Rev. Jno. E. Eldridge Returned to Floydada Charge For Another Year's Work

By Staying Fit,

Prefacing some seasonable advice on common sense ways of avoiding colds, with the remark that it is a mistake to say you "catch" a cold. Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer, added "as a matter of fact the cold catches you when you are not up to the mark, physically. Therefore:

1. Keep yourself as physically fit as possible. Eat nourishing food. Have your meals at regular times. Avoid rich, indigestible combinations .. Include plenty of milk, other dairy products and fruit in your diet. Remember to drink plenty of water-several glasses during the day, every day.

2. Dress according to the weather. Add a sweater to your outfit, or a heavy coat when the frosty days come. Avoid sudden chilling. Don't expose yourself unnecessarily to draughts. Don't sit around in wet clothing. If you are caught in a drenching downpour, change to dry clothing as soon as possible.

3. Take some outdoor exercise every day. Be out in the sunlight as to get rid of a cold is to go to bed; much as possible. If you have a job that keeps you indoors most of the day, at an open window, flushing son, Reid, retraed home Monday

5. Colds are spread by the discharges from the nose and throat. Every time the victim of a cold has a coughing spell, germ-laden droplets of mucus are brought to the surface and spread around. Every sneeze throws germ-ladden sprays into the air. Avoid these hazards. Don't mingle unnecessarily with persons who have colds.

Religion

In times of stress men are known to seek solace in religion. But even religion's solace becomes difficult when men are persecuted for their faith and race. That is the plight now facing all German opponents of Nazidom's socialistic ideology, which dictates that the state must come first, that religion must take what is left. Thus, in less than a week's time, German Jews were persecuted unmercifully and driven back to medieval ghetto style of living, while German Catholics also found themselves on the defensive.

Though the Vatican has long been outspoken against Germany's fiveyear persecution of Jews, outright hostility did not come until last month's Nazi storming of Theodore CARDINAL VON FAULHABER Terrorism arrived from Vienna.

Cardinal Innitzer's palace in Vienna. Now this battle has spread to Munich, where Michael Cardinal von Faulhaber's palace was stoned. At Salzburg the Catholic university society has disbanded.

The immediate excuse for a 36hour anti-Jewish hysteria was the assassination in Paris of Ernest von Rath, a German diplomatic attache, by a 17-year-old Polish Jew. Righteously proclaiming that German Jews are answerable for the anti-Nazi acts of world Jewry, Germany has resorted to medieval terrorism and forced her Jewish citizens into such an economically impossible situation that self-extermination appears to be the eventual result.

This seemingly ill-reasoned solution of the Jewish problem apparently typifies the Nazi method of dealing with enemies, real or imaginary. Observers are certainly not inclined to accept the Von Rath murder as a reason for the latest wave of persecution. Probably a better answer is that totalitarian rulers must have a constant "cause celebre" and that Nazidom, having won its Czechoslovakian cause, has found a new wave of Jewish persecution the most satisfactory method of keeping national enthusiasm whipped up. However, since world opinion has rebelled against such a gruesome policy, it may prove a boomerang.

Foreign

To ward off Germany's aggression on southeastern Europe, Turkey's late President Kemal Ataturk led formation of a Balkan entente. Its members: Greece, Turkey, Rumania and Jugoslavia. In the center lies independent Bulgaria, still sulking over World war territorial losses to Greece, Jugoslavia and Rumania, waiting for the highest bidder to buy her favor.

Since dynamic President Ataturk died, since Germany's economic drive has borne fruit this year in Austria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia, the Balkan entente is now looking for every possible means of solidifying itself. Observers predict that Jugoslavia will return her warwon territory to Bulgaria before January 1, also that Greece and Rumania will do likewise. In return, Bulgaria will join the Balkan en-

Meanwhile, although the entente will be strengthened by this shift of frontiers. Turkey's anti-Nazi position is not nearly so strong under her new president, Ismet Inonu, as under Ataturk. U. S. and Mexico have reached a settlement over Mexican expropriation of American-owned farm lands. On December 1 a two-man committee will meet in Mexico City to determine the amount of Mexico's liability, after which a $1,000,000 initial payment will be made. Subsequent payments will not be less than $1,000,000 a year. Mexico insists, however, that the farm land settlement establishes no precedent requiring her to pay for $400,000,000 in foreignowned oil lands seized during the past few years. Why she should pay for land which contains no oil, meanwhile refusing to pay for land that does, is a perplexing bit of reasoning. The most likely answer is that farm land is cheaper than oil land, and that Mexico hopes her larger sin will be forgiven if she atones for the smaller sin.

