BEETS PROMISE TO BECOME NEW CROP FOR THIS AREA; SAMPLES SHOWN TO COLORADO SUGAR COMPANY

Floyd County Beets Show Good Yield And Sugar Content Shows High Test

Pre-harvest samples of sugar beets collected by County Agricultural Agent, D. F. Bredthauer, H. E. Knapp, field agricultural agent for the American Crystal Sugar Company, at Rocky Ford, Colorado, and H. M. Bainer, agricultural agent for the Santa Fe Railway Company, Amarillo, from thirteen Floyd County sugar beet demonstrations have again shown excellent prospects of becoming a new money crop for this area. Tests have been received from six of these demonstrations which run as follows in sugar content: Charlie Bush, 16.8 percent; T. L. Griffith, 18.2 percent; H. B. Handley, 16.3 percent; Buck Sams, 19.3 percent; C. J. Taylor, 17.4 percent; W. D. Colson, 12.1 percent. All of these tests ran exceptionally high for a pre-harvest test with the exception of W. D. Colson, who has unusual large beets, and who had the misfortune of receiving a hail on his roots some three weeks ago and these beets were watered late and are still in the growing stage and it is estimated that by the middle of November these beets will be in their mature stage and that the sugar content will be considerable higher.

Local Western Union Hours Shortened

The far-reaching effects of the Fair Labor Standards Act was brought home to telegraph-users on October 24th, the effective date of the act, when the local Western Union office shortened its working hours, it is announced by Mrs. Hatley, manager of the office. "The requirements of the act impose a burden which the telegraph company is unable to meet," said Mrs. Hatley, "and while it is the traditional desire of my company to serve, we have no alternative under present business conditions but to shorten the hours. We have, however, arranged our open hours to give the maximum to our customers. The office will open at 8:10 a. m., close from noon to 1:10 p. m., and close for the day at 5:52 p. m. As an indication of the company's attitude toward its employees, Mrs. Hatley said, "I work fewer hours but my weekly pay envelope will not contain any less."

1939 Chevrolet First Showing Draws Visitors

Many Floydada and Floyd County people visited the show rooms of Oden Chevrolet Company here Friday evening and Saturday during the preview showing of the 1939 Chevrolet automobiles, commercial cars and trucks.

Included in the display were the two new Chevrolet series, designated as the Master DeLuxe and the Master 85. These two new models are offered as embodying not only distinctive style but an even finer aggregate of performance, safety and comfort characteristics than that which made their predecessors sales leaders in 1938. Two new models—a Master DeLuxe four passenger coupe with many distinctive features, a Master 85 business coupe available on both chassis have been added for 1939, the sport coupe and cabriolet being discontinued.

The major mechanical improvements for 1939 are the new vacuum gearshift with steering column control, optional on both series at nominal extra cost, and the new perfected Knee-Action riding system on the Master DeLuxe. This improvement includes an entirely new Knee-Action mechanism, triple-tested, precision-built, and tailored as a unit to the car, to assure maximum riding comfort over all roads.

Improvements have been made in the ignition and oiling systems, the carburetor, the intake manifold, thermostat control, the harmonic balancer, which is now floated in rubber, and the cooling system, which now has a self-adjusting permanently lubricated ball-bearing water pump.

Changes in the body proper add much to the appearance of fleetness, unity and length. Elimination of the speedline permits carrying the side panels straight up, giving slightly more width through the cowl. In sport sedans and town sedans, the rear side panels carry back through the trunk in a smooth plane.

Rutledge, Calvin Steas, F. M. Covington, E. C. Mosley, Ray Curry and H. R. Stanley.

ACHIEVEMENT DAY TOURS TO START TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 1; PROGRESS OF COUNTY CLUBS TO BE SHOWN

County Home Demonstration Agent Outlines Itinerary For The Visits

Progress of the Floyd County Home Demonstration clubs will be shown when the achievement day tours are held starting Tuesday of next week. Although the clubs have been organized only six months, they have made rapid progress in their demonstrations and the women are anxious to show the results of their work.

The tours are being conducted by the home demonstration club women in cooperation with Miss Ruth Grimes, home demonstration agent. Homes of food supply and bedroom improvement demonstrators will be visited during the three days, the itinerary for which covers three sections of the county. All home demonstration club women and others interested in the work are invited to attend on these days.

Final plans, including a schedule of the visits, were completed in a meeting of the county home demonstration council Saturday afternoon in the county court room. Mrs. Charles Smith, chairman of the education committee, worked out a schedule setting the exact time to be spent at each demonstrator's home. Tours will be held on November 1, November 8 and November 15.

The first tour leaves from the west side of the square in Floydada at 9:45, November first. Following is the schedule of the trip: 9:45—Leave Floydada. 10:00—10:45—Sandhill; Miss W. Knight, Home Food Demonstrator; 11:15—12:00—Harmony; Mrs. Sam Hale, home food demonstrator and Mrs. Charles Watson, bedroom improvement demonstrator. 12:00—1:00—Lunch at Harmony school. 1:15—2:00—McCoy. Home food demonstrator and Mrs. A. L. Sparks, bedroom improvement demonstrator. 2:15—3:00—Starkey. Mrs. J. K. Holmes, bedroom improvement demonstrator and Mrs. Virgil Barton, home food demonstrator. 3:15—4:00—Home builders club. Mrs. J. D. Eaves, home food demonstrator and Mrs. Pete Kenricks, bedroom improvement demonstrator. Dinner will be furnished and served at the club visited at the noon hour. Home food supply demonstrators will show good storage of fresh and canned products, featuring the products that they have stored to fill the food budget for their families. Mrs. Sam Hale of Harmony has arranged a ventilated pantry in the house, just a few steps from the kitchen. Screened openings for ventilation were placed in the upper and lower part of the pantry. Shelves were built just wide enough for two jars, with a one inch air space between the two rows of jars and between the jars and the wall. Good ventilation helps retain the texture and flavor of canned products.

