'Operation Alert' Goes Off Here Without Difficulty

All Traffic Halted, No Congestion

By DON HENRY

Big Spring's phase of Operation Alert 1959 can be termed a success, thanks to the cooperation of citizens as well as Civil Defense organizations leading the maneuver. This is the word from CD officials.

W. D. Berry, CD coordinator, said that the alert could not have been more successful, and the halting of traffic was accomplished without any trouble.

Berry attributed this to the preparations made, aid of news media in informing the people, plus the work of many organizations in stopping the traffic.

Helping with the alert were officials from Webb, the National Guard, Department of Public Safety, Red Cross, American Legion, in addition to the sheriff's department and the police depart-

The groups swung into action when the sirens over the city wailed out at 9:30 a.m. announcing the beginning of the Yellow Alert, preliminary to the "big show" at 10:30

The police department had a few calls in relation to the sirens, but the small number indicated that most citizens were aware of what was taking place. Persons in different parts of the city reported that the sirens reached most sectors. When the city held a tornado practice last year, there were some areas where the sound did not carry.

With the beginning of the Yellow Alert, law enforcement units went to their stations in preparation of the Red Alert.

Traffic began to thin out prior to the halt at 10:30, and the halt was almost instantaneous once the whistles blew.

By having a series of checkwas no great congestion at any point. About 15 cars were stopped north of Big Spring on each of the Snyder and Lamesa Highways.

Within the city also, few cars were moving, even on residential streets. The Webb MARS truck circulated through the central part of town broadcasting information about the alert. Several cars pulled to the side as the result of its

The CD leaders were pleased with the way traffic flowed following the All Clear which came about 10:45. It took only three minutes for the string of cars stopped on the Lamesa Highway to clear the 12th and 87 intersec-

All radio and television stations here were shut off for 30 minutes during the nationwide alert, and only information given out came from two Conelrad stations, at 640 and 1240 kilocycles.

Webb officials observing the alert from a helicopter confirmed the success of the practice. Maj. Vincent Brophy said that everything went well during the Red Alert with only one car being observed downtown-on 2nd-but it was quickly stopped. The Air Force took "before and after" shots of the alert to show its effectiveness.

Observers in the helicopter said a few cars moved on E. 80 but were quickly directed to the sides of the highway. Also an occasional car was seen moving in resi-

She was whisked to the prison Thursday half an hour after her manslaughter sentence of 2 to 21 years was pronounced.

The rebels released one hostage, Walter Jones, 24, prison psychologist, for an eight-minute talk with newsmen

He said guards among the hostages "are all set up to be killed, some will be hanged. I am going back in. I don't know for how long. The inmates are touchy. Any little thing will set it off." Jones said the convicts threatened to kill the other hostages if he did not return within eight min-

His statement dashed an earlier report from Father Gerald Lyman, prison chaplain, that an agreement had been reached to settle the riot that broke out Thursday at 4:30 p.m. (MST).

Father Lyman told newsmen after a session with the convicts and prison officials that thing is going to be all right." He a formal announcement said would be made shortly. But three hours later no agreement had been announced.

"WE'VE ALL HAD IT"

Jones pleaded with officials to 'please leave this in the warden's hands. If you take it out of the warden's hands and storm the gates, we've all had it.'

About 150 combat-readied Montana national guardsmen ring the 90-year-old castle-like prison. They are armed with automatic rifles and bayonets.

A convict spokesman, a burglar named Jerry Myles, talked for more than 15 minutes over the prison public address to the 435 convicts inside. His speech was heard outside the walls.

Myles said he wanted out-ofstate newsmen to come inside and look over prison conditions, "I don't think the warden or the others will let you in," Myles said, 'because they don't want newsmen to know what conditions are. We guarantee you safe passage.'

Myles and other prisoners have been complaining of what they termed poor medical facilities, bad sanitation and the policies of the Montana Parole Board. "We are not fighting for today but for the next guy who comes in here,' Myles said

Faubus Claims Attitude Helps Attract Industry

MARSHALL (AP) - Southern defense of states' rights has helped attract industry to the South, Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus declared last night. Once more he spoke out sharply against Supreme Court rulings on Arkansas' industrial growth has not suffered despite integration troubles, Faubus said. He interpreted this as evidence that all leaders of industry do not agree with the Supreme Court.

