Reds Lay Claim To The First ICBM

MOSCOW (AP)—The Kremlin has come forth with the first claim of successfully testing an intercontinental rocket missile capable of hitting "any spot on the globe."
The announcement last night marked the most important Soviet military advance reported since Russia exploded her first H-bomb in August 1953. If put into mass production, the nuclear-armed missile would seriously affect the world balance of power.
So far there is no known defense against such a rocket.
The statement broadcast to the world said the "super-range, multi-stage" rocket was tested several days ago. The missile flew at a record altitude, it said, covered a vast distance in a brief time and homed in on the target area.
The announcement did not say that the test rocket carried a nuclear warhead. But the statement confirmed that a series of successful blasts of nuclear and thermonuclear (hydrogen) weapons had been set off in the Soviet Union in recent days. The United States announced last week that the Russians had resumed atomic tests in Siberia.

(Some members of the U.S. Congress were skeptical of the Russian rocket claim, some labeling it propaganda. But Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), former Air Force secretary, said that in the past such Kremlin announcements usually turned out to be fact. The Canadian defense minister, Maj. Gen. G. Randolph Peakes, said he doubted the Russians were ahead of the West in development of an intercontinental rocket.)
Moscow radio said the missile can reach any "distant area without the use of strategic aviation, which is at present vulnerable to anti-aircraft defense."
"The result of the test proved the rocket may be fired at any selected area of the globe," it said.
The United States has referred to such a missile as the "ultimate solution of the disarmament problem. It is generally known in the West as the intercontinental ballistic missile—the ICBM—with a range of about 5,000 miles.

No other nation has claimed to have launched an intercontinental missile. However, Maj. Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, chief of the U.S. Air Force ballistic missile program, indicated last week that the United States has virtually completed the prototype of its ICBM.
The U.S. Army has covered between 2,000 and 3,000 miles with rockets based on its Jupiter intermediate range missile. The U.S. Air Force has under production a jet-powered pilotless but guided bomber, the Snark, which is considered able to travel from the American continent to major targets in Russia.
The Russian announcement said the Soviet government was forced to develop the ICBM to safeguard Russia's security because of "the negative attitude on the part of the Western Powers, primarily the United States, toward a positive solution of the disarmament problem."
Mrs. Meade's husband mentioned movie producer Mike Todd yesterday. He testified Todd once gave information to Confidential.

Confidential's Defense Attacks Blackmail Story

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The defense in the Confidential magazine criminal libel trial attacked today testimony by producer Paul Gregory that defendant Marjorie Meade tried to blackmail him during a meeting in a Hollywood bar.
Mrs. Meade, on trial with her husband, Fred, and Confidential and Whisper magazines, testified today she was lunching and shopping with a friend at the time Gregory had testified they were in the bar.
Gregory testified earlier that Mrs. Meade called him and told him she had a "scandalously injurious" story about him, Charles Laughton, Elsa Lanchester and Robert Mitchum. He said Mrs. Meade told him she could keep the story from publication by "buying off the writer's commitment for between $500 and $1,000."
Mrs. Meade's husband mentioned movie producer Mike Todd yesterday. He testified Todd once gave information to Confidential.
Fred Meade, chief collector of Hollywood scandal for Confidential, and Whisper, dropped Todd's name into the trial record yesterday.
IMPRESSIVE LIST
Todd, husband of actress Elizabeth Taylor, joined an impressive list of celebrities who already had been mentioned during the first three weeks of the trial.
Meade, former operator of Hollywood Research, Inc., testified that he had persuaded Todd of New York to write Confidential to confirm story material. The story was not identified.
In New York, Todd denied the statement and said he actually had tried to talk the writer out of using the material.
Todd said through a press agent that he "wouldn't know Meade if I fell over him and I aim to keep it that way." He added: "Conrad called me regarding a story he had about a Hollywood tycoon who holds no love for me. He seemed to have the story in such detail that he must have gotten it from one of the principals."
"Seeing that I couldn't talk him out of the story, I did succeed in talking him out of naming the person who bore the brunt of the story, even though this tycoon is not exactly a member of my fan club and vice versa. This, in anyone's book, even to a scandal magazine, could not be construed as informing."
STUDIO HEAD
Another prominent name dropped by Meade was that of Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Studios. Meade said Cohn made hotel reservations for him and his wife Marjorie, also a defendant, when they first came to Los Angeles in 1955.
Cohn denied the testimony. A studio spokesman quoted the Columbia president as saying: "I never made a hotel reservation for Fred Meade or anyone else connected with Confidential. I have never met him. I wouldn't know him if I saw him, and I wouldn't know who he is except for what I've read about him in the newspapers."
Meade, while under cross-examination, testified that he blames the movie industry for condoning actions which provided Confidential and Whisper with lurid tales about movie stars.

Civil Rights Bill Passed By House

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex) shakes hands with President Eisenhower as he leaves the White House where he had an hour-long breakfast meeting. Johnson told newsmen on leaving that he will support a half billion dollar increase in foreign aid appropriations.

Measure Now Goes To Senate

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (AP)—The House today passed a compromise civil rights bill and sent it to the Senate. Congressional action there is expected to be completed later in the week.
House action was taken over bitter opposition of Southerners, who denounced the bill as "judicial blackmail" and "a political sop to a highly-organized minority group."
Rep. Selden (D-Ala.) voiced the hope that the measure's senatorial foes will engage in extended debate when the compromise comes up in the Senate.
A last-minute effort to delay House passage was made by Rep. Smith (D-Va.), leader of the Dixie forces. However, his move to keep the debate going beyond the hour allotted to it was voted down 274-101.
Northern representatives who preferred a sterner measure conceded it was this bill or nothing.
Rep. Hugh Scott (R-NY) said the remarkable thing about the bill was that it had progressed so far in the face of stubborn opposition.
The bill, if finally enacted, will be the first basic civil rights legislation to go on the statute books since the Reconstruction days following the Civil War.
The compromise bill, evolved out of a session-long struggle, was called up under abbreviated procedure allowing only one hour of debate.
Left was the big remaining question mark: How long would it take the Senate to act?
Southern senators have indicated they would not filibuster but would have much to say before the Senate voted.
Even as the House was in the final stages of its debate, Senate Democratic Leader Johnson of Texas appealed to his colleagues for action without delay.
Johnson told the Senate that while the bill is not completely satisfactory to anyone, "no one group or section of the country can pick up its marbles and walk away and always get what it wants."
Johnson said it was vital that a bill be passed in this session. "If this bill dies, it will be many years before we can approach this issue in the spirit that prevails now," he said.

Dulles Sees Red Missile As Posing 'Formidable Threat'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles said today Russia's claim of having successfully tested an intercontinental missile probably has some facts behind it. Dulles said this shows the United States faces a formidable threat.
Putting the Soviet claim in the framework of a threat to the free world, Dulles mentioned the progress made by Soviet communism in Syria as another factor.
He told his news conference very large amounts of Communist military equipment have given that small country an offensive capability which has genuinely alarmed its neighbors.
Dulles also said the United States would consider on its merits an application from any Chinese Communist newsman to come to the United States. Red China has demanded reciprocal treatment if 24 American correspondents are permitted to enter that country authorized by the State Department last week.
This Dulles asserted—although it did not promise admittance of any Chinese Communist reporters—indicated a sudden reversal of U. S. policy on the point of admitting Red reporters from China. The original announcement of the decision to grant permission for American reporters to go to Red China had been specific on the point of no reciprocity.

