London—That surgeons who practiced in Judea in the eighth century B. C. were fully conversant with the science of trepanning a skull is revealed by Dr. C. B. Mortlock through exclusive data sent him by J. L. Stacey, head of the Wellcome archeological research expedition, now in its fourth year of excavation at Tell Duweir, Palestine.

"A large deposit of human remains was found in a disused tomb contemporary with the earlier destruction of the city (Lachish). It is suggested that these 2,000 bodies were the result of salvaging the burned city after the destruction by Sennacherib in 701 B. C. About 700 skulls were in sufficiently good condition for preservation, and are now in London awaiting study," says Dr. Mortlock.

Two Examples of Trepanning
"Besides many interesting pathological specimens and two skulls which were intentionally distorted, there are two examples of trepanning. These are the earliest examples of this type of trepanning. All specimens found before have shown that the operation was made by circular scraping, but the two Lachish skulls conform to a technique which was previously only known among the Incas of America. In one skull the surgeon has started the operation on the left parietal and then performed on the opposite side.

"Experts believe that in the case of Inca skulls the patient never recovered from the operation, but there is evidence that the Lachish patients survived. Anthropologists will now have the chance to study a large group of contemporary skulls from the same site, which will result in valuable deductions as to the inhabitants of Judea during the Jewish monarchy.

Shops With Goods Uncovered
"The excavations show that at the last period of occupation there was a public square within the gates, and a group of shops with their stores of goods has been uncovered. All the contents were in position when the roofs fell in from the burning of the city. They were found buried under the ashes.

"The largest shop was that of a weaver. Set in the floor was a large limestone dyeing vat; a row of loom weights marked the position of the looms and a fragment of wooden beam actually remained of the burned loom. From the same shop came a clay seal impression from a papyrus document bearing the impression of a seal 'For Hilkiah the son of Maas.'

"Close by were the premises of a corn chandler, and many jars bearing the royal stamp of Hebron were stacked in a wine and oil store.

"The 18th to 19th dynasty temple which produced the Duweir Ewer from the later levels has proved equally interesting in the earlier period. A fine group of pottery, including a flat platter, about thirty-five dipper flasks and a painted vase imported from the Greek mainland in the fifteenth century B. C. was found close to the early altar.

"This continuity of the history of the building is also confirmed by the development of the temple plan, which shows a continuous relationship in the three buildings covering a period from 1480 to 1260 B. C."

Old Auto His Weapon in Fight on Drouth

Independence, Mo. — C. S. Risinger, truck farmer, whipped this year's drouth with an $80 second-hand motor car.

Learning his lesson from the 1934 drouth, Risinger decided to irrigate. He bought a 1928 model car, drove it to a creek on the edge of his 37-acre farm near here, and used its motor to power a water pump.

The water was pumped directly from the creek bed to feeder canals which conveyed it to smaller canals between the rows of plants. Now Risinger has four men working for him and is pumping water 10 hours a day.

Sturdy, fast-growing corn stalks sway in the hot dry wind on the 15 acres of his farm which slope suitable for irrigation. Cucumbers, squashes, peppers and tomatoes also flourish, while only a few feet away unirrigated patches of the same vegetables are parched and stunted.

The three hundred and seventy pupils that enrolled made up the following classes: eighty-eight in the eighth grade; ninety-four in the ninth grade; seventy-six in the tenth grade and one hundred and ten in the eleventh grade; with six post graduates.

There will be several new classes this year including world history, general arithmetic, two classes of music, one band class and the other choral class. Eighth grade history and eighth grade algebra were dropped from the classes. Shorthand is again offered this year after being discontinued for one year.

Several clubs are to be organized at this year, including class clubs, study clubs, music clubs, pep squad and others.

R. C. Andrews Ward
There were two teachers who resigned recently. Miss Nina Mae Drew, who accepted a position as chair designer in Pakes & Company in Dallas, and Mrs. Ida Mae Herrod, who accepted a position in South Texas. Teachers will be elected as soon as possible which probably will be next week according to A. D. Cummings, superintendent.

