WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK—France is beginning to think she has another Clemenceau in Premier Daladier, and she still has Marshal Philippe Petain, one of the few survivors of the great generals of the World war.

It is quite possible that rope-skipping is mainly accountable for General Petain being alive, trim, fit and active at eighty-two. He is an inveterate rope-skiper, ejected from his apartment in 1914, because he jarred the plaster from the walls.

It was he who said, "They shall not pass"—on February 5, 1916, to be exact. He was the savior of Verdun, and, in this connection, a deft historian might discover that rope-skipping saved France.

Man Mountain Dean, the wrestler, running for the legislature in Georgia, is after only one seat, but he will need three or four if he is elected.

His career seems to have been mostly his wife's idea. Born Frank Leavitt, in New York, known as the "Hell's Kitchen Hillbilly," he did a hitch in the army and thereafter engaged in some desultory wrestling and mauling as a Soldier Leavitt.

He started grappling again, in Boston in 1933, with fame still eluding his half-nelson, when a German promoter took him on a tour of the Rhineland.

GEORGE E. Q. JOHNSON, the slight, self-effacing, bespectacled man who sent Al Capone to Alcatraz, is devoting his life to social betterment.

He broke the gangs in Chicago. His story of how he snared Capone, told before the senate judiciary committee, with its tales of traps and secret panels, was Grade A melodrama, but he didn't make it sound that way.

Premier Edouard Daladier ordered French aviators to begin a systematic patrol of the French border and bring down any foreign planes crossing the Spanish frontier into France.

Equally earnest and heart-searching is the message of the cross to the unbeliever. He knows he is a sinner (Rom. 3:23), he knows that "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23), and he knows that "neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12).

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for June 19 THE SUFFERING SERVANT

LESSON TEXT—Mark 15:22-26. GOLDEN TEXT—For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. Mark 10:45.

"A Christianity without a dying Christ is a dying Christianity. History shows us that the expansiveness and elevating power of the Gospel depend upon the prominence given to the sacrifice of the Cross. An old fable says that the only thing that melts adamant is the blood of a lamb. The Gospel reveals the precious blood of Jesus Christ, his death for us as a ransom, as the one power that subdues hostility and binds hearts to Him" (Alexander Maclaren).

We consider today that darkest of all days in the history of the world—when wicked men with cruel hearts and hands crucified the loving Son of God. But, thanks be to God, it was also the day when bright hope shone forth for sinful humanity, for in His death Christ bore our sins upon the tree, the veil was rent, the old sacrifices were set aside, and the "new and living way" was opened into the "holiest by the blood of Jesus" (Heb. 10:20).

The cross is not just an ornament to decorate the steeple of a church, or to adorn man. It speaks of the black horror of the cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" but it also tells of our God who "so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son" as its Redeemer.

I. Crucified—That We Might Live (vv. 22-28). The details of and circumstances surrounding the crucifixion are of deep interest to every Christian. We stand with Luther and weep as we see Christ's unspeakable agony, not only of body but of spirit, and we cry as did Luther, "For me, for me!" How can any believer contemplate the cross and withhold self, substance, or service from Christ?

II. Forsaken—That We Might Be Accepted (vv. 29-36). The railing, head wagging, and other abuse that men heaped upon Jesus as He hung on the cross, must have been a grievous thing for His tender loving heart to bear.

III. A Veil Rent—That We Might Enter (vv. 37-39). The death of Jesus was not the pitiful weakening of a human martyr. Here was the Son of God, crying with a loud voice (v. 37), giving up His spirit to the Father (Luke 23:46), declaring that the work of redemption was "finished."

As a visible indication of that part—and as a declaration that the old dispensation of law had given place to the dispensation of grace, God tore the temple veil in twain. Only He could have done it. No man could have torn this sixty-foot long, twenty-foot wide, and inch-thick curtain from top to bottom. It had hung in the temple to keep all but the High Priest out of the Holy of Holies, and he entered with fear and trembling but once a year as the representative of the people. Now all this is changed. We have now, "brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil." Therefore, "let us draw near with a true heart and full assurance of faith" (Heb. 10:19-22).

HOW to SEW By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

EITHER crochet cotton or wool yarn in two or more colors may be used for a knitting bag or purses of woven fillet crochet. The foundation is made in the lightest color. The knitting bag in the sketch is white fillet with navy blue threads woven through, as shown. The zipper purse and vanity pouch are eru with carmine and Delft blue woven stripes. The plain spaces between the stripes are made by weaving through the fillet mesh with matching thread.