Under questioning Dulles declined to become involved in a discussion of German politics related to the coming Sept. 15 general elections. Specifically, Dulles declined to back the re-election bid of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer lest any such move be interpreted as interference.
In discussing Russia's claim to have successfully tested an intercontinental ballistic missile capable of delivering an atomic or hydrogen warhead anywhere in the world, Dulles avoided any direct suggestion the announcement was phony.
On the contrary he said the United States has no independent means of checking what the Soviets claim but assumes that in announcements of this kind there are some facts underlying the statements.
Exactly what these statements mean, however, Dulles said, is another question. For example, he added, the Moscow announcement yesterday said the missile hit the target area but did not describe that area. Dulles said it would make a great difference whether the target was the size of a room or several hundred square miles.

The United States knows, Dulles said, of intensive efforts in the Soviet Union—as well as in the United States in recent years—to develop intercontinental missiles. Without a disarmament agreement, Dulles went on, these efforts undoubtedly will be continued by both sides.
The United States has put forward a program to control missiles development under a proposed arms agreement, but so far there has been no response from Moscow to that proposal.
Dulles agreed with a questioner that Russia might have made yesterday's announcement to try to influence the disarmament talks at London. Certainly, he said, the statement had a political setting in many respects.

Bill Pushed To Guard FBI Data

WASHINGTON (AP)—House leaders expected swift passage today of a bill sponsors say is needed to protect secret FBI files from indiscriminate rummaging.
The Senate passed the disputed bill by voice vote last night, but only after revising it to specify added protection for defendants in criminal prosecutions. Two administration attempts to strengthen the measure were beaten on party-line votes.
Rep. Keating (R-NY), an author of the administration bill in the House, said he expects word from Atty. Gen. Brownell today opposing the Senate-approved amendments which were sponsored by Sen. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo).
Keating predicted the House would stick close to the administration's version of the measure.
Rep. Celler (D-NY), chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said he would try for House approval of the O'Mahoney amendments.
The bill stems from a June 3 decision by the Supreme Court that Clinton Jencks, a former union official, had a right to examine material in FBI files furnished by witnesses who testified against him, so the defense might try to impeach their testimony.
Jencks had been convicted of swearing falsely that he was not a Communist. The Supreme Court ordered a new trial.
Since then, several lower federal courts have ordered government agencies to open their confidential files or dismiss criminal charges. But the lower courts have come up with different interpretations of the Supreme Court's decision.
Brownell has said the Jencks decision created a "grave emergency in law enforcement." He said it might allow defendants or their lawyers to rummage through confidential files and that this might, among other things, disclose government law enforcement methods.
Brownell and other top administration officials have asked for clarifying legislation.
Both the Keating measure and the Senate-passed bill follow the same general pattern in trying to spell out the Jencks ruling so as to protect confidential files while safeguarding defendants' rights.

Cosden Shows Strong Gains In Quarterly Stockholders Report

Impressive gains in Cosden Petroleum Corporation operations during the first quarter of the company's fiscal year are shown in a quarterly report to stockholders by R. L. Tollett, president.
The report, for the quarter ending last July 31, shows increases in every category—gross operating income, net income, crude oil reserves, crude production and crude oil processed.
Gross operating revenues for the three months totaled $23,517,442 as compared to $15,824,259 for the corresponding period in 1956.
Net profit reached $1,747,965 from $1,474,230 a year ago.
Earnings per share climbed to 67.6 cents from 67.3 while the average number of shares outstanding increased to 2,584,000 from 2,191,495.
Acquisition of Cosden's Hawley and Col-Tex refineries are reflected in the report for the first quarter of 1957, but results of those additions to the Cosden operation are not shown in the first quarter, 1956, figures. The Hawley refinery was purchased on Oct. 1, 1956, and the Col-Tex plant at Colorado City was acquired on Nov. 21, 1956.

"The comparison of statements before and after the acquisitions" is interesting, but far from conclusive," Tollett told stockholders in the report. "Definitive comparisons must await the annual report for the fiscal year ending April 30, 1958."
Similar gains were reported for the 12-month period ending July 31, 1957, in comparison to the 12 months ending a year earlier.
Gross operating income was up to $79,615,180 from $67,187,635. Net profit increased to $6,319,925 from $5,281,597.
Earnings per share climbed from $2.49 to $2.56 while the average number of shares outstanding increased from 2,117,961 to 2,469,184.
In the production department, the report for the first quarter of 1957 shows 11% net oil wells completed for production and 2% net dry holes abandoned. At the end of the quarter, nine drilling operations were in progress.
During the quarter, Cosden acquired an approximate 80 per cent interest in Grisham-Hunter Corporation which was liquidated July 8, 1957. In the liquidation, Cosden gained 96 producing wells and 27 proven locations. The acquisition plus development operations boosted the company's crude oil reserves to about 30,000,000 barrels.

Tollett said an accelerated program of exploration will be maintained over the remainder of the fiscal year.
Production of crude during the first quarter of fiscal 1957 totaled 482,282 barrels as compared to 295,630 the corresponding 1956 quarter. This brought the 12-month total to 1,639,191, a gain from the more than 500,000 barrels from the 1,081,939 produced the previous 12 months.
The Cosden president said refineries at Big Spring, Colorado City and Hawley were operated reasonably near capacity during the first quarter to supply increased demands in the marketing area.
For the 1957 and 1956 first quarters, these processing totals were reported:

No Bar To Red China Newsmen, Dulles Declares

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles said today the United States would consider applications from any Chinese Communist newsman to visit this country.
Dulles told his news conference there was no absolute rule against allowing Chinese Communists to come to the United States.
He said, however, no applications for such a visit were pending, and he knew of no suggestion until now that some Chinese Communists were interested.
Dulles spoke in response to questions about Red Chinese demarcation of the American plan for letting 24 American newsmen go to Red China on a six-month experimental basis.
Peoples Daily, the Peiping regime's newspaper, last Sunday called the plan "unacceptable." It said the United States acted unilaterally and attached a condition—that no Red Chinese newsman could visit the United States.
But Dulles held the door open today. He emphasized, however, that he wanted to make clear he did not consider Red China has any right to send its newsmen here.

Hospital Volunteer Group Organizes

Preliminary steps were taken Tuesday morning for the organization of a local Volunteer Advisory Council for Mental Hospitals.
Outgrowth of an inspirational meeting held at the Big Spring State Hospital was the appointment of a steering committee which will draft an over-all plan and procedure for channeling volunteer help for mental patients.
The Advisory Council, to be made up of representatives of all community church, organizational and club groups which are interested in the program, would work as an adjunct to the State Mental Development Hospital Assn., which already has done outstanding work in the local institution.
More than 75 persons, representing perhaps more than a score of organizations, were at the meeting to give evidence of enthusiastic support of the volunteer program.
They heard a series of talks by various leaders in the mental hospital development field.
These included—Mrs. Walter P. Allen Jr. of Terrell, chairman of the state Volunteer Advisory Council for Mental Hospitals; Mrs. Leland Croft of Odessa, founder of the State Mental Hospital Development Association; and W. G. Kirklind of Odessa, a member of the Board of Texas State Hospitals and Special Schools.
Dr. P. D. O'Brien presided for the meeting, and remarks also were heard from Dr. Preston Harrison, superintendent of the Big Spring State Hospital; Mrs. Helen Colburn, director of volunteer coordinators for the state institutions; and Mrs. Ira Thurman, newly appointed volunteer coordinator for the hospital here.
Mrs. Allen detailed the work of the Advisory Council of the Terrell State Hospital, since its inception (first in the state) in 1952. She told how trained volunteers provided myriad services for patients, and said "unbelievable" progress had been made in the past five years. The problem has gotten to be in Terrell, she said, that there

AFL-CIO Ethic Group Files Own Charges Against Hoffa

WASHINGTON (AP)—The AFL-CIO Ethical Practices Committee today filed its own charges against Teamsters Vice President James R. Hoffa. Their nature was not specified in a committee announcement.
The announcement said the committee served upon the Teamsters Union a "report which includes charges concerning the activities" of Hoffa.
"These charges were based primarily upon evidence and testimony before the McClellan committee," the announcement said.
Hoffa, Midwest Teamsters boss and apparently in line to succeed to the union presidency, was a witness last week before the Senate Rackets Investigating Committee headed by Sen. McClellan (D-Ark).
Hoffa repeatedly asserted inability to recollect events about which he was questioned. Finally, McClellan suspended the hearings with the tart comment that the "witness has no memory."

