Conference On Suez Off To A Fast Start

LONDON (AP) — The 22-nation Suez conference got off to a fast start today, although the Russians emphasized they consider this parley "just a first step" in solving the crisis created by Egypt's nationalization of the canal.

Soviet Foreign Minister Dmitri Shepilov made a bid to broaden the conference to include 24 other nations — including Red China — but agreed to waive procedural objections and expressed willingness to help in a peaceful solution to the dispute.

Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser, who boycotted the conference, kept an eye on the proceedings by sending some of his foreign affairs experts to London as sideline observers.

The polite and formal air in this old capital was in sharp contrast to strikes and demonstrations sweeping the Arab world in protest against the conference.

Shepilov, in criticizing the makeup of the London parley, said:

Getting The Feel Early

Egypt, spurred by the Suez Canal crisis, has taken to training all ages in military matters. Here a group of six-year-old mascots of the Egyptian National Liberation Army is shown how to hold a rifle at the El Alamein Club training center near Cairo.

"Cairo should be the real place for a conference on the Suez Canal.

The Western Big Three called the meeting in London to challenge Nasser's sole control over the Suez Canal and place it under international guidance.

A British spokesman said Shepilov told the 22-nation gathering all countries using the waterway should have been called into the London conference, aimed by the West to establish some international supervision over the operation of the Canal Egypt has nationalized.

British Foreign Minister Selwyn Lloyd, unanimously elected chairman despite a Soviet suggestion that he step aside, retorted that all countries are vitally interested in the Suez issue.

The parley grew out of a nationalization decree by Nasser July 26.

The new Soviet foreign minister, making his debut as Moscow's spokesman in the diplomatic big leagues, stated the Russian position less than an hour after British Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden told delegates the occasion for the conference was "among the gravest any of us have had to face since the Second World War."

"The result of your work together has never mattered more," he said.

Shepilov complained that the West did not give the interested powers time to prepare sufficient for the parley.

He emphasized again the Russian view that no internationally binding decision can come out of the London conference.

The Russian diplomat said he was prepared to go along in a search for ways of settling the Suez crisis peacefully. He said he did not wish to complicate the proceedings by delving too deeply into procedural matters.

As a result, most of the purely procedural elements of the conference were settled in the 90 minute meeting, setting the stage for the delegates to begin discussing the core of the dispute this afternoon.

Shepilov stated again that Russia believes 46 nations should have been invited—all the Arab states, the East European Communist states and Communist China along with Egypt.

A British foreign office spokesman said he could not confirm reports from Baghdad that Egypt had nominated Iraq to mediate on the Suez Canal issue between Egypt and Britain. The spokesman said Iraq had made no approach to Britain.

The delegates, including the Big Four foreign ministers and the diplomats of 18 other nations, faced up to one of the most delicate diplomatic tasks since the Korean War.

They met in historic Lancaster House, not far from Buckingham Palace.

Even as the conference began, Britain was still flying troops to the Middle East in a maneuver officially described as "precautionary."

Tone Of Voice Is Changed In Demo 'Sermon'

By WHITNEY SHOEMAKER
CHICAGO (AP)—The Democratic sermon today sounds much as it did four years ago. But the tone of voice has changed.

There are differences in the platform submitted at the party's national convention.

The proposed civil rights plank, most delicate of all the pieces, was built on new material—the Supreme Court's ruling against segregation in public schools. The plank written by the Platform Committee dodged outright endorsement and said nothing about carrying out the decisions, other than to reject the use of force. This angered many in the North. But it did mention the decree and went into other areas that displeased many in the South.

In 1952, on civil rights, the platform called for federal legislation on equal rights to jobs, personal security and a "full and equal" part in the nation's political life.

This year the Platform Committee took note of the 1954 Supreme Court decision with the remark it had produced "consequences of vast importance." The plank handed the convention rejected use of force to "interfere with the orderly determination of these matters by the courts."

Rather than propose federal laws to guarantee voting rights and the like, it simply stated the party promises "to continue its efforts to eliminate illegal discriminations in these fields.

But it did go beyond a 1952 paragraph to say every child "has full right under the law and the Constitution" to every educational opportunity.

The platform draftsmen also wrote new line into the traditional Democratic stand on reciprocal trade with other nations.

They said the Eisenhower administration had failed to recognize "equities" for agriculture, industry and labor. The result, they said, has been "serious injury" to hundreds of thousands of Americans, and which they said then should be retained.

Four years ago, in drawing up a document setting out party principles, the Democrats were in power. They boasted of "achievement."

This year they're fighting to get back in. So the platform commitments of 1952 have given way to roars of indignation and promises to set things straight.

Addressing farmers, the Democrats in 1952 applauded Congress for keeping out of operation a system of flexible price supports for basic crops. With Republicans in command, the system later went into effect. So in 1956, the Democrats demanded its repeal and called for a return to the fixed, high supports which applied in 1952 and which they said then should be retained.

New crises molded the foreign policy — defense plank. In 1952 Democrats sought "a fair and effective peace settlement" in Korea. In 1956 they declared war on "the Republican record of confusion and complacency."

President Eisenhower, the platform architects said, "has unnecessarily and dangerously subjected the American people to the risk of atomic world war."

In '56 as in '52 the party preached free world unity and security through strength. The new recommendations, however, emphasized a need for "superior" defense forces while striving for universal disarmament.

On taxes, the Democrats prepared to go further and be more specific. Four years ago, with war in Korea, they called only for cuts as fast as defense requirements would permit.

This year the platform writers advocated a flat increase in the personal income tax exemption, from $600 to "at least $800." For lower income groups, this would mean a saving of $40 a person—$160 to a family of four.

They pledged "a truly balanced" budget. In 1952, this was the word on government spending: maintain a "vigilant review" in order to trim wherever possible.

EGYPT GETS SUEZ STAFF TROUBLE, LIMITS CONVOYS

LONDON (AP)—The Egyptian Embassy announced today the number of southbound convoys through the Suez Canal is being reduced from two to one a day.

Previously the Egyptians had cut out one northbound convoy. So there will be only two convoys daily—one north and one south—through the 103-mile long waterway linking the Red Sea and the Mediterranean. Each trip takes about 14 hours.

The Egyptians blamed the curtailment on "a number of foreign pilots in Europe who have not returned to their posts at the end of their vacation."

Normally two convoys move daily from Port Said, at the north end of the canal, and two from Suez, at the south end.

Egyptians report traffic through the canal is running 40 to 50 ships a day, slightly above the figures for the same period last year.

The convoy announcement was the first official indication that President Nasser's regime had gotten into severe staffing trouble.

BULLETIN
CONVENTION HALL, Aug. 16 (AP)—Adlai Stevenson's name was formally put before the Democratic convention today for the presidential nomination. The delegates flew into a frenzied demonstration for the man they knew was the convention's big prize winner.

Stevenson had it locked up with more than a majority of the delegates promised to him, and others were hurrying to get aboard the bandwagon.

Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts nominated Stevenson and himself got a great cheer when he took the platform. There were more shouts when he said the Democrats were picking the next president, not just a nominee.

Kennedy said his man was the "best qualified" to lead the party and the nation, a great campaigner, and an appealing figure. He said:

"Our candidates will be up against two of the most skilled political campaigners in history, one who takes the high road and one who takes the low road."

This reference to President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon, the almost certain Republican candidates, brought the biggest applause of his speech.

Finally, Kennedy named his man—"the man from Libertyville . . . and the next president, Adlai Stevenson."

That brought a cheering march around the hall by the Stevenson supporters, waving such banners as "We're Madly for Adlai."

Lyndon To Hold Texas Votes

CHICAGO (AP) — Sen. Lyndon Johnson said today Texas' 56 votes, under strict state convention instructions, will be cast for him as the state's favorite son candidate.

He had been asked if he was holding firm in the face of the growing likelihood that Adlai Stevenson would win on the first ballot.

"Texas casts its votes in August as it did in May," Johnson replied. The state convention then bound the delegation to vote for Johnson as long as his name is in nomination.

Johnson said Texas would await its alphabetical turn for the nomination speech by John Connally of Fort Worth, vice chairman of the delegation.

Johnson said again he is not "the slightest bit interested" in getting the vice presidential nomination.

Dire predictions of disunity in the Democratic party were snowed under by the national convention's action on the platform, he asserted.

The platform, he said, "is not a perfect program but on the whole it is progressive and forward looking." It is, he said, "one on which all good Democrats can stand."

Johnson and other Texas Democratic leaders asserted they could go home with the compromise civil rights plank and all the other sections and win the state back into the Democratic column in November.

"The platform represents a good faith attempt to bring together the various points of view of the party and as such I will support it," Johnson said. "That does not mean I embrace every recommendation or each line in it."

The only problem left to the convention is nominating a ticket of "prudent and responsible men" who will carry the party to a victory in November, the Senate leader said.

The Tennesseeans delayed action as to where their 32 votes will go until a caucus on the floor.

Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, who made the chief challenge to Stevenson in the week's maneuvering, insisted he was still in serious contention. He fired a telegram to all chairmen of state delegations telling them:

"I have just talked with President Truman. We are determined to fight through to the nomination tonight regardless of any rumors to the contrary you have heard or may yet hear."

But to the delegates the remaining unanswered big question of the convention was who is to be Stevenson's running mate.

One of the names which had figured in speculation seemed to be scratched by a morning development. This was an announcement that Stevenson had asked Sen. John Kennedy of Massachusetts to make the nominating speech for him.

It seemed improbable that Stevenson would have tapped the boyish-looking Kennedy for this honor or if he were minded to have him on the ticket as the No. 2 man.

Some of those stating first-ballot preferences, however, might be prevented from casting them that way by majority-rule requirements in their delegations.

The practical certainty of Stevenson's nomination was such that speculation over his possible vice presidential running mate became acute.

In the absence of any word from Stevenson, the race appeared to be narrowing into a three-way contest between Senators Estes Kefauver and Albert Gore of Tennessee, and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

James Finnegan, Stevenson's campaign manager, said the decision had been made as between possible candidates. From another source it was reported, however, that Finnegan was arguing against selection of a Roman Catholic. Finnegan, a Catholic, was represented as believing the religious issue ought not to be raised.

That would eliminate Sen. John Kennedy of Massachusetts and Mayor Robert F. Wagner Jr. of New York City from consideration.

Optimism pervaded the conference room as Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden welcomed the delegates. Eden then turned the conference table maneuvering over to Foreign Minister Selwyn Lloyd.

The optimism was nourished by (1) less strident tones in London and Paris, (2) by the known U.S. desire for a "reasonable" solution and (3) by Nasser's own softened attitude.

Before the conference opened, an Iraqi foreign office spokesman disclosed that Egypt has agreed "in principle" to Iraqi mediation in the dispute. "Preliminary steps" are being taken in this direction, the spokesman said.

Nasser, while rejecting the invitation to the conference, also sent his top aide, Ali Sabry, flying to London at the last moment to keep Egypt's viewpoint before the delegates.

The Arab world seethed in public protest against the London conference. From Libya to Syria shops were shuttered, business houses closed and bazaars deserted. All but essential work came to a halt.

Crowds poured into the streets across the Middle East but demonstrations were mostly orderly. Only in Tripoli was a clash with police reported. There police used tear gas to disperse a large crowd shouting pro-Nasser slogans.

Britain, France and the United States hoped to line up a majority in favor of an international agency in direct control.

Russia and India have argued that Egypt is capable of running the canal herself with the United Nations standing by as overseer.

The Conservative Daily Mail estimated that 13 of the nations at the conference would favor the Big Three's view—all but Russia, India, Ceylon and Indonesia. But the U. S. Secretary of State Dulles was reported to believe the best the parley could produce would be a set of recommendations for future operation of the canal which Egypt might be willing to accept.

papers are supporting me for governor."

"I would be glad to debate any candidate who stays with the truth and issues; but I will not descend to the level of a candidate who constantly engages in personal abuse, personal attacks and falsehood," he said.

The senator planned to visit San Angelo, Abilene and Lubbock Thursday.

