-Weekly News Analysis-Wang Ching-wei's Declaration Forces China to Air Troubles By Joseph W. La Bine-

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst, and not necessarily of the newspaper.

War-torn China's biggest boast is her constantly growing national unity, a product of necessity that has made Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek the strongest Chinese ruler in modern history. But despite this well-publicized unity. China has not been able to make much of a showing against her Japanese invaders. Indeed, foreign military observers find Tokyo's paper-thin front lines so vulnerable that they say 30,000 American, British or French troops could put the enemy to rout. But in Jap-occupied territory are 270,000,-000 civilians and 1,250,000 armed guerrillas whose spirit of national unity is still not strong enough to inspire a sudden, inevitably success-

Better than the national unity argument is the theory that smart General Chiang has been staging a fake show of Chinese nationalism, offering a good front at the expense of his wavering government. Though Chungking headquarters are overrun with nepotism, corruption and inefficiency, many abuses have been tolerated to make the outside world think China is strong. In the end General Chiang wangled handsome loans and credit arrangements from both the U. S. and Britain, proving the stunt was working, at least temporarily.

Not anticipated, however, was the Ching-wei, who celebrated New Year's by reaching peace terms with Japanese Premier Fuminaro Konoye. Long a silent bulwark of China's Kuomintang (Nationalist) party, Mr. Wang reportedly met at Hongkong with Japanese agents and reached terms which would make him China's head man, leaving General Chiang out in the cold. Terms: (1) China should open diplomatic relations with Japanese puppet state, Manchukuo; (2) China should agree to economic "cooperation" with Japan; (3) China should adhere to the Jap-Italo-German anti-Communist agreement; (4) China should accept Japanese garrisons while the anti-Communist pact was in force.

Interpretations of the Wang demarche have come thick and fast. In Tokyo, happy Japanese thought it meant a breakdown of the Kuomintang and the spotlight of publicity on China's internal troubles. With Chiang weakened, Japanese puppet states would no longer seem pointless. In Shanghai, still Chinese despite its Japanese ownership, observers thought the Wang declaration was a well-timed Jap move to counteract U. S. and British credits to General Chiang. Whatever the cause, it was a happy day for Tokyo because China has been showing hardened resistance the past few

With the die cast, General Chiang no longer saw need for hiding his troubles. From Chungking came word of a wholesale purge from the Kuomintang of some 200 peace partisans. Expelled was Deserter Wang, charged with having attempted to gain support from military leaders in Szechuan and Yunnan provinces.

Politics

When Purge failed, when President Roosevelt's favoritism for Left-Wingers Corcoran, Hopkins, Jackson and Oliphant began bothering of science have been man's answer conservative New Dealers, forecasters saw a coming split in the Democratic party. Veering away from the White House were Vice President Garner, National Chairman Farley and Secretary of State Hull, any of whom might be a conservative 1940 presidential candidate. With two cabinet vacancies to fill, President Roosevelt had a chance to widen this breach by naming left wingers. What forecasters overlooked was the always-present possibility of concession, both by Garner, Farley, Hull, et al, and the White House. Result: President Roosevelt has named Harry Hopkins to the commerce secretaryship and former same time retaining party leader-

Roosevelt strategy: Until just before congress opened, the White House reserved comment on what every legislator knew was a certainty, namely, drastic revision of such New Deal brainchildren as social security, the Wagner act, relief administration and neutrality legislation. The President also knew such revision was a certainty, but the trump card was held back. Then, with the Hopkins and Murphy appointments apparently due for congressional opposition, the White House was able to soothe ruffled nerves by promising he would do no more bill drafting. Consequently both appointments are being approved, though Hopkins must appear before a committee investigating relief irregularities, and Murphy before the senate judiciary committee to explain his attitude toward sitdown strikes.

What cannot be avoided, however, is the feeling that White House concessions outweigh those of Mr. Garner and other rebels. Having committed himself to a political back and how the haters of Hopkins and risk political oblivion by convention ime next year.

