Borchers Ruled Guilty; Sanity Trial Awaited

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Insurance man Walter Borchers, convicted of second degree murder, awaits a sanity trial today.

The same jury which convicted him yesterday for the fatal shooting Oct. 9 of his red-haired Texas sweetheart, Mrs. Dorothy McCully, 31, will hear the sanity case Monday.

Borchers' counsel entered pleas of innocent and innocent by reason of insanity to the original murder charge.

The second degree murder conviction carries a penalty of five years to life. The jury deliberated nine hours. They ruled out premeditation, a necessary element of first degree murder.

He said the shooting occurred as the two sat in his car near the Rose Bowl, having quarreled, and after Mrs. McCully took a gun from the glove compartment with a suggestion that they commit suicide "because we're no good."

Borchers testified tearfully the shooting was accidental.

Out Of Grave

Three-year-old Andrew Wallace of Jasper, Ga., visits his pet collie, Butch, in an animal hospital at Gainesville. Butch was hit by an automobile and injured badly and a neighbor shot a bullet into his head to put him out of his misery. The neighbor buried Butch in a shallow grave 5 miles from his home. Twelve days after the accident the dog came whimpering at the back door of his master's home suffering from two broken legs and pneumonia plus the bullet wound in his head. Butch was taken to a veterinarian and is now on the way to recovery.

World-Famed Conductor Toscanini Dead At 89

NEW YORK (AP) — Arturo Toscanini, a poor Italian boy who became one of the world's foremost orchestra conductors, died in his sleep today. He was 89.

Death occurred at his home in Riverdale, the Bronx. His son, Walter, said the famous maestro had suffered a stroke on New Year's Day and had not fully recovered from it.

Toscanini's brilliant career spanned 70 years, and won him virtually every honor the musical world has to offer.

He had already scored great success before he came to the United States in 1908. In this country he swept on to the heights.

For seven seasons he conducted at the renowned Metropolitan Opera in New York—during the era of such never-to-be forgotten artists as Caruso, Melba and Scotti.

But a disagreement never explained, caused him to quit the Met in 1915, never to return.

Subsequently, he directed the New York Philharmonic Symphony and the National Broadcasting Co. Symphony Orchestra. The latter brought him closer to the American public than any of his other endeavors.

ARTURO TOSCANINI

Toscanini conducted his last concert with the NBC Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall April 4, 1954. But neither the capacity audience nor those who heard the program on radio knew it was his farewell.

His retirement was made known after the concert by the release of letters exchanged previously between Toscanini and David Sarnoff, chairman of the Board of the Radio Corp. of America. This was in accord with the maestro's wish that news of his retirement should be withheld until after his final appearance with the orchestra which he had led 17 years.

His last concert was an all-Wagner program. As he stepped off the podium, as the last chord of "Die Meistersinger" overture sounded, his baton slipped from his hand. A member of the orchestra picked it up and handed it to him. Then Toscanini slowly walked off. He was applauded for many minutes by the audience.

Toscanini did not return. Toscanini, known as a severe taskmaster and a perfectionist in his direction, was hailed by many as "the greatest living conductor."

But his path to success was not an easy one. Although he surmounted the obstacles of poverty and lack of recognition at the beginning, it was a whim of fate that made him a conductor.

Thompson Enters Sharp Blast At English Oil Shortage Fuss

HOUSTON (AP)—Ernest Thompson of the Railroad Commission entered a sharp rebuttal last night to England's criticism of American aid in her oil shortage and gasoline rationing plight.

He declared the current dispute over Britain's oil drought, resulting from the Middle East situation, would come to a quick end if that country would buy gasoline.

"But England says she wants crude oil and criticizes us for not sending her promptly all the crude she temporarily wants," Thompson said.

Pointing to the excessive stocks of oil and its products in this country, Thompson said:

"I should think that England would understand that we must keep our stocks in balance against the day when she no longer needs our oil. The letdown would be paralyzing."

Thompson spoke to the Gulf Coast Section of the American Institute of Mining and Petroleum Engineers.

producing capacity is variously estimated to be from 700,000 added barrels per day up to 1,500,000, he said.

"I feel that to be safe we should not count on having much more than 700,000 barrels per day in reserve daily producing capacity for a sustained period of two or more years," he said.

Any sort of war today would require vast oil reserves and "we must find more oil or become increasingly dependent on imported oil," he added.

Last year the U.S. consumed oil at a rate five times the rate of discovery of new wildcat oil fields in this country, he said.

"This must be corrected if possible," he declared.

Eisenhower Asks Record Budget Of Nearly $72 Billion

Congress Is Handed List Of Legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower today handed Congress his 1957 want-list of legislation, topped by a renewal of high tax rates, higher interest charges on government-sponsored loans, and a natural gas bill like the one he vetoed last year.

The President, in presenting his $71,800,000,000 budget, urged postal rate increases that would boost the cost of a 3-cent stamp to a nickel, and he called for full speed ahead on federal aid for "schools, highways and homes."

Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey said the rising budget trend "should promptly be stopped." He told reporters he would be "glad" if Congress could find any unnecessary costs it could eliminate.

He emphasized, however, that he was not criticizing the President's budget, commenting, "It's the best we can possibly do right now." But he added that if all hands go to work, it can be whittled down before the fiscal year ends in mid-1958.

Then Humphrey made some legislative disclosures of his own:

1. The Treasury may ask Congress to boost the interest rate on U.S. Savings Bonds, now paying 3 per cent if held 10 years.

2. The Treasury will fight "any and all" tax-cutting proposals which reduce revenues.

3. If prosperity endures and government costs are cut, the administration can "a year hence, give consideration" to tax relief along with a further reduction of the national debt.

Many of the President's budget requests were repeats of his programs which Congress didn't pass last year.

High among these was his call for a four-year program of federal matching grants to help build classrooms throughout the nation. He asked 451 million dollars to get the program started.

The budget message suggested an increase to 5 per cent in the 4 1/2 per cent limit now fixed by law on home loans guaranteed by the Veterans Administration. The idea would be to make more money available for GI loans, now hard to get in many areas.

Eisenhower called for a new natural gas bill, having the same intent as the one he vetoed last year — to exempt gas producers from the public utility type of price regulation. He called for safeguards to insure that "the price to the public will be fair."

On the atom-for-peace front, he advised industry to get busy. Unless private capital shows "reasonable" progress in starting atom-fueled electric plants, he said, "I will recommend 'direct construction' by the federal government."

MORE advance for noon eat The President asked enactment of these additional major measures, many of which are leftovers from his 1956 legislative program:

A widening of the immigration gates. He supplied no details, but presumably this would admit more Hungarian refugees as well as others.

Extension of the $1-an-hour minimum wage to more workers. He did not name the new wage-earners to be included, but 20 million remain uncovered.

An "extended and improved" unemployment insurance program.

A boost in postal rates, to wipe out most of an anticipated $2-million-dollar Post Office deficit. Statehood for both Alaska and Hawaii. It was Eisenhower's first formal nod to Alaska, and it was qualified. Alaska's statehood would be subject, he said, to "area limitations and other safeguards for the conduct of defense activities."

Tightening of the antitrust laws, chiefly by requiring that merging companies notify the government in advance.

Federal loans and other aid to "chronic" areas of depression, though he set no price on this program.

U. S. adherence to the proposed 35-nation Organization for Trade Cooperation and to the 72-nation International Atomic Energy Agency.

And perhaps another score of measures, including one to provide an official residence for the vice president.

More special messages will round out the legislative program sketched today. Eisenhower said the administration in the next few months will recommend "a number of important legislative proposals."

The President touched lightly on farm legislation, except to reveal that "certain changes are being recommended in the corn program" and to propose these two measures:

1. A one-year extension, and an additional one-billion-dollar authorization, for the program under which surplus farm products may be sold abroad. The government takes the foreign currencies and reimburses the U. S. seller in dollars.

2. A broadened barter program whereby government-owned farm surpluses could be swapped to the Soviet satellites in exchange for needed industrial materials.

Eisenhower called for extension of the Small Business Administration, which lends money to small firms, and is due to go out of business June 30; and he asked that its funds be increased by 45 million dollars for the rest of fiscal 1957 and 66 million dollars for 1958.

Other proposals included: Requiring the registration of union pension and welfare funds with the government, to "protect the interests" of the employees covered by them.

Providing more federal judges, as proposed by the Federal Judicial Conference.

Once Again, No Tax Cuts Are Provided

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower today proposed to Congress a fight-if-we-must budget for next year, calling for a boost of more than two billion dollars in military spending and a record peacetime outlay of $71,800,000,000 in federal funds.

He said his budget for the fiscal year 1958, beginning next July 1, was balanced and provided for a surplus for the third straight year. But once again he came out against any tax cuts, except for possible relief for small business involving "minimum loss of revenue."

In obvious reference to stepped-up spending for defense, he said two of the major guidelines he used in drafting the financial blueprint were designed to assure:

"Peace, justice and freedom for our own and other peoples; and 'Powerful armed forces to deter and, if need be, to defeat aggression.'"

"I am convinced," he said, "that the defense programs and funds for their support as recommended in this budget provide a wise and reasonable degree of protection for the nation."

The budget message provided $45,300,000,000, or 63 per cent of expenditures, for national security. These include $38,031,000,000 for U. S. armed forces, $4,363,000,000 for economic and military foreign aid, and lesser amounts for atomic energy research and development, stockpiling of strategic goods, home civil defense and the U. S. Information Agency.

Eisenhower forecast that with continuing prosperity the government would collect a record $73,600,000,000, permitting a surplus of $1,800,000,000 to be applied toward reduction of the massive national debt.

