Such Stuff As Dreams Are Made Of

The Bard of Avon insisted that, "We are such stuff as dreams are made on, and our little life is rounded with a sleep."

Lately a major rash of magazine articles dealing with scientific study of dreams has broken out, and we have read our share.

Some old notions regarding the dream state have been broken up by scientific analysis embodying careful and prolonged observations based on scientific instruments of various kinds.

For instance, one dream-analyst—and by analyst we do not mean a diviner or soothsayer or even a psychiatrist or psychologist, but one who researches the cause, course and psychosomatic aspects of the dream state—asserts that dreams, as commonly understood, do not pass in the twinkling of an eye, but go on as long as it would take the dreamer to execute whatever physical action might be involved.

Also, another group of researchers established by scientific means, that dreams are not the products of heavy sleep, but on the contrary occur when the subject is sleeping lightly—a state, we imagine, halfway between sleeping and waking. We gather that most dreams take place in the forepart of the night before one gets thoroughly relaxed, and just before time to get up, when one is struggling between sleep and wakefulness. (Even in deep sleep a person moves some part of his body as often as every fifteen minutes.)

Some people say they never dream, and they believe it. But one observer asserts few, if any, people are ever completely dreamless. Those who think they never dream have so faint a recall as to be unable to believe they dream at all.

There was an old superstition that if one never told before breakfast none of the dire aspects of the dream would ever come true. Of course we are not superstitious in the slightest degree; but all the same we never tell our dreams before breakfast.

It has always seemed to us that dreams are the products of undigested waking thoughts, perhaps flashes of cerebration that were pushed from the conscious into the unconscious or subconscious, and there acted out.

If dreams and nightmares seem to follow a heavy feast, it could be because you are unable to attain a complete and restful state of slumber from overeating. The remedy would seem to be simple. Eat an early supper, and go easy with the groceries—especially the heavy stuff that is hard to digest.

Our Agricultural Potentials

The agricultural potentials of Texas are astonishing in scope and variety, as befits an area roughly nine hundred miles long and eight hundred fifty miles wide.

Thus before the last of last year's cotton "bolities" have been pulled in the upper cotton-growing regions of the state, farmers in the Rio Grande Valley around McAllen expect to harvest the first of the onion crop sometime this week—if the wet weather lets up long enough.

Most of West Texas has been troubled by a long dry spell this winter, but along the coastal plains and especially in the "Magic Valley" too much rain has interfered with the growing and the cultivating and the harvest of the vegetable crops.

The Associated Press reported from McAllen Sunday that the valley onions will be in "strong" demand for at least a month. Choice of the word quoted seems not to have been intentionally humorous.

Other growing areas have also been troubled by wet weather, and it will be some time in March before the Coastal Bend, the Laredo and the Winter Garden onions come on the market.

This year's Valley onion crop is the largest in some seasons, with 10,000 acres planted compared to 7,300 acres in 1958. But even if weather conditions stay normal, shippers don't expect to equal the 1958 loadings totalling 3,027 cars.

Growers were complaining of slipping cabbage prices, but the general harvest of vegetables which picked up last week found carrots in a favorable price situation due to the light harvest in the days preceding.

Letuce shipments at the beginning of this week were still light and the price stayed high accordingly.

There is no part of Texas, outside the desert region of the Pecos country, that is not adaptable to some form of vegetable, fruit or fiber—and the Pecos country under irrigation ranks with the best.

Even the Magic Valley of the Lower Rio Grande, of course, would be desert country without irrigation.

If it had to, Texas could produce enough food and fiber to keep the nation going if all the other states should fail.

But it has never much more than scratched the surface of its real agricultural potential.

David Lawrence Recording Of Attack Well Verified

WASHINGTON—The United States government has again caught the Soviet government in a willful lie about the murderous attack on 17 Americans traveling in an unarmed transport plane last September. Moscow now claims that the tape recording issued by the State Department here last week is a "fake"—but that's nonsense, and the Soviets know it. Consider these facts:

- The Soviet government was offered on last November 13 a chance to listen to the tape recording, but Ambassador Menshikov first refused and finally accepted only a typewritten copy of the transcript of the conversation between the Soviet flyers telling how they were in the act of shooting down an American transport plane near the Turkish border. Why didn't the Soviets call it a "fake" before? They had three months to say so publicly—or privately—to the American government.
- The officials of the United States government and their intelligence staffs knew full well that the question of authenticity might be raised, and so they checked and double checked every angle. Also, the American plane was in communication with Western ground stations just a few minutes before the attack. The time and approximate location were established beforehand beyond question.
- There is a monitoring system set up by the United States and its Allies close to the Soviet border of Turkey and other Middle Eastern boundaries, as well as in Western Europe and Canada. This vast electronic apparatus requires a big staff. Persons familiar with the Soviet languages monitor these listening posts along the Russian border, but highly trained American officers on the spot supervise the work as a part of the United States Air Force defense system.
- Authentic transcripts of the chatter that goes on between Soviet airplanes are recorded daily—sometimes simultaneously from three or four different monitoring points. These are constantly checked against one another. The transcript of the episode which cost 17 American airmen their lives as the Soviet pilots shot down the unarmed transport plane was checked and double checked most carefully before being formally presented to the Soviet government last November. It was recorded by the same personnel whose recordings have been continuously checked—and proved—in the past as authentic.

- The Soviet newspapers, by government direction, now criticize certain words in the translation issued by the State Department here. It is true that some Russian words could be translated in various ways, such as "you boys" or "you fellows" or "you comrades." It's hard, sometimes, to translate the vernacular or idiomatic phrases. But if anyone has any doubts about the exact meaning of the original Russian script, let him listen to it. When the under secretary of state, Robert Murphy, invited Ambassador Menshikov in Washington to listen to the tape recording and he refused, the same offer was made to the Russian embassy's air attaché, but this also was declined.
- Portions of the tape now have been played on the radio in this country in Russian, and will be repeated in international broadcasting so that anyone who understands the Russian language can make his own translation and decide for himself whether the basic facts of the transcript as issued by the Department of State are in accord with what the voices on the tape itself say.
- Officials here are astounded at the flatness of the Russian denial of the authenticity of the tape recording, and the only way they can figure it out at all is to assume that the Soviets, once having taken a position of complete innocence, do not dare now to change their minds. All the American airmen presumably are dead—so the Russians think the issue cannot ever be resolved.
- The Soviets could have contended that the attack on the American plane was not ordered by Moscow—for, obviously, there wasn't time to get such orders to their own planes—and that the Soviet patrol mistakenly acted on general orders to shoot down what it might have thought to be armed planes. This could have explained what happened, but it cannot now explain the reason for the lying.
- For the Soviet government has done itself irreparable harm throughout the world as it is caught in the act of telling falsehoods to the United States government in a matter involving the lives of 17 American citizens and their anxious relatives.
- There is also a suggestion of Soviet trickery in the luring of the American plane across the border into Russia. The State Department's announcement last week about the Menshikov-Murphy conference of November 13th was carefully worded on this point as follows:

James Marlow Confused On Spending Issues?

WASHINGTON (AP) — You think you're confused? Wait till you read this.

President Eisenhower has protested repeatedly against what he calls the spenders and demands that Congress stay within the 77-billion-dollar budget he sent up in January.

Just as a starter on how things can get mixed up: Congress can ignore his requests for economy and vote far more money than he asked. On the other hand, in some cases he doesn't have to spend it even if Congress votes it.

And some of what's voted this year may be meant for spending a couple of years from now. There's a big difference between appropriations and expenditures.

The Eisenhower barbs at spenders apparently nettled Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas, leader of the Senate Democrats. This week he said that over the past six years Congress appropriated 22 billion dollars less than Eisenhower's budgets asked.

Whereupon Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, leader of the Senate Republicans, announced the Eisenhower administration was getting together the full story, including "everything relating to the budget," and that he'd produce it.

It's a good guess that when the two leaders and all the other Democrats and Republicans get through arguing about the figures, not only the general public but perhaps most members of Congress will be more bemused than before.

One expert on government finances told this writer: "When it comes to voting on money problems, Congress is a place where the left hand knoweth not what the right is doing."

He didn't mean anyone was slipping a fast one over on anyone. He just meant things get mixed up.

The House and Senate Appropriations committees were created to examine money requests from the executive branch of the government, and decide what's needed. But those committees are not the only ones passing on money problems.

Eisenhower's budget, for instance, contains all kinds of requests for money in one form or another. The whole budget is the Treasury's baby. Some parts of it go to other committees.

Who gets what depends on the nature of what is asked.

Say the Senate Banking Committee comes up with a housing program that requires government backing. There are various kinds of housing in the program: one may deal with college housing, another with slum clearance.

Because one program requires a certain kind of action and money, the Senate Banking Committee handles it. But another, requiring different handling and financing, will go from the Banking Committee to the Appropriations Committee.

Then there's this case: The Appropriations Committee will approve a certain budget expenditure which is really an authorization to draw a check on the Treasury and spend the money this year.

Then the same committee may approve authorization for the government to obligate itself to spend money in a future year, but not this one or the next. For example: authority to make a contract to build a missile which won't be ready till 1962.

And the money Eisenhower requested in the budget he sent Congress in January is not the only money Congress will vote this year. Last June, for instance, Congress may have voted money to carry a government agency through till next June.

But now the same agency comes back, saying what it got was not enough, and it needs more to pay its expenses till June.

This is called a request for a supplemental appropriation. That means supplemental to what Congress voted last year for this year and not supplemental to what Congress votes this year for next.

Hal Boyle Where's That Sunday Peace?

NEW YORK (AP) — Curbstone comment of a Pavement Plato: America seems to have lost one of its safety valves — the old-fashioned Sunday afternoon nap.

It is hard to say just when civilization went astray in our country. Some say it happened right after the first World War when the Russians embraced communism and the Americans adopted prohibition.

Some date it from the time when U. S. women were given the ballot and also started smoking cigarettes in public. Still others claim civilization died with the five-cent glass of beer.

But a good case could be made for the contention that civilized living began to decline when the average man gave up his Sunday afternoon nap and took up Sunday driving. Life has been one mad whirl ever since.

The old-fashioned Sunday afternoon nap in most homes was a ceremony as full of ritual as a lodge meeting.

It started with a massive Sunday dinner, a loving work of art that took mother all morning to prepare. This was served promptly at two o'clock.

After a meal that would fell three of today's modest trench-ermen, the head of the house would push back his chair, yawn and say, "Well, guess it's time for the nap."