Yarborough said he had been talking to working people throughout the state.

"They tell me that the big boys have 'out-bigger' themselves this time in their lavish display of spending money," Yarborough asserted.

"I believe the statements I have been hearing are indicative of the outraged Texas conscience, indignant at the smear campaigns being waged against me. And I believe these people when they tell me they will vote for me in overwhelming numbers Aug. 25."

O'Daniel To Talk On Governor Race

By WHITEY SAWYER
Associated Press Staff

W. Lee O'Daniel, who got more than 300 thousand votes in the July 28 primary but failed to make the runoff, stepped back into the governor's race with a speech scheduled for Thursday night.

The former governor ran third. His votes would be enough to swing the Aug. 25 runoff. He said his speech over a Fort Worth TV station would be on "some important problems confronting the citizens of Texas about the next governor."

Although both runoff candidates—Ralph Yarborough and Sen. Price Daniel—have claimed support from O'Daniel backers, O'Daniel has kept silent.

Daniel rejected Yarborough's latest challenge to a debate. He said Wednesday such offers were "stock and trade of losing political candidates."

Twenty-two editors, mostly from small communities, asked the debate, Daniel said at Corpus Christi a "great majority of the 500 rural and small town newspapers are supporting me for governor."

"I would be glad to debate any candidate who stays with the truth and issues; but I will not descend to the level of a candidate who constantly engages in personal abuse, personal attacks and falsehood," he said.

Party Unity Cause For Compromise

CHICAGO (AP)—Democrats swallowed a civil rights compromise early today in the interest of party unity. Then they adopted a platform pledged to out-do Republicans in promoting prosperity.

The racial issue showed down came at an overtime session of the party's national convention. It followed a desperate behind-the-scenes battle between rival North-South forces that flared on the convention floor for little more than an hour, then was quickly squelched.

Amid cheers and boos, delegates noisily shouted down an attempt by some Northerners to include in the platform a specific promise to enforce the Supreme Court's ban against segregation of white and Negro school pupils.

Instead—heeding an appeal for party harmony from former President Truman—the convention okayed a compromise worked out earlier by the convention Platform Committee. This recognized the Supreme Court decision and said "high court" rulings are "part of the law of the land."

Democratic National Chairman Paul Butler called the relatively smooth proceedings "a tremendous demonstration of party unity."

But Sen. Paul Douglas of Illinois, one of those who plugged for the stiffer plank, said he was disappointed. On the other hand, the Georgia contingent felt that even the mild version that was adopted was too strong. It asked to be recorded against the platform.

Strategists in the unsuccessful drive to strengthen the civil rights plank included Douglas, Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan and Sen. Herbert Lehman of New York. Their speeches drew cries of "We want civil rights"—as well as catcalls.

Delegate E. Robert Short of Minneapolis, in presenting the stronger plan to the convention, said that "to simply give lip service to Supreme Court decisions without any pledge to carry them out would be to give them no support at all." Douglas said, "We cannot evade this issue."

But Truman, Rep. John McConroe of Massachusetts, the Platform Committee chairman, and others rose to defend stoutly the committee's compromise version as the strongest civil rights plank ever placed before a Democratic convention.

Truman said the majority plan was acceptable to him and that "I've done more to implement civil rights than any other president of the United States."

When the showdown came, Convention Chairman Sam Rayburn of Texas, speaker of the House of Representatives, handled the situation with the firmness for which he is noted. Rapping his gavel sharply, he ruled the stronger minority plan was voted down, and the entire platform adopted.

There was some booing. But Rayburn sternly told the delegates: "I've taken the eyes and the noses many times and I think I know who has the most."

But Lehman called Rayburn "very unfair in denying our New York delegation recognition so we could ask for a roll call."

Except for the civil rights plank the rest of the platform aroused no floor controversy.

Board Lowers 4th St. Values, Calls For New Tax Appraisal

After the first day of complaints from property owners on tax evaluation, the board of equalization Wednesday afternoon decided to alter rates on Fourth Street.

The three-man board today announced that they are lowering all valuations on Fourth Street 20 per cent. The three, J. W. Purser, M. R. Koger, and George O'Brien, said that after talking to citizens and listening to arguments Wednesday; they felt they had set the values too high.

In announcing the change, the board went on record as urging the city and school board to hire professional appraisers to completely reevaluate all property under the two agencies' jurisdiction.

At the current rate, the board will have to hold hearings Friday. When the hearings were scheduled, Wednesday and today were listed, but the group agreed this morning that they probably would not be able to interview each complainant by the afternoon.

At 11 p.m. today, 62 citizens had registered and only 31 had been heard. In addition, many planned to return later and did not register.

Sitting in on the conferences at the city hall were Perry Johnson, city tax collector, and J. O. Haygood, school tax assessor. The city and school use the same valuations, and the board of equalization was appointed jointly.

The board reported that Big Spring had not been evaluated by professionals since 1941, and it felt that an appraisal by a professional group was needed. In 1946, before the board of that year met, separate land had made evaluations, and then the board of equalization took their recommendations into consideration. But since then the land has not been completely re-evaluated.

George O'Brien said that it had been the recommendation of previous boards that the two agencies hire professionals, and the present group wanted to reaffirm that stand.

When the present board met earlier, it raised all property values on Fourth Street to a level with comparable property on Third. This brought tax raises up to 300 per cent in some cases. This has produced most of the repercussions Wednesday and today.

But the lowering of Fourth property levels 20 per cent might keep some of the citizens from appearing.

Although the group did not start hearing cases until 9 a.m. today, many persons were waiting at 9 a.m. The same was true Wednesday.

GOP To Draw First Draft Of 1956 Platform Tonight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Republicans expect to work out in closed session tonight their first rough draft of their 1956 platform.

Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois said it will have a strong civil rights statement. It may urge the arming of Israel to help preserve Middle East peace, reported New York Atty. Gen. Jacob K. Javits.

Other developments towards Monday's opening of the national convention in the Cow Palace:

Early forecasts reiterated at every opportunity that Vice President Nixon would be renominated, but Governors Theodore McKellin of Maryland and Goodwin Knight of California reiterated equally frequently "I'm available." And headquarters for Gov. Christian Herter of Massachusetts was opened next door to the downtown office of Citizens for Eisenhower. The citizens support Nixon.

The national committee approved the seating of a South Carolina delegation headed by David Dows of Bradley. It thus denied an appeal from National Committeewoman Mrs. John E. Messervy, National Committeewoman J. Bates Gerald and State Chairman Oscar W. Pitts, old-line party regulars.

The committee also divided Mississippi's 15 votes by approving a Contest Committee report allotting eight votes to a group headed by Perry W. Howard, Negro attorney and national committeeman for 32 years, and seven to a group led by Wirt Yerger Jr., young Republican from Jackson, Miss.

The platform draft will be hammered out by the Resolutions Committee headed by Sen. Prescott Bush of Connecticut. His group will continue taking testimony from representatives of special groups.

The draft will go Saturday to the full national committee, which will reword it on Sunday for expected adoption by the Republican National Convention Tuesday.

Bush said the platform framers are mindful of President Eisenhower's request that it be kept short and free "of denunciation and bombast."

Dirksen, of the Civil Rights subcommittee, scoffed at the civil rights plank the Democrats adopted in Chicago and said, "There will be no such serpentine weaseling on our part. The Supreme Court has interpreted the Constitution and that's the law of the land."

Betsy Seems Doomed To Certain Death In Atlantic

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Betsy, picking up a little speed, appeared doomed today to certain death in the cold reaches of the North Atlantic.

The intense storm, killer of 30 persons, continued along its north-easterly course about 450 miles east of Jacksonville, Fla. Reconnaissance planes spotted the disturbance at latitude 30.3, longitude 74.3 west, and noted its quickened pace.

The Weather Bureau said in an advisory at 5 a.m. EST that Betsy was moving northeast at 13 m.p.h. Weathermen said they felt confident the hurricane would continue away from the mainland. They advised coastal residents, however, to keep track of its

Cotton Future Clouded By Area Debate

The 1957 future for cotton in West Texas is considerably clouded by the tug-of-war between the east and west parts of the state over acreages.

In order to hold as much acreage as possible in West Texas, the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. have called upon H. Lawrence Manwaring, one of the highest officials in the Commodity Stabilization Service, and pointed out some facts concerning the acreage fight.

Plains Growers say the trend of cotton production has been toward the west for the last 40 years, yet the state ASC committee has now arbitrarily reversed this trend by taking cotton acres away from West Texas producers.

In the 1914-1924 period this section of West Texas produced only about three per cent of the state's cotton. This percentage increased steadily until the 1945-1954 period when West Texas was growing over 26 per cent of the state's cotton.

The organization wants the two per cent reserve clause in next year's program. They point out that last year Texas received only a 2.7 per cent average cut, yet West Texas was sliced seven per cent. At the same time the committee gave East Texas a seven per cent raise.

Plains Growers claim this is grossly unfair, since West Texas producers are the one who built up a large cotton acreage history, which now enables all of Texas to grow as much cotton as it does.

Another resolution expressed by the organization is that a West Texas cotton producer be appointed to the Texas ASC Committee. The area does not have any representative at present.

Cost Per Vote On Airport Bonds Is Pegged At 42 Cents

It cost Howard County $775.59 to conduct the airport bond election of last Saturday. Lee Porter, county auditor, said that checks for the election precinct workers have been issued and payment made for printing the ballots.

There were 1,841 votes cast in the election. Average cost to the county for each ballot handled was slightly more than 42 cents. The light vote polled brought the per vote cost high.

Ample ballots for three times the number of votes cast had been prepared. Cost of ballots and supplies for the election was $163.59. The pay to the precinct officials totaled $612.

Election precinct judges are paid $10 for their services. Clerks are paid $8 per day. The number of clerks varied in the 18 precincts for this election. In several, full crews were on duty but in a few only a partial crew was at work. All the time due to the short ballot and short vote.

In Contest
Another of the girls competing in the 1956 Howard County Farm Bureau Beauty Contest is Helen Smith. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Smith, on the Knott Route, and will be a senior at Knott High School this year.

Texas Weather Looks The Same

The weather in Texas looked the same Thursday—partly cloudy and hot with a few scattered showers. Dawn temperatures ranged from 88 at Dalhart to 85 at Dallas. El Paso had a shower early Thursday.

Temperatures Wednesday ranged from 111 at Seymour to 80 at El Paso. The only official rainfall was at Junction, .04 of an inch.

Not much relief appeared in sight today from the mid-August heat wave in the southern half of the Plains region and across the southern sections of the country. The hot air which has blanketed the Plains area all week spread into the Northern Plains, Upper and Middle Mississippi Valley and the Western Great Lakes region.

The blistering heat sent temperatures up to 110 degrees at Ponca City and Ardmore, Okla., yesterday. Readings of 100 were general in the Southern and Central plains region.

Truman May Have Done Adlai A Favor

CHICAGO (AP)—You can bet your bottom dollar he never intended it that way, but Harry S. Truman may have done Adlai Stevenson a favor by trying to keep him from getting the Democratic presidential nomination.

If this sounds preposterous—like saying you help a man's dental work when you kick him in the teeth—well, it is an oddity. Maybe one of the great ironies in recent political history.

It figures this way: Four years ago Truman stumped the land for Stevenson. Stevenson lost. There are those — and Stevenson will be one of them—who hold the view that the Democratic ticket would have run better if Truman had kept quiet.

This reporter happened to be along on Truman's 1952 whistle-stop campaign. And it must be said that while the then President brought out a lot of cheering multitudes he also attracted lots of catcalls. There even were some thrown eggs in a few places.

Rightly or wrongly, there were and presumably still are many people to whom "Truman" is almost a bad word—symbol of corruption, communism and cronyism. There are millions of others, of course, who believe no such thing.

But in the opinion of most Stevenson advisers, Truman for all his good intentions didn't do the 1952 nominee any good when he stamped his endorsement on Stevenson.