During the World war German "U" boats made naval history by approaching U. S. Atlantic coast cities. Last September German submarines were still a menace, helping to force blockade-wary Britishers into the embarrassing peace of Munich. In January, German submarines again made headlines because Berlin announces her determination to equal Great Britain's strength in submarine ton-

Under the Anglo-German naval pact of 1935, Germany has this right under emergency, but London fails to understand what emergency faces the Reich today. Now built, under construction or appropriated for are 71 German submarines; smaller than average, their tonnage is only 31,282. Britain, with 73 submarines weighing 75,904 tons, finds many of her heavy underwater craft obsolete. Not only is London frightened by Germany's numerical superiority if the Reich builds up to parity, but also because Germany intends to build several large oceangoing submarines of 1,000 tons or

In France, where the Anglo-German naval agreement has always been unpopular (because, claims Paris, etc." It is undoubtedly a smart London should never have recognized Germany's right to any naval strength), the Reich's new submarine parity has produced genuine alarm. Their story: That Germany's 1,000 ton submarines are being built to cross the Atlantic, in retaliation for the cool reception Hitler tactics have been receiving in official Washington. If this danger-real or false-can be impressed on U. S. congressmen, Great Britain hopes it will result in a larger American navy.

Outstanding among 1938's news stories was the growth and flourish of dictators. To casual investigators, this is a new and revolutionary phenomenon, but historians recall that regimentation is centuries old. By year's end, dictators had been placed on the defensive at least in the minds of democratic nationals in the U.S., Britain and France. And although 1939 may see more growth, more flourish, science has stepped in with a prediction.

The man: Dr. John R. Swanton of Washington's Smithsonian institution.

The forecast: "In spite of the efforts of political, social or clerical groups to coerce the spirit of man, man has always been able to resist and reassert his freedom . . . Christianity, the great revolution of the Eighteenth century and the growth to all attempts to dominate him."

Reduces Chances of Investigation of WPA and Its Relief Spending; Appointment of Harrington to Hopkins' Place Seen as Strategic Move.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON .- Many persons in | the sudden maneuver by the Presi-Washington are convinced that dent. There will be many attacks President Roosevelt has slipped a on the relief policies at an early fast ball right over the plate in date because the WPA must have the job of secretary of commerce and the selection of Col. F. C. Harrington as works progress administrator. It appears to some observers, certainly, that the presidential maneuver has gone a long way toward reducing, if not eliminating, the chances of a dirty investigation of WPA and its relief

The President knew of the brewing trouble that had Hopkins as the focus; he was told how much ganization that could be made to and surely he is the President's best personal friend. Naturally, he wanted to keep Hopkins around.

In naming Hopkins to the post of eran official, Daniel C. Roper, Mr. chance that the appointee would have had their say. But there will structive purposes." be little opportunity for the antiadministration Democrats to sink their teeth into the Hopkins appoint- To a Majority in Congress ment to the commerce job. That department has less money to spread about perhaps than most important government jobs. Administration friends in the senate, therefore, can say with propriety that a razzing of Hopkins, as the commerce nominee, is not to be indulged in because this is another job, not related to spending relief

Appointment of Harrington Another Strategic Move

I am told on very good authority critics of Hopkins, the administration friends simply will reply, in has grown to be concerning Hopeffect, "you wanted Hopkins out of the relief job. Now he is out, carried on. It will be recalled that piece of politics and it will work-his position in the coming battle | number of recalcitrant Democrats with congress by the appointment of Colonel Harrington. The colonel is a regular army engineer. He has been assistant chief engineer of Convinced that a new diplomatic WPA and knows the organization. And most important of all, Colonel conservative side, which makes him acceptable to most senators, even anti-administration Democrats.

Mr. Roosevelt is taking no chances on any ruckus arising over Colonel Harrington, however, and detail. Colonel Harrington has been designated only as "acting WPA administrator." He will run the organization as though he were full fledged on the job. The difference is that the designation of the colonel as acting administrator eliminates the requirement of a senate confirmation. In other words, the senate can do nothing about the Hopkins successor unless it acts by special resolution. If the Harrington name had come in as a nomination, there could be wide open exposure of WPA tactics by the committee which would consider the nomination. So it is plain to see that the President slipped away from his critics in this manner.

The third angle of the strategy also is vital to the picture I am seeking to present. The chief deputy administrator under Hopkins has been Aubrey Williams. It was Williams, you may recall, who has made speeches and has advised WPA workers to "vote for your friends," to insist on federal preservation of "your rights," and it was he who said in a speech that he was inclined to believe that class hatred was a good thing.

