Federal Authorities Are Tightening Regulations On Cream Sales

Both state and federal authorities are imposing more strict regulations pertaining to handling and marketing cream and the kind of containers in which it is being marketed. No syrup buckets or other buckets with a rim top, no empty lard buckets or other containers with an open seam inside may be used.

However much one may try to do so, health authorities contend that it is next to impossible to keep such containers clean and free from bacterial infestation.

If local producers continue to sell cream on the local market, authorities demand that it be clean and wholesome. In other words, a person must not offer for sale a milk product that he would not relish if placed on his own table. Several warnings have been given concerning this but now if a dealer is caught with a dairy product that does not comply with regulations, it is immediately destroyed.

Dealers in the state have been warned against buying cream that has been carelessly handled under penalty of confiscation and destruction and a probable fine. This will be reflected back onto the producer who will have to conform to regulations or else find the market closed against him.

So rapidly do bacteria multiply that a spoonful of infected cream put into a ten gallon can will contaminate and spoil the whole can before it can reach the market. Clean, wholesome milk or cream is the ideal food for both children and adults, but when improperly handled, infantile paralysis, dysentery, ptomaine poisoning and various other serious ailments may result.

Annual XII Reunion To be Held at Dalhart On August 9th and 10th

Dalhart, Texas, July 20—Work has started in real earnest on the two featured highlights of the second annual XII Reunion in Dalhart August 9 and 10: The XII Historical Pageant and the XII Rodeo.

The Beutler Brothers of Elk City, Oklahoma, widely known for their outlaw horses and tough and wiry Brahma steers for riding and bull-dogging, are furnishing the rodeo stock. Lynn Beutler will be arena director, said Ailyn D. Fish, rancher near Dalhart, who is in charge of registration and entries. Sol Skidmore, pioneer ranchman of Dalhart, is building entirely new pens and arena with specially planned crowd-pens and several chutes to keep action humming.

More than $1,000 in rodeo prizes will be given in calf roping, bulldogging, bronc and steer riding. Finch said all entries must be in by midnight, August 8, and that contestants must be present at rodeo headquarters, sign waivers and receive identification before 10 a. m. August 9.

Ray Boothe, director of the Hollywood branch of the John B. Rogers Production Co. of Fostoria, Ohio, who will direct the historical pageant, will open rehearsals this week.

The pageant committee of which John B. Honts is chairman has announced two all expense-paid trips to the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition at Dallas and Billy Rose's Frontier Celebration at Fort Worth for the Dalhart girl who is chosen queen of the celebration and for the leading princess from some surrounding town.

The queen will be elected entirely on the basis of advance ticket sales in Dalhart. All surrounding towns and cities are urged to select a princess of the XII on any basis they see fit. Each princess will then be given opportunity to sell advance tickets if she wishes and thus win the all expense-paid trip to Dallas and Fort Worth. The contest was divided since the Dalhart girls would hold an advantage if they had been permitted to compete against those from surrounding towns, Honts said.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin English and son, Robert, visited Sunday in Spur and also in Lubbock. They spent Sunday morning in Spur with Mr. English's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. English. They drove to Lubbock Sunday afternoon and enjoyed a barbecue supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Bartlett.

Young Couples Warned Against Highway Dancing

Hall County officers this week issued a warning to the Memphis younger set not to dance on the county and state highways near the city. It is a violation of the law and is a dangerous practice, they pointed out.

During the summer months young couples park their cars on the paved highways and dance on the pavement to radio music. It is a violation of the law, as the dancers and cars obstruct traffic, it was said.

Members of the State highway patrol have complained of the practice and have stated that they will arrest couples found dancing on the highways and obstructing traffic.—Memphis Democrat.

How Things Do Change

In the good old "horse and buggy" days folks called it spooning in the moonlight—a little later with the advent of the T-Model, they were irked into speaking of the road-side parkers as "neekers". But boy! Look what we have today! With our stream-lined automobiles fully equipped with radios and cigarette lighters our more modern fathers and mothers are threatening the young and harmless-meaning "spooners" and crooners with mechanized cops in an effort to break-up "highway dancing".

We are prone to believe that it has ever been thus, and regardless of whether it may be termed: Spooning, necking or highway dancing, young people will continue to avail themselves of present-day inventions and methods and will carry-on—we hope.

What JAUB Of The Shamrock Texan Thinks Of Radio Broadcasts

One thing that gives us a pain in the neck are these advertiser-sponsored radio broadcasts from Amarillo, Fort Worth and Dallas, where in the chamber of commerce from Memphis, Shamrock, Plainview or some sister city, presents some home-talent music, followed by a speaker, who gives you the number of churches, the kind of schools, number of bales of cotton grown, and the average rainfall of his home town. He tells you the number of people living there, the number of miles of paved streets, the number of cotton gins, the number of retail stores, and a number of other things, including the water, light and gas rates, and how tall the water tower is.