The candidate then became in the eyes of many, and of Republican orators in particular, the Truman candidate. And so Stevenson remained in the view of many despite repeated efforts to declare independence.

This year, or at least at this stage, Stevenson has no such problem—thanks to Harry Truman's opposing him.

With his nomination practically assured tonight, Stevenson can go before the voters as his own man, or at least not as Truman's man — something Averell Harriman couldn't have done if Truman had been successful.

Another boost Truman may have given Stevenson: calling him a "moderate."

"The 'moderation' label could help Stevenson with voters who thought he was far over on the liberal side four years ago. Any benefit Stevenson might

Traffic Fines Total $1,177 During July

Monthly report to the city commission from the police department listed traffic violators as the largest group handled during July. The report showed that 129 persons had pleaded guilty to some sort of moving violation during the month and their fines totaled $1,177. The largest amount of fines from a single violation however was for drunkenness.

These assessments amounted to $1,666. There were 104 persons found guilty of being drunk. Five others were released as not guilty. Twenty eight persons were fined $324 for not having a valid driver's license, and fines against 10 defendants for disturbance totaled $255.

Vagrancy charges numbered 39, and their fines amounted to $367. Forty four mechanical violations cost defendants $237. Cash receipts totaled $3,452.50, and jail lattes amounted to $1,344. Fines for overtime parking tickets paid at the police department were $611, a drop from $1,026 of June, and $25 was paid on warrants. The department reported 1,537 tickets for all offenses were given.

Wiring Topic At Electricians Meet

Better wiring methods and practices were discussed at the regular meeting of the Big Spring Master Electrician's Association Tuesday night.

The organization held its regular monthly meeting at the Settles Hotel, with seven members attending. Herman Taylor of Electric Machinery and Equipment, 1223 W. 3rd, was a new member. In addition to discussion of the wiring methods, the group went over the city electrical code and inspection procedure.

The organization is headed by Dwite Gilliland, and it holds regular meetings on the first Monday of every month. The meeting Tuesday was one postponed from Aug. 6.

A Bible Thought For Today

He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination. (Proverbs 28:9)

Editorial

Background For The Second Spot

For the first twelve years or so of our national history the man who got the second highest vote for President automatically became vice president. That sounded like a good idea, but in practice it did not work out too well.

Then each party began to nominate a complete ticket, and the second man could be almost anybody, attached to the presidential kites as a sort of afterthought, or spare tire. The second man was chosen either as a reward for faithful party service or on geographical grounds, to round out the ticket. Thereafter he was left to view unless the death of his principal catapulted him into the middle of everything.

In 1900 the Republicans chose Theodore Roosevelt largely, so it is said, to get him out of the hair of the New York state "boss," Thomas C. Platt. As governor of New York T. R. had been cramping Platt's style. When President McKinley died from an assassin's bullet and T. Roosevelt became President, Marcus A. Hanna, the industrialist who headed the Republican National Committee, growled,

"Now that d-cowboy is President of the United States." Later Hanna was to comment: "You know, I like the little feller. He works hard and knows how to handle people."

Sometimes a vice president is chosen to attract vote, it is called today the "independent vote," or votes from the opposite party. That is why the Whigs chose John Tyler, a Democrat, in 1836 and again in 1840. In 1864 the Republicans chose ex-Senator Andrew Johnson of Tennessee, a Union-Democrat, as Lincoln's runningmate even though they had to displace Hannibal Hamlin to make way for him. It was done to attract Democratic votes to the Lincoln ticket, but the Republicans lived to regret the choice when Johnson tried to carry out Lincoln's moderate reconstruction program.

In 1920 the Democrats selected an assistant secretary of the Navy named Roosevelt to run with James M. Cox of Ohio because of the magic of the surname. It didn't help then, but in 1932 it worked like magic.

Suez Crisis Is Still With Us

The attitude of the United States on the Suez question was brought into focus over the weekend with that of Great Britain and France, the two countries with most at stake in a solution.

And it was achieved in a way to impress even a reckless Abdul Nasser with the unity of the United States view with regard to the bipartisan foreign policy. This was achieved by an administration invitation to Republican and Democratic congressmen to attend a White House conference Sunday, and Democratic acceptance. At that parley the Democratic majority was represented by its Senate leader, Senator Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, and by Sen. Walter George (D-Ga.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

At the conclusion of that meeting a White House statement indicated both Democratic and Republican representatives had supported the administration's policy of seeking a settlement of the Suez dispute which would internationalize the great waterway.

But Senator Johnson emphasized that no commitments were asked or had been given, and no decisions made. Senator George said he was "satisfied we are moving in the right direction."

In any case, Nasser, who has boycotted this week's London conference of many nations on the Suez question, can have little hope of a split in our bipartisan policy over Suez.

International control of Suez is the proposal of Britain, seconded by France, whereas Nasser has already decreed its nationalization. What happens if this week's London multi-nation conference decides on internationalization and confronts Nasser with that fact remains to be seen. It could precipitate open warfare if the conference voted at the Western nations desire and the new agency created under that action should undertake to take over control.

So Suez is far from settled and the crisis continues.

Stevenson Element Is Holding Firm

CHICAGO—Convention strategy, never visible to the naked eye, always follows a certain pattern — and as of the first of the week it could be summed up this way: Truman's effort to demoralize the Stevenson contingent by endorsing Harriman failed to achieve its objective. The Stevenson followers, many of them former office holders in the Truman administration, have stood firm. They say: "We like Truman but..."

Usually no "dark horse" situation develops unless two strong factions remain uncompromising. In this convention, where there is strategic hostility between Stevenson and Harriman, their followers could unite quickly at the proper moment. One could give way to the other in an outburst of harmony and the delegates would feel they were making a demonstration of "unity."

Mr. Truman, on arriving here, felt out the situation. He concluded that the Stevenson strength was overstated and that it couldn't stand a body blow. He believed the Stevenson delegates were not committed too strongly and that their first-ballot strength would be a maximum. But it hasn't turned out that way. If the Stevenson contingent had been seriously hurt by the Truman maneuver for Harriman, there would have been some evidence of it by this time.

Naturally, when Truman threw his bombshell, the reporters began canvassing the delegations to see what the effect was. Almost everybody was surprised by the firmness of the Stevenson bloc. It shook a bit but didn't waver. Especially significant was Mrs. Roosevelt's intimation that maybe Harry Truman was angling for the nomination for himself or for Senator Symington of Missouri. Some delegates promptly pointed out that it is most unusual for a party leader to desert a "favorite son" as fast as Mr. Truman did. The Missouri delegation, on the other hand, is still pledged to cast a ballot or two for Symington.

The nomination will not go to a "dark horse," because no large block of votes is of the bitter end or "never-never" kind. It's true with respect to the candidacies of both Harriman and Stevenson. Either man would be acceptable to this convention. Both are staunch followers of the New Deal and the Fair Deal, with minor variations between them hardly distinguishable to the average voter, despite the label "moderationist" which has been given to Stevenson and the characterization "extreme liberal" which has been given Harriman.

Basically, Harriman would antagonize the South and cause a political revolt there and perhaps give rise to a third party on the "states' rights" order, such as happened in 1948. Most of the delegates realize that the support of the South in the electoral college is absolutely essential. So Harriman may be eliminated on that ground unless the platform adopted is drafted as a major concession to the South and then Harriman would improve his chances if he said he would stand upon it without reservation or change.

For some reason, Stevenson has sold himself to the South as a gradualist, which means no stampede to enforce integration in the schools but a slower approach. Stevenson's worries today are with what the platform finally says, especially if he is to be committed to a more extreme approach than the South would like to see.

So the way the platform shapes up will have a good deal to do with the outcome of the convention and could furnish some surprises. It seems improbable, however, that the Stevenson managers, who have control of the Platform Committee, would let the situation grow precarious. Even Senator Humphrey of Minnesota, a staunch Stevenson supporter, who was one of the leaders in the fight for the civil rights program in the 1948 and 1952 conventions, is talking in conciliatory terms.

It looks now as if Senator Kefauver made a mistake in releasing his delegates so many days before the convention met. Had he held on, there would have been a three-cornered fight here and Truman might never have taken the chance he did in coming out for Harriman.

The net result would have been that, when the Kefauver delegates were told their hero was swinging to Stevenson, it would have created a "band wagon" psychology of great importance on the day before the balloting starts.

It is argued, on the other hand, that for several days now Stevenson's "band wagon" strength has been building up because of what Senator Kefauver did. Much will depend on whether the Tennessee senator is himself considered for the vice presidency. His own state isn't so sure about it, as there's a boomlet on, too, for Senator Gore, also of Tennessee, and one of the ablest of the younger group in the Senate.

In the final analysis, there's always a good political reason advanced in picking the vice presidential candidate — he must bring strength to the national ticket. Governor Meyer of New Jersey is a good example. He is strong in a state that the Democrats desperately need to win. Senator Humphrey brings strength from Minnesota. Missouri is "in the bag," some Democratic strategists say, so they are not counting on Symington for the second spot, though the southerners like him. Senator Lyndon Johnson of Texas, of course, could emerge as a real peace-offering to the South by this convention. It looks more like a Stevenson-Meyer ticket or a Stevenson-Johnson campaign button.

That Could Cut Two Ways

James Marlow

Done By Party Leaders, Not Mirrors

CHICAGO (AP) — It may have looked like a big fight. It wasn't. What happened on civil rights at the Democratic convention was handled so smoothly you'd think it was done with mirrors.

The Southern Democrats forced the rest of the party into a compromise on the civil rights plank of the platform. A small resistance was put up by a handful of Democrats from the North, East and West.

When this occurred the Southerners were so sure of themselves that they never uttered a word of protest. They let the leaders of the party—undoubtedly by prearrangement—handle the situation. And they did. These leaders—including former President Truman—drained out the protests by calling the compromise a sturdy document and a big advance over anything the party ever offered before.

In the 1948 and 1952 elections, each time after an explosive fight by Southerners over the civil rights plank adopted at the convention, the Democrats lost four Dixie states.

This year, when President Eisenhower seems an odds-on winner anyway, the party leaders desperately wanted unity. They came here dreading a party-shattering fight.

The South didn't have to make threats. Southern leaders like Gov. James P. Coleman of Mississippi and former Gov. John S. Battle of Virginia—worked diligently to get a watered-down civil rights plank.

Battle himself said: "We were conciliatory and we think it paid off."

The Southerners particularly did not want in the platform a statement saying that, if the Democrats won, they would back the Supreme Court's ban on public school segregation.

Bushy Heads, Beware

NEW YORK (AP) — Curbstone comments of a pavement Plato: For years bald men have had to put up with such snickering greetings from their matinee-headed friends as, "Hi, cueball."

The baldy—thanks to science—now can give this crushing rejoinder: "Hi yourself, you fat-head."

For the evidence is growing that bald-headed men are, on the whole, more intellectually gifted than the ordinary race of man—something we have suspected ourselves for a long time—and therefore more to be envied than pitted.

The latest benefactor of the bald is Dr. M. Wharton Young, a professor of anatomy at Howard University.

After 29 years of research Dr. Young has announced that a leading cause of baldness is simply an expanding brain.

It works this way, he says. The blood vessels that feed the hair loss through a layer of scalp fat. As you grow older your brain expands. This presses the layer of fat thinner, squeezes the blood vessels. They fail to bring enough nourishment to the hair growing cells, and your hair falls out.

Simple, isn't it?

This does leave the problem of why more men than women grow bald. Dr. Young has an answer for this, too. He explains that women generally have a thicker layer of fat in most areas of their body, including the scalp.

The more fat a man or woman has in that overhead arch between his ears, therefore, the less likely he is to grow bald — particularly if his brain doesn't grow much as he matures.

Dr. Young didn't dwell on what causes our brains to expand as we grow older.

Perhaps he simply wanted to spare the feelings of those who brag about their thick crop of hair.

But the blunt truth is that, generally speaking, the thing that makes the brain grow is thinking. The cerebrum, or forepart of the brain, where the intellectual capacity centers, is in one way like a muscle. It grows with use.