Mrs. Charles Watson of Harmony is showing a well arranged bedroom but the most important part of her demonstration is a spacious linen closet between the two bedrooms. Mrs. A. L. Sparks of McCoy and Mrs. J. K. Holmes of Starkey have both built large clothes closets with clothes rods and shelves for bedding and clothes.

INVITED ON TOUR Floydada and Lockney business and professional men and women, in addition to the home demonstration club members and all others interested are invited to accompany the tour.

Whirlwinds Tame Panthers 19-13 Friday Night

Floydada High School Whirlwinds, defeated only one time this season, tamed the Quitaque High School Panthers Friday night by a score of 19 to 13. The Whirlwinds second string saw the greater part of service against a weak opponent. The game was on Wester field before a sparse crowd.

First scoring of the evening came in the initial period when after a series of plays the Whirlwinds placed the ball within scoring distance and Daniels went over on a line drive. Gollightly converted by kicking at that point, Floydada 7, Quitaque 0. Daniel checked up another counter in the final moments of the first quarter when he went around right end for 23 yards and the tally. Conversion attempts failed. Score at the half, Floydada 13, Quitaque 0.

The second half found most of the Whirlwind squad made up of second stringers and reserves. In this portion of the game the Panthers scored twice, in the fourth quarter. First scoring came when Rhoderick, Panther quarter back, plunged the line for the touchdown. Conversion was good. Gowan, Quitaque end, snagged a pass in the zone for the final score for the visitors.

Gollightly and McClure pulled the Whirlwinds out of the bog in the fourth when the former passed to the sub Whirlwind end 40 yards and McClure galloped for a touchdown.

The game was one of those affairs where everyone plays but the water-boy. Quitaque scored the Whirlwinds in the closing minutes but not enough.

Whirlwinds Meet Paducah Dragons This Week

Floydada High School's Whirlwinds will journey to Paducah this week for the annual tilt with the Dragons. A comparison of the teams, on the basis of both the Whirlwinds and Dragons loss to the Flomot Longhorns, place the two on about equal basis.

The Whirlwinds, with most of the first string players on the bench, defeated Quitaque last week in a conference game.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. armon returned Sunday from Dallas where they had been for several days. Mrs. Harmon underwent an operation in the Baylor Hospital and is thought recovering as well as could be expected. They visited with Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Harmon Jr. while in Dallas.

Huge U. S. Armament Program Offered as Peace Safeguard

By Joseph W. La Bine

Defense

Though the Munich agreement was aimed to preserve Europe's peace, its immediate result has been feverish rearmament.

Few Americans have hoped that the U. S. can avoid similar preparations. Loudest persuasion of all has come from Britain's Winston Churchill.

BERNARD BARUCH He wanted billions for defense.

Growing louder, this voice finally reached White House ears, coincidentally bringing comment from Capitalist Bernard Baruch who chaired the war industries board in 1917.

Emerging from a White House conference, Mr. Baruch started observers thinking by warning that U. S. defenses were inadequate. Though most Americans regard "defense" as successful repulsion of a North American invasion, a broader conception calls for protection of the entire Western hemisphere.

Though it lacks official confirmation, President Roosevelt plainly favors the Baruch program. The suggested tax boost comes dangerously near election time, but administration leaders minimize this political hazard because: (1) most Americans regard democracy's security as more important than financial security or political partisanship;

War

Japan's invasion of South China has three purposes: (1) to force withdrawal of Cantonese troops from the Hankow battle front; (2) to capture Canton or force that province into an independent peace; (3) to cut the Hankow-Canton railroad over which war supplies have traveled to sorely troubled Chinese troops.

Far more important is the fact that Japan has labeled herself the No. 1 Far East power, invading Great Britain's South China interests and defying the British lion to do anything about it.

Closer home, U. S. officials are also worried because most American-Chinese trade is now routed through Hongkong. Though U. S. trade with Hongkong has jumped from $8,500,000 to $15,000,000 this year, largely because of the Canton gateway, total exports to China have dropped from $42,000,000 to $26,000,000.

Her ambitions and confidence fattened by Great Britain's capitulation at Munich, Japan marches forward to what she hopes will be domination of the Pacific.

ward to what she hopes will be domination of the Pacific.

Two fighting tigers will join forces to kill a common enemy. In much the same fashion, Loyalist and Insurgent Spain have protested the whispered proposal that Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany join in stopping her civil war.

Few Americans have hoped that the U. S. can avoid similar preparations. Loudest persuasion of all has come from Britain's Winston Churchill, whose short wave broadcast urged the U. S. to take a commanding lead against dictators.

Domestic

Inescapably connected with the government's new emphasis on military defense against Nazi-Fascist world powers is President Roosevelt's interest in espionage. For 20 years the U. S. has disregarded spies, though the increasing frequency of arrests has made Americans fearful of Germany, Italy, Japan and Russia.

Greatest interest in the espionage trial lies in red-haired, 23-year-old Johanna Hoffman, who reportedly transported spy messages from New York in Germany while serving as hairdresser on the liner Europa.

Though New York's spy trial appears commonplace, its significance is tremendous. Not only does it mark an emboldened U. S. defense attitude, but legal experts also explain it is the first time America has named a supposedly friendly power (Germany) in direct charges.

It may be predicted that next winter's congress will co-ordinate and tighten the government's outmoded anti-spy regulations, including the espionage act of 1917 which applies only to individuals and carries no teeth against spy-inspiring organizations.

anti-spy regulations, including the espionage act of 1917 which applies only to individuals and carries no teeth against spy-inspiring organizations. Although the U. S. has never indulged in peacetime spy activities, there is speculation whether congress may adopt this activity which has been an important European governmental function for 300 years.

Wallace Proposes Two-Price Plan To Market Agricultural Surplus

System Would Create Class Distinction in This Country and Open Road to More Graft and Corruption; Farmers Rebel as Various Schemes Fail.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON. — I just cannot help wondering what the verdict of history is going to be, say 50 years in the future, concerning the present secretary of agriculture, Mr. Henry A. Wallace.

