HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid
and Poisonous Waste
Your kidneys help to keep you well
by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.
You may suffer nagging backache,
persistent headache, attacks of dizziness,
getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.
In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multi-

Homes do not happen . . . not often are they handed to us . . . more frequently we build them.

For livable lighting in the home today at least three types of illumination must be available—light for seeing and close work most often obtained by certified table and floor lamps—light that is generally diffused through the room to destroy sharp contrasts of intensity usually obtained from some indirect fixture—light for decoration in the form of shaded brackets or ornaments.

Lighting plays a prominent part in making a real home, if given a chance. When planning a new home or improving your present one, you'll enjoy your home more with good lighting....

Super-Families of Seals May Be in Two Families

Seals may be divided into two super-families, including the hair or true seals and the fur seals, walrus and sea lions. These super-families differ from each other in important respects—in structure, appearance, habits, disposition, and method of locomotion, states a writer in the Indianapolis News. The fancied resemblance of the fur seals or seal bears to the seal of the Atlantic has led to much misconception which has been perpetuated in many books.

The animal that produces the seal-skin of commerce is properly the sea bear, which differs in important respects from the true seals. The sea bear is found in both the northern and southern hemisphere. The northern sea bear is a native of the northern Pacific and Arctic oceans, and is found chiefly in the islands in Bering sea and contiguous waters. Three principal herds of these animals are the American or Alaskan, the Russian and the Robben island herd. These herds constitute three distinct breeding grounds, feeding grounds, and routes of migration, and the individuals of each differ in form, color, and in character of fur. Only the young males called "bachelors" are killed for their skins, many of which are used for fur coats.

Agate as Most Precious Stone of Old Persians

Of all the folklores surrounding various gems, jewels and semi-precious stones, that connected with agate is one of the most interesting, says the Chicago Field Museum News.

In ancient Persia the Magi believed that agates could stop a storm or hurricane. For this purpose the stones were thrown into a boiling cauldron, and if they turned the water cold they were regarded as possessing the necessary magical power.

According to the ideas of the Magi, the stones, to be really efficacious, had to be fastened with lion's hair; they rejected hyena's hair as being provocative of family discord. An agate containing only one color was believed by the Magi to render an athlete invincible.

Horses Versus Cows

In an article in Spur, it is said that when a horse is sick it lies down whereas a sick cow will stand, contrary to her usual habits. When a horse is frightened he runs against the wind, the cow with the wind. It is also stated that when the two animals are drinking at the same trough, if the horse drinks first there will not be enough water for either; if the cow drinks first, there will be plenty for both. As a result of walking beside camels during raiding expeditions, Arab horses are said to be the fastest walking horses in the world. Horses of the desert suffer as much as the men. During certain seasons, mares are given three to eight pints of camel's milk per day to supplant their meager feed of herbs, roots and flowers. The Arab rides his horse without bit, whip, spurs or blinkers. Generally the Bedouin rides without a saddle and with just a headstall and single rope.

The First Congress

The first congress under the constitution opened in New York city on Wednesday, March 4, 1789. The day was ushered in by the firing of cannon and the ringing of bells, and this ceremony was repeated at noon and at sunset, but in Federal hall only eight senators and thirteen representatives made their appearance—not enough to form a quorum of either house. A whole week passed and, no more senators arriving, those present sent out a circular letter to their colleagues urging them to hasten their coming. A second circular letter followed, a week later, but nearly a month had elapsed before either house could muster a quorum. The house was able to organize on March 30, but the senate not until April 6.

Molecules

A molecule is the ultimate limit toward which matter can be subdivided. If we break a grain of sand in two we have two smaller grains of sand. If we break these in two the four fragments are still sand. But by repeating the division we eventually could reach a stage where the particles no longer could be subdivided and still remain sand. These smallest lumps of matter are known as molecules. At the time when the existence of molecules was

Postal Rate Once Caused Long Debate in Congress

In the year 1790 there were but 75 postoffices in the United States, the majority of which were confined to the cities. The Postmaster General then reported to the congress that he had turned over $37,835 to the Treasury department for the year's receipts, observes a writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

A stabilized postal rate was adopted in 1816. A single one-ounce letter, carried within 30 miles, cost 6 1/2 cents over 30 miles and under 80 miles, the charge was 10 cents; over 80 miles and under 150 miles the rate was 12 1/2 cents; over 150 miles and under 400 miles the office received 25 cents. A letter or parcel weighing more than one ounce cost four times the usual rate for the distance it would travel.

