Officials Mull 'Pirate' Case

KEY WEST, Fla. UP-Officials pondered today what charges to bring against three runaway teenage boys who boarded a yacht in the Florida Keys and held a family captive aboard her.

The boys, all from San Antonio, were-questioned yesterday by Solicitor Allan Cleare, who also in-terviewed Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sias and their four children.

The Sias family, which owns the yacht, Fiesta II, reported the boys were polite although they gave orders at the point of a rifle.

The youngsters were identified as Tommy Edwards, 15, Johnny Cox, 16, and Mike Moore, 17. They surrendered after one of the Sias children managed to get word of the family's plight to a dock worker at a refueling stop. Deputy sheriffs were notified and the boat was pursued

The Sias family had been on a trip from their home at Winter Park, Fla., where the father manufactures packing house machin-ery. The boys boarded the yacht Tuesday night.

Authorities said the boys will not be charged with piracy because there is no evidence they took the yacht out on the high seas

Instead Of Premiums:

The prime purpose of a service station is to give you the best possible service for your automobile.

The offering of other lures, in the form of stamps or alleged bonuses, simply robs Peter to pay Paul – and in the end you likely will get a lesser quality of service.

Your service station has always operated on an extremely close margin of profit in order to provide you with one of the nation's biggest bargains ... the best in motor fuels and lubricants. This enables you to enjoy more driving and to keep your car in good condition.

The many extra courtesies and services you get at your service station are expressions of appreciation for your patronage. Rising costs of materials and labor make it difficult to provide the same level of services which will contribute to your comfort and to the appearance and long life of your automobile.

We believe that you prefer honest value received in the form of prompt, pleasant and complete service to the alternative of a reduction of manpower and possible skimping to pay for will-of-the-wisp lures.

In the business of servicing your automobiles and trucks, it is true as it is in every other realm - you don't get something for nothing.

This is why, we, the undersigned, will not offer stamps or other artificial lures after midnight Jan. 3. Instead, we will pledge ourselves to continue to give you the best possible service you can enjoy at prices you can afford to pay.

A Bible Thought For Today

For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. (Phillipians 1:21)

What Our Nation Needs

This is a growing country, a building country, an inventive country, a prosperous country, a working country. We now number 172,800,000 souls, three million above the figure for just one year ago. Babies are being born at a rapid rate, new immigrants are arriving. There are new demands for shoes and ships and sealing wax, new appetites to satisfy, new ambitions to be fulfilled.

As a people we are hard workers, in spite of the impression some foreigners get from the increasing leisure-time which our genius for short-cuts and mass production has provided. If there is a job to do we can do it.

Our biggest single fault as a people is an inclination to be over-trustful and over-optimistic in a world that permits of neither for very long at a time.

We sincerely want peace, but we tend to forget that peace and freedom are not natural endowments of mankind, and that we can't have them for the asking. They have to be worked and sacrificed for, they have to be guarded and protected against rapacious people who go envying us our good fortune.

Our greatest national need now is to realize to the full our obligations as citizens-to maintain peace, justice and tranquillity at home the better to resist the warned is to be forearmed.

The only condition of our survival, is that we must recognize the dangers that beset us, and act courageously, boldly and without stint to meet them with all the material, moral and spiritual strength of our great people.

Our New Community Leader

Quimby, now in his 27th year, brings the quality of youth to this exacting position. He probably would be the first to admit that he may be lacking in some of the elements of middle-age maturity, yet he is not lacking in experience. His nearly five years in the profession have been characterized by accomplishment. positiveness and imagination. Apparently, Kim his record, he not

In the time that Wayne B. Smith has headed the chamber a vigorous program has been carried out. Several projects have brought fruit, and some new practices were instituted to promote cooperative efforts. Thus, Quimby inherits a healthy, going institution.

We can but reflect that the last time we looked to our good neighbor. Colorado City, to provide us with a chamber manager that it was the beginning of an association of greatest significance to Fortunately, the Board had defenders. Edward M. Bernstein, director of research and statistics of the International Monetary Fund, declared: "There is no necessary conflict between high production and employment and monetary stability. The essential point is to have good working relations between the Federal Reserve System, the Treasury, and the Council of Economic Advisers." Bernstein does not consider it necessary to subordinate the Board to the Treasury. or the Council of Economic Advisers, or make it part of government. Prof. Angell had suggested that a National Economic Commission (not to be confused with a National Monetary Commission) be established. This parallels a proposal made in 1956 by Elliott V. Bell, publisher of "Business Week." for a National Economic Council In the interest of scientific rather than emotional inquiry. Herbert Stein, research director of the Committee for Economic Development, said that CED, with the help of a grant from the Ford Foundation, was setting up a monetary commission to survey our money and credit institutions-how they work, how they can be improved, and what must be done to increase or decrease coordination between the Reserve Board and other government agencies.

nounced his belief that Congress should preme Court in the same manner that Congress may now override a Recsidential veto.

