A Tree Climber

HOLLYWOOD BEAUTY

One Way To Exercise Is To Climb Trees!

By LYDIA LANE
EN ROUTE TO EUROPE — Paris in eight hours, I thought to myself as I settled into my seat on a Pan-American Jet Clipper. A few hours more and I would be in Munich.

There was so little noise on the plane one could eavesdrop, and I heard a voice, obviously British, saying about our menu, "I hope you're hungry, for the food is divine. It all comes from Maxine's in Paris."

Later I strolled back to the lounge and discovered the English voice belonged to Heather Sears, who was so good in that prize-winning movie, "Room at the Top." I introduced myself, naming several mutual friends.

"I hear you have a modern house," Heather said. "I love modern houses."

"I love the wonderful old houses in London," I replied as the stewardess offered us champagne.

"I drank champagne all the way over," Heather said. "It was heavenly. You must come to see me in London. We live in a Georgian house in Hampstead, near Hampstead Heath, where I can climb trees. I used to be a tomboy, and I've never lost my love for climbing trees."

"Is that how you keep your good figure?" I inquired.

"It's quite a workout," Heather replied, helping herself to pate de foie gras. "I like to race my sports car, too, but that's a different kind of exercise."

"You look like a teen-ager," I remarked.

"In California they refused to serve me a cocktail until I showed them my passport," she laughed. "I don't feel at home in anything but casual clothes, and since I'm not the glamorous type, I think it's silly to try to compete. I had to learn not to care about this and to appreciate what is known as individuality."

Our plane gave no vibration, and I found myself easily cutting into a delicious bird.

"What is this?" I inquired.

She Deplores The Lack Of 'Gracious Living'

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor
If American living gets any more casual, we all might as well move back to the cave, says red-headed Patricia Murphy, five feet of Irish dynamite with a burning conviction about the importance of gracious traditions.

Simple Hairdo Is Best For That Vacation Trip

It's a wise girl who goes to the hairdresser before she starts her vacation.

"If you wait until you get to the resort, you may not find a hairdresser or a hair stylist you like," advises hair stylist V. George of New York.

George suggests to every girl planning a season in sun, wind and water to have her hair thinned before buying her train ticket.

"The hair should be thinned out where it grows in bunches," he says. "These strategic spots hold the styling, and there is less wave and only a slight curve to hair styles this season."

Once your favorite hairdresser thins and shapes your hair, you'll be hair-happy on vacation, George points out, because the keynote to easy manageability is to get rid of the hair that throws the head off balance.

"Your hair does not need to be cut short. If it is thinned properly, it may be worn at any length," he explains.

George recommends bangs to those girls who can wear them, saying: "A hairdo with bangs makes an easy-to-manage hairstyle when bathing, and may be recombed for evening dates. Bangs that start quite far back on the crown of the head give a curve rather than a wave to bangs."

He likes hair up to 3½ inches at the sides, bangs about three inches or less and hair at the back to clear the neckline. It's cooler and easier to manage in hot dog weather, he says.

George teaches his clients how to recomb their hair so it can be managed in two fashions — day and evening — in between visits to the hair salon. He prefers a loose, natural, soft, basic permanent, the basis for a lasting hairstyle.

nothing't be allowed to become an everyday pattern.

"Even if you serve hamburgers for dinner, you can serve them attractively," says she. "A few flowers on the table, attractive china, a colorful cloth and candle-light can make a sandwich seem like a banquet."

"It's all wrong for women to give up all the little niceties that give a home charm. They're spoiled, that's what they are. They have so many labor-saving devices and packaged mixes that they've become too lazy even to set the table. Maybe somebody will come up with an automatic device to do that, but I doubt it."

The peppery Patricia is the widow of Capt. James Kiernan, a naval architect responsible for many of the submarines of World War II. He helped her plan the building and grounds of her Yorkers restaurant, the largest in the East, which is set in the midst of an eight-acre flower garden, complete with seven greenhouses.

TORONTO (AP) — Save steps and live longer, is the advice of Dr. John Armstrong, medical director of the Heart Foundation of Canada.

This can be applied directly to housewives, who often waste steps beating a path back and forth across their kitchens.

"Not only by saving steps, but by using slightly different methods, you can accomplish the same amount of work with less energy, and be less tired," he says.

In 1948, a "heart" kitchen was constructed by the New York Heart Assn. committee on cardiovascular diseases in industry. Dr. Lillian Gilbreth, of "Cheaper by the Dozen" fame, headed the committee.

Methods applied in industry are equally helpful in housework. Although the booklet was written primarily for women with heart disease, it has suggestions for every busy housewife who would like to enjoy extra time and extra energy.

Some of them: Pre-positioning equipment and supplies can save hundreds of steps. Store articles where they are most often used and group things that are used together near a work-area.

Seasoning, canned goods, serving dishes and platters should all be stored near the stove where they are to be used.

Soaps, knives and strainers and Mrs. Biles Due Home

Mrs. J. D. Biles is expected home today from Mountain Lakes, N. J. where she has spent the past several weeks. Accompanying her here are her son, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Biles and Linda, whom she has been visiting.

vegetables that don't need refrigeration should be kept near the sink where they are first used.

