Powerful Radar Eye Will Study Meteors

COLUMBUS, Ohio (U)—A powerful new radar eye soon will study invisible shooting stars or meteors—their paths from space to learn where they come from and how they affect humans.

Harvard University astronomers today told of plans for the radar study. They hope it can learn secrets of meteors 500 times fainter than those the human eye can see.

Millions of meteors from outer space, mostly only tiny specks, bombard the earth every day. It is estimated 1,000 tons of meteoritic dust falls to earth daily. The dust and electrical energy that come from them may be partial causes of torrential rains, of the northern lights, and an aid to sending ordinary radio broadcasts.

The new radar study is expected to produce more facts about the heights, speeds, orbits and origins of these giant meteors, Gerald S. Hawkins, Curtis L. Hemmaway and Fred L. Whipple told the American Astronomical Society.

EASTER Story Of John, 'Most Beloved'

his well-to-do household and servants to go with the Master—raising a new banner of love in villages, desert camps, on lakeshores and mountainsides.

At times, his ardent enthusiasms had to be tempered by the Master, who nevertheless seemed especially fond of him, among all the others. The Master called him "Boanerges"—Son of Thunder!

Just the other day, John had proposed violent punishment for a Samaritan village that refused hospitality to the Master. But Jesus came "to save"—not to destroy men.

Then, near Bethsaida, when John reported he had seen some hairy-mantled teacher acting "in Christ's name," John wanted to stop him—because he refused to join their band.

But the Master would impose no narrow, exclusive conformity. "Forbid him not," He had said, "for he that is not against us is for us."

So now, high urgency drove John as they approached Jerusalem, seat of the state's ancient religious government, with the land aflame with talk of a coming Christ—a new kingdom to throw off Rome's yoke.

The city would be swarming with people from all Judea, here for the Passover festival. Surely, the die was cast. As the Master advised—when you set your hand to a plow, there is no looking back.

Just then, John uttered a little cry of delight at what he saw. Pleasure shone on the faces of the others, too—his brother, James, lifting his head high; big, commanding Peter, grinning broadly, and Thomas, with his surprised twinkle.

Flowing through the gate and exultation, it was merely a trifle, passing incident when the state theorists shoved up to demand that Jesus stop the demonstration—at once.

John relished Jesus' blunt retort—just as well order stones to shout!

Their course through the city left a wave of speculation and wonder. But John soon realized the fervent greeting had come only from hopeful devotees. Others were just curious. Official opposition closed in grimly.

This only seemed to stir the Master to new boldness. Never had He spoken so vehemently. He always had been positive, but patient. Now He seemed to be deliberately pressing toward a goal, a culmination.

John waited, watched, listened, his emotions strung.

As days before the feast passed, the tension deepened. Priests, their lawyers and other functionaries came to challenge Jesus at gatherings before the temple, with sly innuendo and questions about His lack of religious authorization.

They baited Him about taxes, the law, His teachings, but Jesus always had stinging answers: "Pay Caesar what is Caesar's. The great commands are alike—love God and thy neighbor as thyself. Self-glory is ruinous. To help the sick, naked and imprisoned is the same as doing it for the Lord."

All the while, there was the gathering hostility of men in high places.

But the Master lashed out heedlessly at the reigning theocracy, accusing it of being obsessed with ornamental clothes, riches, titles, honors, of pretending holiness by reciting long repetitious prayers, of emphasizing moribund rules instead of real mercy, faith and justice.

"Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites!" He said. "Ye blind guides, straining out a gnat and swallowing a camel. Ye are like whitened sepulchres—beautiful outside but full of dead men's bones."

He strode into the temple where moneychangers and traders noisily bartered and sold animals for sacrifice. He overturned the tables and drove the whole pack out. "My house shall be called a house of prayer!"

John, the firebrand, marveled at it all. Had he not wanted strong action? He had. And yet. . . His uneasiness grew at the hauntingly memorable meal in the upper room where Jesus foretold impending betrayal and death.

Then the armed mob seized Jesus in the garden at night. In a burst of fear, all the apostles fled.

But John alone, the man of blazing zeal and fierce confidence, returned to stand by in grief-struck shock at the Master's trial and execution. Was it the end? No, a passionate no!

Perhaps at times he had been rash, missed the Master's full meanings, but now it unfolded before him, and the Lord, when He rose, sharpened the vision—that the kingdom would come in its own time and its own way—beyond earthly destinies—the hour, no man knows.

John could wait, and work, and he did, leaving to the centuries a never-fading flame of faith.

KEFAUVER AVERS

'Plain-Speaking' On Farm Program Will Win Farm Belt

RICHMOND, Calif. (AP)—Sen. Estes Kefauver says "if the Democratic party speaks plainly and positively about its farm program, we will win in November not only in Minnesota, but in that whole great farming area." Kefauver, in a speech here last night, predicted a farm revolt against the Eisenhower administration. Today the presidential candidate moved into Southern California to press his campaign for this state's 68 votes at the Democratic National Convention. The Tennessee senator said his victory over Adlai Stevenson in the Minnesota primary indicated a farm revolt by "the tremendous turnout" and by a larger vote for Democrats than Republicans. His speech climaxed a busy day of campaigning in the San Francisco Bay area. Kefauver and Stevenson meet next in the Alaska primary April

24 and then the Florida primary May 29 in their campaigns for the Democratic presidential nomination. Kefauver meets Stevenson again in the June 5 California primary, the last of the preferential vote tests. Sixty-eight delegates are at stake. The Tennessee will campaign in the southern half of the state through Tuesday, starting today in Los Angeles. Kefauver said that he still "had a hard fight and struggle" ahead in the California primary. "If there is a certainty in politics," Kefauver said, "it is that the Republicans cannot win without the states of the farm belt." In his press conference assessment of the Minnesota vote, Kefauver named Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Iowa, Kansas and Montana as states the Democrats have a "good chance" to carry in November. He amended on Kansas to say the prospect there was not as clear as in the other states. Analyzing the Minnesota result's effects in his own party, Kefauver yesterday told a San Francisco press conference: "I think there should be some reconsideration given on the Democratic side." He declared new offers of support already had showed such reconsideration was under way by Democrats who had been neutral or backing others.