For many years after the schedule was adopted by congress the people pressed for a reduction. On several occasions enterprising congressmen introduced bills to reduce the rates, but a watchful Postmaster General succeeded in convincing the legislators that such measures were foolhardy to adopt, as a drop in revenue would mean an increase in subsidizing funds granted by the congress to maintain postal service.

After constant pressure congress passed a bill which became effective on March 3, 1845. A half-ounce letter, up to 300 miles, was delivered for 5 cents; over 300 miles the rate was 10 cents; with an additional charge for every half ounce over the original weight. Newspapers were delivered without charge up to 30 miles.

"Muck-Amuck," Indian's Bread in Lord's Prayer

The Pacific Northwest Indian of two centuries ago had no word for bread, something unknown to him, so he asked for "muck-amuck" when he recited the Lord's prayer, according to an authority in the Detroit News.

The "muck-amuck," states the writer, covered his daily ration of meat, fish and other food.

Another Chinook version of the Lord's prayer, one of several used, brought to light by a writer for the American Guide, was found in some long-forgotten documents.

"Ne-si-ka Papa klaxta mit-lite kopa Sach-a-lie," it begins.

A literal translation reads: "Our Father who dwells on high, good for our hearts your name, good you chief of all people; good your heart to such country as our up above; give us all days our food, and stop remembering all our sins we make to them, suppose sin against us; throw far away from us all evil."

The various Chinook version of the Lord's prayer, it is said, came into being about 1740 from the influence of early missionaries.

Not until later did the Indians come to use a word for bread, "sap-olil."

The Chinook was a kind of esperanto language in which all tribes could talk somewhat with each other, and was in use before the white man came.

Old Ohio Court Rule

Some court-trial laws in effect in several counties in early Ohio were said to result in "men being hung and jury men might die." From the time that the case went into the hands of the jury until a verdict was reached, the members of the jury were not allowed to eat, sleep, converse with anyone else, or have any light. So that these prohibitions were not violated, the sheriff was required to take this oath: "You do solemnly swear that, so far as is in your power, you will keep this jury together without meat or drink, water excepted, fire or candle; that you will suffer no person to speak to them, nor speak to them yourself unless by direction of the court, only to ask 'are you agreed upon your verdict?' and this you do as you shall answer to God."

Rush Job in A. D. 122

The discovery of a dedication tablet among the ruins of Hadrian's wall proves that this line of ancient fortifications was built in less than five years, observes a writer in Pearson's London Weekly. The wall, running from Wallsend, at the mouth of the River Tyne, to Brownies on the River Solway, was built by the Romans, under the Emperor Hadrian, as a means of protecting Roman Britain from invasion by the barbarian clans of the north.

The work was under the control of Platorius Nepos, governor of Britain, and the tablet, dedicated to him, mentions that he was occupied with the construction from A. D. 122 to 126. The building plans were constantly changed while the work was in progress.

Where Sugar Comes From

Sugar is obtained from the sugar cane, from the beetroot and from the maple tree. Until a German chemist named Markgraft discovered sugar in the Eighteenth century only cane sugar was known. It was used in India over 1,000 years B. C.; the Persians refined it and used it a good deal in their medicines. Maple sugar is common; it is obtained from the sap of the maple tree. Both cane sugar and maple sugar are good to eat in the unrefined state, but beet sugar has to be refined before it can be used.

Sad-Eyed Saint Bernard Most Romantic Large Dog

Probably the most romantic portrayed dog of all the large canine family is the sad-eyed Saint Bernard. This dog gained its reputation down through the years as a rescuer of man in the dangerous mountain passes of the Swiss Alps.