Baking ingredients are natural companions for rolling pins, measuring cups, mixing bowls and baking pans.

If lunches are to be prepared, assemble the wax paper, bread and other necessities near the perishable foods used in the lunch.

Kay McGibbon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. H. McGibbon, 108 Cedar Road, is among a group of more than 200 young musicians who are attending the Fred Waring Youth Music Workshops at Delaware Water Gap, Penn.

The highly concentrated course is taught by the same instructors who train the famous Waring Pennsylvanians, and is personally headed by Waring.

Charles Webb, son-in-law of the McGibbons, has been associated with the Waring Workshops the past few summer seasons.

small things in a box or basket along with the broom, mop and sweeper.

Work simplification can become a game for everyone in the household and can save up to 60 per cent of the time once spent on a job.

The best way to start is to unclutter the kitchen. Good advice from the Heart Foundation is that "with a bit of drawer searching and soul searching you can gather together a box full of gadgets you never use. Throw them away."

INDIANA HOUSEWIFE ENDS IRREGULARITY

There's a safe way to overcome constipation caused by lack of food bulk. Mrs. Orville Wilson, Terre Haute, Ind., writes: "I was troubled with irregularity for years. One week ago I started eating Kellogg's All-Bran and now it is a must. It has helped me discontinue pills of any sort."

When your diet doesn't supply the bulk your system needs, the pleasant way to get it is with Kellogg's All-Bran. This whole bran cereal can provide all the good food bulk required for safe, natural regularity. A daily half-cup with milk keeps milk on schedule.

Try Kellogg's All-Bran for 10 days—let it help you, too.

The kid with the 43-billion dollar arm

He dreams of being the greatest pitcher that ever was, when he grows up. He wants it more than anything else in the world. But he doesn't expect favors — just his fair chance. The kind of chance every American kid deserves. And he'll get it, if the American people have anything to say about it. For they're backing the future of this youngster—and the millions of boys and girls like him—with almost 43 billion dollars.

That's how much Americans own in U.S. Savings Bonds.

These are the Bonds that help make sure there will be a future for our children—because they help America keep the peace. How? Remember, peace costs money. Money for military strength, for education, for a healthy economy.

And the U. S. Savings Bonds the American people buy help provide this money.

Sure, they get a good return on their investment. Sure, it's one of the easiest and safest ways to save ever devised.

But that's just part of the reason. The rest is in the hopes and dreams and prayers of kids like this. That 43 billion dollars is a record—but it isn't enough. How could it be—when the life of just one child, your child, is worth far more?

The way you can help is clear. Keep buying Bonds—and buy as many as you can.

Fry Chicken Easy Way, In The Oven

Everyone loves fried chicken, and the home chef will like it even more if she can cook it the easy way—in the oven.

This recipe calls for cornflake crumbs instead of flour, in which to roll the pieces of chicken. Put it in a foiled-lined baking pan and cook for at least an hour.

CRUSTY FRIED CHICKEN
1 broiler-fryer
6 tbsps butter or margarine
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1 tsp. paprika
¾ cup packaged cornflake crumbs.

Have chicken cut so there are 10 pieces; reserve giblets, neck and wing tips for broth another time. Wash and drain in colander.

Melt butter over low heat; remove from heat and stir in salt, pepper and paprika. Dip chicken pieces, one at a time, in seasoned butter and then in crumbs; spoon crumbs over chicken to coat well.

Place in shallow foil-lined baking pan; a 15 by 10 by 1 inch jelly-roll pan is fine. Bake, uncovered, in moderate (350 degrees) oven until tender when tested with a fork—one hour. Makes four servings.

Man Needs Protein

A man of average size and activity requires 70 grams of protein a day, the Texas Beef Council has found. A 4-ounce serving of lean beef contains 24 to 29 grams of protein, or approximately 1-3 of a working man's daily protein needs.

Proteins Are 'Must'

Proteins are nitrogen-containing substances which are an essential part of every living cell, both animal and plant, according to the Texas Beef Council. "Complete" proteins, such as beef, contain all of the amino acids, or protein parts.

John Manson Owens III, 16, of Savannah, Ga., telephones his parents from a hospital to tell of his rescue from deep in the Grand Canyon. Owens, whose two companions died on their hike into the mile-deep gorge, survived searing heat, treacherous trails and deadly river currents for six days. The youth was found by an Army helicopter crew, fatigued, footsore and hungry, but otherwise unharmed.

2 Men Save Flare, Use It At Right Time

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A single smoke flare, saved for use at just the right moment, brought rescue Sunday to two men marooned seven nights and days high on the barren face of an Alaska glacier.

The flare was sighted by a helicopter pilot participating in a week-old sea and air search over the mountains and through the valleys and inlets of rugged Glacier Bay National Monument. Although the two were saved, the body of a third man remained with the wreckage of a helicopter in which they crashed last Sunday at the 5,800-foot level Gilman Glacier.

Dead was Robert Baldwin of Ridgefield, Conn., a geophysicist for the Newmont Exploration Co., Ltd., of New York City. Another helicopter was to remove the body today.