As a result, he said, it should not be necessary to ask again this year for an increase in the permanent 27 1/2-billion-dollar debt limit, now temporarily raised to 27 1/2 billion.

Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey echoed even more emphatically Eisenhower's opposition to tax reductions at this time.

"The Treasury will fight any and all tax reductions that will mean loss of revenue," Humphrey told the first general news conference he has held here in about a year.

He said that also applies to Eisenhower's suggestion that Congress should consider some tax relief for small business. He said he thinks tax cuts should not be made piecemeal, but should wait until the budget can afford a general reduction with individuals sharing in the relief.

Further, he said, he sees no reason why proposed higher spending in the new budget cannot be trimmed.

If this is done, he said, "we can, a year hence, give consideration not only to some further payment on the public debt but also to further tax reductions."

"I will put the administration 'will put all the pressure we can on Congress to raise the postal rates and put the postal service on a pay-as-you-go basis.'"

Postal Rate Boost A boost of 654 million dollars in postal rates was one of many legislative recommendations Eisenhower incorporated in his budget message. He placed his legislative requests in a section of the budget this year rather than listing them in his State of the Union message as in previous years.

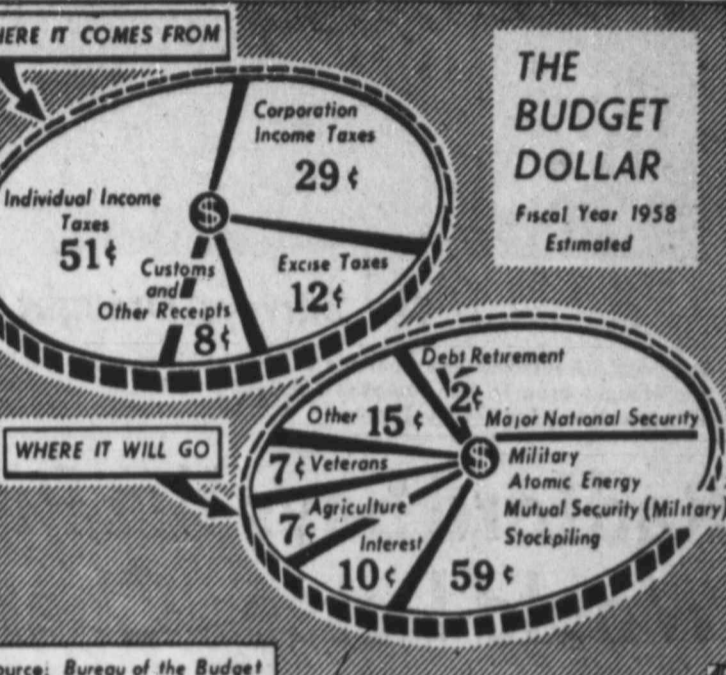

If Eisenhower is able to bring off a surplus in the next fiscal year, it will be the third in a row for his administration — the first time that trick has been turned since 1928, 1929 and 1930.

In fiscal 1956, ended last June 30, the government wound up $1,600,000,000 in the black. The President said he foresees a $1,700,000,000 surplus this year. That would be about a billion dollars more than was estimated last summer.

Eisenhower's spending request of $71,800,000,000 for the 1958 fiscal year compares with $65,865,000,000 he asked of Congress for fiscal 1957 last January. However, that budget request was altered by Congress and spending for this fiscal year has been revised twice since.

In other main points, Eisenhower also did these things:

1. Predicted spending during this fiscal year will total $68,900,000,000 — about $200,000,000 less than he figured last August, and put government revenue at an unprecedented $7,600,000,000 — about

This chart, based on one released by Budget Bureau in connection with the President's annual budget message to Congress, shows proposed source of the federal budget dollar and how it will be spent.

$800,000,000 more than the August forecast.

2. Estimated the national debt next June 30 will be trimmed to $270,600,000,000 and on June 30, 1958, to $269,200,000,000. These figures would compare with the $267,274,000,000 debt existing when he took office Jan. 20, 1953.

3. Called for new appropriations of $73,300,000,000, or $2,800,000,000 from this year and only $30 million less than projected revenues for the next fiscal year. The total is $1.1 billion more than his spending outline, and marks the second straight year in which he has asked for more spending authority than he planned to use within that 12-month period.

No Tax Cuts Eisenhower said tax rates are still too high, but "urgent national responsibilities" foreclose a general tax cut now.

He asked the lawmakers to continue for another year the present 52 per cent tax on corporate profits, along with excise taxes on tobacco, liquor and automobiles, which otherwise would drop back on April 1.

He said he expects individual income tax payers to pay 2 1/2 billion dollars more next year than this year, providing 41 billion of his $73,600,000,000 revenue estimate. Another 22 billion would come from corporation taxes, up 600 million from this year's estimate.

On the expense side, he predicted the heavy demand for credit and capital in the prosperous economy would push interest on the national debt up another 100 million dollars next year. The new figure of $7,360,000,000 would account for 10 per cent of all federal spending.

The 38-billion-dollar defense spending figure would be about $2,026,000,000 more than that for the current year, although total manpower levels would remain at about the present 2,800,000 figure. New weapons are growing more costly, he said.

He said spending for military public works at bases at home and abroad would be up about 14 per cent next year.

He said the defense budget will aim to carry out the basic missions of the services, including "nuclear-air-retaliatory forces so strong that they will deter a potential aggressor from initiating an attack."

Atomic Fund Hiked He recommended atomic energy spending be raised by 880 million to $2,340,000,000.

The $4,363,000,000 foreign aid figure he proposed — 256 million more than this year — includes half of the 400-million-dollar emergency fund he already has requested to give military-economic help to the Middle East during the next two years.

Of the foreign aid total, $2,600,000,000 would be earmarked for military aid and the rest for economic aid.

A record sum of $5,329,800,000 was recommended to aid farmers and for the Agriculture Department. This is a $178,215,000 increase.

The total includes $1,253,000,000 for the soil bank program and $3,826,100,000 to help support farm prices and bolster farm incomes.

Eisenhower renewed his request for funds to begin a program to help states with construction of schools to relieve crowded classrooms. He requested authority to obligate 451 million in funds with 185 million to be spent in the first year of the program. He suggested that the eventual $1,300,000,000 program should be completed in four years rather than the five he asked a year ago. That request failed of approval.

Respected Citizen Bared As Jail Escapee Of 1929

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A former sheriff's deputy and town marshal waited in jail today to see if he must return to Mississippi and a life term in prison.

Norveta Randolph Clayton, 64, admitted yesterday that he escaped from the Mississippi prison hospital with another prisoner in 1929.

Six months earlier he was convicted of the murder of his wife, who was shot in the head. He was sentenced to life.

"I was convicted by public opinion," Clayton told Police Chief I. B. Bruce here. "The trial lasted one day."

Bruce said Clayton, an ex-Marine, denied he killed his wife.

He said Clayton has lived a law-abiding, respected life in El Paso County (Colorado Springs) since 1929.

The greying Clayton said he settled first in Pueblo, Colo., but moved to Ramah east of here about six months later. He lived in the tiny community on U. S. Highway 24 for 27 years, serving 10 years as special sheriff's deputy, and several times as town marshal.

He married a Ramah girl, Virginia Snell, and their sons now are 16, 14, 11 and 6. He said he has used the name John Henry Adams.

Police chief Bruce refused to say what led to Clayton's arrest.

No Improvement In Condition Of Boy

The report is still "no improvement" for Gary Layne Voyles, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Voyles, who accidentally hanged himself Monday afternoon.

The boy — in critical condition — is now under an oxygen tent at Big Spring Hospital, and doctors said this morning there has been no improvement — and no complications — during the morning.

He added that the child showed no signs of reaching a turning point in either direction.

No change of condition necessitated the oxygen tent. Doctors said that he had been receiving oxygen through a tube since he was removed from an iron lung Monday night. The doctors felt that the oxygen tent would make breathing easier and would keep his throat from being quite as dry.

Little Gary has not regained consciousness since being found by his parents in the backyard of the home at 1102 Ridgeway Monday afternoon. He evidently had been playing with a rope and had wound it around the clothesline pole, while standing on a box. The box probably collapsed.

He was rushed to Big Spring Hospital and was put in an iron lung after doctors revived him. Firemen operated the lung until about 7:30 p.m. Monday when he started breathing again.

Blakley Decision Dashes GOP Congress Chances

AUSTIN (AP)—William A. Blakley, Texas' new interim senator, was ready to take his seat in Washington today, but GOP hopes for assuming control of the Senate were dashed when Blakley said he would vote with the Democrats on organization.

Blakley, an Eisenhower Democrat, was named by outgoing Texas Gov. Allan Shivers yesterday to succeed Price Daniel as Texas' junior senator. Daniel took over the governorship from Shivers.

Until Blakley takes his seat, Democrats have a 49-47 majority in the Senate.

Blakley, 58, a millionaire lawyer and businessman from Dallas, flew to Washington last night. When he arrived, he was asked by newsmen if he would vote with the Democrats.

Without hesitation, he replied: "Of course, I am a Democrat."

Although Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson of Texas had predicted he would support Democratic control, there had been a question about where the new senator stood. He has been strongly pro-Eisenhower and was appointed by Shivers, who twice bolted the Democratic party to support Eisenhower for President.

Blakley would not commit himself on the question of whether he would vote with the Democrats before he left Texas.

If he had chosen to vote with the Republicans, it would have meant a 48-48 deadlock with a vote by Vice President Nixon expected to favor GOP control of the Senate. The reorganization would have placed Republicans in the chairmanships of Senate committees.