To start the fillet foundation, make a chain the length of your bag, then chain 5 more, turn, and make a double crochet in the 6th stitch from the hook. Chain 2, skip 2 and make a double crochet in next stitch. Repeat to end of row, then chain 5 and turn. *Make a double crochet in the top of the last double crochet. Chain 2. Continue across the row, then chain 5 and turn. Repeat from * until you have enough of the fillet mesh to make your bag or purse. The weaving is done with double thread and a large blunt needle. Work across and then back through each row of the fillet mesh as shown. When a new weaving thread is started, hide the ends in the edge of the crochet.

"Death Headed North"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:
Now this is the story of an adventure that almost any one of us might have got into. Anyone who has ever ridden on a railroad train has taken a chance on finding himself in just such a terrifying situation. As luck would have it, it happened to Fenton Barrett of Shaker Hollow, South Salem, N. Y. And, boys and girls, I wish it to be distinctly understood that I am very glad it happened to Fent Barrett, and not to me.

Fent Barrett is an actor. He had just finished a run in a successful musical show on Broadway not long before he starred in the thriller he is going to tell us about now. When the show closed, he went south for a vacation, but he hadn't been there long when he got a wire telling him to come back to New York and start rehearsals in a new production.

Fent left that night for Washington, and in Washington he got aboard the train for New York—the train that was to carry him smack into the most thrilling moment of his life.

Fire Started in the Wash Room.

It was a hot day, the first of August, 1923. Fent decided to ride in the smoker where he could take his coat off and be comfortable. Usually the smoker is up front, next to the baggage car, but in this case it was the last car on the train.

The train bowled along over the countryside, without any interruption, and without any hint of the drama that was to come. It was getting near the Big City, and the train porter came in and began cleaning up the car. Fent was sitting in the third seat from the front, and was watching the porter idly as he moved about. The train was coming into

The Whole Wash Room Was Roaring With Flame.

Elizabeth, N. J., and the porter, with a large bundle of old newspapers, had just gone into the men's wash room.

"That porter," says Fent, "had been in the wash room only a few seconds when suddenly he came leaping into the aisle. As he did, I saw the reflection of flames on the highly polished door. The porter made a desperate attempt to close the door, but by this time the whole wash room was roaring with flame, and he was beaten back."

Fent jumped to his feet. He was one of seven men in the car including the conductor and porter. Before he could get out of his seat, the flames were almost on him, and he had barely time to grab his coat and brief case and dash to the rear of the car.

Couldn't Stop the Blazing Train.

Meanwhile, with all the windows open, the blaze spread through the car like wild fire. As Fent reached the rear of the car he looked back, just in time to see the conductor reach for the signal rope to stop the train. The rope was blazing, even as he grabbed for it. As he pulled on it, it snapped in two. Their only way of communicating with the engineer—the only means of stopping that speeding train—was gone.

"We all crowded back to the rear platform," says Fent, "and divided three on each side. The porter had climbed over the iron gate and was hanging to the back end of the train for dear life. By this time half the car was on fire, and with us in the last car and the train doing sixty-five miles an hour, it certainly looked bad."

"One of the passengers became hysterical and the conductor had a hard time trying to keep him from jumping off the back end of the train. We were all choking and almost overcome by smoke and the fumes of burning paint and varnish. I felt myself getting panicky and dropped to my knees and put my nose to the floor, trying to get a good breath of air."

The fire was all through the car by this time—streaming right down the aisle and shooting out the door onto the rear platform. Fent felt something move beneath him. It was that iron lid which covers the steps. The porter had loosened it and was motioning the three men who were standing on it to step back so he could swing it open. They squirmed around until they could get it up, and then they crowded down onto the steps.

All Jumped at 30-Mile Speed.

The porter screamed to them not to jump. The flames crowded them harder now, and Fent was kept busy dodging broken glass and tongues of fire that licked back at him through the rear windows. The heat was so terrific that he made up his mind to jump soon, rather than be burned to death.

And then—the brakes went out. The train started to jerk and slow down. It slowed from sixty-five to fifty—to forty. When it was going about thirty, Fent jumped, and the rest of them followed.