Party By Mesta

Not Mesta, But Close To Besta

By ED CREGG
CHICAGO (AP) — Percie Mesta's party may not have been the most but it came close to being the besta.

Where else can you find H. V. Kaltenborn imitating Harry S. Truman imitating H. V. Kaltenborn?

Where else do they serve you champagne in glasses with pink rosettes around the stems?

And where else does a master of ceremonies wearing an Averell Harriman button suddenly remember he was supposed to introduce a man named Adlai E. Stevenson, only to discover Stevenson had already left? The M. C., Irish tenor Phil Reagan, never will live that one down.

Mrs. Mesta, a formidable party-giver who used to be minister to Luxembourg, planned originally to have only a modest 350 or so guests at Tuesday's champagne supper.

All sorts of people, including reporters, kept pestering her for invitations, however. So she wound up with a good 500 guests in a hotel ballroom that can accommodate half that many. In the confusion some guests never did get a drink. But they saw a whale of an off-the-cuff floor show.

Martha Roundtree, who moderates television panel shows, lined up the politicians on her right, the celebrated commentators and reporters on her left, and they exchanged barbs in a free-wheeling fashion you don't often see on your TV screen.

Somebody reminded Kaltenborn of the celebrated imitation Truman did of him after the 1948 election. Kaltenborn rose to the occasion. He did an imitation of Truman imitating Kaltenborn. It brought down the house.

One roaring spectator: H. S. Truman.

Sen. Estes Kefauver was there. So were — oh, just name about anybody at the convention. They mostly were there except Harriman, who missed the big plug the man Reagan gave him.

Reagan swears he forgot he was wearing that Harriman button when he stepped up to the microphone to introduce such performers as Vaughn Monroe and Johnnie Desmond.

Around The Rim

Great Truths From The Columnists

It might be giving away a trade secret, but it appears to me that all it takes to be a success in the radio commentator or newspaper column business is to have common sense.

And to be able to make people think it is foresight and brains.

Just check the next program or column you hear or read to see if I'm right. Take a quick listen and all you will hear will be something in general that you already knew but put into different words.

Checking a metropolitan daily newspaper recently revealed quite a bit of common sense thrown into a column as new facts. This person was expanding on men's fashions and he had some strong ideas on the subject. He first went into the length of men's trousers. He opened the paragraph by saying that a common grooming flaw is the incorrect length of trousers (quite true and something every man knows).

Then came one of his gems of wisdom. He said that there was only one right length (again he was speaking the truth which is common knowledge). He further enlightened the world by saying that the correct length was not too short or too long.

Now isn't that laying it on the line! In addition to these earth-shaking thoughts, he went on to inform the male population that it is caused to a great extent by carelessness. (Say, that is novel.) And all that is required to drop — raise the trousers to the correct length was the right adjustment of belt or suspenders.

(I'll be willing to eat my hat if a male ever thought of making that type of adjustment).

In the same column, this sage drops a few hints to the male bothered by the heat. He said to keep cool, a person should avoid (1) tight collars, (2) tight socks, (3) snug clothing, (4) heavy shoes, and (5) skimpy-cut underclothes. If the clothing industry could have gotten this information before it was printed, they probably could have come out with a shirt loose at the collar and light-weight garments and the world would have beat a path to their door.

(By the way, I tried loosening my collar, and the guy is right.)

He concluded his simple truths for the men of the nation, however, with a real dilly. It was short and simple: eat lightly and walk slowly. (Who would have thought it for methods of keeping cool.)

Not only columnists but commentators came up with startling statements. A few years ago, an authority on sports aired his discoveries to a college athlete of a Texas town on how to win the conference hurdle championship that spring.

It went something like this, "Get out in front at the start. Charley, clear the hurdles in flawless form, have a fast finish, and you should win." (If coaches just had as much wisdom, the Olympics would be a cinch for the U.S.A.)

Now that the conventions are holding the spotlight, the professional sages on paper and radio will be awing the nation with their predictions.

And I would be willing to make a prediction here that within the next week the statement, "The big question in everybody's mind is who will be nominated."

It will be uttered at least two dozen times — as a stark prediction.

Walter Lippman

In Recalling 1948, Truman Forgets 1952

Mr. Truman, for all his legendary reputation as a practical politician, has got himself into a strange predicament. If he loses his fight to stop Stevenson, he will have made a very sizeable contribution to Stevenson's chances in running against Eisenhower. For Stevenson is now free of the charge that his election would mean a restoration and continuation of the Truman administration. It is against the Truman administration's record that Eisenhower now has a landslide victory in 1952.

If, on the other hand, Mr. Truman wins his fight in Chicago and is able to stop Stevenson, he will have made it as certain as such things can be that no Democrat can win the election. It is hard to imagine the convention nominating Harriman. But if it did do so after a violent and divisive struggle, it is still harder to imagine how Harriman could win the election. Not only is he unacceptable to a very large number of Democratic politicians and voters — he would be identified with sectional and class conflicts, and he would be the perfect foil for the image of Eisenhower as a unifier and healer and a man of peace.

Mr. Truman's legendary reputation as the smartest of them all is based on his victory in 1948 — a victory won despite all the politicians and prophets and the pollsters. This was such a spectacular performance that it has become impossible for Mr. Truman, and difficult even for many professional observers, to remember that after 1948 came 1952, and that in 1952 the issue was the Truman record. Because of what the country had come to think of that record, no Democrat could in 1952 hope to be elected. For there was a great majority, including a large number of Democrats, who had made up their minds that no Democrat, not even Stevenson, could make a clean break with the Truman administration.

Mr. Truman seems to believe that 1948 provides a formula of victory which he, or someone he prompts and manages, can apply again and again. Thus he complains in his memoirs that in 1952 Stevenson avoided as best he could letting him run the campaign and be the main speaker. He seems to think that he could have won in 1952. Now he would like to apply the same formula in 1956.

The main difference, it seems to me, between Stevenson and Truman is that the one is living in the present while the other is living in the past. This applies not only to election strategy but also to the issues. Mr. Truman is forever wanting to fight against the old battles of the New Deal and the Fair Deal and of the Stalinist era of the cold war. When he talks about a "fighting" candidate, he is thinking of his own fighting days.

But those were the days before Eisenhower took over the welfare state, before the Supreme Court had made desegregation in the public schools the law of the land, before the death and degradation of Stalin, before Geneva and the atomic stalemate, before the epochal challenge and competition which the Western world must now meet. The dominant issues cannot now be solved by the old formulae of the New Deal, and the foreign issues cannot be dealt with by the old formulae and slogans of the cold war. The one thing that can be said with certainty about the next four years is that it will be a period when old policies will have to be applied, revised, and reformulated.

The great virtue of Stevenson, as compared with the other candidates, is that he is a man used to thinking deliberately, carefully, and thoroughly, not one to flip a coin, not one to leap to a conclusion, not one to be satisfied with a rubber stamp opinion. To one of Mr. Truman's temperament this capacity for deliberation seems like indecision. But Stevenson is not an indecisive man. In 1952 he was bolder and more decisive on more hot issues than almost anyone it would be possible to name who ever got within sight of the White House.

This capacity for taking thought has never yet been considered a fault in a statesman, and it is no fault in 1956. The times we live in are very difficult, and we cannot hope to come through them successfully unless we think our way through them.

How's For Fred Muggs And Betty Furness?

CHICAGO—A grass-roots movement to name a compromise ticket consisting of J. Fred Muggs and Betty Furness, in case of a bitter convention deadlock, is growing like a prairie fire in the corridors and coke-filled rooms of this Democratic convalescence.

As sure as shootin', this pair wears no man's collar, not even Harry S. Truman's and is bound to make a strong pitch for the independent vote.

Ever since Mr. Truman started kicking up a storm or doin' what comes naturally, there has been persistent talk of a dark or stalking horse. Now, J. Fred may not be every man's idea of either a dark or stalking horse, but no one will deny that he is a dark chimp, a word that for political purposes can readily be confused with "champ."

J. Fred may not stalk so good, but he has a waddle when he walks, strongly reminiscent of a number of lady delegates whose shoes fit when they left home but have ceased to qualify in Chicago. And it is a major political axiom that the candidate who can win is one with whom the delegates and later the voters can identify themselves.

But over and above these outstanding qualifications, it is confidently expected that Muggs will draw heavy support from voters who are sick and tired of people. A Galloping Pole reveals that large segments of the country at the moment are fed up with people, and would flock to the Muggs standard.

On the other hand, Miss Furness could be confidently expected to attract that substantial segment of the electorate which can never get enough of well-stacked blondes.

Democratic sloganeers, who have had such real trouble trying to frame a winning catch phrase with the material at hand, that is, Averell, Adlai, Lyndon, Stuart or Albert Benjamin (Happy) Chandler, are electrified by the possibilities offered by J. Fred Muggs.

They are already trying for size such various slogans as "Shake Out the Lead with Fred," "Vote Fred and Get a Head" or "Vote Fred and Get Ahead," "I'm Bugs About Muggs," "Help Muggs Chase the Lugs," and "Muggs and Bet Is the Best Bet."

My advice to the folks back home is to place their money on this team to win, place and show, particularly if there is a serious deadlock that threatens to tie up the convention for another week or ten days.

Under such circumstances, grass may not grow in the streets, but a lot of delegates and attendant newsmen will be sleeping in said streets or the parks, if they have influence.

In the hotels rooms occupied by the all-American host and those of us who just love a good row is an ominous little card that says that our tenancy of said rooms ends as of noon Saturday, Aug. 18.

If the convention goes on and on, the major problem facing Democrats assembled here will not be a candidate but board and room. Face to face with eviction, the delegation will seek a quick solution and J. Fred is no stranger than some of the other compromisers now under consideration, a claim no other candidate can make.

If Senator John Kennedy from Massachusetts would suddenly start singing "My Time Is Your Time" I wouldn't be a bit surprised. To me, he bears the closest resemblance to Rudy Vallee. Everytime the television camera picked him up in the convention crowd I rather expected to hear "The Stein Song."

THE REV. AND MRS. RICHARD DEATS left this morning for Brevard, N. C., where they will attend the national conference of Methodist Youth. The meeting is to be held on Lake Junaluska from Aug. 18-24. They will pick up two delegates in both Fort Worth and Marshall.

MR. AND MRS. LESS WHITAKER, Mrs. Julia Stamper, Mrs. Bill McCarty and Tommy McCarty all of Amarillo are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Moody and Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Deats. The Deatses are to entertain with a family gathering this evening at their home at 400 Virginia.

Special object of interest in the M. A. COOK home at present is eight-month-old Jimmy Brown, son of Lt. (jg) and Mrs. John (June) Brown of Oceana, Va. His parents have been here for a visit and left the baby with his grandparents until Mrs. Brown returns to stay while Lt. Brown is on a cruise to the Far East. He is to leave about the middle of September and will probably be away eight or nine months.

Another daughter of the Cooks, Mrs. Jimmy (Mary Nell) Shaffer, and her three children, David, Brenda and Martin, have returned to her home in Ponca City. She and the children were here while Mr. Shaffer was at the Army reserve camp at Fort Hood.

BILLY GAGE, 15-year-old son of MR. AND MRS. J. A. GAGE is a little slowed down but doing well after an emergency operation in West Palm Beach, Fla. The family returned here Saturday.

The Gages were vacationing at Del Ray Beach and had gone to Fort Lauderdale for a deep-sea fishing trip. While he didn't feel as perky as a fisherman should, Billy managed to hook a sailfish and was the center of great interest when he got back to the dock. That night he had an emergency operation for acute appendicitis.

MR. AND MRS. TOMMY GAGE and MR. AND MRS. NOVIS WOMACK are in Mexico where they will spend several weeks in Mexico City and in Acapulco.

MRS. JOE MILLER

WITH OUR CORRESPONDENTS

Mrs. Miller Combines Work, Green Thumb

A gardener that admits hard work is more effective for growing flowers than a green thumb! That's Mrs. Joe Miller, Herald correspondent of Coahoma.