Sen. Knowland (R-Calif.) had said the GOP would attempt reorganization any time they could get 48 votes.

The Republicans still have a chance.

Under Texas law, a special election must be held within 90 days to name a successor to serve out Daniel's unexpired term which has two years to go. Blakley will serve only until the election is held and the person elected is qualified. Shivers said Blakley would not run for the unexpired portion of Daniel's term.

Thad Hutcheson of Houston is the lone Republican already announced for the special election. He will face a large field of Democrats. Democrats have called for a runoff election because they fear in a "winner take all" special election, their votes will be so split that Hutcheson would win.

Under present law, a runoff cannot be held.

Rep. Clark Thompson (D), acting chairman of the Texas congressional delegation, said, "We look forward to working with him for the best interests of Texas and the nation."

The chairman of the Dallas County Democratic Executive Committee, Edward J. Drake, said Blakley "has been a good, conservative Democrat in his quiet, reserved way all the years I have known him."

Snow, Colder Forecast Here

Cold weather which pushed the mercury down to a chilly 16 degrees in Big Spring last night is to continue through Thursday at least and it will be colder tonight than it was Wednesday.

There is a prediction of scattered snow flurries for Thursday to go along with a promised low reading of 14 degrees scheduled to hit sometime after midnight tonight.

Temperature today is not expected to get above 30 and the high for Thursday will probably not be more than 28 degrees, the forecast read.

Coldest Jan. 16 on record was 10. This compares with the warmest Jan. 16 in 1914 when Big Springers basked in 82 degree weather.

Other proposals included: Requiring the registration of union pension and welfare funds with the government, to "protect the interests" of the employees covered by them.

Providing more federal judges, as proposed by the Federal Judicial Conference.

City, Air Force Plan New Talks

The city and Air Force had a short meeting this morning to set up a date for future meetings concerning proposed water and sewer lines for Webb's housing unit.

The city sent the government a new proposal after the city commission meeting Dec. 28, and it is this proposal that brought need for another meeting.

H. W. Whitney, city manager, told the group of Air Force officials this morning that the commission would meet in regular session next Tuesday night, but the Air Force did not know if it could prepare for a meeting by that time.

The meeting would bring officials from Washington and other Air Force headquarters.

No other conferences are on tap for today between the groups.

The city wants the Air Force to pay for the water and sewer lines that will serve the proposed 460-unit housing area southwest of the city, and the Air Force claims that the city is required to pay for the lines.

Senator

William A. Blakley, 58, Dallas lawyer, was appointed temporary U.S. Senator by Gov. Allan Shivers in the waning minutes of Shivers' last day as governor.

The appointment was announced as retiring Sen. Price Daniel prepared to take oath of office as governor of Texas.

Ike Surveys Drought Area

President Eisenhower looks out the window of his plane, Columbine III, as he gets a first-hand look at the drought area in the Southwest. Pointing is Sec. of Interior Fred Seaton and seated, right, is Sec. of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson.

Radford Says Ike Proposal Would Lessen Chances Of War

WASHINGTON (AP)—Adm. Arthur W. Radford says Congress passage of the Eisenhower Middle East resolution would "practically eliminate the chances of war breaking out in that area."

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff testified Jan. 8 at a closed session of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. His testimony, made public today after censoring for security, made these other points:

1. The United States has a "definite" military superiority over Russia, probably even somewhat greater than that of a year ago.
2. The United States now has capability of moving men and material effectively and quickly into the Middle East in case it has to quell a "brush fire war" in the Middle East.
3. He doubts small wars would break out at the same time in different parts of the world. He thinks the resolution does not anticipate that America would have to fight a limited war in the Middle East, but it would make such a war less likely.
4. Radford's testimony also disclosed administration figures showing that, as of a week ago today, 200 million dollars is still turned out of already voted foreign aid funds. This included

$15,500,000 marked "not firmly programmed" and 180 million tabbed "reserved for programs under active consideration."

President Eisenhower has asked authority to use up to 200 million dollars of existing foreign aid money for economic and military aid to the Middle East during the next two years.

Although the resolution has come under some stiff Democratic attack and seems unlikely to get a final vote before mid-February, Radford backed Secretary of State Dulles' plea for fast congressional action without a "great division" in opposition to the resolution.

He said Russian communism feeds on "tension and economic imbalance such as exist" in the Middle East today.

Military withdrawal from there by U.S. allies creates a vacuum which communism naturally rushes in to fill, he said, adding: "It follows that from a military point of view the present situation presents a dangerous condition to the United States, a situation against which we must have an effective defense," he said. He called the Eisenhower plan the most "practical" means of achieving this defense.

Rep. LeCompte (R-Iowa) told Radford he understood Dulles to have testified that "he did not foresee danger of a war within a year's time, if at all."

"I think he feels, and I do too, that if this resolution is passed we practically eliminate the chances of war," Radford replied.

Radford said that under the Eisenhower plan, no new "sizable detachments" of U.S. forces would be sent to the Middle East. Air and naval action would constitute America's "largest contribution and most immediate" in case of Middle East hostilities. From a purely military standpoint, he said, these operations are not particularly difficult.

But he contended that that part "would largely fail in its purpose" unless the resolution also recognizes what he called "the urgency of the economic plight of the Middle East."

Radford said in his House testimony that "the real effect" of the Middle East resolution "will be psychological at the moment, but it is designed also to discourage the Russians from further building up their military power in that area."

Winter's Coldest Weather Shows No General Break

By The Associated Press

Winter's coldest weather in the eastern half of the nation showed no general break today.

Some places were hit by fresh blasts of frigid air and more snow in the season's longest cold snap in areas from the Rockies to New England.

A new batch of arctic air surged into the snow-covered north central region and temperatures tumbled below zero from the Rockies to Lake Michigan.

Northern New York and New England were in the subzero zone again after yesterday morning's season low records in most of the Northeast. The 55 below zero at Hoosville, in central New York, was an all-time low mark for the state.

Heavy snow warnings were posted for New England, with accumulations of 6 to 12 inches expected by tonight in most of the area.

Largest area of precipitation during the night was in the East, including parts of the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley area and all of the Atlantic coastal states except Florida. Snow fell in northern sections and mostly drizzle in the southern Atlantic states. Fog was reported in areas from Florida northward to Philadelphia.

The fresh cold air into the plains sent the mercury tumbling to 28 below at Boreman, Mont., and -14 at Bismarck, N.D. Chicago, with a heavy blanket of snow, was hit by the icy blasts, and temperatures dropped below zero.

Dependents Policy Ironed Out By SAC

By PHIL GUNBY

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 16 (AP)—The hand that rocks the cradle has a lot to do with the efficiency of America's long-range bomber force — the Strategic Air Command.

At Lockbourne Air Force Base here and other Strategic Air Command installations, commanders say most of their men are not mooning about the girl they left behind. Today's man in uniform brings that girl along as his wife.

But if the military man's personal life has changed in recent years, so has his profession. Both changes have brought new problems.

At Lockbourne AFB, for example, an airman or officer may kiss his wife and children goodby and not see them again for three months or more.

During that time, he will have flown to a distant base and practiced the steps SAC would take to launch its long-range aircraft at any foe threatening the United States.

Or orders may come, transferring the man — and his family, if the new location has dependent facilities — to another military installation hundreds or even thousands of miles away.

Such a move means finding a place to live in a community where the family probably has never been before. It means getting along until household goods arrive. Frequently, it means stretching the budget.

Commanders are aware of it. Most are family men themselves, and they know that a worried man is not going to do the best job. They know, too, that an unhappy wife may talk her husband out of an Air Force career — and a service that desperately needs specialists loses one.

What's the answer?

At Lockbourne and other SAC bases, they think it lies in the Dependents' Assistance Program, better known by its initials, DAP.

The program was set up throughout the SAC in April 1954 after a year and a half of study. Control and operation were separated from wives' clubs. Wives of airmen and officers are encouraged to work side by side in the volunteer program.

The DAP at Lockbourne has been operating for 30 months and now has a building of its own, remodeled from a squadron orderly room.

More than 1,000 wives of men stationed at Lockbourne have completed an eight-hour lecture series emphasizing service benefits and facilities, retirement and Social Security, and available services for the family in the community on the base.

"All wives are encouraged to attend these lectures for we feel that an informed dependent is a secure and happy one," says Susan Wheelless, wife of Brig. Gen. Hewitt T. Wheelless, 801st Air Division commander at Lockbourne.

"DAP shows what the opportunities are and encourages Air Force families to use them," she explains.

Cafe Operators Slate Meeting

A three-point educational program to lick the problems of the state's restaurant industry and provide better food service for the public will be kicked off in Odessa Jan. 23, by W. E. King of Midland and Frank Green of Odessa. They are co-chairmen of the educational committee of the Permian Basin Restaurant Association. Other members of the committee are Jerry Matevek and John Castleman, Midland; Weldon Kennedy and Cliff Andrews, Odessa; and D. C. Nix, Andrews.

Plasco G. Moore, director of distributive education for the Texas Education Agency, will keynote the meeting of restaurant operators in the Permian Basin which will be held at Day's Restaurant, Jeff Davis Room, in Odessa. The educational program is being launched in each of TRA's 14 local chapters over the state with a target completion date of March 1.

The basic problems of the industry were diagnosed as too many hours open for business and too many items on the menus; inadequate research into eating habits; excessive employee turnover; and unrealistic menu pricing. The Texas state is attracting national recognition and is being used as an example for similar educational programs throughout the country.

Price says the aim of the Texas Restaurant Association is to see that 2,500 managers, 7,500 supervisors, and 25,000 cooks and waitresses have more than one million hours of training during the next three years.