This capacity for jumping here and there has placed the head of the department of agriculture out on another limb. This time, as has been announced, Mr. Wallace is giving serious consideration to a program that seems certain to create a new mess.

He and his window box farmer-aiders are seriously considering establishment of a two-price system in this country. That is, they are proposing that agricultural surpluses should be sold to "ordinary" consumers at one price and that the same commodities should be sold to "lower income" persons at a lower price.

Opens the Road to More Graft and Corruption

The thing is so cock-eyed that it seems strange it would be given a serious thought anywhere. It opens the road to more graft and corruption than can be measured, more governmental pressure and regimentation of the people, more vote buying. But my objection goes deeper. I object, and I think the plan ought to be laughed out of the window, because it is proposing to destroy the very reasons for establishment of the United States as a free nation.

I suspect this new limb on to which Mr. Wallace and his crew have climbed sprouted from the failure of some of the other visionary schemes tried by the professional farm planners. It is unnecessary for me to recount the numerous plans that brought, first, the scarcity plan for raising prices; that brought, next, such sweet refrains as "the more abundant life" and that brought various and sundry delusional outlooks.

Farmers Raise Voices as Schemes Prove Unworkable

As the latest schemes from the department have proved unworkable, the farmers with their better knowledge of what is good for the industry have raised their voices in objection, notwithstanding the checks. Mr. Wallace and his theorists have had to look quickly for something new. They have hit upon the two-price system, largely in a hope that they can stall off a general farm uprising, but also because the idea of governmental purchase of farm crops has piled up such tremendous stocks that the boys are afraid their lives will be snuffed out by cave-ins.

It is not only my conclusion that such things as the recently tried export subsidy idea have failed. Another, and very important, agency of the government apparently has reached the same conclusion. Only recently, the department of state took a slap at the Wallace policies on export subsidies. Assistant Secretary Francis B. Sayre was the voice of the department of state in this instance, and he said in a New York speech:

"In many minds, export subsidies offer a plausible solution; but such a method is as unsound at bottom as it is plausible on its face. Practical experiences in numerous countries have shown that this method creates more problems than it solves. Export subsidies are powerless to move exports in the face of foreign quota restrictions, licenses, etc."

And so forth. Now Mr. Wallace said that quotas, licenses and that sort of thing had forced the export subsidies, but apparently the department of state thinks it is the other way 'round. Mr. Sayre, of course, was supporting the reciprocal trade agreement program that is fostered by Secretary Hull, and whether you believe in that idea or not, you can hardly dodge the fact that trade treaties at least seek to put a stop to the building of more trade restrictions.

Buying Surplus Products To Care for Destitute

Again, assuming that it is necessary to care for the destitute—and nobody can deny that either the states or the federal government must do so—why is it necessary to further complicate the present problem of feeding the poor by this half-baked scheme? The surplus commodity corporation has been buying surpluses from the open market. The purpose was to take off a price depressing influence. It was designed to make a price for the farmer somewhat higher than would have obtained, whether it has accomplished that end or not.

But Mr. Wallace is not satisfied with that arrangement. Why? Well, apparently, he is getting afraid of the huge piles of government-owned products, acquired because of the fuzzy character of his earlier promises to make agriculture safe for democracy, or the New Deal, or something.

Mr. Wallace's experts have just concluded a survey which leads to the conclusion that if everyone in the United States had an "adequate diet," this country would consume all that is produced on farms annually, and in addition would require the production of two additional states of the size of Iowa. We must assume that their findings are correct, but questions will occur to everyone about them. First, what is an adequate diet? People have different ideas about that, especially the fat man or the fat woman who wants to hold the belt line within reason.

How Will History Regard Policies of Wallace?

So, when we see Mr. Wallace's own policies doing a contradictory loop-the-loop; when we find him trying to promote foreign trade by killing the goose that laid the golden egg, and when we find him turning to the development—or, consideration, at least,—of a scheme to create class feelings within our own population, I wonder what the end will be. To repeat, I cannot help wondering how history will regard him and the policies he is now seeking to carry through.

Mr. Wallace made a speech to a group of Washington women the other day, in which he said that the Democrats were now paying off the debt to the population which the Republicans had created. The farm benefits that are being paid out under the New Deal were held to be liquidation of obligations which the Republicans caused to be established by their administrative failures.

The Republicans were in power for 12 years preceding the New Deal. I had the privilege of watching them ball up the farm problem. They played politics with it, too. I think that probably about the only difference in the situation, by and large, is that the Republicans spent only about 15 per cent as much out of the treasury as Mr. Wallace has done and they did not try as many assinine schemes.

Floyd Gibbons' ADVENTURERS' CLUB

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Turpentine and a Brick"

HELLO EVERYBODY: Everybody has his own recipe for Adventure. Here's the favorite one of Mary Doner of 247 Park Ave., New York City. Take one brick and a cupful of turpentine. Cook the brick over a hot fire for twenty minutes. Pour the turpentine over it and serve.

Does that sound appetizing? Well stick around a few minutes while old Francois Gibbons, the Franco-Fenian maestro of the skillet and the soup ladle, juggles the pans around a bit and dishes you out a plateful hot from the kitchen of Old Lady Adventure's hash house. And before we go any farther I want to tell you that the very aroma of this delectable dish is enough to make a horse go crazy.

I don't know what it will do to you—but here's the tale of how it affected Mary Doner.

About 10 years ago, Mary and her husband lived in Maplewood, N. J., and horseback riding is a popular sport out in that neck of the woods. They kept a bunch of saddle horses for their own amusement, and since experienced groomers were impossible to get at the salary they could afford to pay, they were forced to employ green hands in the stable.

Rex Was a High-Strung Thoroughbred.

That worked out pretty well, though, for what the green stable hand lacked in knowledge and experience, Mary made up with her own. Mary was born on a ranch in California and had grown up with horses.