The civic club quartet then sings another number, the station announcer tells why his overalls or cough syrup are better than anybody else's, and the group of home-town boosters depart merrily for home, proud of the part they have played in advertising their town to the world. And when they reach home, friends and business leaders shower them with congratulations and praise at the elegance of their program, and the home-town paper, which, like the radio, depends on paid advertising for a livelihood, is asked to publish a 2-column head and, if possible, an editorial telling how little so-and-so whom we have all known since he was knee high to a grasshopper, knocked the world cold on his very first radio appearance, sponsored by the overall company. Yes, our old home town has been made famous overnight.

Why a small town chamber of commerce will spend fifteen, twenty or thirty dollars to send a group of "entertainers" to an Amarillo, Fort Worth or Dallas radio station to help advertise a product they neither use or know, is a question we wish somebody would answer. Radio operators may try and tell you it advertises your town and cause people to want to move there, but we would like to see in a living flesh, any man, woman or child who ever moved to a town on account of any chamber of commerce program sponsored by the overall of cough syrup manufacturers.

Ten years ago it was a novelty and an honor to appear on a radio broadcast, but it is no longer. To find an amateur entertainer of any merit at all, who has never appeared on a radio program is the exception rather than the rule. And as far as news value is concerned, a picture of a man or woman entertainer of ability who has never sung or played in front of a microphone, would merit front page space in anybody's newspaper, as being most unusual and out-of-the-ordinary. It would almost rate Ripley's column.

As a matter of fact, nobody listens to these home-town programs except the neighbors and friends of the persons appearing on the program. If the radio operators want to give their advertisers a more complete coverage of the particular territory, why don't they rent the home town school auditorium, rather than put it on the air and cause the home town chamber of commerce and the parents of these entertainers to spend a lot of dough that is needed at home?

DOAN'S PILLS

By L. L. STEVENSON

The theatrical season was well advanced. Broadway critics had become pessimistic over the possibility of a youthful star making an appearance. Then "Having Wonderful Time," a comedy by Arthur Kober, opened. It deals with Jewish young people on vacation in the Berkshires—most of them boys and girls who have been saving up all year for two weeks at Camp Kare Free. Among them is Teddy Stern, slight, blue-eyed and with hair of reddish gold. Teddy is tired—tired from working as a secretary and a number of other things including a broken engagement. Sam Rappaport is a lot older than Teddy and is interested solely in his business and radio. But he offered security and a chance to quit taking dictation. Things change a bit when Teddy meets Chick Kessler. The part of Teddy, short for Tessie of course, had been given to Katharine Locke. As she played it, something passed over the footlights. The jaded critics sat up and took notice. And the next day, Broadway knew a new star had arrived at last.

Katharine Locke is twenty-five years old. For five years she struggled for a foothold on Broadway. Her talents brought her a number of opportunities. She clutched them eagerly and gave her best. The plays, however, were not Broadway caliber and one by one they flopped, seven or eight in all. "If a Body," however, ran 46 times, which didn't place it even in the success class. But it brought Miss Locke a screen test. Still fate wasn't ready to smile. More disappointments followed. Then came the big opportunity and now nightly, with two matinees a week, she is Teddy Stern. In private life, she is Mrs. Morris Helprin, wife of an advertising and publicity man. And for her, the sun is shining brightly though she does call her dog Noon Day Drizzle.

Speaking of dogs, there is Colonel. When it became known that the Theater Guild needed a dog for a part in a forthcoming production, canines of almost every known breed—many with pedigrees as long as from here to there—were offered. As the script called for a mutt, the blooded animals were eliminated automatically. That didn't help the Guild much since the blends were in the majority anyway. After a lot of inspection and other trouble, Colonel, who is owned by Mrs. Francis Kidner, of Greenwich Village, was chosen. He's just plain dog and can be classified in no other way. From his tail to his shoulders, he's one breed. His ears make him another and so does his tail, while various other physical attributes provide further variations. Thus, he fulfilled all specifications.

On stage, Colonel becomes Patsy in "Storm Over Patsy." Since his name is in the play title, though he doesn't receive top billing, Colonel is a star. As is often the case with human stars, Colonel has developed a temperament. Having become accustomed to riding to and from the theater in a taxicab, he has to be forced into walking. Also, he high-tails various old dog friends of the Village, passing out with muzzle in the air. When an attempt was made to photograph him with Sylvia, the goose in "Sun-Kissed," he put up a battle. That was an error. Sylvia, though a lady, has a strong beak and wings. The brawl was ended before a decision was reached but Colonel is said to have looked relieved.