However, the Saint Bernard did not originate amid the lofty peaks, where later it was destined to become a hero on countless occasions. In short, this dog did not first come to light in Switzerland, asserts a writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Folks have become quite familiar with the Saint Bernard because it has frequently been pictured in a setting of snow and ice, with brandy cask suspending from a huge collar. The eyes of the dog express sorrow, probably because of the "haw" or third eyelid.

These dogs are one of the giants of dogdom. Where full-grown, the average Saint Bernard weighs from 170 to 210 pounds.

The Saint Bernard is a graceful mover, chiefly because of its broad feet, which encase closed up toes that are well padded.

In fact, these dogs have a "fifth toe" on their hind feet. This is not a freak of nature which frequently crops up in other breeds. The "fifth toe" is a developed dewclaw that really is actually another toe. The surefootedness has been developed chiefly among the Swiss types, that have been used for rescue work.

Bird's Driving Force Is Due to Downward Stroke

The driving force which propels a bird through the air is entirely due to the downward stroke of its wings, according to Naturalist S. F. Aaron, writing in Scientific American. Aaron further states that the feathers of a bird's wing remain tightly closed on the down stroke, but spread slightly on the up-stroke, thus permitting the wing to be raised without much resistance.

As Aaron describes the curious mechanism of wing structure that makes this possible, each of the large "flight feathers" turns or pivots on its individual quill, much as the shutters on a blind may be turned. The quills of these feathers are not in the middle, but nearer the forward side. On the up-stroke these pivot automatically in their socket, allowing the wing to recover its stroke upward through the air without tending so much to retard the bird's progress. But the feathers cannot pivot thus on the down-stroke because the broad rear edge of one feather is held against the front edge of the next.

"Seven Seas," Figurative Term

The term "The Seven Seas" is not intended to be taken literally, but is a figurative term denoting all the seas and oceans of the world. When Rudyard Kipling gave the name to a book of his poems he mentioned that it might be used in this sense or to include the seven great oceans, the North Atlantic, South Atlantic, North Pacific, South Pacific, Indian, Arctic and Antarctic. Areas are: Pacific, 68,634,000 square miles; Atlantic, 41,821,000; Indian, 29,340,000; Arctic, 4,781,000; Antarctic, 5,731,350. Average depths are: Pacific, 12,960 feet; Atlantic, 12,200; Indian, 11,136; Antarctic, 10,800; Arctic, 5,160. Exact dimensions cannot be given. The Dead sea in Palestine is 47 miles long, 10 miles wide, 1,080 feet deep and has an area of 360 square miles; its surface is 1,300 feet below sea level.

Hands Reveal Character

Anyone who sits with hands loosely clasped in the lap is of a quiet, well-balanced mind, while the nervous person tries to control nervousness by tightly gripping the hands together, states a writer in Pearson's London Weekly. One who has a habit of clasping hands with fingers entwined is not keeping strictly to the truth, while one who partially covers the mouth with a hand while talking has certain knowledge, but is trying desperately not to reveal it. A person who remains seated while conversing with another who is standing finds it very difficult to tell an untruth and any attempt to do so is easily detected by the person standing.

Saint Bernard of Mastiff Family

Unlike many other breeds, the origin of the Saint Bernard is a bit hazy, but early historians have agreed this type of dog belongs to the Mastiff family. The ancient records produce evidence that Mastiff dogs were brought from Asia, and used by the Romans as herders of sheep, besides being kept as watch dogs at army outposts. It has also been established that Roman soldiers used large dogs to guide sheep over the mountain passes, one of which was called the Saint Bernard Pass, no more than a pack mule path. A hostile tribe destroyed this path and cut off travel over the mountains around 950 A. D.

Lemming, Scandinavian Rodent

The lemming is a Scandinavian rodent, about five inches in length, noted for its pugnacity, its productivity and its curious mass migrations. They eat as they travel, and breed with amazing rapidity. They drive away all other animals in their path, attacking cows, reindeer and even man, fearlessly.