House Report Slaps Defense Dept. Buying As 'Unrealistic'

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House Appropriations Committee made public today a staff report criticizing Defense Department procurement practices as "unrealistic" and as giving contractors "a tremendous advantage." Included in the 397-page document were formal replies from the Defense Department, the Army, the Navy and the Air Force, in general, they defended the criticized practices on grounds the hurryup or "crash" nature of the contracts involved made normal procedure impractical. Rep. Whitten (D-Miss), a committee member, commented in the report that there were indications that "the government is spending billions needlessly to someone's profit." The report, on which three teams of committee probes have been working since last April, made no charges of corruption or willful wrongdoing. No specific time period was covered by the survey, but much of the material involved was ordered or delivered during the Korean War period. The report made no distinction between the Republican and Democratic administrations. The wartime period included parts of both. The report cited examples it said showed "serious deficiencies with respect to policy guidance... unconscionable delays" in making formal contracts, "unrealistic" delivery schedules, diversion of production funds into research and development, inadequate stock control, "flagrant deficiencies" in procurement and contract operations and reports of "political pressure" in contract dealings. Secretary of Defense Wilson replied: "I do not excuse these kinds of things if they are true. There is some explanation of it, probably, because people do not purposely do such sloppy things. That is, they sort of drift into it... all I can tell you is that one way and another we are trying to get hold of the thing." The investigators said there have been substantial improvements in procurement practices and policies in recent years but "no useful purpose would be served by documenting those results in this report." They complained that in all three services, the greatest portion of high cost procurements are accomplished through negotiated contracts rather than through competitive bidding. They said that at North American Aviation, Inc., which is 99 per cent devoted to government business, the government paid for most research and development costs, but did not share in the company's income from licenses and royalty fees resulting from nongovernmental business. From one aircraft program alone, they said, North American received over five million dollars in royalties and license fees, mainly from foreign manufacturers. During one period, the report said, the Ford Motor Co. made a profit of 29.6 per cent on airplane engines before voluntarily cutting its prices on the basis of cost experience. The refunds cut the profits to 19 per cent for the initial period, the report continued, while on total engines delivered under the contract over a three-year period the profit was 8 per cent. The investigators said Curtiss-Wright Corp. was still scheduled to deliver J65 engines to the Air Force after last Dec. 1 although Buck Division of General Motors Corp. had been making the same engines at a lower cost.

Says South Won't Go For Kefauver

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Ellender (D-La.) said today he thinks "the South will not accept" Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee as the Democratic presidential nominee. Kefauver, generally regarded as the front runner for the nomination since his victory over Adlai Stevenson in the Minnesota primary on Tuesday, will test his strength in the Florida primary May 29. There again he will contest with Stevenson, the 1952 nominee. Ellender said he would be "100 per cent" for Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas for the Democratic nomination. Johnson has said he is considering a suggestion by Speaker of the House Rayburn (D-Tex.) that he seek endorsement as Texas' "favorite son" role at the convention and a serious bid for the presidency. Ellender told an interviewer that "from all indications, Stevenson is going to lose popularity from here on out" and that "it will be necessary to nominate someone else other than Kefauver." He said the South "will not go for Kefauver's views on civil rights." Kefauver was one of three Southern senators who did not sign a "manifesto" in which most Dixie legislators 10 days ago pledged the use of all lawful means to seek reversal of the Supreme Court's decision outlawing racial segregation in the public schools. The other nonsigning senators were Gore (D-Tenn.) and Johnson, who said he was not asked because of his party leader's position. Ellender said his "first choice" for the nomination is Sen. Kerr (D-Okla.) "but he doesn't seem to want it." Sen. Russell (D-Ga.), who defeated Kefauver in the Florida primary four years ago, has said he would support Johnson for the presidency. So has Sen. Smathers (D-Fla.).

Heading For A Fight

Governor Allan Shivers, right, talks to Associated Press Reporter Ernest B. Vaccaro in his Austin office as they discuss the forthcoming political battle among Texas Democrats. The battle is shaping up among the Democrats between the forces of Gov. Shivers on one hand and those of Sam Rayburn, Speaker of the U. S. House of Representatives. The winner, at the May 22 convention in Dallas, will name the delegation to the Chicago convention.

IN TEXAS

Sen. Johnson Key To Democrat Unity

By ERNEST B. VACCARO AUSTIN (AP)—If anyone can bring a measure of unity among Texas Democrats and pave the way for recapture of the state from President Eisenhower, it's Lyndon B. Johnson. That, at least, is the view of many Democratic "loyalists" in the Lone Star State, where Eisenhower defeated Adlai Stevenson four years ago by 1,102,878 votes to 969,228.

It is the view of Sam Rayburn, speaker of the U. S. House of Representatives, and leader of the Texas faction which supported Stevenson in 1952. Rayburn has proposed that the state convention at Dallas May 22 endorse Johnson as Texas "favorite son" presidential candidate and elect him as chairman of the state's delegation to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

Johnson, Democratic leader of the U. S. Senate, supported Stevenson's candidacy in 1952. Also, he has friends among the followers of Gov. Allan Shivers, who bolted the party four years ago and carried the state Democratic Committee with him.

Rayburn's move ran head-on into Shivers' plans to head the Texas delegation to the national convention to fight again for a strong states' rights plank in the party platform and a candidate acceptable to him.

Shivers, in an interview, would not comment on Johnson as a "favorite son" candidate. But he said he would oppose Johnson's selection as chairman of the delegation.

"And we are going to win," he said. Johnson is in no hurry to make any move until he has time to measure the reaction. Meantime, Sen. Russell (D-Ga.) and other Southern Democrats have spoken favorably of him.

"I'm not a candidate for anything," Johnson said in Washington Wednesday. "But, if I were convinced — and I'm not at this time — that the people of the state want me as favorite son and to head the delegation, and that it would be in the best interests of the state and nation, it would be rather compelling with me."

If Johnson does make the fight, his friends say he will go all-out. Some reporters in Austin say he has one of the strongest personal organizations in the state. He's taking things as easy as he can after a heart attack last July.

Shivers says he will support Eisenhower again if the Democrats should renominate Adlai

Stevenson. H. J. (Jack) Porter of Houston, the Republican national committeeman, said Eisenhower will carry the state again "regardless of the Democratic nominee, and regardless of whether Shivers supports him or the Democrat."

John Q. Adams of Harlingen, GOP state chairman, said Eisenhower's prospects for carrying the state again, "by about the same majority, are excellent."

Democrats do not attempt to discount Eisenhower's popularity in Texas. Ralph W. Yarborough, Austin attorney twice defeated for governor by Shivers and a likely candidate again, put it this way: "The present situation in Texas is that the Republicans will not carry the state. There has been very little, if any, decline in President Eisenhower's personal popularity."

"But the people realize that if they re-elect Eisenhower, they will have Republican policies. The reasons are economic. The farm problem is the big cause for the change in sentiment. The elimination of rigid, 90 per cent parity supports has had a disastrous effect in a large section of Texas."

Yarborough said the loyalists are well organized today, in contrast to 1952, "and we have Shivers on the run." He claimed they are strong enough to carry the state without Shivers and as far as he is concerned, "the Republicans can have him."

Shivers said Eisenhower may have lost some farm support, but that he has picked up "a great many little people of deep moral convictions who have a worship for Eisenhower that transcends party lines." He said it is "too early" to assess the extent that one may offset the other.

Shivers said he is going to spend his time "trying to get a good Democratic platform and a good Democratic candidate."

Shivers made it clear he is opposed to any third party movement. Stevenson's opposition to the submerged lands oil bill, which Eisenhower advocated and later signed as President, was a big issue in Texas, which fought a Supreme Court decision giving the submerged land oil rights to the government. The bill signed by Eisenhower returned this land to the states and the schools of the state have benefited from the revenue.

Shivers is not seeking re-election. One question is how much of his personal following he can carry with him.

Kiwanis Hears Of Heavy Toll On Highways

The story of death and destruction on the nation's highways was told to the Kiwanis Club Thursday by John Hunter of San Angelo. "Our dream on wheels has become a nightmare," he said. In dramatizing the grim statistics, Hunter said that one American life is lost in an automobile accident every 15 minutes, and that 51 years of the automobile age has cost a million American lives, as many as have been lost in all the wars in the nation's history. And, the cost of accidents amounts to four billion dollars annually.

