Snow Traps Hundreds Of W. Texas Drivers

Valley Residents Flee Floodwaters

By The Associated Press A surge of destructive weather sent up to 1,800 persons fleeing their flooded homes in South Texas as and stranded as many as 600 motorists in snow in West and Northwest Texas Monday. Worst hit from floods were the Lower Rio Grande Valley and areas around Corpus Christi, about 130 miles up the coast.

The snow and rain that extended from central New Mexico across West and South Central Texas was touched off by a cold air mass that moved into the area over the weekend. Snow was still falling at Carlsbad in southeastern New Mexico early Monday but at the northern edge of the snow blanket around El Paso and Tularosa, N.M., and Amarillo skies were clearing.

RAINS STILL FALL Early Monday rains were still falling south of a line running diagonally across Texas from El Paso to Beaumont, posing new threats to already flooded South Texas. As many as 600 vehicles remained stranded in Odessa, Pecos, Alpine and Marfa in West Texas Monday as the heavy snow, ranging up to 20 inches in depth all but stopped highway travel in eastern New Mexico and adjacent areas of Texas.

KNEE-DEEP WATER The water spread over 71 blocks in Edinburg, mostly in residential sections of small, wooden houses built close to the ground. Water there was more than knee deep. The water covered the area as far as one could see and remained there, still and unmoving. There was no current. Water from the Edinburg area was expected to move on to the

Inch Of Rain Puts Land In Top Shape

Howard County escaped the blizzard which swept areas north and west of here over the weekend and benefited by an inch of welcome moisture, a check of reports showed Monday. An average rainfall of at least an inch was recorded in nearly all parts of the county. Some sections had more than an inch. Jimmy Taylor, county farm agent, said that the moisture could not have been better arranged. He reported that the lack of rains in December had caused some surface drying out of the land but that deep moisture was still abundant. The inch which fell over the weekend, the agent pointed out, would put the land back in excellent condition. There was little or no runoff from the rain. Bulk of the moisture was from a steady drizzle and from a light fall of extremely saturated snow. There was no intense cold in Big Spring during the period. It was only 34 degrees at the lowest on Sunday night and 40 degrees was the high for Sunday.

Final Arguments To Be Heard Today On Pipeline Quarrel Texas Oil and Gas Assn., West Central Texas Oil and Gas Assn., Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Assn. and the East Texas Oil Assn. These groups accused the carriers of discrimination in allowing some wells to use the pipelines while denying that privilege to other wells in the same field. Briefs filed by the pipeline companies asserting they have kept up with the state's oil development and have "pursued a sound and consistent policy with respect to well connections." They claim the pipeline firms have not earned excessive profits and have not lagged in maintaining transportation facilities. They also said the independents need a market rather than transportation facilities. Service Pipe Line Co., of Tulsa,

3 U. S. Moms Enter Red China To Visit Sons

HONG KONG (AP)—Three American mothers crossed apprehensively into Red China today to visit their imprisoned sons—almost three years after the Communists first invited them to come. The three mothers are: Mrs. Mary Downey, New Britain, Conn., mother of John Downey, 27, who is serving a life term. She is accompanied by her 25-year-old son William. Mrs. Ruth Redmond, Yonkers, N. Y., mother of 38-year-old Hugh Redmond, whom she has not seen for 11 years. He also has been sentenced to life in prison. Mrs. Philip Fecteau, Lynn, Mass., mother of Richard Fecteau, 30, sentenced to 20 years. They are the first Americans to make a nonofficial visit to Red China with State Department sanction since the Korean War. U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold was accompanied by his American aide William Rinaldo on his 1955 mission to Peking.

Another American, Los Angeles Atty. A. J. Wirin, crossed the small bridge into Red China shortly after the mothers. Traveling separately, he is seeking information to defend John Powell, former American editor of a Shanghai newspaper who is now charged with sedition. The judge told the government he would dismiss the case unless Wirin was allowed to gather information in Red China. On Jan. 21, 1955, the Communists first invited the mothers to visit their sons, who are imprisoned on spy charges. The State Department refused to let them go under its policy of banning all travel to Red China by U. S. citizens because the United States has no diplomatic relations with the Peiping regime. The department suddenly reneged last month, about three weeks after Wirin got his passport. Redmond was a businessman in Shanghai. Downey and Fecteau were aboard a plane shot down during the Korean War and were accused by the Chinese of dropping supplies to anti-Communist agents in Manchuria.

Champ Steers Set Sale Mark

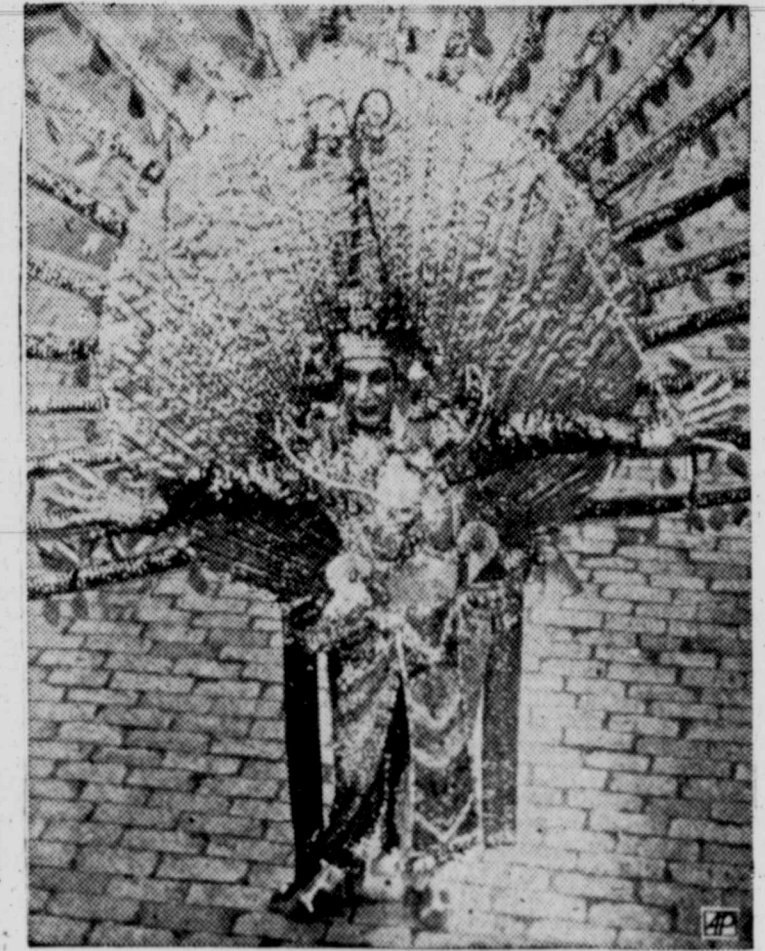

Bobby Sale's 1,140-pound reserve champion steer of the Arizona National Livestock Show duplicated the feat of the champion steer shown by Sue White and Lloyd Robinson of Big Spring. The partnership steer, a 1,100-pounder, brought a record $3.20 per pound from the Bruce Miller Cafeteria in Phoenix. Bobby's steer also set a record for reserve champions when it commanded $2.10 per pound from the Hotel Westward Ho in Phoenix. Trophies and banners were presented to the exhibitors of the champion steers by Marilyn Van Derber, reigning Miss America from Denver, Colo.

Tech Students Give Cops A Snow Job

LUBBOCK (AP)—Texas Tech students made the most of the heavy snowfall that blanketed their campus here yesterday. They staged snowball fights, then made huge snowballs which they rolled into the streets to block automobiles. When patrolmen were sent out to break up the traffic jams, the students halted the patrol car with one of the big snowballs. Then when the officers were busy chasing students who had been throwing smaller snowballs at them, the students let the air out of the patrol car's tires.

Costume is covered with thousands of sequins, even over the marcher's face.

More Rockets? Cape Canaveral Is Busy Again

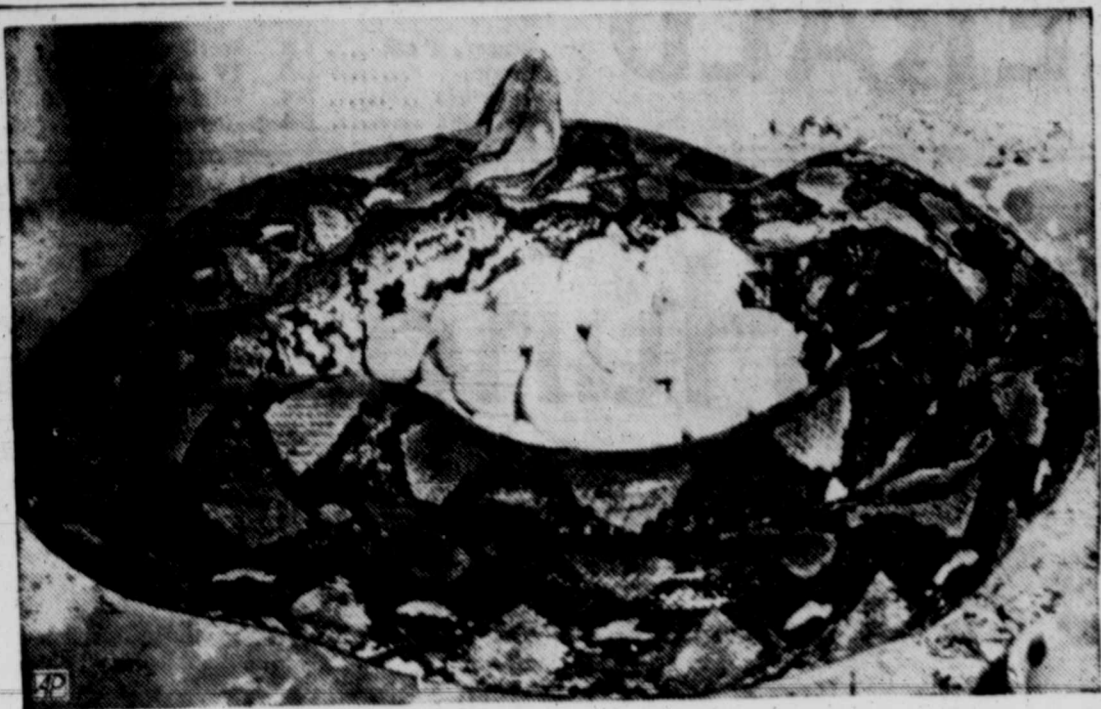

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Several ballistic missiles stood poised in servicing towers today and rocketmen converged on this Florida east coast launching area in strength that suggested firings were in prospect. Officials were mum but there was some basis for speculation that satellite launching attempts soon will be made. Three of the big rockets on launching pads were Atlas intercontinental ballistic missiles. One was test-fired on its test Saturday with no word on whether the stationary performance tryout was a success. At least one Air Force Thor, an intermediate missile, also rested in its tower. There was heightened activity around a tower shrouding a Navy Vanguard rocket, which was designed to throw a satellite into orbit in space. Army technicians were in the cape area. The Defense Department has authorized the Army to try to put a satellite aloft with its Jupiter-C rocket. Vanguard I was a failure last Dec. 6 when it exploded on its launching pad. Spokesman for the Vanguard project in Washington said four experimental firings with "baby" moons are planned before an attempt scheduled in March is made to throw a larger satellite into orbit around the earth. Windy, rainy weather, unfit for firings in recent days, was expected to continue at least through today. But heavy registration of engineers and rocketmen at area motels gave a rise to a belief that busy days lie ahead. Some motels reported they were booked solid for this week and longer, and turned new patrons away.