"I was thrown up against the bank," Fent says, "but I wasn't badly hurt. A few scratches and bruises—but I was too glad to be off that burning car to pay any attention to a little thing like that. The train went on for half a mile before it came to a stop, and we ran and caught up with it. By that time, the car we had been in was just a red-hot steel frame. Not a window or a seat left. And they were having quite a time trying to disconnect it from the rest of the train because the steel was so hot the brakemen couldn't touch the couplings. We got into another car, I fell into the seat exhausted, for it was then that I first realized what I had been through."

Florida Gardens

The Ravine gardens of Palatka, Fla., are located in a natural amphitheater covering about 85 acres. The gorge extends for five miles, festooned in tropical shrubbery and azaleas of many distinct varieties. Along the slopes of the ravine, which rise to a height of 120 feet, are thousands of palms interspersed with native trees. A spring-fed brook, with flower-decked islets, winds along the floor of the gorge.

The Grotte de Dargilan, one of the underground caverns of Millau, in south central France, has a cavern, 400 feet long, 200 feet wide and 100 feet high, contains a mosque, a church and a belfry that is 75 feet high.

Elephant Would Rather Wallow

Months of patient training is needed to teach circus elephants to push circus wagons out of mud, for the elephant would much rather wallow in it.

Tung Oil Long in Use

For centuries the Chinese have used tung oil (or Chinawood oil) in mixtures to paint and calk their ships and boats. It gradually spread into world commerce. Portuguese spice traders introduced it into Europe in the Sixteenth century. The oil began coming to the United States in the late 1860's. When its quick drying and waterproofing qualities were discovered, demand for it increased.

Indians of southern Mexico have a unique bin for storing shelled corn against weather and the depredations of the harvester ant. It is built in the shape of a cup and saucer, with a thatched roof, and the saucer part is filled with water.

FATHER'S DAY

Sunday, June 19th, several millions of Americans will join in observation of Father's Day. The day is the 24th birthday of Dad's day, Congress having endorsed the celebration in 1914. Mrs. John Bruce Dodd originated the day in 1910.

It would be well for us to remember the man who pays the bills to celebrate the 85 special days and weeks in the year. It seems hardly right that we honor our mothers and overlook 'Pop', 'The Old Man', 'The Boss', 'Dad', 'The Colonel' or whatever we may call him.

He's not a bad sort after all. Of course we accompanied him on several trips to the proverbial wood shed, but we went fishing and on picnics with him when he bought us soda pop and candy that he could not afford.

Don't forget, too, how he wore the same suit two years that we might have a new one—so as to keep up with the gang. We regard father too much as the fellow who beats our checks to the bank, and then when we return home from school he congratulates us on a task well done.

Let's remember Him Father's Day.

NOT MUCH DIFFERENCE

Modern merchandising has reached the point that there no longer is a great amount of difference between the small towns and cities. Latest styles in clothing, and newest innovations in every line of merchandise are now available in even the small hamlets of the country, where a few years ago goods was not received until the 'new' had worn off.

Local merchants have full lines of Nationally Advertised merchandise that are as new and as modern as any in the large cities. Perhaps the cities have larger stores, but they have no better clothing, groceries or household supplies.

Another point to be noticed is that prices are generally lower in the smaller towns due to the fact that expenses for business operation are not so great. The important thing is to spend your money at home, where you made it.

STRICKLY CONFIDENTIAL

STRICKLY CONFIDENTIAL—Very soon now the Floydada Softball League will bring to a close the most successful season in the history of the league. Unusual interest has been shown this year—with a large crowd of fans in attendance at the games. Softball is economical entertainment that a great many people enjoy.

STRICKLY CONFIDENTIAL—Floydada's fourth and fifth of July celebration should prove something—either the town can promote a celebration without the use of outside talent—or it can't get the job done. I am intending to watch carefully the results of the fourth and fifth celebration—and by so doing definitely establish a point about which I have often wondered.

STRICKLY CONFIDENTIAL—Vacations will be starting in a few weeks—pleasure seekers will swarm over the resorts and playgrounds of the country—sacrificing a smooth, white skin and calm comfort for a good case of sunburn and a hard ben in a mountain cabin—after the sunburn I received recently while swimming I don't know whether the goal is worth the effort or not—there's nothing quite so annoying as having some one 'pop' your suspenders against a well-done sunburn back.

STRICKLY CONFIDENTIAL—Everyone for his own choice on the place for vacations—some like the mountains, some say the coast, a number want to travel and others had rather stay home and work in the garden. Personally I'll take the mountains—sure can't beat the beauty of a sunset in the hills—unless you noticed the Sunday afternoon sunset, June 5. That was the most beautiful scene I have witnessed on the Plains. I believe that this year is a very nice time to stay home—what with me having no money and all that sort of thing.