"One of the largest problems in Little Rock," he said, "is that the day. His condition has become vast majority of people there are convinced the Supreme Court ruling is not the law of the land, and until they are convinced, integration cannot succeed."

Faubus cited steps toward integration in state colleges and provision of more schools and health facilities for Negroes as proof of progress for Arkansas Negroes during his administration

New Traveller Of The Road

Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro has arrived in Washington for a ten-day visit. He is just another of the horde of foreign dignitaries who have helped change a two-thousand-year-old saying into a new one, "All roads lead to Washington."

Ostensible purpose of his visit here is to address the Society of American Newspaper Editors in annual session, on Friday. But it is hardly likely he will overlook the opportunity to communicate his desires for American help in placing Cuba on a sounder economic basis than his successful revolution left it in, due largely to wholesale looting by the Batista regime.

We hope there are no untoward incidents connected with his visit. Undoubtedly his life and person will be adequately safeguarded, as is the case of most visiting heads of state.

The magazine Newsweek did a piece on Castro in last week's issue, written by one of its editors. That magazine is not as sensational as some, but it paints an unfavorable picture of the situation in Cuba, with special reference to the infiltration of Communists into positions of

Castro, it says, is not a Red, but he is a "romantic." With respect to Red infiltration, it quotes Castro as saying:

"Why should we persecute the Communists just because they are Communists? It is just like persecuting a Catholic just because he's a Catholic; a Mason just because he's a Mason?'

This naive view not only marks Castro as a "romantic," but as the next thing to a simpleton. Inability to differentiate between two great bodies of Christian believers, both of which may have their faults, and a worldwide conspiracy dedicated to the destruction of everything Christianity stands for is hardly the sort of intellectual and spiritual equipment expected of a head of a modern Western state which has come a long way in democratic self-rule.

Undoubtedly Castro enjoyed the respect and confidence of the great mass of American public opinion in his heroic and successful campaign to unseat a tyrannous regime in Cuba, but the subsequent wholesale purge of the new regime's enemies under questionable procedures chilled many well-wishers. His remarks on communism are scarely calculated to add to his statesmanly pretensions.

Be Smart To Be Real Stupid

author named Paul Tabori has brought out a new tome called "The Natural Science of Stupidity" (Chilton: $4.50).

It takes a real smart man to be real stupid; his intelligence and prominence heighten the color and odor of his folly. Tabori cites Oscar Fingall O'Flahertie Wills Wilde, the Irish playwright-novelistwit, as a prize sample. (Wilde's friends had come to laugh off references to his moral turpitude as idle tales, but Oscar got the notion of suing the Marquis of Queensburg for libel for spreading such tales, out of which came fatal revelations which sent Wilde to jail for two years for offenses under the Criminal Laws Amendment Act.)

History is replete, as the saying goes, with similar instances of stupidity on the

> The book may make life more livable for us ordinary run-of-mine people who have barely enough sense to reproach ourselves for stupid deeds or remarks. Goodness knows we have plenty of company among famous people. (How long has it been since you salted your coffee and sugared your breakfast egg?)

Not all acts were stupid at the time staved stupid long. Jefferson got stung when he bought Louisiana from Napolean. William H. Seward got stung when he paid Russia $7 million for Alaska. Their contempories laughed like crazy. In both cases the stupid turned out to be a case of mistaken identity,

David Lawrence Castro On Trial Before U.S. Opinion

WASHINGTON - Unlike the treatment he gave scores of his fellow countrymen whom he ordered executed without fair trials, Fidel Castro is being given a chance to face his accusers in the United

For Cuba's dictator is himself on trial now in the court of public opinion in this country. He has an opportunity in the next few days to make speeches before press organizations here and in New York and before some college audiences as well. He can reply to the charges made against him in the news dispatches of recent weeks telling of the perfunctory trials and his application of the death penalty in more than 500 cases.

