GET CHEAP HOMES IN MODEL VILLAGES

90 Cents a Month Cost to Coolies in Shanghai.

Shanghai.—The city government of Greater Shanghai has opened four model villages for the poor, with houses renting for 90 American cents a month.

This social housing scheme, under the direction of the labor welfare commission of Greater Shanghai, is the beginning of a construction program designed to provide sanitary, comfortable homes for the more than 150,000 Chinese poor who are now living in filthy mud and reed-hut dwellings in Shanghai's slums. The commission, under the chairmanship of General We Teh-chen, mayor of Greater Shanghai, was established in April, 1935, to improve housing of Shanghai's poor.

The problem has been aggravated by the influx of thousands of farmers, forced to desert the land because of drought or flood. These unskilled laborers generally become jinrikisha pullers or wharf coolies, and earn a precarious living on the borderline of starvation. Jinrikisha pullers alone number more than 80,000, and their dependents approximately 240,000. Most of these unskilled laborers live in mud or reed-hut dwellings, of which there are 30,000 in the slum districts of this city.

A survey of rents discloses that the average rental paid by the families of jinrikisha pullers in the International Settlement is $2.43 (73 American cents) a month, the highest being $5.10 ($1.54, American currency) and the lowest 90 cents (27 American cents). The average monthly rent paid by 83 Chinese girls, working in one factory in the International Settlement, is 96 cents (28 American cents).

The four model villages recently populated have an aggregate of 956 "A" type houses and 44 "B" type dwellings. In addition, each village has two dormitories for unmarried persons.

The "A" type dwellings, fireproof and waterproof and provided with plenty of light, consist of a kitchen, toilet, living room and an upstairs sleeping room. These houses rent for $3 (90 American cents) a month. The "B" type houses, which rent for $4 ($1.21, American currency), have three rooms, in addition to a kitchen and toilet, and have no second story.

France Traces Marianne

Back to the Revolution Paris.—Like America's Uncle Sam and England's John Bull, France has her Marianne; and, like Uncle Sam's and John Bull's, Marianne's origin long has been a question of lively debate.

However, according to researches which have been carried out, it would appear that the name had its origin in Montpellier, in central France, at the time of the reign of terror. At that time the name Marianne, derived from Mary Magdalen, was one applied to women of doubtful morals. According to this explanation, one of these women was once called upon to represent the goddess of reason in a republican fête at Montpellier. The chance was too good a one to be missed, and the hated "aristocrat" took it, and from then on dubbed the personification of the new regime with this name.

There is another similar version which says that a "Marianne" was the mistress of Chaudron-Rousseau, a member of the convention, who liked to see his partner parade at republican festivals representing the goddess of reason.

The two explanations are so similar, that there can be little doubt here lies the origin of the now respected name of "Marianne," whose ample figure personifies the republic of France.

None but German Names at German Christening

Berlin.—Babies born in Germany to German parents must be given Christian names of German origin. It is laid down in instructions issued to registrars of births.

Where foreign names have been adopted into the German language these may also be used, and as examples are given the names of Margot, Helene, Bente, Henate, Henriette, Alice, Charlotte, Dagmar, and Dagmara. Apparently it has not been so customary to adopt foreign names for boys, for only one—Charles—is mentioned. Charles, it is stated, may be employed to maintain a Huguenot tradition.

Foreign babies born in Germany are expected to be christened with foreign names provided they are "proper." Thus, no German registrar dare permit even a foreign baby to be given the name Lenin.

Where foreign babies receive German names, then later when they grow up they must be impressed with the pride of possessing something that is part of the fatherland.

"Slanguage" a Worry Lorain, Ohio.—School officials of northeastern Ohio are becoming alarmed over the increasing use of slang by high school students, according to Superintendent P. S. Bunn. To meet the situation, one school has decided to abandon the classics and replace them with good reading matter with more appeal.