Agriculture

The U. S. department of agriculture's efforts to export surplus wheat have never enjoyed the state department's sympathy, since foreign wheat-growing nations would be angry if their domestic prices were depressed by U. S. dumping of surplus grain. Although Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace now admits the export subsidy plan is not efficient, his department is committed to disposing of part of the U.S. surplus in this manner. Meanwhile Secretary of State Cordell Hull has held his breath, hoping these exports will not injure international relations, especially with South American nations.

This was the situation when Frank A. Theis, Kansas City grain broker, appeared at Rio de Janeiro to sell 15,000,000 bushels of U.S. wheat in Brazil. That nation was not immediately hostile but a strong protest came from Argentina, which now supplies all of Brazil's wheat. Although Brazilians could use cheap wheat to make cheap bread, Argentina is a good customer of the U.S.

Upshot was a protest to the state department, delivered in Washington by Argentina's Ambassador Don Felipe Espel. The problem's crux:

ARGENTINA'S FELIPE ESPEL Wheat provoked a crisis.

If Argentina could prove the agriculture department was assisting Mr. Theis in selling his wheat to Brazil, Buenos Aires would consider it equivalent to an "international incident," Mr. Hull issued an immediate denial of official U.S. implication in the scheme.

So did Mr. Wallace, but he could not refrain from worrying publicly about the U. S. agricultural problem. Since future "international incidents" will almost inevitably result if the U. S. tries to sell any more wheat abroad, Mr. Wallace must now concentrate on solving the problem domestically. The recent elections rebuffed his 1938 farm bill but he promises to defend it before the next congress. He has even invited newly-elected congressmen to offer their suggestions. Meanwhile, little more is heard of the two-price plan for domestic dumping, under which low-income families would buy surplus commodities at special and conservatism. Thus every lengthy Republican administration has been succeeded by a shorter Democratic one, attesting to the American people's inherent conservatism. Since the Republican party reached its latest low ebb under Candidate Alfred Landon in 1936, none but the most optimistic expected anything but a minor gain so early as 1938. But it has proved otherwise, thanks to (1) a growing belief that the Roosevelt administration's expensive recovery efforts have been unsuccessful, and (2) a fear that New Deal policies were encouraging the growth of radicalism.

Moreover, it has been apparent that the public must eventually protest against the political corruption which unavoidably gathers around so large a financial project as WPA. Though the Roosevelt administration may be blameless in this respect, such political machines as that of Pennsylvania's Gov. George H. Earle have unsavory reputations.

Another consideration, one that received less attention than eventually proved justified, was dissatisfaction among America's numerically important farmers. Since the agricultural vote can control congress, it looked bad for the administration when this year's highly touted farm program failed. Despite Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace's sincere efforts, New Deal farm legislation has left producers in northern states without permanent relief. (See Agriculture.)

Almost without exception the November general election has therefore made the U.S. return to its most normal political alignment in approximately 15 years. Always Democratic, the "solid South" has clung tenaciously to tradition. But this tradition does not mean the South will line up 100 per cent behind President Roosevelt, for South Carolina, Georgia and Maryland elected senators partially unsympathetic with the New Deal. Several other southern senators and congressmen. not up for re-election this year, are also unsympathetic.

Though in many cases the Republican trend is not so great as first appearances might indicate, practically all northern states have shown a surge back to conservatism. This was especially marked in Minnesota and Wisconsin, where Farmer-Labor and Progressive partisans were ousted after long incumbencies. Michigan swung away from Democratic Gov. Frank Murphy largely because he sympathized with the radically tinged Committee for Industrial Organization. In all northwestern states the swing to Republicanism was due partly to agricultural dissatisfaction. New England's industrial population rebelled against allegedly oppressive taxation and the C. I. O., while this territory's traditional conservatism so played an important role. Substantially the same explanation can Pennsylvania.

The only important New Deal where a rock-ribbed Republican governor was ousted; in North Dakota, whose notoriously unsettled placed a Democrat in the governor's chair, and in Maryland.

But such a resume does not tell the entire story, for even those states which remained Democratic have shown an amazingly strong Republican upsurge. New York's Gov. Herbert H. Lehman won by only 70,000 votes over his Republican opponent, youthful Thomas E. Dewey, whereas two years ago Mr. Lehman had a 500,000 margin. Illinois, which remains predeminantly New Deal, increased its Republican house representation and returned a much larger conservative vote than in Having gained at least 8 senators, 81 house members and 11 governors. the Republican party once more has a vocal minority in congress. Moreover its 1940 presidential hopes are better, despite the defeat in New York of Tom Dewey, once considered a likely candidate. If the 1938 election has created any new presidential possibilities, they are Ohio's Republican Sen. Robert Taft and Missouri's Democratic Sen. Bennett Champ Clark.