Rex went crazy as the flames shot up.

Horses were her favorite brand of animal, and she spent a great deal of her time in the stable seeing that they were well taken care of and not neglected in any way.

Among the other horses was one, Rex, who was the apple of Mary's eye. He was a high-strung thoroughbred, but as gentle as a kitten. "It always gave me a thrill," says Mary, "to hear Rex's greeting every time he saw me. I gave him twice the care and attention that I gave any of the other horses. He was clever—almost human in his intelligence."

And Rex's cleverness is to take an important part in our story. He was kept in a large box stall, and before long he learned to put his head over the top of the door and push back the bolt with his nose. Mary had to have the bolt put down at the bottom of the door to keep him from getting out, wandering into the feed room, and probably foudering himself. Remember that bolt. Remember that it's way down at the bottom of the door, out of reach of anyone inside. That low-set bolt caused a lot of trouble.

Stableman Bolted the Door.

But of course that hot brick with the turpentine sauce was the principal cause of it all.

This is the place where the brick and the turpentine come into the story. Rex had a cold and, try as she would, Mary couldn't seem to check it. She called in a veterinary and he gave her some medicine for Rex. "And another thing you might try," he said, "is this. Heat a brick, pour some turpentine over it, and let the vapor get up his nostrils."

Mary told the stableman to heat a brick. He did a good job of it. He brought the brick out to her red hot. And Mary put that brick on a shovel and went into Rex's stall.

As she went in she closed the door and the stableman hollered. The stableman had a bucket of turpentine and, from the outside of the stall he poured it on the brick. He poured it on with a lavish hand. It was a case of too much of everything. The brick had been heated too hot in the first place. There was too much turpentine in the second. The result was startling. The turpentine sizzled and filled the stall with a choking vapor. Rex began to get restive. Then, suddenly, the turpentine burst into flame, and Rex went crazy.

The flames shot up in the stall—and so did Rex. He reared up on his hind legs and began pawing at the air.

"And I," says Mary, "was in that stall. Up to that time it had seemed like a large stall to me. With this fear-maddened horse, 16 hands high, rearing and plunging about me, it seemed no bigger than a telephone booth."

"The vapor started to rise in a thick cloud and I couldn't see the horse. I would catch glimpses of his pawing hoofs raised high in the air and would dodge away to keep out of his reach. But I couldn't move far, and the minute I got in one corner, the plunging, frantic horse would be coming my way again."

Afraid to Drop Red-Hot Brick.

All that time, Mary was holding the shovel. She didn't dare set it down, for the brick was red hot and the floor of the stall was covered with dry straw. Once the shovel with its blazing contents touched that straw the whole stable would go up in flames.

And why didn't Mary just duck out the stall door? Well, there you have the bolt again. As soon as the flames started shooting up, the stableman had run away in panic. The door, remember, was bolted low down on the outside, and Mary, who is only five feet in height, couldn't reach down to it. All she could do was hang onto that blazing shovel, keep it away from the straw—and wait. If she was lucky, the flames would die down eventually and Rex could be quieted.

And if she wasn't lucky, she might get in the way of one of Rex's flying hoofs. Then she would go down. The shovel would go with her. The straw would ignite, and that stable would become a funeral pyre for some fine horses—and for Mary!

It was the toughest spot Mary ever was in, but all Adventures come to an end eventually. After what seemed an eternity, the stableman came back and opened the door. Mary was out of the stall like a streak. "We repeated the treatment later," she says, "but this time the brick was not red hot, and I stayed outside the stall while the turpentine was being applied."

Mustard Grows Everywhere

No spice or condiment has a longer history than the mustard seed. Probably in ancient days next to salt it was used more than any other seasoning. The reason for this lies in the fact that it is a cosmopolitan plant and grows in many places. The tiny seeds, which may be brown or yellow, are used in their own form for spicing pickles and fruits and for a few other purposes. The ground mustard flour which we know as dry mustard is one of our staple condiments. Then we have a large variety of mixed mustards which vary in flavor, both on account of the kind of mustard which is their base and because of the liquids which are used to blend them. This is often vinegar and sometimes wine.

Largest Orthodox Monastery

In Lake Ladoga, at the Russian Finnish frontier, is a quiet, lonely island called Valamo—God's Isle. It is high, steep and covered with trees. On this island is located the largest orthodox monastery of modern times. It is a huge building which has been greatly enlarged because of the thousands of pilgrims and tourists which visit it every summer. The monastery was founded in 992 by a monk named Segej, who went to Valamo from Russia. The monastery was destroyed several times in wars between Russia and Sweden, but was always restored and its work continued. After the Russian revolution many monks fled to the peace and quiet of Valamo. They and their fellow-monks work hard.

Lesson for October 30

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND WHERE THEY END

LESSON TEXT—Ecclesiastes 2:1-3, 10, 11; Romans 6:17-23; 14:21.
GOLDEN TEXT—What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?—Romans 6:13.

"Personal liberty"—what endless misuse was made of that expression in the days when men seeking the right to again flood this country with intoxicating liquors were attacking prohibition. One would think that some of our political leaders and our newspaper editors would blush for shame when they see what has now been accomplished in the name of personal liberty.

My liberty ends, as someone has well said, where yours begins. I have the personal liberty to swing my arms as far as the tip of your nose, but there my liberty ends. All of life is, and necessarily must be built on that principle. For the Christian there is an even higher measure of responsibility—his relationship to God and his consequent heart interest in the welfare of his fellow men.

Our Scripture portions for today present a sharp contrast. Man without God, but with every earthly advantage is pictured in Ecclesiastes in his fruitless search for real joy. Then man as the glad bondsman of Jesus Christ is spoken of in Romans as truly free and joyful.