Many Attacks on Relief Policies to Be Expected

To keep Mr. Williams out of the clutches of the wolves around the capitol, Mr. Roosevelt took him off of the job of deputy relief administrator and appointed him as director of the national youth administration. Again, the senate can get to Mr. Williams only if it is willing to adopt a special resolution for an investigation, and there is probably enough administration strength in the senate to block such a resolution.

The lines have not yet been tightly drawn in congress as a result of i front of his congressional critics by something like $750,000,000 in addithe transfer of Harry Hopkins to | tional money before the middle of February, and that request will be laid before congress along with other calls for money in the first deficiency bill. But Mr. Hopkins will be nesting comfortably in his panelled office on the fifth floor of the commerce department; he will be "completely detached" from WPA and so the controversy over voting the money will settle down to a matmuch personality in it.

The appointment of Col. Harringmud slinging was due to take place, ton will be much advertised by administration supporters in order to seat while congress is in session. his methods were preparing to leave help others forget that Hopkins once Mr. Roosevelt must find some way no stone unturned in exposing ev- held the job. Hopkins Is Objectionable

At the proper time, therefore, congress will learn of what is going to be done by the new administra-And then comes the climax. The President again will ask congress to vote relief funds in bulk, in blank check, just as happened before. The members will be reassured by the administration concerning the ability, honesty and soundness of plans of the administrator. Mr. Roosevelt is said to hope that the strategy will work. I doubt it, but stranger things have happened. There have ing against a member of the executive's staff has been so heated as it kins and the relief spending that he he never minced words about congressional critics, and it will be remembered, as well, that he sought The President also strengthened to help the President "purge" a who were seeking re-election. It appears very strongly that Mr. Roosevelt has elevated to his cabinet an individual thoroughly objectionable to a majority of congress and has, at the same time, provided himself with a chance to get spending money again. He may not win with the maneuver, but he has caught a good many persons off guard with the trick.

But what of Hopkins as secretary of commerce, assuming that the has avoided it by a clever piece of name will be confirmed by the senate? Well, Mr. Hopkins will draw his pay regularly on the first and fifteenth of each month. He will be faithful in going to his office in the powerful automobile that is provided by the government for the secretary of commerce. He will sign the papers which the secretary of commerce is required to sign because somebody, holding subordinate positions and who knows what it is all about, will tell him that is their recommendation.

Secretary of Commerce to Make 130,000 Appointments The patent office will run, as it always has run by itself, in a very efficient manner. The bureau of air commerce will be well managed because it has capable people in subordinate positions. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, the bureau of fisheries, the bureau of lighthouses and the others, or most of them, will get along without too much trouble because Mr. Hopkins probably will leave them

But we should not leave Mr. Hopkins alone yet for the reason that late this year, or early in 1940, there will be about 130,000 appointments to be made by the secretary of commerce. Next year is the period for the regular 10-year census and the personnel must be named. Next year also is a campaign year, a national election.

In the meantime, the business of the country which is supposed to receive encouragement and assistance from the department of commerce will be allowed to indulge in hope. It will not be harrassed or spanked or threatened with major surgery beyond the Hopkins capacity to do that sort of thing.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"The Man Who Came Back"

HELLO EVERYBODY:

There was a time when Frank S. Helmar of Shamokin, Pa., could get a kick out of ghost stories. But not any more. Frank says the old spook yarns leave him cold nowadays, and never again will any mere piece of fiction make the hair crawl up the back of his neck. For Frank went up against the real thing once, and now he knows what a scare really is. Hold onto your hats while Frank tells us about it, boys and girls-the strange tale of the Mumbling Ghost!

Quite a few years ago-when Frank had just passed his eighteenth birthday-he began to get that restless feeling that comes to most young lads his age-the itch to travel. It seemed to him that there wasn't any opportunity for a young fellow in the little mining and manufacturing town in which he had grown up. He was tired working in coal holes and hanging around with the same old gang under the street light every night, so ter of principle without having too one day, after work, he tucked a little bundle under his arm and, with a little lump in his throat, struck out over the hill toward the railroad tracks and points north, east, south and west,

Planned to Settle Down in Elmira.

Frank didn't know where he was going, and he sure got there. For five years he wandered about in practically all of the eastern states, working in a factory here and a restaurant there, doing odd jobs, and sometimes even landing in jail on suspicion of vagrancy. At the end of five years, Frank found himself working in a silk mill in Elmira, N. Y., and liking the job and the town so well that he was planning to settle down.