What the Republican upsurge will do for the U.S. remains conjectural, but post-election stock market activ. ity has been encouraging. To help industry, the American Federation of Labor is already banking on G. O. P. congressional aid in amending the Wagner labor relations act. The outstanding fact is that 1938's Republican party has emerged a liberalized entity, well-spanked for its former ultra-conservatism.

When Financier Bernard Baruch first proposed a huge United States rearmament program after the European war scare, one of his talking points was that private enterprise would be revitalized. Official Washington agrees, as shown by rumors that the 1917 war industries board may be re-established to co-ordinate that it derives from the cone-shaped a "rearmament spending program" by private industry. The government expects $5,000.000.000 to be spent for rehabilitation and expansion of railroads, public utilities, chemicals, automotive and aircraft industries. It also expects "mobilization" of America's raw materials, solving such problems as that of manganese, an essential element in steel production which now comes States deposits are not developed. tion."

Like all natural phenomena and many not so natural, U. S. political fortunes run in cycles of liberalism and consequation. Thus awary

ADVENTURERS' CLUB

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

The Beast at the Door

ELLO EVERYBODY: Here's Oskar Baradinsky of Yonkers, N. Y., come to join the Adventurers' Club and to furnish us with still another illustration of how truth can be stranger than fiction

If you were reading a story in a magazine and came on a passage that described how wolves killed a calf on a Pennsylvania farm, not more than sixty miles west of Philadelphia, and in the year 1926-well-what would you think of that story?

If you are like me, you'd probably say the author was crazy and turn to another story that sounded more true to life. A fiction writer just couldn't put an incident of that sort down on paper and get away with it. But Old Man Fact doesn't go by the rules that govern fiction writers. It's actually true that wolves have killed calves in eastern Pennsylvania-and that isn't the half of it, either, as Oskar Baradinsky

In the fall of 1926, Oskar was taking a motor trip from Boston to Louisville, Ky., and stopped overnight at his uncle's farmhouse on the Lincoln highway, 10 miles northeast of Coatesville, Pa. It was Oskar's first visit to the farm in several years, and his aunt, who came to the door, was surprised to see him. And when, presently, his uncle came in from feeding the chickens he seemed to be not only surprised but worried about something as well.

Worried About Wolves.

They all sat down to supper, and during the course of the meal Oskar found out what was worrying his uncle. He told Oskar that the night before a young calf had been killed by wolves that came from the surrounding woods. It wasn't the first time that sort of thing had happened, either, he said. Time and again he had set traps for the beasts, but never had he been able to catch any of them. Now he was at his wits' end, for one by one the animals were killing off all his most valuable live stock.

After supper they went into the parlor. Oskar's uncle continued talking about the wolves. He had just about decided to sit up in the barn all night and see if he couldn't get some of them with a rifle.

He fired as one of the welves sprang at the borses.

were all sitting around the stove," Oskar says, "for it had been cold all day and after dark the wind started to blow ominously. We could hear it whistling about the house and the warmth of the fire was comforting."

About nine o'clock there was a knock at the door. Oskar's uncle got up to see who it was and Oskar could hear him say "Hello Donald," to someone and invite him to come in. The visitor was one of the local Dutch-American farmers, and he said, "I ain't got much time. Just thought I'd drop in and find out if you were going into town tomorrow."

"Why, yes," Oskar's uncle answered. "I'm going over first thing in be made for votes in Ohio and the morning. Are the missus and the kids with you?"

"They're outside in the wagon," the farmer replied. And scarcely were the words out of his mouth when they heard a woman's scream gains have come in California, accompanied by the terrified whining of the horses!

Farmer Feared for His Children.

In an instant the little farmhouse parlor was a bedlam. Oskar's political situation has freakishly aunt started up from her chair. The visitor, rooted to his own chair, cried, "Good Lord, what's that?" Oskar's uncle was on his feet running across the room, "That's wolves!" he shouted over his shoulder as he reached behind a bureau for his rifle.

"Wolves!" In the light of the small electric bulb, Oskar could see the color leave the farmer's face. Outside the wind howled. The horses were still screaming, and now the cattle and the chickens joined in the terrible din. "Wolves," the farmer repeated. "Oh my God. My kids are out there!"