STRICKLY CONFIDENTIAL—He is the meanest man—he is the kind of guy that would smear cheese over the back yard fence so the mice would distract old Tom's attention—when he came a woin—he is the type that would come over to your house and borrow your Plainsman and be so 'snug' he wouldn't relax enough to spend fifty cents for the crumby sheet for a year—I can bear up under all that but when he has the nerve to give me a remedy for sunburn (when I have just heard all the 342 other remedies)—then I couldn't stand it—the reason I haven't mentioned this sunburn before is because I wanted to recover before people started patting me on the back and complimenting me on this column.

STRICKLY CONFIDENTIAL—The following notice was handed me by a candidate:

NOTICE TO ALL VOTERS

1. Don't ask me how I stand on the beer question.
2. Don't tell me you are going to vote for me. (The suspense is worth the price of waiting.)
3. Don't tell me the faults of my opponents. If they have no faults—how in the world could I get the office?

 4. Don't ask me what religious belief I follow—as I have already pledged allegiance to every church organization that I know of.

5. Don't dare suggest I tell you what I think of the present administration—If you know enough to start an argument—you know enough to be elected to some office.

6. Don't ask the editor of the Plainsman to tell you who gave him this campaign material as he probably thought of the idea himself.

7. When I get in office—please manage to pay your taxes as soon as possible when due—I need the money and after all—Am I not your public servant?

Your vote, influence and invitations to pie suppers appreciated.

STRICKLY CONFIDENTIAL—Yours until Oden's and Rotary get out of the cellar in the Softball League—Strick.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL By Carter Field

Washington.—There is no discounting the jubilation in New Deal circles over the present status of the TVA investigation by a special congressional committee.

But so far that is the only loss the New Deal has sustained, whereas the effect of the first few days of the investigation has been to offset, to at least a small degree, the unfavorable public reaction which came when the President "fired" Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the TVA.

No one familiar with the TVA situation has actually changed his views as a result of anything so far disclosed or likely to be brought out prior to exhaustive inquiry.

The important thing that has happened is that the first salvos of the two sides have been fired, and from a publicity standpoint, the Lillenthal side came out with less damage. General feeling in Washington is that the public, and the newspaper editors, were disappointed at the lack of fire in Arthur Morgan's attack, at his unwillingness to call names and use epithets which would make good headlines.

Morgan's carefully prepared case, the general impression here is, is not calculated to fire the man in the street with a desire to take a club to Lillenthal. It is not even calculated to make the "milkman in Omaha" read through it. Quite the contrary. If any candidate for the Presidency could be assured of the votes of every man and woman who did not vote through Dr. Morgan's attack, he would not even lose Maine and Vermont.

Morgan Is Mild This might be true in any event, no matter what Dr. Morgan had said in his first appearance before the committee. But far more important was that he did not use any language which would make a real fighting headline, which the man in the street would read. There is a general feeling, even among Dr. Morgan's warmest supporters in congress, that he has fired most of his ammunition, that what is to come is detail, and that the newspapers would not have printed as much of his first statement as they did had it not been for the marvelous advance notices, notably in the sensational refusal of Arthur Morgan to present his full case to the President.

The general impression, also, is that Lillenthal is so much cleverer than Morgan at this business of presenting his case, either to an investigating committee or to the public, that there is little expectancy that in the general fighting to come Arthur Morgan will have much chance.

The one episode that was expected to inflame the public was the attempt of Senator Berry to collect a few millions from the government on his marble claims. This is now bogged down to a contest as to whether Arthur Morgan or Lillenthal showed better judgment in his plans to protect the government.

Stiffer Taxes Coming Much stiffer taxes next year are a certainty. This is true despite some very misleading inferences made recently because budget predictions were shown to be not very far wrong. What was omitted, and what made these stories misleading, was that the budget forecasts were that the deficit would be large. They happened to be right.

and the end of the present calendar year could change this result. The point is that 1937 earnings of corporations, and 1937 private incomes, were excellent for the first nine months of the year, that is, excellent compared with anything since 1929. But in the last three months of 1937 the falling off became sharply manifest.

Incomes Reduced Reduction of dividend and bond coupon payments at the present time hits the income tax returns to follow much harder than was the case in 1929 and through to 1933. At that time the Treasury did not tax normal individual income rates on dividends. It was assumed, up until a later tax bill, that the British system, holding that the corporation income tax had covered the "normal" individual income tax on dividends, was fair.