But the major indictment against Fidel Castro is that he has done irreparable harm to the prestige of the government of Cuba in this hemisphere and throughout the world. Americans used to feel that they could go to Cuba without fear and with a feeling that this next-door neighbor to the United States was a friendly one. Today there are confirmed reports about Communist infiltration in Cuba. In fact, there are plenty of comments by Fidel Castro himself showing contempt for the United States and for Americans in general. These are unlike the utterances of any man who has previously headed the Cuban government in the more than 60 years of its existence as an independent country.

The Cuban leader keeps arguing that the dictator who preceded him was guilty of many crimes and sins against the Cuban people. But Anglo-Saxon principles of common law have for centuries set forth the worst criminal is entitled to a fair trial

Fidel Castro is reported to be planning to ask the United States government for financial aid. This is surprising in view of his hostile comments about the United States. It reveals an amazing unfamiliarity with the reaction in this country to what has happened in the last few months in Cuba

The Washington government has had to deal with dictatorships in Latin America for many years, and it tries to steer away from any intervention in internal affairs. This course is criticized at times by those who have big investments in a particular country and who usually come forth with the suggestion that America deal with the existing government and let the question of democracy or dictatorship be handled by the citizens themselves.

But the moral force of the United States is being exerted today on the side of decency and freedom for the people of every country. When Deputy Premier Mikoyan came here from the Soviet Union not long ago, it was not widely publicized in advance that he was largely responsible for the murder of many Hungarian citizens. When the people in America did get the facts, there were many emphatic expressions of disapproval.

Fidel Castro comes to visit the United States under somewhat different circumstances than did Mikoyan. The American people have been fully advised that the Castro idea of justice is to place before a firing squad anyone he pleases who had sided with the predecessor government. Certainly the Batista government, which had been formally recognized as the ruling regime, may have carried on a vendetta against its enemies, but whatever happened was carefully hidden from view. Unfortunately for Fidel Castro perhaps, the stories of the 500 or more executions of Cubans have been widely printed. The American people know what happened. Had they been told about Batista's misdeeds at the time, they would have felt the same shock. But it is no excuse to say that Castro is justified now in ignoring the simple principles of justice just because Batista was a tyrant, too. The United States government, since the days of President Wilson, has endeavored to discourage military revolutions as a means of changing administrations in the countries of Latin America. Back in 1913, the United States refused to recognize a government in Mexico headed by General Huerta because he rose to power by assassination of President Madero. This policy of non-recognition was subsequently modified as revolutions increased in Latin American countries. Indeed it was argued that a revolution to upset a dictator and to bring a democratic form of government was to be condoned as a necessary step and that recognition should not be withheld from such a

It would be much better, however, if in all cases of revolution only "de facto" recognition ere given to new govern-ments and i "de jure" or lawful recognition were accorded later only when an election had been held that was universally accepted as a reflection of the true will of the people uninhibited by any form of coercion of the voters. In recent years, expediency has seemed to get the upper hand. Fidel Castro's behavior, therefore, may bring about a restoration of the moral principles to which the Department of State used to be dedicated a few decades ago.

Around The Rim

Obscurity Follows Big Glow

Consider the stars:

They come in uncounted millions, some bright, some dim.

But there are some stars that are not satisfied with the sameness of their lives. Like the proverbial candle, they light themselves at both ends so as to burn the more quickly.

They want fame; they want someone somewhere to see them shining more brightly than any other creature of the firmament. Thus, they explode, and become novae or supernovae. Nothing can eclipse them. Not a dust cloud in which a thousand solar systems could be lost, not another star standing in front of them no matter how big the eclipser may be. They leave but a hollow shell of themselves behind, but now they are everwidening waves of light, spreading into the universe. They eclipse ordinary stars. But their brilliance is short, and the waves of light pass on. Their light is dissipated through space, and the dust and gas of space absorbs them.