Bearded and weary, bruised but otherwise not seriously hurt, were Robert Sheldon and Melvin Guerrero. They survived through chilling temperatures and heavy rain with the aid of a sleeping bag and emergency food rations.

OIL Names New Agency Director

Harold E. Riley, one of Baylor University's All-time football greats, Saturday was promoted to vice president and director of agencies for Oil Industries Life Insurance Co.

Riley, 31, started with O.I.L. as a part-time agent in 1955, was so successful that he quit his teaching and coaching career at Crane and Plainview and made life insurance his career. His promotions have been rapid. From district manager at Plainview, he became regional manager for central Texas.

Oil Industries Life does business in Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas and when founded in 1954 was the first Texas company to post $1,000,000 capital and surplus paid in cash before writing business. It set a world mark in reaching $23,000,000 production its first year and now has $122,000,000 ordinary life insurance in force.

Rockefeller Heir, Ex-Maid Will Wed

KRISTIANSAND, Norway (AP)—Steven Rockefeller and a former maid in his wealthy family's home plan a late summer wedding in a small Lutheran church in Norway.

Gov. and Mrs. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York said they are delighted at their son's engagement to Anne Marie Rasmussen, 21, pretty blonde daughter of a prosperous Kristiansand grocer.

"She is a wonderful girl," the governor said.

Announcing their engagement Sunday, the young couple did not set a wedding date. But a friend of the Rasmussen family said it would probably be Aug. 22.

It will be performed by the Rev. Olav Gaustestad in the Lutheran Church at nearby Soegne. The pastor is an old friend of the Rasmussens. The Rockefellers are Baptists.

The governor has indicated he and his wife will come to Scandinavia for the wedding.

"I can't imagine that I would not participate in the wedding of any of my children," he told newspapermen Saturday.

Steven, 23, and the third of his parents' five children, first met Anne Marie when she came to the United States in 1956 to learn English and worked for a time as a maid in his home. She left the Rockefeller employ in 1957 to work in a New York department store, then worked for an insurance firm in New York.

After serving an Army hitch, young Rockefeller flew to Oslo July 10 and met Anne Marie. They came on to her home by motorcycle, and the romance rumors have been booming ever since.

The girl's father, Kristian Rasmussen, appeared with the couple at a news conference Sunday.

"If our daughter will be happy this way, we will not stop her," he said.

Radiant Anne Marie, wearing a charcoal grey frock with rose polka dots, showed reporters her modest-sized engagement ring—a diamond surrounded by smaller diamonds and set in platinum.

Steven said forms had been sent off Saturday for the publishing of the marriage banns, which in Norway must be done three weeks before the wedding. But this period may be reduced by the Department of Justice if the applicant shows cause.

Young Rockefeller, a graduate of Princeton University, said he will return to New York in September and enter one of his family's businesses.

"This will change my life completely," Anne Marie said, "everything will become different for me, but what I have brought with me from the home of my childhood will always remain with me. I will remain the one I am."

She said she and Steven would live in an apartment in New York but that they haven't found one yet. Anne Marie added that she wants to keep house herself.

Steven said he will stay with the Rasmussens until the wedding and added he would like to get in some fishing. Putting his arm around Anne Marie, he added, "I was sure lucky catching this one."

Congressman Owns He Once Was Fired

By JOHN H. AVERILL
WASHINGTON (AP)—Many a man has been fired from a job. But it's seldom you encounter someone willing to tell everybody about it.

Rep. Ken Hechler (D-WV) is an exception.

In the biographical sketch he provided for the Congressional Directory, Hechler notes that he was a special assistant to former President Harry S. Truman from 1949 until Truman left the White House in January 1953.

Most politicians would be content to stop right there—especially in writing for the Congressional Directory where the practice is to mention only rosy things. But not Hechler. He adds he "remained at the White House under President Eisenhower but was fired in April, 1953, for the following stated cause: 'Completion of the work to which you were assigned.'"

As the above statement would indicate, Democrat Hechler is not at all abashed about discussing his firing under the Republican administration.

"It was one of the most amusing experiences of my life," says Hechler, "especially since it took them so long to get around to firing me."

As Hechler relates it, he had no idea of staying on at the White House when Truman left—especially in view of the mass turnover that occurs when a president of another party takes over.

"But I liked my job, and I was working on a research project that I hadn't finished," Hechler recalls, "so I just continued going to work."

To his surprise, as Hechler puts it, no one said a thing.

"I finished my project within a few days and assumed someone would soon give me the word that I was no longer needed. I had no intention of being a Democratic Trojan horse or throwing sand in the gears. I just decided to sit it out and see how long I could last."

Almost immediately, he recalls, the White House personnel officer came around and suggested Hechler might be happier if he got a job outside the government. Hechler told him he loved working at the White House.

Several days later, Hechler said, the personnel officer told Hechler he would have to take a $1,000 cut in his annual pay.

Hechler, who was making $11,000 a year at the time, said he replied: "I would work here for nothing and will gladly sacrifice $1,000."