Parents Charged In Students' Truancy

Clyde Rowe, visiting teacher for the Big Spring schools, in cooperation with John Richard Coffee, Howard County attorney, has filed three complaints in the court of Walter Grice, justice of the peace, charging failure of parents to send their children to school. Initial case of the three was before Grice this morning. Mrs. Lupe Zapata, who had been arrested on Saturday, was the first defendant to face the court. She is accused in the complaint filed by Coffee and Rowe with keeping her 12-year-old twin daughters and their 10-year-old sister out of school after being warned by Rowe to comply with the law. No disposition had been made of the case at noon. Rowe told the court that he had provided clothing for the three girls and arranged for them to have meal tickets for free meals. The other cases, which Coffee said would be prosecuted, include one against Joe Trevino, who has three children not attending school. The Trevino children are a girl, 12, another 13, and a boy who is 11. Martin Paradez is named in the third complaint, and has a 14-year-old daughter Rowe alleges is being kept out of school. Coffee said that the law specifies that penalty for failure to

2 Workers, Lawyer Fight For Control Of Teamsters

By ROBERT FARRINGTON
NEW YORK (AP)—One hot day last July two men walked into a midtown lawyer's office.

The lawyer was a high-priced specialist who had fought for management against unions for years. The men were lifelong union members trying to get free help in breaking the iron dictatorship of their leaders.

That was the unlikely start of a court fight that may rob James R. Hoffa of a 20-year goal all but in his grasp: the presidency of the 1 1/2-million-member International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

A federal court in Washington is investigating a charge brought on by that July meeting that Hoffa was elected by hand-picked convention delegates. Meanwhile, he cannot make office.

The meeting also led to formation of a committee, a rank-and-file revolt and a cleanup spirit which prevailed when the AFL-CIO ousted the Teamsters for corruption early in December.

The two men who walked into the lawyer's office that July afternoon and sparked the revolt were John Cunningham and Patrick Kennedy, who delivered milk around the city.

They had been battling to clean up their union for more than a decade, but had gotten nowhere. They admired the lawyer, Godfrey P. Schmidt, for a first-class legal licking he handed the Teamster hierarchy last year in an intra-union fight.

Eventually, members of five Teamster locals wound up in Schmidt's office. All had the same complaint: They never had a chance to say who would represent them in voting for the Teamsters' top officers at the convention.

Schmidt, a small, thin-lipped, grey-haired, precise man, did some checking. He says the same pattern was reported to him—an allegation that convention delegates had been hand-picked by local officers friendly to Hoffa.

Schmidt agreed to take the case without fee and found the rebels office space. Thirteen men were picked from the five locals to head the committee. The legal actions were brought in their names.

The chairman and dedicated leader is Cunningham, a veteran of many no-holds-barred battles in one of the toughest unions in America.

IRON SHOWS THROUGH
A milk wagon driver for 17 years, Cunningham is 49, quiet, spare-framed, bald, wears collar-and-tie and looks like a book-keeper. The iron in the man shows through when he talks.

His voice drops to quiet sardonic bitterness as he recounts the things that have "happened" to him since he began to object to lack of financial records and a voting machinery that perpetuated Hoffa's friends in office.

Six of his cars had been wrecked or damaged; eight of his employer's trucks sabotaged.

Obscene midnight telephone calls and deliberately embarrassing scenes in supermarkets have driven his wife to another state, her address a secret.

His employer fired him recently, saying he had been away from work for weeks.

None of his ordeal has shaken him. He's optimistic that he'll win the Washington court fight. He's looking beyond it to the new day of a court-ordered and supervised election.

The sparkplug of the committee, although not a member, is Patrick Kennedy, 47, Cunningham's sidekick in the original talk with Schmidt. Kennedy was expelled with Cunningham from the Milk Drivers' Local 384 three years ago. Cunningham was reinstated recently, but not Kennedy.

Kennedy's right eye has a malevolent half-squint, adding to his general hard-guy appearance. He is blind in that eye. He talks about it tersely, profanely, without self-pity. Five men met him outside his house three years ago. They had iron pipes.

"They tried to kill me," he said contemptuously.

The beating and threats against his life haven't slowed Kennedy. He is the chief organizer for the committee.

Natural Gas Blasts Destroy City Block In Wisconsin City

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Natural gas explosions erupted from underground lines yesterday and set off fires that destroyed most of a city block near Capitol Square.

Simultaneous explosions blew the front out of an auto body shop and caused minor damage at Truax Field, an Air Force base on the city's East Side.

A middle-aged couple were killed when their house blew up.

Fire Chief Edward J. Page said damage probably would total about half a million dollars.

William Hossler of the state fire marshal's office said failure of a regulator valve sent gas under high pressure into lines equipped for low-pressure loads. Explosions occurred where gas seeped through weak points.

Jagged cracks were ripped in pavement in the Bassett Street area and flames shot upward. Firemen kept the flames contained within a square block. It took 15 hours to bring them under control.

William McGrath, 63, a grocery employe, died in a hospital several hours after an explosion destroyed his home. His wife, 54, who was in a second-floor bedroom, was killed.

McGrath said his wife had asked him to investigate a smoky smell coming from the basement and he was part way downstairs when the blast occurred.

Theron A. Brown, superintendent of the Madison Gas and Electric Co., said his crewmen had checked out the last report of a suspected gas leak. He assured residents they had no need to worry about further explosions. More than 40 blocks were closed off as crewmen chopped up streets in search of possible leaks.

At one point, some 200 persons were evacuated. They returned late in the day.

More than 200 ice-covered firemen from Madison's eight companies battled the fires. Three companies extinguished the fire at the Hanson Auto Body Co., where one explosion and fire occurred, and then sped to the Bassett Street area, where the McGrath home was located.

Page, who lives two blocks from the Bassett block, had just gone to bed when he heard the blasts.

"I jumped out of bed and so help me, the flames were so bright you could read a newspaper in my dining room without a light on," he said.

"No matter where you looked there was fire," he said. "Flames

GALVESTON (AP)—The TexMex, bound from Coatzacoaco, Mexico, to Houston, was towed to safety here yesterday after high waves and heavy seas threatened to drive it onto Galveston Beach.

The tugboat, pulling an empty barge, was crippled when a tow line fouled its propeller, and was driven into shallow water. The tug Sturgeon towed it to deeper water.

Elvis' Drafters Have Hard Time

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Things haven't been the same at the draft board since Elvis Presley was ordered up for induction.

Letters and calls have poured in—protesting both the induction order and the subsequent 60-day postponement given the rock 'n' roll singer.

Says Board Chairman Milton Bowers Sr.: "With all due respect to Elvis, who's a nice boy, we've drafted people who are far more important than he is. After all, when you take him out of the entertainment business what have you got left? A truck driver."

"I talk Elvis Presley more than I sleep. A crackpot called me out of bed last night and complained that we didn't put Beethoven in the Army."

"Considering that Beethoven was not an American and has been dead for some time, I suppose he felt we were discriminating against rock 'n' roll music."

Opera Star Comforted

Maria Menghini Callas, opera star, is comforted by party-giver Elsa Maxwell, right, in her dressing room following the star's breakdown after singing the first act of Bellini's "Norma," thus stopping the gala opening of the opera season in Rome, Italy. Hundreds of demonstrators gathered outside the opera house, and police were called to suppress any rioting. Miss Maxwell said the star had a bad cold and tried to go through the performance all the same, but lost her voice at the start of the second act. Miss Callas is shown in street clothes after changing from her opera costume.

Sailor Accuses Marine Of Beating Because Of Prayer

YOKOSUKA, Japan (AP)—An 18-year-old American sailor today accused a Marine guard of beating him up for saying a prayer in the brig at Sasebo naval base.

Sgt. Robert J. Barbuti of Seneca, N. Y., the accused guard, pleaded innocent before a general court-martial to 29 counts of cruelty and maltreatment toward prisoners.

Eight Marine guards at the brig were convicted previously and six were acquitted on similar charges.

"Sgt. Barbuti was always hitting me," Fireman Carlos E. Vota of Amarillo, Tex., testified. Vota spent seven days in the brig after his conviction for insubordination to a petty officer.

He told the eight-man court: "They (Sgt. Barbuti and other brig wardens) made me hold a ruler with hands stretched out. I was so weakened by previous beatings that I closed my eyes and started praying."

"Sgt. Barbuti called me a religious s.o.b. and struck me with his fist in the stomach. . . . I almost passed out."

While Barbuti, a heavy-set, brown-haired Marine of 23, sat impassively, Vota frequently pointed at him while describing beatings he said Barbuti gave him.

Asked by the prosecution whether he suffered ill effects, the sailor said, "I had bruises and bumps on my stomach and chest. . . . I went to the hospital."

Vota said when he came out of the hospital, Barbuti asked him, "are you feeling any better?" Then he "struck me in the stomach. . . . It almost knocked me out. I went blank and dizzy."

Defense counsel Lt. (j.g.) Charles E. Anderson, Cincinnati, asked, "and you didn't complain?"

"No, sir," Vota replied. "Two beatings are worse than one."

Civilian Study Group Claims Military Not Up To Space Age

WASHINGTON (AP)—A civilian study group says the nation's strategy and military forces are out of step with the tempo of the missile age and need big changes and billions more in money.

Defense spending should be increased about three billion dollars each year for the next several years, said a special 21-man panel of the Rockefeller Brothers Fund.

"It appears that the United States is rapidly losing its lead over the U.S.S.R. in the military race," the panel said in a report. "For perhaps the next two years, we still possess a superiority in strategic striking power and any Soviet attack on us would meet a crushing reply. But our position a year or two hence depends on decisions which must be taken immediately. Unless present trends are reversed, the world balance of power will shift in favor of the Soviet bloc."

Summing up findings in a study which began in 1956, the panel concluded among other things that:

1. Strategy "lags behind developments in technology" and "the United States is rapidly losing its lead in the race of military technology." The lag in missiles and space machines "reflects our national complacency."

2. Strategy, as evolved by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is "a patchwork of compromise" among the rival armed forces. The Joint Chiefs of Staff "functions too often as a committee of partisan adversaries engaged in advancing service strategic plans and compromising service differences."

The panel said the JCS chairman "should be in a position to shape strategic planning," with the other members merely advising him. It added the secretary of defense now is compelled to devote much of his time to acting as a referee in service disputes.

3. Combined commands should be created, in which land, sea and air units would come under a single commander with the composition of the combined force patterned to the mission it would perform.

No longer would the chiefs of staff of the services direct military operations of their services. The departments of the Army, Navy and Air Force would become agencies for recruiting and training men and procuring and distributing equipment and supplies.

Even more startling to the observers of military tradition was the group's proposal that all officers above one-star rank cease to be identified with an individual service, becoming officers "of the armed forces of the United States."

This nongovernmental assessment of what's wrong with defense, issued last night in a 15,000-word report, became available to the public while the White House kept secret the report of its own presidentially picked Gaither committee.

As Eisenhower has proposed, the panel said this nation must work closely with other countries in meeting joint security requirements, must help re-equip Allied forces and "must pool with our allies in NATO scientific and technical information."

Among other things, the panel said, this nation must provide NATO allies "with nuclear weapons and delivery systems."

The group agrees that the changes needed in defense, especially the acceleration of weapon production for all the services, will be expensive—perhaps requiring "successive additions on the order of three billion dollars each year for the next several fiscal years." The present defense spending budget is estimated at about 38½ billion dollars; that for next year at about 40 billion dollars.

The report says the United States does have some military advantages over Russia now—a superior industrial base and production know-how; a system of alliances superior to those of Russia because they are based on free association instead of the method of "forced satellites"; superior operational experience in long-range bombers; "superior and more flexible naval power, especially surface naval power."