Miss Genell Stovall, Miss Jane Hughes, Miss Wilmina Salisbury and Donley Stephenson are the only new teachers who have accepted positions in the school. Miss Stovall succeeded Miss Gene Smalley, who was promoted to the parliamentary department; Miss Salisbury succeeded Miss Ruth Jenkins, who resigned during the summer and accepted a position in Iron county; Miss Hughes succeeded Miss Ruby Norton, who is now teaching in the Quitaque schools; and Mr. Stephenson succeeded Odell Winters, who was promoted to the high school. The new teachers will take the place of Miss Drew and the other one will teach the room for the overflow of first grade and second grade pupils.

Of the four hundred and sixty pupils in the school there were ninety that enrolled in their first grade, which is thirty-five more than for the year of 1935-36.

The chapel program was given as had been arranged by the principal, T. F. Huggins.

PERPETUAL ICE IS FOUND UNDER LAVA

Scientist Makes Discovery in New Mexico.

New York—A lava bed whose surface is unpleasantly warm to the touch does not seem a likely setting for a deposit of perpetual ice. Yet in just such a locality, where the brazen New Mexican sun beats down upon a surface which once was molten stone, a deposit of perpetual ice does exist.

A visit to such a wonderland of paradox is described by John Stewart MacClary in "Natural History" published by the American Museum. After describing his trip down the steep slope of volcanic sink Mr. MacClary goes on to say:

"The floor of the sink is covered by jagged chunks of grayish black basalt which once formed a roof above the cavity. The accumulated warmth of the air in the depression strikes one almost like the blast from a furnace. One wonders how ice could possibly withstand a temperature such as this. Irregular chunks of fallen stone block what seems to be a cavern in the wall of the sink. As the perspiring visitor approaches this rubble, the air becomes noticeably cooler. Perhaps, after all, the cave of perpetual ice is not a myth.

"By this time a feeling of eager expectancy has seized the visitor. He climbs the heap of fallen stone that obstructs the mouth of the cavern. At the summit of the disorderly pile he gazes down into the depths whence comes the current of cool air.

"The sight which greets his eyes is well worth the effort he has spent. Imagine a bank of solid ice, from 12 to 14 feet in height and some 50 feet in width, calmly resting in a tunnel of what once was molten stone—the hottest manifestation of the earth's internal heat!

"The beholder is naturally perplexed as to how the ice was formed and why it does not melt away. Its presence so near the hot surface of the ground depends primarily upon the fact that lava is among Nature's most efficient temperature insulators. The lava contains an infinite number of minute pores and cavities, and the dead air in them hinders the transmission of heat through the stone from the sun. Once the bulk of a lava deposit has become thoroughly chilled to its depths, heat from the sun cannot penetrate the frigid mass."

Underwriters Worry Over Giant Zeppelin

No sooner had an agreement been reached between London and Berlin that the Hindenburg was not to take its passengers on tour over the British Isles without permission—presumably with definite itinerary—than the British Air Ministry was approached by prominent London underwriters with suggestions as to how the tours should be demarcated.

The insurance interests contend that the principal danger of the low-flying passages made by the Hindenburg is to the ship itself. They have asked the Ministry to consider the following points: That the Hindenburg should follow a course and fly at an altitude set, according to weather conditions, by the British authorities; and that the airship should obey the radio control signals sent out to aircraft in the same way as the regular air liners.

The British underwriters became acutely conscious of the need for some sort of control of the airship's route when they heard of her narrow escape from being hit by an R. A. F. plane while sailing over the Midlands.

An R. A. F. machine, controlled by an instructor and a pupil, was engaged in blind-flying exercises. The instructor saw a dark shape loom up ahead of him while passing through a light cloud and he turned the machine into a dive, just avoiding the airship.

It is pointed out by experts that if the Hindenburg flies over prohibited areas at low altitudes without previous warning, she runs constant risk of similar experiences. A collision would almost inevitably cause a fire.

Roads of Paper?

Salem, Ore. — Oregon and Washington pulp mills are now selling the liquid waste remaining after the manufacture of paper from hemlock to Eastern highway departments for use in "binding" materials for highway shoulders. State Forester J. W. Ferguson has discovered.

Blazing Ice Box Is Task for Firemen

San Antonio, Tex. — "Send some fireman over here—my ice box is on fire," cried an excited voice over the fire department telephone here.