Mrs. Miller has collected news of her home town since 1925, except for four years when she was living in Houston. Friends are good about calling in to tell her the latest happenings, she said, as she is a busy person along lines other than work with The Herald. She has very little time to get out and "track down" the news.

She is, at present, serving as tax assessor for Coahoma and the school district; she is also city secretary, and she works in the water department for the city.

Guests of Mrs. Minnie Anderson have been her sister, Mrs. Sally Burton of Jal, N. M., and her niece and family, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Watt and John Richard of Bloomington, Ind. Also visiting from Indiana have been Mr. and Mrs. Dave Deck.

Marie Petty is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Allen Wade and Jerry in Fort Worth. Before returning home she plans to visit in Dallas, Huntsville and Houston.

Mrs. Erwin Hosts Spoudazio Fora

A called meeting of the Spoudazio Fora was held Wednesday morning in the home of Mrs. Ben Erwin.

Mrs. Oliver Cofer, vice president, was in charge of the business meeting. Plans were discussed for the printing of the yearbook for the coming year.

Little Tricks Helped

Sue Carson, who divides her time between night club and TV appearances, tells of make-up tricks taught her by Hollywood experts in today's Hollywood Beauty. Miss Carson is currently entertaining with her comedy routines at the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas through September 15.

HOLLYWOOD BEAUTY

Good Health Habits Helped Sue Carson

By LYDIA LANE

HOLLYWOOD — It takes courage to switch careers completely when you are successful. But Sue Carson did when she gave up dancing to become a comedienne.

"My mother taught dancing and I made my professional debut at 13, but my heart was in impersonations and making people laugh. So when I was a little older I had some special material written for a comedy act. I was scared to death when I tried it out." Sue told me shortly before flying to Las Vegas for an engagement at the Sands Hotel as a comedienne.

"I was so used to dancing," she confided, "that I went to a gym every opportunity I could, so I wouldn't become soft. There is nothing like exercise for keeping your body firm."

"I am grateful to my mother for bringing me up on health diets, because now I don't have any bad eating habits. I like green salads, fresh fruits and vegetables, broiled meats, chicken or fish and don't have a sweet tooth. But, Sue added, "every once in a while I go on a kick of eating exotic foods like lobster, rich Mexican dishes, heavy sauces. But when my face breaks out and my dresses are too tight I return to my normal diet."

Sue was born in Hollywood and learned about glamour early.

"The make-up men here are wonderful. They know all the angles of building up your good points and playing down your bad ones."

"Like what?"

"My nose is short so the first thing they told me was to give myself a raised-eyebrow effect, especially at the beginning of the brow and this would create a longer nose-line. Because my face is inclined to be round I was told to put a point on my eyebrow arch and on my lip line. It doesn't sound like much," Sue explained, "but I could tell from my photographs how clever this was."

"And they made my nose look narrower with a line of light make-up down the center and a darker make-up on the sides. The trick is to blend this in so cleverly that the line doesn't show, even in the daylight."

"I asked Sue if she found it relaxing after working in a night club."

"I have no trouble sleeping," she admitted. "I always read first before I turn out the light. I am a little late getting around to Norman Vincent Peale but his books are very inspiring. You can certainly change your outlook on life with a positive point of view."

Enjoying Warm Weather

Master Sergeant William L. Phelps checks anesthesia equipment in an operating room at Brooke Army Hospital where he is enjoying the hot South Texas weather after three cold weather assignments — two of which were in the Arctic.

Lessons Learned In Arctic Aid Sergeant In Present Job

FT. SAM HOUSTON (Sgt. William Phelps says he thinks meticulous attention to detail learned as part of staying alive on the Greenland ice cap helps him in his present job in one of Brooke Army Hospital's operating suites.

Phelps and four other U.S. soldiers joined six French army men in a special assignment to study transportation mobility in snow. The three-month journey over ice occurred in July, August and September of 1952.

By SAM BLACKBURN

Regardless of the earthly wealth any individual may possess, be the amount small or large, if he is a thoughtful and careful person, he will prepare a will.

Naturally, wills are of greater importance in cases where estates are large but the rule in general goes right down the line to include even those of little wealth.

Making a will is a relatively simple process yet not more than 30 per cent of families — some attorneys say the number is even smaller — ever take this step.

It is generally agreed by all competent authorities that no will should be drawn by any person without advice of an attorney. Since the task is relatively small, most lawyers — for a modest fee — will draft a will which complies with all requirements of law and greatly diminishes the possibility of litigation. The average citizen, not trained in the technical aspects of such matters, may write his own will and inadvertently omit important details which will make the settlement of his estate after his death even more difficult than had he omitted drafting the document in the first place.

Wills in general merely stipulate that the maker is of sound mind; that he realizes the uncertainty of mortal existence; therefore, in order to place his property as he desires it after his demise, he prepares his testament. Provisions are always included that all just debts and obligations which may exist against him at his death be paid.

He (or she) then names the person or persons to whom he wishes to leave his property. He can leave his holdings to one person, or a dozen persons, as he chooses. In the latter case, he sets up specifically that shares of his property go to each heir. He may leave his property to an institution, a church or any agency he elects.

There is no need for him to inventory his estate in his will — a generalization of his holdings is sufficient.

Any will, of course, can be contested by persons who feel they are entitled to a share in the estate but the preparation of a document, drawn in standard and accepted legal form can do much to diminish any litigation or confusion which might follow a person's death.

Wills, to be valid, must be attested to by witnesses. This does not mean that the person making the text of the document. He merely informs them that this is his will, shows them his signature and asks that they acknowledge the signature.

Wills which are without signatures of witnesses are subject to attack as forgeries and since the person who allegedly wrote the document cannot defend it, lengthy lawsuits sometimes arise and often the intent of the person who left the estate is frustrated.

Most lawyers recommend that the person making the will keep possession of it personally. It may be locked in a safety deposit box; kept in the maker's safe or where he chooses. He can change it or cancel it at any time up to the time of his death. He can add to it or strike out portions.

Some clients entrust their wills to their attorneys. This is a generally wise course particularly where the person involved has inadequate safe places for preserving the document.

When a person dies and the will is read, it is wise to probate the estate — file the document in the courts and go through established procedure to make the provisions of the paper legal and valid. Such procedure clears titles to real estate and oftentimes averts later difficulties.

Lawyers point out that if every person would make a will much of the bitterness and confusion over property left by an individual would be averted.

If making a will requires only a few minutes, why do so few take the step?

One reason is that few people actually translate the uncertainty of life to personal terms. Another is an aversion to sit down and envision one's own death. A majority of people simply balk at placing themselves in this seemingly uncomfortable position.

As a result four out of five will die "intestate." That means simply that he or she died without having left a will — with an estate all muddled up and the possibility that possessions will be distributed according to a hard and fast rule of law and not at all as the owner would have wished.

Judge Declared Vote Winner

AUSTIN (S—Dist. Judge Alton Chapman of Floydada yesterday was declared officially the winner in his campaign for the Court of Civil Appeals, 7th District, after a clerical error was corrected.

State Democratic Executive Committee headquarters had announced that official results, complete from all counties, showed incumbent Associate Justice Herbert Martin leading 37,322 to Chapman's 35,818.

"It was a clerical error in addition but it was caught before the official certification papers were mailed out," said George Sandlin, committee chairman.

Final figures by the committee showed: Chapman 38,472 and Martin, 32,187.

Sandlin ordered a recheck yesterday when queried by The Associated Press about a wide discrepancy in figures. The unofficial final report of the July 28 primary election by the Texas Election Bureau showed Chapman with 38,377 votes and Martin 32,210.

Highlights Of Demo Platform

CHICAGO (S— Here are highlights of the Democratic party's platform as adopted by its national convention early today:

CIVIL RIGHTS—Sidestepped endorsement of the controversial Supreme Court decision outlawing racial segregation in public schools, but pledged the party to advance individual rights and liberties of all Americans. It declared the party recognized decisions of the court to be a part of the law of the land, but declined to pledge itself, in so many words, to carry out those decisions.

FOREIGN POLICY— Charged that American ties with friendly nations have been weakened by Eisenhower administration policies of what it called "bluster and bluff" without "dynamic action." It claimed also that these policies are increasing the risk of war in the Middle East.

The plank promised "bold" leadership to strengthen non-Communist countries against expansionist moves of Russia.

It called for supplying Israel with defensive weapons to offset what it called an arms imbalance in the Middle East caused by Communist munitions supplied to Egypt. And it declared support for the principle of free access to the Suez Canal under suitable international control of the waterway.

DOMESTIC POLICY— Charged that the Eisenhower administration is stunting economic progress and failing to provide prosperity for farmers, small business men, low income workers, old people on small pensions and inadequate savings, and young persons seeking an education. It asserted also that the administration is using public revenue to "benefit the few." It promised to "release the springs of abundance" to help all.

AGRICULTURE— Condemned Republican "failure" to halt decline in farm income, and promised Democratic program to restore "full 100 per cent parity" which it said agriculture received under Democratic administrations.

This program would replace Republican flexible price supports with 90 per cent price props on basic crops. It also would use government payments, purchase of surpluses, production controls and other measures to achieve the goal. And it would develop support measures for hogs, cattle, poultry and other perishable commodities not now under price guarantees.

Surpluses would be channeled to low-income groups at home through food stamp plan and to needy abroad through relief agencies.

LABOR—Pledged repeal of what it denounced as "the vicious anti-union 'Taft-Hartley Labor-Management Act, and enactment of new legislation based on principles of labor laws enacted under President Franklin D. Roosevelt. It called for an increase of the minimum wage rate from the present $1 an hour to $1.25, and equal pay for equal work, regardless of sex.

FINANCIAL AND TAX POLICY—Favored an increase of $200 in

With Tommy Hart

The fame of Texas schoolboy football gets around. L. Bruce Sweeney, athletic officer at Webb Air Force Base here, says he read about the prowess of the Abilene Eagles when he lived in Lewiston, Idaho.

They tell me Kenny Loeffler, the basketball coach at Texas A&M, didn't exactly wow the people at the recent Texas Coaches Association school at Lubbock.

The mentors, to say nothing of his own South All-Star players, were stunned when Loeffler stopped a workout, walked over and got the attention of the house to say, in effect, that he had no talent on his club and didn't expect his charges to play a very good game.

P.S.: They didn't.

Big Spring's Luke Thompson, with a closing 74, finished 12th in the Plainview Invitational Golf Tournament with an aggregate score of 291.

Jack Williams, a 23-year-old hometown product, won the tournament for the first time in 13 tries with a four-day score of 268. Rex Baxter of Amarillo was a distant second, with 275.

Incidentally, a former Plainview basketball standout, Hugh Bob Tilson, won the first flight honors in the meet.

The football situation at the University of Texas worsened when Ed Hawkins was killed recently.

The right halfback position, which Hawkins played, had already posed a problem because Ed's first replacement, Curtis Reeves of Wichita Falls, was a spring scholastic victim.

It appears now that a sophomore from LaMarque, Carl Wylie, will get first call on the position. Wylie was an end last year.

A man who should know says the pari-mutuel handle at Ralston Downs, N.M., race track would run less than $1,000 a race were it not for the Texans who converge on the racing oval every weekend. As it is, the betting amounts to anywhere from $125,000 to $150,000 a day.

The tax bite there, as everywhere, is heavy. Pari-mutuel betting is illegal in Texas but Texans are going elsewhere to spend their money.

Total revenue to the state of California from racing in the last fiscal year was slightly more than $25,000,000.

In the racing season which ended last month at Hollywood Park in California, the state collected $7,569,539.45. The amount is believed to be the largest ever obtained by any state in the U.S. from one race meeting.

Pari-mutuel betting is still a dirty phrase in Texas but it might provide one avenue the Legislature could take in the search for new revenue, rather than levy new taxes against the populace.

The point is: A whole lot of money is leaving the state and Texas isn't realizing a dime out of it.