Male of the Deer Family Distinguished by Horns

With the exception of reindeer, the males of the deer family may be distinguished by their horns and these antlers are really nothing more or less than dead bone. The process of renewal each year is most interesting, notes a writer in the Los Angeles Times. The skin covering the projection where the horn rests is filled with tiny arteries; this is the "velvet" and it works continually, depositing bone. As the horns increase in size the velvet covering also grows and the course of the arteries is marked by long furrows which are never obliterated. On reaching their full size, the horns are tender and would bleed if injured. A fight at this time means death from hemorrhage.

Around the root of each horn a ring of solid bone forms; by degrees it grows narrow, shutting off the blood supply to the velvet. Deprived of nourishment the covering dies and by rubbing the horns against the trees the peeling is accomplished.

Animals, whether tame or wild, are fussy about their young, seldom nursing another's babe. It is, therefore, interesting to watch the little fawn in a large herd where he may. They are among the world's best mothers. A doe will stand until her fawn has escaped from danger and lead the enemy in the opposite direction.

Counterfeiting General Among the Old Colonies

Hepburn's "History of Currency in the United States" says that counterfeiting was very general among the colonies; the currency was counterfeited by the British and sent here as one means of destroying the American credit; a shipload of counterfeit Continental money coming from Britain was captured by an American privateer, and persons accompanying flags of truce made use of the occasion to disseminate counterfeit money.

Dewey's "Financial History of the United States" also refers to the fact that notes were counterfeited both by the English and Americans. We find no record as to which mills supplied this paper, states the Detroit News.

Long before the Revolution, some of the colonies, such as Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, had issued paper money which depreciated. The Continental currency began to depreciate during 1777; owing largely to lack of confidence in the government and to early American reverses in the war. The congress had no power of taxation, but could only ask the states to contribute fixed sums, "asking them to raise the amount by taxation, which the states neglected to do."

Flexible Lighting Is a Feature Of This Modern Recreation Room

Totally indirect three-light lamps for cards and other table games combine with ornamental wall brackets and removable ceiling fixtures to make the lighting in this recreation room adequate for all occasions.

By Jean Prentice

NO matter what the weather may be like outside in the blackness of night, there's fun and laughter . . . and eye comfort . . . in a well-lighted recreation room.

A lighting scientist worked out for a friend of his the illumination ideas shown in the picture, and I am happy to pass them along to you. They are not elaborate or costly, but simple and straightforward.

If you do not have a recreation room you can apply several of the ideas in other parts of the house where games are enjoyed.

For card tables there are totally indirect three-light lamps. One of these may be seen in the illustration. It is to be used in combination with the general lighting throughout the room, and gives three different amounts of light at the turn of a switch. There is a total absence of harsh glare upon cards or chess-board.

You can play for hours in perfect contentment (unless you're losing!) under a generous light like this.

The prize that will take your eye, however, is the removable lighting above the ping pong table.

These deep shades, with their 150-watt bulbs, are hung on screws in the ceiling, and their wires plugged into the ceiling outlet. The ping pong ball is whizzed back and forth under this abundant lighting with more skill than you realized you had.

And now someone turns up the radio at the other end of the room. It is time for dancing. Card tables and floor lamps are removed. Away goes the ping pong table. More quickly than that the fixtures above the table are detached. The ceiling is now cleared, and adds to the spaciousness of the room. All the lighting that remains is from eight double indirect wall lights in balanced pairs on the four sides of the room.

This soft medium level of lighting throughout the room is something of an achievement, since the low ceiling makes impossible the usual method of indirect lighting.

As it is, dancing and conversations find a smooth companion in the soft balanced lighting from the indirect wall brackets. Whether it be ping pong, anagrams or a swing tune, there's an interesting and comfortable quality of lighting available to fit the recreation.

OLD DRIVER FINDS HIS STAGE AT FAIR

Recalls Stories of Hectic Gold-Mining Days.

San Diego, Cal.—Henry Stone, 78, who drove a stagecoach out of San Diego when he was 17, recalled tales of the hectic gold-mining days of the southwest when he discovered the coach he piloted over treacherous mountain trails in 1875 on exhibition at the world's fair here.

Stone was brought to the exposition by Mrs. G. E. Ashby, supervisor of a WPA historical writers' project at Santa Ana, Cal. He had been living at Artesia, Cal.

