Weekly News Review
Hitler Woos Central Europe
With Overtures to Hungary
By Joseph W. LaBine

Foreign

At Nickelsdorf, Austria, an imposing triumphal arch was raised. Vienna's railway station was decorated. At Kiel a 10,000-ton battleship awaited launching. Thus, feeling like a girl with several ardent suitors, Hungary's Regent Nicholas Horthy sped in glory last week from Budapest to Berlin.

Not since Benito Mussolini visited Adolf Hitler last spring had Berlin made such plans. Indeed the same trappings that greeted Il Duce now greeted Admiral Horthy. But Adolf Hitler had more than benign friendship in mind.

Hungary lies directly in the path of Germany's "drive to the east" in which she would swallow Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Jugo-Slavia, thereby unifying all central Europe. As Nicholas Horthy closeted himself with Hitler, rumors of proposals began flying. Rumors: (1) Joint proposal by Italy and Germany to incorporate Hungary in the Rome-Berlin axis; (2) proposal that Hungary leave the League of Nations, declaring the Trianon treaty of 1920 void; (3) offer by Italy and Germany for extended Hungarian minority rights in Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia; (4) German-Hungarian economic union.

greeted Admiral Horthy. But Adolf Hitler had more than benign friendship in mind.

Mean while, in western Kentucky, President Joseph Ozanic of the Progressive Mine Workers of America gave John Lewis another headache. Four thousand miners, who left C. I. O.'s United Mine Workers three years ago, took out membership in A. F. of L.'s Progressive body.

Final quarrel was that between Francis Gorman, United Textile Workers president, and Sidney Hillman, head of Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. Last week Gorman asked his followers to desert C. I. O. because of "dictatorship and communism."

Canada

Fortnight ago, the economic ties linking Canada and the U. S. were forged tighter at Kingston, Ontario. There, Franklin Roosevelt promised U. S. aid should Canada ever find herself at war. There, too, he spoke bravely for the long-argued St. Lawrence waterway project. Last week, as Franklin Roosevelt settled back at Hyde Park, these bits of Canadian-American news made headlines:

- (1) Ontario's Premier Mitchell Hepburn bluntly told Prime Minister MacKenzie King he would oppose the St. Lawrence project until Canada's railroad losses stop.
- (2) Observers predicted America's neutrality act would be revised to insert Canada among Western Hemisphere nations excepted from the act's applications.
- (3) Washington continued negotiations for an international highway to Alaska, passing through Canadian soil, which would probably be built with $14,000,000 PWA funds.

Domestic

New York rushed to work one morning last week. All subway stations were crowded; at one the crowd was too great. Pulling away from this station a train stopped momentarily to free a woman caught in the door. Behind, unable to stop, rushed a second train piloted by Motorman Salvatore Cota. His train crashed into the rear of the first, telescoping. Then came explosion, darkness, panic. Half-hour later authorities were able to report two dead, 40 injured. As Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia looked on, Motorman Cota had his leg amputated before he could be released from the wreckage.

War

In Paris, Premier Edouard Daladier jolted France from his vacation sluggishness to demand abolition of the 40-hour week "in the interests of military and economic defense." In Germany, Adolf Hitler's giant war maneuvers entered their second week. In both Rome and London, eyes focused from distant China to nearby Spain, theaters of 1938's two wars. The war picture:

- Having set Britain's Neville Chamberlain back on his ear by refusing a proposal for evacuating foreign soldiers, Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco opened his drive to end Spain's civil war before a third winter sets in. Aimed at loyalist Barcelona were crack Navarrese and Italian troops, while overhead rebel planes rained death. Along the Ebro river front, 5,000 government militiamen were captured. But biggest news of the Spanish war came not from Spain, but from Switzerland.

Politics

"Purge" crept into John Public's vocabulary last week with devastating speed. More than ever before, U. S. voters looked at New York, Maryland and Georgia where reside Franklin Roosevelt's three favorite "purgers." Democratic legislators he wants ousted in next month's primaries because they oppose certain New Deal measures. Last week these senators caused this news:

- In Georgia, Purgee Walter F. George drew support from James W. Arnold, Republican national committeeman who asked G. O. P. partisans to vote for George against his Roosevelt opponent, Lawrence S. Camp. Two days earlier, RFC Attorney Edgar B. Dunlap was asked to resign because he was stumping for George's re-election.
- In Maryland, Purgee Millard E. Tydings thundered into a microphone that his commonwealth "will not permit her star in the flag to be purged from the constellation of the states."

Labor

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor had two reasons to be happy last week. Smallest reason was that Franklin Roosevelt agreed the Wagner labor act must be amended. Biggest reason was that John Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization was embroiled in several family quarrels.

Several weeks ago, Homer Martin, president of C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers, expelled five vice presidents for alleged commu-

Crime

At stake in a Manhattan courtroom last week was an Owosso, Mich., boy's chance to be Republican candidate for governor of New York. The boy was District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey. His chance lay in conviction of James J. Hines, Tammany leader, for alleged conspiracy in the flourishing 100 million-dollar-a-year "numbers" racket, once conducted by the late Arthur (Dutch) Schultz Fliegenheimer.