He was out of his chair and across the floor like a shot. He jerked open the door. "He and my uncle," says Oskar, "went through the doorway at the same time. But my uncle carried a rifle and the farmer was unarmed. Over the din of the animals and the howling of the wind I could hear their footsteps crossing the porch-clumping down the four wooden steps. Then I got up and followed."

The horses were still screaming dreadfully, but after that first woman's shriek, no sound had come from the occupants of the wagon. A light, dark form sprang at one of the horses and the horse reared. Oskar's uncle knelt down on the ground, raised his rifle and fired.

Wolves Scared Away by Shots.

The sky was almost pitch black, and the road was so far away from the house that it was impossible for the men to tell if the shot had been effective. Oskar's uncle fired again-then all three of them ran toward

As they ran they could see black forms scurrying away across the fields. The shots had frightened the wolves away. When they arrived at the wagon they found the farmer's wife slumped unconscious in the seat. The children, in the back of the wagon, were awake and crying. The horse, his skin torn and bleeding and his neck bitten in several places, was rearing and kicking and trying to break away.

It took Oskar's uncle a long time to quiet the frantic animal. Meanwhile the farmer carried his wife into the house and gave her a few drops of whisky. When she came to she told a harrowing story of seeing three enormous wolves appear suddenly out of the darkness and jump at the horse's neck and flanks. At the sight of them she had screamed and fainted.

"My uncle loaned his friend another horse and a rifle to get home with," says Oskar, "and after the children were calmed and the mother felt better they started off again. They got home safely, and several weeks later my uncle wrote me that he'd shot one of the marauders-a little fellow weighing 145 pounds."

Origin of Name Coney Island Fortune says: "No one knows exactly how Coney Island came by its name. There are those who claim sand dunes of the original beach. And there are others who believe that it is a perversion of Colmanthe name of a sauor on Henry Hudson's Half-Moon, who was killed by Indians in an unexplained brawl. But the most heavily supported and most plausible tradition is that the early Dutch settlers found hordes of rabbits scampering across the sand dunes and called it Konijn eiland

Origin of Stave Churches

The origin of the quaint and beautifui Norwegian stave churches is somewhat uncertain, but it is thought that they were fashioned after the style of the Viking ships. In a country where shipbuilders were the best carpenters, wooden buildings erected by them were likely to be influenced by the traditions of the shipyard. Many features support this theory, such as the method of locking the planks together, and the practice of carving and ornamenting the gables with dragons' out discarding its principle. Forced take up permanent residence at Fort largely from Cuba because United was a logical and gradual derivative borrowed from the dragonhead beaks of the Vikings' ships.

Tumult and Shouting Are Ov So Now What Does It All M

For Months to Come the Results Will Be Subin Measurement; More Thinking and Less Fr Seems the Rule; 'Middle Class' in Revol

By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D.

WASHINGTON. - The period of power which Mr. Room distorted claims by the winners and attributed to a few th the equally distorted alibis of the losers seems to be about over. We have heard all of the tumult and the lated to organized labor shouting of an election time. The total vote has been tabulated, and it shows a greater number-83 new ones-of Republicans in the house of representatives and eight new Republican senators. Some 14 more states have Republican governors ready to take over from the Democrats they have displaced. There were what may be called important numerical gains for the Republican party label.

But while the total vote has been tabulated and served as the basis for the claims of the winners and the alibis of the losers, those figures will be forgotten soon. The thing that is important is the result. We will be measuring the results for months to come.

It is quite unimportant, in my mind, to appraise what the swing of a few votes may have meant. It is, however, mighty important to note that there were hard and close fights for scores of candidates, in this 1938 election. There were hard and close fights in the whole of New England; there were bitter struggles in New York, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and elsewhere. They were fought out largely on major issues because, generally speaking, local questions did not provide the fundamental issue in the states that are so important politically as those mentioned.

What does it mean? What is the portent? Other writers and analysts have given and are giving their views. I guess there is no prohibition against mine.

I firmly believe the votes cast in the 1938 election were the expression of an opposition to further experimentation by government in the field of unsound theories; the ex- by the sharp division of m pression was against further use of the American people as guinea pigs, and it was definitely for a middle-ofthe-road national policy. It was, therefore, a showing, a proof, of the necessity for our traditional twoparty system of government, and surely, to that extent, the nation and national life benefited by the poll taken on November 8, 1938.