He had even subscribed to a newspaper back in Shamokin and ordered it sent to him in Elmira. But it was that newspaper that proved his undoing. For it not only set his feet to itching again, but lso provided him with the most horrible shock of his whole life.

It was just a little paragraph, way down in the corner of a page, in one of the first papers that came to him from back home in Shamokin, but it made the tears fill Frank's eyes. His old pal, Jack Hasco, so the paragraph said, had been killed that day, and mangled beyond recognition. Frank felt pretty bad about it for two or three days, and thinking of Jack also made him wonder how his other old pals were getting along. And he decided to go back to the old town for a visit.

He arrived in Shamokin about midnight on February 14, 1929. The sky was dark and a storm was brewing. The wind blew fitfully and the

"It seemed strange to be back home again," he says. "I had expected to find the East Side improved, but it was still the same old hole, with its blind alleys and poorly lighted streets. I was heading into an alley near my old home when I saw a dark form coming toward me. I saw, as it approached me, that it was a man, and thought it might be some one I knew. As he came up to me I looked closely at his face.

One look at that fellow's face and Frank felt his body stiffen. "I let out an insane scream," he says, "and beads of perspiration began forming on my cold brow. My heart was beating violently! I was rooted to the ground! And that face was slowly coming toward me, its eyes bulging in surprise and a slight smile coming to its lips. Yes-you guessed it. It was my old pal-my dead pal, Jack Hasco-and he was mumbling! Mumbling something in some outlandish language that I couldn't understand!"

Falls Unconscious in Terrorized Flight.

Frank fought to pull himself together. Gathering up all the energy that was left in his weakened, trembling body, he let out another wild yell and, with a leap and a bound, he practically flew out of that alley. "Then I ran," he says. "Ran on and on, until everything turned black in front of me and I slid in a heap to the ground. When I regained consciousness strange faces were looking down at me. When I told them my story they looked incredulously at one another, said I was drunk, and walked away. I picked myself up, brushed off my clothing and moved on."

A little way down the street, Frank saw the lights of an all-night lunch wagon. A cup of coffee would go good after his experience, and it might help him pull himself together. He was sitting on a stool in the lunch room sipping his coffee when the door opened and another

But this time it was a LIVING figure. Baldy Williams, another member of the old gang. Never in Frank's life had the sight of an old friend thrilled him so. "Baldy!" he yelled. And Baldy said, "Why, Frank Helmar, where in the heck have you been all these years." And for the next few minutes they talked about Frank's travels, but Frank wasn't long in bringing up the story of his strange experience.

Friend Explains Weird Reunion.

As he talked on, he saw a twinkle come into Baldy's eyes. The twinkle turned into a broad grin. Frank wondered why Baldy was laughing at him. Did Baldy think he was drunk too? At last Baldy put up a hand and laid it on Frank's shoulder.

"Take it easy, Frank," he said. "Don't let this get you down. What you read in the paper about a Jack Hasco being killed is true enough, but there were two Jack Hascos in Shamokin. The one who was killed came from the West End. Our old pal, Jack, is just as much alive as you or I." That sounded swell to Frank, but still he wasn't convinced.

But the mumbling!" he cried. "It was ghastly. Jack never talked like that!" Again Baldy smiled-a little sadly this time. "Well, that's another

Holds Records

Is First in Percentage of Autos, Radios and Even Soldiers.

VATICAN STATE. - The pontifical state, newest and smallest of nations, holds more records than any other country in the world. Whether it be telephones, automobiles, radios, soldiers or even prosaic elevators and refrigerators, it is the Vatican City that has more of the per capita than any other country.

Although there are only 600 names listed in the Vatican telephone directory, it is estimated that each inhabitant averages more than one phone apiece. With a population estimated slightly above the 700 mark, the per capita rate is roughly .85. The United States, with 15,295,-852 telephones, is far behind with approximately one-eighth of a phone per person.

Actually the papal state's average is higher than .85, because many of the phones connected with Pope Pius' private and official apartments and other interapartmental hookups are not listed in the direc-

Fifteen Outside Lines.