The Senate committee accused Hoffa of questionable actions in the handling of union funds, including a $50,000 loan to a race track. It also said he had borrowed $89,500 from employers with whom the union bargained collectively and from union subordinates.
The Senate investigators contended also that Hoffa figured in the setting up of phony Teamster locals in New York City in an effort to extend his power in the union, and allied himself with New York hoodlum Johnny Dio for the same purpose.
This was the AFL-CIO Ethical Practices Committee's third action in the last few months against the Teamsters Union.
At a hearing May 6, the group called in the Teamsters executive board and served charges of union corruption. That report named Teamster President Dave Beck and Frank Brewster and Sidney Brennan, vice presidents.

Another report, the contents of which have not been made public, was issued July 24.
The committee set its next hearing on the Teamsters for Sept. 3 and 6, when it will continue probing all current charges against Teamster leaders, including Hoffa.
The committee will make a report on its inquiries to the AFL-CIO Executive Council. The Council then will decide whether to exonerate the persons involved or to order the union named in the charges to clean house.
In the case of Hoffa, an AFL-CIO source said charges other than those developed by the Senate committee are included in the report by the Ethical Practices Committee.

Textile Union Probe Under Way

WASHINGTON (AP)—The AFL-CIO Ethical Practices Committee today began a closed door investigation of corruption charges against top officers of the United Textile Workers union.
Al Hayes, chairman of the Ethical Practices Committee, said the inquiry would touch on matters developed by the Senate's Racket Committee and what he called evidence from files of the old American Federation of Labor.

Boys Pinched For Pinching

Four Latin American youths were pinched on the north side this morning and are accused of having pinched a girl deputy from one of the Howard County Courthouse offices on the south side.
The deputy, who declined to be named, said that she was in the elevator riding to the main floor. The four boys were also in the elevator.
One of the four pinched her in the elevator with the help of another girl until officers arrived. Later the boys were re-arrested and brought to the sheriff's office.
What disposition will be made of the case had not been determined Tuesday noon.

Brewster Resigns State Supreme Court Position

AUSTIN (AP)—Associate Supreme Court Justice Few Brewster resigned today effective Sept. 30.
Gov. Price Daniel said he would appoint Joe Greenhill of Austin to succeed him.
Brewster, on the state's highest court for 12 years, has been ill several weeks. He is 68.
Greenhill, Daniel's campaign manager in 1956, was a Phi Beta Kappa student at the University of Texas. He was assistant attorney general under Daniel from 1947-49.

Odessa Firm Low On Webb Utilities Job

Clyde Yarbrough Inc. of Odessa apparently was the low bidder on off-site utilities work for Webb AFB's new housing project yesterday.
However, the Odessa firm's bid of $297,642 was about $78,000 higher than the amount of money appropriated for the work and additional funds will have to be requested.
Five proposals were received at the Webb purchasing and contracting office and were opened Monday. Yarbrough's bid will be forwarded to the Air Material Command for consideration.
Favorable reaction at all levels should complete the process in about 30 or 40 days.
Others bidding on the work and their bids were R. B. Hodgson & Company of Dallas, $313,646; Williams and Dunlap, Dallas, $369,900; Glade Construction Company, Fort Worth, $391,400; and Cago Brothers, San Antonio, $411,200.

Aid Asked In Hunt For Girl

SILSBEE, Tex. (AP)—The Highway Patrol appealed for more searchers today in a hunt for a missing Southeast Texas girl.
Dianne Burch, 5, of Evadale, disappeared Sunday during a family picnic on a Neches River sandbar near Silsbee. She was last seen on her way back to the family car in a wooded area.
Mrs. Albert Burch, the mother, said she believes the tot may have been picked up by strangers. In asking that appeals be broadcast for the child's return, she said: "No charges will be pressed and there will be no hard feeling. We just want our baby back."
The Department of Public Safety said soldiers were being sent from Ft. Polk at Leesville, La., to aid in the search.
Some 500 persons intensified their hunt yesterday after they found footprints on the river bank.

More Storms In Forecast For West Texas

By The Associated Press
More thunderstorms were forecast for West Texas Tuesday in the wake of high winds Monday night which injured three persons in the Panhandle.

The storms hit Perryton and Waka.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Underwood of Perryton were injured when a trailer overturned. An unidentified young girl was injured when a shed in which she was playing blew down in Waka.

Carpents were blown off, roofs damaged, fences shattered, tree limbs knocked down and a few windows broken in southwest Perryton, Max McLarty of KEYE at Perryton said.

McLarty also said the roof of a downtown cafe in Perryton was damaged and one home struck by lightning. A half-inch of rain accompanied the wind, he said.

The rest of the state had partly cloudy skies and hot temperatures. Presidio had the high of 108 degrees. The low was 89 at Galveston.

Alpine had .02 of an inch of rain and Van Horn a trace in the 24 hours ending at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

There were some wet spots, but dry weather prevailed in most sections of the country Tuesday.

Light rain fell in the Dakotas and near the leading edge of the cool air in southern Nebraska. Scattered areas of light rain were reported eastward across the upper Mississippi Valley and scattered thundershowers hit areas in Kansas and westward over most of the Rocky Mountain region.

Rainfall in the East was confined to showers in New England and Virginia. Skies were clear in the southeastern part of the country and in most parts of the Pacific Coast states.

Comet Mrkos 1957D

This picture of Comet Mrkos 1957D, discovered by a Czech astronomer August 2, was taken by John Farrell of Fort Worth. He used an eight-inch Schmidt photo telescope which he designed and housed in a small building near Granbury, Farrell, a Texas Christian University physics major and photographer, used a five-minute exposure to make the picture. The comet has been visible in the northwest portion of the sky shortly after sundown, below the bowl of the Big Dipper.

Health Chief Says Asian Flu Not So Terrible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surgeon General Leroy E. Burney said today that if you get Asian flu you probably won't be any worse off than with many an everyday sickness.

"Even if an epidemic should develop," the head of the U.S. Public Health Service said, "if present trends continue, the 10 to 20 per cent of the people who might contract Asian influenza would have a relatively mild illness, with symptoms which are commonplace accompaniments of many everyday illnesses in our society."

Burney's comments were contained in a speech prepared for a special meeting of the Association of State and Territorial Health Officers of the United States. Burney called the meeting to discuss what could be done to reduce the amount of illness caused by the new flu virus.

He said virus diseases are hard to predict and "there is always a possibility that the Asian influenza virus will change and will become more virulent and the disease more severe." But he added that "there is no evidence of such a change so far."

SOME EPIDEMICS

He said that while no flat prediction can be made "it seems quite probable that there will be epidemics in this country some time during the fall or winter."

He said he is happy to report that manufacturers are optimistic about reaching or exceeding the goal of 60 million doses of vaccine by February.

In addition to the vaccine production, he said, there have been intensive studies, exchanges of information and planning by public and private health officials and organizations.