More Thinking and Less Emotion Seems to Be Rule

Looking over the whole picture, as the colors and the outlines now exhibit themselves, one who favors good government of a sound and lasting character cannot help having his faith renewed. Of course, the political pendulum swings back and forth. That is to be expected. But, to me, there has appeared on the horizon a new level of political thought. Perhaps, I should not say that it is entirely new; I should say that it has been restored to its place in American life. And that observation should be amplified with the further statement that more thinking and less emotion appears to be the rule throughout the land. Absence of hysteria, or reduction of the scope of hysteria, always makes for sounder and more constructive conclusions. That is why there is so little use for an analysis of minute returns this year. The aspect is too broad to hinge upon such de-

Probably, it can be said that the vote was an expression against waste and extravagance, against corruption of the electorate by use of public moneys, such as went on among relief workers and for which we ought always to be ashamed; it probably can be said that it was a vote against blank check appropriations, or against government messing into every phase of human endeavor, or against many another item of policy in the New Deal, and if it were so said, it would be true to a degree, everywhere. But we are concerned with the sum into which these several things have been added.

Vote Discloses Revolt by So-Called 'Middle Class'

The United States has been govof the majority. It is sound. It is the absence of control to erned by an expression of the will the basis of a republic. There has publicans can not desire been much criticism of President Roosevelt on the basis of his domination of government. It has been said that he is the government because he has had such complete control that even congress moved this way or that at his drection, in the manner of puppets. If those characterizations be true, then it appears to me logical to conclude that the late election was something of a vote for government Republican Leader Mc by law and not by an individual or senate, and Republican group of individuals. By the same tin in the house, there is reasoning, it is a logical assumption tunity to fight for rea that the vote disclosed a revolt by the great middle class of the Ameri- Republican leaders can people—the group which lives something to offer beside neither by the power of organization of the New Deal and the strike threat, nor by the

THE PILGRIMS HAD TO BE THRIFTY

Pilgrim life in 1621 didn't include opportunity for indiscriminate wastage of resources, money or time. The fact that the Pilgrims were thrifty in these things, that they had the capacity for thrift, made possible the success of their colonization. Thrift and Co-Operation is the key to success in modern life, too, and though there is no longer the natural compulsion of a new and unfriendly land, the objectives and results of thrift remain the same.

Lesson for November 27 HONESTY IN ALL THINGS

LESSON TEXT-Exodus 20:15; Mat-thew 19:1-10, 45, 46. GOLDEN TEXT-Thou shalt not steal.

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts se-lected and copyrighted by International Council of Resigious Education; used by Honesty in all things would seem to be what one should have a right to expect without question. As a matter of fact, dishonesty has become so common wherever man is found that people look on the person who is strictly honest as a peculiar individual. Try reporting an undercharge (everyone complains about an overcharge) or returning excess change, and you will see how unexpected honesty really is today. Under such circumstances the Christian needs to be vigilant lest he also accommodate his own ideas of honesty and begin to justify little evasions rather than being absolutely upright.

I. Honesty Respects Property Rights (Exod. 20:15).

The very commandment against stealing implies that men have a right to that which they have made, earned, or saved. If no one had property rights there could be no stealing. Some of our modern isms reason along that line, but their reasoning is clearly not biblical or Christian.

"Thou shalt not steal" forbids every kind of theft. It includes robbery, burglary, safe - cracking, housebreaking; but it covers far more than those obvious wrongs. It refers to such things as loafing on one's job, "borrowing" money from the cash drawer, taking goods from the stock with which one is working. stealing another man's sermon and preaching it as one's own, "lifting" material out of another man's book without credit, contracting debts which one can never pay, using false weights and measures, adulterating food or other material, 'watering' milk for sale, selling worthless stock, dodging taxes or lying to the tax assessor, using a slug instead of a nickel in the telephone to escape proper payment. It really means something to be honest, and it is a great testimony to the unregenerate world. II. Honesty Restores Stolen Goods (Luke 19:1-10).

The story of the conversion of the despised Jewish tax collector Zacchaeus has many interesting features, but for our lesson we stress but one, namely, that the reality of his conversion was demonstrated by his honesty in restoring that which he had obtained unjustly, and that in fourfold measure.

Insofar as it is possible to do so, the honest person will make right any known injustice. To be right with God must mean that we are to be right with men. The testimony of many Christians could be presented to show that they have only entered upon real peace and usefulness as they have made consistent effort to right every wrong. to pay every debt. Often such actions open opportunities for Christian testimony and point others to the redemption in Christ, which makes a man live right as well as talk right.