But there are disadvantages, says the report, noting that the long-range bomber force is always confronted with improving defenses and forward bases are vulnerable to surprise attack.

The 21-man panel, headed by Nelson A. Rockefeller, included scientists, former diplomats, former defense officials and military officers, industrialists, atomic experts, educators, publishers and a labor union representative.

The Rockefeller study group says that perhaps the most difficult thing for this nation to accept is "the reality of our peril." It writes that "A new technology of unprecedented power and destructiveness has placed all nations of the world in dire peril."

An attack on 50 of the most important metropolitan areas would fall upon 55 per cent of the nation's population and 75 per cent of its industry, the report says.

The report concludes that the casualties in such an attack might be 10 to 15 million dead, 15 to 20 million injured, and 25 to 35 million caught in radioactive fallout.

To help reduce the possible toll, the group said "civil defense must be part of our over-all strategic posture" with a program including warning systems and fallout shelters.

As Eisenhower has proposed, the panel said this nation must work closely with other countries in meeting joint security requirements, must help re-equip Allied forces and "must pool with our allies in NATO scientific and technical information."

But there are disadvantages, says the report, noting that the long-range bomber force is always confronted with improving defenses and forward bases are vulnerable to surprise attack.

The 21-man panel, headed by Nelson A. Rockefeller, included scientists, former diplomats, former defense officials and military officers, industrialists, atomic experts, educators, publishers and a labor union representative.

The Rockefeller study group says that perhaps the most difficult thing for this nation to accept is "the reality of our peril." It writes that "A new technology of unprecedented power and destructiveness has placed all nations of the world in dire peril."

An attack on 50 of the most important metropolitan areas would fall upon 55 per cent of the nation's population and 75 per cent of its industry, the report says.

The report concludes that the casualties in such an attack might be 10 to 15 million dead, 15 to 20 million injured, and 25 to 35 million caught in radioactive fallout.

To help reduce the possible toll, the group said "civil defense must be part of our over-all strategic posture" with a program including warning systems and fallout shelters.

Thank You Notes Are Appreciated

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

How to thank the thoughtful and generous for remembrances is a problem to some young moderns, as this letter indicates:

Q. "I know how to thank my relatives for gifts. Sometimes I write them, sometimes I come to them. But when it comes to boy and girl friends I am at a loss as to how to thank them. Is it necessary to write them, even though you see them often? Should you thank them even though they handed you the gift, and you opened it and showed your appreciation for it right there and then? What do you say in the letter?"

A. It is always a nice idea to write a thank you note for a gift, even though you've shown appreciation. A boy will admire your thoughtfulness.

When writing a boy a thank you note, it is a good idea not to be gushy, as boys do not like effusiveness, as a rule. If you are tempted to write an overwhelming thank you because you are so surprised by the gift, better to write nothing.

A typical thank you for a compact, for instance, may please a boy if it is short and sweet. (This note is in addition to the verbal thank you.) "I want to add my thank you the other evening that you certainly couldn't have picked a better gift for me. The compact is exactly what I needed. Is just the right size for my handbag, and holds a good quantity of powder. Thank you so much."

If the boy has really dented his wallet to buy your gift—jewelry or another expensive present (that your parents have permitted you to accept) then you should mention that you are aware that he has, as nobody will be more aware of it than he. Men are that way. Start your letter off thus, "You must have given up many a soda (or pizza pie or other favorite food) to afford that beautiful scarf you gave me, etc."

A girl friend should be rewarded, too, with special thanks. We are more critical and expect more of our friends than other people, usually, so she will expect you to rave over whatever effort she has put into her gift. A handmade gift needs special praise as any one who has put effort into a project that involves personal time wants to feel it is appreciated.

Relatives are more in need of thank you notes than anyone, perhaps, and they look for them, as older people consider the thank you note a sign of good manners. Even if you have thanked them profusely, sit down and write a little note that will emphasize your thoughtfulness even more.

Safe Drain Cleaner To Be Marketed Soon

From the West Coast comes a non-poisonous drain cleaner, a product called Drain-Kleen. Now, a housewife can have a drain cleaner in her home without having to worry that her children, who will eat anything, may be poisoned.

Soon to be in national distribution, Drain-Kleen can be used for drains and lines that are completely stopped up, for chronic slow drain conditions, or for insurance against drain trouble. It is non-caustic, and harmless to skin and clothing.

Hard To Take

Mrs. Mabel Wolfe Wheaton, sister of author Thomas Wolfe, on a recent visit to Washington, D. C. said that "when the scene opens with hatchets chopping down the old house" in the Broadway play made from Wolfe's book, "Look Homeward Angel," it was like chopping out "my heart."

Before her brother died 20 years ago at 37, she said he told her: "Some day I'll be famous and you will be known as my sister."

At this time of year when every child colors with his orange or yellow crayons.

EYE MAKE-UP
The lovely shine in the eye in 1958 will owe its gleam more to iridescent make-up, which stays with you, than the love light which comes and goes, says the expert.

Spring Show Harks Back To Flappers

LOS ANGELES (AP)—California Fashion greeters are harking back to the flapper era of 1923 in styles displayed at their spring market show.

The 150 designers exhibited their creations to more than 1,000 buyers from throughout the nation at the show's opening yesterday. The event continues through Wednesday.

The 1958 shape is loose and eased at the waistline with no waistline at all in some instances. The hiplines are slim and trim and the hemlines are up a bit. Plunging backs and jeweled decorations feature swim suits and play clothes.

The cloche hat, which fitted the flapper's head like an upside-down flower pot, is back. Flower garden and citrus colors in brilliant tones and prints enliven the outlook for summer.

Brains With Beauty

Joanna Barnes is a new Warner Bros. actress with brains and beauty. The studio feels she shows such promise that she's been cast in "Onionhead" with Andy Griffith.

HOLLYWOOD BEAUTY

Consider Entire Face In Make-Up Design

By LYDIA LANE

HOLLYWOOD — The combination of brains and beauty is hard to resist. So there is no wonder that three studios wanted to sign Boston's Joanna Barnes, who was graduated from Smith College a Phi Beta Kappa.

But Warner Bros. won out and immediately placed their new find into "Onionhead."

"How did you feel when you first saw yourself on the screen?" I inquired of Joanna during lunch.

"I wanted to jump up on the screen and straighten my shoulders. But seeing myself that objectively has made it very easy for me to remember not to slump. I had no idea," Joanna confessed, "how much posture detracts from your whole appearance."

"But I've always had an appreciation for the importance of grooming. The first things a man notices about a girl are: Is she good looking? Is she neat? Fortunately my whole family is conscious of neatness, and I'm glad for the early training I hope to do the same with my children."

"I roomed with an untidy girl who had never been trained as a child to a habit of neatness. It was discouraging to see her clothes lying all over the place and disturbing to see her leave on a date badly groomed."

We chatted about Hollywood and the talented make-up men. "I was really quite flattered that they didn't try to make any major changes in me, but then in college I was always experimenting with my face. I think trial and error is the most satisfactory approach," Joanna explained.

"My eyebrows, if left alone, would resemble John L. Lewis. But once I had them the right width and length that I thought was most becoming I made no further changes except to thin them out a little. I try to use a lubricant on them every night and comb them in place."

"I had great fun trying lipsticks and different hiplines. I found the light colors are most becoming to me, and I was using them before they were in fashion. One trick I like is to extend my lipstick at the corners of my mouth to create a more smiling effect."

"In working with make-up it's important not to lose sight of the whole face: for example, the size of the mouth in relation to the jaw, and the eyebrows in relation to the shape of your eyes. It's creating harmony and balance—the way you would in music or poetry," she concluded.

HAVE MAKE-UP KNOW-HOW
In wearing make-up, it's first important to establish which of the seven basic face types you fit into. Do you have a square, oblong, triangle or oval face? Each type takes different make-up tricks to bring out your best points. Let Leaflet M-44, "Correct Use of Make-Up," help you with the task. Special diagrams show just where make-up and rouge should be applied. For your copy of Leaflet M-44, send 10 cents AND a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Lydia Lane, Hollywood Beauty, in care of The Big Spring Herald.

Creamy Rice And Raisin Pudding

Just in case the recipe for that old-fashioned creamy rice pudding has escaped you here is one complete with juicy raisins.

RICE CUSTARD PUDDING

Ingredients:
2 eggs
1/4 cup sugar
1-3 cup seedless raisins rinsed in hot water and drained
2 1/2 cups milk
1 cup leftover cooked rice
Nutmeg

Method:
Beat eggs in a medium-sized mixing bowl just enough to combine yolks and whites (you can use a fork, a whisk or a rotary beater). Add sugar and raisins; gradually beat in milk. Stir in cooked rice. Turn into lightly buttered custard cups. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Place cups in pan of boiling-hot water; have water come up to near the top of the rice-custard mixture. Bake in moderate (350 degrees) oven until knife inserted near center of custard comes out clean 40 to 50 minutes. Serve warm or cold. Makes 6 servings.

Acres Of Pipe At Storage Yard

Located northwest of Big Spring just off the Andrews Highway is the H. W. Smith Transport Co. pipe yard. The lot contains nine acres and is used solely to store pipe and materials. Not only does the company have the room to adequately store it but the firm has the trucks capable of handling all materials properly. The pipe division of H. W. Smith Transport Co. was opened in September under supervision of J. Arnold Marshall, vice president.

Pipe Storage Service Given

H. W. Smith Transport Co. Inc., has nine acres of land just off the Andrews Highway, and the firm's goal is to see it covered with pipe.

Last September, under direction of J. Arnold Marshall, vice president, H. W. Smith Transport Co. Inc., created a pipe division and opened the nine-acre tract northwest of town for pipe storage. And already, large areas are covered.

The firm is in the pipe business only on a storage and handling basis for its clients, thus taking all handling and trucking of pipe problems away from them.

Under the system, H. W. Smith Transport Co. will store a firm's pipe on a monthly rate, take care of the pipe, and give a monthly inventory. The pipe is stored on separate racks by sizes for different firms.

In addition to storage, the firm will take charge of the pipe from the time it arrives in Big Spring until it is needed on location.

The transport company crews will unload it from the railroad yard, take it to the pipe yard, and care for it until it is needed. And they are prepared to carry it to any location in West and Central Texas.

H. E. McMahan, W. B. Henry, and George Tabor handle the pipe yard. McMahan is truck pushed and dispatcher, with Henry and Tabor, both experienced in pipe moving, caring for the yard. The group represents about 50 years of pipe handling and oil field lease work.

Although the yard is located out from town, headquarters is at 810 E. 2nd. The trucks are radio controlled for quick service and ready to move at any time.

H. W. Smith Transport Co. wants to expand its pipe business and it has the room needed to expand. Men in the oil industry would do good to keep the firm in mind.

AT CORNELISON'S Re-Weaving Saves Valuable Garments

If a snag or tear mars an otherwise valuable garment in your wardrobe, don't discard the apparel—jacket, coat, skirt or trousers. If the garment is made of any loosely-woven material, such as flannel or tweed, it can be made as good as new at Cornelison Cleaners, 10th and Johnson.

Mrs. Faye Bice, a member of Cornelison's staff, is expert at re-weaving torn and snagged clothing. She can make the repairs so skillfully that they will go undetected in virtually any loosely woven woolen material. And the repairs are not only unnoticeable—the cloth is made good as new.

Mrs. Bice explained that the re-weaving works best on flannel and

Auto Service Worries Ended

There is nothing more disconcerting than to start a long trip and find as you depart that your car hasn't been serviced.

Not that it was forgotten; you just got busy the day before and needed the car so you didn't have time to get it filled with gas and have the oil, tires, and water checked. You were planning to leave about 3:30 or 4 a.m. so as to miss traffic, and you did leave then. But you had to stop in a short time and get a tank of gas.