Bogie-Bacall Marriage Had No Chance, Flourished Anyway

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD — The marriage of Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall, which began with all odds against it, became one of Hollywood's best love stories. It ended only with Bogart's death Monday, from cancer.

Bogart was the least promising of husbands. He was a veteran of three unhappy marriages; the last, to actress Mayo Methot, was marked by violent squabbling. "If you want anything, all you have to do is whistle," she had murmured to him in her first movie. He gifted her with a gold whistle. They were married on author Louis Bromfield's farm in Ohio in May 1945. "In later years, Bogart would crack, 'I had to marry you. You chased me so long I had my back to the wall. I did what any gentleman would do — I acquiesced.'"

Wealthy Blakley Looks Like Senator

DALLAS — That new face in the U.S. Senate starting today — the tall, slim man of 58 who really looks like a senator — is William A. Blakley of Texas. Officially he is a lawyer, but that tells only part of the story. As they say in Texas, he's got money stacked up. He is building a business center listed as a 125-million-dollar project. He's majority owner in Braniff International Airways. And he has widespread interests in oil, insurance, investment companies and farms and ranches in Texas, New Mexico and California. His 1,200-acre farm near Dallas is just a good-sized lawn compared to some of his other holdings. One is a 165,000-acre ranch in West Texas. He owns about 85,000 acres near Santa Fe, N.M. Blakley is the legendary, multi-millionaire Texan except for one thing: he's no braggart or show-off. There was a scramble in Texas newspapers, including those in Dallas, for full identification when his appointment was announced yesterday in the waning minutes of the reign of Gov. Allan Shivers of Texas. That's how little he had publicized himself. No one even knew whether he was a Democrat or Republican. He's a Democrat. Blakley was named to fill the vacancy in the Senate caused by the resignation of Price Daniel.

who was sworn in as governor yesterday. A special election must be held within 90 days to fill out Daniel's term, which has two years to run. Blakley, called the "interim senator," says he will not be a candidate. Born in Miami Station, Mo., he grew up in Oklahoma ranch country where his father was in the cattle business. After getting a law degree he went into the banking business in Oklahoma. He moved to Texas during the oil boom days more than 30 years ago and entered the banking business at Ranger, Tex. His wife accompanied Blakley to Washington. Today is their 33rd wedding anniversary. They have no children. Politically, the new senator has crossed just about all the tangled lines in Texas. He supported Eisenhower but gave $16,000 to the Democratic party in 1952. He supported both Shivers, an Eisenhower Democrat, and the governor's bitterest political foe, Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.), Senate majority leader. Blakley made it plain in talking to newsmen on his arrival in Washington last night he will vote with the Democrats in any move to reorganize the Senate. His vote would give the Senate Democrats a 49-47 edge.

Engineer Tells Pipeline Plans To Aid Texas

DALLAS — An electrical engineer here told yesterday of plans for a 1,500-mile water pipeline from Lake Michigan to Texas. He says it's the "foolproof" answer to the problems of drought-stricken areas. Al Boerner, 42, said he has been working on the idea 3 1/2 years. He displayed a working model of the project at a club meeting last night. The model resembles a huge, 4-barrel tube. One, he says, would be used for rapid transportation of bulk goods when the need arises.

Outlet arteries would branch out from the main tube at various locations along the route. Boerner said the project, which he estimated would cost between six and eight billion dollars, would solve two of the nation's most pressing problems: Drought, which grips eight Southwest and Midwest states. Defense measures, which currently "pose a spongy problem" in the event of a shooting war. He said the underground water pipeline could, in part, be converted to transportation of goods and war materials. The plan includes two avenues of transportation — underground pipelines for water and materials and ground-level toll highways. All would be built into one unit. Boerner said he is seeking private capital to back the project, but that he would "give" his entire idea to the "people of the United States."

Withholding Forms Distribution Urged

Internal Revenue officials are asking for the cooperation of all employers in the early distribution of withholding tax statements (Form W-2) to employees. The forms must be issued by Jan. 31, and penalties are provided for employers who fail to distribute them on time. Blank Forms W-2 are available at the Internal Revenue District office located at 2101 Pacific Ave., Dallas, Texas. The form is to be made out in triplicate, showing the wages paid to the employee during 1956 and the amount of income tax withheld from his wages. Employers are reminded that they must issue a Form W-2 to each employee whose income was subject to withholding if he had only one exemption.

Byrd Sees Inflation As Budget Result

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Byrd (D-Va.) said today that if the new budget proposed by President Eisenhower is balanced, "it will be accomplished with increased inflation."

Some Republicans joined Democrats in criticism aimed partly at the size of the $71,800,000,000 spending budget Eisenhower proposed for the year ending June 30, 1958.

Sen. Schoepel (R-Kan.) said he believes the message contains "material that may cause considerable controversy," and Sen. Aiken (R-Vt.) said he expects Congress to "whittle down many of the items."

But Rep. Wigglesworth (R-Mass.) said the outlook for a $1,800,000,000 surplus and the third balanced budget in as many years "is an outstanding administration accomplishment."

Wigglesworth, second ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee, said he considered the three-year record especially significant since it follows tax cuts totaling $7,400,000,000 a year voted in 1954.

Byrd, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, expressed doubts that the forecasts would be realized, saying:

"The small estimated surplus and debt reduction hang on two shaky reeds—first, increase in postal rates; and second, continuing increases in revenue from inflated corporate and individual income taxes."

"These estimates for next year are 5 per cent over the current year and 11 per cent over last year."

Included in the administration's budget revenue estimates is increased postal income it hopes to get from postal rate boosts, including a raise to 5 cents an ounce for letter mail.

The budget also is based on continuation of taxes at their present rates. This led Schoepel to comment:

"I can't see how we can do anything but keep the tax rate in

Legislature Faces Staggering Program

AUSTIN (AP)—Texas legislators today faced a staggering administration program and hoped tomorrow would bring a hint on how to pay for it all.

Gov. Price Daniel sketched more than a dozen objectives in a 14-minute speech after taking the oath of governor from Chief Justice J. E. Hickman of the State Supreme Court in a jam-packed House chamber yesterday.

He told the lawmakers and spectators he would "bring up Thursday" other recommendations when he will address a joint session. No mention of new taxes was made but higher pay for teachers and state workers, plus other points, might require more money.

"This is not a day of triumph. It is a day of dedication," Daniel said in his inaugural address to the thousands in the House chamber and by loud speaker to other thousands packed in the Capitol that could find no room inside.

A light, cold drizzle chilled Aus-

Blakley Casts Lot With Demos

WASHINGTON (AP)—William A. Blakley, newly appointed senator from Texas, arrived here in a snowstorm last night and declared he will vote with the Democrats in any move to reorganize the Senate.

Thus the 58-year-old Eisenhower Democrat put to rest any hopes the Republicans might have entertained for seizing control of the Senate at this time.

Blakley was appointed yesterday by the outgoing Texas governor, Allan Shivers, to succeed former Sen. Price Daniel, a Democrat, who resigned. Daniel succeeded Shivers yesterday as Texas governor.

Not counting Blakley, who will be sworn in tomorrow, the Senate has 48 Democrats and 47 Republicans. If the GOP could pick up another vote, Vice President Nixon would break the resultant tie, presumably in favor of the Republicans.

How Blakley would vote was a matter of speculation because although he describes himself as a Democrat, he has crossed party lines in Texas in the past. He is an Eisenhower supporter, as is Shivers.

Graham Questions Mid-East Policy

FORT WORTH (AP)—Billy Graham, the evangelist, questioned U.S. policy in the Middle East in an address last night before a Baptist conference.

"With the Eisenhower doctrine covering with a shield the Middle East," he said, "the American people must now ask themselves this question: 'Do we have the moral and spiritual qualities to protect an Arab nation in the deserts...when we didn't have the moral and spiritual qualities to protect the Hungarians?'"

"Are we willing as an American people...to start a third world war to protect a bit of sand and some nomad tribes...when we were not willing to start it in order to keep communism from grabbing all of China?"

Graham was keynote speaker before the Texas Baptist evangelistic conference.

tin in the early morning hours and after a long conference the big decision was made to shift the ceremony from outside the Capitol's south door entrance to the House. It was the first indoor inauguration since that of Gov. Beauford Jester in 1947.

Daniel charged that the 10th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, guaranteeing to the states all powers not delegated to the United States, "has suffered from disuse and disregard, especially at the hands of the nation's highest court."

He said he would dedicate the rest of his life to a fight against "further federal encroachment."

Outgoing Gov. Allan Shivers left immediately after the inauguration to fly to New York on private business, skipping the pomp and glitter of inauguration day that continued into the wee hours.

A public reception was held in the Capitol rotunda with all state dignitaries in the handshaking line. The formal dress inaugural hall followed as other dances were thrown open to the public at downtown hotels.

Daniel's day of days began with a pre-inaugural dedicatory prayer breakfast in which the internationally known evangelist, Billy Graham, called for the courage to live by Christian principles. A parade in the morning and an entertainment program in the afternoon added to the festivities.

These were objectives listed by Daniel:

A strict lobby control law, exposure and elimination of any state officials for misconduct, a statewide water conservation program, improved public education with higher pay for teachers, a balanced budget, a cost of living pay boost for state workers, attraction of new industry to Texas, Constitution revision, hospital improvements, a paid probation parole system, further insurance reforms, stronger laws to curb narcotics traffic, juvenile delinquency and other crime situations.

"With proper support from the people, I predict that this administration and this Legislature will mark the beginning of a greater era of progress, integrity and good government for Texas," Daniel said.