One by one, the novae vanish, and there is but one left to be seen by men. Yes, the star is seen-his audience consists of a single telescopic camera trained in his general direction and operated by an automatic aiming device. The star's last faint glimmer is caught by the lens and is absorbed into a chemical reaction in the photographic emulsion. His audience grows by one astronomer, who checks the spot on the plate, measures it, and converts the measurement into a statistic. The statistic is added to other figures, and becomes part of a sum total, which in turn is sliced up into an average. All that is left of the ambitious star is a faint speck of chemically-activated emulsion on a glass plate, which is stored away into a dark vault and never seen again. The other stars are still shining, as they were before living creatures trod the earth, and as they will long after the last living thing has expired. And that's what they get for being so square.

More Riches For Indians, From Uranium

tradition and teevee, there are times when the Indians, this nation's original citizens, win.

Probably the most conspicuous winners, to date, are the oil-rich Osages of Oklahoma whose lands still produce a steady flow of black gold. They were once regarded as the richest "nation" per capita in the world, and may still be for all I know. All the tales that are now told about Rich Texans, especially the one about buying a new Cadillac when the cigarette lighter malfunctions on the old, were first told about the Osages when I worked on the Tulsa World years

Now it is just possible that the uranium wealth of the Lagunas of New Mexico, Pueblo Indians who number about 3,500, may eventually rival the oil riches of the Osages.

Like the lands of the Osages, before oil was discovered, the lands of the Lagunas seemed poor and all but worthless a decade ago. The Lagunas then subsisted on agriculture together with what sheep and cattle could be raised on their marginal lands. Today, nine years after the first great uranium find was made in New Mexico, the biggest open pit uranium mine in the country is on Laguna property. It not only brings in an annual income in excess of $1,000,000 a year to the Lagunas, but provides a highly paid job in the mine for all the available Laguna labor force.

Unlike the Osages, to whom Uncle Sam still makes a quarterly distribution of their oil profits, the Lagunas to date have not touched the principal. As a result, it is estimated that they have between seven and 10 million dollars in their kitty, invested in U.S. bonds and common stocks. For much of this information about the ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.-Contrary to Lagunas, I am indebted to one of New Mexico's most-interesting citizens, Joe Herrera, 33, a Cochiti Indian internationally famous as an artist and a graduate of the University of New Mexico who is now working with the Division of Indian Education in Santa Fe.

"The Langunas plan to invest their capltal and use it for community improvements and especially for scholarships for the young," said Mr. Herrera, who is a member of the All-Pueblo Council, New Mexico's Indian "United Nations." "Now, for the first time, there is talk among the Lagunas of a per-capita distribution of some of the accumulated interest money. But this is not a permanent plan for a regular distribution. "They are not yet educated, and they realize it, to handle large funds. And I believe the Elders know that a regular distribution of income would deprive the Lagunas of initiative and ambition. "Like all the Pueblo Indians today, they are ambitious to educate their children. Some are already in college and more will be. The Lagunas were wise enough to lease their uranium lands to the Anaconda Company, since they knew they did not have the skill to operate the mine themselves.

"Now they have a prosperity they never knew before, not only because of the royalties but because any Laguna can find work in the mines, even college students home for summer vacation."

Gleaming refrigerators and washing machines are beginning to make their appearance in the hogans. But because the Lagunas so far have touched neith the principal nor interest of their uranium wealth, there have been none of the wild, ludicrous and sometimes tragic extravagance that marked the Osage accession to wealth years ago. ## Moral Compulsion Or Self Interest?

Buy common stocks. It's your duty. That is the thesis of Fr. Richard M. McKeon, S. J. Each U.S. citizen has a moral responsibility to invest. Even an investment that fails is useful to the extent it kept money in circulation, provid-

Fr. McKeon is director of the Institute of Industrial Relations of Le Moyne College. Syracuse. Before that, he served as an academic dean at St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, and as a chaplain in the Army.

His article appeared in the September issue of The Homiletic and Pastoral Review, a Catholic magazine for clergymen, yet it's still a lively subject for debate among those who have read it.

