

The Floyd County Plainsman

Floydada, Floyd County, Texas, Thursday, January 20, 1938

Number 7

Volume No. 9

Production Given By Agent's Office

The large number of trench the county, dairymen are asking much milk can be produced and hay without grain and following facts and figures are:

will depend first upon the hay and silage fed, and secondly upon the quality of the hay and silage. According to Morrison's feed standard, a cow weighing 900 pounds requires 0.593 pounds of digestible protein and 7.23 pounds of digestible nutrients. A cow weighing 900 pounds will consume at least 15 pounds of corn or grain silage and 15 pounds of alfalfa. Corn silage contains 28.3 percent of dry matter, 1.3 percent of protein, and 18.7 percent of digestible nutrients per 100 pounds. Alfalfa hay contains 90.4 percent of dry matter, 10.6 percent of protein and 50.3 percent of digestible nutrients per 100 pounds. From this we find that 40 pounds of corn silage and 15 pounds of alfalfa hay contain 24.82 pounds of dry matter, 2.11 pounds of digestible protein, and 15.02 pounds of digestible nutrients. Subtracting the amount required for maintenance we have left 1.517 pounds of digestible protein and 7.79 pounds of digestible nutrients that can be produced from 29 pounds of corn silage and 15 pounds of alfalfa hay. We could expect a 900 pound cow to produce 22 pounds of milk per day when fed on 40 pounds of corn silage and 15 pounds of alfalfa hay.

All percent of the dairymen have legume hay. The major carbonaceous hay such as Sudan grass and prairie hay of this kind and corn silage would have sufficient total digestible nutrients to produce 19 pounds of 4.5 percent milk. However, we would only have enough to produce 9 pounds of 4.5 percent milk.

According to the farmers reporting to the county agent the average silage is $2.00 per ton and the cost of hay is $6.00 per ton. Basis the feed cost for a cow, 40 pounds grain sorghum silage and 15 pounds Sudan hay and alfalfa would cost 4.5 percent milk, 9 cents per day; or 22.5 percent of butterfat. It is considered that feed cost 50 percent of the total cost. It would make the total cost 37.5 percent of butterfat. It is obvious that this would not be profitable.

Getting 40 pounds of grain silage and 15 pounds of alfalfa and producing 22 pounds of milk would be profitable. The feed cost would be the day, but the feed cost per pound of butterfat would be 9 cents per day, or 22.5 percent of butterfat for the cow getting silage and Sudan grass. The total cost per pound of butterfat for the cow getting alfalfa would be 15 cents as against 37.5 cents for the cow getting Sudan grass.

Everyone will agree that those who have only grain sorghum and carbonaceous hay and some cottonseed meal so provide the protein necessary for extra production needed to be produced. Whether it would pay to concentrate to increase production beyond that given by cow fed silage and alfalfa depend upon the cost of the silage and the selling price of milk or milk products.

Dealer, Viewed New 112 In Amarillo Monday

H. O. Cline returned Monday afternoon from a meeting in Amarillo where the new Hudson 112 was unveiled for the first time in this vicinity. Geo. A. McManus of the Sales Department Division, C. L. Mason, District Manager for Northern New Mexico, The Texas Panhandle, and Oklahoma, and Whit Pryor, of the Parts and Service Division, were on hand for the ceremony and stated that the factory is already swinging into full production, and volume shipments of this new entry in the lowest price field are now being made.

The announcement of this new car, along with the fact that Hudson is restoring jobs to 6,000 men and spending $11,000,000 for material, created a nationwide stir last week. Coming at a time when news of layoffs and retrenchment had become common, the announcement was hailed as introducing a new optimistic note into the general business situation.

Mr. Cline, who, with other dealers from this part of the country, had his first look at the new car, states that a public showing of the new Hudson 112 will be made here. He states that the car is particularly outstanding in the matter of size, roominess and advance mechanical and safety features heretofore confined to higher priced cars.

The meeting at Cullum Motor Company, Amarillo, was one of 83 which will be held throughout the country from coast to coast during the next ten days to show the new car which has set a high mark in the matter of public interest for such announcements. Front page stories in the big dailies of the largest cities of the country acclaimed the announcement by president A. E. Harit of the Hudson Company, whose organization was doing its bit by putting "men and money back to work". Orders for the new cars have already reached the factory in such volume that steady production for the balance of the winter has already been assured, Mr. Cline stated.

