Brownell Asks Information Unit For West

DALLAS (P-Atty. Gen. Brownell called today for a Western hemispheric system of information-exchange on Red activity to keep this half of the world "free of the evil influence of communism.'

In a speech prepared for the Inter-American Bar Assn. conference, Brownell said that in this field "some progress has been achieved; much more must be done."

Brownell said the Soviet Reds control 13 major international front organizations, and that these groups have sharply stepped up activity, particularly propaganda, in Latin America in the last year. He asserted that one "arm of Soviet communism in this hemisphere is the extensive clandestine organization which exists in each of our countries." Brownell said actions against Soviet agents in recent years in the capitals of Canada, Australia and Iran established that "each of these spy rings is being operated out of the Soviet embassy."

"The spy and the spy ring are the forerunners of revolutionary and subversive movements. Working through local branches of the international Communist party, through front organizations and as experience has demonstrated, through Iron Curtain embassies and commercial establishments. the spy system of the Communist party of the Soviet Union extends to all of our countries.

"Defense against these activities requires protection by experts as highly trained as are those of the enemy. It requires the kind of coordinated constant vigilance that can best be supplied by trained organizations specializing in counter - espionage and counter-subversive techniques. "Finally, it requires close cooperation between our various governments."

Big Spring (Texas) Herold, Tues., April 17, 1956 Kennedy Will Take Pitching A Big 'If' In Hopes Mound In Odessa

Steers Open 3-AA Play

T. L. Kennedy, senior righthander, was due to take the mound for the Big Spring Steers in their opening District 3-AA baseball game this afternoon * with t.h e Odessa Bronchos in Odessa.

The Steers will carry a poor 1-9 won-lost record onto the field against the Hosses but have shown much improvement in recent games

If their hitting improved, they're going to be hard to handle. At the present time, Coach Roy Baird doesn't have a regular hitting above .300.

Kennedy has shown much promfse in his assignments to date. The boy depends on spot pitching to see him through.

Odessa will probably rely upon Dean Ewart for hill duties against Big Spring

The two teams haven't met in exhibition play this season and will enter into competition without benefit of scouting reports.

Odessa rates as a co-favorite to win the 3-AA championship, along with Midland, the defending champion.

Jerry Barron, who returned to the Big Spring lineup last week will be at second base for the Longhorns this afternoon. Preston Daniels will move to shortstop from the right side of the keystone sack

Billy Johnson or Billy Bluhm will be at third and George Peacock at first to round out the Steer Infield.

Ricky Terry again dons the catching harness for the Long horns. In the outfield, it will be Eugene Hall in left, Jerry Mc-Mahon in center and Jan Loudermilk in right.

The Steers play their first three conference games on the road and their next three at home They meet San Angelo there

Friday afternoon. The other conference game to day sends San Angelo to Midland. Midland and Odessa carry the glossiest records into conference competition. Midland has won ten games against four losses. Odessa has a 12-3 won-lost mark. San Anhas won but twice in 13 as

On Thursday Card

The wiley Mitsu (above) comes to Big Spring Thursday night for a wrestling date at the Howard County Fair Building with Danny Savich. The match is part of a double event which will also feature two women grapplers, Dot Dotson and China Mira. It's the first of several spot shows Promoter George Dunn hopes to stage here.

OOKING 'EM With Tommy Hart

Sports dialogue RAY BLADES, coach of the Chicago Cubs:

"If the top officials of baseball really want to help baseball, it can be done very easily. Just deaden the baseball a little. The big boys would still get their share of home runs. But a slightly deadened ball would make better hitters out of the average players. It would also restore the hit-and-run, the steal and the bunt. Right now, every little guy in the lineup is swinging for the fences. They hit one once in a while. But they wind up batting .230."

Hawks, Dusters Vie At 5 P.M.

Steer Park will be the scene of action today of a baseball exhibition between the Howard County Junior College Jayhawks and the Webb Air Force Base Dusters. Starting time is 5 p.m.

The contest will serve as a final tuneup for the Hawks before their all-important West Zone contest here Friday afternoon with the Odessa JC Wranglers.

Odessa now leads the Hawks by one game in the standings and a victory over HCJC here Friday would all but sew up first place for Larry McCulloch's team.

HCJC was originally scheduled to meet Clarendon Junior College here in a doubleheader today but the games were set back at the request of the Clarendon coach. Clarendon will probably come here next week, although a date has not yet been arranged.

Webb's Dusters, managed by Bill Sweeny, have been conducting workouts here for the past couple of weeks and are seeking to line up a full schedule for the summer There is a possibility the team will enter an independent league in Snyder.

Jimmy Jolley and Kidd Waddill will probably divide time on the mound for the collegians today. The contest is booked for sever innings.

for farmers at this time." The Tennessee senator, aspiring to the Democratic presidential nomination, is campaigning for 68 convention votes in California's June 5 primary.