Fortnight ago, the trial opened as witness after witness added to the pile of evidence that made New York bookies bet 5 to 1 on Hines' conviction. One-time associate of Fliegenheimer, George Weinberg told of attending a meeting where Hines was placed on the payroll at $500 to $1,000 a week as "fixer." Julius ("Red") Williams, Negro, reputed grand jury testimony linking Hines and Weinberg, was promptly slapped back in jail. "Big Joe" Ison, another Harlemite, told how $125 was deducted from his weekly racket salary for "Jimmy Hines' club." But the expose Tom Dewey waited for did not begin until one Alexander Pompey took the stand.

Shortly before the trial opened, Dewey filed a bill of particulars accusing his predecessor, William E. Dodge, and Magistrate Hulon Capshaw of connection with the numbers racket. When Alexander Pompey told last week how Magistrate Capshaw's court had dismissed 12 of his workers who had been caught red-handed, it seemed Dewey's charge had come. But solemn Judge Ferdinand Pecora ruled there was improper foundation for bringing Capshaw's name into the case.

Still in high spirits, Dewey polished up his star witness who was expected to blow the case wide open. The witness: "J. Richard ('Dixie') Davis, legal adviser and successor to Schultz, who was indicted with Hines but pleaded guilty and turned state's evidence. He was one of the few persons likely to know where Dutch Schultz got his tremendous political influence.

Fliers have long known that safest, fastest air travel is in the stratosphere where "bumpy" weather disappears and storms never occur. Already perfected is mechanism to keep motors and passengers supplied with oxygen in such a rarified atmosphere, but it weighs so much that commercial travel at these heights is not practicable.

Last month, Mayo Foundation's Dr. Richard Lovelace flew non-stop from Minneapolis to Los Angeles in sub-stratosphere, his crew equipped with light-weight masks that permitted free action. Last week, Globe Girdler Howard Hughes pulled even a better stunt.

One evening his round-the-world plane took off from Glendale airport with a crew of four, rose immediately to 25,000 feet. A few hours later he radioed Kansas City airport while passing overhead. Next morning, 10 hours and 34 minutes out of Glendale, his ship landed in New York. Average altitude for the trip: 20,000 feet.

Though not phenomenal, the overnight hop demonstrated what may be expected of stratosphere flights. All four fliers breathed through oxygen masks attached to a single cylinder.

Miscellany

At Pittsburgh, the corpse of Rev. Joseph A. Frey lay in a funeral parlor, surrounded by members of his congregation. For hours on end a weary photographer kept his camera focused on the dead man's face. Reason for this eerie affair was that Reverend Frey told his flock he would "come back," first with a spiritual manifestation, later with a physical one. The photographer's duty: to catch "spiritual emanations." Said he: "It is possible there will be half a dozen faces of the Reverend Frey's dead friends in the picture when it is developed."

● At Monticello, N. Y., Mayor Louis de Hoyos banned shorts as feminine attire except to "old women, mothers and ladies of mature age." His reasoning: "If I know anything about women, it won't ever come to that."

Lesson for September 4

SAMUEL: SPIRITUAL REVIVAL

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 7:3-13. GOLDEN TEXT—Prepare your hearts unto the Lord, and serve him only. 1 Samuel 7:3.

"Revivals are costly. The spiritual awakening which our country so much needs must begin with a spiritual deepening which the church so much needs. There is a price to be paid... Strange gods must be put away, gods of worldly pleasure, worldly ambition, love of ease and self-gratification. It is the unwillingness to pay the price that keeps us from the richness and power of the full spiritual life" (Prof. L. M. Lowell).

Israel had come to the place where the people recognized that they were on the brink of national disaster. They knew they had come to the end of the trail, and were ready to do something about it.

I. Return Unto the Lord (v. 3).
Samuel appears in his first public ministry to call on his people to return to the Lord. Back of that public act is the history of a godly life and devoted service to the Lord and to His nation. Such a man can consistently urge others to turn to God.

The response of the people was wholehearted. They were thoroughly sick of their sin and separation from the favor of God. The earnest of their sincerity was their obedience to the admonition of Samuel that they turn from idolatry.

II. Put Away False Gods (vv. 3, 4).

Israel had learned from their heathen neighbors to worship their false gods. These they must put away if God was to be able to bless them. The same prerequisite to spiritual revival exists today. But some may say, we do not worship heathen gods. Perhaps not, and yet one is astonished at the close similarity between the ritual and worship of some secret cults and orders and the ancient religions of heathendom.

The fact is that we have set up many new gods—money, fashion, social position, and what not. The command needs to go out again through God's messengers, "Put away the foreign gods."

III. Gather Together and Pray (vv. 5, 6).

Spiritual life thrives on the gathering together of God's people. The crisis in Israel was met by a great convocation of the people. We need to revive the great soul-stirring religious gatherings of a generation ago. We can get plenty of people together for a prize fight, a football match, or an auto race, but where are the people who should be in our churches?

"I will pray," said Samuel. He was a great intercessor. (See 1 Sam. 15:11; Ps. 99:6; Jer. 15:1.) Revival never comes without a history of faithful intercession on the part of those whose hearts were really burdened. Ask yourself, How much have I really prayed for a revival in my church, my community, and my nation? If I should begin to pray in earnest, would not God hear me and answer?

IV. God Will Save Us (v. 8).

"Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save, neither is his ear heavy that it cannot hear" (Isa. 59:1). "Thus saith the Lord... have I no power to deliver?" (Isa. 50:1, 2). God saved Israel and delivered them out of the hands of their enemies. The Philistines, seeing them gathered together to pray, assumed that they were preparing to fight and attacked. In the previous battle at that very spot (1 Sam. 4:1-10) Israel had fought with the weapons of men and been disgracefully defeated. Now they fought with the weapon of prayer and faith in God, and great was the victory.