III. Honesty Resents Crookedness

(Luke 19:45, 46). In sharp contrast to the prompt restitution by Zacchaeus, the converted publican, was the stubborn disobedience and dishonesty of the priests in the temple. Jesus had already cleansed the temple of the traffic in money-changing and the sale of animals for sacrifice practiced there (see John 2:13-17). On that occasion He rebuked them because they made His Father's house 'a house of merchandise." they known the change of heart of a converted Zacchaeus they would have heeded His admonition. But they did not believe in Christ and went on with their ungodly desecration of the temple area until it became "a den of thieves" (v. 46). The Lesson Commentary of the United Lutheran Church makes an unusually apt application of the truth to "the goings on in our own churches" in the following paragraph. Read it, ponder it, pray about it, then act, if it describes your church.

"Is a church honest when it assumes obligations that it cannot meet, and is then forced to use all sorts of questionable means to raise money for the benefit of the church? Is a church honest when it turns a building consecrated to the worship of God into a restaurant or a theater, regardless of whether it is done to make money for the church or to attract people who are more interested in eating and drinking or playing than in the preaching of the Word and the worship of God? Is a church honest that turns its pulpit into a lecture platform for the discussion of current events or the review of popular books or plays while the world is destroying itself because it does not know the time of its visitation? The answer . . . is that the church is dishonest that permits any such things, because it robs God of the honor and glory due to Him, and it robs people of their chance of salvation by giving them tones when they need the bread of

"Hale-for God's sake-wake up. Hale! Hale!"

"Good Lord, man, I am awake. What's the matter? Anyone sick?

As he spoke Hale shook off the clutching hand, sprang out of bed, seized his dressing-gown from the chair where he had flung it, and slipped it over his pajamas. So distraught was his visitor that Hale had to break away almost by force from the other's frantic grasp. He now seized the young man's shoulders, pressed him backward into a chair, and stood over him, still gripping him and trying to steady him by eyes and hands.

"Kneeland, pull yourself together. Tell me what's happened. Quick. Every second may count."

"Nothing has happened!" Kneeland pulled away from the other's grip, and added with the gulp of a terror-stricken child, "I-I-just can't stand it. That's all. Oh, God!"

Hale crossed the room to the open door, closed it, and locked it. He remembered now that he had forgotten to lock it when he went to Kneeland drew a quick breath and covered his eyes with his hands.

"What must you think of me?" he muttered. "I think you're the victim of one of the most hellish schemes that was ever tried on a poor devil," Hale said simply. "What I can't understand is why you've let it go on so long."

Pretty Workaday Fashions

DURING the indoor season to come, make plenty of bright new workaday clothes for yourself and your daughter. Here's a design for charming aprons to wear over your own dark house frocks for protection and prettiness. And a simple, flare-skirted dress for school girls, so becoming and practical that just one of it will never be enough. Both of these patterns, in fact, you're sure to use over and over in different materials. They're easy as french dressing to make. A detailed sew chart accompanies each of them.

A Trade Mark Is an Honor Badge and Newspaper Advertising the Sentinel

Substitutes today are the illegitimate children of business. They are fatherless and unknown and they come to the consumer with a "Just as good" label on them which indicates clearly to the thinking buyer that she is buying something which is only "Just as good." The unknown product, the substitute parasite, has no reputation at stake. It is merely advertised for sale on a price basis and if the consumer does not like the quality, the manufacturer has suffered no injury because he is unknown and because he rarely links his name with a product as a standard of quality and a measuring stick of buying. It merely competes on a 'take a chance' basis.

The manufacturers of well-known quality merchandise today place their names upon it and advertise it as the best they can offer to the consumer. The name of a manufacturer on an advertised product says this: This is the best product I know how to make. It is pure, good and worthy of your purchase. I think so well of it that I place my name upon it as a guarantee to you of its goodness. If it does not fulfill your wants I will gladly make

There is no good reason why you should accept the unknown instead of the known; the untried instead of the tested; the doubtful instead of the sure. To refuse unknown substitutes is a guarantee to yourself of positive satisfaction in buying. If every purchaser will confine his or her purchases to known, advertised quality merchandise there will be little cause for complaint. Travie mark products tell their own story. It pays to look before you buy. Reading the advertisements in the newspaper, looking at trade marks, labels and names on products has purse interest.

But orders were that she must be glamorous-and that she must take on some weight in order to do it in "The Last Frontier," in which she captivates Gary Cooper.

She gave in, and then stumbled while playing badminton and broke a bone in her right foot. That meant being in bed with her foot in a plaster cast for three weeks, she was told. But she went night clubbing, plaster cast and all-if a girl's going to be glamorous she has to be seen about town. And her earnest effort to acquire the reputation the studio had ordered got her nothing but a scolding.