"A few days later," Hechler said, "the personnel officer came back and said they would like to let me go and wouldn't I prefer quitting first so as to keep my record clean."

"I told him 'no,' that I preferred having it on my record, and if they were going to fire me they had to give a reason. That must have stumped them, but they came back within a few days and gave me the reason—that I had completed my assignment."

"They didn't mention that I had completed it two months ago."

Red Chinese Publication Admits Leader Is Fallible

HONG KONG (AP)—An important magazine in Communist China has published an article conceding that people like Mao Tse-tung can make mistakes. The leader of Chinese communism is generally spoken of by his followers as infallible.

The article, appearing in the authoritative New China semi-monthly mentions Mao throughout a lengthy discussion of problems and mistakes of Communist agricultural and industrial policies.

Mao is not mentioned by name in the critical passage saying a great man cannot always be correct. However, the writer used a Chinese word for great—"wei ta"—that is always reserved for Mao.

This provides strong support for speculation abroad that Mao faced a storm of criticism over his handling of China's "big leap forward" production campaign and his establishment of the barracks-type commune system last year.

Both programs ran into trouble and have undergone substantial revision. Excuses apparently are in order now.

The context of the startling statement about Mao indicates, however, that he has so far weathered the storm and still is very much in command.

Mao resigned as head of the Chinese Communist government when the problems came to light. But he kept his more powerful post as chairman of the Chinese Communist party.

7 Persons Die In Road Crash

EMPORIA, Kan. (AP)—Seven persons were killed Sunday in a two-car collision on a curve of U.S. 50 about 10 miles east of Emporia. There were no survivors.

Killed in one car were Mrs. Opal Epling, 59, of Burlington, Kan., and her sister, Mrs. Marie Walt, 62, of Emporia.

They were on their way to a wedding shower in Burlington for Mrs. Epling's daughter, Linda, an Emporia State College student.

Dead in the other car were Thurman M. Hoover, 52, Wichita; his wife, 42; their son, Irvin, 8; their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Toles, both 19, of Wichita.

Sheriff Bert Johnson said the Hoover car apparently had passed another vehicle on the long curve and was in the wrong lane when the accident occurred.

A Devotional For Today

As the cold of snow in the time of harvest, so is a faithful messenger to them that send him; for he refresheth the soul of his masters. (Proverbs 25:13.)
PRAYER: Lord, help me so to live with Thee that I may be a faithful messenger of Thy spirit. Use me to bring refreshing wherever I go; through Jesus Christ our Lord, who taught us to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven . . . Amen."
 (From The "Upper Room")

Well, It Is Done, Too

Headmaster Donald Lindsey of Malvern College, a swank school for young gentlemen at Malvern, England, the other day warned his charges that "dating town girls just isn't done."
 The young men were advised to choose their girl friends from three or four expensive private schools in the locality.
 "It is not snobbish, you know," the headmaster explained. "It is a question of manners. Boys will be boys — if you let them . . . It has been suggested, for instance, that in shops they should not strike up casual conversations with young lady clerks. It is a question of teaching them they should not go around talking to all and sundry."
 This did not set well with the lads, and its effect on "town girls" can only be imagined.
 In refreshing contrast to this stuffy incident, Governor Nelson Rockefeller was asked about reports that his son, 23-year-old Steven, was romancing somewhere in Norway with Anne Marie Rasmussen, a 20-year-old Norwegian lass who had been a maid in the Rockefeller home.

 The governor of New York and heir to one of the greatest fortunes in the world was asked if his son might marry the girl. He took it with monumental calm.
 "I imagine he (Steve) is enjoying himself and having a good time, but you probably know as much as I do about it," the governor replied. He added he thought the youngsters were just having an ordinary boy-girl friendship.
 In Norway young Steven was interviewed. "I have come to spend a holiday in Norway and meet Anne Marie. That's all I can say."
 It turns out that the couple really intends to marry.
 Why not? All the Rockefeller males put on their trousers a leg at a time, just like anybody else. Not a snob in a car-load.

Strangely Convenient Heckling

On the eastern or Siberian leg of his journey over the Soviet Union, Vice President Richard Nixon ran into a great deal of heckling from his "hosts."
 From the samples of the Nixon repartee carried in dispatches, the vice president seems to have handled himself well, and for the most part parried the thrusts without pulling any punches at all.
 The Nixon press representative with the party said there was a pattern to the heckling. Always in entering or leaving a building, a factory or a group, somebody obviously well-briefed was sure to confront him with a series of sharp questions, leading to the belief that higher-level Soviet officials visiting in this country.
 In a country where few men ever dare to raise their voices in criticism of the government, as in Russia, heckling is not what you would call a familiar outdoor and indoor pastime.
 Hence the conclusion that they were carefully prepared, calculated for effect and delivered by men experienced in propaganda techniques.
 Mr. Nixon fielded them well, but one wonders how many among his audiences were impressed by them. The average Russian has been too well indoctrinated to be greatly impressed by outsiders.