That problem will dissolve immediately when you think of Jones & Jones Service Station at 18th and Gregg; employees are on duty there 24 hours a day, seven days a week. To serve Big Springers and out of town customers alike.

In Big Spring, people who want expert care always trade with Jones & Jones—not only for the good service but because the station handles Conoco products. Thus they are assured of good products as well as good service.

Driving into the station will bring more than a tank of gas. Jones & Jones employees will check the oil, the radiator, the battery, inspect the tires and sweep out the floorboard in addition to cleaning the windshield. This service also is available at any hour you drive into the station.

Whether you are a regular customer at Jones & Jones Service Station makes no difference the amount of courtesy given; all are treated the same. But make it a habit to stop regularly at the Conoco station at 18th and Gregg. You will be more than pleased with the service you receive, and your car will be superbly cared for.

BIG SPRING HARDWARE Prices Right At Furniture Store

Now that the holidays are passed and a new year is well on its way, it won't be any time at all until spring is here.

Everyone knows that spring is that season when the furnishings in one's home suddenly develop all of the standard appearances of advanced age and decrepitude. Rugs and carpets which seemed very well in the gray days of fall and winter suddenly look distressingly drab and raggedy in the bright sunshine of spring; sofas and chairs assume appearances of being on their last legs.

Drapes and lamps no longer do anything for a room; indeed, they definitely detract from the appearance of the place.

And the average housewife is infected with a strange annual fever—a pushing, urgent desire for new furniture, new carpeting and a general refurbishing of the house.

That's where the Big Spring Hardware Furniture Department at 110 Main steps into the picture. The store has a complete stock of the most attractive of household furnishings. There are all of the varieties, all of the colors, all of the many qualities that are needed.

Big Spring Hardware Furniture department, knowing that the sudden urge to refurbish will hit hard in the spring, has a suggestion to make to the average homemaker: "Why wait until spring? Why not start now and get those things you intend to get and have them all set and in place when the winter ends?"

Prices are right, terms are easy, the stock is complete and the sales staff skilled in helping the buyer find just what she needs.

Congress Returns To A Space Age Session

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL
WASHINGTON, Jan. 6 (AP)—A Congress confronted with the prospect of continued high taxes, record peacetime spending and the ominous shadow of Soviet Sputniks comes back to a new session Tuesday—a space age session.

One great, overriding task lies ahead: The shoring up of the nation's defenses to meet the threat of Russian attacks through outer space.

One great, dominant issue already has emerged for the session and the congressional election in the fall: The extent to which the Eisenhower administration has been efficient or fumbling in the handling of defense and foreign policy in a critical era in history.

President Eisenhower has pointed up the task and the issue. Eisenhower will appear before Senate and House Thursday to deliver a State of the Union message built around the theme of national security—where it stands today and what must be done to strengthen it.

The budget he will offer Jan. 13 will be balanced, the White House figures, but the highest in peacetime. Swollen with defense spending, it reportedly pushes toward 74 billion dollars for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Most domestic programs are being shoved into the background. They will be mentioned in the budget, with price tags attached for various home front and defense items.

Perhaps never before in peace will an entire legislative program have been so tinted and molded by what has happened in another nation—Russia.

Even the administration program to aid education has been re-tailored to space age specifications.

Instead of helping to finance school construction, the President now intends to submit a four-year, billion-dollar plan geared mainly to scholarships and turning out more scientists.

Other domestic operations will perhaps be trimmed to shift more money into a ballooning defense program.

Defense spending is sure to rise. It might build up enough pressure to lift the 275 billion dollar lid off the national debt in spite of White House efforts to hold it on.

With the debt and spending situation what it is, prospects of a general tax reduction are little more now than a wishful, wistful thinking. Congress may dip deeper into take home pay of many people by broadening the social security program and the taxes that finance it.

Plaguing committees which process tax, farm, labor measures will be the problem of adjusting what the nation can afford for the home front to what it must spend in the face of Russian advances in science and diplomacy.

So for members coming up for re-election, the outlook for getting through batches of pet projects is about as bleak as for a tax slash that would please constituents.

The doesn't mean there is going to be any political truce or blackout. All 433 House seats are at stake in November, and 32 of the 96 in the Senate. Politicking is bound to surge upward to the customary peak reached every other year at national election time.

The amiability in Congress thus will give way on occasion to oratorical thundering and finger shaking to impress voters back home.

The question of what to do in case a president should be incapable of carrying on is one of the likely topics of partisan debate.

The latest cue was the slight stroke Eisenhower suffered in November. He had a heart attack in September, 1955, and a major intestinal operation in June, 1956.

Democrats and Republicans probably will get in some licks on whether the country has a part time president. Chances are they will do just what they have in the past with such problems—nothing.

NO RIGHTS ACTION
On civil rights legislation, nothing is likely to happen. Congress and the administration both are inclined to stand pat on the first civil rights legislation in something like 80 years, passed last year.

The administration's bid for a five-year extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Law, which expires in June, faces a tough fight. The law permits this country to give tariff reductions to nations which grant them to the United States.

Some congressmen say the program is hurting domestic industry. Eisenhower may have to settle for a compromise, maybe a year extension.

Foreign aid is expected to be a target for sniping as usual, from members who want to wipe it out and those who want to curb it.

Local Woman Praises Tranq-wal

To My Friends:
I have always been nervous or high strung, anyway I could not sleep at night. Some nights I would go to sleep when I first went to bed, but wake up from twelve to one or two or three, then I could not go back to sleep. Sometimes I could not sleep at all.

I saw where Tranq-wal was recommended to make a person sleep and still not be habit forming, so I tried a box. They were just wonderful. I do not take them every day or night now, because I do not need them. Now I am not nervous as I was. I gave my husband, daughter and aunt some and they like them too.

Mrs. H. R. Johnson
1104 Dixie St.

Tranq-wal is a new scientific aid for the relief of insomnia that contains no narcotics or habit forming drugs. It helps you to relax and get your regular refreshing nights sleep. Tranq-wal is sold at the Collins Brothers Drug Store and The Walgreen Agency Drug in Big Spring. (Adv.)

Again, the President might have to take less than he wants.

In farm legislation, sentiment has been building up to do away with the acreage reserve part of the soil bank program, which pays farmers for taking land out of production of crops that are in surplus. Dairy state members are preparing an uphill battle to prevent the administration from lowering price supports for dairy products.

Eisenhower wants to boost postal rates and the House has passed a bill to do it. Hard opposition exists in the Senate.

Eisenhower killed pay raises for postal and other government employees with a pocket veto last year, partly because the postal rate increase failed to clear Congress. This time, the pay raises look fairly certain.

The Alaskan statehood bill is on the House calendar, ready for a vote. Supporters claim it has picked up strength. If it goes through, one for Hawaii is almost certain to pass.

More steam apparently is being generated, too, behind legislation to raise the national minimum wage scale and bring more workers under it.

Organized labor also is confronted by increasing pressure to establish a measure of government control over union pension, welfare and other funds as a result of abuses uncovered by the Senate subcommittee probing labor-management racketeering.

Except for the rackets inquiry, congressional investigations also seem likely to revolve around missiles, Sputniks and space more than anything else.

Behind The Scenes

Not all the work of a theatre production is done by those who appear on the stage. There is much that must be done "behind the scenes," unless the actors wish to present a performance without benefit of scenery or other settings, without advertising, publicity or other promotion, or without someone to pull the curtain. The Big Spring Civic Theatre needs production crews, too, for its presentation beginning Thursday of "Bell, Book and Candle" in HCJC Auditorium. Shown here in conference are John Austin, director; Robert Martinez, set designer; Mrs. Wilma Rudeseal, stage manager. Sgt. Martinez, accomplished guitarist presently with Webb's special services unit, also will provide classical background music during the play.

Crew All-Important In Theatre Work

It is a truism that no theatre production can be complete without people working hard and efficiently behind the scenes. It is just as true of amateurs as of professionals, and the Big Spring Civic Theatre is no exception. Staff members of the local theatre group, now that their next production is in the last lap, have been in constant attendance at rehearsals. They discovered long ago that they must achieve as much perfection in their work as the actors.

Archer, Matt Bertalini handles the lighting, curtain and sound effects. Mrs. Mary Magee is the prompter and Mrs. Mary Ragsdale is costume technician. Good Housekeeping shop has contributed the stage setting. Jo's Personalized Hair Styles is handling the ladies' hair styles and the Evening Lions Club, the ticket sales. Bob Smith and Bob Walker are on the publicity staff. John Austin is director. The importance of behind the scenes work is perhaps best illustrated by one scene in which Hennigar, who is cast as a male witch, or warlock, snaps his fingers in voodoo fashion to open a locked liquor cabinet. He stands well off as he works his "magic" so that the audience may see the door snap open. To do this trick without real magic requires a crew member behind the set to tug upon a lever that snaps open the cabinet door. If the crew member assigned to this duty should fail to learn his cue and push the lever at the proper moment, it would leave Hennigar in an acutely embarrassing position. "Bell, Book and Candle" begins a three-night run at 8 p.m. Thursday in HCJC Auditorium.

Carl Sandburg Observes His 80th Birthday

FLAT ROCK, N.C. (AP)—Lincoln biographer and poet Carl Sandburg today observed his 80th birthday at his farm home here amid not-too-serious thoughts on the nature of life and death. "Age is all relative," he told a newsman last week regarding his approaching anniversary. "I've got a younger heart than most of the poets. Three-fourths of the poets we have nowadays were born old."

He predicted waggishly that he will live to be 88 years old, maybe 99. "It's inevitable, it's inexorable, it's written in the book of fate," he said, "that I die at an age divisible by 11." He pointed out that two of his great-grandfathers and one of his grandmothers died at ages divisible by 11.

The white-haired author, who has produced more than 1,000 poems and several books, said it seems to him very curious that people inquire about his well-being only when another birthday is coming. "They don't give a damn about your health on the Fourth of July," he observed.

Currently, Sandburg is rereading the Lincoln-Douglas debates, which took place 100 years ago, and writing a foreword for a book by Harry Golden of Charlotte, editor of the Carolina Issue. Early this month he will be given a testimonial dinner at the University of Illinois, where a "Sandburg Room" has been established at the university library, and on Jan. 20 will receive a gold medal award from a Phi Beta Kappa group in Chicago. He is a native of Illinois, but he and his wife, a sister of famed photographer Edward Steichen, have lived here about 12 years.

Dry Goods Assn. Convention Opens

NEW YORK (AP)—A note of uncertainty about the outlook for business in the first half of 1958 marks the opening today of the National Retail Dry Goods Assn. convention. But one of the principal speakers foresees quick recovery followed by expanding sales.

He is Edward W. Carter, president of the Broadway-Halo Stores of Los Angeles. "I should like to reiterate my conviction that the present rolling business adjustment, manifested in part by a moderate decline in store sales, will probably run its course in 1958, and should be followed during the next 10 years by an irregular expansion in store sales comparable to that of the past 10," Carter said in a prepared address.

More than 5,000 retail executives, representing 2,300 stores, were here for the four-day convention. A 52-man delegation from Canada also was registered. G. Gordon Dakins, executive vice president of the NRDA, said registration for the sessions, and the sale of exhibit space, was the highest in years. He attributed this in part to "uncertainty of business conditions."

The convention opens with a two-hour demonstration of ROP, a process of color advertising in newspapers. Dakins released the findings in the NRDA's annual year-end survey of business conditions. He said 43 per cent of those surveyed in more than 2,000 stores reported lower profits in 1957, compared with 1956. Of the remainder, he said, 29 per cent said earnings were about the same, and 28 per cent reported increased earnings. The survey of the findings called 1957 "a disappointing year for many stores" and found "a cautious outlook for the first half of 1958."