"Nine out of 10 accidents occur to mature, experienced, male drivers on dry, straight, sunny highways," said Hunter. Road conditions, mechanical failures "or women drivers" account for only a small percentage of the mishaps. Major causes are excessive speed, carelessness or drinking.

In outlining a positive program for safety on the highways, Hunter stressed driver training at the Junior High School level, safety awards to careful drivers by companies and municipalities, better and stricter law enforcement, and safety devices on automobiles. All of these, however, will not solve the problem, said Hunter. The only answer is safe driving habits.

Member Inducted, Two Get Keys At Lions Club Meet

COAHOMA (SC) — A new member was inducted into the Coahoma Lions Club Thursday and two others received their keys for membership enrollment. B. G. Shepherd was inducted by the Rev. Mark Reeves, and keys went to J. O. Nixon and John E. Westmoreland for enlisting two members each.

In other business before the club, plans were made for attending the Zone meeting Thursday night at Colorado City and for attending the district 2-7-2 convention in Marfa April 27-28.

Westmoreland announced a Court of Honor for the Boy Scout troop Monday evening. The club approved the assessment of $25 a plot for special care at the Coahoma cemetery as the basis for financing a caretaker for the cemetery. Burl Cramer said the well house had been completed and columns for the gates erected at the cemetery.

Nixon advanced the idea of a big barbecue affair (at $1 and 50 cents) as a means of celebrating remodeling of the recreation pavilion and construction of a barbecue pit at the city park. This may be held sometime in April. Purchase of two capons at the Howard County 4-H and FFA livestock show were announced and Thursday the club had them for lunch.

Health Officer Calls For Precautions Against Flies

A few warm days and an open garbage can are the only necessary items to start flies to swarming in Big Spring, the city-county health unit said in urging citizens to help in keeping the summer pests under control.

Although flies haven't started swarming yet, Lige Fox, city sanitarian, said that now is the best time to put a check on them—before they have a chance to multiply. Peak of the fly season will arrive in about six weeks, he claimed.

Coinciding with the increase in the number of flies will be a rise in the number of cases of dysentery diseases, he predicted. Last year in Laredo, sanitarians were able to accurately chart on a graph a rise in dysentery diseases side by side with a rise in fly densities. They found that by starting fly-killing campaigns at the right time and getting rid of large percentages of the insects, a parallel drop occurred in the number of dysentery diseases.

Both the local health unit and the State Department of Health are urging people to keep garbage and trash cans covered. Neighborhood cleanliness is the item most important in the sanitary program.

The sanitarian said that neighborhoods are clean only when everybody living in them takes care to keep their own places free of litter and fly-breeding media.

With ideal conditions of temperature and moisture, flies may breed and lay eggs in a harmless-looking pile of grass clippings. They won't pick up disease organisms from the grass, but when the eggs hatch, the flies will find an attractant—an animal shelter or an open garbage can where disease organisms are prevalent.

Therein lies the importance of community-wide sanitation. The city has insecticide-spraying units for killing flies, but these units are powerless until flies multiply. Spray naturally cannot kill flies that are not born, said Fox, and since garbage is carted off semi-weekly, the spray would be wasted there.

Thus, it is up to the citizens to keep flies away from their garbage and remove much of the cause of the trouble. One of the ways, Fox advised, is to seal all garbage before it is thrown in disposal cans. This may be done by using bread wrappers, milk cartons, or any means that can be made air tight. Then if the garbage cans do not have tight-fitting lids, flies still cannot get to the disposed matter.

It is from open cans that flies pick up their germs, and unless the city's population sees fit to keep these insects out of their disposal containers, Big Spring will be covered with flies. And disease.

Hooser Seeks Second Term As Co. Attorney

Harvey C. Hooser, Jr., county attorney, has authorized The Big Spring Herald to announce his candidacy for re-election to the office he now holds, subject to action of the Democratic primaries of July 28.

Hooser issued the following statement relative to his candidacy: "I am asking the voters of Howard County for a second elective term as their County Attorney. I feel that the experience I have gained while serving in that capacity, together with the experience I have had as a practicing attorney, will enable me to better serve the people of Howard County as their County Attorney."

All Signs Point To Daniel Candidacy

WASHINGTON (AP)—Every indication here pointed today to an announcement Monday by Sen. Price Daniel that he will run for governor of Texas.

On a March 12 radio-TV address, he asked Texans to let him know if they wanted him to run. He noted it would mean his foregoing the last two years in his Senate term if he became governor.

The senator is sticking by his declaration that he would announce his decision March 26, not before, but there is little question it will be yes.

The Senate radio and TV recording studios start today to film the senator's forthcoming speech, so it can reach TV stations by Monday night.

The response to Daniel's plea has been overwhelming, he says. He mentioned on the March 12 program that he would like to get word from 25,000 persons wanting him to enter the governor's contest. His office said that goal was passed this week and thousands of letters were still being received.

The die appeared partially cast several weeks ago. Daniel said in Texas that, whether or not he ran for governor he would not seek re-election to the Senate when his term expires Jan. 3, 1959, unless some unforeseen "compelling reason" developed. He said he would rather live and rear his children in Texas.

Those here close to the senator say the recent entry of Lee O'Daniel, former governor and senator, in the governor's race has actually contributed to Daniel's determination to run. They said he thinks any mistakes through confusion of names on the ballot would work to his benefit as much as O'Daniel's.

On the March 12 program Daniel had his family in the film, which was made a week before broadcast time. In the forthcoming program only the senator's wife is expected to appear with him.

Daniel plans to make a radio recording of his speech to be aired locally to Texas for use should something keep him from flying down.

On his first show the senator said the program was costing him about $9,000. This included an estimated $1,500 for recording the program.

The Monday night program is expected to cost him about $7,000.

Adoption Pleas Hike Attributed To Publicity

George Choate, district court clerk, is convinced the old cliché "It pays to advertise" can be made applicable to a great many facets of life remote from commerce and industry.

Take the matter of building up increased interest in the adoption of orphaned or abandoned children, for example.

Choate points out that normally from 40 to 50 Big Spring and Howard County couples appear each year in his office to file petitions for adoption of children.

There have been twice as many adoption petitions filed in the last month than is usual in this field of court business.

Why the sudden increased interest in this field?

Choate attributes it to publicity. A few weeks ago, he points out, an article was published in which the relatively simple procedure required by Texas state law to clear the way for adoption of children by foster-parents was outlined.

On the heels of this article came a story of four youngsters who were abandoned by their parents and their experiences before the court. As a result of this story, some 50 families in the area sought to adopt the waifs.

Choate, pointing to the swollen file of adoption petitions which the month has brought forth and to the increasing number of residents who have called at his office asking for information on the subject, says the reason for this sudden upsurge is obvious.

"It was those newspaper articles," he summarizes. "Folk suddenly found out that adopting an orphan is not difficult nor costly and the stories of the four youngsters whetted the appetite of many childless couples to have adopted children in their homes."

Choate doesn't mind the increased work that stepped-up adoption procedures impose.