In the case of Colonel, it pays to own a mutt. His owner receives $50 a week, plus expenses, which usually run about $10 a week more, for his services. On stage, he doesn't do much except look bored and receive a lot of petting, though a veterinarian, in speaking of his various points during court proceedings, isn't exactly complimentary. But he all that as it may, Colonel is making personal appearances here and there. Also he is endorsing various dog products and posing for photographs, all of which run his income into higher brackets.

Cassia, Aromatic Bark, Is Used for Flavoring

Cassia is the aromatic bark derived from cinnamonum cecilia (family Lauraceae). The greater part of the supply coming from China, it sometimes is termed Chinese cinnamon. The bark is much thicker than that of true cinnamon; the taste is more pungent and the flavor less delicate, although somewhat similar to that of cinnamon.

The properties of cassia bark depend on the presence of a volatile oil—the oil of cassia, which is imported in a fairly pure state as an article of commerce from Canton. Cassia bark is in much more extensive demand on the continent of Europe than in Great Britain, being preferred to cinnamon by southern nations. The chief use is for flavoring liqueurs and chocolate, and in cooking generally, says a writer in the Indianapolis News.

When ground as a spice it is difficult to distinguish cassia from cinnamon and it is a common practice to substitute the cheap common spice for the more valuable article. "Cassia buds," which have a pleasing cinnamon flavor, are believed to be the immature fruits of the tree which yields Chinese cinnamon. They are brought in considerable quantities from Canton, and used as a spice and in confectionery.

"Cassia pulp," used as a medicine, is obtained from the pods of Cassia Fistula, or pudding pipe tree, a native of Africa which is cultivated in both the East and West Indies. Some confusion occasionally arises from the fact that "cassia" is the generic name of an extensive genus of leguminous plants, which, in addition to various other medicinal products, is the source of the senna leaves which form an important article of materia medica.

Shakespeare's Plays Not "Best Seller" at Start

To find a publisher for a collected edition of Shakespeare's plays was probably not as easy as we who know the thousands of editions into which his works have gone might conclude, according to an article by Edwin E. Willoughby in Coronet.

In fact, five years after his death, only one printer was willing to publish his complete works, and had he refused to undertake the risk of printing the volume, we might have lost half of Shakespeare, for up to that time only half of his plays had been printed—in pamphlet form.

But the danger that we should lose the plays of Shakespeare was by no means over when that printer, William Jaggard, agreed to publish them. Because it seemed doubtful that such a venture would prove profitable, Jaggard published several other books during the next two years which he thought were more important, and left Shakespeare's plays lie around the shelves of his print shop collecting dust.

Had he not resumed his work from time to time during that period, it is quite possible that these plays never would have survived. But he finished the volume despite many difficulties and in 1623, it was offered to the world.

The book was evidently a moderate financial success, although it did not at first sell as rapidly as did many other books of the time.

Longest and Shortest Days

The longest and shortest days of the year are determined by the summer and winter solstices, the exact time being determined by mathematical calculation. The solstices are the times of the year when the sun is at its greatest declination, either north or south. For instance, the summer solstice is the time when the sun reaches its farthest point in its swing northward from the equator, which, accordingly, marks the longest day of the year. The year consists of approximately 365 1/4 days, and it is this fractional day of each year which causes the solstices to fluctuate. This is adjusted by the leap years. However, the longest and shortest days differ in length from the days immediately preceding and following them by only a fraction of a minute.

Narcissus Very Old

Long, long ago, in the dim history of ancient civilization, we read of the narcissus being found in paintings and carvings in Egyptian tombs. The same flower was frequently used by the Greeks in their ceremonial processions. In more modern times we find that as far back as 1829 the famous botanist Parkinson wrote a treatise on the narcissus, illustrating ninety varieties. It is a long and fascinating journey which this flower has taken through the ages down to the wonderful creations. The name narcissus was given to this botanical genus by Linnaeus, the great Swedish botanist, after a beautiful youth, who, Greek mythology relates, was transformed into this flower.

Crosscut and Ripaws

Crosscut saws are used to cut through the fibers of the material, while ripaws are used when the material is to be separated in a direction parallel with the fibers. In the latter case the teeth usually are large and are set, that is, alternate teeth are bent in opposite directions away from the strip proper, so that the cut made by the saw is somewhat wider than the thickness of metal.