As a result, the report said, "many stores reported that they are planning to cut their newspaper line in order to offset the rise in their newspaper advertising rates." The survey showed 64 per cent saying they plan to reduce their advertising.

Carter said, however, that he looks for a "steady expansion in sales" later this year or in 1959.

Rayburn Marks 76th Birthday

WASHINGTON (AP)—Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn marked his 76th birthday today getting ready for the opening tomorrow of a new session of Congress.

Since September 1940, the Texas Democrat has gavelled open every session except those during four years in which Republicans had control of the House.

No other man in history has presided so long as speaker. The runner-up, Henry Clay, served a little less than 12 years.

Security Panel To Take Up Stassen's Ideas

WASHINGTON (AP)—The National Security Council was expected today to take up Harold E. Stassen's proposals to make U. S. disarmament policy more flexible.

The No. 1 item in those proposals, which could be Stassen's swan song as President Eisenhower's disarmament adviser, was reported to be a suggested change concerning nuclear tests. At present, the United States insists that any agreement to halt nuclear tests, as demanded by Russia, should carry with it an inspection system to guarantee that nuclear weapons production is stopped also. Stassen's idea, it was said, was to drop this proviso, permitting an end to nuclear testing without requiring a halt also in atom bomb making.

Secretary of State Dulles and others in the administration, including Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission, were said to be strongly opposed.

Presumably the council was concerned also with the draft reply by Eisenhower to the letter he received last month from Soviet Premier Bulganin. Eisenhower's reply must go to Paris by Wednesday. There it will be considered by the North-Atlantic Treaty Council, along with similar replies from other Western heads of government, before being transmitted to Moscow. Bulganin proposed, among other things, an end to nuclear testing and a high-level East-West conference to outlaw war. British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan indicated his letter might suggest an East-West non-aggression pact, which the Russians also have proposed. U. S. officials were cool to Macmillan's suggestion.

Princess Sick With A Cold

LONDON (AP)—Princess Margaret was ill today with a heavy cold. She called off going to the 21st birthday party tonight of her cousin Princess Alexandra.

A palace spokesman said Margaret was confined with a bad chill—the British term for a severe cold—to her room at Sandringham, the royal residence in Norfolk. She has been spending the Christmas holiday with Queen Elizabeth II, Prince Philip, and the Queen Mother.

The Queen left Sandringham for London today with other members of the royal family, leaving her party-loving younger sister in bed. British royalty and ranking members of the aristocratic young set were invited to Kensington Palace, the London residence of the Duchess of Kent, for the delayed coming-of-age celebration for her only daughter, Princess Alexandra, who was 21 Christmas.

Coahoma Woman Praises New Medicine

To my Friends and Loved Ones: This is my first time to write a testimonial about any kind of medicine, but this Citru-Mix has helped me so much that I want to tell others who suffer from that dreadful thing called rheumatism. I had it, rheumatism, arthritis or lumbago, or whatever you call it all over my body. It would be in my right shoulder, then jump to my back or hip. It seemed that it would play around over my body. It has been in my toes, eyes and teeth. I would have to go to bed and quit, but not often as I am a mother of five children. I have been in hospitals and have gone to Mineral Wells and Marlin, Texas.

Citru-Mix was recommended to me by a neighbor and I took three bottles. I got relief in less than two hours after the first dose. That has been ten months ago and I have not had one ounce of trouble since then. I want you to try just one bottle if you have suffered as I have. I have written this letter with my own free will and no one has paid me one cent for it. You may use it as you wish for advertising purposes.

A Bible Thought For Today

As it is written, Behold, I lay in Sion a stumblingstone and rock of offense: and whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed. (Romans 9:33)

Some Reorganization—But Not Much

Reorganization of the Defense Department to place a single commander of all the nation's armed forces at the top of the heap is shaping up as one of the major controversial issues of the new Congress.

Two members of Sen. Lyndon Johnson's Senate Preparedness Sub-committee, Sens. Symington (D-Mo.) and Flanders (R-Vt.) want the group to recommend legislation to unify the services at the top. Sen. Johnson himself says "the jury is still out" on the question of recommending that the Joint Chiefs be relieved of command duty.

Rep. George Mahon (D-Tex.), chief of the House Military Appropriations Sub-committee, wants a sweeping reorganization of the whole Defense Department. He thinks the present system under which the Joint Chiefs of Staff serve in a dual role as military planners and commanders of their respective branches of the service "is unrealistic and unworkable."

George Mahon is as well equipped as anyone to speak on the subject. He has occupied a prominent place of leadership in House military affairs activities for years, and only recently completed a nationwide personal investigation of the present posture of national defense, with special emphasis on the guided missile snafu.

Rightly or wrongly, the general public impression is that the JCS system is ineffective and more than somewhat confused. The JCS is hardly more than a glorified debating society. There are times when the Army and Air Force seem to gang up against the Navy, and other times when the Navy and Air Force, or Navy and Army, seem to gang up against the third leg of the military triangle. Inclusion of the Marine Corps commandant in the charmed circle, even if for a speaking but not-voting role, seemed not to have improved matters in the least.

What the advocates of a strong hand at the very top of the heap want most is unification that unifies rather than divides and fractionates. One of the several ideas advanced would place a strategist in over-all command, operating directly under the President and the secretary of Defense, and leave the staff chiefs of the various branches free to direct operations of their own departments without the authority and privilege of interfering with the operation of the two rival services.

Most potent dissenting voice to this proposal for a top-over-all strategist is a man long identified with military matters in the Congress, both as a member of the House and later as senator. He is Chairman Russell (D-Ga.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who says he is not "a single department man." He objects to one-man control at the top as too much like "the Prussian General Staff idea."

Probability: there'll be some changes made, but nothing radical or very effective. Only a war or brink-of-war situation could shake the embattled professionals and their congressional friends out of the present comfortable and stalemated set-up. It's too cozy, and the big boys don't like to be disturbed.

How Come Elsa Didn't Scratch?

We can relax, now, the New York Dress Institute has made out its annual list of best-dressed women covering the year 1957.

For the first time Queen Elizabeth II crashed the charmed circle in spite of some newspaper criticism of her costume for her recent sensationally successful Christmas address to the Empire. Some editorial writer in London said the queen in her dress was too large for the Queen's corporeality, and obviously editorial writers are competent judges in such matters.

There were a couple of ties in the vote. The Duchess of Windsor and Mrs. Winston Guest, wife of a once-famous polo player, ran a dead heat for second place after the grand champion, Mrs.

William Paley, a perennial winner, and there was another tie between Miss Claudette Colbert of the films and the wife of Wm. R. Hearst Jr., the newspaper publisher, for eighth.

How the walls of Buckingham Palace can still keep standing after the Duchess of Windsor came out two paces ahead of the Queen may become a matter of parliamentary investigation.

This writer suffered a keen personal disappointment with this year's best-dressed selections. We regret that Miss Elsa Maxwell doyenne of the international cut-'em-dead-and-rack-'em-up set, neither won, placed nor showed.

We suggest a congressional investigation.

Business Oracles Aboard A Bandwagon

PHILADELPHIA—This is a dismal way to start 1958—reporting on what occurred at the American Economic Association meeting devoted to "Is Another Major Contraction Likely?"

Judging from the comments of the participants, the question should have been, "Where, How, and When Will This Contraction End?" The pessimists were not only ascendant, but enthusiastic. They jumped up and down on the Body Economic that they, themselves, prostrated.

The speakers, in rough order of pessimism, were:

1. V. Lewis Bassie, director of the bureau of economic and business research of the University of Illinois. He now feels that what he has long expected is happening: A depression not to last into 1959.

2. Daniel Hamburg of the University of Maryland. Here a medium bear (not physically, Hamburg's twice the size of Bassie) offered to rescue the nation's biggest and most persistent bear among economists. "I won't go quite as far out on the limb as Bassie," said Hamburg. "I'll stand under the tree and catch him when he falls." Hamburg argued that "new economic stabilizers won't prevent a depression. Stabilizers didn't in the past."

3. Bert G. Hickman, of the Brookings Institution, had built a "diffusion index," which now definitely flashes red. The country's in for its severest postwar contraction. "It's premature to conclude," he added, "that structural changes or government activities have made severe contractions phenomena of the past."

4. Asher Achinstein, of the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress, noted that capital expenditures of business men, residential building, and purchases of durable goods by consumers were all in a concentrated downward trend. They'll be counteracted by government expenditures and "automatic stabilizers."

Too Much To Hope For?

James Marlow A Fateful Year For Ike

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower will be watched this year, both for leadership and imagination, as never before. It may be a most fateful year, both for him and for the country.

Neither he nor Congress, which returns this week, knows whether 1957 was a turning-point in history, or whether 1958 will be, or whether what they do this year will determine the future.

They do know this: last year Russia revealed such progress that this country will be for years in a continuing and enormous struggle to get ahead or even stay abreast.

And the steps both Congress and Eisenhower take this year—in laying the foundations for the enormous future effort necessary—may decide who wins in the end: this country or Russia.

This is a terrible burden for a 67-year-old president who has now suffered a serious illness every year for three years and whose doctors restrict his activities.

No president ever took office with more public confidence than Eisenhower. For his first four years he had a charmed political life, amazingly free of criticism.

In those years the public was not aware of the astonishing progress of Russia. And those years were a time of rising prosperity when all that seemed necessary was to go on as before and keep down government spending.

All this changed in 1957, the first year of Eisenhower's second term, and three things did it: Eisenhower's own obvious failures in leadership at home; a third illness; and sudden public awareness of how fast Russia was moving, an awareness forced upon it by the Sputniks and the missiles.

His illness raised natural questions about his ability to give the kind of full and active leadership needed.

There is no better evidence of how little he understood how much Russia has been doing—or, if he understood it, how slow to action he was—than this:

Last year he offered Congress an education program simply to build more schools, although a commission he named was trying to promote state and private support for training more scientists and engineers. This year, after the newspapers were full of stories about Russia's progress in training scientists, Eisenhower has dropped the classroom idea and wants Congress to vote money for educating scientists.

Two things showed his wobbly leadership in 1957 at home:

1. The way he fumbled around with his budget trying to decide whether to fight for it or let Congress chop it to bits.

2. His failure to fight for the school aid program that he did propose. He urged it. But when voting time came, and a word from him might have swung its passage, he stood by silently while it was killed.

This country might be able to withstand for a while White House uncertainties on domestic problems. But it knows it can't make less than a full effort in foreign affairs now.

What Others Say

Many parents for some time now have been wondering about the "benefits" of progressive and semi-progressive education. And no wonder, if one is to judge by the results of a survey this newspaper took in such diverse places as New York City, Shaker Heights, Ohio, and Opp, Alabama.

Some teachers are wondering about it, too. A New York City teacher says of her sixth graders that they're healthy, happy children. "Of course, they don't learn much at school." And a Bronx school marm chimes in about "critical reading," "citizenship," and "development of the whole child." Says she: "My children formerly had mastered grammar and decimals by the time they'd finished the fifth grade." Now her fifth graders are "terribly retarded" in grammar and are still on "concepts" in math. "In painting, clay-modeling and sewing, though, they're really in fine shape."

The result? At the University of Illinois 25 per cent of new freshmen must take a no-credit course in remedial English—starting with third grade grammar and spelling. At Portland State College's School of Engineering in Oregon about 60 per cent of the new students must take a course in "bonehead math"—starting with advanced fractions and elementary algebra. Comments the head of the physics department: "A sorry situation."

Yes indeed. And while educators some day might develop a better system than the Three R's, we think that a great many are using in place of reading, writing and arithmetic isn't nearly so good.