Bills already have been introduced in the Legislature dealing with water, narcotics, ethics code, lobby registration, insurance, Texas promotion and revision of state care for mentally ill.

Daniel strayed from his prepared text only one time to any extent. He has said he had rather be governor than president of the United States but said yesterday there was one greater ambition:

"To be a good governor of this state." This brought warm applause.

He also drew applause when he referred to education and declared "A state as wealthy as ours has no reason to seek federal aid and thereby invite federal control."

In an obvious reference to the Democratic party factionalism recently, Daniel promised to do his best "to be a faithful governor for all of the people, regardless of partisan differences of the past."

Average Cost Of Budget Is $416 For Each American

WASHINGTON (AP)—The record federal peacetime spending in the next fiscal year is going to cost every man, woman and child in the country an average of $416 each.

At the same time, each person's share of the all-time record revenue to be collected will amount to $427 each. The extra $11 each makes up the expected surplus for debt reduction.

These figures represent increases per capita in spending and tax collections for the third straight year.

The new budget sent to Congress by President Eisenhower calls for $71,800,000,000 in spending and collection of $73,600,000,000 in revenue in the 1958 fiscal year beginning next July 1. The Census Bureau estimates the population next Jan. 1 will be 172,500,000 persons. The population at this midpoint of the fiscal year is used by the government in figuring averages.

The new average of $416 for spending will be $10 higher than the $406 for the revised estimates for the current fiscal period. It previously had moved up from $394 per person in fiscal 1955 to $399 in fiscal 1956. That means an over-all jump of $22 per person in spending over the period 1955-1958.

Problems Ahead For Price Daniel

Allan Shivers' appointment of William A. Blakley to the U. S. Senate from Texas has all the headlines for awhile, but there are many more issues for Texas involved in the change of gubernatorial administrations.

Naming of the wealthy Dallas lawyer for the interim term was done spectacularly by Shivers, who chose to take action just hours before he stepped from the governor's office and turned it over to Price Daniel. But the final results may not be so spectacular.

Blakley announces that he is a Democrat, and leaves the implication that he will not go into the U. S. Senate to desert his party, although he also has been an Eisenhower supporter. In addition to being a friend of Shivers, he also has been closely allied with Senator Lyndon Johnson, so the association in the Senate very likely will be an amicable one.

Whether Shivers should have made this appointment, or should have left it to the new Governor Daniel is a matter for much debate. The outgoing and incoming governor have been at odds over this, and doubtless there is argument in support of each man.

The major point is that the appointment—regardless who might have made it—is a temporary one. Mr. Blakley has announced that he will not be a candidate in the special election to name a permanent occupant of the Senate seat. If Daniel had made an interim appointment, surely his choice would have been also for a non-candidate.

So Texans still are confronted with the business of electing a new junior senator, and when the machinery of the voting finally is set up and a date is fixed, we may expect to see another political pot in high boil.

It is the many state appointments that Shivers made so late in his administration that could be subject to question. Normally, one might expect, as a matter of course, that the outgoing governor would leave vacancies—which have just occurred—to the executive who will be responsible for state affairs for at least another two years. Not that most of the Shivers appointments are not good ones. Most of them are, many of them—if the Senate gives confirmation—may be expected to do good jobs of service for their state.

But Shivers' action, it seems to us, has put the new governor in a rather unhappy position. Price Daniel takes office under considerable difficulty, for several reasons. He had such a bare majority in the Democratic primary that he must work to pull more Texans to his side as supporters. He has been frustrated in the argument with Shivers over the senatorial issue, and the feelings developing over this must be overcome.

Shivers, with all his years in office, has been most forceful. Rightly or wrongly, what he has done has been done with firm decision. Daniel seems not to be a man of such sternness, and his path may be rugged as he attempts to exercise his influence through less autocratic methods.

Many of the present difficulties are not all Price Daniel's fault. Shivers has not helped him any. But he is the state's new chief executive, and deserves a fair chance at quieting bitter feuds and restoring a measure of harmony. We think he is sincere in wanting to put the interests of Texas first, and in that he should have the support of all fair-minded Texans.

The problems ahead for the state ought to be recognized as being big enough that such things as interim senatorial appointments and other factional matters be not permitted to overshadow them.

Old Mistakes Could Be Made Again

WASHINGTON — At the height of the crisis following the British-French attack on Egypt, an urgent appeal came to President Eisenhower from President Camille Chamoun of the small Middle-East state of Lebanon saying that immediate help with arms was essential if Lebanon was to maintain its pro-Western stand.

This points up both the need for the new Eisenhower policy and the perils inherent in it. Lebanon has a long border with Syria, and Syria for many months had been receiving arms and advisers from Soviet Russia. Syrian threats, along with evidence of internal subversion, were aimed at the government of President Chamoun which has been genuinely oriented toward the West.

Charles Malik, Lebanon's foreign minister and previously ambassador to Washington, has contributed much to the promotion of understanding between the West and the Arab world. Representing his country at the current session of the General Assembly of the United Nations, he should be helpful in trying to work out a settlement of the ancient quarrels that plague the Middle East.

If Lebanon were to be pushed into the Communist camp, the position of the West would seem hopeless. But if the Western policy is to mean no more than Western arms for Lebanon and more Communist arms for Syria, then the prospect is for the kind of race that can end only in a trial of strength.

It has been the inability or the reluctance of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles to define the policy beyond the mere guarantee of resistance to an aggressor, along with economic and military aid, that has raised the greatest doubt. Dulles cannot, of course, conduct complicated foreign policy negotiations in the most troubled area of the world by a rigid formula laid down in public.

But unless the resolution requested by the President is to be drastically altered, the Secretary will have to be far more specific before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The hearings before the House committee have been no more than a mild dress rehearsal for the Senate interrogation.

Increasingly as the debate on the Eisenhower policy develops, the bitter rancor of past controversy over foreign policy comes to light. Dulles himself had become a controversial figure in somewhat the same sense, although to a lesser degree, that Anthony Eden in London was the focus of impassioned feeling.

But the resentment boiling up to the surface has deeper origins than the Middle East crisis. It goes back to the long-calculated attack on the Democrats for failures of omission and commission in the conduct of foreign policy. In its extreme form, this attack was part of the charge of conspiracy and treason that so poisoned the atmosphere.

Even the milder criticism was based on the assumption that the Democrats had made fearful blunders which the Republicans would never do. Republican foreign policy was bound to be good while Democratic policy had inevitably been bad.

Mistakes and blunders there certainly have been in the past. But in an era of revolutionary change, to say that a one party or one Secretary of State "lost" China was an absurd, a tragic, oversimplification. These are the ugly birds now coming home to roost.

No nation of the West, and certainly not this one, has come out well in the past year and a half in the Middle East. There are only degrees of wrongness.

As was China from the first revolution of Sun Yat Sen on, the Middle East also has become the focus of a growing upheaval. President Nasser is a revolutionary figure, and where and how he can be stayed is one of the questions for which there is no easy answer.

Dulles has tried to ride this whirlwind and he has found it extraordinarily difficult and upsetting. He and the President want from Congress the promise of a free hand. Understandably, the Secretary does not want to disclose what cards he means to play.

The dispute over ways and means in China contributed to the final tragedy. Suspicion, jealousy, rivalry, the claims of ideology, of personal pride and vanity, of sentiment and misguided and misinformed idealism—all these elements were part of the failure that moved on its inexorable course. It is time for everyone concerned to realize that the same thing can happen in the Middle East.

U.N. Investigation Of Hungary

WASHINGTON — The United Nations through its General Assembly has taken a constructive and, indeed, a far-reaching step in adopting, by a vote of 59 to 8, a resolution which sets up a five-nation committee to investigate what has been happening in Hungary.

On the face of it, this may look to some observers as a perfunctory move or one that hasn't any teeth in it, but no greater mistake could be made than to underestimate what really can be done to mobilize the moral force of the world once the facts in a major controversy among nations are spread upon the record.

"Pitiless publicity" was a phrase frequently used by President Wilson in advocating an exposure of wrongdoing. While congressional committees have often been used to uncover and expose domestic scandals, no device of this kind has ever been tried on an international scale.

The United Nations Assembly is not a legislative body, but it has been empowered by its charter to investigate and discuss any question that threatens the peace of the world. This concept was one of the great contributions made by the late Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, when the charter was written in San Francisco in 1945.

Today a United Nations investigating committee does not have any power to command witnesses to appear, but it can request their attendance, and the burden of public criticism for any refusal to testify will fall upon those who evade the basic issues.

Thus, it would be proper for the new committee to invite the taking of testimony in Hungary itself from officials of the "puppet government," who would be given an opportunity to explain the recent incidents.

Naturally, the Hungarian officials now under Soviet control would argue that what is happening is an "internal" matter and would instruct their representatives at the U.N. in New York to explain their position. But this cannot dispose of the problem of jurisdiction by the U.N.

For the continued presence of Soviet troops on Hungarian territory is an act of external aggression. It cannot be justified on the ground that the existing regime in Budapest "invited" the Soviet army to come into the country. Everyone knows this is not true, but it is important to take testimony which will underline the untruth as well as the danger of accepting any such ex parte explanation as valid.

The Moscow radio in recent weeks has been constantly denouncing the British and French intervention in Egypt, but the Soviets have failed to note that those two countries withdrew their troops in obedience to a request from the U. N. General Assembly.

New Program To Cripple Draft?

WASHINGTON — Will the Army's new program for draft-age youths cripple the draft? The answer won't be known until after the program goes into effect April 1.

Major Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, head of Selective Service, has indicated he does not think the draft system will be affected. And Pentagon officials have pooh-poohed the idea it might be. There is no talk here of ending the draft.

Presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson said during the recent campaign that he hoped the draft could soon be ended. But at that time Eisenhower administration officials said the idea was impractical and unrealistic.

The Army this week laid down a program permitting youths 18½ to 26 to avoid the draft—and its two years of active service—by volunteering for six months' active duty and then going into the reserves for 5½ years.

The purpose, so Pentagon people said, is to build up this country's reserves into which the government would have to dip for men with military training in case of an emergency.

Many youths, faced with the draft and 24 months of active duty will probably ask themselves: Why should I go through that if I can serve only six months, even though it means staying and training in the reserves for 5½ years?

Briefly, this is an ABC of three groups of young men: (1) those who are drafted; (2) those who avoid the draft by joining the National Guard and (3) those who avoid it by going into the reserves.

The present program and the one going into effect after April 1 will be placed side by side since the draft age covers those between 18 and 26.

Youths 17 to 18½: They can avoid the draft by volunteering for six months' active duty. Then, returning to civilian life, they must go into what is called the regular reserves, which require weekly or regular training, for 7½ years.

New program — They will be able to volunteer for six months' active duty and then go into the ready reserves for 4½ years. After that they go into the standby reserves, which require no training, for three years.

Youths 17 to 18½ going into the National Guard: Present program — they can avoid the draft by signing up with the National Guard for 10 years. They don't have to do any active duty but are required to drill regularly and put in two weeks' training a year. If they do volunteer for six months' active duty they can reduce their enlistment in the Guard from 10 to 8 years. But they don't have to volunteer for those six months' active duty.

New program — They will have no choice about active training. They must put in six months' active duty but will be able to reduce their service in the Guard to 4½ years and then go into the standby reserves.

Now for those between 18½ and 26: Present program — These youths—unlike those between 17 and 18½—can't avoid the draft by joining the reserves or the Guard. They have a choice of enlisting in any one of the services or being drafted into the Army, and they must go into the ready reserves for three years.

New program — Those between 18½ and 26—instead of enlisting in the regular Army or being drafted for 24 months—can if they wish volunteer for six months' active duty and then must serve 5½ years in the ready reserve.

Youths who are drafted, once they've served their 24 months' active duty, will have to serve only two years in the ready reserve instead of the present three.

All this may not be final. The National Guard Assn. is strongly opposed to the program as it affects the Guard. It will protest to Congress. And Congress almost certainly will look into it and have something to say.

When a man begins to push 30, he sometimes lapses momentarily into remembrances of the past—a tendency that will increase after he passes age 40. It was during a recent discussion with a friend on the state of education generally that I called to mind an incident from my childhood that, at the time, left a bitter taste in my mouth, and nearly gave birth to another teacher-hater.

Many of our teachers, most of us will agree, were pretty good people; a few of them were slinkers, and most of them were indifferent. But there was one teacher in my school who was more than a stinker—he was psychopathic, which is to say, just plain mean.

Since it would not be ethical to reveal his real name, let's call him Mr. McKay. McKay was a teacher of various subjects in the higher grades of elementary school, and was a rather handsome man with a winning, boyish smile and broad muscular shoulders. All the parents and other teachers thought he was terrific. So did the students, at first.

As best I recall, I was in the sixth grade at the time, and a student in one of Mr. McKay's civics classes. One day he told us:

"Pupils, in this civics class, we're supposed to learn how our system of American government operates. I think one of the best ways to learn is by actual experience. Therefore, beginning Friday, we shall have a weekly court, complete with judge, jury and lawyers. We shall learn about the American system of justice."

And so the "court" was set up. Each week, the pupils had the privilege of electing a judge and district attorney. The jury was picked sometimes by the judge, sometimes by the prosecutor, sometimes by McKay himself. But defendants were needed. These McKay provided by the simple expedient of encouraging the tattletales in our class—at each Friday trial session, students were urged to bring charges against each other for infractions of the rules during the week.

McKay sat back and enjoyed himself. He made no attempt to interfere when the court quickly decaying into a kangaroo court. In fact, he helped the decaying process by denying appeals to those convicted. The system of punishments was McKay's idea. A first conviction brought one hard swipe from the paddle, with a specially-elected student serving as executioner. Another conviction on any other charge doubled the penalty. A second conviction on the same charge quadrupled the penalty.

The court soon settled in a routine—the usual tattle-tales tattling on the usual victims, with only an occasional response from the other students. Most of the class was able to sit back and enjoy a Roman carnival. McKay seemed to enjoy the procedure, especially as the penalties for some students continued to mount. After the semester was half over, there were a few of us who began to dread the arrival of Friday, and the relatively unaffected majority of the class began to look on arrival of punishment time with misgivings, where previously they had gained much amusement from the weekly "executions."

Charges brought by the tattlers became steadily more ridiculous, and Mr. McKay remained aloof. There was only one charge that was repeated weekly, word for word, and that came from a half-crippled, half-idiot girl who simply wanted to gain attention. Every week, she charged: "Bob Smith was running up the stairs."

It did me no good to plead not guilty, at first. None of the students, at the beginning of the semester, took the trials very seriously, and I was convicted before the trial began. I didn't take it seriously either, at first. After awhile the punishment was no longer amusing, even to the rest of the class. My defense, that I was not guilty unless everyone was, went unheard. The offenses occurred only when the students, returning from recess, were marching in line back into the school and up the stairs. Since everyone else in the line ran up the stairs, I had the alternative of running with them or of dropping out of line.

Then came the day when Mr. McKay blew his top. The girl charged me, as usual, and McKay arose in righteous wrath. He thundered:

"You have been up here on the same charge for several weeks—has anyone ever again appear before this court, on any charge, I'll beat you till you can't sit down."

I wasn't the only one half-frightened out of his wits. Mr. McKay was a giant of a man, an expert boxer, and even adults were sometimes subdued in his presence. But that ended the kangaroo court. Never again did the idiot girl charge me with anything, nor, for that matter, did any of the students ever again charge any of the others.

This incident might lightly be passed over except for several other minor incidents that involved Mr. McKay. He had a penchant for ridiculing the more easily ridden pupils, and always tried to get the rest of the students to join in. There was one young boy, for example, who had a habit of playing with toy soldiers, a habit he should have outgrown two years before. McKay crowded, while the boy cringed:

"Billy still plays with his little toy soldiers. Can you imagine a big boy like that playing like a baby? Toy soldiers! Billy's a big baby."

McKay became unpopular, after a few years, and eventually disappeared. He left his mark on many a young and impressionable mind. But I think the greatest impression, and the most valuable, that he left with me was an intense dislike of tyranny, abuse of authority and authoritarianism of any kind. Perhaps the experience was worth it.

New Inflation, Rationing In Britain

LONDON — The oil crisis as a result of the Suez fiasco has put the bite on every Englishman in small, nagging ways that are often more galling to bear than tragedy on the grand scale. It has been a good deal of inflation and a further drain on the household budget.

The crisis has added a penny and a half to the price of bread, the staff of life itself in this island kingdom. This rise in the price of bread is basic in the tribulations besetting the British and a simple example of how and why it affects the cost of living.

In the first place, the price of gasoline since the Suez adventure has rocketed from 60 cents to 86 cents per gallon. Of this stiff increase, 14 cents represents an increase in the government tax on petrol.

As a result of this increase, it costs considerably more merely to haul and deliver a commodity today than it did, say, three months ago. It costs more to transport bread, potatoes, bacon and Brussels sprouts, and the increase is handed on to the consumer, naturally.

It also costs more to haul human beings, and therefore the basic bus fare throughout the island has been increased. The old Romans cried for bread and circuses. But the Briton today will settle for bread and buses, particularly if he can crowd himself into the latter. Petrol rationing has grievously overcrowded this form of transportation.

And above all, there is petrol rationing. The very word "rationing" recalls to the average Englishman a lean, unrelenting

Baptist Temple Circles Study Missions, Continue Focus Week

Discussing "Home Missions USA," Mrs. Robert Hill directed the program Tuesday for the Horace Buddin Circle of the Baptist Temple.

Illustrations, which were used by Mrs. Hill dealt with the subject. She told some of the background history of the Rev. Andrew H. Foster, missionary to the migrants in the Mississippi Basin. She also discussed the work being done by Louise Propst at the Goodwill Center in St. Louis, Ill.

Mrs. Hill had met these two personalities at the WMU House-party held in Waco last year.

Mrs. Tom Buckner read a letter from Ada Pilpa, a student at Silliam University in the Philippines. The church WMU, in the past, aided Miss Pilpa. Mrs. Mervil Click volunteered from the group to send a gift to Miss Pilpa each month. The devotion, from Psalms 46, was given by Mrs. Buckner, who also read the list of missionaries with birthdays on Tuesday.

During the business session members discussed the WMU social which will be held Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the church.

Mrs. Hubert Cox, community missions chairman, asked that members bring a can of food on the fourth Tuesdays. This will be given to needy families.

Mrs. Frank Strickland will be director of the "Home Missions USA" study book which will be used through February, March and April.

Two new members, Mrs. Strickland and Mrs. Victor Crowell, were introduced.

A prayer calendar for missionaries was read at a meeting of the Training Circle Tuesday morning in the home of Mrs. Pete Shepherd. Prayers were then offered for those having birthdays.

The devotion was given by Mrs. Richard Grimes, in which she compared the characteristics of a Christian to those of a diamond.

Mrs. L. A. Sims offered a prayer. An outline was given for the remainder of Focus Week, which is being observed by the WMU of the church.

This morning, the circles met at the church for a Missionary Round-Table program. Tonight the goal is for each member to have her family with her at the evening service. Friday evening, the society will present a program, "A Trip Around The World" at the church at 7:30. Saturday evening, the Training Circle and the Horace Buddin Circle will give a party for the VA Hospital patients.