"This is the first time in history that a country has been able to take such preliminary steps in advance of a possible epidemic of influenza," he said.

He said that while "from the point of view of the individual, we feel there is little cause for special anxiety or undue concern," yet from a community viewpoint possible effects of an epidemic are serious.

If 10 per cent of a community were stricken at the same time, he said, facilities for medical care might be strained, and "if the disease should be concentrated among certain occupations, this could present a problem in the maintenance of essential community services."

26 MILLION CASES

Burney said that if an epidemic occurs, at least 13 million to 26 million persons could be sickened — even considering the estimated protective value of a new vaccine. Supplies of this vaccine still are limited.

"The surgeon general said the incidence of the flu might be kept to that minimum if any epidemic did not occur until 60 million doses of the vaccine had been administered."

That's the supply presently hoped for by Feb. 1 or possibly by Jan. 1, Public Health Service authorities say the vaccine should protect 70 per cent of persons receiving it, based on past experience with other flu vaccines. But Burney indicated that if any such epidemic occurs before the 60 million doses are administered—and flu usually strikes any time from late fall to early winter—the range of incidence could be higher.

The health service announced yesterday the release of another 85,000 doses of the vaccine. This was the second batch to be cleared for military and civilian use. The first, released Aug. 12, totaled 502,000 doses. Six licensed manufacturers are producing the vaccine.

Presumably, there will be discussion of the Public Health Service's previously announced recommendation for a voluntary interstate allocation system for the vaccine.

Instructed Verdict In Damages Trial

Suit brought by Tiburcio Nunez and his wife against V. A. Gomez, asking for $69,400 damages, came to an abrupt termination Monday afternoon.

When the plaintiff had completed presentation of his case, the defendant moved the court for an instructed verdict.

Judge Charlie Sullivan, presiding in the 118th District Court, granted the motion. He dismissed the jury which had been hearing the evidence for more than three hours. He entered a verdict in favor of the defendant.

The Nunez couple had sued the defendant alleging that Mrs. Nunez had suffered permanent injuries as result of a fall in a bathroom at the Dreamland Hotel on Feb. 20, 1956. Gomez was named as owner and operator of the building. A floor in a bath room collapsed, the plaintiff said, causing the woman to fall eight feet.

As a result of the sudden collapse of the Nunez-Gomez hearing, no jury trial is in progress in the 118th District Court today.

Judge Sullivan had excused the jury panel called for the current week's civil court docket on Monday morning with instructions to report back to the court on Wednesday. At that time it had been anticipated the Nunez matter would absorb all of Monday and Tuesday.

Wednesday morning the second of three civil matters announced ready will go on trial.

'Doubtful Legality' Seen In U. S. Oil Lift

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats on a Senate subcommittee say the U. S. oil lift to Europe last winter enabled participating petroleum firms to pick up extra profits on a program they called of "doubtful legality."

The majority report of the Antitrust subcommittee also said the oil program amounted to an administration abdication of its foreign policy responsibilities to oil corporations.

But Sen. Dirksen (R-Ill.) defended the oil lift as a success and said the subcommittee report was based partly on unwarranted charges and ill-founded information.

Still another view was expressed by Sen. Wiley (R-Wis.), who said he could not agree with the reports "extreme criticism" of the administration and could not accept "complete exoneration of the oil companies urged by Sen. Dirksen."

After Egypt seized the Suez Canal last year, the U. S. government gave 15 major oil companies immunity from antitrust laws and enabled them to join in a program to move large quantities of petroleum to Western Europe.

The companies organized the Middle East Emergency Committee.

S. P. Coleman, who was chairman of this committee, said: "Activities of the MEEC were at all times carried out in complete good faith and neither by intent nor accident were the laws ever violated or circumvented."

"The most telling point, of course, is that the MEEC succeeded magnificently in its objective."

The subcommittee report recommended that some congressional group study the oil problem and submit a national policy for Congress to consider.

The report also was critical of a Cabinet committee recommendation that U. S. Oil imports be restricted through voluntary industry action. It called the plan unworkable, said it raises problems under the antitrust laws, and contended that it plays into the hands of major importing firms.

A Bible Thought For Today

Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven. (Luke 18:16)

Water Problem And A Special Session

Gov. Price Daniel is adding some convincing argument in behalf of his view that a special session of the Texas Legislature would serve a good purpose in considering not only lobby control laws but also a master water program for the state.

While special sessions at times are non-productive—especially when the legislators and the chief executive are at cross-purposes—there are factors to be considered in their favor. One is that the development of a uniform, effective water statute for Texas is so complex that legislators seldom have time to give it proper study at regular sessions, when there is a multitude of other problems and issues bearing down upon them. A special session devoted to one or two main projects could devote the time to those projects alone, and some good could come of them.

The governor may be in trouble on his ethical practices statute, since his program got nowhere at the last special session, and there is not now much evidence of a change in sentiment on the part of the lawmakers. Public opinion, of course, could influence this, if the public really got worked up about the situation and demanded some remedial action.

But Gov. Daniel is entitled to expect fair consideration for a program to develop a program of water conservation and flood control. Most people in Texas have seen the need for this for years, but interests in various sections of the state have not been able to agree on policy and procedures. It's time that some agreement was reached. Just because many reservoirs are full now, thanks to spring floods, is no assurance that they will remain so, and the basic water problem is not solved. It might just take a special session to do it, a session at which legislators and all other office holders alike resolved to bring about a program beneficial to Texas.

Some Things The Assembly Can Do

Now that the United Nations General Assembly has been officially summoned to meet in special session September on its special committee's report about Hungary, one of the questions most widely asked will run something like this:

"Okay, so what? They'll talk and talk, but what can they do?" There are several things the U.N. Assembly can do, though most of them will not sound very impressive to the skeptics who ask this question.

One of the most obvious would be to reaffirm, in the light of the documented records of Communist repression, brutality, and denial of civil rights, that the Soviet Union ought to withdraw its troops from Hungarian soil. This would be solely a moral judgment and doubtless would be flouted for a time by Moscow. But it would cost the Khrushchev regime respect and sympathy in such places as India, Afghanistan, Japan and Indonesia, and would come to be a liability. In the end Moscow might count the cost and yield as it did in Austria.

Or members of the Assembly might challenge the credentials of the Communist Hungarian delegation representing the government of puppet Premier Kadar. Or they might vote a resolution calling upon Kadar to show leniency to the numerous leaders of last October's revolt who are in prison, some under capital sentences.

If such steps as these seem inadequate, will those who carp at the U.N. join in giving it powers to take more positive action, such as ordering the Russians out and backing up the order with an international police force? Or would they have the United States or some other nation intervene with military support for the Hungarians?

As compared with the alternatives, perhaps "talk" has something to be said for it.

Eisenhower's Concern For His Country

WASHINGTON—There is something refreshing about President Eisenhower's naturalness and candor. He was asked, for instance, at his press conference last week if the record of Congress this year, which he regards as disappointing, might lead to his taking the stump for a Republican Congress next year in a sort of "modified give-'em-hell campaign." His answer was this:

"Well, I think I will just have to pursue what is natural for me. I believe that anyone who does something that is unnatural and artificial for himself is not effective. Now, what I plead for are the programs that I believe to be good for America. And now it happens that I believe the Republicans have a better program than the Democrats and, to that extent, of course, I am going to be partisan, but primarily I am for the program."