I. The Way of Emptiness and Disappointment (Eccles. 2:1-3, 10, 11).
1. Physical pleasures do not satisfy (Eccles. 2:1-3). Men who have tasted the distress and disappointment of life are prone to think that if they only had all the money they wanted, and an opportunity to partake of life's "thrills" they would be happy. Solomon had everything. He deliberately set himself to prove the pleasures of this world. He planned to "enjoy" intoxicants—doing it "with wisdom"—that is, not in a drunken debauch that would bring remorse. Note it, you who advocate the moderate use of alcohol (whatever that may be) Solomon found it to be only vain emptiness. (See Prov. 23:31, 32.)

What is true of wine is also true of the attempt to satisfy oneself by the gratification of any physical appetite. Those who live for the pleasures of the flesh can reap only corruption (Gal. 6:8). The hectic search for such satisfaction by countless men and women today reveals that they, like Solomon, cannot find it. If they did, they would cease their wild searching. It just is not there.

2. Pleasures of the mind do not satisfy (Eccles. 2:10, 11). Solomon sought real joy in labor, in accomplishing worthy deeds. There is a satisfaction in work well done, but that joy is only lasting when the doing of the work is for the glory of God. Work for its own sake—yes, even wisdom for its own sake (Eccles. 1:12-18)—is not enough to satisfy the soul of man. The great poet Goethe, who set himself to enjoy the higher pleasures of life—art, science, and literature—came to his seventy-fifth year to testify that he had "never had four weeks of genuine pleasure." Satisfaction is not in the pleasures of the aesthetic nature.

II. The Way of Victory, Peace, and True Joy (Rom. 6:17-23; 14:21).
We say with Paul "God be thanked" that there is a way for men to find freedom from the sin and disappointment of life. It comes by

1. Personal allegiance to God (Rom. 6:17-23). Clear thinking on spiritual matters recognizes that the man who boasts of his personal liberty, his freedom from God's control over his life is in reality the slave of sin (vv. 17-19; Titus 3:3). On the other hand, the one who is a willing bondsman of Jesus Christ is free. The way of victory and peace is to yield to God, even as the way of defeat and disappointment is to yield to sin. The first way leads to joy in this life and eternal fellowship with God. The other way results in ultimate ghastly disillusionment in this life and eternal spiritual death and separation from God.

2. Recognized responsibility for others (Rom. 14:21). It should not take two minutes of intelligent consideration for any man to understand that "none of us liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself" (Rom. 14:7). Yet that is the obvious assumption under which men live, leaving behind them not only their own wrecked lives, but carrying along in the stream of their personal influence their acquaintances, friends and members of their families.

The principle stated in Romans 14:21 should govern all of our actions. Paul was speaking of meat offered to idols, which he could have eaten with a clear conscience. But if he ate it someone else would be caused to stumble, and he was rather willing to do without it as long as he lived. One wonders what would happen in the Christian world if every professed follower of Christ would thus evaluate not only the use of intoxicants but also his every personal habit.

SYNOPSIS

Hale calls on Casper Kneeland's father, in New York, to get a job for him. He tells Hale that Kneeland is in the hospital, but Hale insists on seeing him. He goes to the hospital and meets Kneeland's secretary, Miss Joan, who tells him that Kneeland is in the hospital and that she is his secretary. tain doctor is doing so and so, what would be the penalty in your profession if he were caught at it?"

"You'll have to be a lot more definite than that, my friend," Doctor Dewar said curtly.

"I expect to be. Here's the hypothetical situation. Assume that I'm writing a play around it, and need some information about the ethics of the medical profession in such a case."

"Ah." The doctor looked relieved but still cautious.

Hale talked for ten minutes. At the end Doctor Dewar nodded slowly.

"It's a good situation," he admitted. "Dramatic, and all that it's the sort of thing that's more apt to happen in life than in the drama. Playwrights are afraid of turning the screw too far. Life is never afraid of doing that. It's headed chap has been asking questions about him, will you?"

The operator grinned, fingering the additional half dollar he had received, and said he wouldn't. Rex went back to the bureau he had visited that morning. He left for fingerprinting a slip of paper Ainsworth had given him in the library when he had asked Ainsworth for the address of a classmate.

"I've numbered all those prints very carefully," he said. "Be mighty careful about the numbers in your reports. Mark any later specimens I send you by consecutive following figures. Express yourself in your written reports so a layman can understand you. I've got a lot to learn about this sort of thing."

Hale next made his way to Casper Kneeland's town house. It was a "brownstone front" on a street of Miss Joan on this wall. It's a good one."

They had entered a front bedroom on the second floor, Miss Kneeland's portrait, painted by Wayne Adams faced them from a commanding position above the mantel.

"Ah reckon," George suggested thoughtfully, "Mist' Kneeland, he meant bath-rooms."

"Maybe he did. Whose room is this?"

"It's jest for comp'n'y, sub. That's why Miss Joan's picture's here. Miss Joan, she don't like that picture no-how."

"That settles that. Is this the room you're putting me into? If it is, hustle along one of Mr. Kneeland's discarded bathrobes. I'm a busy man, George, and the responsibilities of life are pressing upon me. Step lively."

George returned, dropped the bathrobe over the foot of the bed and tactfully retired.

When Rex had bathed, shaved and re-dressed he was a giant refreshed. He had not quite decided what to do with his evening. Now he suddenly resolved to dine at Maxim's and see a cheerful play. There were several good hold-overs from the spring season.

He carried out this program and enjoyed it. When he returned to the Kneeland house a little after eleven and started upstairs he saw a line of light under the door of a room George had described as "Mist' Kneeland's lady's." Simultaneously the door opened and Kneeland looked out.

"That you, my boy?" he called. "Come in a minute. I hope George is making you comfortable," he added carelessly, as Hale took the chair he offered.

"Altogether too much so," Hale testified. "I'm getting to be a sybarite. I ought to be working with a few mule teams on the side of some Andalusian mountain, to bring me back to normal."

Kneeland shook his head.

"Grab everything you can get while the grabbing is good," he advised. "That's my motto. There will be plenty of times when you can't get what you want."

"All right, sir," Hale agreed briskly. "What I want now is to ask you a few questions? If there are many of them you'd better light up and have a drink before you begin to shoot."