"What has common stock done for the American economy?" Fr. McKeon asks, and answers: "It has provided the capital for industry to grow to its present prosperity. It has created millions of jobs. It has brought forth many wonderful products. It has established the highest standard of living in the world." If sufficient persons did not invest in stock, "there would be fewer new jobs, fewer new products, and fewer new factories. Consequently, a growing work force would face unemployment and all the evils attendant on the same. It is evident that an obligation must fall on people to buy common stock to keep the economy strong and growing. On whom does this obligation fall?"

Fr. McKeon argues that after families have met their immediate obligations "toward a standard of living befitting their station - home, education of children, insurance, and so on-... then comes the duty to invest."

Most economists do not look upon investment as a moral duty. Adam Smith argued that men should act in their own self-interest. They produce what they want and so make a profit for themselves. They invest in land or factories which will satisfy the needs of others and so make a profit. Their self-interest thus becomes identified with the national interest. Later, economists discovered that shortsighted self-interest could become selfdefeating. An investment trust or insurance company with massive holdings of securities would be unwise to dump stocks at the first sign of an economic squall. In so doing, it might aggravate the squall and so force down the value of its entire portfolio. Similarly, large corporations would be injudicious to lay off workers at the first indication of an economic turndown. Many corporations today, as a matter of good business, try to keep workers employed in an effort to ride out a short recession. Self-interest is better served by long-run, not short-run, considerations.

For most economists, self-interest is the controlling economic motive in investment or business decisions. The moral consideration - Am I my brother's keeper? - is secondary, if it's thought of at

Fr. McKeon's thesis is that only money invested in common stocks creates jobs. "A great deal of savings," he says, "now goes into life insurance, old-age pensions, unemployment insurance, and savings banks. Little of this money goes into new stock. It is invested mostly in mortgages, government bonds, corporate bonds and real estate. Secondly, higher taxes have hit the very wealthy, so that they have not as much money or the inclination to invest as formerly." So it behooves others with income above their immediate family needs to buy stocks and create jobs. He overlooks, it seems to me, that investors in mortgages create jobs for carpenters, bricklayers, cement and steel workers, etc. Under traditional capitalism, moral compulsion is a poor substitute for selfinterest in investment. Investors and speculators buy and sell securities to make money. The "bloodless verdict" of Wall Street "allocates" investment funds to those industries and geographical areas which are most inviting and which will, therefore, thrive and create the greatest number of permanent jobs in the long run. Buying stock to create jobs - any kind of jobs - could be a waste of resources - a poor utilization of men, material, and machines If Fr. McKeon's argument were carried to its logical extreme, investing in labor-saving devices would be immoral. At least

My husband is flattered by the way she plays up to him and her husband is so dumb he doesn't know what's going on (or doesn't care). I don't mean to imply that there is anything serious between them, but I am afraid there could be. My husband says I am being foolish. She keeps calling me to get together. Should I discourage seeing them or do you think I am unnecessarily jealous? P.S. She sent him a very suggestive valentine. BEING CAREFUL found himself caught up in a tide of crises that ran throughout his crowded years in the State Department. His major contributions to the development of U.S. foreign policy have been, with few exceptions, on the defensive side of cold Foremost among his accomplishments, perhaps is the vast expansion he engineered in United States alliances and military commitments over the world. retaliation. In the course of making the new commitments Dulles developed a technique which solved a difficult problem in the conduct of U.S. foreign policy.

DEAR THINKING: How about a RECIPE shower? It won't cost the guests anything and all brides welcome good recipes.

By getting advance authority from Congress, he eliminated a potential weakness which, in a moment of crisis, might have prevented the President from taking effective action.

Such a crisis arose last year when revolution overthrew the pro-Western government of Iraq. Dulles and Eisenhower feared that other friendly regimes would topple like a row of blocks, beginning with Lebanon and Jordan. Against threats of Soviet counteraction the President dispatched J.S. troops to Lebanon and British forces went into Jordan to save alling into unfriendly hands. The Lebanese action was another in a long list of moves dramatized under Dulles' policy of 'brinkmanship' which has been pitterly controversial.