America is valiantly battling against the social and economic problems of these distressing days, but one fears that all too often the weapons are those of the arm of flesh which will fail us. Let us look up instead of to one another. "God will save us" (v. 8).

V. Ebenezer (v. 12).
Our forefathers, familiar with the truth of Scripture, used biblical words in naming their children. The present generation all too often know the names simply as the strange signatures on old letters. The word "Ebenezer" might well merit a bit of a revival itself. Here Israel had met a disastrous defeat. They were broken by it and had become an almost hopeless people. Now God had given them victory in the very same spot and they raised a stone of remembrance of God's help. The word "Ebenezer" means "stone of help," but also carries with it the meaning of Samuel's word, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us" (v. 12).

There is an inspiring word of hope here for every troubled soul. You may, like Israel, have fallen into sin. Your life may be defeated. You may be utterly discouraged. Return to the Lord, put away sin, gather with God's people, pray, and God will give you victory, even at the very point of former defeat.

HOW TO SEW
by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Save time with mock smocking.

IF SMOCKING seems to be time consuming, here is a short cut that saves hours. The first step is to shirr the material by machine. Loosen the tension slightly and stitch in straight rows; then pull up the bobbin thread to gather the material.

You will note in the sketch that some of the simple hand stitches are made over two rows of gathers and the others over a single row. Much of the beauty of mock smocking depends upon the spacing of the rows. The double rows of gathers in the sketch, No. 2 and 4, are 3/4-inch apart. The space between these and the single rows should be about 3/4-inch.

Another important point is the choice of colors and an interesting variety of stitches. In the arrangement shown here, rows 1, 3 and 5 are made in the darkest color by back-stitching over the gathers as in row 5 and then working loop-stitches through the back-stitches as in row 1. Row 2 is a version of plain feather stitching, and row 4 is done in the Cretonne stitch. Variations of all of these stitches and dozens of others that will be new to you and your friends are fully illustrated in Book 2 offered herewith.

Strange Facts
Boy's Name on Coronation Chair

THE famous coronation chair in which all English kings sit for their coronation bears the name of a British school boy. The boy's name is carved in the oak seat. Tradition tells that two Westminster school boys made a bet. P. Abbot bet that he would sleep alone all night in Westminster abbey. The boy wanted to prove that he had stayed in the great dark church which contains the royal dust of Edward the Confessor, the bones of Chaucer, Sir Isaac Newton and many other famous men of Britain. In the chapel of Edward the Confessor is the oak coronation chair. In the seat is carved "P. Abbot slept in this chair January 4, 1801."

Only once has the coronation chair been taken from the abbey. The chair dates from the Fourteenth century. Beneath the seat is the famous stone of scone or "Stone of Destiny." It was brought from Scone, Scotland, by Edward the first. On it Scottish kings were crowned until Edward I brought it to London in 1296. The one occasion when the coronation chair was taken from the abbey was during the time of Oliver Cromwell. It was moved to Westminster hall when Cromwell was made lord of Great Britain. The same famous chair was used in May when George VI was crowned in Westminster abbey.

Humor From the Soil
There is a kind of sturdy humor in the country that the city does not know. A humor that grows straight out of the soil. There may be wit in the city, but wit deals with words; humor with life.

Save Ironing.—If sheets are hung on the line dripping wet the weight of the water pulls them down and removes most of the wrinkles. They may then be folded neatly without ironing when dry.

Hanging Pictures.—Pictures should be hung about at the level of the eye, but since they also are to be hung in relation to the furniture groups, it is sometimes better to hang one below eye level over a low table or desk, or above eye level over a high chest.

Left-Over Juice.—Save the juice from canned pineapple and the liquid from maraschino cherries to use when making fruit punch.

Perspiration Marks.—To remove perspiration marks from white silk, mix some bicarbonate of soda to a stiff paste with cold water. Spread thickly on the parts and leave for an hour or so before washing. This will also remove scorch marks if they are not very bad.

Floyd County Tenant Purchase Farmers Progress

Floyd County farmers selected for tenant purchase under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenancy Act are showing progress in farming methods and are busy planning permanent home improvements. The local county committee, Oscar L. Allen, Fred M. Battey, and Joe M. Smith, working with farm security administration officials selected four tenant families to purchase farm homes during the past few months of this fiscal year. Families selected have bought 220 to 240 acre farms which were determined economical units.

This program is administered by farm security administration whereby loans are made on 40 year time at 3% interest to purchase farms at the best cash price possible. Additional money is available to make necessary and adequate improvements for home convenience and economy. As security a deed of trust is given on the land but no down payment is required of the family buying the farm.

It appears the usual landlord's portion of crops or rents will retire the loan over a period of years.

One of the clients, James J. Smith, Jr., is busy constructing a four stall barn with concrete foundation and floor. He plans to help meet living expenses with the sale of cream from eight Jersey cows. It is planned a 29-30 poultry house and a fenced one acre sudan patch will accommodate one hundred fifty white leghorn hens. In addition two brood sows and two brood mares will complete the livestock setup. Mr. Smith has been farming in the county for several years on rented land, but has been able to purchase necessary machinery for farming purposes.