He's happy about the whole thing.

"I only hope it keeps up," he says. "Then we can be reasonably sure that any luckless boy or girl who is left homeless can soon be re-established."

Recruiters Can End Up In The Most Unlikely Places

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP)—When tourists descend by muleback to the isolated canyon of the Havasupai Indians this summer they will see a strange set of travel posters: "Join up—see the world!" "Uncle Sam wants you!"

Since the only way to get in or out of the canyon is along a tortuous horse trail 70 miles from the nearest paved road, these placards bear silent testimony to the ingenuity of one of the armed forces' most important branches, the recruiting service.

The wheels began to spin when M. Sgt. Vestal Nunlist, the smiling and always affable recruiting sergeant here, and Engineman Wesley D. Wolf, Navy recruiter at Prescott, saw pictures of the 250-man tribe living at the bottom of Havasupai Canyon near the Utah border along the Colorado River.

"Some of them were pretty husky looking, and it didn't look like they had much to do," said Nunlist, who has developed a watchful eye for such things from years as a top sergeant.

"Well, we can fix that mighty easy. No doubt, those sturdy boys must be told about the opportunities available to them in the service!"

Off they went to speak to the Indians.

They were met by Stanley Manakaja, 23-year-old Havasupai chief.

No tomahawks, no eagle feathers, no war whoops. At least not from Manakaja. The Havasupais are peaceful farmers.

Nunlist and Wolf decided to soften up the Indians by participating in a game of football.

The young braves play on a field covered with eight inches of sand.

"Much to our regret, the Indians never called time out and never sent in substitutes," said Nunlist. "Navy and I kept relieving each other. We were hurting."

But the Havasupai braves were very unwarlike when they powwowed with the recruiters.

They were happy to wait for the draft board.

"A lot of them said they'd like to join up, but—too many family responsibilities. You know."

He sounded like he had heard this before.

So Nunlist and Engineman Wolf tacked up the posters, handed out self-addressed postal cards and left. That was last week.

Any replies yet?

"We're still waiting," Nunlist said today. "But I'm going to be here several years. In this business you gotta be patient."

Angry Attorney Strikes Shepperd In Court Recess

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—An angry San Antonio attorney struck Atty. Gen. John Ben Shepperd in the face yesterday during a recess in a veterans land case being tried in Criminal District Court.

Reporters said Shepperd was standing, smoking a cigar, in the reception room of Dist. Atty. Hubert Green Jr. when Maxwell Burkett rushed up uttering obscenities as he struck him.

Burkett later said Shepperd had promised immunity to his three clients but had not.

The cigar apparently cushioned the blow. The cigar was crushed but there was no mark on the attorney general. He walked out of the courtroom building at once.

Burkett was led by two members of Green's staff into a side room.

The attack followed a courtroom hearing in which Judge Howard Green of Cuero overruled a motion which would have given immunity to three veterans land fraud case defendants who were key state witnesses in the bribery trial which resulted in the conviction of former Land Commissioner Bascom Giles here last August.

The three were C. V. Wynn, Arthur McKenzie and Harold Shepperd Jr. The motion for immunity was made by Burkett, who contended his clients were promised immunity by the attorney general for turning state's evidence.

Shepperd denied making such a promise but said "We did discuss probation and suspended sentences, but I never told anyone I would agree on immunity, nor was I present when anyone did."

McKenzie testified that in a mock trial set up in a downtown hotel by Shepperd's men prior to Giles' trial he was given instructions on "how to testify."

McKenzie said he was cautioned by the attorney general's men to answer "no" if Giles' lawyers asked him if he had been promised immunity.

Green said he could not grant immunity but he commented: "It's apparent that some kind of deal was made."

Rogers Bill On Natural Resources

There was introduced in the national House this week a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment that, if submitted and adopted, would give the states control over their natural resources.

The introducer was Rep. Rogers (D-Tex) and the idea behind it is said to have originated in Texas after President Eisenhower vetoed the bill giving control of natural gas to the states.

The Rogers bill has the virtue of covering all a state's natural resources, not just gas. Gas alone among natural resources was singled out by the Supreme Court for federal control, or its interpretation of the Natural Gas Act of 1938 which specifically exempted natural gas from federal control.

This latest approach to the problem of state's rights could conceivably pick up a great deal of support in states whose congressmen opposed the gas bill, for all states have an interest in protecting their natural resources from federal control.

Water is a natural resource, a mineral; so conceivably such a constitutional amendment would slow down, proscribe or reverse the growing federal tendency to poke a bureaucratic finger into local state water developments along watercourses whose watersheds lie wholly within state lines.

Obviously every state has an interest in protecting its natural resources from federal encroachment or appropriation. Some have coal, some have oil and gas, some have all three, like Texas. But only natural gas has been subjected to federal control.

The Rogers proposal should have an appeal to states like Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan and others which fought the decontrol of gas; for if they are thinking at all they must realize that what happened to gas could eventually happen to coal and other natural resources as well. Gas control is the camel's nose under the tent of sovereign state's rights.

Either the states should have control over all resources or none.

GOP, Like Adlai, May Well Ponder

One of the first Minnesotans to congratulate Estes Kefauver for "the great victory you have won" was the Democratic Farmer-Labor governor of the state, Orville Freeman, a strong Stevenson man.

On the Sunday before Tuesday's primary Governor Freeman had been one of those who expressed belief a good many Republicans would enter the Democratic primary to vote for Kefauver as a means of killing off Adlai Stevenson.

Some anti-Freeman Democrats were saying the Kefauver triumph was a repudiation of Freeman and his close associates rather than a personal triumph for the Tennessee senator, who had accused the state machine of trying to shut him out of the primary.

This may be some comfort to Adlai Stevenson, and will be so interpreted throughout the country. Southern Democrats who dislike Kefauver even more than they do Stevenson will take heart for whatever hopes they have of block-

President Has Say-So On Farm Program

WASHINGTON—A conspicuous illustration of the power of the presidency in writing legislation is about to be given the country. For there will be no farm bill enacted into law unless the measures that have passed the House and the Senate are rewritten by a joint Senate-House committee in the form of a single compromise bill satisfactory to Mr. Eisenhower.

The threat of a veto is meaningful because there is no two-thirds majority in both houses to pass a bill over the President's disapproval. Hence, the factions all know they must make concessions to the presidential viewpoint.

As a matter of fact, many of the senators and representatives cast their votes on specific amendments to the omnibus farm bill with the knowledge that no such provisions would ever become law. They had to show their constituencies, however, that they had made an effort to get the supports on prices that were desired by cotton or wheat or corn or cattle farmers.

The experience of the Senate on the farm bill, with so many close votes and so many contradictions, is indicative of the kind of thing Congress has gone through again and again on tariff legislation in the past. Local interests usually force individual members of Congress to take positive positions which are at variance with the views of other members of the same party. Sectional interests predominate in such a situation, and the President alone looks at the problem as a whole from the viewpoint of all the people rather than of any group.

No better description of this phase of the American legislative process has ever been written than that once penned by Woodrow Wilson, the centennial of whose birth is being celebrated this year. He

Damocles Didn't Have All That

James Marlow

All The Demos Have Is Confusion

WASHINGTON (AP)—The jolly Republicans can sit back at this moment in the presidential campaign, smile happily at the Democrats, and say: "We have President Eisenhower. What have you got?"