Dulles was in international hot water for a time last year with tionalist China in its defense of his insistence on supporting Nathe Chinese coastal islands, Quemoy and Matsu, against Red attack. Britain was especially fearful that Dulles might lead the United States into an unwanted war in the Far East. He was confident, however, that if American determination was clear to the Chinese Reds they would not attempt to invade the islands. In the end his judgment seemed to be borne out by their failure to press try to buy peace by yielding to the threats of a potential aggres-

His theory of brinkmanship holds that it is necessary for the United States again and again to face up to a Communist challenge in some vulnerable area of the non-Communist world and to go to the brink of war to defend a free country against conquest. In 1956 Dulles found himself faced with perhaps the worst and most dangerous crisis of his State Department years. It involved the seizure of the Suez Canal by Egypt.

The British and French governments then in power grew tired of what they considered his defeatist attitude on the Suez issue. They attacked Egypt, after an attack by Israel.

Dulles was caught in the dreadful dilemma, as he saw it, of having to back this country's chief allies in an adventure of which he thoroughly disapproved or having to denounce their action and see the Atlantic coalition split wide open.

He chose the latter course and was immediately put into the unenviable position of siding with the Soviet Union in the United Nations against Britian and France. It took a year to restore the friendly Allied relationship.

Possibly one of Dulles' bitterest disappointments, measured by his early purpose of taking the cold war offensive, was his inability to do anything decisive about the Hungarian revolt against communism in 1956.

Direct Western intervention, he judged, would have meant war, and the administration decided

Roads Of Faith

There are three roads in Palestine which begin at the northern gate of the city of Jerusalem and lead to three destinations. There are three roads of faith in your life and mine which lead us to God. The first of these is the Emmaus Road. Late in the afternoon of the first Easter day, two of the disciples walked this road with a stranger. As he talked, opening to them the scriptures, their hearts burned within them, and they recognized him as the risen

The Emmaus Road is the Road of Discovery. On this road we discover him who is the Redeemer of the world and our personal Savior. How Christ is found is secondary, but the fact of discovery is the difference between death and life.

The second road is the Damascus Road. It was on this road that Saul of Tarsus was converted. Breathing threats and murder, he was on his way to Syria to bring back in chains those who were followers of the Way. Suddenly, a light from heaven knocked him to the ground and the voice of Christ spoke. Christ conquered and Saul was commissioned.

The Damascus Road is the Road of Surrender. We give our-selves to him, and losing our life we find it. The third road is the Jericho Road. On this road a certain man fell among thieves who beat and robbed him and left him for dead.

A Samaritan passing by had compassion and ministered to his need. In so doing he became the symbol of Christ-like service for The Jericho Road is the Road of Service. It means following ammunition was at hand today for another rousing feud between the Navy and the Air Force.

Dale Evans says in one of her books, "All my life I sought for the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow, but I found it at the foot of the cross." That is where the roads of faith lead. And at the foot of the cross we look up into the face of God.

Secretary of Defense Neil Mc-Elroy disclosed that the Joint Chiefs of Staff are thinking about putting the Navy's Polaris submarine-missile weapon system under operational control of the Air Force's Strategic Air Command. McElroy told a news conference Thursday he had not yet been notified of a decision by the chiefs of the armed services.

Strategic warfare is at the heart of the controversy.

In the past the Navy and Air Force have wrangled over strategic warfare, as distinguished from tactical operations against ships, planes or troops of an enemy. A decade ago they argued over big carriers and B36 heavy bombers. That issue was settled by building

Nine Polaris submarines are being built or are authorized for building, with the first ones expected to be ready next year. The Navy has definite plans for another half dozen, and hopes for still more.

More Rain Seen At Hand For Throughout State

Thundershowers danced across parts of North and East Texas early Friday, and more were in prospect throughout the state.

Moisture had dampened nearly every section of the state in the past 24 hours as still another cool front headed into Texas. Five traffic deaths were attributed to rainslicked roads.