He would go into his bedroom, and when he took off his shoes you could hear his sigh of relief all through the house. In taking off his shoes father symbolically also shed the woes, griefs and annoyances of his whole work week.

He'd then stretch out on the bed, cover his face with the Sunday newspaper — and in five seconds be sound asleep.

"If any of you children dare wake him up, I'll—" said mother, leaving her threat unfinished as she waved a warning finger. Then she would retire to a comfortable chair in the living room, and doze herself over the pile of undarned socks in her lap.

Three hours after he hit the pillow, father let out a series of copious grunts, wheezes and groans, like an old steam engine on a hard uphill grade. Then he woke up.

Where is the family peace of those vanished Sundays? Today people work so hard on Sunday trying to find joy somewhere outside the home they are still worn-out on Monday morning.

Around The Rim

The Key To Greatness

One-hundred and fifty years ago a great American was born. He came into this world under the obscurity of the frontier; he was tempered in the fires of hardship, poverty and hard work; he died at the hand of an assassin after having staggered successfully under the ordeal of holding a convulsed union together.

Today many speak of him in such uncritical tones as though he were a god. Not infrequently, his contemporaries spoke of him as a buffoon, as ill-bred ignoramus, or as a diabolical albatross fixed on the neck of the nation.

But Abraham Lincoln has lived in increasing love of his countrymen because he was in all things simply what he was. No one aspired to be less of a hero to his fellows than Abe Lincoln, for the greatness of his soul was rooted in his sincere humility.

He knew how to speak the language of the people and to feel for the people because he had experienced their toil, their struggles, their frustrations. He knew how to speak the language of the learned because he had obtained knowledge to satisfy his insatiable thirst for it and not because of any demands that the obligation of culture might have placed upon him. He believed in freedom with all his heart and being because he had lived in freedom, and he sensed that freedom is not divisible but that all men are entitled to it.

Somewhat he was possessed of a bigness which enabled him to accept criticism and even profit by it, or to instinctively ignore it where principle was involved. He had little room for rancor. Abraham Lincoln was the sort of man who might have lived on the same block in your neighborhood. While he was attractive only in the sense of grandeur that comes from the rough hewn, he was innately approachable and friendly. He was imbued with a magnetism which repulsed the superficial and the arrogant and which attracted the real and the enduring.

He could be proud of his background without reveling in his poverty or resorting to demagoguery. He could be well clad and yet seemingly unkempt because vanity was not in his makeup. He could be excited and yet have time and heart for the lowly. In a gutless, he seemed to have intuitively known that God indeed looketh on the inside.

Beset by personal tragedies and burdens that would have crushed one of lesser strength and weaker faith, he managed to keep balance with a sense of humor. His resort to earthy stories was like the parable.

When he took his pen in hand, he used words as pictures and as weapons. While we remember only his nobler works, we also can find clarity and beauty in much of his trivia. Perhaps this is because he never sat down with any sense of or purpose to immortality in what he wrote or came to those who speak from the heart and from the conscience and yet who sense that words like time must not be wasted or idly used. Abraham Lincoln unpretentiously captured the poetry of immortality.

Abraham Lincoln was great because he was simply Abe Lincoln, a country lawyer who loved his country and his countrymen far more than himself.

Start Guarding Your Furniture!

Grand Rapids, en garde!

Something—that sixth sense—tells me that the chair is just about to be jerked out from under you and me. The sofa, too. Footstools, hassocks and floor cushions, likewise, I'm sure.

Furniture may become one with the dog unless we organize to preserve it and our comfort.

Sometimes, when I browse through the women's pages of the daily press, I have to pinch myself to be certain that what I am seeing and reading is really what I am seeing and reading.

This is one of those days. Here, on the women's page of one of New York's most-respected family journals, is a story and picture describing the newest item in home furnishings. It is, so-help-me-Henry, a leather strap with handle, to hang from the ceiling of home or office. Thus, straphanging can begin at home instead of in the subway or the bus.

It is designed for the tired-and-hungry businessman who has to stand up in the presence of his boss, or for the debilitated guest who has been fool enough to accept an invitation to a cocktail party and needs something to hang on to while he or she hangs around.

At first I thought the article and illustration a joke. But then I pinched myself and realized that the story said these straphangers for house or office had received a prize of $1,000 in a contest sponsored by the leather industry to develop new and practical 'whats' that again? uses for leather.

My first impulse was to shrug the whole thing off. But a moment or two of quiet reflection led me to the sudden realization that there has been a quiet conspiracy on foot to abolish furniture for about a decade. It all began some 10 years ago with the sudden infatuation of architects and interior decorators for Japanese houses and their interior decor, so often innocent of anything except straw mats and Cho-Cho-San. A cloud, no larger than an obi a decade ago, is now plain as Mount Fujiyama.

To keep the floor uncluttered, in classic Oriental fashion, everything must go, even you and me on our haunches. We are, straps like subway sardines in order to keep the line—the decorating line, that is—pure and perpendicular. Not only is the chair going, gone, but even those floor pillows that the decorators dreamed up about 10 years back will be with them.

As for straphanging in an office! Even a kid hunting his first job ought to know enough not to seek work with a boss who can't afford chairs, or who is so Legreish he keeps the employes standing at a conference until they are fainting from hunger and sprung ham hocks.

On the other hand, no junior executive wants the boss to believe he isn't capable of standing on his own two feet—at least for a reasonable period of time.

And the suggestion that the hang-up or hung-over at a cocktail party be provided with a strap to hang on to is too terrible to contemplate. A hostess who provided such straps would probably have to cut the guests down in order to get them to go home, and it'd serve her right, too.

I don't know how the rest of you feel about it, but darned if I was born to hang!

The Gallup Poll Sentiment For Stricter Labor Laws

PRINCETON, N. J. — As the battle in Congress over two programs for labor-management reform takes shape, a nationwide survey finds that a considerably larger proportion of the public believes present labor laws are not strict enough than think they are about right or too strict.

What is more, union member families themselves feel almost as strongly as the general public about the need to tighten up labor laws.

The Gallup Poll has just completed an intensive study of U. S. attitudes toward labor union practices and the "images" people have of both labor union and business leaders.

The first question asked both of the general public and of union member families in today's survey was:

"Do you think the laws regulating labor unions are too strict, or not strict enough?"

LABOR LAWS TOO STRICT? Per Cent

Too strict	9
Not strict enough	68
About right	20
No opinion	25

Here is the vote of union member families on the same question:

(UNION MEMBER FAMILIES) Per Cent

Too strict	9
Not strict enough	43
About right	30
No opinion	18

One bill, recently proposed by President Eisenhower and backed by Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, would go further in some respects than the other major labor reform bill, known to the public as the Kennedy-Ives bill, defeated last year in the House but reintroduced by Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. of North Carolina and 12 other Democrats.

When voters in today's survey were asked if they were familiar with the Kennedy legislation, one voter in four, or 25 per cent, said he had heard or read about it. Among union member families, 23 per cent said they were familiar with the proposal.

Among those persons who said they were familiar with the Kennedy bill and had an opinion about it, sentiment runs 5-to-1 in favor. Among union member families familiar with the Kennedy bill and having an opinion, there is a vote of 2½-4-1 in favor.

The question:

"Do you think Congress should or should not pass this bill?"

Per Cent

Should	53
Should not	40
No opinion	37

The vote of union member families:

Should	45
Should not	48
No opinion	36

Whether specific provisions of the Kennedy bill have more support or less than the Administration's bill will be determined in future surveys. Several of the key features for labor union reforms are included in both proposals.

One such provision would require a full accounting to the government of all funds entrusted to union leaders.

In a survey reported last October, the Gallup Poll found this reform had the support of nine out of ten persons with opinions, as follows:

"Would you favor or oppose a law requiring a full public accounting of all the funds taken and spent by labor unions?"

Favor	80
Oppose	7
No opinion	13

The same survey also found considerable public support for another provision which would require democratic procedures in union voting, as follows:

"Would you favor or oppose a law which would require union members to be elected by SECRET ballot?"

Favor	62
Oppose	20
No opinion	18

As reported Sunday in the first of this series of articles, the public approves of labor unions in principle. But an overwhelming majority of those who have followed the McClellan Committee investigations of racketeering in unions and management believe the committee should go on with its work.

Sentiment among union member families themselves closely parallels that of the general public, even in the face of the outspoken opposition to the McClellan Committee by union leaders.

Observance Planned Here For 'Texas Public Schools Week'

Plans are shaping up for the observance of Texas Public Schools Week here March 1-7. H. M. Rainbolt and C. R. McClenny, co-chairmen of a special committee for the program, have announced.

One of the highlights of the week will be the dedication of the new Gollad Junior High School the afternoon of Sunday, March 1. The modern new plant will be open for inspection throughout the afternoon.

Other features of the observance will be a poster contest in high school, junior high and elementary schools; special programs for service club meetings that week; and a special emphasis on school visitation.

A committee has been set up to work out arrangements for the week's program.

Assisting McClenny and Rainbolt are Roscoe Newell and Roy Worley, in charge of the various school activities; Elmer Tarbox, service club programs; Dr. W. A. Hunt, junior college visitation; S. A. Walker, luncheon meetings at school cafeteria; Thomas Ernest, poster contest; and Jim Lewis, publicity.

Rainbolt said the poster contest will be conducted in four divisions, including juniors and intermediates in the elementary schools, junior high and high school. Prizes will be awarded for the four best posters in each division.

An effort will be made to line up students as service club speakers during the week.

Texas Public Schools Week has been proclaimed by Gov. Price Daniel as a means of providing increased emphasis for public education. Here is the text of his proclamation:

"Greetings: Today, more than ever before, the importance of our schools is being realized in an awakened nation. A new perspective has been taken by education, both in scientific and liberal arts fields.

"As we rush to train scientists and place satellites in outer space, however, it is important to remember that our public schools will furnish our leaders of tomorrow with the basic human, moral and spiritual foundations necessary for more advanced training and knowledge.

"In an effort to make Texas public schools the finest in the nation, the citizens of our communities are urged to take an active interest in the school systems and to cooperate with the respective school boards, superintendents, principals and teachers.

"For the past nine years, Public Schools Week in Texas has been set aside as a special time each year to place increased emphasis on our educational system. Parent visitation is encouraged and each citizen is urged to recognize the tremendous importance of our public schools.

"Therefore, I, as governor of Texas, do hereby designate the week of March 1-7, 1959, as Public Schools Week in Texas."

Observances For Lincoln Day Developing

By The Associated Press. Observances honoring Abraham Lincoln today were the order of the day on virtually every level of American civic life.