What the Democrats have is confusion. Ahead is more of the same.

They don't know who their candidate will be; except for the farm problem, the campaign issues are pretty thin; and they don't know, because of the Southern Democrats' angry mood, whether they can keep their party intact.

Until Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee beat him this week in the Minnesota presidential primary, Adlai Stevenson had the inside track for the party's nomination at next August's convention. Maybe he can make a comeback in other primaries.

But even if Kefauver sweeps them all, proving himself a miracle vote-getter, the convention may turn him down. He's never been a favorite of the big city bosses or the Southern Democrats.

The Democrats can't even feel sure they'll come out of the convention with a whole party. A Southern revolt would just about wreck any chance the party has in 1956.

A revolt may come unless the Southerners can dictate the platform plank on civil rights and even the tone of the party's candidate through an ever-present threat to turn against him after the convention.

Yet a Democratic candidate who remained tongue-tied on civil rights through fear of losing the Southern vote would, to the rest of the country, be a recognizably weak candidate.

As a sign of trouble ahead, South Carolina Democrats called on all Southern Democrats this week to take a strong stand on states' rights at the convention. They urged all Southern states' Democratic parties to arrange to meet after the convention if installed in it," Murrow added. "So far so good."

An essential part of this program is to bring the cameras—and the audience—into the home of the person being interviewed. He walks from room to room. The technical problems of placing cameras are often intricate.

Murrow said that when Byrd consented to the interview, a camera crew was sent, as usual, to examine the house and make preliminary plans. A technician immediately telephoned: "Ed, this place is a ghost house."

He explained that, because of

Byrd's Nest Is Cluttered

By BELMAN MORIN (For Hal Boyle)

NEW YORK (AP)—Edward R. Murrow is interviewing Adm. Richard Byrd tonight on the television program, "Person to Person," and keeping his fingers crossed that everything goes according to plan.

Some special complications developed.

Murrow is no stranger to problems and last-minute emergencies on this show. But he said the talk with the admiral may set a record. Here's what happened.

Byrd, who lives in Boston, left last November to go to the antarctic. He hasn't been in his house since then, Murrow said.

"He also ordered an elevator installed in it," Murrow added. "So far so good."

Not even word from Byrd's secretary budged the maid, Murrow said. They were not immediately able to get in touch with the admiral, who makes his headquarters in Washington.

"We are a little uneasy," he said.

Fortunately, Murrow said, this program has always been a somewhat informal, ad-libbing proposition. He keeps it that way, he said, in order to get naturalness and spontaneity.

Here's Vote For Father's Rights

There have been in the news in the last several months many items concerning cases of fathers kidnapping their own children. In many of these cases, I don't blame them a bit, and sometimes give them a sort of private moral support. I realize this view, that a father has a right to his own children, is unorthodox in our female-ruled society — but then, I am an unorthodox person. And maybe a bit prejudiced.

There is, of course, a good reason for this heresy. A father is as much a parent as the mother. He can't help the biological accident that made Mama, not him, the incubator. With seahorses, you may recall, it's Papa who bears the young. It is apparent to anyone who has eyes to see that the father instinct is as strong as the mother instinct in the human race. It would have to be thus, or the human race would never have survived its first sabre-tooth tiger. In many species, the male leaves, or is driven away, after birth of the young. This is possible because, in such species, the female is possessed of as much physical strength as the male, and Mama is perfectly capable of looking after herself and the children.

In many other species, the males stick by their families. This is true of the human race. And those feminists who point to the alleged large number of fathers who desert their families forget several obvious facts: there is more social pressure on the mother, tending to keep borderline cases of motherly love at home; women are less inclined to make their own way in the world, and are thus more inclined to the security of the home; there is no lack of cases in which mothers do the deserting; and last, but not least, many cases of child desertion involve divorced men unable to bear up under the tyranny of alimony and child support payments—most such men would give their right arms to be with their children again, but can't see the justice in a system which, in practically every case, deprives them of actual parenthood while maintaining the legal fiction of parenthood by forcing them to pay up, or else.

As for the loyalty of men to their families, I recall a painting depicting some of our ancestors in trouble. Women and children huddled fearfully in the rear of the cave, while the men of the family risked their lives fighting off a hungry sabre-tooth tiger. The men could have run away and saved themselves.

Women are not basically more moral than men — any apparent differences in morality stem from different roles in our civilization. Women keep house and mind the kids, while men bring home the bacon and fight the wars that have ever been with us.

The gist of this being that our divorce laws are antiquated and unfair, and should be changed to allow Papa, where he is able to do so, to retain more than a biological parenthood.

For the sake of those whose temperaments have been rising while reading this, let me say: I love my mother, too. I also love the Constitution.

Some Guesses On New Soviet Line

We do not know very much about the off-the-record speech against Stalin which Khrushchev made to the Communist Congress. But there is no doubt that the present Soviet rulers have long been determined to destroy Stalin's reputation. There is nothing implausible in their picture of themselves as men who served Stalin because they were terrorized by him. Nor is it in the least improbable that in the Russian revolution, as in other revolutions before it, the period of terrorism comes at long last to an end, once the great tyrant disappears.

The news which is so meager but yet so fascinating raises many questions to which we should like to know the answers. We should like to know what it is that has impelled Khrushchev to launch such a big and spectacular campaign of defamation. Why has he done that when, with his control of the Soviet press, he could have gone on ignoring Stalin, not mentioning his name, and letting Stalin's memory fade out? What has made the anti-Stalinist campaign necessary at this time?

It does not seem to me at all likely that Khrushchev has undertaken this campaign primarily as part of the general Soviet campaign to win the good opinion of the non-Communist world. I say primarily because it is plain enough that the open disavowal of Stalin will have a big effect on European and Asian opinion. The Stalinist dictatorship and the reign of terror were originally the main reason for the break between the Soviet Communist orbit and the Socialist movements in the Western democracies. If Khrushchev can convince the non-Communist Socialists and indeed the parties of the left that the new rulers of Russia have broken with Stalin, he will have removed a powerful psychological block to the revival of the policy of collaboration in a popular front.

Yet, while anti-Stalinism serves the present policy of the Kremlin, it seems to me most improbable that Khrushchev would be doing anything so dangerous solely because it is good propaganda abroad. The Soviet propaganda abroad has been working effectively on the line of not mentioning Stalin, and the propaganda does have gotten along without Stalin's image. There must be developments in the heart of the Soviet Union itself, which account for what is now being done.

We do not know, however, what these developments are. We can only guess, or rather assume, that Khrushchev's main motive is somehow that the destruction of the Stalin legend is necessary to the survival of the Khrushchev oligarchy.

It is a temptation to make a guess that the outcome of what is happening in the Soviet regime is likely to be some kind of authoritarian military system, of which the hard core would be the army rather than the party. When Stalin died, this was the view of many of the best students of the Soviet system. There is evidence, however, to the contrary. I have been told by men, not Americans, who saw a great deal of Khrushchev, Bulganin, Zhukov and Molotov at the summit meeting in Geneva, that Marshal Zhukov was treated as a distinct inferior, and that there was no doubt that the party leaders were on top.