David Lawrence
Bellwether Of Entire Economy

WASHINGTON—Do the American people want a regulated economy—with the government fixing wages and prices?
 David J. McDonald, head of the steelworkers union, unwittingly comes close to saying, "yes." This would be one step removed from socialism. He declares that the government "cannot help but get involved in the steel strike and adds: "We have always welcomed the involvement of government."
 As for the steel companies, they recognize the possibility, too, but are vehemently opposed to it, believing that free enterprise thrives under a free system of bargaining. Roger M. Blough, chairman of the board of U. S. Steel Corp., has just announced:
 "Whatever the length of the strike, and whatever the eventual outcome of the negotiations—as long as they are voluntary—we in United States Steel do not intend to raise the general level of our steel prices in the foreseeable future."
 Mr. Blough said also that his company intended to adhere to that pledge "in the absence of an involuntary settlement mandated by some public body or authority."
 This, of course, refers to government pressure or mandate of law.
 Naturally, labor-union leaders in the past have counted on their political influence in government to give them what they want. They are counting today on help from members of Congress to bring pressure on the White House to intervene and force a settlement of the steel strike in their favor.
 The promise by the steel industry not to raise prices is a wise move. It doesn't mean the door is closed to any wage increase. It means, conversely, that whatever wage rise is given can be absorbed without a price increase. It means, of course, that the industry wants the working rules in existing contracts revised to make savings and accomplish greater efficiency.
 Much has been said by the union spokesmen in the last few days about the size of the profits which steel companies now are revealed to have earned in the first six months of this year. The argument from the union side is that wages can be increased because of such profits. But this is exactly how inflationary spirals begin. The erroneous assumption is that a rate of profits continues indefinitely.

 Unfortunately for the steel companies, if they suffer a reverse, union labor will not share in the losses. Wages are almost never reduced. Profits are looked upon by the labor unions as having been earned by their members. It seems to be forgotten that the stockholders' and creditors' money, which makes possible new and remodeled plants with up-to-date equipment, is usually responsible for the increased profits. Dividends and interest are wages, too.
 But, in this instance, it was the fear of a steel strike, which became widespread more than a year ago, that gave the steel companies twice as many orders as they would normally have had for the same period. Naturally, if you do two years' business in one, profits go up for that period. But if wage rates are to be based on such an artificial situation, what is to happen when orders decline and buyers begin to cut down inventories as soon as they are assured of a steady supply after the strike is ended?
 The unions contribute none of the management skill or energy, none of the sales ability, none of the technical knowledge that makes a big industrial company function successfully. Yet they demand that they be given a share of the profits over and above a just wage. They are unwilling to abolish "featherbedding" and waste but insist on a continuance of such subsidies.
 If government were to control and if profits and wages were regulated by public authority, there soon would be no right to strike. Certainly the opportunities of a big union, through a strike threat or work stoppage, to extort a portion of the profits without assuming any responsibility for the sales or the earnings would be done away with if the government took over. So unquestionably everybody is better off under a free bargaining system provided organized greed can be suppressed by self-restraint.
 There is, to be sure, no justification for anybody on either side to take a narrow view of the steel controversy. It isn't simply a matter of profits or wage rates within a single industry. Steel is the bellwether of the entire economy. If steel wages go up, wages in other industries will also go up. Then the price of the things the steel companies buy will go up, too, and costs are thus pyramided.
 The whole nation will be affected by the kind of settlement reached in the steel strike. If government intervenes to force a settlement favorable to the unions and unfavorable to the wage-price structure of the nation, the administration or party which brings about such a result will have to take full responsibility for another cycle of inflation.

Two-Fisted Politics

James Marlow
Ike's Ideas On Diplomacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower's ideas on diplomacy go back to the 19th century. That explains in part his lack of eagerness for a summit conference and the great, free-rien he gave his late secretary of state, John Foster Dulles.
 Some of his views, not stated publicly, can be given here on the idea. Khrushchev considers foreign ministers messenger boys and says only the heavyweights can get things done.
 2. Eisenhower prefers seeing foreign ministers enjoy the exercise of the great authority given them in the 19th century. He says their governments normally try to establish limits within which they can negotiate.
 Dulles, who ran American foreign affairs like a one-man show, was given a freer hand by Eisenhower than any American Secretary of State enjoyed in this century. But he insisted that Eisenhower approve every move before he made it.
 3. Eisenhower considers the congress of Vienna in 1814-15, called to reorganize Europe, after the downfall of Napoleon, an example of foreign ministers' exercising the ultimate in authority, both in negotiating and in making agreements.
 Some historians, judging from their appraisal of the Congress of Vienna, might think Eisenhower chose an unfortunate example of what foreign ministers can do when they have the ultimate in authority.
 4. He has cited as an example of what he doesn't like about summit conferences the 1807 meeting between Napoleon and Czar Alexander I of Russia on a raft in the River Niemen near Tilzit.
 That was a meeting between a bamboozler, Napoleon, and a half-baked mystic, Alexander, who at first admired the world up between them, and then went up fighting each other.
 Khrushchev has been trying for more than a year and a half to get Eisenhower into a conference with him. At first the President was downright reluctant. Then he seemed to yield a bit.
 Lately he has been saying he'd go to the summit if the foreign ministers, discussing the Berlin problem at Geneva, showed some progress. He has never said precisely what he considers progress.
 There's a chance a summit meeting might make things worse instead of better. And there has been no tangible result from the first summit meeting Eisenhower had in 1955 with Khrushchev and the then Soviet Premier, Nikoita Bulganin.
 These may be factors in his hesitancy about trying it again. But the memory of the meeting between Napoleon and Alexander seems to be high in his wariness about a second summit get-together. He has referred to it repeatedly.
 Napoleon had so scrambled Europe — changing governments; unseating old kings, making new ones — that after his defeat and exile the crowned heads of Europe called the Congress of Vienna to undo and redo what he had done.
 The congress made Europe safe for kings for years. Frontiers were rearranged without any concern for the ordinary people involved. They didn't have any say anyway. Only the kings and their foreign ministers did.
 Looking back on the work of the congress, where foreign ministers had ultimate authority, British historian George Macaulay Trevelyan said that, while the congress had given Europe peace for 40 years, it made war inevitable.
 H. G. Wells went further. He called the results of the congress "crazy tangle, an outrage on the common sense of mankind."
 One thing is certain: no American Congress would ever let an American secretary of state have the kind of blank check the ministers at Vienna used. But they were not answerable to a Congress. They worked for kings.