Rogers bases his statement on his belief that the present setup makes the Supreme Court "a dictatorial tribunal from which there is no appeal." He suggests the court might declare such a law unconstitutional; therefore, he will write his bill not only as regular legislation but also in the form of a constitutional amendment.

I fail to follow the good Congressman's reasoning. He overlooks the fact that Congress already has power to override the Supreme Court, since Congress takes the first step in any attempt at constitutional amendment. He's proposing use of present powers of overriding the court to increase those powers. He also overlooks the fact that no case presented before the court is final for all time, and can always be brought up again on another appeal not itself become a dictatorial body. Consider some of the frenetic legislation passed by Congress and killed by the Supreme Court in the past century and a half, and you may marvel at the wisdom of our founding fathers in setting up that high tribunal as a balance of power against power-mad presidents and Congressmen, just as the administrative and legislative branches were set up as bastions one against the other. The wisdom of our founding fathers went even further in investing final power in the people-by the ballot over the administration and Congress, and by constitutional amendment over the Supreme Court.

I think I would trust to the wisdom of Washington, Jefferson, Franklin, et al, Another thing Rogers apparently doesn't rather than that of any Congressman. -BOB SMITH

Inez Robb Queen Makes The Best-Dressed List

At long last, Queen Elizabeth II has achieved the ultimate accolade: She has been named one of the World's Ten Best Dressed Women. The girl who has everything has finally won the only crown missing from her collection. Ruffles and flourishes, please!

It has been a long, tough fight, Ma. But Her Majesty has finally won a toehold on the ladder of fame. I am convinced this will do more to cement Anglo-American relations and achieve a true rapport between the great English-speaking nations than anything since Gracie Fields. Certainly, it beats any policy John Foster has come up with.

True, the Queen wound up in fifth place on the best-dressed list, but this isn't bad for a young woman who has scarcely been an added starter heretofore in the fashion sweepstakes. And, true, the Duchess of Windsor is still ahead, having tied. for second place with Mrs. Winston Guest. But Her Majesty beat out two other members of the family who heretofore have been "regulars" on the list. They are her sister, Princess Margaret, and her aunt, the Duchess of Kent, The Princess and the Duchess didn't even get a lookin on the 1957 list. Apparently, their slips have been showing.

pity. Her Majesty can always point to the fact that she won a free election by secret ballot in the New World and that it isn't too late to leave nome and start all over in a more friendly environment. There were years just before and just after her marriage when fashion critics looked down their noses at Elizabeth. "Matronly" was the kindest word they used to describe her clothes and her appearance. The bolder came right out with it and said "dowdy."

Then persistent reports began to circulate that Prince Philip was exerting more and more influence on his wife's choice of clothing, with a consequent and steady increase in chic.

At any rate, during her Canadian-American visit last autumn, Her Majesty was much more smartly turned out than at the time of her previous U. S. visit six years earlier. There was still a lingering feeling that some of her daytime costumes were not happily chosen, and that her hats were too old for her. But her evening costumes were magnificent. There is no other word for them. When combined with the royal jewels, they knocked the spots off all competition.

I have a hunch that when the fashion writers marked their ballots, they thought of Her Majesty's dreamy evening clothes Well, sir, a hereditary job can be a very fine thing, but there is something mighty exhilarating about winning an election on one's own. And just wait until Princess Margaret comes back to Buck House suggesting that there's a feather too many on this hat or the Duchess of Kent a ruffle too many on that dress! erston, vice chairman, will be relieved to know that the economists punched themselves out verbally on the money systern and the Reserve Board.

The Board failed to stop inflation. It is the deus ex machina of the current recession. It lacks the powers to preserve stability

So, Martin and Balkerston can conclude that the Board is a vital, useful, indispensable American institution, not only to economists, but to President Eisenhower, politicians, government officials, Republicans, Democrats, the automobile industry, business men, and just plain you and me.

John Tillotson, a 17th Century preacher. declared: "If God were not a necessary Being of himself, he might almost seem to be made for the use and benefit of man." Voltaire epigrammatized that: "If God did not exist, it would be necessary to invent him." Ditto scapegoats, whipping boys, devils, and doormats. The Federal Reserve today is America's economic punching bag.

Prof. James W. Angell, of Columbia University, jabbed the Board thus: "The American economic system has fallen far short, in recent decades, of reaching top levels of performance. Even since 1945, we have had two substantial if brief recessions, nearly a 60 per cent rise in consumer prices, and now the threat of another serious setback in business and employment. Much of the responsibility for this unsatisfactory performance is to be found in the structure of our monetary and fiscal system."