The reference to a "give-'em-hell campaign" was, of course, based on the kind of stump speaking which Harry Truman boasted about in 1948, and there is still the illusion in many quarters here that name-calling gets somewhere with the American people. Actually, in 1948, the Truman vote in most states ran far behind the vote for a Democratic Congress—one of the rare instances in which a President winning an election got fewer votes than the members of Congress of his own party. Indeed, Mr. Truman would have lost but for the defection of the Republican farm vote in certain western states and in Ohio. This was due more to Republican errors than any virtues in Trumanism.

There isn't any need to imitate Mr. Truman, for there are dignified ways to deal with a hostile Congress. Mr. Eisenhower, to a remarkable degree, retains the esteem of the American people. He has no selfish interest in government or politics. He is not eligible for a third term. His reward can come only in the satisfaction that he has served the American people faithfully. The President's efforts to conciliate rather than to antagonize Congress have been in conformity with his whole approach to problems of human conflict. For this reason, he has a real opportunity to carry to the American people his case for the enactment of a constructive legislative program.

Mr. Eisenhower needs only to go back to first principles and explain to the country why the American system of government cannot be effective if it is divided in a time of crisis. It is especially dangerous when a lack of responsibility is manifested.

After all, Mr. Eisenhower might well argue that, in the elections of 1956, the nation did place the responsibility for the legislative program in Congress on the Democratic party. This is an inescapable fact and so simple that every voter who understands the principles of the Constitution can grasp it at once. For the President cannot by himself make the laws nor can he use any force except the force of public opinion to persuade Congress to pass the laws he recommends and is willing to sign.

There is a tremendous force in the impromptu remarks Mr. Eisenhower did make at his press conference, especially when he expressed his disappointment at the lack of action by Congress on "a long list of recommendations" that he made last January. He said:

"Of course, I am disappointed, because these things that I talk about are not projects of my own. I have no particular personal reason—other than that of a concern for all of the United States of America—for wanting them passed, but that reason is governing and controlling with me."

"As a matter of fact, it is the only reason I think anyone has a right to occupy the job I do if he does feel that way. And, therefore, for the sake of the United States, I am tremendously disappointed that so many of these bills have not been acted on, and in some cases they not even have held hearings. Now, the details of them, there is no use going into now. They are long things. They apply to everything from the country's finances, the welfare of our people, mutual aid—and right down the line."

Other Presidents, particularly Woodrow Wilson, have expressed in more formal language and style than this, but none more eloquently, the concept of presidential leadership which is fundamental in the American governmental system. The "hard-hitting," "give-'em-hell" speeches, with bitter denunciation of personalities, may make good headlines and dramatic television shows but such techniques underestimate the intelligence of the American electorate.

For the President of the United States does not represent just a single state or congressional district or region, nor is he beholden to any pressure group. He alone represents all the people. Whether it is "mutual aid"—which is in reality not "foreign aid" but aid to the United States itself in a strengthened defense against potential enemies—or whether it is the drive for a better life on the home front, as reflected in the many pieces of domestic legislation now pending in Congress, the basic justification is to be found in the answer to this overriding question: Is the program good for the people of the United States? That's the whole case and the whole opportunity for effective leadership by the President today.

Powerful Point In Rights Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—The most powerful single feature in the civil rights bill—expected to be passed soon by Congress—was one which received little attention and caused almost no fighting.

It's the broad authority of a federal judge to force compliance with his orders under civil contempt proceedings. Most of the attention and fighting were concentrated on what he could do under criminal contempt.

But it's this writer's guess that criminal contempt will be used rarely in comparison with the times judges will rely on their civil contempt powers to force compliance with their orders in voting rights cases.

This is an example of what a judge could do to a man accused—in a voting rights case—of civil contempt of court for not carrying out a court order.

Suppose a judge in a Southern state orders Registrar Jones to let a Negro named Smith register to vote. The deadline for voting comes near and Jones hasn't complied. Then the judge:

1. Could try Jones—by himself and without a jury trial—for civil contempt.

2. He could slap Jones in jail without any fixed sentence. Jones could be jailed until he sends word to the judge he will comply.

3. He could fine up to any amount—there's no limit—to force his compliance. If Jones complied, the judge could then remit the fine.

4. He could fine Jones day by day, for every day he does not comply.

5. He could award damages to Smith. This would probably come out of the fine imposed on Jones.

6. He could ask Jones to file a large bond to insure his compliance. For example, he could set the bond at $50,000. If Jones got a company or an individual to put up the bond, the company or individual would be pressing or intimidating him to comply.

7. He could order a United States marshal to register Smith if Jones didn't comply by registering the man himself.

8. Or he could order Smith to go ahead and vote without being registered. In this case, no doubt, Smith's vote might not be counted.

Cave Find Aids Natural Cycle Drought Theory

CANYON, Tex. (AP)—More proof that periods of drought are not entirely due to faulty use of farm land has been unearthed in a cave in Palo Duro Canyon in the Panhandle.

Dust layers in the cave show that equally severe or possibly worse droughts have occurred in ancient times. Archeologists hope that dating these dust layers will produce some idea as to how often and with what regularity the droughts happened.

The cave also offers new details on prehistoric Indians. Jack Hughes directed the excavation.

There are five distinct occupation levels, the top level dating back to about the date of the Coronado Expedition of 1541.

In this level were found articles of white origin such as hat pins, hair pins, carriages, an iron saw, bits of paper flowers, and a bit of newspaper, as well as Indian marials.

This level, Hughes said, may represent Apache groups driven out about 1700 by the Comanches. Just below is a layer of brown dust. Everything above came after the white man's entry into the region, but nothing attributable to whites is below.

Hughes thinks this makes it likely that the dust layer represents the great drought of 1450 which is credited with having driven from their Pueblo-like villages the people who centered on the Canadian River.

Another dust layer between the fourth and fifth levels evidences another drought.

Immediately below the top dust levels were found pottery and flint work typical of the Canadian River dwellers.

Liver Viruses Striking Down Many Americans

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (AP)—A worrisome pair of virus cousins is striking more and more Americans down in ill health and death. They cause a liver disease—viral hepatitis. The late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy was counted a victim.

One of the cousin viruses strikes at the liver through contaminated food or water. The other hits through transfusions of whole blood or plasma from someone who even unwittingly harbors the dangerous cousin in his bloodstream.

Each infects and inflames the liver, bringing fever, nausea, weakness, a generally sick feeling, and later the yellowish appearance of jaundice.

As yet there is no defense and no quick, sure treatment. But medical research is stepping up efforts to crack this tough problem.

Americanos Supporting The Bull Fights

It's hard to say what the world's coming to.

Some say baseball is dying at the roots. People no longer flock to watch two gladiators engage in an exhibition of the art of manly defense. There are some people who prefer television to the movies, I hear.

Even bullfights are not what they used to be. They tell me that the big promoters in Mexico and Spain would have had to close up a long time ago, were it not for the Americans.

You might say the Yanks' love for "throwing the bull" attracts them to the duel between El Toro and the matador. They pay up to 25 clams a seat just to watch one clobber the other, in order to go back home and brag about it to their friends.

Bull fighting still holds an all but sacramental significance for the Spanish and the Mexicans, true, but they rarely work up the energy to go.

The patronage of the Americans is not only important to a lot of bull fight promoters, but it's keeping a lot of other people eating.

The Yanks demand to be well briefed when they descend upon an arena. For that reason, a number of people who may be utterly bored with what goes on down in the ring have been moved to prepare guide books and handbooks for sale to the Americans.

Of course, it's a great moment when the bull comes charging out of the chute, pawing the good soil, his nostrils trembling, looking for somebody to stick.

Someone with a working knowledge of Spanish yells encouragement to the bull or the matador and a hundred Americans thumb through their handbooks, seeking a passage that will interpret the remark. Of course, during the time that the bull fighter and the male cow are trying to scrag each other, the American might spend more time poring over the pages of the handbook than he does watching the weird dance below but, after all, he must come home well briefed on the subject.