President Eisenhower planned to attend a memorial banquet tonight in Washington. The President has proclaimed this year as Lincoln Sesqui-centennial Year.

Other celebrations marking the 150th anniversary Thursday of the birth of the Civil War President were planned throughout the week from coast to coast.

The NBC television network has prepared a film presentation of photographs and drawings of Lincoln during the Civil War years for 8:30 p.m. EST tonight.

"The Enduring Lincoln" is the theme of a two-day speaking program which opens today at the University of Illinois.

Congress gets into the act Thursday when a joint session will be held. Carl Sandburg, famed Lincoln biographer, will give an address and actor Fredric March will read the Gettysburg Address.

The sesqui-centennial events began early this year and are scheduled to continue into the summer.

Hadgenville, Ky., Lincoln's birthplace, was to be the scene Thursday of the first sale of the new one-cent Lincoln postage stamp.

Gov. A. B. Chandler of Kentucky will place a wreath on the door of the cabin where Lincoln was born Feb. 12, 1809. George Moore, executive assistant to Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield, will speak.

An international audience of some 20 ambassadors will attend a program Thursday night featuring a speech by Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin in Springfield, Ill.

Indiana, where Lincoln was reared, held a re-enactment of one of his speeches Tuesday in the lobby of the Claypool Hotel in Indianapolis. Lincoln's address on Feb. 11, 1861, was at the Bates House, where he stopped while on the way to Washington for his inauguration.

Meanwhile a letter from Lincoln and his copy of the report of the commissioner of agriculture in 1863 were presented to the Wisconsin Historical Society.

Soviet spokesmen, including Khrushchev and Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan have repeatedly called for a heads of government conference. While he was in the United States last month, Mikoyan argued that it would be a conference held in a fairly free wheeling manner without insistence on careful diplomatic work beforehand.

Despite the disagreement over the amount of advance preparation needed, informed officials say that a summit conference is indeed a possibility as things now stand.

Diplomats have reported that British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan is particularly interested in such a meeting. Macmillan faces the prospect of parliamentary elections within a year. Washington authorities say British political pressures were responsible for bringing about the summit conference at Geneva in 1955.

Meanwhile it was reported that a task force of U. S., British, French and German diplomats had completed the draft of a note to the Soviet Union suggesting a foreign ministers meeting on German problems in the spring, probably beginning late April or early May.

The note now must be checked with the NATO allies through the North Atlantic Council at Paris. It may be ready for delivery in Moscow next weekend or shortly thereafter.

Dr. Eugene Herrin, observatory director at SMU, suggested the tremor was the result of an atmospheric disturbance.

Randolph Air Force Base at San Antonio said a supersonic aircraft could have caused the shaking up. Cannon Air Force Base, Clovis, N.M., said it had no planes that could do it flying over the area at the time. The possibility of a meteor also was raised.

Witnesses said houses swayed and they reported hearing unpleasant noises like trucks hitting buildings, horses galloping, and gas explosions.

The seismograph at Texas Tech College in Lubbock registered a slight motion. One at Southern Methodist University in Dallas didn't.

Old Sweater Made Possible Family's Immigration To U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ibrahim Badra, lately of Amman in troubled Jordan, strode confidently down the gangplank of the liner Giulio Cesare Tuesday night with his wife and their three young children.

They brought with them bright hopes for a future of happiness in America — and they also brought a strange but heart-warming tale of an old, tattered sweater that made their dreams come true.

The sweater, knit 41 years ago by a 16-year-old American girl, was intended for an American doughboy in the World War I trenches of France.

It may have kept a doughboy warm. No one knows because there are missing chapters in the history of the sweater.

But it is known that the sweater was responsible for bringing Ibrahim Badra and his family to America.

And said Mrs. Rose Badra, speaking in her native tongue: "It is known all over the world that America is best for people and children."

The Badra family sponsors are Mrs. Marguerite Todd Beveridge, and her husband, the Rev. James Beveridge, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Belmont, Mass.

It was Mrs. Beveridge, then a schoolgirl, who knitted the sweater in 1918.

Before giving it to the Red Cross for shipment, Mrs. Beveridge had sewn a tag to the sweater with her name and address in New Rochelle, N.Y.

During the war she waited hopefully, but in vain, to hear from an American soldier that the sweater had arrived.

Finally in 1954, Mrs. Beveridge received a letter which had been forwarded to her Belmont home from New Rochelle.

The letter, from an Arabian family, thanked her for the sweater. They had received it from an unnamed Protestant missionary. How the sweater came into the possession of the missionary and where it had been for so many years remains a mystery.

But in 1954 it was being worn by Tanas Badra, an Amman tailor. He, too, had dreams of coming to the United States with his wife and six children.

Mrs. Beveridge and her husband tried to help, but there were complications. And, finally, Tanas Badra was too old to make the voyage to America.

Tanas Badra, however, had a son and the son—who is Ibrahim Badra—also wrote to Mrs. Beveridge about his dream of coming to the United States.

This time, with the help of the World Council of Churches and the Church World Service, the Rev. Mr. Beveridge and his wife obtained permission for the family of Ibrahim.

Ibrahim and his family will go to Belmont with the Rev. and Mrs. Beveridge.

The sweater? It finally became too tattered and torn to wear, Ibrahim said, and his father discarded it.

Don't worry yourself into NERVOUS CONSTIPATION

A serious chronic condition often starts with simple irregularity due to lack of bulk

Millions find gentle safe relief with Kellogg's All-Bran and milk

As you know, almost everyone has trouble with constipation at one time or another. But this ailment is particularly common among sensitive and intelligent people, the people who are especially vulnerable to the tensions of modern living.

Quite often these folks tend to lose appetite in times of stress or when they're under pressure. They just don't eat enough, or not enough of the right foods, and this leads to irregularity due to lack of bulk in the diet. Of course, laxative drugs are almost useless in a case like this, because they contain no bulk. But fortunately, there is a natural way to gentle regularity. A safe, delicious way. The Kellogg's All-Bran way.

Kellogg's All-Bran, you see, is a whole bran cereal. And bran is nature's best bulking forming food. So just half a cup of Kellogg's All-Bran with milk provides all of the good bulk food needed for consistent regularity (Wonderful bran muffin flavor, and good nutrition, too.)

If you'd like to try Kellogg's All-Bran, consider this offer. Just enjoy this good-tasting cereal with milk each day for 10 days. Then, if you are not completely satisfied, and we mean satisfied in every way, return the empty carton. By return mail we will refund twice the money you paid—and that's a promise from Kellogg's of Battle Creek.

Ike Apparently Believes A Summit Meeting Is Possible

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower apparently believes that a summit conference late this year is a definite possibility.

Such a meeting would bring him and other Western government heads face-to-face with Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev for a discussion of critical East-West issues. These undoubtedly would include questions of Germany and of disarmament.

Whether a conference is actually arranged probably will depend partly on whether East-West negotiations in the meantime ease Soviet pressures to get the United States, Britain and France out of West Berlin.

Eisenhower himself brought up the subject of a summit meeting briefly at his news conference Tuesday in discussing a question about the effect of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles' illness on prospects for a foreign ministers conference.

The President said he thought that Dulles' condition would not delay a foreign ministers conference, but noted that there has been no agreement with the Soviets yet on actually holding such a session. Then he added:

"I believe the Russians themselves are more concerned. Mr. Khrushchev is concerned, in a heads of government meeting, as he calls an informal and without-agenda type.

"Well, that would take a great deal of preparation."

Documentary Films Available

Civic, service, church, fraternal groups now can have access to films from the "Twentieth Century" documentary television series, Jim Pujos, in charge of the Big Spring Prudential Insurance office, has announced.

Organizations desiring to use any of the films which have been used on the program can apply through the local Prudential office for them, Pujos said. Particulars can be gained by calling the office in the Permian Building, AM 4-5903, he added. About a month should be expected for delivery.

Some 7,000 showings of the films have been made to schools throughout the country. The films deal with major historic episodes during the past 50 years. Among the long list of films are "Churchill, Man of the Century," "Revolt in Hungary," "Enter with Caution: the Atomic Age," "Rockne of Notre Dame," and "Woodrow Wilson."

In addition, Pujos said that new films become available after their initial presentation on television.

Jury Votes Acquittal

Klaus Reich, WAFB airman, was acquitted by a Howard County jury at 2:54 p.m. Tuesday. He had been tried for possession of a switch blade knife.

His acquittal was the second to be returned in two cases tried through Tuesday in the Howard County Court. On Monday afternoon, Eddie Brooks, also charged with possession of an illegal weapon, and found not guilty.

Reich was arrested last Nov. 24. A search of a car near which he was standing brought to light a switch blade knife.

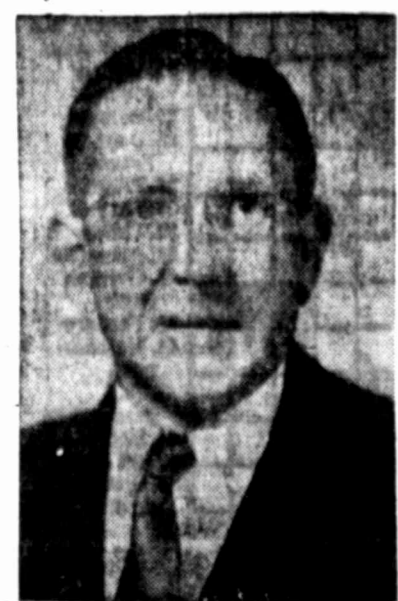

The jury deliberated 30 minutes before marching back into court and handing its decision to Judge Ed Carpenter.

Texan Deep In The Heart Of N. Y. Vice Case

NEW YORK (AP)—A Texan deep in the heart of a vice case says after-hours drinking drew him to an East Side apartment raided by police.

Harry Evons of Houston was called as a witness at the prostitution trial of ex-school teacher Virginia McManus, and three other women.

"The shame of this is that I haven't done anything in this instance," Evons said, perspiring on the stand. "I was there only 5 or 10 minutes and in the bathroom when the police officers came in."

The police dropped in early Friday on the $350-a-month apartment of Beatrice Garfield, 29, a convicted madam. In addition to Evons and the misses Garfield and McManus, they found Gayle Siney, 23, and Barbara Jackson, 26, and another man.

Evons, middle-aged and married, testified he had taken off his jacket for comfort but didn't think he had removed his trousers. "I had been drinking," he said.