The present anti-Stalin campaign may not, therefore, stem from the military leaders. But we may well ask ourselves whether in the long run Khrushchev and the party leaders, having destroyed the legend of the dictatorship, can maintain enough authority and discipline to rule the Soviet empire. There is a great risk for the Communist Party in the Kremlin campaign to destroy the legend of Stalin's infallibility, to teach the people that it would have been desirable, had it been possible, to overthrow the deified master of the Communist world. This campaign is teaching the Russians that there might be good reason to rebel against Communist authority. We must not, therefore, rule out the possibility that the military men will become more powerful in the government if the party authority weakens.

The military men, of course, become more powerful in the realm of foreign relations. They may already be, it is often said, quite rightly, that though the tactics may change, the goals of Soviet policy do not change. This is undoubtedly so true of the immediate concrete goals of Soviet policy—that one may say that these goals would be what they are if the Communist rulers were replaced by Russian nationalists.

The point I wish to make is that the goals of Russian policy are not primarily Communist and that they will not be altered no matter how much the regime inside Russia becomes altered. Indeed the nationalist and patriotic rather than Marxist and doctrinaire, is the main force on the Russian state pushing stubbornly and tenaciously the old Russian objectives in Eastern Europe, in the Middle and Far East.

A Wonderful Individual—Louis Bromfield

To many persons, Louis Bromfield was a writer who produced a group of memorable American novels and won the Pulitzer Prize 30 years ago. To others, he was the nation's leading conservationist, eloquently and passionately challenging the country to guard its greatest heritage, the land.

But to his friends, and they circle the world in which he traveled so widely, he was and always will be a warm, loving and vital man, generous beyond reason. He gave of himself to everyone in need, whether the need was financial or for the comfort and strength that goes with a steady and understanding friendship. He listened to everyone's problems and never mentioned his own.

He was a big man who looked sturdy and indestructible as an oak. He overflowed with such vitality and boundless energy that he customarily did the work of two men. And until the very last, it seemed impossible that death could touch this man who had always been so full of life and loved it so much.

Wherever Louis was, he was the center of action. It was not in him to be dull or endure boredom in silence. He was a complex and rugged individualist, full of salt, vinegar and opinion. But no matter what his convictions, he would argue any side of a question, and argue it brilliantly and devastatingly, to keep a party going, to amuse himself or needle a stuffed shirt. He loved to outrage the fat-cats and he knew how!

Louis literally earned a fortune with his pen (he always wrote in longhand). But when the young novelist won the Pulitzer Prize in 1927 and the $1,000 that went with it, he had a wife, a baby and less than $100 in the bank.

There never was a farm like Malabar! It became an American Mecca for people from all over the world who wanted advice on conservation, farming, writing or the breeding of boxer dogs, for which Malabar was famous, too. In sunny weather, it was nothing for a thousand tourists a day to tramp over the farm with Louis in the lead, the boxers at his heels, lecturing joyously on all his specialties.

When Mary Bromfield, herself a wonderful and extraordinary woman, was alive and the three daughters at home, life at Malabar was a cross between "Grand Hotel," "Life with Father" and "You Can't Take It With You."

"No one is yet making fireworks in the basement," Louis would say, "but it's only a matter of time."

If many of the guests were world famous (Lauren Bacall and Humphrey Bogart, an old friend of the Bromfields, were married there), just as many were refugees in one sense or another. The house brimmed with actual refugees, old European friends, during the war. (Louis, a decorated veteran of World War I, was away from home half the time, tirelessly traveling up and down the United States in World War II, selling bonds.)

And it became the habit, too, of friends in either domestic or financial trouble to send their children to the farm. It seems incredible now, but at the time it was quite normal to find the house filled with as many as half a dozen stray youngsters, happy as larks. This has gone on for years.

One had only to see Louis at Malabar to know that between him and the soil and between him and all animals was a deep mystical attachment and communion. Communication, really.

And now Louis has gone back to Malabar and the earth he loved so much, and those of us who loved him are infinitely poorer.

Sewing 'Fur' Proves Easy Job For Girls

By DOROTHY ROE
Tops on the "I wish I had" list for most girls is a little fur jacket, perfect for spring wear over suits and as a glamor wrap for summer evenings.

Local sewing center experts suggest you make your own. It's easy and inexpensive with fake fur and a standard pattern. A popular style has a tuxedo front, gently flared back and deep cuffs.

When cutting the sleeves, allow 1 1/2 inches more width on the pattern piece at the bottom. Join sleeve facing pattern piece to sleeve pattern piece, too, so there will be no seam.

Paris Stars Synthetics In Fashions

PARIS — Fabrics make as much news as silhouettes in the current French spring fashions, as many of the top couturiers feature new blends of American synthetic fibers in striking new weaves and textures.

A favorite of the season is orlon, shown in a wide variety of fabrics, some blended with silk, wool or cotton.

Blends of orlon and wool are used in some of the new spring coats in recognition of the easy-to-care-for properties of the new fiber.

The new synthetic blends are shown in serge, alpaca-like suiting, flannel, muted prints, shantung, faille and satin, woven by French mills using American-made fibers.

Catholics Announce Holy Week Rites

Holy Week services in St. Thomas Catholic Church this year will follow the pattern and formula set up on Nov. 16, 1955 by the Sacred Congregation of Rites.

The Rev. J. W. Moore, pastor of St. Thomas, explained the decree handed down restores the order of services for the seven days before Easter to a form which it is believed coincides with the actual days and hours on which the sacred events occurred.

Starting on Sunday, March 25—Palm Sunday—initial services of the Holy Week worship will be conducted at St. Thomas.

On Palm Sunday, the divine service opens shortly before 7 a.m. with the triumphant procession with the priest and the people carrying the blessed palms proclaiming their devotion, fealty and love to Christ. Second part of the Palm Sunday services consists of the holy sacrifice of the mass and the reading of the passion.

On the evening of March 29—Holy Thursday—the church will celebrate the anniversary of the Lord's Supper. St. Thomas will observe this day with a mass which opens at 8 p.m.

Good Friday, anniversary of Christ's passion and death, the initial portion of the service consists of the reading of the prophecies foretelling the coming of Christ, his life, suffering and death.

Third section will see the unveiling of the Cross.

The services close with the communion after the return of the sacred hosts to the repository. After the devotional recitation of the Lord's Prayer, the priest and the people will receive the holy communion.

For Catholics March 31 is a day of intense sorrow. The service on Holy Saturday symbolizes this grief. In the darkness of the night, a new fire will be kindled at 10:45 p.m. when the Easter candle symbolizing the Christ as "the light of the world" will be lighted and the priest, in procession, will call out the time honored phrase "Lumen Christi" three times as he walks down the aisles. The candles and lights in the church are then illuminated and the Easter song of praise "Exultat" will be sung and in other rites baptismal rites will be renewed.

The Easter vigil mass will be sung and at the Gloria all of the bells in the church will be rung. To close the service, the organ will peal out the joyous notes announcing the resurrection of Christ.

At First Church of God the Rev. Hal Hooker will be in the pulpit for both services. His morning topic is "The Triumphant Entry."