This family has two small daughters in school. Mr. Smith has been fortunate in being able to rent land each year, but most tenant farms are badly in need of repair and have no food or feed storage equipment or home conveniences.

Families buying farms through Tenant Purchase Division of F. S. A. are proud of their homes in Floyd County, and as the name implies this program appears to be "Farm Security."

Additional appropriations were made this year to Floyd, Hall, Wheeler, Randall and Hansford Counties to carry on the Bankhead-Jones Tenant Act.

MR. DARRELL'S MOTHER IS IMPROVING

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Darrell and daughter, Florene left Friday of last week for McAllen, Texas, where Mr. Darrell's mother has been ill for several days. Word received here this week was that she is improving and Mr. and Mrs. Darrell will likely return home the latter part of this week.

C. Houston Goudiss Asks Will Your Child Be Ready For School?

Noted Food Authority Outlines a Correct Diet for the Growing Youngster

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City.

WHEN school closed last June, most parents looked forward to the long weeks ahead when their children could play in the sunshine, get plenty of rest, and build up a splendid fund of vitality to last them all through the new school year.

Some mothers resolved to do everything possible to prevent a recurrence of last season's disheartening colds. Others planned to look into a blood-building diet that would give Mary or Johnnie more pep and rosier cheeks. Perhaps there were teeth that required attention, or a nose or throat condition to be corrected. Now, within a few weeks, the children will be returning to school, or in some cases beginning their school life. Every mother should ask herself whether she has made the most of the opportunities offered by the vacation period.

Have you put forth a conscientious effort toward making your children 100 per cent fit for school? If not, there is still time! You cannot finish the job in a few weeks, but you can make a good start. And you owe it to your children to begin at once. For whether they enjoy school or find it tedious, whether they make excellent records or lag behind their fellows, depends in large measure upon their fitness.

Every child is entitled to good health, safeguarded by high resistance. And in this age of amazing scientific discoveries, every child should enjoy these blessings. Top health and resistance to disease are the result of an intelligently planned and carefully executed health program. It should include proper diet, adequate sleep and rest, an abundance of sunshine and fresh air, freedom from physical defects, and the avoidance of fatigue.

Diet—the Key to Health
Perhaps the most important factor of all is the carefully balanced diet. When planned to take full advantage of modern nutritional discoveries, it will insure normal growth and health, and build up high resistance that is like a protecting wall to safeguard your children.

With our present knowledge of the power of food, there should not be one ill-nourished child in our land. Yet the spectre of malnutrition rears its ugly head among children of the well-to-do as well as in homes where money is scarce. For, as a rule, it is not lack of money, but lack of knowledge of food values, or faulty eating habits which are responsible for this tragedy.

Don't Overlook Protective Foods
A child's diet should be built upon a foundation of the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Milk takes precedence over all of these because it is an absolute necessity if children are to develop strong, straight bones and sound teeth.

The penalty for breaking this fundamental rule is retarded growth, fragile, crooked bones, decayed teeth and possibly nervousness. How dare any mother inflict such punishment upon her children? A fine amount of calcium, high grade protein, and some of every known vitamin can be furnished so easily by providing children with a quart of milk daily—either as a beverage, or in soups, cream sauces, puddings, cocoa or with cereals.

Do YOU Know HOW TO PLAN A Blood-Building DIET?

EVERY MOTHER SHOULD KNOW WHICH FOODS ARE RICHEST IN THE BLOOD-BUILDING MINERALS, IRON AND COPPER. C. Houston Goudiss will gladly send you, free of charge, a bulletin listing those foods which are high in iron and also those that are notable as a source of copper, together with suggestions for planning a diet that is exceptionally rich in these elements.

Mothers! SEND FOR THIS FREE BULLETIN ON FEEDING THE SCHOOL CHILD

This valuable bulletin shows, in chart form, the foods that every child should have every day. Contains sample menus, and also shows how inexpensive foods may be substituted for those that are high in price to provide the same food values.

Just send your request on a postcard to C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

Eggs rank next to milk in importance, because of their protein, iron and vitamins. A child's diet should normally include one egg daily, or at least three or four weekly.

Green, leafy vegetables must not be neglected, as they supply iron and precious vitamins. Yellow vegetables, such as carrots and sweet potatoes are notable as a source of vitamin A.

Fruits, especially the citrus varieties, are important for their vitamin C, which helps to safeguard the health of teeth and gums. However, tomatoes, or tomato juice may also be used as a source of this vitamin. Bananas are an excellent fruit for children. Dried fruits furnish iron and are high in energy values. Fruits and vegetables in general are likewise an important aid to regular elimination.

As a rule, school children may have lean meat, fish, chicken or liver once a day, and a second protein food, such as cheese or legumes, is usually introduced at another meal.

Energy Foods in Abundance
There must be plenty of energy foods, such as potatoes, rice, macaroni, bread and butter, and cereals, to help prevent the physical fatigue which lowers resistance. At least one starchy food belongs in every meal.

A well-cooked cereal should be provided once daily; in warm weather a ready-to-eat cereal may be used instead. In order to provide an abundance of minerals, and vitamin B, nutritionists place emphasis upon the whole grain varieties.

For desserts, choose rice, tapioca and bread puddings; gelatine, either plain or with fruit; fresh or stewed fruit; milk sherbets or ice cream.

In planning meals for children, it is important at all times to keep the menus simple, and prepare foods so that they are appetizing and easily digestible.