In reply to a question, Evons said he did not see any of the women unclothed. "They were wearing either dresses or slips, but maybe they didn't have their shoes on."

Police say Miss McManus was nude and the others were scantily dressed.

Police offered into evidence court-approved wiretaps, purporting to show the apartment was the headquarters for a $50 to $100 a date call girl ring.

Most Violent Weather Eases

By The Associated Press
The most violent weather of winter eased today but the damaging and crippling effects of the storms were far from erased in many parts of the eastern half of the country.

As storms ended or diminished in most areas, floods or threats of new overflows harassed areas in a half dozen states.

In St. Louis, hit by a killer tornado, the huge job of cleaning up was one of the major problems. Another was the finding of new homes for the estimated 1,400 made homeless by the twister.

The tornado, striking early Tuesday, killed at least 21 persons. Seven others are missing.

Of the estimated 300 persons injured, 70 remained in hospitals, one in critical condition. Some 4,000 buildings were reported damaged at a loss of 13 million dollars by the Insurance Board of St. Louis.

In many other parts of the storm belt, pounded by ice, snow, sleet and rain storms for more than two days, there were big jobs — restoring communications, clearing streets and highways and getting business, industry and schools back to normal.

Tornadoes also hit areas in other parts of Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky. Six persons were injured in Kentucky and five in Ohio. Many homes were damaged.

The floods in the northern half of Ohio and in the upper Wabash Valley in Indiana were the worst.

Thousands have been forced from their homes. A state of emergency was in effect at Findlay and Van Wert, Ohio. The overflows in Indiana were the most damaging since 1943.