And we don't see much room for improvement until the parents and the teachers raise their voices even higher about some of the things that go on in the academic circles. — WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Just Hold Out Till '75

NEW YORK — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

That life will be better if we can just hold out until 1975. A poll of 50 top U.S. business leaders predicted that by then the work week will be down to 35 hours, and average family income will be $7,500, compared to $5,500 last year.

That 39 per cent of persons over 45 complain of one form or other of back trouble.

That more than 100,000 kinds of sea shells have been identified.

That on Broadway they tell of the bopster at his first rodeo who, bug-eyed, watched a cowboy wrestling a steer. "Man," he exclaimed, "what a crazy way to order a steak!"

That in 1800 it took nine men on a farm to produce the food for themselves and one other person. But today one farmer raises enough for himself and 17 others.

That a psychiatrist says there are only a million normal people in the United States. (Wonder who the other 999,999 are?)

That an old-timer is someone who remembers when the first letters a child learned were ABC. Today they're TV.

That the 182,573 street lamps in New York City, proving that this is one town where you can lean on something besides relatives.

That Frank Pipal, an Omaha, Neb., consulting forester, found a poison ivy vine more than 50 feet tall with a trunk more than five inches thick. P.S. It is not for sale.

That insects from behind the Iron Curtain are fighting to save American timber. Some 1,600 specimens of Aphidletes Thomsoni were imported from Czechoslovakia to attack woolly aphids that infest silver fir trees in Oregon and Washington.

That American hunters fire almost three times as many shotgun shells at the lowly cottontail rabbit as they do at duck and geese. And—shades of Davy Crockett—it takes 15 shots for the average nimrod to bag one duck.

For Superstition, Take Ball Players

Among the world's peoples, perhaps the most superstitious of the lot are baseball players.

Whether they never got through the fifth grade or earned their master's degrees before entering the game, they're apt to arm themselves with good luck charms to ward off curses or repeat a ritual every day that they reason will cause Lady Luck to smile their way.

Perhaps it is because the breaks have played so big a part in the successes or failures of individuals and teams or again it may be that customs and practices carried on from one generation of players to the next are hard to break.

Of all the ball players, the ones with Irish extraction are the most superstitious of the lot and, if the Mick should be left-handed in the bargain—well, no one stands a chance against the leprechauns with which he is on speaking terms.

Lefty Frank O'Doul, as Irish as his name and as great a hitter as the game has known, was a man who reveled in his superstitions.

He believed a sailing glove had much to do with the way his hits fell. He'd hold his glove until he reared the dugout, then sail it to the ground. If it hit with finer pointed toward right field, he reasoned he would get a hit the next time he went to bat.

O'Doul also felt little things like spinning his bat at home plate and carefully drawing the lines of his batter's box also helped to neutralize the curses of the baseball devils.

One of the great swatsmiths of all time, Babe Ruth, invariably made it a point to plant his big foot in the middle of second base on his trips to and from the outfield.

It was Phil Rizzuto, I think who invariably went to bat with his glove stored away in his hip pocket. For some reason, the Scooter felt the site was conducive to better hitting.

I know of a manager a few years ago who made a solemn ritual of tearing sheets of programs into tiny bits and scattering the confetti in front of his dugout. He felt the act contributed toward his club's effort.

I've watched any number of players carefully avoid walking behind an umpire on their way to the plate. They would wait until the proper moment when the arbiter had gotten in position, then blaze a trail between the man-in-blue and the catcher.

Whole teams on winning skeins have been known to wear the same clothes until the streaks have been broken and I've seen first basemen hold up games until they could find a pebble to throw off the playing field.

Of course, the practice isn't always confined to the playing field. Once, in the Los Angeles park, I saw Horace McMahon, the character actor in the movies, get up and turn his coat inside out before putting it on again in hopes the act would put the whammy on a team playing his favorites, the Los Angeles Angels.

There's nothing quite like a baseball addict, especially one who courts luck through ritualistic acts that would make an African voodoo doctor look like a quack.

You Can Overdo This Charcoal Cooking

I cherish a wistful hope that in the New Year the craze for "charcoal broiled" meats, fish, vegetables—anything a chef can get his mitts on—will abate. Surely, in a great, inventive nation such as ours, there must be better uses for charcoal than incinerating vittles.

I can remember 'way back three or four years ago when it was possible to go into a restaurant or a roadside diner or a hamburger haven and order a meal that didn't resemble a refugee from a fire sale when it was finally served.

When the charcoal craze hit the nation's culinary masters, with the result that today all broiled foods strongly resemble in appearance and flavor a brand not snatched quickly enough from the burning.

It does something to my appetite when the waiter with the water (to put out any flash fires) places in front of me a plate still sizzling ominously and says, in a funeral whisper, "The Unguentine is on the house."

Gracious living, in my book, does not begin with a shower of cinders reminiscent of Venusian, or ash floating in the air. And necessarily certainly mothered the invention of these new serrate-edged steak knives, without which it is impossible to saw through the charred crust now de rigeur on steak or chops.

I can remember a day when a restaurant serving prime, aged beef used to boast that its roasts and steaks "can be cut with a fork." Now these same institutions proudly supply the patron with a set of burglar tools to get through the initial coating of carbon, a substance closely akin to diamonds.

Sure, carbon is good for the teeth, and every American should now have a set as pearly as a coster-monger's costume. But too often that built-in, crackling, crunching sound in the restaurant is an eyetooth giving up the ghost as it comes in contact with the lamp black.

Now, I like my beef on the rare side—perhaps a shade better—done than, say, the Westerner citizen who told the waiter just "to would the critter and drive it in." But who ever sees or gets to taste the inside of a steak nowadays? Hermetically sealed in carbon, it is safe from prying taste buds.

Any customer who patronizes a steak house today without the precaution of a fire extinguisher in his pocket is living dangerously. Waiters walk casually around the flaming steaks, chops and what-not on swords. I have just read that fire destroyed one billion dollars of U. S. property in 1957, but it would have been twice that sum if the statistician had included meat and masticators.

Why burn down the house to roast a pig or build a three-alarm fire to cook a steak? I just want to go back to the good old days when a grill was a grill and not an open-hearth inferno. Who wants to eat in an asbestos hib?

In short, all I ask in 1958 is a restaurant where I can get a steak that doesn't turn to dust and ashes in my mouth.

The Enemies Of John Foster Dulles

WASHINGTON—If ever a man should be loved for the enemies he has made, it is John Foster Dulles, secretary of State. He should be the "man of the year" in world affairs—not Nikita Khrushchev.

For, while it may be plausible to choose the Communist dictator as the "devil of the year" on the basis of the amount of evil he has been responsible for in making news throughout 1957, it is important that the man who has stood up for morality should be given even greater recognition.

The American secretary of state represents the conscience of the world today. He believes, for instance, that when the government of the United States drafts its youth for a defensive war in Korea—under the auspices of the United Nations—and then 142,000 casualties result, these young men who made the sacrifice should not be forgotten and that the aggressor—Red China—should not be rewarded by being given diplomatic recognition or a seat in the United Nations Security Council.

The critics sometimes call Dulles a "stern-faced Presbyterian," as if there were something wrong nowadays in being stern in dealing with gangsters and criminals in the real world.

But the real story of the year is just why John Foster Dulles is the victim of such a world-wide barrage of criticism, and why so many Americans now begin to believe there must be something to it all.

The demand for the resignation of Dulles, when voiced by some of the Democratic party politicians, is understandable. It is part of their tactics of harassing the administration. But the forces behind these politicians both here and abroad are worth noting. Here are some of the enemies made by the secretary of state and the reasons for the enmities:

1. Dulles is hated by the Communists because he has been unyielding. He refuses to surrender. He insists on international guarantees that mean something. He doesn't trust the men in the Kremlin. So the propaganda distributed every day and night throughout Asia and Eastern Europe by shortwave radio stations controlled by Moscow keeps hammering away at him. Americans should be proud of a man who has earned this kind of enmity.

2. Dulles is disliked by commercial interests in Great Britain which maneuvered their own government into recognizing Red China and now want restrictions relaxed so that they can get more trade. Americans should be proud of a man who puts moral principle above materialism.

3. Dulles was exoriated in the British press because he didn't let the British go ahead with their ill-fated military expedition into Egypt in 1956. He has never been forgiven for delivering a blow to British pride. It doesn't matter evidently that the British and French nearly went bankrupt and were ill-prepared for long years of guerrilla warfare in the Middle East, but Dulles is the scapegoat now.

4. Dulles is hated in many parts of Asia because he refuses to agree to the admission of Red China into the United Nations and to American diplomatic recognition of the Peiping government. But he is applauded in other parts of Asia, where it is firmly believed that recognition of Red China would mean a breakdown in morale and abandonment of the 1,000,000 or more soldiers in Korea, the Philippines, Formosa and Japan. They stand today as a bulwark of the free world against the Communists in the Far East.

5. Dulles is hated in the Middle East by Nasser, who played a double game—secretly negotiating arms deals with Moscow while negotiating for American funds to build the Aswan Dam. But Dulles exposed the duplicity of Nasser and steered a wise course in the United Nations to keep the Arabs from destroying Israel.

6. Finally, there are financial interests which stand to profit by the export of more dollars to the rest of the world in the form of grants and loans to carry on "bold and imaginative policies" in the "neutral" and "uncommitted" countries. Because Dulles has been regarded for the limits of the American taxpayers' pocketbook, he is despised in certain financial quarters in New York, London and Paris. This is the kind of enmity an American secretary of state ought to be proud to have earned.

John Foster Dulles is a thoroughgoing American who believes that the United States should be guided by its conscience in world affairs and should not encourage gangsterism or the exploitation of weak and undeveloped countries by imperialists. He is convinced that moral force can win the support of right-thinking people throughout the world and that meanwhile a strong military force, capable of massive retaliation, is the best deterrent of aggression.

What would some other secretary of state propose for America's policy? What in the present course would he reverse? As long as John Foster Dulles is in office, there is an assurance that America stands for unequivocal adherence to moral principle as against surrender to a ruthless dictatorship in Moscow.

How we manage the telephone business

"Perhaps you have seen this statement of Southwestern Bell's policies and objectives before. Originally, it was written for telephone employees, then later published as a newspaper advertisement. Even so, I earnestly invite you to read it again. You (the public) are our 'boss.' In the long run, it is your judgment (not ours) that decides how sound these policies are, how well we've lived up to objectives."

Edwin M. Clark, president Southwestern Bell Telephone Company

PROGRESS has long been the keynote of the telephone business. Within a few generations this company has grown from a few people serving a handful of telephones until we now number almost 60,000 people serving five million telephones.

And, if business forecasters are anywhere near correct, the next 20 years will bring more growth and development than we have ever seen before.

With this in mind, it would seem a good time to examine ourselves and the company to see what we may expect during the next 20 years as a company and as individuals.

As individuals, we work for the company, first of all, to earn a living. We want to live in reasonable comfort. We want to educate our children properly, and we want to be accepted and respected by our neighbors.

Beyond that, we also want to work with people we like, to enjoy what we do, and to feel that our efforts are worth while and appreciated.

And since together we form one company in which each of us earns his living, we can achieve those things only through the policies and practices of the company. No individual can be more successful than the company of which he is a part. Thus, being informed—being "in the know"—on what the company is trying to do is important to every telephone employee.

OBJECTIVE Our objective has been developed from years of experience by hundreds of thoughtful people.

The policy, briefly stated, is to furnish the best possible telephone service at reasonable cost—a cost consistent with financial safety and fair treatment of employees.