The firemen, accustomed to rescuing cats from trees, and all sorts of other odd tricks were a bit dubious but made the call anyway.

They arrived at the home of Louis Martin—and sure enough found his ice box on fire.

A plumber repairing a drain pipe had placed a blow torch too close to the box setting it afire.

HELGOLAND SLOWLY MELTING INTO SEA

Germany's 'Gibraltar' Literally Crumbling Away.

Washington, D. C. — Germany's alleged reformation of Helgoland has attracted international attention. Again the island is accused of having as much strategic importance per cubic foot as any other comparable chunk of Europe.

"From a passing steamer, Helgoland appears as a single triangular block of red sandstone," says the National Geographic society. "Now only a fraction of a mile square, the island is literally crumbling away beneath its 2,500 inhabitants.

"This sea-bitten morsel is the remotest of the Frisian islands, which the North sea has gouged out of the northern coastline of Europe. A broad submerged rocky ledge in the shoal area around Helgoland is a clue to the island's former extent, estimated to have been five times its present size. The wave-worn western side was ringed around with a girdle of granite brought from the Danish island of Bornholm. But even thus protected Helgoland is doomed to melt slowly into the North sea.

"Eye of the Empire."
"Because of its position in the North sea, the island bears the reputation of a Gibraltar. As Germany's 'Eye of the Empire,' it commands the mouths of the Weser, Jade, Elbe, and Eider rivers, and the harbors of Hamburg, Bremen and Cuxhaven from a vantage point 28 miles from the nearest mainland.

"Shaped somewhat like a lean pork chop, it has dimensions notable for their smallness, except the height; its sides rise sheer and dripping from the North sea to a flat top 200 feet above sea level. Its three tips can be visited in an hour's stroll. Upon the triangular rock would fit the Federal Triangle buildings along Pennsylvania avenue in Washington, D. C., with a little margin.

"Within its diminishing boundaries, the island has three parts: the rock table of Oberland with its tuft of town, the shoreline shelf projecting like a cap's visor below with a second edition of town called Unterland, and the wisp of sandy Dune in tow a mile to the east. A thin green felt of pasture across the island's top completes the color triad which inspired the flag:

'Green the land, red the rock, white the sand:
These colors make the flag of Helgoland.'

"The money crop of Helgoland is sun tan. This is raised chiefly at the expense of visitors basking on the frail half-moon of barren beach of the Dune, or Sand island. Among the thousands of summer resorters who steam out from Hamburg was once the American actor, Richard Mansfield, then an infant comfortable in an improvised cradle of a dresser drawer. His mother, excited at leaving the island in a terrific storm, embarked without him, so that the forgotten baby was delivered to her on the high seas wrapped in an oilskin coat.

"Pilots and Fishermen.
"Helgolanders are mainly pilots, fishermen, or boarding-house keepers. A rugged race of Frisians, they acquired the habit of considering themselves fishermen at the beginning of the Fifteenth century, when a strange migration of herring brought them great harvests of fish for 200 years. An equally strange emigration of their source of income left them catching only a few lobsters.

"Helgoland was traded by England in 1890 to Germany for Zanzibar, 3,900 times as large. The exchange was ridiculed as an entire suit of clothes swapped for a trouser button. But the trouser button demonstrates of vital importance when it became one of the world's strongest fortresses during the World war. Not far away, on a misty morning in August, 1914, occurred the first serious naval clash of the war, when British victory littered the North sea with wreckage."

File Fingerprints With U. S. Government Bureau

Washington.—Notables and average citizens in increasing numbers are insuring their prompt identification in case of dangerous injury or sudden death by filing their fingerprints with the federal bureau of investigation, a survey disclosed.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief, reported a grand total of 5,897,000 fingerprint cards now on file, with new ones pouring in at a rate of 4,000 daily.

The bureau maintains two fingerprint files—civil and criminal—both offering what the Justice department regards as protection of "inestimable value."

The civil section now numbers cards of 115,110 citizens, including persons of such assorted prominence as John D. Rockefeller, Jr., British Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay, John Boles and James Cagney of movie fame, and Freeman Gosden and Charles Gorrell, the "Amos and Andy" of radio.