"There will be many, after that lead," Hale said firmly. He helped himself to a cigar from the box Kneeland indicated.

"What I want," he said after the two men had lighted up, "is your authority to act for you at Halcyon Camp in any serious emergency that may come up when you're not there."

Kneeland looked startled.

"Are you expecting an emergency?"

"It's always possible."

"Well, give me a line on it."

"I can't do that, sir."

"Why not?"

"Because, to be frank, I'm afraid you might spill the beans. You might see something and go off at half-cock before the time was ripe. Since you have put me in charge of this investigation, I feel justified in asking you to give me a free hand."

Kneeland frowned and savagely cut the end of his cigar.

"That's a large order—and I don't like mysteries."

"I know you don't, sir. That's why you asked me to look into this one."

"And there is one? You're sure of that?"

"I'm pretty sure of it. But I can't prove it unless the person back of it gives himself away."

"Who doesn't know the poor old girl?"

doing it all the time." His caution returned. "You understand that I can't be quoted in any way or even mentioned in connection with a case of that sort."

"Given the conditions I've suggested, what would be the procedure for the innocent bystander who is watching them?"

"H-m-m-m." It was the doctor's turn to talk, and he did it. Hale listened, but questions, made a few notes. At the end of twenty minutes he got up and held out his hand.

"Thanks," he said gratefully.

"You've given me just what I needed."

The doctor returned the grip.

Hale went away optimistically. He was still walking in dark places, but at least he had one destination in sight. It was fifteen minutes past four. He called up the second psychiatrist and had another break.

The second psychiatrist was a different type from the first. He was impressed by Hale's letter from Doctor Kingsbury, the psychiatrist, and obviously rather proud of his brief association with him. Hale suspected him of being a bit of a medical snob. Like Dewar he attached much importance to Kingsbury's assertion that Hale's discretion could be relied upon. After a little fencing the two men got down to brass tacks. Yes, Doctor Hitchcock knew Doctor Craig. Then all the unhelpful data Hale had expected—Craig's fine training, his medical connections, and the like.

"All that being granted," Hale asked Doctor Hitchcock, "why isn't Craig more popular? Why hasn't he any friends?"

Hitchcock was ready to answer that.

"He's too young, for one thing," he pointed out. "For another, he's too self-centered. Doesn't care for friends. He hasn't time for them. He considers his own time very valuable—much more valuable than some of us think it is," he smiled.

"He has dropped hints that he's on the track of something important. He's corresponding with some bigwig in Vienna, but he doesn't say who it is."

"What about his character as you see it?"

"Ambitious—rather abnormally so. Ruthless, I'd say, in going after what he wants. That's all I know about him. Part of that is theory."

Hale was satisfied. He had put a wholly different problem to Hitchcock from the one presented to Dewar. He had got what he wanted from both. He returned to the building that held Ainsworth's office and again interviewed the elevator operator. No, Mr. Ainsworth had not been in the building that day. The operator didn't expect him. He had been there last Thursday. He never came more than once a week these days and often he didn't show up for two or three weeks.

"When he does show up you won't feel obliged to mention that a cer-just off the Avenue, in the Sixties, and much like a dozen other brownstone houses in its neighborhood. His ring at the bell was answered with deliberation by a middle-aged colored man neatly dressed and prematurely bald.

"I'm stopping here tonight," Rex said. "Mr. Kneeland telephoned you about it, I suppose."

"Yes, suh."

"Here's my luggage," said Hale as he entered.

He took from his pocket, and held out, a comb, a box of safety razors, a tooth brush, and a small cake of soap, each article chasteily wrapped in cellophane. He had just purchased the collection in a corner drug-store. "My plan," he added sedately, "is to escape in a sheet if the house catches fire tonight."

"If you-all will jest come this way—" The man led him up the staircase.

"What's your name?" Rex asked as they went.

"George Davis, suh."

"Well, George Davis, there are those who like to wrap themselves in silk pajamas on a night like this, but I'm not one of them. There's no one but you in the house, Mr. Kneeland said."

"No, suh."

George warmed into hospitality as he led the guest along an upper hall.

"Mist' Kneeland say you-all can have anything you want," he announced, throwing open a door.

"All right, thanks," Hale said gratefully. "I'll take that portrait of Miss Joan on this wall. It's a good one."

They had entered a front bedroom on the second floor, Miss Kneeland's portrait, painted by Wayne Adams faced them from a commanding position above the mantel.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Describes Correct Diet for Cool Weather; Explains How to Keep Warm and Well

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

MANY people look upon fall weather with foreboding. They cannot observe leaves on the ground without a feeling of vague uneasiness—and the sight of brown and barren fields fills them with desolation.

This, I think, is a throwback to an earlier day when the advent of cool weather foretold long months of bitterly cold days in draughty, inadequately heated houses. And the lack of adequate heat was only one of many difficulties. The principal reason for fearing cold weather is another heritage from the past.

Limited Diet of an Earlier Day

There was a time within memory of many of us when the terms "cold-weather diet" and "warm-weather diet" had real meaning. Winter food differed a great deal from summer food, particularly in the absence of fresh fruits and vegetables, and in the restricted use of milk, and milk products.

The limited diet of winter was enforced by conditions of that period.

Methods of production, transportation, refrigeration and storage of foods, which are commonplace today, were then unknown.

Fruits and vegetables were consumed when and where they were grown, and when cold weather prevented their growth, they were not available. The canning industry was young and the grocery store in cold weather presented a far different appearance from the modern food store in which the shelves are lined, row upon row, with shining cans of the finest fruits and vegetables to be found anywhere in the world, plus an amazing assortment of prepared milks.

It was an accepted fact that fruits, vegetables, and the generous use of milk belonged to the summer months, while in winter everyone ate an unbalanced diet. As a result of lacking these essential protective foods, health went down rapidly from late fall to early spring.