By the veto, Kefauver said, President Eisenhower "will now take full blame for the callous attitude of his administration" toward the farmers' troubles. "This, of course, is precisely where the blame should have been put all the time," he said in a prepared statement issued in San Francisco. He said farmers previously had "almost universally blamed" Agriculture Secretary Benson for "this administration's failure to deal adequately with their problems."

Practical Aspects Of Unity

The practical aspects of the movement to reunify the democracy of Texas should commend themselves to all thoughtful Texans of whatever gradation of personal political opinion.

Sending a delegation to Chicago that can work in harmony there is essential. A delegation divided against itself would be helpless. A delegation with its stinger out and a knife in its boot to use against the national leadership would be futile to say the least.

On the other hand a unified Texas delegation, like the "immortal forty" at Baltimore in 1912, could write history.

Unify at the top and in the ranks is a prerequisite. Lyndon Johnson is recognized on all sides, including many Republicans who do not see eye to eye with him on principles and issues, but admire his courage and his legislative skill, as a great unifying force in the Democratic Party throughout the country. His position as such has been made difficult by the divisions that exist among Democrats of his home state.

At Chicago, heading a delegation that is united behind him, representing all factions of the party in this state, Lyndon Johnson could be a rallying point for the entire South. He has the respect and confidence of Southern conservatives as well as those who call themselves something else. Such men as the conservative Dick Russell of Georgia have spoken out in his behalf. All this adds up to the simple fact that Texas as well as Southern Democrats in general, can rally behind Johnson and by doing so make the voice of the South heard in national party councils in strong and influential terms. They can veto or modify the forces in the national party that care nothing for the South and its problems. They can restore to the South the traditional place of leadership in the Democratic Party

The May 5 conventions is the place to start on the task of unifying the state's embroiled Democracy behind a great leader

Veto Could Become Hot Potato

The President has vetoed the farm bill on the grounds it did not measure up to administration requirements for a minimum bill, that it would work harm to all agricultural areas of the country and to the consumers as well.

Although there were immediate rumblings of attempts to over-ride the veto, there appeared not even the remotest prospect that this would materialize. Fifteen Republicans joined 35 Democrats in supporting the compromise bill in the Senate. The House approved it 237-131. In neither case does that come close to being the necessary two-thirds majority.

The President probably had better grounds for vetoing the farm bill than the recent measure which would have exempted natural gas production from federal control. However, it is ironical that the farm bill veto will hurt him more politically. With declining revenues, agricultural population will be a lot less likely to forget and forgive than the oil and gas trade

No one can argue that the final version of the farm bill was a patchwork. Frequently, it was said to be a bill that met the approval of no one block of supporters. Yet, sometimes compromise is the essence of legislation. The President did not feel that the compromise was near enough to administration position, including unalterable opposition to rigid price supports.

Outlook for another farm bill before the John? year is out is dim. Meanwhile, if natural forces do not bolster the agricultural economy, the veto could become a pretty hot potato has always been an impenetrable mystery to me.

Around The Rim

Make Money Changing A Service

I gaze open mouthed at busy checkers in supermarkets and circuses as they accept coarse, over-sized folding money from customers and dexterously hand back the requisite change.

I am a sitting duck for the shortchanger and it is only because the world is blessed with so many honest folk that people like me don't come up on the little end of the stick every time we make a purchase.

Those who deal out change tell me there are basic rules to expedite the accurate handling of such matters.

You are dealing, let it be said, with a certain sized bill. So much must be taken out of that bill for the purchase. Hence, so much change must be returned to the owner. How you go about it - that is to say the sequence in which you deal out the smaller bills and fractional currency speeds up the operation and makes for greater accuracy.

All of which is probably very true. I wouldn't know.

I can get my change, step to one side, get out a piece of paper and a pencil and, with considerable concentration, arrive at whether or not I have been given the correct amount.

However, that is all beside the point. I have an earthshaking proposal to offer to the countless thousands of nice people whose principal business day in

Money, in any sum beyond 30 cents, and day out is to hand back to customers such change as they may have coming. Every city and town and most villages have parking meters. These devices require pennies and nickels. Most motorists, I have observed, never have pennies and nickels. They fumble in their pockets or purses and then, with an anxious glance up and down the street to see if a cop is in sight, dash into the nearest store to get some change. Then they hasten back to the car and feed the kitty.

My earthshaking proposal is simply this: As a gesture of good will and service, why couldn't grocery stores, drug stores, department stores and all of the innumerable other enterprises and businesses instruct their cashiers to do the simple service of pointedly handling all customers receiving change as many nickels and pennies as the transaction would permit? If this could only be done, the result would be that motorists who are now so often caught without anything smaller than a quarter in their possession would be provided with parking meter cash. Of course, you may need a cotton sack to carry it.

A great deal of tension and worry as well as gasoline would thus be saved and in these days of atomic bombs, soaring economic issues and international difficulty, tension and worry should be diminished on all possible occasions.