SERVICE In this policy good service ranks above everything else. Profits? For the long pull, we are not likely to make profits on a service that is not good. Employees? If a business fails to serve, there will soon be no business to work for.

So, our first objective is to furnish good service. And in this fast-moving economy, the only good service is one that is continually improving.

NEW IDEAS, constant behind-the-scenes changes keep telephone service improving. Long Distance operators can now punch keys to put through out-of-town calls in as little as 12 seconds.

To furnish this service, we need the best people, the best equipment, the best methods, and the best management we can develop.

Our research, our experimentation, and our training are all directed to this end.

REASONABLE COST

But all of our equipment, our training, and our improved methods would net us nothing if the cost of service became so high that people would not buy it. Therefore, cost must be weighed in everything we do. We must keep the price of our service reasonable. A reasonable price has been defined as one that produces an ever-growing public demand, for this means that the service appears to be worth what it costs to more and more people.

FINANCIAL SAFETY

On the other hand, the price of service cannot be so low that the financial security of the company is endangered. The price must bring in enough revenue to provide a fair return to the owners of the business. The price must provide a sufficient profit margin to enable the company to plan ahead with confidence.

A company with insufficient earnings must live from hand to mouth. Decisions must be based on the amount of cash available rather than the needs of the business. There can be no training, no building for the future, no security of employment. Long-run considerations of economy and efficiency must be sacrificed for stopgap measures, and the end result is poorer service, higher costs, and eventual failure.

In the long run, a price that provides profit enough to undertake new research and development results in better and cheaper service to the public.

FAIR TREATMENT OF EMPLOYEES

Fair treatment of employees means good pay, good working conditions, reasonable job security, and opportunity for advancement based on merit.

These things, in turn, depend on a successful business. And it is people—employees—who are the most important element in the success of any business. Thus—in the broadest sense—each of us is responsible in a large degree for our own fair treatment. There is no surer way to insure our own success than giving the public more and better service for the price it pays.

This is the keystone upon which our wages, our Benefit and Pension Plan, our opportunities, and all other job factors depend.

And along with giving good service goes job satisfaction, for good service can be as satisfactory to the giver as to the public. It provides its own personal sense of accomplishment—pride in a job well done.

MANAGEMENT'S RESPONSIBILITIES

Employees depend on management to provide the machines, the methods, the equipment, and the direction that will enable good people to provide good service. Thus, how management discharges its responsibilities determines how much opportunity employees have to succeed.

In addition to supplying the material things needed to do the job, management must so run the business that employees have an incentive to do well. And management must recognize and reward merit when it is displayed by employees.

This reward comes in the form of upgrading in vocational levels or promotion into or within management, and it serves a twofold purpose. One purpose, of course, is to give the employee the recognition he has earned through merit. The other is to assure the company of continued good management. The future of the business and all the people in it depends on the kind of people who are promoted into management. For they are the ones who will run the business tomorrow.

It is literally true that the telephone business is an up-from-the-ranks business. There is no substitute for experience gained on the job and for training which a person receives as he progresses from job to job.

Advancement, however, does not come automatically. Each person's chances depend largely upon himself.

All of the training and all of the experience which the company can offer will not necessarily move a person into a better job. The employee must also have the ambition to develop and improve himself. And, through good job performance, he must earn advancement.

There are many, many good people in this business, and the competition is keen. Training courses are open to all these people. The person who makes the most of this training—the one who thinks and studies on his own and who is most ready for opportunity when it comes—is the person most likely to get ahead.

Management can provide training courses; it can encourage employees to progress, but it cannot and should not force any person to develop himself; that must come from within the individual.

Along with employees, management also has a responsibility to the owners of the business and to the public.

The owners depend on management to run the business in a sound, profitable manner. If this is not done, one of two things will happen. There will be a change in management, or the business will run downhill. The latter would be disastrous to all concerned, including the employees.

The public depends on management to administer the business in such a manner that its service needs are met at a reasonable cost.

And the public in the end is the boss of any business. If this boss—the public—is not pleased, the business is again in trouble and its jobs and people in jeopardy.

Beyond that, management has a moral obligation to the public and the nation. Business is an integral part of the great American economy. It is the duty of all business—and particularly of a public utility—to place the welfare of the country and its defense at the head of the list.

THE FUTURE These are a few basic thoughts on the objectives of our company. They do not cover specifically the daily problems that make the job difficult at times.

SERVING NATION'S DEFENSE NEEDS is special duty of public utilities. One example: Telephone scientists produced "electronic brains" for Nike family of antiaircraft guided missiles.

But there is hardly a daily problem that cannot be considered and solved under our basic policies.

There may be times when one factor will seem to have more weight than another, but in the long run a policy of equal consideration for owners, employees, and public will assure success.

We can face the future with confidence. As previously mentioned, the next 20 years are expected to bring our greatest period of growth and development.

If all of us are informed on company objectives, if all of us understand our own aims and objectives in working for this company, and if we all co-operate to achieve those objectives, the years ahead cannot help but be pleasant, fruitful, and rewarding.

With Tommy Hart

Dan Kahler, coach of the Ark City, Kansas, team which won first place in the Howard College tournament here last week, asked tournament director Harold Davis to be included on the list of invitations Davis will send out next year.

Kahler especially liked the manner in which local people treated his Negro players.

Wayne Fields, star running back of the Big Spring Steers, underwent surgery on an ailing knee last week.

The big junior, who was named to the second All-District 2-AAAA team recently, didn't have a torn cartilage but another kick on the knee might have finished his football career for good.

Benny McCrary, another Steer athlete, probably will undergo knee surgery immediately after the basketball season has ended.

The operation on Fields caused Coach Al Milch to move the start of spring training back until May. He had originally planned to start it around Jan. 13.

Charley Johnson, the former Steer quarterback who has been attending Schreiner Institute the past two years, has been offered an athletic scholarship by New Mexico A&M and will probably take it.

Milton Davis, another former Big Spring player, recently out of the service, may also get a chance to play football at the New Mexico school.

Johnson was deprived of the chance of playing football last fall when Schreiner dropped football but his scholarship held good, anyway. He hopes to become an engineer.

Frank Leahy doesn't want back in football because he needs the money.

He's reported to own about $200,000 in Montgomery Ward stock and a syndicated column-TV part-time netted him something like $80,000 last year.

The expense account allowed Bear Bryant when he was coach at Texas A&M amounted to $10,000 per annum.

When the Big Spring Steers went to the championship in the Odessa basketball tournament last weekend, they ran their worst record to 14-4.

That leaves them only four triumphs shy of their 1956-57 full season mark, at which time they set an all-time scoring record. And the locals still have District 2-AAAA play ahead of them.

Rob Milburn, the San Angelo scribe, has predicted that Big Spring will cop the 2-AAAAA during, with Abilene and Midland presiding the chief opposition.

Milburn sees Odessa finishing fourth and adds San Angelo will be lucky, if it wins a conference game.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The men have been separated from the boys in the $35,000 Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament.

And, of all things, Gay Brewer Jr., 25, a comparative youngster on the tourney trail, leads by a stroke in today's final scramble for the $7,000 first-place money.

The field was cut to 76 for fourth round play, with scores of 221 or lower qualifying.

Brewer clinaxed a brilliant third round by dropping a 15-foot putt on the 18th hole.

Tatum Tilt Moved To Longhorn Gym

The basketball exhibition featuring Goose Tatum's Harlem Stars and the New York Olympians, scheduled here at 8:15 p.m., Tuesday, will be played in the high school gymnasium rather than the HCJC fieldhouse.

Announcement of the change was made by Harold Davis of HCJC Sunday. Davis is sponsoring the show on the part of the HCJC athletic department.

Davis said the change was made with the idea in mind of giving everyone a seat who wants to see the fabulous Tatum. The world famous Goose will be making his first appearance here. The high school gym seats 1,700 and the college gym between 1,100 and 1,200.

BILL SPIVEY

Admission prices for the game will be $1.50.

There might have been better basketball games played in the local gym than the contest scheduled Tuesday night. Yet it is a cinch there never has been nor ever will be a funnier game.

Tatum, always good, is not only better and funnier than ever, he also gives out with more comedy. In fact, he is so funny his own players stop and laugh when he goes into his routine.

Bill Spivey, 7-1 University of Kentucky All-American, who heads the Olympians, is the greatest big man in basketball.

Famous for his agility despite his size, he has perfect coordination and was voted, unanimously, All-American for two consecutive years while at the University of Kentucky where he was coached by the famous Adolph Rupp, a former pupil of Coach Phog Allen, retired mentor at Kansas University.

Spivey received the Helms Foundation Athlete Award in 1951 for being the most standout college player in the nation.

It was Spivey's great work at center which enabled the Wildcats to win the last NCAA championship.

Spivey is adept at "goal-tending" and it is a simple matter for him to bat the ball out of the basket.

Bill is a high scorer, too. He has scored as many as 55 counters in a single game.

Spivey, however, prefers to feed his mates rather than score. He gets most of the rebounds and is a regular workhorse on both offense and defense.

Spivey has predicted that Big Spring won't win a conference football game during the next two seasons.

DALLAS (AP)—Claude Gilstrap, who has built a football dynasty at Arlington State, might well be named permanent coach of the year in Texas junior colleges.

For the fourth time in eight years the Texas Sports Writers Assn. has accorded his honor to the man who twice won the Junior Rose Bowl, something nobody else can claim.

The past season found Gilstrap with an undefeated, untied team that won the junior bowl handily. Thus he was picked as coach of the year for the second time in a row.

Gilstrap was first honored in 1949 when he was coaching at Paris. In 1954 he was picked as coach of the year while producing a top team at Arlington State. Then came 1956 and 1957 which saw him compile fine records and win the Junior Rose Bowl each time.

Gilstrap got 34 votes — exactly twice as many as the other contenders combined.

Philip George, who coached San Angelo to the national junior college basketball championship, was accorded 13 votes for second place.

PHOENIX (AP)—The University of Arizona has taken over the lead in the Border Conference basketball race in another of a series of surprising league developments.

Rated as a dark horse with a pre-conference record of 5-6, Arizona stunned defending champion Texas Western 71-67 last Saturday on the Texans' home court.

That was the only league game played and assured the Wildcats of sole possession of first place until this Monday night, when Arizona goes back on the road against New Mexico A&M and Texas Western hosts Arizona State College at Tempe.

A loud roar exploded from the gallery when the ball plunked home, giving the husky young pro a brilliant 67, and 207 for 54 holes. His total was a stroke better than Frank Trahanan of Toledo, Ohio, who also turned in a 67.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, second-round leader by two strokes, turned in a par 71 over the 7,100-yard Rancho course. He had a 209 total.

Tied at 210 were Billy Casper, Apple Valley, Calif., with a 68, and 22-year-old Tommy Jacobs, Whittier, Calif., with a 70.

At 211 were Canada's Al Balding, with a 68, and Bo Winingor, Odessa, Tex., 70.

Young Brewer, who hails from Lexington, Ky., but plays out of Cincinnati, began in fine fashion. His chip shots and putts, as he later admitted, were never better. He dropped putts up to 18 feet as he picked up five birdies.

Brewer who wasn't yet born when the veteran Harrison began his professional career, has won about every amateur laurel in Kentucky. In 1949 he was the national junior champion. He is relatively unknown in professional play.

Half a dozen other head coaching positions are also open.

Names heard most often are those of Cactus Jack Curtice, colorful Utah coach who recently led the West team to a surprise victory in the Shrine East-West game at San Francisco, and Jim Myers, young Iowa State coach.

Myers was reported to have made an undercover visit to A&M before coming here.

Curtice, according to other reports, could have his choice of either A&M or Stanford. He is said to have told friends he isn't interested in just a head coaching job. He also is athletic director at Utah and wants to be top man wherever he goes.