The winter diet was deficient in minerals and vitamins, which science has proven to be the protectors of health, barriers against disease, sustainers of life. But in those days, vitamins were unknown and very little had been learned about minerals. Therefore, when people became ill during cold weather, the natural conclusion was that sickness was inevitable during the winter season.

Cold Weather Really a Tonic

Times have changed. Scientific knowledge has increased. The genius of man has asserted itself in mechanical advancement. The expressions, "cold-weather diet" and "warm-weather diet," have lost their former meaning.

Almost without exception, the protective foods are available throughout the year, no matter where we live.

It is therefore possible to protect the health by a balanced diet all the year 'round, and to benefit by the tonic effect of cold weather. For, contrary to popular belief, cold weather is beneficial, and not harmful, to healthy people.

Cold speeds up all the activities of the body. The circulation is improved, muscle tone is increased, and digestion, absorption and elimination are stimulated. Even prolonged cold is thus a tonic to health, provided we do not weaken our bodies by an unbalanced diet.

It is partly because so many people continue to eat improperly, in spite of our newer knowledge of nutrition, that we still find an increasing amount of sickness in the fall, which mounts steadily until it reaches its peak in the months of January, February and March.

Dangers of an Improper Diet

Yet winter need have no terrors for the fit. Only the weak, the unfit, surrender and become its victims. That the number of victims is large each winter merely indicates how many people neglect their health through careless living, and especially through careless eating.

Measures to protect one's self against the attack of winter should be taken during the summer and early fall. A sturdy resistance against the ills of winter should be built up by means of a balanced diet which assures an abundant supply of the minerals and vitamins.

When a person is undernourished or improperly nourished, he is denied of every defense. He is chilled by the slightest drop in temperature. He offers fertile soil

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Keep Screens From Rusting.—Window screens, rubbed over with kerosene when they are put away in autumn, will not be found rusted when wanted next summer.

Drying Woolens.—Blankets, sweaters and other woolen things will be softer if dried in a well ventilated room. Long exposure to the direct sun hardens the woolen material.

Longer Life to Towels.—Towels will last longer if washed before the dirt and grime become so ground into them that harsh rubbing is necessary to get them clean.

Cleaning Enamel Dish.—If an enamel dish has been badly burned, fill it with salt water and put it on the stove to boil. Empty and rub with a cloth. If the burn marks still remain, sprinkle a little salt onto the cloth and rub.

Uses for Onion.—There will be no danger of rust forming on steel knives and forks if they are rubbed over once a week with a slice of raw onion. Linen that is slightly scorched can be remedied by rubbing the affected parts with a piece of raw onion. Rinse afterwards in cold water. After tinware has been washed, rub with a slice of raw onion. Then polish in the usual way.

Let Us Tell You More About It

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL

By Strick

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL—I think that by now the people of Floyd County should be well acquainted with the FHA plan to keep the cover from blowing off the bed and the water from freezing up in the kitchen—after a month's campaign which has been engaged in by several lumber men, real estate dealers, insurance firms, household and electrical companies—on "Moderate For Winter"—these business institutions have attempted to make the public FHA conscious—to explain the operations of the Federal Administration Insured Loan Plan—if you are planning to build or modernize—See one of the firms advertising in the Plainsman.

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL—This week's nod from our column goes to the Lubbock Daily Times—a new paper in the Hub City known as "Lubbock's Streamlined Newspaper"—it's tabloid—home owned and published—A very good daily newspaper—used INS—news and

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL—The first cold weather and noether of the year would have caused me to change to winter weight trousers but—mine are all summer—well—the north wind is not so worse on the first trip through—it's the return from the South that takes the bark off—Season's low last week was 35 degrees—very sharp.

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL—Noticed somewhere—"A College Education enables a man to get a job from a man who doesn't have one"—well there is some advantage—not everybody has a job these days—and probably will not be long until porters and bell-hops will be required to have a degree. But on second thought—Somebody does have to stay away from college in order to furnish the jobs.

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL—There are hundreds of advantages of college degrees—and in many cases a requirement—the past few years have taught us this—it is not necessarily what you know—it is who you know—some of the college boys sell it suction—but Webster's probably has a more dignified cloak for it.

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL—Just around the bend—until duck season and the duck-dinner aspirant will be mattering (without proper stress and emphasis) — "Whither midst falling dew"—as the elusive waterfowl pursue their way—just as he is about to take a "pot" shot—we need some rain to put water in the lakes—or the ducks and geese are going to be scarce—Official season this year is six weeks instead of four as last—Game officials say that the migratory waterfowl crop is increasing annually.

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL—Guess it's about the week to contribute something to the education of my G. P.—this about the evening preceding All Hallow or All Saints Day—Hallowe'en—when the boys tie the windows—and the spooks romp and stomp—I believe this modern age has changed all the old time methods of celebrating Hallowe'en—a rippin' good dance—takes care of the celebration.

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL—'Sa funny thing—more people come in for extra copies of the Plainsman to get a pattern or a recipe than to preserve one for the "Strictly Confidential" column—I don't know what this world's coming to—people care more for wearing clothes and eating than reading an educational column—I give Plainsman readers food for thought—but they prefer food that's bought—Maybe if more people had Jeeps—these or-shills would not be lost.

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL—Podantic proverbs and pedantic song titles—all the rage—Like "There is a son of Ham concealed in the wood-pile—or—Aged Ebony Joseph—Old Black Joe—we could say "The Exceedingly Copious Existence"—which wouldn't serve too well as a pedant for "The More Abundant Life"—as for that matter—the phrase itself—doesn't meet actualities either—Confidentially yours—Strick.

ious? Amazing Relief for... If you think all... If you are interested in writing for the radio you'd better make a list of the things that just mustn't be done in the script of the average serial. Only the older men can smoke—preferably a pipe or a cigar; no women can smoke. No one, not even the villain, can touch liquor.