If pari-mutuel had been legalized within the state, the Texas Furber — started here in the late '40's — would have become one of the biggest race events in the country by now.

It fared reasonably well, as it was, without legalized betting.

WEST WINS ONE

Texans In Charge At Memphis Game

MEMPHIS (AP)—It was too much Texas for the East in the "all-American" high school football game last night.

The West—playing as if it had practiced together for a season instead of three days—powered and passed its way to an easy 23-7 victory over the East for its first victory since the game was inaugurated in 1949.

Outstanding players were plentiful on the West squad but most credit goes to four tall citizens of Texas—two quarterbacks and two coaches.

The quarterbacks were Charles Minstead of Tyler and Larry Dusitt of Corpus Christi, who ordered up a dazzling display of wide-open, Texas style offense that left the East befuddled and 9,162 fans roaring approval.

The West coaches were Sammy Baugh and Wayne Millner, both of Hardin-Simmons.

The Texans got plenty of help. Chipping in were such players as Billy Cannon of Baton Rouge, who scored the first two East touchdowns and accounted for 30 of the 39 yards needed in the first TD drive.

Waboo McDaniel of Midland played fullback for the West with Joe Cleveland of Cleburne working at end and Gale Oliver of Refugio at tackle.

Mistled kicked a 17-yard field goal and also a point after touchdown.

The North gained a 54-49 victory despite a brilliant performance by Dick Soergel of Oklahoma City Capitol Hill for the South side. Soergel, who notched 18 points, was voted the game's most valuable player.

Elbert Urban, 6-foot-7 North center from Blackwell, dropped in two field goals in the closing minutes to assure his team the victory.

Coach Jenks Simmons of El Reno named five players from the victorious North team and an equal number from the South. The Northerners are:

Gib Scranton and Lew Wade of Tulsa Rogers; Booker Washington of Paces City; Blackwell's Urban; and Don Hoffington of Drumright.

The South is represented by Soergel; Dennis Price of Norman; Buddy Hudson, Purcell; Bob Curtright, Shawnee; and Bill Hammond, Oklahoma City Northeast.

Giants, Mays Give Brooklyn Trouble

By ED WILKS
The Associated Press

The Giants aren't dead. They're in last place, all right, but for the moment at least they've shaken off that cellar palor—reviving the somewhat tarnished world championship combination of Johnny Antonelli and Willie Mays to rock the pennant-presing Brooklyn Dodgers out of second place in the tingling National League race.

The Brooks, who usually swallow southpaws whole like hors d'oeuvres, were standing on their heads when lefty Antonelli got through with them last night. He struck out 11 while giving just two hits to beat the Brooks and big Don Newcombe 1-0 on Mays' 21st home run.

It was the second Giant upset of the Dodgers in two nights and skidded Brooklyn two percentage points behind Cincinnati. The Redlegs took two from the Chicago Cubs, 4-3 in 15 innings and 7-3 in a six-inning nightcap (called because of darkness in lightless Wrigley Field).

Milwaukee upped its lead a bit, going 2 1/2 games up with a 4-1 decision over St. Louis. Pittsburgh slowed down the Philadelphia Phillies 5-1.

In the American League, Dick Donovan threw a two-hitter as the Chicago White Sox walloped Kansas City 10-0. The first-place New York Yankees moved into a 10 1/2-game bulge again by defeating Boston 6-4 while Detroit knocked off second-place Cleveland 1-0.

Baltimore beat Washington 3-2 in 12 innings.

Antonelli, the one time Braves' bonus beauty who was 22-7 as the Giants won the 1954 world championship, gave up only a two-out single to Duke Snider in the fourth and an eighth-inning double by Charlie Neal. He retired 15 in a row, eight on strikeouts, after Snider's hit while gaining his 11th victory against 12 defeats.

Mays, whose home run beat the Dodgers 3-1 the night before, unloaded his big one in the fourth off Newcombe, who had won nine straight. Newk gave three hits before being lifted for a pinchhitter in the eighth—ending his string of complete games at six.

Warren Spahn's five-hit victory colored his 196th major league victory and 13th of the season as the Braves wrapped it up with two in the fourth on one hit and three Cardinal errors. Ray Katt homered for the Cards, Tom Pobolsky lost it for a 7-9 record.

The Redlegs rode in on Frank Robinson's bases-loaded single in the opener after Ed Bailey and Pete Whisenand had swapped two homers. It was Bailey's 21st. Johnny Klippstein won in relief.

Art Fowler won the shortened nightcap, sailing in on Wally Post's 23rd homer, a grand-slammer, and Burgess' eighth. Both came in the third.

The Pirates scored four in the eighth, starting with Frank Thomas' sacrifice fly that tied it 3-3. Ron Kline, who tossed a five-hitter, and Bill Viren had RBI singles in the big frame against Jack Meyer.

Three in the seventh broke a 3-1 tie for the Yanks, who had taken a 3-1 lead on Yogi Berra's 21st homer in the sixth. Hank Bauer's single scored the tie-breaker. Tom Byrne won it in relief of Whitney Ford, who left after four with an ailing shoulder. Tom Brewer, who never has beaten the Yankees, lost his fifth against 16 successes. Jim Piersall's home run was the only earned run the Bostoners scored. Four errors provided the other three.

Harvey Kuenn doubled in the sixth to beat the Indians and Bob Lemon. Frank Larz scattered six singles for the Tigers.

Donovan gave singles to lower Wally Burnette and Al Pilarcik while beating the A's. Minnie Minoso, who had four RBIs, Sherm Lollar and Sam Esposito homered for the White Sox.

Billy Gardner's single got the Orioles home safe with reliever Bill Wight the winner—fanning five in a row among the last six Nat batsmen.

Bums Sew Up Loop Crown

The Bums scored four runs in the fourth inning and went on to defeat the Devils, 5-2, in a game that clinched first place in Junior Teen-Age baseball league standings for them.

In the big fourth, Joe Martinez singled, Donnie Everett went down swinging but Freddy Pittman walked and Martinez scored when Bobby Brannam reached first on a bobbie.

Pittman then crossed the plate on a fielder's choice, at which time Bobby Andrews reached base. Brannam crossed the plate on an infield out and Andrews scored on a passed ball.

Mike Zubiate, on the mound for the winners, gave up only one hit. That was a third inning double by Zay LeFevre, which scored a run. Zubiate fanned 15 and walked six.

The Bums now have an 11-2 won-lost record.

Good Hunting, Says Seaton

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of the Interior Fred Seaton said today hunters of migratory waterfowl can look forward to fall flights of ducks "as good as last year" — which was described as a good duck hunting year.

Seaton made the comment in announcing waterfowl hunting regulations for the 1956-57 season which contained few major changes from last year's rules.

Principal changes will allow an increase from 80 to 105 days in the season on coots in Pacific Flyway states; permit Minnesota, and possibly North Dakota, to experiment with a shorter duck season and a larger bag limit; and close the season on wood ducks in the Mississippi Flyway.

A spokesman for the Fish and Wildlife Service said the ban on baiting continues. The service prepared the regulations based on cooperative surveys of the wintering and breeding grounds of the birds, with advice from the Waterfowl Advisory Committee.

The new regulations specify that the states may select the dates for their waterfowl hunting seasons within a general framework of Oct. 1, 1956, to Jan. 15, 1957, the same "outside dates" as for the 1955-56 season. Exceptions are made for brant and coots in the Pacific Flyway, where the brant season may go as late as Feb. 10, and that for coots until March 10.

The season lengths generally for the four flyways, with some exceptions, will be:

Atlantic and Mississippi, 70 days on waterfowl and coots; Central, 75 days on ducks and coots and 60 days on geese; and Pacific, 80 days on ducks and geese and 105 days on coots.

States may elect to have split seasons, but again will have to accept a 10 per cent reduction in shooting days if they do so, except on geese in the Central Flyway.

Shooting hours for waterfowl and coots will continue to be from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset in all flyways except the Mississippi, where the present limit of one-half hour before sunset will continue.

The framework within which the states will recommend open season dates on ducks and geese and other provisions of the regulations are:

Colorado, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas and Wyoming.

WITH ANNOTATIONS

Splitting Hairs About Why Men 'Outshine' The Women

Dear Boss, I have just been through a "hair-owing" experience. It all developed as a result of that note you so kindly placed on my typewriter.

The note said that Dr. S. J. Van Pelt, president of the British Society of Medical Hypnotists, had recently declared that "relaxation is the best restorer of hair."

His argument was that such a course of existence does away with tension and gives hair a chance. The eminent doctor is cited as pointing out that few women are bald and explained that most women, when steam builds up a little too high emotionally, let their hair down through a hissy. They let go in an explosion of tears and tirade.

However, the Britisher says that this results in the complete dissolution of emotional stress in the lady and, all tension being gone, her hair gets to work and starts growing like crazy.

Men, says Dr. Van Pelt, tend to bottle up their emotions, worry themselves to death, tense up all tight and stuff like that. This, I guess pinches the scalp and the poor little hairs are sort of strangled.

Where the kindly doctor really stuck his neck out though was a sort of back-hand suggestion that men think more than women. Increased brain activity, he says, drains the blood from the scalp and the hair starves.

All of which is very interesting, Boss, but for years now I have thought that baldness was caused simply by loss of hair. (This isn't funny—Ed.)

You said in that note for me to sort of quiz physicians, barbers and a few bald-headed folk about what the doc said.

The physicians were too busy, I guess. They merely raised their eyebrows and looked a little bored. The barbers were wholeheartedly for the plan of all of us relating to the utmost—even the baldheaded barbers. The more we relax, the faster our hair grows and the more often we have to get hair cuts, they drooled mentally.

As to the gentry who have already lost their hair—Boss, they're generally a little touchy about it. You sort of rub their scalp the wrong way if you blurt out something about how come they ain't got no hair.

I used complete tact in reaching one fellow possessed of a glistening dome.

"Curley," says I, "how come you ain't got no hair? You all keyed up all the time or something?"

His reply lacked in gentility. I have been watching the baldies of my acquaintance since your note was received. Some of the most hirsute characters I know display all the symptoms of high tension and soaring blood pressure.

And those guys with the high foreheads and wide open spaces seem to be the most relaxed and unperturbed.

My uncle was bald but he did something about it, Boss. He let his eyebrows grow real long and combed 'em back over his forehead. (This isn't much funnier—Ed.)

I go for this relaxing idea 100 per cent personally, though, I don't know anyone who can relax as solidly as I can. And I have a mess of hair, too—with not even a round spot on top devoid of growth as in the case of some folk I know. (Careful, Mr. Blackburn. Careful—Ed.)

(Incidentally, Boss, since we're on the subject—I could relax a lot more if you'd desist from putting cute little notes and memos—such as this one—on my desk.) I do not know whether my ability to relax explains how it happens I still have my crowning glory (as the fiction writers used to call a head of hair in the gay 90's) or not. But I do still have it. (Grass doesn't grow on a busy street—and vice versa—Ed.)

I know I nearly lost a lot of it nosing around asking women if they agreed their failure to think as hard as men was the reason there were so few of their sex wearing wigs and toupees.

I can't find any agreement on the good doctor's theory locally. A lot of folk pooch-pooch. Others babble of their own theories.

My view is that it's like being able to sing. You either can or you can't. And if your grand dad lost his hair at a reasonably young age and your pop looked like an egg when he was 40, the odds are pretty good you'll be bald-headed yourself at that same age.

As to why the ladies—bless 'em—cling to their auburn locks more persistently than us boys—well, Boss, you figure it out.

Sam Blackburn, a shorter way to have handled this would have been to have said simply: Hair today; gone tomorrow—Ed.

Tips On Highway Safety Outlined

Suggestions on how to make Big Spring and Howard County safer from a traffic standpoint were given to the Evening Lions Club at its regular meeting Monday evening at Wesley Methodist Church.

Amos Jones, traffic safety officer at Webb AFB and a former Texas Highway patrolman, pointed to the alarming traffic toll which has already claimed 17 lives within Howard County this year.