Now we're to have an opera cycle in pictures. The San Francisco Grand Opera company has been selling out at all performances, so the motion picture companies got an inspiration and leaped right in. Metro starts the ball rolling with 'Madame Pompadour," with a European importation, Meliza Korjus, starred. Two other studios will fol-

Probably the best one of the lot will be Walt Disney's "Farmyard Symphony," which will be kneedeep in burlesques of operatic arias; it's being released practically at once.

Tom Brown's supposed to break his neck in "The Duke of West Point," and had to wear one of those braces around his neck for eight hours. (Eric von Stroheim wears one in "Grand Illusion," a foreign picture that goes down as one of the best of the year.) Afterward Brown's neck was so stiff that he thought he'd never be able to move it naturally again.

William Powell is going back to work in January, under a new contract recently signed with Metro. His first picture will be "The Return of the Thin Man," with Myrna Loy, of course. That "Thin Man" series threatens to become as lengthy as the Charlie Chan one.

If anyone were to offer a medal for "The Grand Old Man of Radio" Rudy Vallee would probably get it. Not that he's old, but he's done so much to develop good programs and has discovered so much talent that he deserves the title.

If you heard his tenth anniversary program you've already checked up on that. If you didn't, you can probably remember that the list of people he's developed as stars of the air includes a lot of famous folk, from Alice Faye to Charlie McCar-

But you may not have known that he is responsible for the modern type of guest program. Irene Bordoni was his first guest star. In 1922 his program developed into its present form. The salary list was low, and still is far below the sums paid for some similar programs which are outdistanced by his in the popularity ratings.

It takes the listeners-in to make Tommy Riggs appreciate his talents. First they made him what he is today with his "Betty Lou" voice, and now they've been writing to him to praise his very pleasant baritone voice and urge him to do more singing as himself on his program.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Jimmy Walker, ex-mayor of New York, certainly started something when he began those weekly broadcasts from the city's hospitals; his many friends in the entertainment field clamor to work for him for nothing, he gives his own services, and the programs are swell . . . DOORN'S EXILE IS MELLOWED

Twenty years ago this month the broken, hated Kaiser Wilhelm fled his decaying German empire, never to return. The World war was over and he had been vanquished. On November 28, 1918, at his castle in Spa, Hohenzollern reign.

The above hole in the ground has considerable significance. It was the entrance to a subterranean passage, leading from the Kaiser's castle at Spa to a point some miles distant in a wood. Through this tunnel fled the once proud ruler of Germany, completely beaten.

In 1918, Hohenzollerns were hated throughout the world. The above picture was printed on Armistice day of that year with the following description: "This photo was taken of the Hohenzollern tribe before it was necessary for them to scan the want ads. It is useless at this early date to venture the occupations they are liable to pursue, but it is generally understood that the French are most solicitous regarding their welfare and have offered them positions with the government. Most of the work will be done in overalls on the roads of that stricken country. This gang will soon leave for the French frontier-under guard."

But Kaiser Wilhelm went safely to Doorn, where in 1922—his first wife having died-he married the Princess Hermine von Reuss (right). Though not of blue blooded stock, she has a long line of noble ancestry. She had five children by a previous marriage.

LEFT—The Kaiser today, a proud, peaceful old man who whiles away his days at Doorn, emerging infrequently to comment on world affairs. RIGHT-But in Berlin one sees his son, Prince August Wilhelm, wearing the Nazi swastika and assuming an important role in Adolf Hitler's German government. Are the Hohenzollerns returning?

WHAT to EAT and WHY

Feed Adolescent Correctly or Tragic Consequences May Result, Warns C. Houston Goudiss; Teeth Must Receive Special Consideration

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

OFFHAND, it may seem as if there could be very little connection between a deficient diet during adolescence and painful childbirth in later years. Yet it has been demonstrated clinically that there is a definite link. It has likewise been determined that the kind of food which is fed adolescents has a significant and far-reaching influence upon their to eat too many rich mixtures beteeth in later life, and in the tween meals. As a result, the their children when they in of meat, fish, highly milled ceturn become mothers.

Preparation for Parenthood Adolescence is a difficult period at best. And if a girl takes an unbalanced diet at this time, the result may be an unstable nervous system, poor physical development, lowered vitality and inability to fight off infections. This lack of strong resistance may open the way to dental disease and to a variety of other serious infections as well. It has also been established that if a girl is poorly nourished during these years of rapid development, there may not be the slightest indication of that fact until she first becomes an expectant moth-Then she will pay for her mother's lack of nutrition knowl-

Results of Calcium Deficiency

If her diet has been deficient in calcium, for example, her pelvic bones may be imperfectly developed, so that she suffers unnecessarily during the birth of her child. And if liberal amounts of calcium have not been stored in her body, she may be called upon to make needless sacrifices from her own body in the interests of her child. It is well known that if an expectant mother's diet is not abundantly supplied with calcium, the substance will be withdrawn from her own bones and teeth in an effort to meet the needs of the developing child.