Bill Snell Gets Acid In Eyes; Undergoes Treatment at Lubbock

Bill Snell received painful injury Thursday of last week when he got battery acid in his eyes. Some foreign matter, thought to be grit, lodged in the right eye along with the acid, necessitated treatment, which he underwent at a Lubbock sanitarium Monday of this week.

Bill was changing the radio battery when the accident occurred. It is believed that he got acid on his glove and then rubbed his eyes without removing the gloves. The presence of the foreign matter was also accounted for in this manner. Thinking that his eyes would soon clear up, he delayed treatment; but fearing the loss of the right eye, he went to Lubbock Monday and had the small bit of matter removed. He has continued to improve since that time, and believes that his eyes will soon be recovered.

Bone Beds of Bethlehem Yield Ancient Specimens

By E. N. FALLAIZE, Royal Anthropological Institute of London.

London. — The earliest known traces of man's existence in Palestine, and it may be, almost the earliest evidence of man in the whole world, have been discovered in deposits now known as the Bone Beds of Bethlehem.

The discovery was made by Miss E. Gardiner and Miss D. Bate excavating the deposits, in what appears to be a swallow hole near Bethlehem, on behalf of the Wellcome Marston archeological research expedition to the Near East.

The discovery of the swallow hole was made some few years ago when excavations were being made for a water supply. On the nature of the deposits becoming apparent, a concession to excavate was granted to J. L. Starkey on behalf of the Wellcome expedition. The actual examination of the deposits was entrusted to Miss Bate, the well-known authority of the British Museum of Natural History on paleontology, and Miss E. Gardiner, lecturer on geology of London university.

Important Animal Specimens.

The most striking specimen among the animal remains is the hinder part of the shell of a gigantic tortoise of a species not yet identified. With it were several detached plates of the shell and a huge leg bone. Although only the tail part of the shell was found whole, it measures well over two feet across, as compared with a little over two inches for the same part in a tortoise of about a foot in diameter. There is also part of the tooth of an elephant—the elephant was first identified in Palestine in evidence from the Bethlehem bone beds—and cheek teeth of the rhinoceros. Most important, however, from the view of the paleontologist and geologist is what appears to be part of a leg bone of a very small form of horse, possibly hipparion, the three-toed horse of the Tertiary geological epoch.

Very Early Human Artifacts.

In the same beds, and associated with these animal remains, were a number of worked flints of which a selection has been brought to England and is now available for examination by expert judges of man's earliest handiwork. There can, however, hardly be any doubt as to the human origin of these specimens. One of them appears to be a core, from which flakes have been struck, while the others show the characteristic forms and chipping found inolithic or pre-palaeolithic implements. Of those who have seen them, J. Reid Moir, the great authority in Great Britain on pre-palaeolithic implements, is confident as to their human origin and their early form.

There is every reason to say that at least the deposits are not later than Early Pleistocene, and it may be that they are Pliocene. This is certainly nearly as early as the earliest date assigned to the earliest implements found by Reid Moir in England, and approximately contemporary with Peking Man.

Fungus Found That Traps and Eats Small Worms

Chapel Hill, N. C.—A fungus, a sort of fifth cousin to the common bread mold, that captures and eats small worms, was recently described by Dr. J. N. Couch of the University of North Carolina. While insect-eating plants such as the Venus fly trap and the pitcher plant are quite well known, animal-catching fungi are rare.

The fungus grows in a thread-like form. Loops are spaced at intervals along the thread. These are the traps. When a worm sticks its head or tail into one of these loops it contracts, tightening up on the worm and holding it fast. At times a worm may be caught by two of the loops.

When the worm is firmly held, small threads grow out from the main thread. They penetrate the body of the worm and digest it. Dr. Couch was able to watch the capture and digestion of the prey.

Big Fish Eat Little Ones and Latter Tiny Things

Washington.—The bass or trout or pike you triumphantly bear home, or the more prosaic halibut or salmon you buy in the store on a Friday, is the end and culmination of a long line of complicated devourings. Few fish eat primary foods directly, as a cow eats grass or a pig eats corn. They eat smaller fish and other animal forms like shrimp and crayfish.

These in turn have eaten still smaller creatures—and so ad infinitum, or almost that far. For the end (or rather the beginning) of the chain consists of plants too small to see, which the first and smallest of the tiny animal forms devour, to get the food which this "water pasture" has made with the help of the sun.

