The Man of the House

WAS MONDAY NIGHT HALLOW'EEN, FOLKS WERE ASKING

The first thought of most of Floydada's energetic citizens who rushed down early Tuesday morning to open up their establishments was, if Monday night could have been hallow'een night, when they saw signs of "spooks" on the streets, such as bushel baskets, boxes, boards and every conceivable thing around the square. Upon investigation it was found that the city marshal, Morgan Wright, and Mayor Glad Snodgrass had just finished hawking the streets marked with fresh paint and the blockades were placed on the streets to warn the "dear public" to stay off the fresh paint.

Plains Has Own Water System Independent of Any Outside Source Is Report

The Plains of Northwest Texas have their own water system. It is probably wholly independent of outside sources. The moisture provided by rain and snow seeps into storage in sands underground. Experts say these sands hold enough water to supply the region for thousands of years--if no more water were added. The storage is sealed below by impervious earth. The water can't escape and mineralized water can't get in. There couldn't be any simpler natural water system than the area south of the Canadian River and east of the Pecos. Sandhills in the west part of the vicinity of Melrose and Portales, New Mexico, and in other sections including vicinities of Dimmitt and Hale Center are the so-called catchment areas. Rainfall on the sand and loose soils goes into the ground to the water bearing sands below. The water sands are some 200 feet thick, from 50 to 150 feet from the surface. They hold water in amounts varying from 20 to 40 per cent of their volume. On the edges of the underground sea, the sands are "pinched out."

Baylor University Sports Writer Mentions Malcolm Linder's Work

Waco, Texas, July 28.--To a Floydada boy, 175 pound Malcolm Linder, will fall the task this fall of making good on a graduation-battered Baylor University backfield. Linder, the Floydada flyer, is fresh from the freshman squad, but will likely see a good deal of Green and Gold service. It is that backfield that is worrying Coach Morley Jennings as he tries to sleep these hot nights. He has lost rambling Lloyd Russell, and the question is whether the Dallas lad can be replaced. Because Russell, the singing showman, who romped for 48 points and the conference scoring lead last fall, was so valuable to the cBars during the past three grid campaigns, local followers realize that he will be sorely missed. The logical man to fill Russell's empty slippers is "Bullet Billy" Patterson, a wiry 165 pounder, who electrified local fans with his triple threat feats last fall in his first season in the green and gold toga. His only weakness then was an inability to cope with the opposition's tricky aerial maneuvers, but Coach Jennings, after devoting tiresome hours attempting to correct the weakness during spring training, reports remarkable progress along that line. The fleet Hillsboro youth, whose work in the class room even excels his brilliant performances on the gridiron, has already proved himself one of the most dangerous passers south of the Mason-Dixon line, and with the probability of developing a pair of pass-snatching wingmen, Baylor fans may soon be made to forget the mercury-footed Russell.

Miss Genell Stovall Honored With Beach Party Friday

A colorful beach party given at the home of Mrs. E. P. Nelson Friday, July 23, honored Miss Genelle Stovall, who is to be an August bride. The lovely large yard furnished ample space for the beach setting, and spread with natural sand, it made a wonderful representation of the sea coast. Bright colored beach umbrellas were placed about, under which several girls wearing bathing suits reclined. Those who took part in this phase of the party were Mary Anna Ross, Evelyn Hicks, Dorothy Stovall, and Gloria Hammonds.

Since Miss Stovall is to be wed at Corpus Christi, the pretended beach was christened "Bridal Beach of Corpus Christi Bay." Mrs. Lon V. Smith performed the christening ceremony, after which she presented the bride-to-be with a fishing reel inviting her to cast it into the waters, where joy, happiness, and love were abundant. Her "catch" was entirely too large to be reeled in, so a gaily decorated skiff laden with a vast store of gifts rowed in and made its stop beside her.

Arla Vee Bishop, clad as a mermaid, sang "Beach of Corpus Christi", which was in direct keeping with the theme of the party. Mrs. I. W. Hicks presided over the register book, which was made in the likeness of a life saver. The serving of soda pop and sandwiches to the call of "This way for soda pop and sandwiches" was directed by Misses Emma Louise and Bert Ione Smith, dressed as life guards.

Miss Stovall was attractively dressed, wearing a sport suit, which was very appropriate for the beach party.

Hostesses for the gay affair wore bright colored beach coats. They included: Mrs. W. I. Cannaday, Mrs. H. O. Pope, Mrs. E. P. Nelson, Mrs. Glad Snodgrass, Mrs. I. W. Hicks, and Mrs. Lon V. Smith.