Learning About It The Safe Way

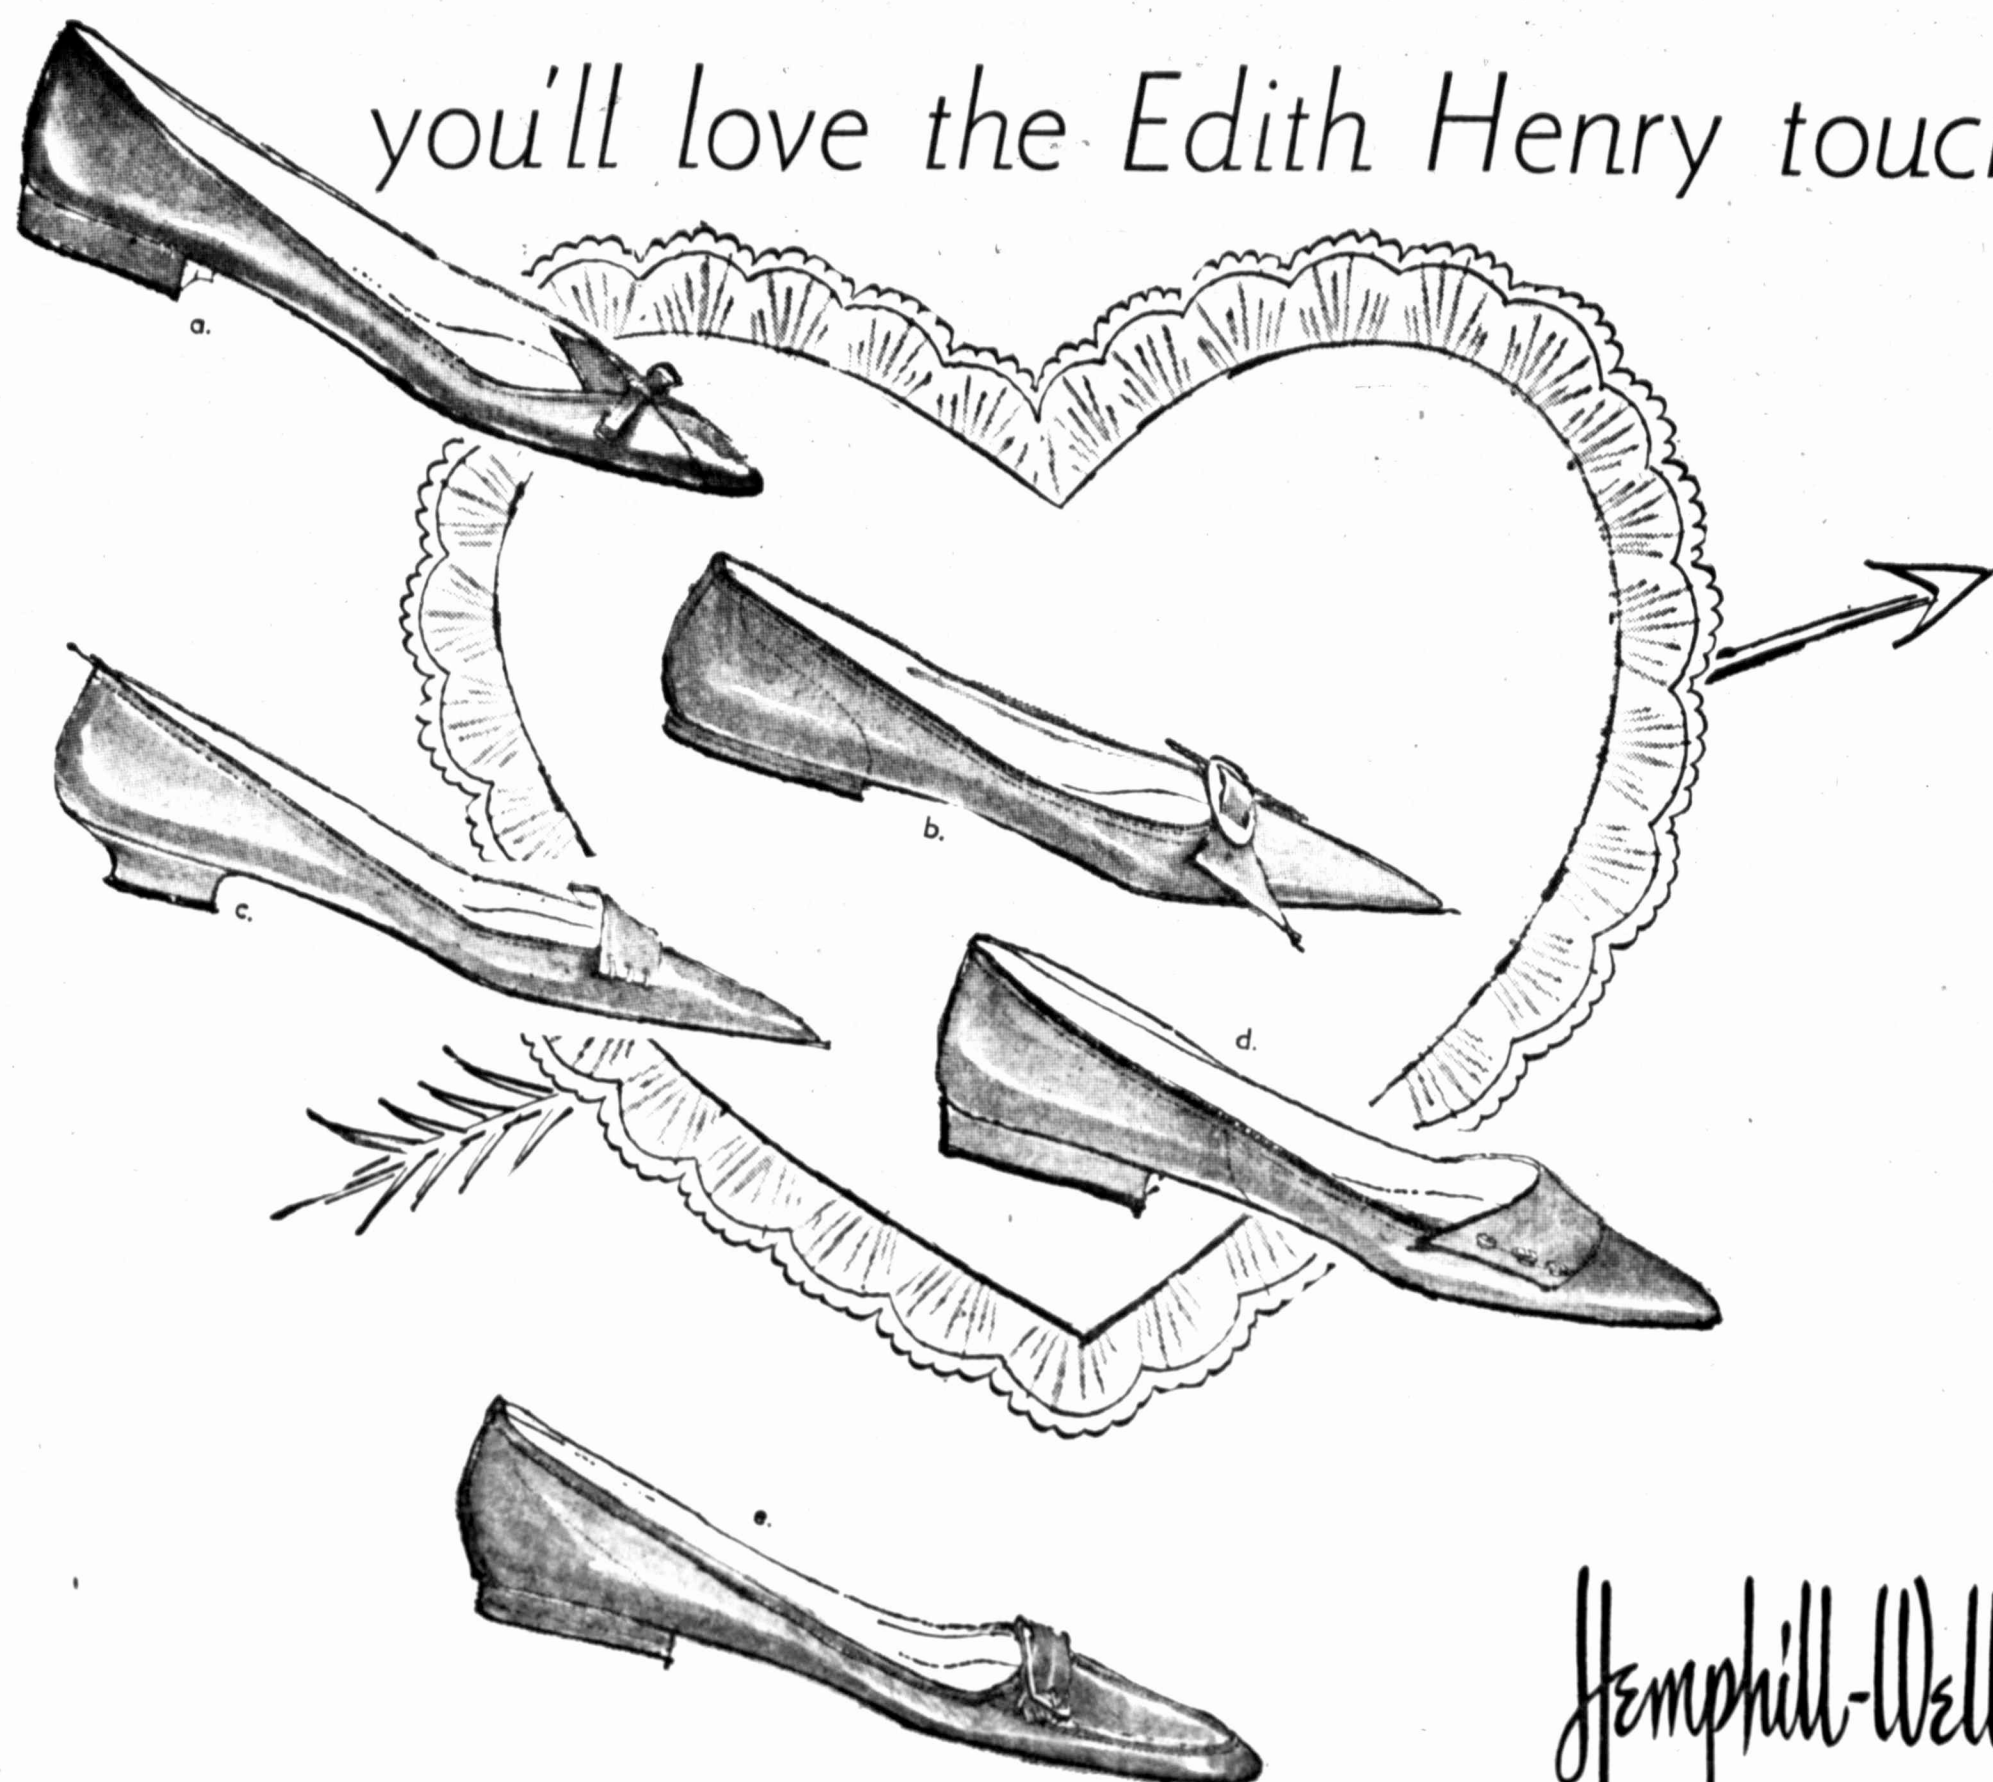

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Mrs. Henry F. Chadeayne groped for the ringing telephone early Tuesday.

It was a long distance call from her nephew, David Volk of Indianapolis.

"Are you all right?" Volk asked. "Of course," replied Mrs. Chadeayne. "Why do you call at this hour?"

Then she and her husband learned of the tornado which had ripped through St. Louis, passing a half a block from their apartment.

Ike Aide Brings Political Thinking Into Appointments

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republicans are crediting presidential assistant Wilton B. Persons with bringing about a new White House awareness of political matters in appointments.

Persons, who succeeded Sherman Adams as President Eisenhower's right hand man, apparently is pleasing congressional Republicans with his cooperative ways.

Unlike Adams, who sometimes preferred a Democrat to a Republican, Persons is reported to feel that the road to harmony within the party is through paying attention to the recommendations of party senators and House members when there is a job to fill.

Congressional Republicans have pressed this same view upon GOP National Chairman Meade Alcorn, with reports of varying success. There have been some complaints, but most of them think Alcorn's record of consulting with them is improving.

For his own part, Alcorn apparently is finding it a great deal easier under the Persons regime than under Adams to convey his appointment recommendations to Eisenhower.

Unlike Adams, Persons has assigned specific responsibilities within his office and has assigned David Kendall as his deputy to pay personal attention to patronage matters.

Eisenhower told his news conference Tuesday that no one, including Alcorn, can veto any selection he may make for an appointment. But his statement that "political considerations come in" was interpreted as indicating more awareness of this factor than some Republicans thought he had shown in the past.

In this connection, it seemed unlikely that Eisenhower would override Alcorn's opposition to appoint Henry Labouisse, Connecticut Democrat, as head of the International Cooperation Administration.

Sen. J. William Fulbright, quoting published reports that Alcorn had intervened to prevent the nomination of Labouisse, told the Senate Monday that "is going too far." He called on Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles to resist political pressure in making diplomatic appointments.

C. Douglas Dillon, acting secretary of state, was reported to be backing Labouisse to succeed ICA chief James H. Smith Jr., who is retiring. But Republican congressional leaders registered their support of Alcorn's opposition to the appointment.

Alcorn's candidate for the job was known to be Leonard Saccio, Connecticut Republican who has been serving for the last year as deputy director of the ICA.

Ash Wednesday Today Opens Lenten Season Of Six Weeks

Ash Wednesday services mark the beginning of the Lenten season, a period of penance for members of the Catholic, Episcopal and Lutheran churches.

These special services will continue through Easter. The title of today's special services comes from use of ashes as a symbol of penitence.

Present custom of the Catholic Church is to take ashes made by burning palms used in the ceremony of the previous year's Palm Sunday. Reference is given to the scripture, "Dust thou art and to dust thou shalt return," in the ceremony.

Ash Wednesday and Lent services in the Lutheran Church are aimed at the Passion story and remembrance of the last days of Christ.

The season until Easter is a time of abstinence from certain foods or pleasures for various persons in these churches to bring the Easter season into closer focus.

Lent, which comes from the Latin word lenc meaning spring, was originally of 40 hours duration signifying the time between Christ's death and His resurrection. Additional days were added, their number varying in different churches.

The season came to begin with Ash Wednesday in the Middle Ages, and at that time no meat was allowed during the time. Later milk, cheese and eggs were forbidden. Slowly, however, the fast was changed to one meal allowed at night.

Texans Drink Less Whisky, More Beer

AUSTIN (AP)—Texans apparently are drinking less whisky and a little more beer.

The Texas Liquor Control Board's annual report to Gov. Price Daniel showed that while liquor excise tax brought in $12,383,231 in 1957 the total dropped to $11,639,646 last year. The beer tax increased from $17,132,479 to $17,558,131. A total of $30,471,409 was collected in taxes, about $250,000 less than in 1957.

Local option elections last year made only minor changes in the state's wet-dry distribution. Texas has 142 counties dry, while 92 counties permit the sale of distilled spirits and 17 more allow beer sales.

Mamie Heads For Arizona

WASHINGTON (AP)—Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower journeyed toward an Arizona vacation today after a send-off from the whole Eisenhower family.

Mrs. Eisenhower and her sister, Mrs. George Gordon Moore, left Tuesday night aboard a Southern Railroad private Pullman for a visit to a health and beauty resort near Phoenix.

Before the train pulled out, Eisenhower and the Eisenhowers' son, daughter-in-law and four grandchildren boarded the car to say farewell to the First Lady.

Mrs. Eisenhower and her sister are due in New Orleans at 8:50 p.m. today and reportedly plan to arrive at Phoenix Sunday for a two-week stay.

A short time before Mrs. Eisenhower left, the White House said the President may fly to Augusta, Ga., for a weekend of golf immediately following his talks with Mexico's President Adolfo Lopez Mateos at Acapulco, Mexico, next week.

Scientist Lures Bedbugs From Bed

By RENNIE TAYLOR
Associated Press Science Writer

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP)—A University of California scientist is weaning bedbugs away from human beings.

He has trained some of the insects to choose rabbits as hosts even when they have the alternative of feeding on the scientist's own blood.

The unusual research project was undertaken in the hope that it would answer a question important in genetics—can an insect parasite's taste be so changed that its descendants will inherit this new preference?

It will take several generations of these college-educated bedbugs to give the answer. If the final result is affirmative, it may mean science may be able to control some insect pests by altering their tastes.

The research is being done by Prof. Robert L. Usinger, an entomologist in the college of agriculture.

Usinger divided his subjects into two groups. One group was allowed to feed only on rabbits or some other nonhuman organism. The other group was treated to a diet of the professor's blood.

Next he let both groups get good and hungry. Then he rigged up a gadget which allows a bug to choose between man and rabbit.

This contrivance was a T-shaped tube, open at all ends. A bug turned loose at the bottom of the T would crawl up the inside of the tube until it came to the crossing. At one end of the cross tube was Prof. Usinger's bare arm. At the other end was a rabbit.

When the bug reached the cross he picked up the scent of both rabbit and professor. He could then follow his choice.

In test after test, Usinger says, the rabbit-conditioned bugs turn to their newly adopted host. But the choice isn't always unanimous. What the future descendants of these bugs will do in such a test is yet to be determined.

Usinger says the bedbug started thousands of years ago as a parasite of bats, and some of them graduated to man when humans lived in bat-infested caves. Later, some of the man-biting bedbugs developed a taste for pigeons, which also shared human dwellings.

Alaskan Farmer Needs Outside Work To Help Support Family

By WARREN BURKETT
Reporter-News Military Editor

COLLEGE, Alaska — What's the farmer doing in Alaska?

About now, most of them are working at something else in order to be able to afford farming this spring.

Dr. Allan H. Mick's Agricultural Extension Service at the University of Alaska and Palmer reports that almost all farmers and homesteaders need off-season employment away from the farm for several years to tide the family over until the farm is able to produce enough income to support the family.

Some farmers net $10,000 a year or more, but the average is closer to $4,000 about $2,000 lower than the minimum earnings it is estimated to be necessary for a year in Alaska. The service estimates that there are 200 full-time and 350 part-time farmers producing nearly $9 million worth of produce.

Homesteading is possible in many areas, although under the new statehood transition it may be sometime in 1960 before a clear-cut set of new homestead rules marks the path of homesteading of state and federal lands. The average size of all farms in the U. S. is 242 acres, but an Alaska settler can obtain only 160 acres by homesteading.

farmers. Cucumbers and tomatoes will mature here in the warmer summers where they will not in the Matanuska.

NEEDS FERTILIZER

Like almost all Alaska soils, the area must be fertilized for even the first crop, the service recommends, with 200 pounds of 10-20-10 for grain, 750 pounds of 8-28-16 for potatoes and 250 pounds of 10-32-10 plus 280 pounds of ammonium nitrate for grassland.

The same dairy-potatoes-beef-truck farming pattern also prevails on the Kenai Peninsula, south of Anchorage in the area of the state's developing oil boom. Livestockmen will import most of their grain until early maturing cereal varieties are developed. All concentrated feeds are imported, which opens the possibility of someone establishing a feed mill in the state at some future time.