For most Americans, one bullfight is enough. But, fortunately for the bullfighters, the promoters and the handbook salesmen, there seems to be a never-ending parade of well-heeled Americans who have been told their trips to Mexico and Spain would not be complete without a visit to the bull fights.

I imagine about the only ones who are willing to call the whole thing off as a bad gamble are the bulls.

Picasso Yesterday, But Not Today

Occasionally a reader finds in a book some revelation of himself in a stray phrase or paragraph, and is surprised, delighted or infuriated to be thus exposed.

I found myself at least partially unveiled the other day as I was galloping through Evelyn Waugh's third-person autobiography, "The Ordeal of Gilbert Pinfold, Portrait of the Artist in Middle Age." The sentence that took me apart is short and sweet. Says Waugh, speaking for himself—and me, too, "He abhorred plastics, Picasso, sunbathing and jazz."

Truth to tell, I can take plastics or leave them alone. Indeed, plastics rightly used can be one of man's blessings. But I hand unreservedly with the English author in re Picasso, sunbathing and jazz.

Let us take up sunbathing first. For the life of me, I can't understand what a beautiful about a human hide tanned and hardened to resemble an old Corvoa saddle bag. All right; so it proves you've been to Miami Beach. But who really cares? That is, cares whether you've been to Miami Beach, or the Riviera, or Coney Island, for that matter.

Next, jazz. I just don't dig it, man. And I never have. I'm a long hair. Period.

Now, Picasso. This, admittedly, is a different kettle of fish. If Author Waugh, a British sophisticate, esthete and frightfully upper class, can come right out in public and admit that he abhors Picasso, I guess I can cop a plea as accessory after the fact. So he's a Philistine. So I'm a Philistine. So "sticks and stones may break our bones, etc., etc."

Throughout the summer, New York's Museum of Modern Art has housed an extraordinary one-man show of Picasso in honor of the Spanish painter's 75th birthday anniversary.

The show includes many magnificent early canvases and beautiful drawings to support his worshippers' contention that Picasso is one of the greatest, if not THE greatest, of living artists. Almost without exception, his sculptures are splendid. (The use of the word "beautiful" in describing modern art clearly labels the user as a square.)

But there is a glut of latter-day pictures that shout Picasso's basic contempt for man ("and don't try to argue with me about "Guernica"), a preoccupation with ugliness for its own glorification and a sly romp with obscenity.

Two canvases on the same subject, painted 24 years apart, illustrate all three. In 1906, Picasso painted a delightful and beautiful nude. "Woman Combing Her Hair." In 1940, he executed another nude on the same theme, "Woman Dressing Her Hair." An obscene exercise in repugnant distortion of the human form.

Anything from the master's hand goes and is sacred. The museum has seen fit to hang such arrant nonsense as a collage, borrowed from the artist, called "Guitar." It consists chiefly of a strip of burlap through which Picasso has pushed 17 two-inch nails, the points out toward the spectator. I have a hunch Picasso is laughing fit to kill. This "masterpiece" might well be rechristened "Spanish Fakir."

I would give my eye teeth to own one of the early Picasso paintings. But deliver me from the later excrescences. I believe a portrait of man should show arts and all. But I have never yet regarded man as all war.

So I take at least a partial stand with Evelyn Waugh. We may not know much about art, but we know what we don't like. And a pox on the present-day Picasso.

Unhappy Choice Before Labor Unions

WASHINGTON—After months of hearings before the Senate committee investigating labor racketeering, with evidence of gangsterism and corruption on a wide scale, organized labor in this country is faced with an unhappy choice.

The AFL-CIO must purge itself of those who have hidden behind the Fifth Amendment to conceal the wrongdoing uncovered by committee investigators, as well as of those who have brazened out the tactics of violence and coercion developed in the hearings. Big labor's executive council is faced with the demand to discipline and perhaps purge such powerful moguls as Maurice Hatcher, of the Carpenters Union, and James R. Hoffa, who seems likely to replace Dave Beck as president of the Teamsters Union.

But to do this threatens to rock the uneasy balance of power within the organization. The unions involved were the bulwark of the AFL before the merger with the CIO. If the teamsters and the builders should resist disciplinary action by walking out, the CIO and the industrial unions would be dominant.

Confronted with this unhappy choice and with the shocked reaction of the public to the disclosures before the McClellan committee, some AFL-CIO leaders are now saying that, after all, the trade union movement is a business like any other business and why should anyone expect unions to have higher ethical standards? Big business, so the argument runs, is more corrupt and more ruthless than big labor, and so why should labor be put on the defensive because a few union officials have been corrupted?

Al J. Hayes, head of the International Association of Machinists and chairman of the AFL-CIO Ethical Practices Committee, in an article entitled "Critics in Glass Houses," demands to know why there should be such indignation against organized labor when corruption in other areas has gone almost unnoticed.

"Perhaps moral indignation," Hayes wrote, "like charity should begin at home. Corruption, as I have noted before, is a disease which infects society at large, and its manifestation in the labor movement is merely part of the total picture. I cannot accept with good grace much of the criticism which emanates from others who show far less concern for cleaning their own houses than the labor movement has shown."

He went on to cite several instances of corruption in business that got little attention in the press.

But for many in the labor movement it is not enough for the pot to call the kettle black. These leaders who insist the AFL-CIO must clean house are making an issue of the Hutchesson case.

A sharp skirmish occurred at the recent council meeting in Chicago when, with some reluctance, the council agreed to take jurisdiction in the Hutchesson matter but to postpone action.

Hutchesson's allies in the building trades pointed out that he was not accused of misusing union funds. When he took the Fifth Amendment before a Senate committee he was being questioned about a deal that netted $80,000, divided among his alleged co-conspirators (including two other Carpenters' Union executives) who were said to have had inside information about a projected highway in Indiana. Was this fraud, as had been suggested before the committee, or was it just a business deal such as any business man might have entered into? And Hutchesson, who inherited a considerable fortune as well as control of the union from his father, was not using union funds.

But this was not a sufficient answer for Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers and James B. Carey of the International Union of Electrical Workers. Reuther challenged the right of the unions to a double standard of morality. Carey, insisting the council must take action, read from the AFL-CIO's own code of ethical practices:

"The American labor movement has even been quick in its denunciation of public officials who betray their trust. We have been equally critical of businessmen who have used corrupt methods and bribery to gain their selfish, acquisitive ends. We must be equally quick to recognize and condemn those instances of racketeering, corruption and disregard for ethical standards when they occur inside our labor movement."

The council meets in New York on September 24 for a showdown on the accused union leaders. Beyond Hutchesson are Hoffa and the Teamsters' Union officials who ducked behind the Fifth Amendment. Whether big labor can survive the shattering impact of this challenge is a question no one can answer with certainty.

Sure You Want A Paris Dress?

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Newsfeatures Beauty Editor

The fall fashion circus is over in Paris. The buyers are just as confused as the public.

It happens every spring and fall, when Americans rush to Paris by the thousands, to be on hand for the opening gun signaling the start of another fashion furore. Papers headline advance reports of knee-high skirts, or disappearing waistslines or the banning of bosoms. It all makes good reading and better conversation.

Then, when the tumult and shouting have died down, members of the haute couture say they didn't really mean to eliminate the bosom or lift skirts above the knees.

American buyers bring back the Paris models they have bought, turn them over to designers for "inspirational ideas" and when the new trends reach the U. S. public they have turned into wearable, discreet, strictly American clothes.