Aids to Good Nutrition

It is important also to bear in mind that the most perfect diet will not provide sound nutrition unless the food is properly digested and assimilated. Adequate sleep and rest, which do away with fatigue, are therefore essential. However perfect the diet, overexertion and undue fatigue, if continued, will soon bring about a state of lowered resistance.

In planning a program of daily living that will make and keep your children fit for school, put food first. But consider also rest, fresh air and sunshine, and regular habits. It would be well, too, to check up on the child's general health before he returns to school, so that he will not be handicapped by some physical defect, such as bad teeth, diseased tonsils, faulty vision or impaired hearing—all of which hinder the ability to learn.

Never forget for a moment that a child's happiness and success are closely related to his health. All mothers should remember this, for it is no exaggeration to say that THE POWER OF A NATION DEPENDS UPON THE HEALTH OF ITS CHILDREN.

SYNOPSIS

Hale calls on Casper Kneeland's father, in New York, and is grossly successful, but he tells Hale of his plan to go to Halcyon Camp, his father's island, and promises to meet him at lunch by Fred's house at the college. He is unpopular with a girl named Joan Kneeland, who leaves him with a message from Mrs. Wilbur Nash, a disturbing premonition about the marriage. He is barely eased by the hospitality of Hosanna, an elderly sister, and her young son, Casper, but is moody Joan Kneeland, who.

young Kneeland. He was years old when they were a yellow-haired rather than a black-haired rather delicate with ordinary features, but with an expression of equal parts of boredom and irresolution. Hale suspected the boredom was a mask for emotions. His head was like his father's. It had inherited none of the man's driving energy. Hosanna had been warning him at the table against food she had set before her she developed her

Hale heard her say, "I've been taught that it's not of me. Instead, it's rank and never serve it if it isn't so funny about his actually suggests our would eat bread three times if I would give it to him. It's very bad for me. I never touch it myself, starches and sugar and sugar touch them, either. After them to others when I'm here if Ruth and Mr. didn't make such a fuss about meals. They seem bent on their health."

Hale looked at Mrs. Spencer and said much what I eat," Mrs. Forbes said wearily. "The only bright spot at Halcyon Camp I don't think should be ruined by your Hosanna. Your brother is down as a good provider. He knows how to prepare things. Why you can't leave the while we're eating it, I'm going into these distressing details, I shall never certainly amazing company. Hale dismissed the maid and ceased to listen to Hosanna. He had always been an unusual type of human. He realized that most men and women were uninteresting. Miss Hosanna, of course, was an exception. Her manner she ran the New England form. Her admiration and affection for Spencer Forbes seemed to her object justified. Mrs. Forbes was an easy type. She was the burned-out of the world, whose opinions were growing with her years. She must be as greedy for as she had been at thirty more so; but she had a common sense that she never while it resented the meddling Joan Kneeland. He realized that she must be her cousin Herbert. He was a straight cad, making himself objectionable to everyone. Craig was a light-hearted scientist and human, a good doctor of the impersonal type. He was impersonal with Joan as he was with the rest of them. Even with her his attitude of a normal man charming girl. It was "Watchful! That was it! He was conscious of her, even when he was talking.

with Mrs. Spencer also interesting. It was accustomed, even a trifle to a different man it seemed indulgent. There in it she could reason, but it was clear that in fact it was plain that most of the Halcyon Camp were less on one another's. Spencer Forbes was irritated by Craig and Miss Hosanna also disapproved, possibly in sympathy. Ruth's caustic comment two young men when were alone. Joan Kneeland and despised Ainsworth. He was doubtful of Craig, and most of the other moments appeared to be Craig. Hale had already learned from their talk that Herbert and the young psychiatrist had been close friends for years. That was interesting, because there must be five or six years difference in their ages. Herbert was only twenty-two. Craig must be about his, Hale's age. He had dropped enough in his dinner-table talk to show that he was in his second year of practice. He was professionally obsessed, inordinately ambitious. It was hard to understand the close friendship that was said to exist between him and Casper Kneeland's only son.

Thus Hale summed up his companions in the first hour he was with them. He did it by the cold light of reason, with no hunches now to help him. The instinct or premonition he had felt on approaching the house had died. The setting of the big dining-room was very pleasant. The guests around him were unusual enough to interest anyone. Like Ainsworth, he should have been at peace with the world, but he was not in quite that ideal state.

Young Kneeland had cast off his depression and was talking now, rather well and with more interest than he had yet shown. He was a nice-looking chap, with that new animation in his face. He was smooth-shaven, immaculate, and he wore his evening clothes with accustomed ease.

After dinner Hale, Craig and the cousins played contract. Mrs. Spencer Forbes and Aunt Hosanna played backgammon, the former with an eloquent look at Hale which informed him that this diversion was not her choice. Ainsworth, pointedly ignored by his companions, read and smoked under a reading lamp. Miss Hosanna alone gave him a kind word as the party ebbed away from him.

"When Casper is here we can have two tables," she promised. It was the triumph of hospitality and breeding over mere human nature. Her pale blue eyes hardly touched his face as she spoke to him. She liked him no better than the rest did. Hale was glad he had not let his contract game grow rusty in Spain. He had played there a good deal, with some fellow-engineers who were experts. He liked playing with Miss Kneeland. It gave him opportunities to look at her and to meet her lovely eyes. Also, she played a good game and had a fine sporting spirit. She had not turned a hair when, earlier in the rubber, he had heavily "set" her and himself by over-optimism.