Papa Does All The Work

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:
 Some men think they'd enjoy polygamy, but polygamy has its price, as every male ostrich knows. The daddy ostrich has several wives, but they all lay their eggs in a single nest. Then stroll away, leaving papa the job of sitting on the eggs all alone until they hatch.
 Do you ever feel like your mind is a prison? Small wonder. Your brain has about 12 billion cells. If your wife gets an invitation to be presented to the British Queen, be sure to tell her not to show up in a black dress. Black is worn only as court mourning.
 Women may not be able to hold their liquor as well as men, but they know how to handle it better. Only about one out of every 20 persons arrested for drunken driving wears a skirt.
 Whales spend their lives in water but never drink the stuff. Naturalists say they get all the water they need from their diet.
 New York is still unchallenged as "the Skyscraper City". Of the 20 tallest buildings in America — 41 or more stories high — 17 are here.
 Statistics show you are far more likely to get murdered than you are to live to be a centenarian. The U. S. Census of 1950 showed only 4,474 persons over 100 years old in a population of 150,697,361. But the FBI reported 7,210 murder cases in 1952.
 Ain't it the truth? "Everything in the modern home," says Grace Downs, "is controlled by switches today—except the children."
 Speaking of switches, more American homes now have television sets than telephones or bathtubs. Some 42,400,000 U.S. families own one or more sets.

Around The Rim
Writer Reveals His Brand Of Humor

Originators of the idea for this column said at the time that its contributors couldn't go wrong in hacking out copy to fill the space by (1) "viewing with alarm," without lowering the hammer on the star of the plot, (2) reminiscing — one couldn't fumble the ball by retelling incidents that happened a long time ago and which had absolutely nothing to do with reshaping the history of mankind, or (3) "pointing with pride" to some worthy citizen's undertaking.
 Today, I don't feel inclined to do any of those things. I don't savor the thought of carrying on a vendetta with any individual who might think differently from the way I do.
 I find reminiscing difficult — fact is, I often forget to pick up that quart of milk and loaf of bread my missus told me to get at the grocer's on my way home.
 There are, I'm sure, many things about which I could point with pride. Lately, though, much of what I've been getting in honest discourse with my fellow man is advice — all of it well intended. I'm sure, but not much of it news-worthy.
 Today, I feel like being psycho-analyzed, and they say one of the better ways to offer yourself for treatment with the head shrinkers is by betraying the type of humor you like.
 I'll buy that, and herewith offer some of the stories I've heard within recent times which tickled my ribs. The same items may leave you very cold and wondering about my mental processes, but that's the way the cookie crumbles.
 At any rate, here are the samplings: Two Irish drunks were sitting at a table, staring mournfully into their drinks.
 One of them, cupping his hands together as if they contained something, asked his companion:
 "What have I got in my hands?"
 His companion studied him at length, then replied:
 "The O'Connell bridge?"
 "No."
 "The Phoenix Park race-track?"
 "No. But you're getting warm."
 "A horse."
 The first drunk opened his hands a wee bit and peeped in. Then he looked up, his face beaming:
 "What color?" he asked.
 Applying to the accounting office for his first job, the recent high school graduate was momentarily stymied by a question on the application blank which read: "What machines can you operate?"
 Pausing briefly, the boy finally wrote: "Slot machine and pin ball."
 One of the better known wits, who makes a living by uttering this sort of stuff, says that maybe the national budget wouldn't get so out of hand if more hands got out of the budget.
 A missionary traveling through the jungle met a lion. Flight was hopeless, so he fell to his knees in anxious prayer. A moment later, he was greatly comforted to see the lion kneeling beside him. "Dear brother," said the missionary, "how delightful it is to see you join me in prayer, when a moment ago I was fearing for my life."
 "Don't interrupt," replied the lion. "I'm saying grace."