Guests were: Miss Evelyn Hicks, Mrs. A. J. Cline, Mrs. Edd Brown, Mrs. Ed Johnson, Mrs. James Willson, Mrs. John Farris, Miss Audrey Farris, Mrs. Ed Bond, Mrs. A. J. Welch, Mrs. Vernon Shaw, Mrs. J. There's always something different about anything Fort Worth does, and this show is no exception. There's a bigness about it all that brings the feeling that what it shows is tops. The show was so different from the Casino in Dallas, rival show, that it could not be compared.
Dallas' Casino is sophisticated, finished, polished. The sort of place where formal clothes and quietness seems appropriate. Ft. Worth's Casa Manana is big, boisterous, and whooping. The men and women of the press enjoyed the show, and doubtless will write much of Fort Worth's unsurpassed hospitality.

 YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Some Birds Choose Dark Nest, Hide White Eggs
 In nearly all cases, birds that lay white eggs hide them in dark places, while eggs that are covered with brilliant markings on a colored shell are left in exposed positions, writes Oliver G. Pike, F. Z. S., in London Tit-Bits Magazine.
 All the owls choose dark places for their homes, and few make any attempt at nest building. The eggs of the tawny owl are found in holes in trees, and the decaying wood or other rubbish at the bottom forms the only nest. The barn owl chooses a bare board or other ledge in the sheltered corner of any old building, while the little owl is often content with a rabbit burrow on a grassy bank. All these birds lay white eggs with no markings.
 Kingfishers and woodpeckers lay white eggs, and build dark homes in which to conceal them. The kingfisher is a clever engineer. She makes a tunnel in a sandy bank and, at the end of this, which may be four feet in length, she excavates a larger chamber in which the nest is made. This consists entirely of undigested fish bones which she casts up through the beak in the form of white pellets.
 The little sand-martin also digs out a tunnel on a grassy bank, an even more wonderful feat than that of the kingfisher, which has a long sharp beak well adapted for digging, but the sand-martin has only a tiny beak. She also lays white eggs.
 Woodpeckers make their homes in trees, boring through two or three inches of solid wood, then digging out a larger chamber in the heart of the trunk. The green woodpecker is the best known of the several species; in many country districts it is called the "wet weather bird," because its loud notes are so often heard just before rain. Kingfishers' and woodpeckers' eggs are pure white, have a gloss on their surface, and the shells are so thin that the yolk shows through, giving them a dainty pink tinge.

Brides of Granna Island Wear Queen's Headdress
 Not orange blossoms but a crown intended for a queen is the wedding headdress of brides at Granna, Sweden, on the island of Visingsö in Lake Vattern, one of Sweden's largest and finest lakes. Now over 300 years old, the crown was originally made for a daughter of the Brahe family, which built the Castle of Visingsborg and the Brahe church on the island.
 The girl, Ebba Brahe, was loved by Gustavus Adolphus and the crown was made for her wedding to him, but for reasons of state he was forced to give her up and marry a princess instead. The crown was placed in the Brahe church, where visitors to the island sometimes see it worn by a bride of the parish.
 The castle built by the Brahe family was destroyed by fire in 1718 and became an imposing ruin over-run by vines. The family is also credited with founding Granna, called by travelers one of the loveliest towns in Sweden. Besides being famous for its beauty, Granna has a great reputation as the "Pear Town" of Sweden. The original pear tree was planted more than 300 years ago in a hillside orchard near the one street of the town, and long was known as a national monument.

Beginning of Purse Races
 It has been customary to credit the state of Virginia with originating horse racing for prizes in this country, because it was established that there were turf contests in that state as early as April 10, 1674. But horses were raced and trophies awarded in New York beginning in 1665. It is merely presumed that a race was run in March, 1665, on the track which Col. Richard Nicolls called the New Market course, in Hempstead, Long Island. Colonel Nicolls, who arrived in America in 1664, as the first English governor of New York, called the meeting, but it is established that there was a race on March 25, 1668, because there is in Yale university's collection of old American silver a porringer given to the winner of the contest in 1668.

The Golden Gate Bridge
 Seven hundred feet longer than the George Washington Memorial bridge across the Hudson at New York, hitherto ranked as the world's greatest suspension bridge, the Golden Gate span, the longest, highest, widest, handsomest, costliest bridge in the world, connects San Francisco with the North-Bay Redwood empire. It is the only one ever flung across the extreme outer mouth of a major ocean harbor. If all its rivets were placed head to toe, they would form an iron serpent that would writhe for thirty-six miles.

Aden, "Gibraltar of East"
 Aden was Great Britain's first territorial acquisition during the reign of Queen Victoria. In 1838 an English vessel was wrecked in the vicinity of the town, and the crew and passengers were detained by the local Abdali chief. While negotiations were pending to settle this incident, acts of "treachery" were committed, and a military force was sent from Bombay under Major Baillie. Aden was seized by this expedition on January 19, 1839, and from that time until recently had been part of the Bombay presidency.

NOTICE, TRACTOR OWNERS!
 Again your attention is called to driving a tractor with lugs on the paved streets, wood culverts or paved cross streets of Floydada. This is subject to a penalty of $25.00 and this law will be enforced. We want to be fair but our pavement is being literally ruined by people unthinkingly and otherwise crossing and driving down them, and the tax payers' money replaces them if they are replaced.