He outlined some of the rules of common courtesy of the road and of driving safety as means of curbing the toll.

Formula Sought For Feed Grain Plan

COLLEGE STATION (AP)—State agricultural officials met today to work out a formula to determine who will get increased subsidies for purchasing grain feeds.

A subcommittee of the Texas Emergency Drought Committee officials of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Committee wrestled with the formula.

Farmers in certain counties would be able to get certificates for $1.50 per hundredweight in grains instead of the $1 certificates inaugurated in Texas in 1954.

State Agriculture Commissioner White said yesterday that to get the program started quickly he would suggest the conference consider qualifying all counties that have been designated as drought areas for one year.

Final approval of the formula would have to come from Washington.

Eligible farmers in all the 160 counties in Texas classified as drought disaster areas will get an allowance of $7.50 per ton on roughage under the new program.

Only the hardest hit counties apparently will be eligible for the $1.50 certificate plan.

White said he believed that the farmers and ranchers must get more credit if any drought relief program is to have much effect.

Their character, integrity and desire to continue as farmers and ranchers are the only collateral they've got," he said.

To help the farmer get livestock feeds at lower prices, Gov. Shivers wrote Secretary of Agriculture Benson and the Western Traffic Assn. in Chicago seeking their influence in getting the railroads to drop rates.

Washington officials have announced that one million dollars had been allotted to get the roughage program under way. The state and counties will furnish administrative assistance plus $100,000 made available by Shivers from his emergency funds.

Meanwhile, the Bureau of Business Research reported yesterday that Texas farmers' cash income was 12 per cent lower during the first half of this year than in the comparable period of 1955.

The Bureau also said that the fact prices received by Texas farmers are running 4 per cent below last year while income is 12 per cent lower indicates that farmers are taking less to market.

Sen. Kerr Thinks Circus Not Dead, Just In Capital

CHICAGO (AP)—For Sen. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma, the circus isn't dead, it's in Washington under the billing: Eisenhower administration.

Kerr used heavy ridicule in his speech to the Democratic National Convention last night when he lambasted the Republican regime.

His talk touched off a colorful demonstration by his own Oklahoma delegation. Its members donned Indian headdresses and whooped and pranced around the platform from which he spoke.

Of President Eisenhower's heart attack and operation, Kerr said: "I don't aim to discuss the health issue because neither I nor any other man can tell whether Eisenhower could survive another four years of office."

"But the millions of American farmers know they could not survive another four years of Eisenhower."

Under Eisenhower, Kerr said, the families of farmers and workers have had "a terrible rendezvous with deception." He said Republicans are conducting "a billion-dollar circus" which he said lines up like this:

Secretary of State Dulles — "Daredevil... escape artist with his breathtaking, death-defying brink-of-war act." President press secretary Hagerty—"Medicine puppet show." Former Secretary of the Interior McKay — "The giveaway king... free samples of our national timberlands, rivers and mines."

Presidential aide Harold E. Stassen—"The dying young man on the flying trapeze."

Vice President Nixon—"Moby Dick Nixon... The White House pet midget."

Presidential aide Sherman Adams—"The little strong man who... declines to stop being president."

Protestants Resist Reds

DALLAS (AP)—Returning to Dallas yesterday from a visit behind the Iron Curtain, Methodist Bishop William C. Martin said, "millions of Protestants are maintaining life with vigor and hope despite Communist restrictions."

Bishop Martin attended a meeting of the 90-member Central Committee of the World Council of Churches in Galyateo, Hungary. Representing 162 denominations in 47 nations, the committee met in the Communist controlled country at the invitation of Hungary's three million Protestants.

"The fact that we were allowed to meet behind the Iron Curtain is evidence of a greater degree of religious freedom than before," the bishop for the Dallas-Fort Worth area said.

More religious freedom, he said, should mean more liberty in teaching children the principles of Christianity.

Galileo's Experiment Repeated At Pisa

By RAMON COFFMAN
PISA—At least I have done something which I have had in mind for a long time! I have repeated the experiment which Galileo carried out at Pisa!

Going back less than four centuries, we find a young professor teaching at Pisa. He stood out at the university because as the saying goes, he had "a mind of his own."

His name was Galileo, and he was to prove himself one of the great men of history. At that time it was common for the writings of certain ancient scholars to be accepted as completely true. Chief among the ancient scholars was Aristotle, a Greek thinker.

Many ideas of Aristotle were correct, and he deserved a high place. Nevertheless Galileo said that he doubted a certain statement. Aristotle had declared that a heavy weight would fall much faster than a light weight of the same material.

Other professors at Pisa said that it was wrong to question any statement made by the famous Greek. Galileo, however, decided to make an actual test. With the help of students, he carried out this experiment; two iron weights one much heavier than the other, were dropped from the top of the Leaning Tower.

The weights landed at the same time. It was proved that Aristotle had been wrong!
In this city today I went to the top of the Leaning Tower. Reaching in my pocket, I took out two stones, one weighing about two ounces, the other six ounces.

Diagram showing how base of Leaning Tower has sunk.

A friend was waiting below, but I found that my view was blocked by people within 15 feet of the base of the tower. If I had crawled on my hands and knees, I could have looked over the edge, but it would have been dangerous to go beyond the railing.

Instead of doing that, I located a plot of grassy ground without a single person on it, and tossed the two stones there. They landed together.

Truman Awaiting Role In Campaign

CHICAGO (AP)—Harry S. Truman, playing the role of a party unifier at the Democratic National Convention, stood by today to see what part he will play in the election campaign.

The former President made his harmony bid to help Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn of Texas and Rep. John W. McCormack of Massachusetts push through a civil rights platform plank without a convention-splitting North-South dogfight.

The man who stirred the convention by backing New York Gov. Averell Harriman for the presidential nomination and tagging Adlai Stevenson a "conservative" lacking the "fighting spirit" needed to win the November election drew a storm of applause when he said last night:

"I want to do something to contribute to the harmony of this convention."

He said the proposed platform was "the best one this convention ever had put before it." He urged the party to go out "full force" and "give the Republicans the licking they are entitled to."

The skids already were greased for the defeat of an amendment proposed by delegates demanding stronger civil rights language. But Truman, as his party's champion of civil rights, made the committee report palatable to many Northern liberals when he gave it his support.

What apparently was the only remaining opportunity for blocking Stevenson's nomination was lost when Truman, at the request of his old friend Rayburn, threw his support to the civil rights plank proposed by McCormack's Resolutions Committee.

Its acceptance averted the question of whether such strong language might be adopted that some Southern delegations favorable to Stevenson might walk out.

The biggest question left at this convention, next to who will be the vice presidential nominee, is Truman's role in the election campaign this fall.

He said some pretty hard things about Stevenson at a news conference yesterday just about the time the former Illinois governor's nomination for president became pretty much of a certainty.

He said Stevenson lacked enough "fighting spirit" to win an election without help, and that he was "born a conservative" and not very enthusiastic for the New Deal and Fair Deal.

But he added he thought Stevenson could make it in November "with the help of an old man from Missouri" — himself.

Whatever Stevenson may decide about asking Truman to campaign for him, one thing seemed clear: Whatever control the ex-President may have had over the party when he came to Chicago slipped from his grasp when he backed the Stevenson bandwagon.

Those who know him best say Truman will make what amends he can and go all-out in support of Stevenson when he addresses the convention's closing session tomorrow night.

As for Stevenson, he has turned the other cheek to most of Truman's verbal blows.

Five Mile Lateral Road Job Accepted

Work has been completed and the contractor has turned over the five mile strip of county highway known as the Wasson Road to the county, Walter Parks, county engineer, said today. This road goes through the heart of the Moore oil pool southwest of Big Spring.

Completion of this five mile road brings the total mileage of county roads to be completed this year to 10 1/2 miles. Road projects completed in the county are: Vincent, 2 miles; Fairview 2 miles; Coahoma 1 1/2 miles; Wasson 5 miles.

Work on the Moore road, next big job on the county agenda for highways to be completed as hard surfaced roads this year, is moving ahead. All fences have been moved back, powerlines, telephone poles and other structures replaced. Grading is well underway and proceeding at rapid pace, Parks said.

Projects still on the planning board and on which much preliminary work remains to be done include the three mile strip from Highway 87 to Forsan; a two mile segment from Bethel Church to Gay Hill and one mile west to the Gail road; the Lake road, (Lover's Lane) two and one half miles; and the Birdwell Lane project which will run about 500 feet.

The latter job is underway now. Right of way easements have been acquired. Plans have been drawn.

Jones Brothers, road contractors, did the finishing work on the Moore road which goes three miles west and two miles north of U. S. Highway 87. Jones also surfaced the other roads which the county has completed this year.

Russ Oil Well Gear For Texas

MEXICO CITY (AP)—The Soviet Embassy said yesterday Russian equipment soon will be used to drill oil wells in Texas.

The embassy said a new type of rock drill would be used. It said a group of Soviet engineers headed by Rolen Ioannesian would teach Texans how to operate the equipment.

It also said that Russia has granted permission to the Dresser Industries of the United States, with headquarters at Dallas, to make this new turbo-perforator.

Before construction starts, the embassy said, 40 of the drills would be sent to Texas for initial experiments.

Can't I Help Do That?

That's the oft-asked question when Mrs. Robert Hayes is indulging in one of her hobbies — painting. Eight-year-old Marjorie and Robert, who is "nine-and-a-half," either try their hands at the interesting task or breathe down her neck as she works. Another member of the family, not shown in the picture, but usually underfoot, is Rowdy, an Alredale, who, in spite of her name, is quite well-behaved — at times.

Prize - Winning Recipe Of 50 Years Ago Given

A prize-winning recipe of about 50 years ago would probably win a prize in these modern times for its simplicity and delightful flavor. It combines pork chops, onions and potatoes.

The winner is recommended by Mrs. Robert Hayes, 100 Athlete Ave., and is one with which her grandmother won five dollars, when she was a homemaker. The grandmother, the late Mrs. Mary Russell of New York, died last year at the age of 94.

Mrs. Hayes likes the one-dish meal because with two rapidly growing children and a husband to keep well-fed, it fills the bill for nutrition and appetite appeal.

She is a woman of many interests — a yard full of flowers and grasses attesting to the fact that gardening is one of them. Inside the attractive home are hand-colored pictures of copper, as well as water colors, which she has made.

As another hobby, this energetic homemaker teaches a class in ballet for about 10 or 12 girls. As if that isn't enough, she is planning to have a class of NCO Wives as pupils.

Originally from New York, the Hayes family has been in Big Spring about a year, after three years spent in England. They have two children, Marjorie, who is eight years old and Robert, who is nine — and most important — "and a half" years of age. Rowdy, a black and brown alredale, completes the family group.

A hot salad, which serves as a meal in itself, is also given by Mrs. Hayes today. For everyday fare, bacon can be used, but to change it for special occasions or guests, shrimp can be substituted. Here's the recipe for the salad:

HOT MACARONI SALAD

Ingredients:
1 package of elbow macaroni
6 slices of bacon, diced
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon prepared mustard

¼ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped parsley

Cream Puffs Delicious Surprise For Family

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Baking cream puffs will give you enormous satisfaction. There's something about producing those golden bulging beauties that makes a cook swell with pride.

The helper in our household had never baked cream puffs before we gave her this recipe. She turned them out beautifully. Recipes usually suggest baking the puffs at two temperatures; the single temperature we use with this rule is a boon.

The filling for these cream puffs is made with packaged vanilla pudding, pineapple and whipped cream. All our tasters liked its tangy flavor; but if yours is a sweet tooth, you might want to cover the top of the puffs after they are filled, with a vanilla frosting.

We think cream puffs are at their best when they are filled and served shortly after baking. If you fill them ahead, you'll have to refrigerate them, and that makes the shells tough and soggy.

NEW METHOD CREAM PUFFS

Ingredients:
One cup water, ½ cup (¼ pound) butter, 1 cup sifted flour, 4 large eggs.