The Vatican also has 15 lines with the outside world, which in this case is Italy. There is no country that can boast of such a high average of interurban lines for its population. The Vatican has 32 electrically driven elevators and in a few months the figure will be increased to 35. Although there are about 100 buildings in the small territory, twothirds are small one and two story structures used as small offices and residences for Vatican em-

This means that there is one elevator for each of the larger buildings. Yet 20 years ago the Vatican State could only boast three elevators and all of the hydraulic type. King Edward VI rode on one of these old-fashioned lifts when he came to see the then-reigning pope early in the Twentieth century.

Boy Still on Job. The fat, pompous elevator boy who piloted King Edward to one of the upper floors is still on the job. His job has been greatly simplified. Instead of lugging on a cable, all he does now is to press buttons and modern science takes care of the

It is estimated that there are more than 200 automobiles in the miniature state. It is calculated that there are two cars for every seven inhabitants. Even the United States, which boasts of one automobile for every 4.9 inhabitants, cannot match this mark.

It is estimated that there is an average of one radio and one electric refrigerator per Vatican family Although the Vatican can be considered the most peaceful of states, on the surface it gives the opposite impression of being classed among the most military. Its army makes up about two-thirds of its entire population. Even Russia, Germany. Italy and Japan, which are considered the most heavily armed, fall far behind. However, the Vatican army, composed of Swiss, pontifical and noble guards and papal gendarmes, does not possess a single cannon, a machine gun, an airplane or even a tank. That in itself is another record.

'Birth Certificate' Valid Delaware Still Insists

DOVER, DEL.-Delaware is prepared to defend again the validity of its "birth certificate."

New Jersey tried unsuccessfully in the United States Supreme court and in the English courts to prove that the parchment deed granted William Penn 100 years age was turned over by Penn to James, duke of York, and that the present boundaries of Delaware are not correct.

An announcement at Trenton, N. J., disclosed the state intends to bring an expert from London, William LeHardy, to examine papers New Jersey claims will show that Penn made the transfer, and that he never received another grant in its

Yanks Do Justice To Goose Liver Pie

They Eat More Than Their Established 1919

PARIS. - Americans ate more than their share of 100,000 tons of foie gras, that famous gastronomic delicacy of France, which is exported from Alsace every year. That is in addition to the quantity which is produced in Perigord and Gascony, of which some is exported.

Although goose livers, from which fole gras is made, were known and appreciated as a delicacy for many centuries, foie gras only became famous about 150 years ago when, what the French first called "pate" made its appearance in Strasbourg.

As far as can be learned, it was about the year 1765 that Jean-Pierre Clause, chef of the king's chamberlain who was governor of Alsace, introduced "pate de foie gras"-literally, goose liver pie. Clause was known as a great experimenter with foods and his new dish was greeted with unanimous admiration.

But even the culinary discovery of Clause was to be improved in 1792 when Nicholas Francois Doyen, a Bordeaux chef then working in Alsace, made the first fole gras as it is known today when he mixed the pate with Perigord truffles.

Since that time the two have always been mixed, as the truffles heighten the flavor of the foie gras. For their part, there are no statistics concerning truffles. A fungus root growth, truffle, as it is known in French, comes mostly from Perigord and Gascony. Curiously enough pigs, which have been trained for the task, are used in discovering truffles, as there is no growth above the ground which will indicate their

The pigs use their sense of smell and when they begin to root they are pulled away and the truffles searcher digs them up himself.

Seven Suggestions for Safe Winter Driving

CHICAGO.-From Evanston, Ill., recognized by safety authorities as the safest city in the world, comes 'Winter's Seven Safety Suggestions" for motorists.

Judge Harry H. Porter, chief justice of municipal court and president of the Safe Winter Driving league, listed practical safety measures for coming blizzards as follows: 1. Test brakes for simultaneous

2. Check condition of windshield wiper, defroster and tire chains. 3. Travel at less than moderate speeds on snow or ice covered highways or city streets and watch for children on sleds.

4. Shift into secon gradual braking on snow or ice, particularly if not safeguarded by tire chains. 5. Take curves slowly and don't try to pass cars ahead of you on hills or curves. Descend steep hills in second gear if icy. 6. Apply brakes with clutch engaged and before you ordinarily would in dry weather-and don't depend on your horn because other car windows may be closed and some drivers (especially in country) wear ear muffs.

7. Exercise greater caution generally and open car windows occasionally to prevent windows fogging up and, in old cars, possible danger from carbon monoxide gas. Remember: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." The Evanston safety record includes only a single traffic death this year, and three times winning the National Safety council's award F. C. Harmon. as "the safest city."