Out along the Aleutian Island chain, native grasses are abundant and an estimated 14,000 sheep and 1,700 cattle are ranched here. Some of the sheep operators are from Lubbock, Tex., Dr. Mick said. Most of the beef and mutton is sold locally or at Anchorage.

In southern Alaska, around Juneau, Sitka and Ketchikan, farming is strictly local and its 35,000 population offers no market for central Alaska produce. Shipping is cheaper from Seattle.

Farm machinery is sold at "stateside" list prices, plus shipping cost, the service reports.

A reindeer meat industry is growing slowly, but hampered because only the Eskimo may own reindeer and there is a shortage of acceptable processing and inspecting facilities.

State and federal farm assistance agencies have offices in Alaska, and the Extension Service provides good bulletins on prospects.

Local Schools Featured In Management Publication

The Big Spring school system is featured in the February issue of Texas School Business, independent publication dealing with school management.

The magazine's cover carries a picture of Supt. Floyd Parsons, and a brief statement of his educational philosophy.

Eight pages of text and pictures tell the story of the Big Spring Independent School District.

The article traces the growth of the school system, particularly during the past 10 years in which enrollment has practically doubled.

Considerable space is devoted to the school program, which is fully accredited with all the state and regional accreditation agencies, including the Texas Education Agency and the Southern Assn. of Secondary Schools and Colleges. The new enriched program for talented students is described, along with the growing special education curriculum for handicapped children.

Twenty-three pictures of classroom and other school scenes are used to illustrate the 4,000-word article.

'Ungrateful' City Drops Tax Notice

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP)—John B. Leonard figured he had seen the limit of ingratitude when his 1958 city tax notice listed a $4.30 billing for an ancient four-room house.

Red-faced city officials hurriedly sent a letter advising Leonard the tax had been dropped.

They suddenly remembered that last year Leonard had let city and county firemen burn the house in a training exercise.

COSTS HIGH

Part of any tract can never be used because of wetness, steep slopes or other limitations. Cost of clearing land can run from $50 to $150 an acre, yet the homesteader cannot obtain a mortgage loan until he has title to his land, a process of three years for non-veterans.

Land, home and other improvements, including animals and machinery, may bring the homesteader to tie up $65,000 and 10 years of work in a 160-acre tract. The service figures the average U. S. farm has $25,000 capital per worker invested, while an Alaska dairyman has $40,000 invested.

Dr. Mick estimates more than 90 per cent of the food consumed in Alaska is brought in from the "south 48."

Oldest of Alaska farm developments is the Matanuska Valley, founded under federal sponsorship as a resettlement for depression-bitten farmers. It is located north of Anchorage, the state's largest city.

Also near Anchorage are the Susitna, Copper River and Kenai Peninsula farming areas, all in a rudimentary state of development. Fifty families from Detroit are due to arrive in Anchorage this summer to hunt homesteads in the Anchorage area.

Only a fourth of the 50,000 acres of tillable land in the Matanuska Valley is under cultivation. Farms are occasionally available at $15-$25 for an uncleared acre — or $200 or more for cleared land.

DAIRYING POPULAR

Dairying is the region's most important farming project, producing a million and a half dollars in income. Potatoes are the valley's second most important crop. Other crops include lettuce, carrots, cabbage, celery, turnips and rutabagas.

The long hours of summer sunlight produce cabbages and turnips almost too big for a man to handle. Poultry and egg raising faces stiff competition from "outside" through airborne and express products. There is no fryer or broiler production. A few log farms are in operation, and an occasional family markets a few rabbits, goats or sheep.

The Tanana Valley near Fairbanks also grows potatoes, sold largely to military establishments. From Big Delta to Nenana there are about 200,000 acres suitable for crops, of which about 165,000 have been cleared.

There are one large and several small commercial dairy

Oil Control Plan Urged

AUSTIN (AP)—A mandatory control program on crude oil and petroleum products to replace the voluntary plan which expires Feb. 28 has been urged by the head of the Texas Railroad Commission.

Ernest O. Thompson said he hoped the Cabinet committee reviewing the imports controversy "will come up with a definite, positive, clear and enforceable program that the President will promptly put into effect on March 1."

The present program, already extended, applies to five districts of the country and limits imports to 221,100 barrels a day from the Pacific Coast and 713,000 barrels daily for the other four areas together.

Thompson would make the plan nationwide.

Thompson said a new order

"should be out and in effect so there will be no further breakdown followed by an uncontrolled flood of oil and products imports."

Little Girl Caused Abe To Grow Beard

WASHINGTON (AP)—Because an admiring little girl told him "you would look a great deal better with whiskers," Abraham Lincoln grew the beard that is so much a part of America's image of its 16th president.

It happened in the fall of 1860, in the closing days of a bitter presidential campaign fought in the shadow of oncoming Civil War. It is an oft-told story, recalled today on the eve of Lincoln's 150th birthday anniversary.

In upstate New York, Grace Bedell, 11, pondered a picture of Abe Lincoln, the Republican candidate. Her father had brought her the picture from a fair.

After a while, Grace sat down and wrote to Lincoln, saying she wanted "you should be president of the United States very much."

"I have got four brothers and part of them will vote for you anyway," Grace confided, she promised that "if you will let your whiskers grow I will try to get the rest of them to vote for you."

"You would look a great deal better for your face is so thin," the New York girl told Lincoln. Then she added this persuader:

"All the ladies like whiskers and they would tease their husbands to vote for you and then you would be president."

Lincoln got the letter at his home in Springfield, Ill. Despite the heavy demands of the campaign, he replied at once.

He wrote Grace he'd never worn any whiskers, and asked her in a gently humorous vein: "Do you not think people would call it a piece of silly affection (sic) if I were to begin it now?"

But Grace's advice took, because Lincoln began growing his beard immediately. And, whether or not this had anything to do with the outcome, he was elected several weeks later.

In February 1861, Lincoln began his slow train trip to Washington, stopping along the way for rear platform talks to crowds that turned out to see him.

One stop was at Westfield, N.Y., where Grace lived. Lincoln had not forgotten her letter. He told her fellow townsmen about it and asked if she was in the audience.

Bashfully, Grace came through the crowd. Lincoln stooped from his great height and kissed her. Then the train pulled out, and Lincoln headed for the great caress and the ultimate death by assassination that awaited him.

After a while, Grace sat down and wrote to Lincoln, saying she wanted "you should be president of the United States very much."

"I have got four brothers and part of them will vote for you anyway," Grace confided, she promised that "if you will let your whiskers grow I will try to get the rest of them to vote for you."

Hagerty Denies Ike Worried Over Dulles

WASHINGTON (AP) — "That's cockeyed," White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty gave that reply Tuesday night when asked about reports President Eisenhower is concerned over the possibility that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles may not be able to resume his duties.

The reports came from Republican congressional sources after Dulles entered Walter Reed Hospital for a hernia operation and treatment of a recurring intestinal inflammation.

Hagerty also scoffed at other reports that Eisenhower is giving serious consideration to a possible successor to Dulles.

Along the same line, an influential GOP official came away from the White House with a report he was convinced that every member of the President's official family expects Dulles to recover rather swiftly.

At Walter Reed, Maj. Gen. Leonard D. Heaton, the surgeon who will operate on Dulles, said the hernia operation will be a simple one. He predicted the 70-year-old Cabinet member will be on his feet a short time later.

Despite official denials, however, speculation was reported running through administration circles as to a possible successor if Dulles is unable to return.

The most frequently mentioned name was said to be that of John McCloy, New York banker and former U. S. high commissioner to Germany.

Also among those being considered are Under Secretary of State Christian Herter, who will fill in for Dulles, and Under Secretary C. Douglas Dillon.

N. Mexico Kills Nuptial, Rape Bills

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The New Mexico Senate killed two bills Tuesday which Sen. William Osborn (D-Roswell) said were "good and necessary."

One bill would have lowered the age for marriage with parental consent from 16 to 14 for women and 18 to 16 for men. The other was a bill lowering the age on statutory rape from 16 to 14.

"Now, the only way a girl of 14 can get married is to have a doctor's certificate that she is pregnant," Osborn said. "A lot of kids are finding out about this and using this means to force the marriage."

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I do not take alcoholic beverages as our religion does not permit it. As a result of this we have had many embarrassing moments. How do we handle the situation gracefully when a hostess tries to force a drink on us? Should we announce that we are forbidden to drink because of religious principles? Or should we simply say, "No, thank you — not right now." NON-DRINKERS

2 Defendants Plead Guilty At Garden City

GARDEN CITY — There were no jury cases in Glasscock County District Court on Tuesday afternoon.

Two of three defendants slated for trial pleaded guilty before Judge Charlie Sullivan. The case against the third was continued for the term and will not be tried until September.

There hasn't been a jury trial in a criminal case in Glasscock County in over three years, according to Guilford Jones, district attorney. He had expected two of the cases Tuesday to go to the jury.

Avon Autry Garrard, San Angelo, charged with DWI second offense pleaded guilty and was assessed a fine of $250 and given a year probation sentence.

William Delbert Higgins, identified as an itinerant magazine subscription solicitor, pleaded guilty to forging a $35 check. He was sentenced to serve two years in the state penitentiary but was credited with 104 days he has already served in the Glasscock County jail.

James P. Crowe, third defendant under indictment, charged with DWI second offense, was granted a continuance in his case. His attorney could not be at the court for the trial on Tuesday.

Tornado Causes Only Partly Known

By JOHN BARBOUR
NEW YORK (AP)—The tornado, most violent of all storms, is a deadly demon of chance.

It is usually born in the wildly boiling thunderstorms that signal relief to people in the grip of hot, muggy air.

But a specific tornado, like the one that struck Tuesday in St. Louis, can't be predicted.

The dark fingers that reach out of thunderstorm clouds contain within them winds estimated at up to 500 miles an hour.

Pressures inside the finger are so diverse that buildings literally explode as the tornado engulfs them. Then their debris is sucked into the whirling winds.

Almost as much is unknown about tornadoes as weathermen know.

Generally weathermen know the sorts of conditions that lead to tornado danger. But why suddenly a tornado dips down from the wildly gyrating clouds is still a matter of theory.

If you had a kettle of the size of the Midwest and wanted to brew yourself a tornado, weathermen could tell you most of the ingredients.

First take a blanket of warm, moist air. Then add with altitude rapid degrees of much cooler, dryer air.

This in itself is an unstable situation, since the warm air tends to rise, being less dense than the cool air.