Let's Keep It Dry In The Sky

What follows, I hope, will not be construed as aid and comfort to the country's Carrie Nations. I am still unalterably against prohibition on land or sea. But I am still just as adamant agin liquor in the air.
 The Commerce Subcommittee of the house of Representatives is now holding hearings, pro and con, on sales and consumption of corn squeegee's on plane flights within the United States. Although the committee has not asked me for my two cent's worth, here it is. For once, I'm a con-man. As a million-mile, plus, in the air, I hanker to have the planes high and the passengers dry.
 Thus, I am on the side of the Air Line Pilots Association. It is urging Congress to prohibit liquor on domestic flights, on the very sound thesis that pilots are employed to drive planes, not to ride herd on souped-up passengers.
 As a passenger bucking for her second million mile certificate, my unsolicited testimony might be likened to the Voice of Experience. So let me say here and now that my chief objection to the plane passenger who has had one too many for the Wild Blue is that I am inexorably caged in with him unto the journey's end.
 On hand or sea, providing I am in a vessel larger than a row boat, I can walk away from the pest. In short, I can be rid of him in two minutes. But in a plane, I am helpless. The air lines don't carry parachutes for dissatisfied customers. Once on board, you are there for the duration, and on a plane, there is nothing more durable than a drunk.
 In other words, on board a plane I am forced into reluctant association with the lush. I am deprived of freedom of choice. And I don't like that.
 In the second place, no one, even in this age of pressurized cabins, can predict just how alcohol and altitude will mix in the passenger's carburetor. A bottle-a-day man who never shows it on terra firma may be covered with vine leaves and pinching the stewardess after two Gibsons when the plane levels off at 22,000 feet and he's still soaring.
 As for the "nervous" passenger, he's better off with a Milltown than a martini. Give this customer enough martinis and everyone else on board is nervous. Furthermore if I were the parent of a lass who longed to be a stewardess, I would certainly feel that I had not raised my girl to be a bartender, even in the stratosphere.
 It has long been patent that the domestic air lines were competing for passengers via the digestive tract. They have advertised bigger and better meals for years. But within the past twelve months I have been increasingly aware that there is competition in the bar as well as the grill.
 There are so many "champagne flights" across the U.S.A. that the air lines bubble. The biggest martinis in America are served, F. O. B., on de luxe flights across the nation. Many air lines contend that liquor, either free or paid for by the passenger, is "an added service that the public demands."
 Nonsense! I remember vividly the many years when airlines not only permitted no liquor on a passenger plane, but would not honor the ticket reservation of any person who showed up crooked or even half-soaked at take-off time. Before World War II, it was thought better not to board if it was thought they had taken one-too-many for the high road.
 I'm all for those good old days. Never mind the pie in the sky; just get it dry bye and bye.

We're Much Bigger Than We Thought

Do you feel any bigger — taller? Have you straightened your shoulders? Today, did you walk to work or go about your household chores with newly-discovered vigor and vivacity?
 Well, you ought to.
 The United States — and you are an integral part of it — has been growing faster than we thought. The Federal Reserve Board, which measures America's industrial production, has discovered that its scale short-changed us.
 In comparison with the Soviet rate of growth, the FRB index seemed to mosey along at a snail's pace. Maybe you saw the exchange between Premier Nikoita S. Khrushchev and Vice President Richard Nixon at the American Exhibit in Moscow.
 Khrushchev, boasting of Soviet progress, flipped his hand back and forth as if waving goodbye to a child. Nikita was both cute and deft in giving the impression that the Soviet Union was rapidly overtaking the United States and would soon leave us far behind in productive prowess.
 But now it looks as if we're not as slow as Nikita suspected. William McChesney Martin Jr., chairman of the Reserve Board, let the statistics out of the bag in testimony before the Joint Economic Committee. He said the Board's industrial production index has been revised to 165 from 155. During the last decade, our growth has been at an annual rate of about 4.5 per cent instead of about 4 per cent. For consumer goods only, the growth rate becomes 3.8 per cent instead of 3.2 per cent.
 This doesn't mean — and this is important — that the country is any bigger than it was. Think, for a moment, of a high school youngster anxious to try out for the football team. He steps on the scale at home and finds he weighs 155 pounds. He feels small — smaller than most kids. Yet, when he looks the others over — tussles with them — he can hold his own. But what will the coach think? A puny 155!
 Then, when he reports for practice, he gets on the scales in the gym. What's this? 165! Something must be wrong!
 Yes, something was wrong. The scales at home were wrong.
 He's the same youngster — with the same arms, same bone structure, same physical capacity. He's not going to look the least bit bigger in his football uniform.
 But he's going to feel bigger! He has had a psychological lift.
 And so should we all, now that the Federal Reserve has adjusted its index. We had a false impression of our size, of our growth. And so had Khrushchev. So had economic analysts in France, Great Britain, Germany, Sweden, and throughout the world. America is not yet an arthritic old has-been — a pushover for Khrushchev any time he wants to make good his threat to bury us.
 This revision doesn't alter the real rate of growth in the U. S. It doesn't change the relative real speed with which the U. S. economy is expanding vis-a-vis Russia continues — the emphasis on steel, electric power, cement, petroleum, and other sinews of war.
 In the Soviet Union the emphasis is on growth for power's sake. The men in the Kremlin seek to impose their will by flexing their military muscles. Now the revision will change the world's impression of the relative growth rates.
 The revision indicates how difficult it is to compare rates of growth in different countries — particularly if the two countries have different productive purposes. In this country, we produce for consumption. We're constantly expanding the range of products consumers can buy. And index-makers are hard put to keep up with each decade's flow of products.
 Ever since the Reserve Board index was first developed in 1927, revisions have tended to be upward. And the present ten-point rise from 155 to 165 can be divided into two halves. Five points were added by the inclusion of electric power, one of the nation's rapidly growing industries. The Soviet index has always contained electric power. The other five points came from upward revisions in many items already in the index and the inclusion of more products.
 Yes, sir and ma'am. We're faster than Khrushchev thought. Get those shoulders back!