It's all in the spirit of good, clean fun. The French haute couture gives the Americans a good show for their money. Nobody expects the more bizarre Paris styles to be reproduced exactly for the American public. And if the average customer doesn't take all the uproar too seriously no harm has been done.

This fall's Paris styles have been described variously as "gunny-sacks with diamonds," "glorified barrels," and "shapeless bags." Nobody really gets offended at these frank expressions of opinion by the more outspoken American fashion writers.

Denim Is Getting Glamour Treatment

"Dealmexicement" is a brand-new fashion word this fall, a new chapter in the story of chic clothes made of rugged, old-fashioned fabrics.

Work-fabric denim, which makes rough-and-ready work clothes and enough blue jeans every year to outfit every man, woman and child in the U. S., is the newest darling of the designers.

Blue jeans themselves get in on the big "denim excitement," incidentally. Girls are wearing them trimly belted, with stunning shirts and shoes. New York's models have started a new fad: They're wearing their jeans with glamour-tops for a new kind of casual elegance "at home."

This Is The New Edsel

Ford Motor Company's entry in the medium price car field, available in 18 models in four series—Ranger, Pacer, Corsair and Citation. The entire line is being shown publicly September 4. Shown here is the Pacer four-door hardtop. Vertical grille and dual headlights are marks of distinction in the front-end design.

Ford Unveils New Edsel Line; Public Showing Set For Sept. 4

America's first new auto line in many a year—Ford Motor Company's Edsel—goes on public view over the country September 4. In many places, dealers will be established for the premiere display. The Edsel design features a new vertical front styling, and its engineering highlights include "Tele-touch" push button transmission. Under actual development since July, 1954, mechanical and engineering prototypes of the Edsel have been driven more than 1,500,000 miles in comprehensive test programs. Available in 18 models and four series—Ranger, Pacer, Corsair and Citation—the Edsel medium price car line offers two convertibles, sedans, two-door and four-door hardtops and five station wagons. One convertible is available in the Pacer series and the other in the Citation, at the top of the line. Dual headlights, self-adjusting brakes which automatically compensate for brake lining wear, safety rim wheels and four barrel carburetion are standard equipment with all Edsels. Also standard, with purchase of a heater, is a unique single-dial heater-defroster-ventilator control which eliminates the standard, but complex, system of levers, knobs and air vent doors.

Illinois Pupils Hold Integration Boycott

OLP III — School officials are waiting to see if white pupils will continue their boycott against integration in Colp's grade school. Not a single white pupil showed up yesterday, although 40 to 45 had been expected for the first day of classes. There were about 60 Negroes. Colp is a town of about 250 in the southern tip of Illinois 80 miles southeast of St. Louis and 40 miles from the Kentucky line. About half the residents are Negroes. "It is not my intention to make anyone do anything he doesn't want to do," said William Hatchett, the Negro who heads the school board. He said he had no intention of calling a special meeting. "I don't believe the boycott was organized," said Archie Mosley, the school's principal and also a Negro. "I didn't expect a 100 per cent turnout, but I did think there would be a few who wouldn't be so prejudiced." There are four Negroes on the seven-man school board and it voted 4-3 about two months ago to integrate the town's two grade schools. Classes were scheduled in the building used for the Negro school. Parents of the white pupils petitioned for annexation of their School District. The board of school trustees for Williamson County approved the petition. The Colp school board challenged it a month ago in a suit backed by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

No Trees Yet

LUDINGTON, Mich. — The City Commission plans to meet soon to scrap such antiquated city laws as running across a bridge and speeding at more than six miles an hour on a bicycle. But one old 1874 law the commissioners probably will retain makes it illegal to plant a tree in the middle of the street.

U.S. Officials Show Interest In Soviet ICBM Statement

WASHINGTON — Sen. Jackson (D-Wash) said today the Russians are engaging in "ballistic blackmail" in announcing they have tested successfully an intercontinental missile. Sen. Symington (D-Mo) said the announcement yesterday "is the ultimate step in the propaganda use of this weapon. . . . But Symington said in Miami Beach that "in the past . . . we have all noticed that when they (the Russians) say they have something in the way of this type of weapons, it turned out later to be fact." At the Pentagon, the Russian claim aroused intense interest but no public comment. However, there was no disposition by defense officials to disparage the Soviet claim. Although the United States has never successfully launched an intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) — one with a planned range of 5,000 miles or so—it has fired shorter range ballistic-type weapons. Adm. Arthur W. Radford, who stepped out recently as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has said the American program to develop long-range missiles is a good one. He said he was satisfied with it. Some members of Congress voiced skepticism of the Soviet claim, but Rep. Patterson (R-Conn) did not share this view. "We who serve on the House

Big Spring (Texas) Herald, Tues., Aug. 27, 1957 7
gards the Soviet announcement as "a very serious matter."
"If it is true, it will require a complete re-evaluation of our defense plans," he said. "Any nation with a sufficient number of intercontinental missiles could de- liver sudden death anywhere in the world."
Senators Saltonstall (R-Mass) and Bush (R-Conn) said the Russian announcement was too vague to be credited as truthful unless it was backed with more evidence.

Special Task Force Hunts For Clues In Mutilation Death

CHICAGO — A special roving police task force today hunted painstakingly for clues in the West Side neighborhood of a 15-year-old girl whose headless body was found floating in two oil cans in Lake Michigan last week.

Wisconsin Votes On Successor To McCarthy

MILWAUKEE — Wisconsin voters choose a successor to the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy in a special election today with both major party candidates predicting victory. Favored to win in a state that has not sent a Democrat to the U.S. Senate in 25 years was three-time Republican Gov. Walter Kohler Jr., a firm supporter of President Eisenhower. The supporters of Democratic candidate William Proxmire, however, could see nothing but victory for their nominee, who has been defeated in three tries for the governor's post—including two beatings by Kohler. The stormy, 10-year-career of McCarthy, who died May 2, was expected to have little bearing on the outcome. A McCarthy vote as special in the election is for the remainder of McCarthy's term which ends in January 1959. Philo Nash, Democratic state chairman, predicted flatly that Proxmire would win, contending there was disagreement among Republican party people. The race between Kohler and Proxmire apparently tightened recently due to heavy campaigning by both candidates, but a Proxmire victory would be considered an upset. The outcome of the election will not immediately affect Senate control. The Democrats now hold a 49-45 edge. Kohler, 53, completed his third term as governor in January. He was out of the political picture for only a few months before entering the primary race this spring. Proxmire, 41, has been campaigning statewide almost continuously since early in 1952 when he ran for governor the first of three successive times. Kohler won the GOP Senate nomination in a seven-man race on a platform that included all-out support of President Eisenhower. He was the only candidate taking such a stand. A liberal Democrat, Proxmire has the support of organized labor. There are three independent candidates in the field but none were expected to provide a serious threat. Howard H. Boyle Jr., a Milwaukee attorney, ran on "the principles of Joe McCarthy," but has done little campaigning. The other independents are Mrs. Georgia Cozzini, Milwaukee, Socialist Labor candidate for vice president of the United States last fall, and Douglas Wheaton, a political unknown.