But in most tornado situations, this picture is complicated by a strange characteristic of the warm air blanket.

Normally temperature and moisture content tend to lower the higher you go.

But sometimes—in tornado situations—temperature and moisture content seem to suddenly rise when you get to about 5,000 or 6,000 feet. This suddenly warmer layer is called an inversion layer.

Above this layer is cooler, dryer air, which continues to get cooler and dryer the higher you go.

Some weathermen believe that the cooler air above this warm inversion layer forms a sort of cap. Underneath storm energy builds up.

An advancing cold front usually lifts the warm air up too, so that it condenses and lends still more energy to the growing weather situation.

When the warm air finally gets enough energy to break out of the inversion layer, it rises rapidly through the cooler air. The resulting boiling of condensing moisture, heat and air forms the storm and the clouds.

February and March are the beginning of the tornado season. The peak months are April, May and June, with tornado activity dying in July.

11 Boys Score As Jayhawks Turn Back South Plains JC

HC Captures 5th Zone Win

South Plains JC of Levelland captured an overwhelming number of rebounds, intercepted more than its share of passes and got away an abundance of shots but still got beat by the Jayhawk score of 16-7. South Plains is 0-8 within the league and has now lost 15 straight games.

The win was the fifth in eight conference starts for the Jayhawks. Overall, the local colleges are 16-7. South Plains is 0-8 within the league and has now lost 15 straight games.

The score could have been a lot worse, although the Texans made it extremely close for the first ten minutes of the game. Gilbert Bell, one of the ace rebounders on the team, didn't even get out due to a bad cold and Benny Carver, another starter, was injured in the first couple of minutes and did not get to return.

Carver suffered an injury to the lid of the eye and had to have a couple of stitches taken in it. His doctor said he probably is ready to play Friday night against Odessa JC.

Coach Harold Davis got a good look at his substitutes in this one, some of whom played more than the regulars. No one on the Hawk squad hit more than 14 points but three of them—Bobby Davis, Jimmy Evans and Jesse McElreath—came in at that figure and five of the boys hit in double figures.

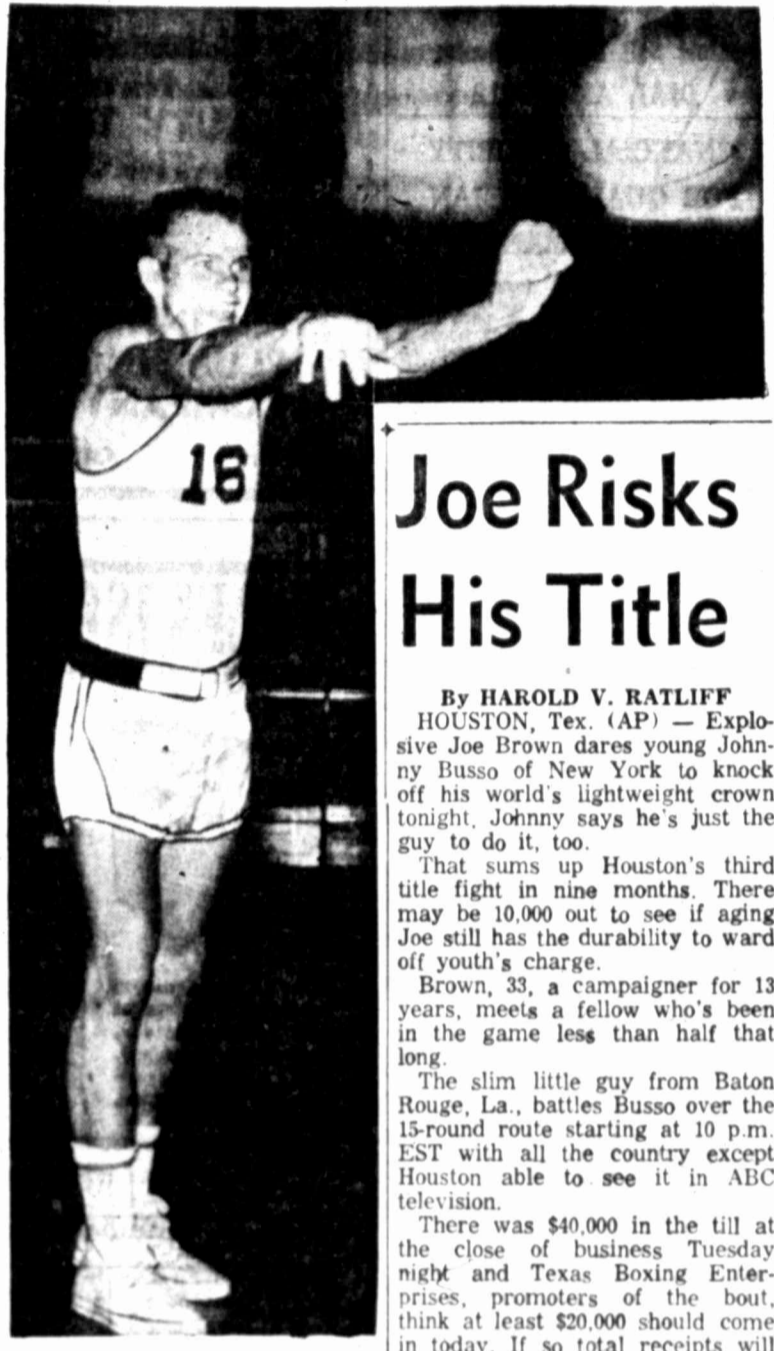

Evans again hit a 100 per cent of his shots from the field, connecting on six of six attempts. Ray Clay, who wound up with 12 points, connected five times in ten tries for an even 50 per cent.

The team as a whole hit 26 of 49 field goal tries the first half for 53 per cent and 19 of 48 the last half for 40 per cent and an overall percentage of 46 per cent.

Davis was again the leading rebounder, with 24. Harold Henson was next with an even dozen.

The game's leading scorer was diminutive Johnny Valentine of South Plains, former Ropesville standout. He scored 20.

Coach Davis played 11 boys and each scored at least four points.

Joe Risks His Title

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Explosive Joe Brown dares young Johnny Busso of New York to knock off his world's lightweight crown tonight, Johnny says he's just the guy to do it.

That sums up Houston's third title fight in nine months. There may be 10,000 out to see if aging Joe still has the durability to ward off youth's charge.

Brown, 33, a campaigner for 13 years, meets a fellow who's been in the game less than half that long.

The slim little guy from Baton Rouge, La., battles Busso over the 15-round route starting at 10 p.m. EST with all the country except Houston able to see it in ABC television.

There was $40,000 in the till at the close of business Tuesday night and Texas Boxing Enterprises, promoters of the bout, think at least $20,000 should come in today. If so total receipts will be about $100,000 since television is paying $40,000. That means Brown will take $40,000 and Busso $20,000.

Busso is confident he can wreck the Brown dynasty because he beat the champion in an over-weight fight in Miami in November. That one was only 10 rounds and Brown says if it had gone 15 he would have won. Busso counters that the longer it went the more decisively he would have won since he is stronger and younger. Johnny is only 24.

Clark scored 27 points a game in two consecutive games against Arizona State University and University of Arizona last week. It raised his average for the season to 13.1 points a game.

He previously had averaged between 10 and 11 points a game. The 6-2 senior from Big Spring, Tex., last year netted 112 points a game in 17 games.

Clark's two-game road spree also lifted his field goal accuracy mark to 44.4 per cent. He is second high scorer for the Aggies and also second most-accurate. High marks for both categories were held by 6-8 Bill Price.

High scores, especially on away-from-home games, are nothing unusual for Clark. He averages five points a game more for his road trip performances than for home games.

LOOKING 'EM OVER
With Tommy Hart

In his new book, "The American Way in Sports," John R. Tunis maintains that "commercialized, mass-produced sports are a gross perversion of their original ends."

More than one observer has come around to the conclusion that even athletics on an intercollegiate level have gradually developed into first class training for a "jungle society."

Americans last year spent about $40 billion on recreation and only $14 billion on education.

Tunis deplores our turning sports into a gigantic business in which profit and power are the only goals. The regrettable part about it, Tunis says, is that even so-called "amateur" sports have been corrupted by this attitude.

Restore sports to the proper place in the individual's life is his attitude. Athletics must be fun and not business, he maintains.

In the recent March of Dimes basketball game at Sterling City, Jim Clay of Webb AFB and Big Spring is performing for the Nabors Paint Store club—ended the game with eight fouls charged against him.

Clay, who pitched baseball for the Arizona State College team of Tempe at one time, was shunted to the sidelines with five fouls at one stage of the game but was allowed to return when Nabors had only four men on the court. He was charged with three more infractions before time ran out.

That's quite a rhabarig going on between Pat O'Dowdy, the former Big Spring boy who is now promoting wrestling in Odessa, and Alton Erickson, the Texas boxing and wrestling commissioner.

O'Dowdy has verbally scorched Erickson for refusing to okeh a fight he has proposed between Archie Moore, the lightweight champion, and tin-ear Dixie Davis. Anyone who knows Pat must realize that O'Dowdy is adding fuel to the feud with tongue in cheek.

O'Dowdy might have gotten Donnie Fleeman, a legitimate boxer, to go against Moore had he really worked at it.

Regardless, the commission has okeh'd far worse matches than Moore and Davis would have put on. It's not for the commission to say whether or not Davis is a fighter. If Archie agreed to such an arrangement, the commission shouldn't take issue.

Odessa has been one of the two or three best wrestling towns in the state the past two or three years, thanks largely to O'Dowdy's efforts. O'Dowdy's shows have poured thousands of dollars into the state's coffers in tax money. Erickson could be accused of biting the hand that helps feed him.

If the show turned out to be a fiasco, and all professional fights run that risk, Erickson could then have exercised his prerogative and slapped a few weeks in one of the two or three best wrestling towns in the state the past two or three years, thanks largely to O'Dowdy's efforts. O'Dowdy's shows have poured thousands of dollars into the state's coffers in tax money. Erickson could be accused of biting the hand that helps feed him.

Bobby Dunn, the former Frank Phillips athlete, is now a school teacher at Welch, up near Lamesa. He's become qualified to play in the YMCA Industrial Basketball league here.

Tom Dyer of the 1953-54 Midland High School basketball team holds the all-time scoring record for a Bulldog player. Tom counted 389 points in 29 games.

Midland won only seven decisions that year, however.

Larry Snider, the Ohio State University track coach, has announced that he will bring 11 athletes to the ABC Relays here and the West Texas Relays at Odessa.