Even before he drove the stage between San Diego and Yuma, Ariz., Stone rode with the pony express over the same route, passing gold-mining settlements en route, where he picked up mail and changed horses.

"Our schedule on the Yuma road was from here to Armo, Potrero, Campo and Mountain Springs," Stone said. "We'd change horses in each of those settlements. A boy would run out with a fresh horse, grab the single line for that animal and hand us the new line. The company never let us get down off the box for fear we might go get a drink. But we'd get that, anyhow."

"Altogether, we had a lot of fun in those days. I don't know whether it was because times were different, or because we were young. Maybe it was that. It's awful good to be young."

Stone examined the old vehicle carefully, and said it was "in almost as good shape" as when he drove it.

"Right up there near the left side lamp," he said, "you'll find the initials M. R. That was Maggie Rorke, whose daddy lived up at Camp for a while. I often wondered what became of Maggie. She sure was a fine girl."

Trouble was not frequent, said Stone, but he admitted it did become a "bit wild" at times.

"The most trouble I ever saw on a run over the mountains was right soon after I began driving coach instead of riding for the express."

"Up at Campo some Mexican bandits started to rob Gaskell's store, but 'Gas' had been laying for them. I guess he had a gun behind every flour barrel in the station. As the bandits came up to the door, he began to let fly. He shot 13 of them and they piled up right there on the stoop. Only one got away. 'Gas' always was sore because he missed that last one when a gun jammed."

Washington Built Tavern Next Door to Congress

Washington.—Just east of where the Capitol now stands there was once an Indian village, and the first Europeans to see the neighborhood, probably, were companions of Capt. John Smith, who sailed up the Potomac in 1608.

Dr. Charles O. Paulin, historian, has uncovered the early lore about Capitol Hill in tracing land grants of the section from the Seventeenth century.

George Washington once bought a parcel of land in the area for $66.66. He was associated with a group of men who built on the hill the earliest tavern for the accommodation of members of congress.

In later years the neighborhood included the residences of Daniel Webster, Abraham Lincoln and William Jennings Bryan.

Chinese Generals Found to Prefer Simple Fare

Peiping.—The Lih Pao, a widely read Chinese tabloid, assigned a reporter to find out what Chinese political leaders like to eat.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, new premier, was found to have no preference for any special dish. More exotic is the taste of Gen. Chen Chi-Tang, dictator of Canton and the South, who likes snake cooked with fox meat.

The Christian Gen. Feng Yuhsing carries his simplicity to the dinner table, preferring cabbage soup and the common steam bread eaten by the poorer classes. The favorite of Marshal Yen Shi-Shan, powerful overlord of Shansi province, consists of ten kinds of vegetables and meat cooked with a paste of bean curd.

Roerich Banner of Peace May Soon Fly Over Texas Hall of State in Dallas

The Roerich Banner of Peace, an international flag designed to protect the priceless artistic treasures of all nations in time of war, may soon fly over the Texas Hall of State at the Texas Centennial Exposition, it was announced this week.

In making application for one of the flags, which consist of three clustered red spheres in a red circle on a white background, the Hall of State joins such distinguished institutions as the Smithsonian Institute at Washington and art museums all over the world.

Of the Roerich Banner, Secretary of State Cordell Hull has written: "I have learned with interest and personal satisfaction of the efforts now being made for the protection and preservation of the educational, artistic and scientific works in every country during any period of hostilities in which they might be subject to destruction or injury."

The flag will be raised, with appropriate ceremony, as soon as it is received from Washington.

Dentists' Patients Use "Stop-Go" Signs
London.—A "stop," "caution," "go" apparatus, by which patients can reveal to the dentist exactly how they feel, is a latest device for banishing fear of dental surgery being used in Britain.
The patient holds the control switch in his hand while his teeth are being drilled. A box containing the red, amber, and green lights attached to a collar placed on the shoulder of the patient shows the dentist instantly if he should stop, go cautiously, or go ahead with the operation.
The lights first were suggested to the inventor as a joke. He perfected the apparatus and found that its psychological effect was tremendous. It usually gives patients so much confidence that they do not signal "stop" at all.