To that, Prof. Broadus Mitchell of Rutgers, added an extemporaneous haymaker, sparing neither economists nor the money managers: "Changes are happening in our economy with the twinkling speed of light, but only in the American Economic Association do you find a majority of members slow to change. Economists ought to wake up and live. Time was when credit influenced production. Haven't we got to the point where production sets the pace for money and credit?". Inference: The Reserve and money management are out of date. . John G. Gurley, of Brookings, Institution, said: "I know a man who'd willingly shoot every member of the Federal Re-

What Others Say

Texans are fortunate in that the University of Texas administration recognizes there still is room for considerable scholastic improvement rather than claiming Texas is one of the "top 15" state universities in the country.

Dr. Logan Wilson, president of the University said that several schools in the East and Big Ten (Middle West) could be rated ahead of Texas.

"We are getting better," he said. "But we still are a long way from being the kind of state university Texas needs and deserves.

As long as officials recognize the need for and work for improvement, the students are bound to benefit.

-CORPUS CHRISTI CALLER

The census bureau won't inquire into a person's religion when it counts noses in 1960. Perhaps it is just as well. The question as the bureau proposed to put it is meaningless. An answer in one word or by a label has nothing to do with devotion or faith or any other sort of feeling or knowledge. Such an answer is too casual, too thin of substance; in fact, too little to be depended upon. The only information that would matter is not a thing of quantitative terms, like statistics, but a qualitative thing, like the strength, nature and depths of one's belief. No census, taker may get at that.

> The Communists, regrettably, are supported by some elements in the West which are always willing to make a "deal." Appeasement of Khrushchev can prove of no more avail than did appeasement of Hitler, but nevertheless the sponsors of such a policy are willing now, as in the '30's, to abandon principle in favor of compromise.

> In Britain, which usually professes a high regard for moral principle as against expediency, there has nevertheless been outspoken criticism of the American policy of refusing recognition to Red China. This is partly because Hong Kong, an important British colony on the mainland of China, is at the mercy of the Peiping regime. There is a pressure constantly, too, for more trade with Red China, and this in turn causes elements in the commercial world to seek to disregard moral principle in favor of materialistic considerations.

The situation now emerging with respect to East Germany may open the eyes of the entire western world, including the dissenters in Great Britain. For diplomatic recognition cannot be honorably given to a government just because it is in control of a region or area on . the theory that this is the customary rule. There are other considerations to be taken into account.

Today diplomatic recognition means a vote of approval for what could result in a permanent setup. It ratifies government by force and the illegal control of territory whose peoples are really captives. It discourages any chance of reunification and encourages the aggressor to pursue his exploitation of neighboring countries.

If ever the moral issue involved in extending diplomatic recognition was plainly underlined, it is in the case of the demand coming now from Moscow that the captive regime of East Germany be given a place in the family of nations as a legitimate government on a parity with the free government of West Germany. This is a typical example of what the Communists mean by "peaceful coexistence." It's a synonym, really for "peaceful surrender.'

Both hair styles are asymme tric, featuring hair brushed sleekly back and away from one side of the face, brought forward on the other. This kind of hair treatment is dramatic, and demands small, well-placed ears, since the ear is emphasized when hair is brushed away.

Both coiffures also feature bangs, one wispy and separated in the casual fashion, similar to Italian hair styles. The other is a double wave. Bangs hairdos are very chic on brunettes, emphasized against the light skin. Dark hair must be kept washed and brushed faithfully to look its best, reminds Ruel, and he suggests color-rinsing it occasionally to give it added gloss.

"Never neglect your hair, thinking dirt won't show because it is dark," Ruel says. "Many brunettes think they can get away another day or two without a needed shampoo. But that psychology, is all wrong."

gram for Korean War veterans is covered by a separate law which will continue it through 1962, and it is not involved in the current effort.

In a letter to Sen. Sparkman (D-Ala), chairman of the Senate Housing subcommittee, Thurmond contended subsequent events have knocked the props from under arguments advanced by President Eisenhower in vetoing a Veterans Housing Bill passed by Congress last summer.

The bill would have put up 200 million dollars more for direct housing loans by the VA to veterans in rural and small town areas who were unable to borrow at interest rates up to 412 per cent. The bill would also have extended the GI loan program into 1959. In killing the measure, Eisenhower termed it discriminatory contending it would provide relief in the rural areas but not in the big cities. Eisenhower also said he considered the 41/2 per cent limit was unrealistically low in light of the going interest rates in the money markets at that time. Congress had refused to approve the 5 per cent interest ceil-ing the administration had recom-mended for guaranteed loans.