As a radio veteran Lanny Ross is true to the air waves, but his summer as a theatrical star almost made him wish that he'd gone on the stage long ago instead of becoming a singer. He appeared in a number of summer theaters, and at the one in Ogonquit, Maine, a farmer was so pleased with Lanny's work in "Petticoat Fever" that he came backstage afterward and promised Lanny free milk for a year.

Star Dust

- ★ Hard Road of Fame
- ★ Buck Doffs Sombrero
- ★ Mature Movies

By Virginia Vale
HOWARD HUGHES must get awfully tired of hearing that he's going to marry first one limelighted young woman and then another. Unless he's grown so accustomed to it that he just doesn't pay any attention any more.

The gossip linking his name to Katharine Hepburn's had barely died down before the rumor-mongers were insisting that Bette Davis would become his wife as soon as she had divorced her husband. He made no comment. Bette denied that she and "Ham" were going to get a divorce, as long as she could; she insisted that she was merely spending a vacation in Nevada, instead of establishing a residence for legal reasons.

The odds have been against that marriage for a long time, ever since she began her speedy climb up the ladder to fame. She has done everything that she possibly could to make it a success; it's not her fault that it failed. But Hollywood has a way of being awfully hard on marriages in which one person is far more successful than the other.

"Nobody outside this town knows how tough such a marriage can be, here," a star once told me. "Stars associate with stars, big people with other big ones. You have to do it! I was a star and my husband was a not very successful leading man, and in spite of everything we could do, we almost had to separate, before he got a lucky break and was on top too."

It's going to seem awfully funny to have Buck Jones turning into a straight dramatic star. But that's what he is going to do. He has finished "Law of the Texan," which he says is his final western, and after a short vacation he will begin work in Paramount's "Vice Squad." We take this opportunity of showing Buck in a ten-gallon top-piece for perhaps the last time.

If you believe—along with a lot of other people—that the movies are still in their infancy, pause and consider the fact that recently, in New York, a plaque was unveiled on the wall of the building now standing on the site where the first theatrical motion picture was screened. The machine that made that showing possible was Thomas Edison's Vitascope, and his daughter, Mrs. Joan E. Sloan, unveiled the plaque.

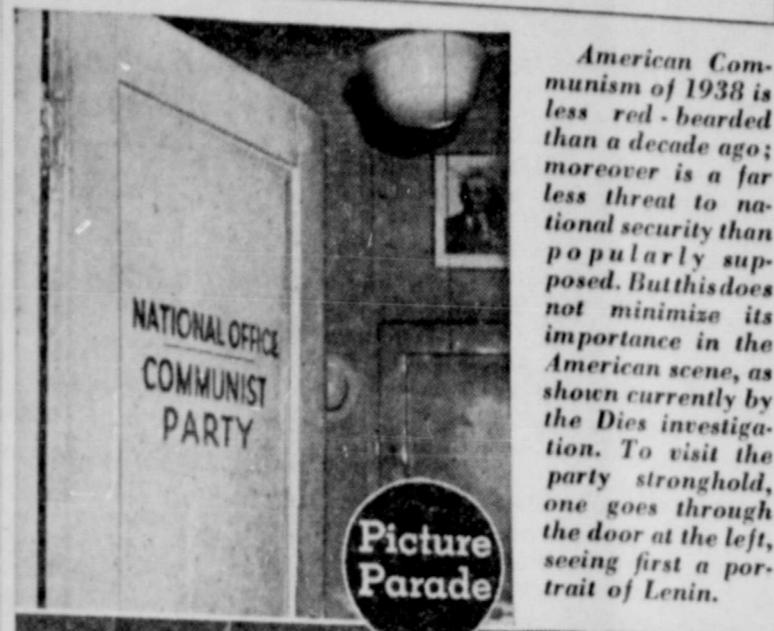

Another fact that brings home the realization that the movies have been in existence for quite some time is the presence, in the cast of RKO's "Gunga Din," of a young woman named Fay McKenzie. She has had experience in stock—with her parents' troupe—and has appeared with various Los Angeles theatrical companies, but has yet to make her name in pictures. But she made her screen debut when she was ten months old—in the role of Gloria Swanson's daughter!

If you are interested in writing for the radio you'd better make a list of the things that just mustn't be done in the script of the average serial. Only the older men can smoke—preferably a pipe or a cigar; no women can smoke. No one, not even the villain, can touch liquor.

As a radio veteran Lanny Ross is true to the air waves, but his summer as a theatrical star almost made him wish that he'd gone on the stage long ago instead of becoming a singer. He appeared in a number of summer theaters, and at the one in Ogonquit, Maine, a farmer was so pleased with Lanny's work in "Petticoat Fever" that he came backstage afterward and promised Lanny free milk for a year.

Have you heard the new singer with Horace Heidt's band, Jean Farney? When the band was playing in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, she walked into town from the farm where she worked and asked for an audition. Heidt was skeptical, but let her sing. And so she got the job.

Communism, 1938 Variety

Communism's headquarters are in an imposing New York building on Union square, where the party's ranking officers reside, where communistic literature is published, where one may buy buttons and emblems. In the same neighborhood is the national Socialist party, bitter rival of the "hammer and sickle" fraternity. Above: files in Communism's headquarters where are stored pamphlets on party, labor, peace, war and other subjects.

"Mother" of American Communism is Ella Reeve Bloor (left), who was the daughter of "a rich old Republican," who began her career as a follower of Eugene Debs. Since then she has known picket lines from coast to coast, has been through some of industry's bitterest strikes. General secretary of Communism is Earl Browder (right), who not only maintains his organization, but strives to win new members. When not out of New York, he lives in Yonkers with his Russian wife and their three children.

Communists make much fun of the Dies investigation, which attempted to show America was undermined by this menace. When the committee moved from Washington to New York, pretty girl communists chided congressmen for believing a charge that Shirley Temple was innocently supporting Communism. When their pictures are taken, ardent communists give the salute, as did Benjamin Sobel (left) when he testified before the Dies committee.

Communism barks loudly, as shown by its many publications.