Members will meet with the other circle at the church Tuesday morning for a Royal Service. Hostess for the next circle meeting will be Mrs. Grimes.

Mrs. Shepherd offered the dismissal prayer.

Baptist Chapel WMU Plans Book Review

At a meeting of the College Baptist Chapel WMU, announcement was made of a review of the book, "Japan Advances," to be given by Mrs. H. W. Bartlett Tuesday morning.

The group met at the church Tuesday morning with the Juanita Arnett Circle in charge of the Royal Service program.

Members were told that the review will begin at 10 a.m. and will be climaxed with a covered dish luncheon.

Mrs. Robert M. Izard was in charge of the program, which dealt with missions in the Mississippi Basin. She opened the meeting with a prayer.

Mrs. Bartlett gave the devotion, with the first discussion, "Missions Along the Mississippi" given by Mrs. Bob Swift. This was followed by Mrs. J. C. Gross, who spoke on the topic, "Friends of the Field."

"Our Foreign Neighbors" was discussed by Mrs. Laura Jane McLeod; "The Negro Advances," by Mrs. Gene Cariker; "In Old New Orleans," by Mrs. J. R. Howard, and "Sellers Home and Adoption Center," by Mrs. Bruce Wright.

World Wars Have A Way Of Starting In Unheard-Of Places

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press Foreign News Analyst

Two world wars started in places few Americans knew about. It was Sarajevo in 1914, Danzig in 1939.

If there is another, it could start in a place called Mosul, or Aleppo, or some other unheard-of dusty outpost of the Middle East.

The Eisenhower Doctrine says the United States will fight any Communist-led invasion of the Middle East. But will the United States fight to save the Middle East from communism? That fight is much more difficult.

The Russians already are attacking one of the Arab worlds. The Communists care little for the world of the Arab leaders. They are more interested in the world of the Arab people, and particularly that small world of educated Arabs whose pent-up bitterness against the West makes them inviting targets.

The Arabs themselves are hopelessly divided on virtually every question except common enmity for Israel. They are highly vulnerable to the sort of indirect attack Communists use.

Even on the question of Israel there is no real agreement. Many Arabs would like to turn their backs on the problem and devote themselves to trying to bring about some measure of stability in their world.

Israeli leaders I have interviewed say they would gratefully welcome such an attitude. They too say they believe only stability among the Arabs, in governments and economies, offers any chance of peace.

But in the Arab East there is a desperate poverty of leadership. Much of it is leadership by demagoguery. Arab politicians can arouse passions over the Israeli issue, and this is an invitation to political power.

For many reasons, Soviet armed attack in the Middle East seems unlikely. But the Communist world covets the Middle East — not for the oil so much as to deny that vital commodity to the economies of Western Europe. If that could be accomplished, the Communist job in the West would be easier.

This is what the Middle East is like today:

Iraq — A nation of about five million people, 90 per cent illiterate, a third nomadic. Rich in resources — oil, minerals and above all the precious water of the Tigris and Euphrates. A forward-looking program using oil money is reclaiming long-neglected land. But the program is long

Jordan — The future of this little nation of 1½ millions — a million of whom can consider they owe no allegiance to young King Hussein — is shaky. The late King Abdullah annexed that part of Palestine not taken by Israel after the Arab-Israeli war, and annexed a headache. A million Palestinians, many of them educated, now seemingly headed for disintegration, may become the object of a Syrian-Iraqi clash.

Saudi Arabia — King Saud seems to an outsider an oasis of rulers, he faces a youthful restlessness characteristic of the whole area. His economy depends wholly on oil dollars.

Lebanon — A little country of 1½ millions, half Christian and half Moslem, Lebanon often seems to outsiders an oasis of sense in a illogical world. The Lebanese have a thriving economy. They are subject to pressures from Syria and Egypt, but have resisted the pressure. The government, backed by a small but ably commanded army of about 7,000, remains a staunch friend of the West and a possible bridge between West and Middle East.

Yemen — This feudal country of 4½ millions provides a quick test for the Eisenhower Doctrine. The Yemen, a feudal monarchy ruled by its imam, has concluded a deal with Russia for arms to use against the British in the range, and the lot of the average Iraqi remains a sorry one.

Per capita income is $85 a year.

The government of Premier Nuri Said, now 68, is called the West's best friend in the Arab East. But most literate Iraqis are against it. Fourteen times premier, Said remains a virtual dictator mostly because of the lack of any other responsible leadership. If anything happened to him, Communists surely would try to fill the void — but not by military means. The Tudeh (Communist) party of neighboring Iran, strong in numbers, is ready to infiltrate.

Syria — This country of four million is dominated by its army intelligence section, whose leaders are pro-Soviet, but not pro-Communist. The Russians are supplying Syria with significant amounts of arms. Officially outlawed, the Syrian Communist party operates openly and wields influence through its wily leader, Khaled Bagdash, a member of the Kurd minority. The regime is at sword's point with neighboring Iraq. Syria's economy is rocky. The Soviet approach again would not be military aggression, but gradual attrition to break down Syrian resistance.

Syria still has many people who worry about Communist intentions and look westward for avenues of salvation.

Jordan — The future of this little nation of 1½ millions — a million of whom can consider they owe no allegiance to young King Hussein — is shaky. The late King Abdullah annexed that part of Palestine not taken by Israel after the Arab-Israeli war, and annexed a headache. A million Palestinians, many of them educated, now seemingly headed for disintegration, may become the object of a Syrian-Iraqi clash.

Saudi Arabia — King Saud seems to an outsider an oasis of rulers, he faces a youthful restlessness characteristic of the whole area. His economy depends wholly on oil dollars.

Lebanon — A little country of 1½ millions, half Christian and half Moslem, Lebanon often seems to outsiders an oasis of sense in a illogical world. The Lebanese have a thriving economy. They are subject to pressures from Syria and Egypt, but have resisted the pressure. The government, backed by a small but ably commanded army of about 7,000, remains a staunch friend of the West and a possible bridge between West and Middle East.

Yemen — This feudal country of 4½ millions provides a quick test for the Eisenhower Doctrine. The Yemen, a feudal monarchy ruled by its imam, has concluded a deal with Russia for arms to use against the British in the neighboring Aden protectorate. Nothing in the Eisenhower Doctrine seems aimed at stopping this sort of penetration.

Egypt — Israelis and Westerners alike said they had great hopes for the Arab world when Egypt's revolution ousted King Farouk in 1952. Washington entertained rosy hopes for young Gamal-Abdel-Nasser, who took over as premier in 1954 and later made himself president. The young officer announced a planning program which someday might rescue the fellahen — the unshod, unwashed and disease-ridden peasantry — from their eternal misery.

But events interrupted the dream. Nasser, claiming desperate need to defend Egypt from Israel, got from Russia the arms he could not get from the West. Nasser today is more a hero to the Arabs than ever before, after the fiasco of the British-French invasion following Israel's attack. But Egypt has vast economic problems. Her leaders seem worried at the extent to which her economy is being tied to the Communist bloc.

Israel — Created in 1948 when Britain left Palestine, Israel showed the world what Western know-how and determination could do with hostile soil. While her victorious army stood guard, pioneers made desert areas bloom and built a modern nation in the heart of a backward world.

Hemmed into a tiny strip of land and surrounded by hostile nations, her economy still depends on goods imported from abroad.

Israel always is in danger of runaway inflation. Her policy of immigration and program of public health indicate her population, now less than two million, eventually will be too big for her territory. She needs Jordan River water to open up new land in the Negev Desert. Syria says it will mean war if the Jordan is diverted. Meanwhile, Arabs fear Israel's natural growth will push toward territorial conquest.

Tomorrow: What the Arabs are asking about the Eisenhower Doctrine.

Washington (AP)—A $3 billion dollar military budget sent by President Eisenhower to Congress today would boost the nation's nuclear and missile striking power but trim two Army divisions and five air wings from present forces.

Total manpower levels would remain virtually unchanged at 2,800,000 including a million-man Army.

The defense spending program for the 1958 fiscal year beginning July 1 would be two million dollars above that for the present year even though the number of fighting units would be smaller. In recommending it, Eisenhower said:

"The introduction of new equipment and weapons with vastly greater combat capability is having a powerful impact on concepts of military strategy, tactics and organization. The combat power of our divisions, wings, and warships has increased to such an extent that it is no longer valid to measure military power in terms of the number of such units."

He said "we are now engaged in the development of a whole new family of even more advanced weapons for all the services," an apparent reference to guided and ballistic missiles.

"We shall continue to expand our nuclear arsenal," he said, "until an agreement has been reached for arms reduction, and in the next fiscal year 'emphasis will be placed on weapons for tactical purposes and weapons with reduced radioactive fallouts.'"

Eisenhower asked new defense appropriations totaling $8½ billion dollars, some of it for later use, but put the spending figure at $38,031,000,000, to be divided this way:

Air Force, $17,472,000,000, an increase of $62 million dollars over the present year.

Army, $9,131,000,000, an increase of $50 millions.

Navy, $10,349,000,000, an increase of $17 millions.

This brought the total increase for the three services to $1,749,000,000, with the remainder of the overall increases accounted for in Defense Department activities.

Fall Reported In Daily Oil Average

TULSA (AP)—The Oil and Gas Journal said today daily oil production fell 10,865 barrels to 7,394,675 during the week ended Jan. 12.

A 34,400-barrel drop to 897,300 in Oklahoma offset the week's best gain. Louisiana's 33,930 barrels to 975,200. Texas had the next best increase, 9,000 barrels to 5,073,150.