The game broke up at half past ten. He was not sorry. The day had seemed long. The party separated almost at once, its members seeking their individual rooms upstairs. Hale was glad to get into the quiet of his quarters. The windows facing the sea were wide open and a salt breeze came in, mingled with the sound of pounding waves. His bed was ready for him. The silk cover was folded back over the footboard. The pillows were inviting. The upper sheet was turned over a light blue blanket. No soiled little billet-doux waited for him this time.

He was on his way from his bathroom to his bed when he heard a light tap on the door. He slipped on his dressing-gown and opened the door. Ainsworth, very wide awake and still fully dressed, strolled into the room.

"Saw a light under your door and thought I'd pop in," he said. "Got any cigarettes? I forgot to bring some upstairs."

Hale forced a smile and pointed to a box on his smoking table. "Hope I'm not disturbing you," Ainsworth purred as he helped himself.

"Not at all. Sit down." Ainsworth sat down, lit the cigarette and ostentatiously relaxed. Hale had no choice but to sit down, too, and show decent courtesy to his unwelcome visitor. He did not speak. If Ainsworth had any purpose in this untimely call let him get it off his chest. Hale filled the interval by selecting and lighting a cigarette.

"Well, what's your opinion of us?" Ainsworth drawled.

"You're a reasonably interesting group," he said when he was ready to speak.

"Granted. But what do you really think of us?"

"You do me too much credit, Ainsworth. I don't form definite opinions so quickly."

Again Ainsworth proved that he could not take a snub. "Give me some offhand ones, then," he invited. "Let's have your first impressions."

"Oh, well, they're rather chaotic. I find Aunt Hosanna very cordial and hospitable. Mrs. Spencer Forbes mildly amusing, young Kneeland rather pathetic, Craig self-absorbed and scientific."

"And Miss Kneeland?" That was a purr.

"Lovely and charming, of course."

"Of course. Do you happen to know that she's quite an heiress?" "No, I didn't know that."

"She had almost a million before the crash. She inherited it from her father, who struck oil out in Oklahoma, and died soon afterward, apparently of the joyful shock. Uncle Casper has had the handling of the estate, so some of it may have disappeared during the depression. But Joan is of age now. I fancy she has enough left to make herself and a deserving young husband quite comfortable."

He waited a moment. Hale made no comment and Ainsworth went on.

"Young Kneeland wanted to be the deserving young husband. She wouldn't have any of that. This may explain the pathetic quality you discovered in him."

"I don't think I care to talk about Miss Kneeland's private affairs," Hale said stiffly.

"All right. Just thought I'd give you a tip. Great opportunity for ambitious youth. Craig is in the running, too, but only mildly. I don't think he has much chance. You've got a pretty clear field, it seems to me."

Hale set his teeth.

"I'm afraid you didn't get my meaning, Ainsworth," he brought out between them. "I said—"

"That you didn't want to talk about Miss Kneeland. I know. All right. But there's one more interesting fact you ought to know. If Joan Kneeland dies before she marries, young Bert gets practically her entire estate. Her father made that provision originally, and it seems that she repeats it in her own will."

Hale remained silent and Ainsworth asked conversationally:

"Is there any objection to talking about Mrs. Spencer Forbes?"

"Only the lateness of the hour," Ainsworth laughed.

"I always envied you your way of putting things. You can make a snub sound almost suave. But I'm not sleepy."

"I am."

Ainsworth shook his head at him. "That isn't as subtle as your usual methods," he said reproachfully. "But I want to tell you about Mrs. Spencer Forbes. You don't appreciate it, old man, but I'm trying to put you wise to conditions here. Mrs. Spencer Forbes, for example, there's tragedy for you."

"Why?"

"She's down and out. It's the old story. Good family, fine position, plenty of money to begin with. Nothing left now. Supposedly she lives in a back room of some New York lodging-house. In reality she's here most of the time, sponging on the Kneelands. Casper Kneeland stands it because he's impressed by her social position. He likes to be shocked by her talk, too. Miss Hosanna encourages it because she's fascinated by the creature. Always has been, it seems. The one big friendship of her life—and a mighty lopsided affair it is. All Ruth Spencer Forbes cares about is a snug haven and plenty to eat and drink. Once in a while, as a matter of form, she goes back to the lodging-house for a week or two. That must be pretty ghastly for her."

"Your manly sympathy for her doesn't show much when you and she are together," Hale commented. Ainsworth laughed.

"No, we hate each other," he admitted, "even though we speak the same language and have known each other all our lives. Just the same, it's damned interesting to see her wriggling on the hook."

"That's rather your specialty, isn't it? Watching people wriggle?"

"Yes," Ainsworth said simply. "There's a grand and glorious opportunity for it right here at Halcyon Camp. That's why I'm staying on. Besides, there will be an added interest now in watching you watch them wriggle. I'm quite looking forward to that."

"All right." Hale laid down his half-smoked cigarette. "Ainsworth, you won't mind if I ask you to clear out, will you?" he added. "I've had a long day and I'm all in. Convallescent, you know."

"I know. But you'll brace up here," Ainsworth predicted. "Did anyone tell you we bathe on the beach at eleven? Private beach. All to ourselves unless Mrs. Nash and her cub show up. They often do. She likes this beach better than her own, and God made the Kneelands to be imposed upon. That's the real reason we're all here. You, too, old man. I'll toddle now. Good-night. See you at breakfast."