The Rev. F. C. Zozier, Galveston Street Church of Christ, will speak on "Setting God's House in Order" in the morning and "Blaspheming the Holy Ghost" at night. At 5:30 p.m. Friday over radio station KTXC he will speak on "The Signs Following the Believers."

LATTER-DAY SAINTS

Service of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints will include Sunday School at 10 a.m.; priesthood meeting at 11:30 a.m.; and a Sacrament meeting at 6:30 p.m. All services will be held at the Girl Scout Little House, 1407 Lancaster.

EPISCOPAL

Services in St. Mary's Episcopal Church will be a celebration of the Holy Communion at 8 a.m., the morning worship and sermon by the rector, the Rev. William D. Boyd, at 11 a.m.

The instructions class will meet in the rector's office at 4 p.m. and YPF will meet in the Parish.

LUTHERAN

Sunday School at St. Paul's Lutheran Church will be held at 9:30 a.m. Divine services will begin at 10:30 a.m. with the Rev. Wayne Dittloff speaking on "The Glory of His Person." A nursery chapel will be maintained during the service. The Adult Discussion Group will meet at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday. Reverend Dittloff will speak on "The Glory of His Passion." Both services will be held at 7:30 p.m.

METHODIST

At First Methodist Church, Dr. Jordan Grooms' morning sermon topic will be "The Passing Parade."

No services will be held at night. At 4 p.m. Duboise' "Seven Last Words" will be performed jointly by the church choir, Howard County Junior College choir and Webb Choralliers.

The Rev. Jesse Young, Park Methodist Church, will take his morning sermon, "Who Is This?" from Matt. 21:10-11. At night he will speak on "Three Attitudes Toward Christ," Luke 23:2. Holy Week Services will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

At Wesley Memorial Methodist Church, in observance of the church's 25th Anniversary, Dr. Howard Crawford, First Methodist Church, Plainview, and Dr. Marvin Boyd, First Methodist Church, Midland, will bring morning and evening services. At 2 p.m. Dr. O. P. Clark, Abilene, will speak. A Silver Tea at 3:30 p.m. will be held in the church parlor.

NAZARENE

The Rev. L. V. Reazin will bring both services at Church of the Nazarene.

PRESBYTERIAN

The Rev. R. Gage Lloyd will be in the pulpit for both services.

At St. Paul Presbyterian Church the Rev. Jack Ware will speak on "Lord of All" during the morning worship. The choir will present a spiritual, "Were You There?" In the evening the message will be "Weapons That Win."

STATE HOSPITAL

First Presbyterian Choir will present Palm Sunday music at 2 p.m. services at State Hospital. Chaplain C. E. Thiele will speak on "The Lord Has Need of H." Confessions and Mass will be held Thursday morning.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTIST

Services at the Seventh Day Adventist Church will be at 2:30 p.m. Saturday followed by church services at 3:30 p.m.

TEMPLE ISRAEL

Friday evening services of Temple Israel will be held at room 511 in the Settles Hotel at 8 o'clock.

WEBB AFB

Chaplain William H. Barker will speak on "Jesus Came to Town" at 11 a.m. in the Base Chapel. Sunday School will be held at 9:45 a.m. in the Chapel Annex.

For Catholic worshippers, Chaplain William J. Ladum will conduct Sunday Mass at 9 a.m. and 12:15 p.m. Confessions will be heard from 7-8 p.m. Saturday.

The Meaning of Christ's Suffering

BY HIS AGONY HE SAVES HIS PEOPLE FROM THEIR SINS

Scripture—Luke 22:1-66.

BY NEWMAN CAMPBELL

CHRIST'S TRIALS occupy most of our lesson assignment today. How unjust these trials were we shall learn as we read Luke's account of them.

Possibly some of the older children who study this lesson have been in a modern courtroom where a trial was being held. No judge sitting on a case would be allowed to try a friend or acquaintance. He must be absolutely neutral.

The jurors listening to the evidence also must have no prejudices. They must listen intently to what the witnesses of both sides have to testify, and bring in their verdict of guilty or not guilty according to the knowledge they thus gain and by what the judge informs them in his "charge."

No shouting crowds are allowed in the courtroom to hurl accusations at the accused as in Jesus' case. We shall see as we read the story how lacking in right and justice these trials were when our Lord was condemned to death.

After the so-called trial before the scribes and Pharisees, Christ was taken before Pontius Pilate, the Roman procurator appointed to Judaea by Tiberius, the whole multitude following them. These enemies of the accused Jesus,

MEMORY VERSE

He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed.—Isaiah 53:5.

Thou be Christ, save thyself and us." But the other criminal rebuked the first, saying that they two were being justly punished for their crimes, but Jesus was guiltless. Then He said to Jesus: "Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom," and Jesus answered, "Today thou shalt be with Me in Paradise."

About the sixth hour darkness covered the earth, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst. Then Jesus cried with a loud voice, "Father, into Thy hands I commend My spirit," and died.

All His friends and the women stood far off and beheld these things.

Now a man named Joseph—a counsellor and a good man, and just, went to Pilate and begged that he might take the Body of Jesus and bury it. Pilate gave his consent, and Joseph took Jesus' body down, wrapped it in linen and laid it in his own sepulchre where no man had lain.

The women noted where Christ was laid and prepared spices and ointments with which to embalm the body; but they first rested because of the Sabbath day, and when they came again the Lord had risen.

Herod asked Jesus some questions, but the Lord remained silent. The chief priests did not, however, hurl accusations at Him vehemently; Herod and his men then mocked the Lord, dressed Him in gorgeous robe, and sent Him back to Pilate.

Every Day,
You Will Want To Read
"Stories Of Easter"

The Herald starts today an unusual and impressive series of articles dealing with the story of Easter, through a number of people who were in contact with Jesus during his Passion Week. Starting in today's Herald, there will be a story each day for eight days, each dealing with a key personality of that historic time.

The articles were written by George Cornell, religious reporter for The Associated Press, who dug deep into the background of these people to picture the part they played in the Easter story.

You'll be impressed with every one of them. And you will be stirred, too, by the unusual picture characterizations of these people. The drawings are by Guy Rowe, Time magazine cover artist who attained new fame in the religious field when he did the characterizations for the book of Old Testament stories, "In Our Image."

THROUGH DARKNESS

Clouds, smoke and fog over the city—darkness enveloping the streets—the church spires hidden! Presently the sun's rays pierce the clouds—the fog lifts—once more the church spires will point toward heaven for all to see. So it is with life. Men and women grope about in darkness; clouds of doubt and the smoke of unbelief shut out God's glorious light. Then church bells peal—eyes and footsteps turn toward the house of God.

As sunlight dispels physical darkness, so God's message lifts the darkness from men's souls. Are you hearing that message? It sounds particularly clear on Palm Sunday morning when the story of Christ's triumphant entrance into Jerusalem is recalled. The Church invites you. Will you come?

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake, (2) For his children's sake, (3) For the sake of his community and nation, (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Uncle Ray: Marie Curie Wanted To Help Mankind

By RAMON COFFMAN November is the birth month of various widely known people. Among them are Daniel Boone, Will Rogers, John Philip Sousa, Ignace Paderewski, Marie Curie, Mohammed, Robert Louis Stevenson, Robert Fulton, La Salle, John Harvard, Louisa M. Alcott, Jonathan Swift and Mark Twain.