Just before dawn a band of thundershowers extended southward from Tulsa, in Oklahoma, through the Dallas-Fort Worth area to Waco. A short time later a line of showers stretched from 10 miles south of Cleburne through Fort Worth to 5 miles north of Whitewright, and there also was light rain near Ennis and Kaufman. Within an hour, Weather Bureau radar tracked scattered showers and thunderstorms from Paris to Dallas to Corsicana. Forecasters looked for more showers in all parts of the state through Friday night along with cooler weather. They predicted readings down to 35 degrees in the Panhandle early Saturday. A new set of five-day forecasts promised generally heavy rainfall in East and Central Texas showers through the weekend, and moderate to heavy showers in West Texas, mostly the forepart of the week.

Beethoven, Schubert Best Bets Lee Remick Is, But You Will In New Stereo Record Releases

By L. J. KRAMP
AP Newsfeature Writer
Two notable new "Ninth" symphonies, one by Beethoven and one by Shubert, lead the parade of new orchestral music on stereo

Schubert's Ninth Symphony in C major ranks about 14th in classical sales frequency, but perhaps that is because it is also one of the longest, consuming about an hour. By far the best of the new stereo issues is that by the London Symphony Orchestra under Joseph Krips, (London). The opening horn solo leads the listener through a colorful array of romantic sound, well balanced between the two speakers.

Beethoven's Ninth Symphony has been described as magnificent an imperfection as a Michelangelo torso, but some retail record dealers list it as No. 1 among classical best sellers. RCA Victor sold more than 300,000 copies of a twodisc Toscanini album of the Ninth in its first five years.

The new Ninth, in stereo, is by the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra and St. Hedwig's Cathedral Choir under Ferenc Fricsay, with Maureen Forrester and Dietrich Fischer-Dieskaw (Decca). Stereo gives it new glamor and vibrance, and despite questionable microphone techniques, it is a solid and convincing performance. The Egmont and Leonore No. 3 overtures fill the fourth side.

For Beethoven overtures, however, a better stereo buy is the single disc by the Vienna Philharmonic under Karl Munchinger (London), which also includes the Fidelio and the Coriolan. The stereo sound is rich and well balanced. Less so are the Brahms Academic Festival and Tragic Overtures, coupled with Variations on a Theme by Haydn, by the same orchestra under Hans Knappertsousch (London). Haydn's London Symphony No.

sounding new edition by the New York Philharmonic under Leonard Bernstein (Columbia), Haydn symphonies have made a hi-fi era comeback in recent years, partly because of such vivid discs.

In lyrical beauty, few symphonies rival Brahms' Second in D Major. It is not as popular as his First or his Fourth, but a stereo version by Rafael Kubelik and the Vienna Philharmonic (London) should help improve its position. The same group under Kubelik have done equally well in a stereo disc of Dvorak's Fifth, the "New World," (London), with exquisite and full bodied tonal splendor. The first stereo disc of "Also

Another first is RCA Victor's recording of Shostakovich's Fifth Symphony by Howard Mitchell and the National Symphony Orchestra. For a first class stereo bargain, RCA Victor offers a $2.98 bargain sampler including some of the brightest items from nine of its latest albums, among them some by the Boston Pops and the Chicago Symphony. Vanguard will not sell 300,000 copies, but it should be commended for bringing out in stereo more choral music. The latest are "The Music of Guillaume Defay" by the Dessoff Choirs under Paul Boepple; Bach's "Magnificat in D" by the Vienna State Opera Chorus under Felix Prohaska; and "Music from Washington Cathedral" by the Cathedral choir under Paul Callaway. These follow Gabrielli's "Processional and Ceremonial Music" in emphasizing the fact that

Last month, Lana had a tiff with director-producer Otto Preminger over costumes for "Anatomy of a Murder," and she walked out of the movie. A lot of folks said of her replacement, 'Who's Lee Remick?'' They'll be finding out.

The role is even more provocative than the one that introduced Lana 20 years ago in "They Won't Forget." As Lana did in that film, Lee plays a girl whose flaunting of sex fosters violence. What's more, she'll wear a sweater too. But in other respects, the two actresses offer a striking contrast of the traditional and the new in film stars. Lana is the classic case