Bill Snell Gets Acid In Eyes; Undergoes Treatment at Lubbock

Bill Snell received painful injury Thursday of last week when he got battery acid in his eyes. Some foreign matter, thought to be grit, lodged in the right eye along with the acid, necessitated treatment, which he underwent at a Lubbock sanitarium Monday of this week.

Bill was changing the radio battery when the accident occurred. It is believed that he got acid on his glove and then rubbed his eyes without removing the gloves. The presence of the foreign matter was also accounted for in this manner. Thinking that his eyes would soon clear up, he delayed treatment; but fearing the loss of the right eye, he went to Lubbock Monday and had the small bit of matter removed. He has continued to improve since that time, and believes that his eyes will soon be recovered.

County Agent Gives Method For Sugar Beet Raising

Numerous requests are being received by the County Agricultural Agent from farmers who wish to cooperate in the growing of sugar beets this year. It is the opinion of the County Agent that if a hundred acres could be grown in this section ranging from one to not more than five acres on a farm that it could be worked into a profitable crop. If sufficient acreage is produced there is a possibility at present that interested sugar beet companies will give growers a contract purchase price for their beets at planting time.

Everyone interested in this movement should register his intentions with the County Agricultural Agent and, as it is now time to begin to prepare for this crop, the type of soil should be given special consideration in the selection of land for sugar beet growing. The characteristic of soils are such that they can be made suitable for beet production by proper preliminary handling. The light loams are best adapted to sugar beet culture as they are easily worked and are least subject to serious crusting. The beets should be planted close to the irrigation well on as smooth plot of ground as possible. If new alfalfa land can be had use it and in case where a plot cannot be had where green manure has been turned under the next best is to supply additional plant food in soil is to spread well rotted barn yard manure at the rate of 12 tons per acre. After the manure has been spread over the plot it should be disked and thoroughly mixed into the soil before deep breaking of the land.

As beets are extremely deep feeders and as they should grow in the soil instead of protruding out of the soil when matured it is necessary that extreme pains should be taken in preparing the seed bed. After the barn yard manure has been applied and it has been thoroughly mixed into the soil by use of a disk plow the next step is to break the land with a mold board plow to the depth of 10 inches or more, the deeper the better. Immediately after breaking the land should be harrowed and continued to harrow or disk at regular intervals until the soil is prepared and worked to a fine texture. The soil must be leveled down until the plot is uniform all over.

At this time it will be necessary to give the plot a very heavy irrigation to thoroughly soak the soil. As soon as the soil is dry enough it should be harrowed again. If the plot is not perfectly smooth at this time it might be necessary to do additional work such as rolling, harrowing or disking as you must keep in mind that the success of your crop lies 75 percent in the preparation of a good seed bed.

The next step will be to furrow out with a cultivator making furrows not over 12 inches apart preparatory to irrigation. Then furrow out rows 40 inches apart with cultivator being careful not to make the furrows not over 1 1/4 inches deep. Then strew in the seed in the furrow by hand, at the rate of 8 pounds per acre, rows 40 inches apart. Be very careful not to cover the seed more than 1 1/4 inches, as the young beet plant is very slender and delicate it will be impossible for them to come through the soil if the seed are covered more than 1 1/4 inches deep. After the seed are covered keep in mind to do this operation so as to leave the ground uniform level after the seed are covered.

The seed should be planted after the danger of all frost is over and they should be planted as early as possible so as to give them a long growing season.

Immediately after the seed is covered straddle the row with cultivator making a furrow 10 inches on each side of each row, using only one sweep on each beam, these are irrigation furrows, then irrigate again just enough to sub, so as to thoroughly soak the seed.

As soon as the beets begin to come up so rows can be seen, cultivate lightly just enough to break the crust, being careful not to throw any dirt on the row.

Cultivate once a week or after each rain until the beet plants have 4 to 6 leaves. At this stage the beets are ready for thinning. Use a hoe not over 8 inches wide, striking entirely across the row, cutting out the block as wide as the hoe, leaving a block of beets two inches wide, then cut out another block, then by hand, pull out all but one plant, if two plants are left neither one will do any good, dirt should be pulled up around this lone beet to protect it from the sun and help hold it up. Immediately after this thinning is done the beets should be cultivated again leaving an irrigation furrow 10 inches on each side of each row and then irrigate right away.