Method:
Put water and butter into a 1½-quart saucepan. Heat until butter melts and water comes to a rolling boil. Lower heat, add flour all at once and stir it into melted butter and water mixture. Over very low heat, stir vigorously until mixture leaves the sides of the pan to form one mass — this takes about 1 minute. Remove from heat and cool slightly — about 2 minutes more, or until smooth and velvety. Drop by heaping tablespoonfuls onto lightly greased baking sheet, placing mounds about 2 inches apart to allow for expansion. Bake in hot (400 degrees) oven 45 to 50 minutes or until golden and dry looking; no beads of moisture should be evident on puffs. Cool on baking sheet away from drafts. Remove with wide spatula; cut off tops; fill and replace tops. Dust with confectioners' sugar if desired. Makes 12 large cream puffs.

Note:
The low heat needed during the making of the puffs may be obtained on a gas range by turning the heat very low; on an electric range, the saucepan may be transferred to another unit previously set for low; or on either a gas or electric range, the saucepan may be held up over the heat as French cooks do.

PINEAPPLE CREAM-PUFF FILLING

Ingredients:
One package vanilla pudding, 1

No. 2 can (1 pound and 4 ounces) crushed pineapple, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ pint heavy cream.

Method:
Turn pudding into saucepan; mix with a small amount of the pineapple syrup until smooth. Add remaining pineapple and syrup, lemon juice and butter. Cook and stir constantly over moderate heat until pudding mixture comes to a boil — about 5 minutes. Cool. Whip heavy cream until it holds a peak and fold into pudding mixture. Use as a filling for 12 large cream puffs.

Packing School Lunch Can Be Fun For Junior

The last days of summer vacation offer a golden opportunity for mothers to offer basic training to junior chefs. Preparing picnic lunches can be a starter toward fixing their own school lunches when school starts.

Practically all children, both boys and girls, like to putter around the kitchen. And a little direction can prove to them that it's just as much fun to prepare balanced nutritious meals as to embark on an orgy of candy making.

Children from the age of five enjoy inventing their own combinations of soups and sandwiches, says Seymour Cagan, health conservation class instructor at Public School 177 in New York City, who developed a pioneer health education project last term, using chef play activities to improve children's below-par eating habits.

"Preparing short-order soup and sandwich menus right in the classroom improved the children's appetite interest in these nutritious foods much more effectively than just talking about good nutrition," says Instructor Cagan. "It's a do-it-yourself technique that any mother could copy easily on the home front."

"It's important, however, to give the children some latitude in planning their own combinations, as long as they don't violate good nutrition principles. Let them experiment with imaginative soup garnishes — for example, cracker sailboats and pretzel initials were popular with school chefs. Some of the children enjoyed concocting 'hero' sandwiches of various types of cheese combined with peanut butter."

To achieve brother-sister teamwork on the school lunch preparation front, it's a good idea to assign specific activities at the start, Cagan believes. An older brother, for instance, could take charge of filling the vacuum bottle with soup

'Too Little, Too Late' Is Opinion Of Feed Program

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—Some farmers and ranchers attending a drought conference here today had expressed an opinion that a new million dollar roughage feed program was too little and came too late.

The program was approved yesterday by Agriculture Secretary Benson in Washington after being recommended by department officials during a Texas tour.

Eligible farmers and ranchers in "major disaster" counties—there are 160 counties so designated in Texas—will receive certificates having a value of $7.50 toward purchase of a ton of hay or roughage. Some farmers also will be eligible for certificates for $1.50 per hundredweight toward purchase of grain feed.

The subsidy will be provided by federal funds under an agreement between Benson and Gov. Allan Shivers.

The state will pay administrative costs and will develop an arrangement under which Texas banks are expected to aid in handling the certificates so that farmers may use them as cash in making purchases.

At the San Antonio meeting of farm and ranch leaders, Karnes County Judge W. S. Pickett appointed a 10-man committee to work with the Emergency Assistance Assn. of South Texas on the feed program.

Pickett said that efforts also are being made to obtain reduced freight rates for hay shipped into drought areas.

The $1.50 certificates for grain feed will be for maintaining basic herds.

Wesley D'Ewart, special representative of Benson, said earlier that a million dollars had been allotted to get the roughage program under way immediately. More money will be made available, he said, as needs are determined.

The state and counties, through appropriate agencies, will furnish administrative assistance in addition to $100,000 made available by the governor from his emergency funds.

Crippled Children Assisted In Water Therapy Program

By NITA HEDLESTON
Eighteen to thirty crippled children are on hand at the Westward Ho Motel swimming pool each Monday, Wednesday and Thursday morning. They are taking part in the water therapy program jointly sponsored by the local Polio Association and the Crippled Children's Association.

This is the second year that the therapy program has been offered. Jewel Barton, county health nurse said that as far as she knew all of the crippled children in this area were enrolled in the program but she added that it was possible there were some which she didn't know about. This year 12 new children were added to the list. The rest had participated in the program before. Their ages range from 18 months to 16 years.

The children are all victims of either polio or cerebral palsy and have all kinds of crippling conditions. Miss Barton said that during walking exercises held out of the water, some of the children had been helped to walk with more ease with the aid of instructors.

Many people have volunteered their services to help the program. The Officers' Wives' Club has provided transportation for the children each morning, and each Thursday a physio-therapist, Don Rockwell of the Cerebral Palsy Center in Midland, is present to direct the corrective exercises.

In addition to these, around 35 instructors assisted this summer. These have all been needed because the majority of the children require two attendants to help them exercise.

Many of the instructors are teenagers. Others are working women who have set aside time to volunteer their help.

Besides the exercises, the instructors teach the children how to swim and assist them in taking their braces on and off. Many of the children wear braces and the majority of them have learned to swim.

Three groups of children come each morning. Two groups come at 10 and another group comes at 10:30. The children exercise for 20 minutes and then are given some time to play and swim. Most of the children look forward to the therapy program each summer Miss Barton said. She added that she hoped by the next summer there will be an indoor pool somewhere in town which would enable them to have a year-round program.

The therapy program was started the first of June and will come to an end about Aug. 27. A picnic will be held on that date at the City Park following the morning session in the swimming pool.

Texas Congress Delegation Loses A Respected Member

By TEX EASLEY
WASHINGTON (AP)—When Congress meets Jan. 7, the Texas delegation will have lost one of the most respected and unusual men.

Brady Gentry, 59, Tyler bachelor, lawyer and once chairman of the Texas Highway Commission, is retiring.

Trim of figure with only a sprinkle of gray in his coal black hair, the quiet-spoken Gentry has served two terms from the 3rd (East Texas) District which includes Longview, Kilgore and Gladewater.

On the Washington scene four years and seldom raising his voice in the House, Gentry won recognition as one who diligently informed himself on bills and voted his convictions with apparently no regard for party lines or political expediency.

In this and other respects, he was recognized as one of the most unorthodox politicians in Congress. He often voted and acted in ways that normally might be expected to lose a man support among his constituents.

Yet, in his one bid for re-election, against a formidable foe, he came out on top. In 1954 he defeated the man who had preceded him, Lindley Beckworth of Longview and Gladewater, who in 1952 made an unsuccessful bid for the Senate against Price Daniel. In 1954 against Beckworth, Gentry spent virtually the entire campaign in Washington and repeatedly told friends Beckworth was very popular and would probably beat him.

Gentry won in a close vote. Now Beckworth comes back to the House in January as Gentry's successor.

Gentry never went on congressional committee trips. He seldom left Washington even during the long summer and fall recesses, campaign or no campaign. A jokester among the Texans wisecracked late last year that "Gentry is off on a junket. He went back to his district for Christmas."

An idea of what his colleagues think of Gentry is reflected in a tribute to him by Rep. Clark Fisher of San Angelo, written for the Congressional Record. After describing Gentry as "the most interesting person I have met in Congress during the 14 years I have served." Fisher wrote: "Never a party hack or a narrow party-liner, Brady Gentry always put the good of the country ahead of political considerations as he has cast his votes. What greater tribute can be paid of any man His stature rises high above the run of cheap politics and backscratching techniques."

Courts Free Murder Suspect

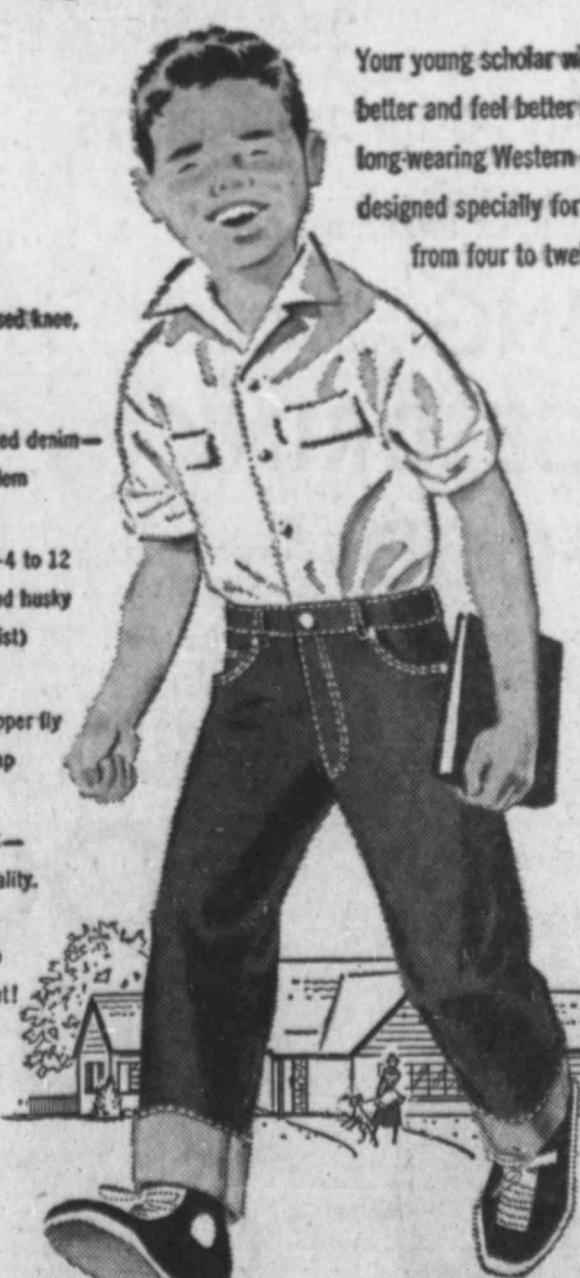

MEXICO CITY (AP)—A man who turned to the courts to clear him after eight years as a fugitive from a murder charge has finally won his freedom. He spent four years in jail.

Circumstantial evidence pointed to J. Guadalupe Agredano Garcia in a 1944 fatal stabbing in Jalisco. He fled. But he gave himself up in 1952 armed with what he hoped was adequate proof of his innocence. The Jalisco courts sentenced him to 3 years in prison. The Supreme Court now has cleared him after hearing evidence Agredano Garcia was in another town at the time of the slaying.

Islands Lost, Taxed Anyway

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—City tax officials confessed they've been sending out tax bills for years on three small islands in the James River whose location is unknown.

The bills have been returned for years because the owners can't be found, either. But tenacious tax officials keep the islands—three of more than 50 in the Richmond section of the river—on the tax rolls.

G. S. Crenshaw, deputy city assessor, said yesterday maps and records showing the location of the islands were destroyed or misplaced years ago. He doesn't know when the last city appraiser visited the islands, so every year he assesses the unseen property at the same value as the previous year—$50, $300 and $200.

Crenshaw said he'd really like to take the islands off the tax rolls, but first he'd have to prove conclusively they don't exist.

To do this, he'd have to go where the islands are supposed to be to see if they are. If he could get there, however, the islands would be lost in the first place.

That's Supposed To Occur Only In Texas

GLASGOW, Ky. (AP)—Farmer Gilliam Wade decided to have something done about a well that was drying up. Workmen began digging and, by the time they reached 200 feet, struck oil. Another well was started near the first one last week, and, by yesterday, the number of gallons being pumped still hadn't been determined.