Chuck Throws A Verbal Jab

CHICAGO (AP)—Chuck Comiskey, suffering a slight setback in probate court Tuesday, criticized the parties involved in the upcoming sale of the Chicago White Sox.

Comiskey, a co-vice president of the team along with his brother-in-law John Rigney, criticized Rigney and prospective buyer Bill Veeck.

He took aim at Rigney and his sister Dorothy for vacationing in Florida "when certain matters concerning the club have to be decided every day."

Veeck was the subject of criticism for "making changes in the organization" without owning a single share of stock.

Comiskey's outburst came after Probate Judge Robert Jerome Dunne denied a motion by Comiskey's attorneys that Dorothy be restrained from distributing stock to herself from the estate of their mother, Mrs. Grace Comiskey.

Johnnie Dunne based the denial on the grounds there was no indication Dorothy planned to ask the court for a distribution of the stock.

Veeck holds an option, which expires Feb. 18, to buy Dorothy's shares which make up 54 per cent of the club's stock.

Comiskey blasted Veeck after a report had Veeck naming Hank Greenberg as the team's farm director after he has purchased the club.

"There is a fellow (Veeck) who doesn't even own one share of stock in the White Sox as yet and he's making changes in the organization," said Comiskey. "We are trying to do a lot of work and one of our key men (farm chief Glenn Miller) reads in one of the papers that somebody else is going to take his job."

"No change in personnel is contemplated. But if there is one, the individual will be notified first," Comiskey added.

In Cleveland, Veeck said "I have been quoted by a lot of people, some of whom I haven't seen in weeks or even months. In one of these it said that I am going to move the White Sox out of Chicago. The only place I want to move them is from second to first place."

"As for Hank Greenberg becoming my farm chief, I haven't definitely determined anything about the office staff if I get the club.

Bill Thompson, who captured the scoring lead in the conference by bucketing 23 points, turned the tide in the Steers' favor by scoring six straight points in the overtime period.

The win was Big Spring's third in conference play, against four losses. The Steers close out competition for the year against Odessa in Big Spring Friday night.

Abilene and San Angelo fight it out Friday night in San Angelo, with the loser destined for a cellar finish.

Jimmy Bray of Abilene gave the Steers a fit. He scored 32 points with the help of 12 free shots. His team mates could give him no help, however.

Big Spring apparently had the game won in regulation time when Bray fouled out with 40 seconds left and the Steers leading, 47-45. Zay LeFevre missed the free loss, however, and Clevie Powell came down with the rebound and passed to Rick Thompson, who shot the tying bucket.

The Steers led only by a score of 51-50 with 1:27 left but Thompson's pair of gratis pitches gave the Big Springers a little more cushion.

Abilene's Thompson left the game on fouls with 11 seconds to go and Preston Hollis added the final Steer point on a free pitch.

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 160,000 workers will take the census for 1960. Rep. John J. McFall (D-Calif.) thinks that's a good opportunity for people over 40 years of age. He has urged the Census Bureau to give special priority to them when hiring census takers.

Moscow To Vote On U. S. Machines
WASHINGTON (AP) — Citizens of Moscow will get a chance to vote this summer, on American-made voting machines. Four of the machines will be included as exhibits in the American national exhibition at Moscow's Sokolniki Park. Soviet citizens visiting the fair will be invited to use the machines to vote on what they like best among the exhibits. Eight guides and a technician, all fluent in Russian, will explain the working of the machines and their use.

Another Key Daniel Bill Has Slow Start

AUSTIN (AP) — Another key measure in Gov. Price Daniel's program to cure Texas' financial ailments got off to a slow start yesterday. The House Revenue and Taxation Committee heard more than two hours of arguments over a bill (HB 238) to raise 29 million dollars in the next three months by revising state franchise tax laws, then recessed until 2:30 p. m. Monday. At least six opponents to the franchise tax plan will remain to be heard at the House Committee's next session on Monday. Once yesterday an attempt was made to continue hearings on the franchise tax until Feb. 24. Rep. J. E. Winfree of Houston, author of the bill, fought the motion made by Rep. Warren C. Cowen of Fort Worth. The bill in its present form will be effective on May 1 only if approved by two-thirds of the Legislature. The measure would raise 14 million dollars additional by a one-year increase in present franchise taxes, then 15 million dollars additional each year by a new levy on about 7,700 out-of-state firms that operate in Texas. "I'm giving you a way to get rid of the deficit," Winfree said. "We've got to take care of those hot checks—that's our deficit." "This bill makes the franchise tax even more selective than ever," protested E. M. Caldwell, tax manager for Magnolia Petroleum Co. E. H. Foster of Amarillo said Phillips Petroleum Co. alone would get a tax hike from $365,000 to $1,225,000 in 1960. "This increased tax would nullify all our efforts to attract industry to Texas," said Lland B. Ross, representing the Corpus Christi Chamber of Commerce. Next Tuesday, the committee is slated to consider another phase of Daniel's deficit erasing plan (HB 32)—a bill to seize 20 to 40 million dollars of abandoned deposits in banks and financial firms.

Sketch By Gauguin Found On Pastel
CHICAGO (AP) — The theft of French painter Paul Gauguin apparently produced a double work of art—a panel of sketches on the back of a major Gauguin pastel drawing. The newly-discovered pencil sketches, revealed yesterday for the first time, are dated 1892 Tahiti and show a woman's hand, a woman holding her head in her hands and a tattooed hand and wrist. On the other side is a pastel titled "Standing Tahitian Nude (Eve)". Like many artists, Gauguin used one side of the paper as a sketch pad before drawing his major work. It saved paper. The drawing previously was valued at between $50,000 and $60,000. Harold Joachim, curator of prints and drawings at the Chicago Art Institute, said the new-found sketches increase by a third the value of the work. The 21 by 36 drawing is owned by Mr. and Mrs. John Cowles, president of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune. It is one of 200 paintings, drawings, prints and sculptures by Gauguin on display at the art institute until March 29. Gauguin is known as a pioneer in the post-impressionist school and is most noted for his sensuous paintings of the South Sea islands. The pencil sketches were discovered when the Cowles' sent the drawing to Harold Tribolet of the Lakeside Press, Chicago, to replace a cardboard backing. Joachim called the nude one of Gauguin's major drawings. The sketches, he added, were the first of anything found on the back of a Gauguin work. In Minneapolis, Cowles said he purchased the nude in 1953 upon recommendation of Richard S. Davis, director of the Minneapolis Institute of Arts. He said the painting already has been willed to the Des Moines Art Center, effective upon the deaths of himself and Mrs. Cowles. Gauguin is noted as a master of color composition. Born in Paris in 1848, most of his childhood was spent in Peru, South America. He had a varied career. Besides painting, he served as a broker in Paris, a seaman and a worker on the Panama Canal. He died penniless in 1903 in the Marquesas Islands in the South Pacific he loved. Soon after his death his greatness was recognized. Single paintings sold for more than he had received for all his pictures during his life. From Chicago the exhibit moves to New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art.

'Peter Gunn' Leads New Serials Trend

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK (AP) — "Peter Gunn" is starting a new fashion in television serials. In its story line the NBC-TV weekly series (Mondays, 9 p. m., EST) is routine, run-of-the-mill private eye. But a couple of ingredients have been added that are creating "Peter Gunn" fan clubs among the cool younger set. The ingredients are (1) jazz and (2) sex. Before (2) impels alarmed parents to drag Jane or Junior from the set, it should be said that it's pretty harmless stuff. Gunn, played by Craig Stevens, snatches around some with a beautiful blonde played by Lola Albright. By far the most important ingredient of this series' popularity, however, is jazz. The show's producer, Blake Edwards, credits 50 per cent of the program's success to its live, original music. The composer and director of the music is a young fellow from Aliquippa, Pa., named Henry Mancini who came to town the other day and modestly said, "Blake Edwards has set up an extraordinary combination of moods in 'Peter Gunn.' When you stop to analyze it, you can't find the boundaries where the music stops and the show takes over." His modesty is commendable but unnecessary. Some of the excellent music he composes for many Peter Gunn scenes were silenced, some of the situations and lines would fizzle into the sound of corn popping. The musical motif of the series is sparked by the fact that Gunn is forever hanging around a jazz spot called Mother's, of all things, where Miss Albright is employed as a singer. The songs she sings are recognized pop numbers. Mancini composes all other music heard on the show, a total of 10 hours for 39 weeks—which, he agrees, is a great deal of original music. He doesn't begin composing until a show has been filmed. Then his music is scored into the film. Frequently there are stretches of two minutes or so without a word of dialogue when music alone builds and sustains mood. "It's a struggle to stay fresh and original every week," Mancini says, "but as long as the show can go, I can go." It appears that the show will go a long time with its steadily increasing audience. And now various producers have plans in the works for five other network TV series using a similar musical formula. Is jazz really that popular? "The jazz audience is not a vast one," Mancini said. "It's specific and special. We've reached it—and beyond it into a larger audience by associating jazz with story and characters."

By Bob Smith
Ordinarily, movie reviews are reserved for the Sunday Cinema Comment, but this one is in a classification all by itself. The movie is "Martin Luther," and it is to be shown in Big Spring shortly in one of the local churches, and sponsored by the Pastors Assn. "Martin Luther" is not, as one might suspect, a propaganda film. It does not paint the Catholic cause in black and the Protestant rebellion in white. There are heroes and villains on both sides, but no one is all good or all bad. There are, for example, moments of weakness and indecision for Luther; and the German cleric's Catholic mentor is portrayed as an honest man, firmly convinced his cause is right, using all the force of love (and no other kind of force) to bring his protegee back into the fold. For those who never studied their history, Martin Luther was one of the pioneers in the breaking away of the Teutonic world from Roman domination in religion. Dissatisfied and disenchanted by the corruption that tore the Roman church toward the end of medieval times, Luther resolved that the "true" church had vanished long before. He nailed his long list of grievances on a church door, and spread the word among the German people that the church was being reformed, even at the cost of splitting away from Rome. "Martin Luther" was filmed in Germany, with no help from Hollywood, which was probably a blessing; there is, for example, no comic relief. The situation was wholly dramatic, and the story follows this theme throughout. Filming in Germany, with German photographic techniques, was a good stroke in another sense; German methods produce heavy contrast, resulting in a dark, brooding atmosphere—and, certainly, those were dark days. The stark quality of the photography heightens the dramatic effect of expert direction and good acting. "Martin Luther" will not increase any latent anti-Catholic bigotry in good Protestants; indeed, it helps gain an understanding.