New Channel Increases Traffic on Mississippi

MARQUETTE, IOWA .- Traffic on the Mississippi river has increased tremendously during the last ship-

The Milwaukee railroad's pontoon bridge here, which has to be open for an average of 15 minutes to allow passage of a boat, has been open for time equaling seven full days since last March 28, when the first tugboat went downstream.

In 1937 a total of 408 boats passed the 276-foot pontoon. This year the figure is expected to be exceeded by almost 300. By mid-November, approximately 675 boats had passed. In 1936 the number of boats was only 349.

The number of barges plying the river also has increased, with 273 going through during October alone. Creation of a new channel and locks is credited with increasing the use of the Mississippi for freight shipping. Most of the barges carry oil, coal, machinery or grain,

Long Idle English Land

Producing Bountifully LONDON .- Thousands of acres of land in England which have lain idle for more than a hundred years are now producing some of the best flax and wheat in the country.

Five years ago, J. W. Tomkins, with his brother and father, rented 5,500 acres of bracken covered land in the Peterborough district. With hard work and modern machinery they have succeeded in turning a wilderness into profitable fields and grazing land.

"There are millions of such acres in England lying absolutely idle," said Tomkins. "Anyone who cares to inspect them may see for himself how England could be made much more nearly self-supporting and could find work for thousands

Certainly she had not been listening to Ruth's previous monologue. She had worn all evening the effect of one so deeply withdrawn into her own subconsciousness that she heard or saw little around her. He became aware that Mrs. Spencer Forbes was looking at her, too. She was looking with what, in anyone else, might have seemed anxiety. But that must be a mistake. Mrs. Spencer Forbes was never anxious about anyone.

Hale went for a lonely walk along the beach. It was a beautiful night The moonlight reminded him that he had been at Halcyon Camp almost two months. There had been moonlight on the night of his arrival. He remembered the glory of the moon's path across the sea. Well, he had done something in that time. Mentally he put his achievements in the order of their importance. He had fallen in love. He must admit that now. He had rid the Camp of Craig. He had also got Ainsworth out of it. Indirectly, he and probably saved Mrs. Spencer Forbes from becoming a heroin ad

Stuyvesant would be glad to have him start in. He had said as much. Yes, his usefulness here was over. Or was it?

The face of Joan swung before him, and he experienced a complete mental face-about. He couldn't leave Joan at Halcyon Camp. He didn't know why, but he couldn't. His reasons were so slight, so incredible, that he would not dwell on them. He would have been humiliated to have anyone, even Stuyvesant, know that he had sent that milk to New York for analysis. He was ashamed of having done it. His suspicions-as persistent and as irritating as the buzzing of a mosquito much it had a stronger hold on you around one's face at night-were as unimportant as the mosquito would have been. 2. Impotent Christian workers (vv. 16, 17).

The man brought his son to the place where he had a right to expect help-to the followers of Christ. But he found them without faith to help him. Little wonder then that those around them were still in perverse unbelief. We who profess to follow Christ, and especially those of us who say that we are His servants, should be ashamed of our impotent gestures toward our needy fellow men. There is power with God, power in prayer, power in devoted and faithful service to Christ. Let us claim it!

TIPS to Gardeners

Special Gardens

MANY hobbyists get pleasure from special gardens. Some have been successful with allmarigold, or all-petunia gardens. Marigolds are available in a wide variety of sizes and shapes and provide a golden-brown garden scene of unusual richness.

Petunias have a wide range of color, and more and more they are being used for cut flowers as well as for garden color and beauty. Some have grown gardens primarily for fragrance. The best flowers for such a garden, according to Harry A. Joy, flower expert, are alyssum, carnation, mignonette, nicotiana, sweet pea and sweet william.

For a garden of plants without actual flowers but with showy foliage, interesting results have been obtained with the following: seph's coat, coleus, dusty miller, snow - on - the - mountain, annual poinsettia, kochia and castor oil bean.

The following will fit well into a typical wildflower garden: Annual lupin, bachelor button, rudbeckia (cone flower), columbine, perennial aster, heuchera (coral bells), and perennial lupin.

Penetro has from two to three times as much medicanationally salve for cold dis-comfort. That's one reason it is used by so many mothers in America and 37 foreign demand stainless, snow-white Pene-tro. At druggists.