The week's output brought the Journal's estimate of 1957 production to 88,670,425 barrels compared to 86,244,794 a year ago.

Colorado was off 4,300 to 157,200; Arkansas up 2,700 to 80,350; and New Mexico up 1,500 to 250,350.

DALLAS (AP)—A Dallas jury yesterday convicted John Falmo, 22, and sentenced him to 99 years in prison. Falmo pleaded guilty in a rape case in which another defendant, Theodore Thompson, 22, is already under death sentence.

The victim of the assault, which occurred last Aug. 17, was a 30-year-old mother. She testified at Thompson's trial that Thompson, Falmo and another man forced her into their car and subjected her to repeated attacks.

Just what is an all-electric HEAT PUMP . . . and how can it add to home comfort?

The Heat Pump is a compact completely self-contained year around central air conditioning unit that heats in winter, cools in summer, and comfort-conditions the air in every season—all automatically.

What makes the Heat Pump different from other all-year heating and cooling units? Principally this—the Heat Pump is ALL-ELECTRIC, using only air and electricity. It's a dream of electrical living come true—clean, modern, convenient.

How does the Heat Pump operate? To cool your home, the Heat Pump operates on the same principle as a conventional window-type air conditioner. It extracts heat from indoor air and discharges it outside. To heat, it automatically reverses itself. It actually extracts heat from cold outdoor air (even when it's below freezing) . . . raises its temperature . . . and uses it to heat your entire home.

Do I have to "tend" the Heat Pump? No! Once you set the thermostat for the temperature you like, there's no need to touch it again. The Heat Pump both heats and cools from the same unit. In changeable weather, it switches automatically from heating to cooling or back again as needed, without attention on your part.

Can it be installed in existing homes as well as new homes? Yes. Particularly if the home is properly insulated.

Have Heat Pumps been tested for use in this area? Yes. Heat Pumps have been installed and are operating efficiently in this part of Texas. Although relatively new, many are installed in homes and businesses in Texas and elsewhere throughout the country, and are providing practical, dependable air conditioning 365 days a year.

What about installation and operating costs? In the average size home, the cost of a Heat Pump installed is about the same as the cost of a medium priced automobile. Operating cost in a home built and insulated for air conditioning is comparable to that of other heating and cooling systems. In new homes, savings in construction costs can be made because of flexibility of design possible with use of the Heat Pump.

For additional information, phone, write or come by for your copy of the free booklet, ELECTRIC HEATING TODAY. It tells about the Heat Pump and gives helpful information about all types of electric heating.

Increase For Parks Asked

WASHINGTON (AP)—An increase of more than 10 million dollars for national parks was recommended today in President Eisenhower's budget for the year beginning next July 1.

The hike principally is for construction and for management and protection of the parks as the influx of visitors continues to mount.

Last year marked the start of "Mission 66," a 10-year program to equip and staff the parks to take care of an estimated 80 million visitors in 1966. It is now believed that the figure may reach 100 million.

The Park Service budget calls for $78,851,000 against $68,020,000 for the year ending June 30.

The budget asks $17,622,000 for major roads and trails, including these requests: Big Bend National Park, Tex., road bridges, $890,000; basin campground roads $196,000; roads at Rio Grande and Panther Junction $102,500.

Other requests included: Big Bend NP, Tex., basin area development $90,600, Rio Grande campground development $15,000.

CONSTIPATED?

new laxative discovery un-locks bowel blocks without gag, bloat or gripe

Constipation is caused by what doctors call a "thrifty" colon. A "thrifty" colon is one that, instead of retaining moisture as it should, does the opposite: robs the colon of so much moisture that its contents become dehydrated, so dry that they block the bowel; so shrunken that they fail to excite or stimulate the urge to purge that propels and expels waste from your body.

TO REGAIN NORMAL REGULARITY two things are necessary. First, the dry, shrunken contents of your colon which now block your bowel must be re-moistened. Second, bulk must be brought to your colon to S-T-R-E-T-C-H STIMULATE it and so, excite its muscles to action; to a normal urge to purge.

ONLY A BULK LAXATIVE can 1) re-moisten this dry, shrunken waste and 2) supply vital bulk to re-create a normal urge to purge. And, of all bulk laxatives, COLONOID, the amazing new laxative discovery is so effective that it relieves even chronic constipation overnight, yet is so smooth, so gentle it has been proved safe even for women in the most critical stages of pregnancy.

SUPERIOR TO OLD STYLE bulk, salt or drug laxatives, COLONOID neither gags, bloats nor gripe; does not interfere with your absorption of vitamins and other valuable food nutrients; and in clinical tests, did not cause rash or other side reactions.

IT'S A PHYSIOLOGICAL FACT: Exercise tones your body! AND COLONOID exercises your colon to tone it against constipation, overnight! Whether occasional, frequent or chronic, whatever your degree of constipation, get COLONOID, in easy-to-take tablet form at any drug counter, today! The price, only 98c for the economical 60 tablet package, brings you positive relief at less than 2c per tablet.

Record Agriculture Dept. Fund Asked

WASHINGTON (AP)—A record $5,329,890,000 was asked by President Eisenhower today to aid farmers and to carry out Agriculture Department activities in the year beginning next July 1. This figure is $178,215,000 more than estimated expenditures for the current fiscal year, the largest yearly outlay to date in the department's history.

Of the new total, $3,826,100,000 would be used directly and indirectly to help support farm prices and to bolster farm income. This would be $34,000,000 more than outlined for these programs this year.

These spending estimates were given in Eisenhower's annual budget report to Congress which also outlined briefly his legislative recommendations for agriculture. He said there is need for "certain" changes—presumably to be spelled out later—in the present program for stabilization of prices and supplies of corn. Secretary of Agriculture Benson has said the present program is "ineffective."

Eisenhower also repeated previous unmet requests that the wheat control program be amended to free from marketing penalties wheat grown by a farmer for his own food and livestock feed use. Lawmakers from major wheat states have opposed this. Eisenhower called for a year's extension in the Agricultural Trade Development Act which authorized, for the two years ending June 30, sale of three billion dollars worth of farm surpluses to friendly countries in exchange for their currencies. He would limit such sales for the additional year to one billion dollars worth. The President also recommended that Congress permit the barter of government farm products to Russia and other Eastern European nations for commodities this country needs.

Eisenhower said the new agriculture budget emphasized two approaches to the continuing problem of surplus crops—a $1,253,000,000 soil bank payment program to retire crop land, and marketing research and service activities to develop new markets and uses for farm products.

In addition to the soil bank program, department expenditures would include $1,358,312,000 for direct price support programs and $974,896,000 for indirect support activities, including purchase of surplus products, export subsidies, and benefits to domestic sugar producers.

The President estimated that the government will lose slightly more than one billion dollars in the coming year in disposing of surpluses. Losses this year were forecast at $1,097,000,000. The proposed expenditures for other types of activities included: Agricultural research $167,775,000, Extension Service $64,131,000, Forest Service $173,734,000, Soil Conservation Service $111,150,000, Agricultural conservation program $240,000,000, agricultural marketing service $376,598,000, which included about $100,000,000 for the school lunch program; Rural Electrification Administration $264,558,000, Farmers Home Administration for loans and aid to low income farmers $318,949,000.

Uncle Ray: Hippopotamus May Weigh Four Tons

By RAMON COFFMAN
Large animals hold special interest for people. Someone may like a small dog as a pet, but his attention is held closely when he sees a dog of huge size—say a St. Bernard.

The biggest of a hippopotamus helps to attract the eyes of many zoo visitors. . . .
Q. How big does a hippopotamus get to be, and how does it compare in size with other land animals?

A. Sometimes a hippo tips the scale at four tons! It ranks second among the land animals, with the elephant first and the rhinoceros third. The African elephant is the largest of them all—it may weigh more than six tons!

The height of a hippo is only about four and a half feet, but it can walk and run well enough on its sturdy legs. Some hippos are from 11 to 14 feet long.

Q. Where is the hippopotamus found?

A. Not counting captive animals,

Head of a hippopotamus.

the hippo is found on only one continent—Africa. In past times it was fairly common in many river valleys, but now it is chiefly a resident of Ethiopia, and the Lake Victoria area.

Hippos in western Africa are known as "pygmies." They are five or six feet long, and adults weigh 300 or 400 pounds.

Q. Is it true that a certain hippopotamus wandered through southern Africa, and became widely known?

A. Yes. It was given the name of Huberta, and was observed as it left Zululand 28 years and three months ago. It then traveled in a westerly direction to the Keiskama River, covering 1,200 miles in the course of the next two years and five months. Sad to relate, Huberta was shot by a hunter who may have known nothing about the fame of his victim when he fired the fatal bullet.

Fire Wrecks Methodist HQ

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Fire last night wrecked the headquarters church of the Central New York Methodist Conference and a nearby publishing plant.

A second church and two other buildings were damaged. The fire raged out of control in a downtown block for four hours.

Fire Chief Francis R. Ferren said, "There have been too many of these church fires for us to chalk them off as accidental." He ordered an investigation.

Fire officials said they thought the fire started in the boiler room of the First Methodist Church, which was gutted. One wall collapsed.

Also wrecked was a building that housed the international headquarters and the publishing association of the Wesleyan Methodist Church of America, which is separate from the main Methodist denomination.

B. Churchill Loveland, president of the board of trustees of the First Methodist Church, estimated loss of that structure at $700,000. It was built in 1904.

Damage to other structures was not known. The Wesleyan Methodist Church was damaged slightly by fire and more extensively by water. The two-story, brick publishing house was between the two churches.

Karachi Paraders Support Resolution