Texas A&M offers such a dual role. But Curtice isn't talking. Another version is that Navy's Eddie Erdelatz was willing to talk to Texas A&M people but negotiations for an interview got fouled up. Other names mentioned as possibilities include Minnesota's Murray Warmath, Andy Pilney of PHOENIX (AP)—Iowa State Football Coach Jim Myers this week flew to Philadelphia for the NCAA convention after holding a weekend conference with authorities at Texas A&M College.

The Houston Post said Myers was a leading contender for the A&M coaching job vacated by Paul (Bear) Bryant, who went to Alabama.

Both Myers and Dr. Chris Groneman, chairman of the A&M Athletic Council, refused to comment.

The Post said it appeared certain that Texas A&M would have a new coach by the time of the conclusion of the meeting Wednesday.

Myers took over at Iowa State last year and guided the club to a 4-5 record. Iowa State lost games in 1956.

Others said to be in the running for the College Station job, the Post said, were Dallas' Ward of Colorado and Jack Curtice of Utah.

Crow Scores Three TD's Despite Loss

HONOLULU (AP)—The Hawaii All-Stars, fortified with pros, took a 33-0 lead over their collegiate counterparts in the first quarter of the Hula Bowl game yesterday and won 53-34.

The five-touchdown passing of quarterback Tobin Role of the Detroit Lions and the line-plunging of Joe Parry of the San Francisco 49ers proved too much for the All-American studs college All-Stars.

The 49er back caught an 81-yard TD pass from Role and ground out three more six-pointers on line plunges of 1, 1/2 and 7 yards. The collegians finally came out of their doldrums in the third period after trailing 40-7.

Dallas Problem Will Be Aired

DALLAS (AP)—The Texas League will meet Thursday and try to solve the Dallas problem and a host of other headaches.

Dallas turned its franchise back to the Texas League last week because it was denied permission to try for a berth in a league of higher classification.

A club must be placed here before the season starts or it will become open territory. That probably would result in what the former Dallas owners—the Burnett interests—want, a league of higher classification moving in.

Warner Lewis, who was general manager of the Dallas club, applied to the Triple A American Assn. for membership Saturday. But Ed Doherty, president of the American Assn., said Dallas is not open territory and "we couldn't go in there if we wanted to. We are set with eight teams, anyway."

President Dick Butler of the Texas League said the only way Dallas could get into the American Assn. would be to buy out of the Texas League and buy into the American Assn. or for Dallas to become open territory.

The Mexican League was scheduled to meet today and will consider a proposal to merge Monterey and Mexico City with the Texas League, making the northern loop a 10-city circuit. Other Mexican club owners pledged opposition to such a move, however.

The merger question also will be taken up at the Texas League meeting.

The Oklahoma City franchise, which had appeared shaky, looked firmer today after the Indians formed a working agreement with the San Francisco Giants Saturday. Owner E. J. Humphries, who sold the park but retained a lease for a year, had said he wanted to sell the franchise to other Oklahoma City interests. Failing that, he said, he indicated he might move to some other city, possibly Corpus Christi.

Humphries said yesterday, however, all the club might be sold to a non-profit organization for "about $100,000." Moves have been initiated in the city to form a non-profit group to purchase the franchise.

By HUGH FULLERTON JR. PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The rumor machines stirred up a lot of froth today as college football coaches and athletic directors, nearly 2,000 strong, jammed into Philadelphia for the main portions of their annual conventions.

Conversation was concerned mainly with what football coaches may land the choicest jobs available — those at Texas A&M and Stanford.

Half a dozen other head coaching positions are also open.

Names heard most often are those of Cactus Jack Curtice, colorful Utah coach who recently led the West team to a surprise victory in the Shrine East-West game at San Francisco, and Jim Myers, young Iowa State coach.

PHOENIX (AP)—Iowa State Football Coach Jim Myers this week flew to Philadelphia for the NCAA convention after holding a weekend conference with authorities at Texas A&M College.

The Houston Post said Myers was a leading contender for the A&M coaching job vacated by Paul (Bear) Bryant, who went to Alabama.

Both Myers and Dr. Chris Groneman, chairman of the A&M Athletic Council, refused to comment.

The Post said it appeared certain that Texas A&M would have a new coach by the time of the conclusion of the meeting Wednesday.

Myers took over at Iowa State last year and guided the club to a 4-5 record. Iowa State lost games in 1956.

Others said to be in the running for the College Station job, the Post said, were Dallas' Ward of Colorado and Jack Curtice of Utah.

Raiders Face SWC Toughies

By WHITEY SAWYER The Associated Press

Texas Tech, playing its first Southwest Conference basketball season, meets TCU and SMU this week and a pair of victories would put the Red Raiders well on their way toward the championship.

Tech journeyed to Houston last week and dumped Rice, the pre-season favorite, 66-63. Texas Christian, winner of the pre-season tournament and current title favorite, whipped Texas A&M 71-55, defending champion Southern Methodist laced Baylor 63-51 and Arkansas edged Texas 57-55 Saturday in the other championship openers.

The Red Raiders, although giving away height, outbounced Rice and outshot the Owls from the free throw line. Rice veteran Gary Griffin was out with a virus, but Terry Thomas, another Owl star, returned to the lineup with a face guard protecting his broken jaw and tossed in 15 points.

Rice's 6-10 star Temple Tucker was held to eight points. Gerald Myers of Tech hit for 19.

Texas Tech hosts TCU at Lubbock Tuesday, then SMU goes to Lubbock Friday to try its hand on the Raiders' court. Other headliners match SMU and Rice at Houston Tuesday and TCU and Arkansas at Fayetteville Friday.

Monday Baylor hosts Arkansas at Waco Tuesday and Texas and Texas A&M play at College Station, Friday. Texas plays Baylor at Austin Tuesday and Texas A&M gets Rice at College Station.

TCU leads the conference for the season with victories and one loss. Texas Tech is second with an 8-2 mark and Arkansas, 7-3, is third.

Bracero Contract Fees Are Increased

The U. S. Labor Department today announced that the fees charged agricultural employers of Mexican farm workers entering the United States under the Migrant Labor Act will be increased. The new rates will be effective Jan. 1, 1958, to $10 per worker for contracting and $5 per worker for recontracting. The present fee for contracting workers is $7 and that for recontracting is $4.

Wm. J. T. Robertson, district supervisor for the Labor Department's Bureau of Employment Security here, said the increases, announced in Washington, had just been relayed to him by Regional Director Ed McDonald in Dallas.

IN LINE WITH COST

The Labor Department said the increases were ordered to bring fee collections more closely in line with actual transportation and subsistence costs incurred by the United States in bringing in Mexican nationals and making them available to employers.

The contracting fee is collected at the time employers contract with workers at the Farm Placement Service reception centers maintained along the Mexican border by the Labor Department's Bureau of Employment Security. No fees are charged employers for extension of work contracts beyond the original contract date. However, if the Mexican workers are recontracted to another employer, the new employer is charged a contracting fee.

REVOLVING FUND

The fees, as collected, are deposited in a revolving fund established in accordance with the Farm Labor Act of 1951. This fund stipulated that employers of Mexican farm workers brought in under the act should reimburse the United States Government for essential expenses (not including salaries or expenses of regular departmental or agency personnel) incurred for the transportation and subsistence of Mexican workers to and from the United States. The act set $15 as the maximum fee which could be charged employers for this purpose.

The United States government draws upon the revolving fund to pay transportation and subsistence costs incurred in bringing in the workers, maintaining them at reception centers until they are recontracted for, and then returning them to Mexico at the expiration of their work contracts.

BALANCE SEDUCED

The contracting fees charged ranged from $3 to $15 depending upon the size of the balance in the revolving funds. In recent years the fees have been set below actual transportation and subsistence in order to reduce a substantial fund surplus. As this surplus has now been reduced, the fees have been increased, Robertson said.

Under the law and Migrant Labor Act, Mexican workers may be brought into the United States for farm work when domestic farm labor is not available to perform the work for which Mexican nationals are to be employed.

Flood Victims Worry Over Pets

By BILL GIBSON
EDINBURG, Tex. (AP)—Francisco Santana's nine children seemed more worried about their three pet dogs and chickens than their flooded home.

They sat poker faced in a Red Cross shelter hastily thrown open yesterday to accommodate the hundreds of Edinburg residents chased from their homes. Water backed into yards and lapped into the houses when sewers were unable to handle rainfall totaling more than 8 inches.

Some of the many children evacuated cried when they reached the shelter. Parents tried to shush them, talking quietly among themselves.

"I've lived in the Valley all my life and I have never seen so much water," Santana said. The Edinburg man is 73.

His wife listened as he spoke. Their home was one of hundreds flooded when water backed knee deep over 71 city blocks.

Red Cross workers set up one shelter in a huge night club and another in an elementary school.

"We don't know what we are going to do," Santana said. The rains continued and prospects for an immediate receding of the water were dim.

Mrs. Guadalupe Barales, taken to the shelter on a stretcher, said she felt better about an hour after her arrival.

"I think she was just scared," her husband said. The couple and his 87-year-old mother, Mrs. Francis Barales, and their two children made the trip in by truck from their rural home. Water three feet deep covered the dirt lane to their house.

Doctors hurried about giving the sick quick checkups as they arrived. Restaurants brought in a hot meal of beef stew for the evening meal.

Cots and blankets were rushed from Harlingen Air Force Base and the Salvation Army provided warm clothing.

Rose DeMeiro Stanley, Gypsy girl who says she is 20 and happy, with her husband, Peter Tony Stanley, at her side, reaffirmed her desire to remain in Detroit with him despite statements by her parents in Washington saying they wanted her to return there. Her parents charge their daughter is being "held captive" in Detroit by Peter's parents.

Sub-Fired Missile Threat Explored

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) said today the Senate Preparedness subcommittee is exploring thoroughly the potential threat of missile-firing nuclear submarines to the United States.

Johnson said the progress this country is making in nuclear submarine developments would be studied with Rear Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, who developed the type the Navy now has in operation.

Rickover was called for testimony at a closed session today. Previously the group was reported to have been told by Allen Dulles, head of the Central Intelligence Agency, that the Russians have submarines which could fire missiles on American coastal cities.

Meantime, Sen. Jackson (D-Wash.) called for a special Navy program, headed by an official with power to act, to speed this country's missile submarine program. He renewed his call for at least 100 such submarines a year.

Jackson, a member of the parent Armed Services Committee but not of the subcommittee, said in a statement that "sooner than most of us think," Russia will have "large numbers of nuclear submarines armed with 1,500-mile missiles."

Cattlemen Are Told Integrity Pays Off

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Some 2,000 American cattle raisers were told today that their "investment in integrity" has paid off.

Don C. Collins of Kit Carson, Colo., told the first general session of the American National Cattlemen's Assn. convention here that the improved beef cattle picture has "vindicated" the stand against government price supports.

Referring to rain-improved range land and lower herd populations which have raised beef prices steadily in 1957, Collins said in a prepared speech "price support schemes were the first things smothered under by the green grass."

But Collins cautioned the cattlemen that "now is the time for the industry to make use of its 'period of grace' to design a future which will provide a dynamic security for ourselves and for generations to come."

He said that cattlemen were tempted during the height of the drought to ask for federal aid "even though we could see what was happening to other phases of farming."

"But we did not demand hand-outs from Washington. . . . Vanguard was not delayed a minute because of us," he declared.

Dr. Herrell Degraff, Cornell University professor of food economics and a special research director for the association's new fact finding committee, told the session:

"If we are to build a bigger market for beef, we can do so only by providing consumers with the beef they want, like they want it, and at a price that is competitively attractive."