Hale closed the door behind him and threw open the third window of his room. A place Ainsworth had been in seemed to need special ventilation. He went again to a front window and stared out over the sea to calm his nerves. As he looked two figures detached themselves from the sheltering trees at the left of the house. One almost immediately turned back into the woods. The other moved toward the house. He looked at it idly. It was not yet midnight. Probably some of the servants had been having a moonlight rendezvous. Hale stiffened. The figure approaching the house was nearer now. It was not anxious to be seen. It kept as close to the trees as it could, but Hale recognized it. It was—could it be? Miss Hosanna? Yes. Her plump figure was unmistakable and now he saw her face, quite clearly in the moonlight.

Her companion had been a man, not one of the guests at Halcyon Camp, but a stranger. He had been a lean fellow, with a narrow, unpleasant face. There was something furtive about the meeting. The man might have been a servant, but there was no man-servant at the Camp in addition to Banks and Joe. What was he, and why was Miss Hosanna meeting him in a lonely wood toward midnight?

Abruptly Hale decided that it was none of his business. He threw off his dressing-gown, switched off the electric light, and jumped into bed. A few minutes later he heard soft quick footsteps passing his door and going further along the hall. Miss Hosanna, no doubt. But what the devil had the woman been doing with that unwholesome human specimen she had met?

Hale awoke to an impression of gorgeous sunshine and a singing sea. He had slept from two on without turning, and he felt like a fighting-cock. He looked at his watch. Half past eight. He sprang out of bed, hustled into the bathroom, and made a quick toilet. If Kneeland had been in Camp he wouldn't have thought much of a new employee who showed up at nine o'clock on his first morning. It was exactly nine when Hale entered the dining-room.

He found it empty save for Rose, who looked very smart in a fresh pink uniform.

Plants Thrive 1,000 Feet Underground In Experiments Made in South Wales

Strange discoveries 1,000 feet below the surface of the earth have recently proved that plants can flourish without the aid of sunlight. A few months ago a South Wales colliery was wired for electric light, and globes of a sunlight type were fitted. Within a few weeks, patches of green plant life began to appear, and have since developed to strong growths.

Viscount Weymouth, an enthusiastic explorer of the Cheddar caves, recently wired some of the caverns for floodlights, to show off the gleaming metals in the rocks. After a few months small plants were found to be thriving in the lamp rays, and they have now developed into patches several feet wide.

When London buildings were flooded for the coronation, it was found that small plants were beginning to grow in wall crevices near each light. These plants were not of the type found in London parks, but had come from the country, and even from the tropics, the minute seeds being carried on currents of air. But as soon as the lights were removed the plants withered and died.

The blue mercury lamps which are now used in many London suburbs have also brought new life to trees, shrubs and plants that are near them. The rays, apparently, have the same effect as sunshine, and gardens under the direct glow of the lamps are blooming, while others, out of the lamps' range, are a mass of withered leaves.

It seems as though we may, one day, be able to pick select blooms on a winter's day, thanks to the use of the right kind of electric lamp.

Howler Monkey Is Noisy

The howler monkey, whose deep-throated voice echoes through the depths of the Panamanian jungles can be heard in the jungle day and night, and many visitors have mistaken it for the roar of lions. His voice, like that of the singing lark, is louder from a distance, decreasing in volume as one approaches. But even at close range it is unlike notes of white-faced and other species of monkeys. Even though he is small in comparison to a lion, the howler is unusually beautiful, shading from very dark brown to light. He is of a gregarious nature, traveling in troops and swinging through the tree tops. He swings by his tail, a characteristic peculiar to New World monkeys.

School Days: Everywhere!

Native boys in Egypt (above) study in plain surroundings, taught by an instructor in the familiar Egyptian garb. Below are Chinese school children learning their lessons despite the Japanese invasion that has created havoc with their lives. East is east and west is west, but everywhere September means back to school for tomorrow's men and women, the beginning of another period in the training schedule that will make them better citizens of the world.

TWELVE BILLION TIN CANS A YEAR!

Tin cans, some 12,000,000,000 of them annually, take to market and American homes a vast variety of products. They constitute the product of one of America's great industries, which used in 1933, for instance, more steel than buildings, or railroads, or any other steel customer except the automobile industry. There are about a hundred cans produced in this country for each man, woman and child and only some 60 per cent of them are used for food. The origin of the tin can goes back to Nicolas Appert, a Frenchman, who developed a method of preserving food in 1804. It was essentially the method used today: Heating the food and putting it up in sealed containers.

Wise and Otherwise

No matter how lazy a man may be, his laziness seldom extends to his tongue. Charity used to begin at home; nowadays nobody stays home long enough to start it. Some folks pick their friends carefully; others to pieces. Money, says the moralist, is a poison. And the antidote is marriage. "Golf is the most dangerous game in the world," says a writer. Risk of spontaneous combustion? In five years the output of real silk stockings has increased from a million dozen pairs to five million dozen. What one might call the worm's turn?

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 35 to 42), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

SCHOOL, DRIVE SLOW!

School time again and students will be going to and from school, across streets and intersections. Motorists should exercise the greatest care in driving in vicinity of schools and do their part in preserving life of students. Parents caution their children to be careful of the motorists but often times the students become engaged in play and talking as they go to school and fail to notice the cars. Motorists should observe all highway laws, should be constantly on the look-out for pedestrians and should keep their automobiles in good condition to stop. There is no greater service than the preservation of human life. Motorists everywhere could help safety organizations in their campaign to reduce the automobile accident toll in the United States.