Don't you think so? -SAM BLACKBURN

David Lawrence Middle East Crisis Affects Politics

WASHINGTON - Politically speaking, Washington is nervous about the Middle East. The crisis could alter the entire complexion of the presidential campaign if the United States became involved in a war, big or little, anywhere.

Leaders of both houses of Congress-who have conferred with the Secretary of State. John Foster Dulles, at the request of President Eisenhower-learned that the situation in the Middle East is serious but got no indication as to whether Congress would be asked to authorize armed action by American forces

Nor was any contingent authority discussed. It is possible, of course, for the President to request Congress to authorize in advance the use of American military forces if the United States is asked, for example, through a resolution adopted by the Security Council of the United Nations to cooperate in military steps.

But, though such a contingent authority was given by Congress in the case of the islands off the coast of Red China, the plan for the time being is not to do so with respect to the Middle East. The situation there could develop into a crisis requiring some action by the United Nations but, until the government here is confronted with such a step, the President will not go to Congress for authority. Meanwhile, American troops will not be committed to armed intervention of any kind unless, of course, there is some unforeseen attack on Americans or American establishments in the Middle East. Any military commander in the field where American troops are stationed to guard overseas bases can, of course, resist attack without waiting for authority from the President. The consequences politically of any involvement of the United States in military action in the Middle East are not difficult to appraise. Up to now the Republicans have been pointing proudly to the fact that the United States is at peace and that the Korean armistice ended the fighting in the Far East for American troops. If there is a resumption of fighting ber elections.

anywhere, even on a small scale, it could mean the immediate increase in the number of boys drafted each month in this country-and that's always polically bad for the party in power.

Likewise, it seems probable that, if any military operations become necessary, the budget will go out of balance and fear of an inflationary trend will arise on the economic front.

The present hope of the administration is to avoid any involvement but, if it becomes necessary, such steps as are taken would be in cooperation with other powers. An effort first would be made through the United Nations to adopt some form of collective action. It is easier nowadays for American public opinion to be persuaded that military steps are necessary when taken with allies for the purpose of avoiding a larger war than it would be if America decided on any course by itself. The idea seems to be that, distasteful as participation in any overseas operations might be, the people would support any recommendations the President might make if it appeared necessary to quell an outbreak of war anywhere.

"There is a lot of air blowing in from Texas."

This impromptu observation left Miss Baker at liberty at once to take up the serious study of acting, which she did.

She made her Broadway debut in "Escapade," and first won critical attention in "All Summer Long." Later she auditioned for Jack Garfein, a young stage director, and he signed her soon after to a lifetime role as his wife. Both she and her husband share a serious interest in the drama that goes beyond the opportunity for making a fast buck.

East are not militarily strong, so it is quite possible that a show of firmness by America and Great Britain, in the event that the United Nations found itself unable to agree on measures to enforce peace, would be sufficient to prevent a full-scale war. Skirmishes and small engagements on the borders could become serious but they would not involve anything as big as the intervention in Korea when the Communists moved south across the 38th parallel. If President Eisenhower is able skillfully to steer the nation through the Middle East crisis without involving American military forces, it could turn out to be a political "break" in his favor. It would be hailed by his supporters as an example of the need for continuity in American policy abroad. Officials here are nervous and worried, however, for they know the situation in the Middle East can go in almost any direction between now and the Novem-

From 1954 to 1955, common stock flotations by corporations rose from $1,200,000,-000 to $2,200,000,000, according to the Securities & Exchange Commission. Total securities sold rose from $9,200,000,000 to $10,500,000,000

And, if plans for construction of new plant and installation of new equipment mean anything, flotations of securities in 1956 will exceed 1955 - provided, of course, prices hold up. So, the prospective increase in the supply of securities must be considered in trying to measure the trend of the stock market.

In 1946, Wall Street couldn't handle the rush of new securities to market, especially stocks. That was after the war. The nation had completed the reconversion to peace without widespread unemployment. Business was booming. And new corporations, priming for a postwar kill, freely floated stocks to optimistic investors.

All of a sudden, in September, stocks broke. Economists and market fundamentalists looked around for deep causes: Was business going to pot? Was the country heading into a postwar recession as after World War I?

At the time, the questions seemed answerless. The market floundered back and forth for about three years.

Not until the summer of 1949 did Wall Street snap out of its doldrums. And today, bolstered by the wisdom of hindsight, we have the answer: Market indigestion.

bake it...

... if your good name depended on its quality

Imagine yourself in the business of baking bread, with your own family name on every loaf. You'd certainly want the bread you baked to do credit to your name - to be the best you could possibly produce. So it is with the baking of Mrs. Baird's Bread, for the name on each loaf is the Baird family name. A member of the Baird family supervises its baking-makes every effort every day to produce the best possible loaf. Insist on Mrs. Baird's Bread.