It seems hardly possible to name one of that brilliant group to name the most important, but Mark Twain ranks high among the writers. He carried the name of Samuel L. Clemens, but most persons called him by his pen name of Mark Twain after he became an author.

Daniel Boone was a pioneer of early American history. He was born in Pennsylvania, near the present city of Reading, but lived in several states during his long life. He built up his fame in backwoods areas west of the Allegheny Mountains.

3 Cars Stolen, One Recovered

Reports of three stolen cars were turned in Thursday and this morning, but one auto was found only hours after being reported.

Ben McVay, 1000 W. 3rd, called police Thursday about noon and said his 1954 Ford had been stolen Wednesday night.

Also stolen Thursday night was a 1947 Dodge pickup. James Weir of Jones Motor Company reported the theft. The pickup had been parked at 502 Douglas during the night. Weir claimed the vehicle was probably taken about 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

200 Respond In Dawson Survey

LAMESA — Two hundred cotton growers have signed wage survey statements here to date. They listed wages paid to braceros and domestic laborers last autumn during a 14-day period when the United States Department of Labor said that braceros were paid 20 cents cut, less than the "prevailing wage."

Herbert Green, chairman of the survey committee, urged other farmers to report their wage rate as soon as possible to the Farm Bureau office or to their gins.

Cotton Men To Meet In Lamesa

LAMESA — Dawson County cotton growers, ginners and business men are being urged to attend a meeting at 7:30 p.m. today at the Lamesa High School gymnasium to hear a discussion by farmers of problems facing the cotton farmer.

School Filing Deadline Sunday

COAHOMA (SC) — Deadline for filing for a place on the Coahoma Independent School District board falls Sunday evening, and so far only one candidate has filed for one of two places.

Candidate

S. W. Wheeler, city councilman at Stanton, is the only candidate for mayor of the city. He has been on the city council for three years and has been president of the Martin County Chamber of Commerce and Stanton Rotary Club.

Cubs Make Corsages

Cubs of Den 1, Pack 14, made Easter corsages for their mothers Thursday at their meeting in the Marshall Vernon home, 1210 E. 4th. Plans were made for an Easter egg hunt next Friday.

Lamesa Officials Confer With State Water Authorities

LAMESA — Mayor Bob Crawley and Councilman J. D. Dyer accompanied by Carroll Taylor, city manager, are in Austin today to appear before the State Board of Water Engineers in a hearing at 4 p.m. on the Canadian River dam project.

"Don't be silly—there can't be a Chevrolet dealer around here!"

There's no mirage about the used car values you get at a Chevrolet dealer's lot. Every OK Used Car carries his famous warranty in writing. That means you get a car that lets you climb hills or cross deserts with confidence. OK means thoroughly inspected and reconditioned for performance and safety. It means extra value and selection, too, due to volume trading for popular new Chevrolets.

Shivers Grants Execution Stay

AUSTIN (AP)—Gov. Shivers granted the customary 30-day constitutional stay of execution today for Marion Washington, convicted of murder at Waco.

Washington was originally scheduled to die at Huntsville April 6. The stay moves the date up to May 6.

Washington was convicted of killing Henry Poole, Connally Air Force Base airman. Poole was slain in a struggle with an armed Negro after the airman and his fiancée were forced to leave their auto on a lonely road.

The girl identified Washington as the man who forced her from the car and later shot Poole.

36th Division Due Atom Exercises

DALLAS (AP)—Three command post exercises involving the use of atomic weapons will be conducted this weekend by artillery staffs of the 36th Division.

Maj. Gen. Carl Phinney, commander, said the National Guard officers will hold a command post exercise Saturday and Sunday for the staff of the 141st Regimental Combat Team at San Antonio, and the 142nd RCT at Abilene and the 143rd RCT at Houston.

Hearing Set In School Fight

DALLAS (AP)—Two peace bond hearings and a simple assault ailing for Nolan Butler on charges growing out of a fist fight with school principal Ira Lasater, were set for April 6 here yesterday.

Butler said the argument started when Lasater told his wife, an Irving school teacher, that she would not get a contract to teach in Irving schools next year.

His wife was one of 20 teachers who stayed with their pupils when other teachers and principals struck in protest of the firing of Supt. John Beard last year.

Beard was re-hired after a new school board was elected.

Negro Coed To Wed, Try To Re-Enter Alabama U.

DALLAS (AP)—Miss Autherine Lucy, the Negro coed expelled from the University of Alabama after a series of campus racial riots, last night said she planned to be married, then try to re-enter the University of Alabama.

If she can't go to school there, she will try elsewhere, she said.

"I plan to be married April 22," she told a press conference called by the Dallas pastor who will officiate at the wedding.

She squeezed the hand of her fiancée the Rev. H. C. Foster, 27, a student minister at Tyler in East Texas. When they met five years ago he was a sophomore at Miles College, Birmingham, and she a senior.

"I'm thoroughly in agreement with her," Foster said of her plans to press for re-entry to the University of Alabama.

Miss Lucy told reporters that if she is unsuccessful in re-entering Alabama as a graduate student in library science she would try other universities.

"The University of Texas is among the first I have considered other than Alabama but I do not know if I would be accepted," she said.

"I am strongly determined not to give up," she said. "When you make up your mind, you want to go through with a thing."

Miss Lucy said she flew alone to Dallas several days ago and had gone to Tyler to visit Foster. In Dallas, she was the house guest of the Rev. Ernest Estell, pastor of the St. John Baptist Church, where the wedding will be held.

The first report of a romance between Miss Lucy and Foster was published several weeks ago by a New York newspaper. At that time neither would comment.

Foster is scheduled to graduate from Butler College in Tyler this spring with a social science degree. However, for several years he has been acting as a student minister in the Tyler area and said he intends to continue as pastor of two small rural churches.

Mate's Charges Anger Jayne

NEW YORK (AP)—Jayne Mansfield, bosomy Broadway actress, was indignant today over her estranged husband's charge that she is not a fit and proper person to have custody of their 5-year-old daughter, Jayne Marie.

"I'm a very stainless character. My petticoats are clear," she said.

Miss Mansfield, the most photographed girl since Marilyn Monroe began her rise to fame, is suing her husband, Paul Mansfield, a Dallas, Tex., public relations man, for divorce in California charging mental cruelty.

In a countersuit he asked custody of Jayne Marie claiming his wife was unfit to raise the child.

Apparently at issue are some semi-nude pictures of Miss Mansfield which appeared in the February issue of Playboy magazine. She suggested she posed for them to earn money while she and her husband were together.

"Those pictures in Playboy magazine I posed for to get milk and bread for the baby," she said.

"Paul had such jobs as sweeping out in the grocery, to selling cement, to selling radio time, to selling vibrators," referring to her daughter, Miss

Mansfield said "I read little Bible stories to her every night and she is a well balanced and intelligent child."

"He (Paul) was so jealous of my career. He calls up now every so often and cries for me to go back to him. This is his last contact with me, and I guess he's going whole hog."