STRICKLY CONFIDENTIAL—I have always found that when I attempt to find something interesting to tell my public about—there's always one subject that instantly arouses the interest of my readers—To attempt any predictions or forecasts would be folly but—I do like to guess at results of football games—and now the Whirlwinds are causing a slight breeze along California street—Coach Odell Winters has returned and is getting his future all—(better go easy here) district men in condition for the coming battles of the gridiron.

STRICKLY CONFIDENTIAL—First game on the menu for 1938 is the encounter with Slaton—time was when this was THE game of the year—all the boys left their cotton sacks in the field and turned out to make the trip, either to Slaton or to Floydada, for the big time game—always plenty of fun and football—sometimes proved tough for the sports who placed their money on the Tigers or Whirlwinds—missed seeing a Slaton-Floydada game once because I decided to pull 'bollies' for a farmer who offered twice the regular price because the cotton was not very good—only received $3.00 per hundred for my work—but that was before the 'purge' of the South and our cotton country—if a farmer could make that much clear now on a hundred pounds of lint—he would be going to town.

STRICKLY CONFIDENTIAL—Which gets me back to offering a few facts to my already enlightened readers—about the South—and its economic problems—In a recent hearing Lowell Mellett, director of the National Emergency Council, outlined a curious situation: "The Paradox of the South is that while it is blessed by nature with immense wealth its people as a whole are the poorest in the country". Although primarily I do not suppose Floyd County is a 'cotton' country but many acres are planted to this crop here—Texas is included in the South which was defined by the advisory group as "a huge crescent" composed of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma—The population of this crescent is 36,000,000 persons; its area is 840,000 square miles—about one-

Miss Martha Widner is a guest this week in the home of her aunt, Mrs. Eddy Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Solomon returned home Sunday after having spent a week vacationing in the mountains of Colorado. Most of their time was spent in Manitou, Colorado Springs, and Denver. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Solomon of Matador.

J. D. Nelson of Lubbock was a visitor in Floydada Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Cavanaugh returned home Monday after having spent a short vacation in new Mexico. The couple left here Friday of last week for Cimarron canyon and the Carson National Forest regions, where they enjoyed a cool mountain vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Kirk and daughter, Patricia, returned home the middle of last week after having spent a week vacationing in Arkansas. They spent most of their time in Hot Springs, where Mr. Kirk took the baths.

Floyd County Tenant Purchase Farmers Progress

Floyd County farmers selected for tenant purchase under the Bankhead Jones Farm Tenancy Act are showing progress in farming methods and are busy planning permanent home improvements. The local county committeemen, Oscar L. Allen, Fred M. Battey, and Joe M. Smith, working with farm security administration officials selected four tenant families to purchase farm homes during the past few months of this fiscal year. Families selected have bought 220 to 240 acre farms which were determined economical units.

This program is administered by farm security administration whereby loans are made on 40 year time at 3% interest to purchase farms at the best cash price possible. Additional money is available to make necessary and adequate improvements for home convenience and economy. As security a deed of trust is given on the land but no down payment is required of the family buying the farm.

It appears the usual landlord's portion of crops or rents will retire the loan over a period of years.

One of the clients, James J. Smith, Jr., is busy constructing a four station barn with concrete foundation and floor. He plans to help meet living expenses with the sale of cream from eight Jersey cows. It is planned a 20-30 poultry house and a fenced one acre sudan patch will accommodate one hundred fifty white leghorn hens. In addition two brood sows and two brood mares will complete the livestock setup. Mr. Smith has been farming in the county for several years on rented land, but has been able to purchase necessary machinery for farming purposes.

This family has two small daughters in school.

Mr. Smith has been fortunate in being able to rent land each year, but most tenant farms are badly in need of repair and have no food or feed storage equipment or home conveniences.

Families buying farms through Tenant Purchase Division of F. S. A. are proud of their homes in Floyd County, and as the name implies this program appears to be "Farm Security."

Additional appropriations were made this year to Floyd, Hall, Wheeler, Randall and Hansford Counties to carry on the Bankhead-Jones Tenant Act.

Mrs. A. F. Norton arrived here Friday of last week to make her home here with her daughters, Misses Margie and Ruby Norton.

Ted Norton and Mrs. D. Rambo of Huntsville, spent the week end visiting in Floydada with their sisters, Misses Ruby and Margie Norton.

South Plains Club Entertained by Sandhill

The South Plains club was entertained by the Sandhill club in the school building August 11.

Miss Mildred Burke had charge of the entertainment and many interesting games were played. Miss Beryl Miller gave a discussion on the delegates' trip to A. & M. which was enjoyed very much.

Refreshments were served to 13 ladies and everyone expressed a desire to be invited again to Sandhill. Reporter.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Conway and daughter, Carol, left Friday of last week for their home in Lafayette, Louisiana, after having visited here for some two weeks with Mr. Conway's mother, Mrs. R. H. Conway, and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McBrien returned home Sunday after having vacationed in Galveston, and other points in South Texas.

Miss Wilma Jean Freeman returned home Friday after having visited here with her sister, Mrs. Dorris W. Jones since Tuesday of last week. Miss Freeman is from Lubbock.

Mrs. Floyd Simpson of Eunice, New Mexico, left Saturday after having visited here for several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Looper.