An Aid to Dental Health

For although expectant mothers are not always aware of this important fact, it is true that the first or "baby" teeth are developed within the jaw during prenatal life, and the foundations for now and then. Store the leaves in the second set are also laid at this time.

Unless the expectant mother's diet is very generously supplied with calcium, so as to allow adequate amounts for the baby's teeth and bones, nature will endeavor to meet the child's requirements by sacrificing calcium from the mother's own body. If she has no adequate reserve, then she may be forced to lose "a tooth for every child," or suffer even more serious dental ills.

Calcium-Rich Foods Required

Leading nutrition authorities hold that the average American diet is more deficient in calcium. perhaps, than in any other single nutrient. This is especially likely to be the case in the diet of the adolescent. For at that time, boys develop prodigious appetites and a case of girls, upon the teeth of diet of both boys and girls is likely to contain an abundance reals and other refined foods, with inadequate amounts of the foods rich in calcium.

The Adolescent's Diet

To balance the diet properly, these necessary protein and ened by milk and cheese which are rich in calcium; by green leafy vegetables which are also a good and by bulky foods which supply sufficient cellulose to help promote regular health habits.

Mothers of adolescent children should make a conscientious and determined effort to feed them a diet rich in calcium and vitamins A, C and D-the substances required, especially, for maintaining sound, healthy teeth. If milk and succulent fruits and vegetables figure prominently in the daily menus of the adolescent girl, they will go a long way toward helping to correct the "choosy" attitude toward food from which many older children suffer.

And if careful attention to diet is coupled with careful attention to sound hygienic habits, the health of our 'teen-age boys and girls will be greatly improved, and they will be more adequately prepared to assume the duties of parenthood.

Correct Dental Hygiene It is vitally important that the proper care be given to the teeth and mouth. But it is quite unlikely Economy Note .- Save all celery tops, wash and dry them and place in the oven, turning them an airtight tin. Use them for flavoring soups, salads, etc. . . .

A Scrap Book .- A large looseleaf note book is inexpensive and handy to use if you are saving the newspaper clippings of the doings of anyone in the family. More pages can be added when needed and any added data may be written on the note book paper alongside of the articles.

Washing Dingy Bath Towels .-Bath towels that have become dingy should be put into boiler of cold water, soap added and a little lemon juice. Heat water to boiling point. Rinse towels in lukewarm blueing water and hang in the sun.

Toast Animals. - Cut animal tremendous capacity for carbohy- shapes out of bread with animal drates or energy-producing foods, cookie cutters. that a correct routine will be followed unless mothers offer tactful advice and suggestions very frequently. For while the tiny child has his teeth brushed for him, and the young school child has his tooth-brushing ritual supervised, too often the adolescent is left to his own devices in this respect. That is a great mistake, adolescents are sometimes careless in the care of their teeth. Mothers must see to it that there are two toothbrushes, one for night and one for morning, so that it is never necessary to use a soggy brush. They must watch when the supply of tooth paste or powder runs low, and see that it is replaced. For it is surprising how few children can be persuaded to brush their teeth properly without an agreeable dentifrice! Mothers should take care to choose a dentifrice that will preserve or restore luster in the teeth. For adolescents are extremely sensitive about their appearance and they ergy foods should be supplement- must not be allowed to permit dingy teeth to spoil their smiles.

If mothers will feed their adolescents a correct diet and supersource; by eggs and fruits, valued vise their daily dental care, the for their minerals and vitamins; coming generation will not only be more attractive to look at but should enjoy more abundant often comes within a few minutes. If this way should fail - see your doctor. He will find the cause and correct it. While there, ask him about taking Bayer Aspirin to relieve headache and rheumatic pains. We believe he will tell you there is no more effective, more dependable way normal persons may use.

Simple Method Shown Here Brings Relief in Few Minutes

When you buy, ask for genuine "Bayer Aspirin" by its full name-not for "aspirin" alone

RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THERE is an amusing story about the mittens and scarf shown here. They were not hand knitted. They were purchased rather hurriedly and sent to a young miss who was away at school. She had wanted something rather gay and a bit foreign looking to wear for skating and these were perfectly plain and pretty drab. She didn't take her disappointment lying down, but decided to brighten up that scarf and miteign language as well! She found the Swedish cross-stitch design for "Charlie's Aunt." shown here and copied it in all its and backs of the mittens.