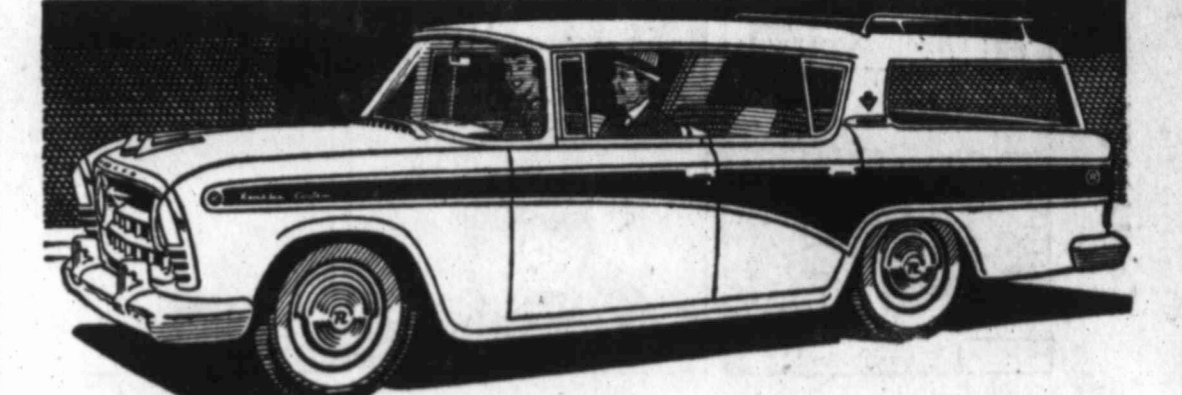

Craig, Baird Tie Again On TV Quiz

NEW YORK — Dairy farmer Harold Craig, Granville, N. Y., and industrial consultant John Baird, Los Angeles, played their second tie game last night on NBC-TV's Twenty-One quiz. When they continue next Monday night, Craig will be ahead 11-10. The stakes are $1,500 a point in the difference between the scores. Craig, 26, already has won $84,000. He could win or lose as much as $31,500 next week.

Law Rules Beer's Okay Inside Church

WICHITA, Kan. — It's illegal to sell beer within 250 feet of a church or school in Wichita, but there is no state or city law against dispensing beer inside a church. That ruling was given yesterday by City Atty. Fred Aley after City Commissioner John Stevens said he had seen bingo games and beer drinking at a church affair. License Collector Frederick Denny said he had issued a beer license to the community center connected with St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church.

Daniel Water Unit
May Delay Start
Of Special Session

AUSTIN (AP)—Gov. Daniel's announced 100-member water planning committee may delay the proposed special session of the Legislature, a source close to the governor said yesterday.

Daniel has said October would be the best month for the special session, if he calls it. Besides a water program, Daniel has said he will ask legislators for an effective lobby control law.

The water committee will begin Sept. 9 to plan a water program "tailored to fit the needs of local areas," Daniel said.

The source, who declined to be named, said time was the factor in the probable postponement of the special session. Asked whether the committee would need more than a month to work on the state-wide plan, the source said: "You're probably right."

Daniel said he would name the committee this week. He invited the State Board of Water Engineers and the now-defunct Texas Water Resources Committee members to participate.

Uncle Roy:
Sweat Glands Work Hard In Hot Weather

By RAMON COFFMAN
Among the many glands in a human being are some which control the saliva in the mouth. Others are located in the skin and provide oil. Still others send sweat through the pores. Perhaps you have heard about the careful mother who told her daughter: "Never say that you are 'sweating.' An animal sweats. A man perspires. A lady simply glows."

Whether we sweat or perspire or glow, we do a good deal of it. On many a day, a man who works with his muscles will give off a great deal of perspiration.

So much perspiration comes through the skin in some cases that I hesitate to put down the figures. They are hard to believe. A human being has about two and half million sweat glands. These send moisture through pores to the surface of the skin.

Let us suppose that each sweat gland produced one drop a day. That would be two and a half million drops—or 40 gallons, two quarts and one pint!

The daily average is less than one fiftieth part of a standard drop for each sweat gland. A man who works with his muscles will lose more moisture than one who works chiefly with his brain. The brow of the Village Blacksmith was "wet with honest sweat."

On a hot, humid day a man who works hard (on a farm or elsewhere) may lose more than two gallons of perspiration in a day! Such a worker drinks several quarts of water to make up for the loss.

For SCIENCE section of your scrapbook.
If you want a free copy of the illustrated leaflet, YOUR BODY AT WORK, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Uncle Roy in care of this newspaper.

Businessmen See Deflation Ahead

Editor's Note—Talk of deflation is spreading from Wall Street. Main Street, Sam Dawson, Associated Press business news analyst, discussed the talk and the business trends that gave birth to it in a two-part series starting today.

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—The steam in the inflation boiler isn't thumping as loudly. More talk is heard today of the chance that deflation may be ahead.

Businessmen and stock market traders are paying more heed to the scattered signs of industrial slowdown and of cautious or reluctant buying.

And when prices of some commodities fall or price cutting breaks out in consumer goods here and there much more notice is being taken than was just a few weeks back.

What does it add up to? So far, the trends are more of a possibility than of jelled fact. But even some top government officials are now saying we may have hit the peak—in interest rates, in production facility expansion, in national income.

Until mid July the stock market was in an inflationary mood. Then the professionals either took to the sidelines or started selling in the notion, right or wrong, that the fall business pickup would be small or nonexistent.

The bond market was in a slump while the inflation theory was rampant. Then the head of the federal reserve opined that interest rates might have hit their peak, and bonds looked better and buying rallied their prices.

The chiefs of the New York and Cleveland districts of the federal reserve later swung into line with the higher rates.

The federal reserve's top man in Washington told senators a trend is developing—toward more saving and less spending on the part of both consumers and business. More spending would feed inflationary fires. More saving will help quench them.

The outgoing undersecretary of the Treasury reported signs that the tight money policy was finally working.

The Treasury's top money manager added that some industries may find they were overconfident of demand when they expanded their capacity to produce.

Big city bankers joined the chorus. The First National City Bank of New York, the nation's second largest, reported businessmen guided in their ordering more by the chance of falling prices than of rising ones.

Chicago's Northern Trust Co. noted consumer spending being influenced adversely by reluctance to pay higher prices.

Small city bankers agree. A Boise, Idaho, banker tells the trade paper, the American Banker, that "the present cycle—at least, in its more violent phases—is about at an end."

Most bankers and most business men see a slowdown in the boom—but they don't see deflation as anything more than a possibility. Tomorrow: the trends in business that are cited as deflation signals.

Aly Khan's Brother Weds British Model

BELLERIVE, Switzerland (AP)—Aly Khan's younger brother, Prince Sadruddin, today married exotic London model Nina Dyer in a school house in this Lake Geneva village.

Nina and Sadruddin sat in oak arm chairs beneath a picture of contented cows munching grass in a pasture as the prince placed a diamond circlet on the bride's finger.

Earlier plans for the 27-year-old bride and the 24-year-old younger son of the late Aga Khan III to exchange intertwined gold and silver wedding bands were dropped at the last minute.

After the civil service, the wedding party drove to Sadruddin's $750,000 chateau nearby for a Moslem religious ceremony.

Nina, whose divorce from German industrialist Baron Heinrich von Thyssen netted her several million dollars, wore a $750 grey organdy dress by Christian Dior. A matching wide-brimmed straw hat and a large bouquet of red roses completed the outfit.

The groom, Prince Aly, and the latter's two sons, the new Aga Khan IV and Prince Ameen, all wore formal morning clothes.

After a speech of congratulation the mayor handed the bride a new Swiss passport made out to Princess Shirin (it means sweetness) Khan, the name Nina chose when she adopted her husband's Moslem religion.

The usually phlegmatic Swiss mobbed the members of the wedding party as they arrived in the schoolyard, but in contrast with Aly's whoop-de-do Riviera marriage to Rita Hayworth, the wedding was a small family affair because of the death six weeks ago of the Aga Khan III. Only 29 guests were invited to the religious ceremony and the buffet lunch to follow.