Local Group Attended Roundup At Matador Ranch

Mayor Glad Snodgrass and Marvin English with three young boys, Robert English, Gene Arwine, and Tom Roy Snodgrass, attended a roundup held at the Matador Ranch Thursday of last week.

All enjoyed a lunch at the chuckwagon, and the boys were especially impressed with the procedure of the roundup, in which Mayor Snodgrass took an active part.

Miss Nora Speck was a visitor this week in the home of her sister, Mrs. Roy Patton.

GLACIER IN ALASKA IN BURST OF SPEED

Moves Mile a Month Instead of 10 to 20 Yards.

Washington, D. C.—A new "galloping" glacier is breaking all speed limits. The Black Rapids glacier, about 125 miles south of Fairbanks, Alaska, has been reported moving almost a mile a month instead of the more usual 10 to 20 yards.

"Just such a spurt of speed frightened mankind into a systematic study of glaciers, which was instituted only a century ago on the Aar glacier in Switzerland," says the National Geographic society. "The task of counting glacier 'noses' is not yet complete, but they are known to be going their sluggish way down the higher mountain peaks of every continent except Australia. In the Alps alone, 2,000 have been tabulated.

"Specimens of these Ice age souvenirs survive in six of the United States: Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Washington, Oregon, and California. Samples have been corraled in ten national parks, with the most spectacular exhibits in Mt. Rainier National park, where 27 glaciers extend their pale tentacles down the single peak; and in Glacier National park, where 60 small glaciers lie. Sequoia National park, more famous for its trees, has a couple of glaciers for that authentic primeval touch in the background. Yosemite valley, a perfect example of glacial action, still has glacier specimens to show how such valley-carving is done.

Alaska in Lead.

"The blue-ribbon specimens of the national parks' glacial exhibits are in Alaska, which raises the finest glacier crop outside the polar zones. Mt. McKinley National park, with the continent's highest peak, and the Glacier Bay National monument, where eleven glaciers reach the sea, have some spectacular types.

"The United States also claims possession, by virtue of recent explorations by Byrd and Ellsworth, of slices of the very largest glacier still in existence—the continental glacier doming Antarctica with an ice cap of great thickness. Here an area exceeding that of the United States is iced over, with such giant ice tongues licking into the ocean as Beardmore glacier, 10 to 20 miles wide and 125 miles long. The glacial superiority of Antarctica is appreciated in contrast with the size of glaciers elsewhere, most of which have a fraction of a mile as the largest dimension.

"Many are so small that they can be distinguished from glorified snowdrifts only by their motion. For glaciers, although composed of brittle ice weighing tons per square yard and rocklike with a crystalline structure similar to marble, actually move with a mysterious flow and not with a slide like an avalanche of snow. Markers on the surface reveal that the ice rivers 'flow' more rapidly in the center than on the sides, faster on top than beneath. But rapid movement for a glacier is usually slower than slow motion, for the rate is measured in inches per day. Some runways may cover 30 feet in a day, like Childs glacier in Alaska, but most of them would keep pace with the hour hand of a watch.

Melting Rapidly.

"The majority of glaciers are melting more rapidly than their rate of advance. Nunatak glacier in the Yukon receded six miles in 25 years. Illecillewaet in Canada retreats more reluctantly—a tenth of a mile in 14 years.

"Glaciers flourish virtually on the Equator, wherever peaks are high enough. The very tip-top of Africa, Mount Kilimanjaro (19,710 feet) in Tanganyika, is girdled with no less than ten glaciers, although it is volcanic. Indeed, South American glaciers are frequently tucked into the pockets of quiet volcanic peaks in the Andes; and at Cerro Alto, in Ecuador, a glacier has taken possession of a second-hand crater.

"A roll call of glacial giants would bring up the names of Pamir glacier, in the Himalayas, possibly 100 miles long; Hubbard glacier in Alaska, 90 miles long and in places 10 miles wide; and the ice cap of Svalhard (Spitzbergen).

"The method of a glacier's growth is more spectacular than the mighty-oak-from-little-acorn contrast. For the huge ice-rivers are merely overgrown colonies of snowflakes, which have become compact granular ice. For this reason, glacial ice and icebergs are not salty, as are the ice floes of frozen sea water."

Debtor Finds New Way to Settle Up

Olean, N. Y.—A debtor's Saturday night raffle had been revealed here when one of the creditors received a letter.

"Each Saturday night," the debtor wrote, "I make out a separate slip for the amount owed each creditor. These I put in a hat. Then I draw out one slip and pay that bill immediately."

The debtor closed by warning the creditor that another request for payment "like the last" and his slips would be withdrawn from the raffle.