There is another important point to be remembered in estimating tax receipts. If a rich man's stock falls to pay $100,000 of expected dividends, because the corporation in question did not earn the money, then the Treasury loses more than three-quarters of the money. The government fails to collect the corporation income tax, which was 15 per cent, and is now, under the new bill, 18 per cent.

But then the whole amount is subject to the top bracket of that rich man's income. So when a corporation's income declines, as far as the Treasury is concerned the depression skims off the cream, leaving only skimmed milk.

The other factor in the certainty that taxes must be increased is that virtually everything that is waiting for action by the federal government contemplates greater spending, not smaller. This is true of the navy, of the army, of the merchant marine, of trust busting plans, and of social security.

Even the attempt at ear marking the relief appropriation was not an economy move, but merely one to prevent the administration from withholding pork from individuals in the house and senate that it wished to punish.

F. D. R. Still Strong Planned economy of business, with close government supervision of production and competition on much the same pattern as Secretary Henry A. Wallace is now regulating agriculture, will be pressed strongly by left wingers as the next step toward "recovery." President Roosevelt is disposed to go along with them, though questioning the political expediency of such a move on the eve of the congressional elections.

Right wing advisers hope that victory for the wage-hour bill may dissuade him, but more economic planning is the prospect at the tag end of a session in which the President was turned down on government reorganization and his favorite tax theories, with an indication of more independence in congress and more turning-to-the-right by the government in spite of Roosevelt's personal views. It is the prospect because of utter failure of pump-priming and credit inflation to give business and employment the lift that the left wingers predicted. It is the prospect also because, despite the failure of the Roosevelt recovery measure and despite the desire for independence on Capitol Hill, various tests show that Roosevelt still stands strong with the voters—that he has the power to defeat, if not the power to elect.

Conservative independents on Capitol Hill are distinctly worried by numerous developments, hence are not only afraid themselves but are gaining few recruits. Florida nominated a New Dealer and a Townsend plan advocate over an independent conservative. Florida in a run-off election proceeds to nominate a Townsendsite and a New Dealer for the seat in the house which that independent conservative now occupies. Oregon Democrats beat a sitting governor for re-nomination largely because he had insisted on preserving order in labor disputes.

Faces Bad Situation Washington faces the unprecedented situation of a bad depression and increasing unemployment actually helping the administration in power. Instead of crushing it as has invariably been the case in this country's political history, Congress construes the various votes and polls as a mandate to the President to proceed with economic experimentation. The only question is whether the President will "press his luck" and go forward with plans he has long contemplated and approved. These include plans to avoid increasing capacity to the point where profits are turned into "additions to plant which are now standing stark and idle" as he said in his 1932 acceptance speech. Also plans to prevent unfair competition, monopolistic methods in business, collusion to produce identical bids on contracts, movements of plant to reach cheaper labor for exploitation. In short, plans to attain the ideal of planned economy with no depression, no booms, no underprivileged, no speculative profits of any kind, and very small profits for all business units.

Strange Facts

Movies Catch Fire-Rain

A RAIN of fire, thousands of degrees in temperature, fell upon the surface of the sun. Sprays of flaming atoms shot up 150,000 miles from the sun's surface. A terrific explosion took place in which part of the sun's atmosphere was lifted 600,000 miles above the sun's surface. On the earth there were clear skies and cloudy skies, sunshine and rain. Even the most sensitive radio waves were not disturbed. Yet one instrument, made by man, recorded this rain of fire.

The spectroheliograph is the instrument invented by scientists which has made possible these amazing photographs of fire-rain. This instrument is essentially a spectroscope with a slit which transmits only one line of the spectrum. A photographic plate is moved across the slit at a rate equal to the sun's apparent rate of passage, the sun's light entering the slit through the object glass or mirror of a telescope. On September 17, 1937, the eye of the solar camera received and recorded celestial fireworks in motion pictures.

These solar pictures were shown for the first time in Philadelphia at the recent annual meeting of the American Philosophical society. They are the work of Dr. Robert R. McMath. The rain of hot fire falling upon the sun, revealed for the first time by improved solar photography, presents the greatest mystery. No one knows why it rains fire on the sun, or where the fire-rain comes from. Yet pictures have been taken of it, falling in great curving spirals. It is as mysterious to modern scientists as rain water was to our primitive ancestors.