Sandman's Problem
 NEWFANE, N. Y. (AP) — Firecrackers are effective in keeping startlers and crows away from a cherry crop, says sheriff's deputies said, but they also keep the sandman away.
 The deputies asked a cherry grower to place the firecrackers farther from the house of a neighbor after the man complained that he couldn't sleep.

Violent deaths in Texas over the first August weekend reached 26 at 12:01 a.m. Monday with traffic alone killing 16 persons.
The Associated Press started its weekly count at 6 p.m. Friday. Drownings, shootings, stabbings, and other violence shared the blame for the other deaths.
West Texas deaths included these:
Jesse Bates, about 40, of Midland drowned Sunday after the boat in which he was riding overturned on North Concho Lake near San Angelo.

Downed Pilot Tells Of Desert Ordeal

PAGE, Ariz. (AP) — "All the time I kept thinking of all my personal obligations and my many friends, and I just couldn't give up."
Daniel Reisman, 44, a Salt Lake City pilot, was telling Sunday of a four-day fight for survival that began Wednesday when his light, single-engine plane was forced down on an abandoned airstrip in southeastern Utah.
Speaking from a hospital bed at Page, Reisman told an amazing story of a two-day trek with no food and little water across a blistering desert and a dangerous ride down the turbulent Colorado River.
"I was forced off course by a storm and landed on a strip at an old uranium mine after nearly running out of fuel," he said.
"I knew I needed water and food, so I walked about five miles west that night. But I couldn't find any, so I came back to the plane."
"It started to drizzle Thursday. I wiped the wings of the plane with my handkerchief and then squeezed it into a cup. I managed to get about a cupful, then went to sleep under the wing."
"I later decided to walk east. I saw the Colorado River, but couldn't get down the sheer cliffs. I knew the Colorado just had to go to Glen Canyon Dam. I figured to walk back along the river and find a wash and get down by that. I found a little indentation in the rock that had water in it and drank all I could hold."
"Friday morning I saw a wash. When I got to the river, I made a raft of three logs and started floating. The raft turned over in rapids a couple of times, but it held together."
"I saw some planes Saturday, but they didn't see me. I thought they'd given up the search. Then I saw the boat."
Reisman was found by Earl Johnson, a river guide who was taking a group on a chartered boat trip up the Colorado. A helicopter later took the pilot off the boat and flew him to Page.
Doctors said he was suffering from exhaustion and malnutrition, but otherwise was in good condition.

Lyndon, Thornberry Think Texans Want Labor Bill

DALLAS (AP) — Texas voters think a strong labor reform bill is the most important legislation being considered by Congress, Sen. Lyndon Johnson and Rep. Homer Thornberry said Sunday.
The Austin congressman joined Johnson on the Senate majority leader's weekly broadcast, transcribed for Texas radio stations.
"My mail indicates that the people consider the number one problem of the Congress is a bill," Johnson said.
Thornberry said he had the conclusion, adding, "I think we are going to pass one before we adjourn."
The lawmakers agreed that housing legislation and a highway construction bill also will be passed before adjournment.
Thornberry, who succeeded Johnson in the House when Johnson was elected to the Senate, predicted Congress will trim President Eisenhower's budget by about 617 million dollars.
"Since I have been in Congress, the Congress has traditionally re-

DEAR ABBY A LITTLE GIFT
By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The other day I received a postcard from the lady who irons for me. She said her church was giving a stork shower for her daughter and she thought I'd like to know in case I wanted to send a present.
My husband is raving mad. He says if I let her "work me" for a present he will be very disappointed in me.
She irons very well and I'd hate to lose her over a little gift I could buy for $3.
You're a woman, Abby. Is my husband right or not?
NO NAME PLEASE
DEAR NO: This is a new wrinkle! If it gives you the feeling of pleasure, generosity or security to send a gift, by all means, send one. Men don't always understand these things. If your husband ever tried to iron a shirt he wouldn't get so steamed up.
DEAR ABBY: My husband is the best man in the world when he's sober—but he hasn't drawn a sober breath in two years. He says he'll quit drinking when I quit nagging.
But the reason I nag him is because he drinks.
Now, Miss Abby, if you will figure out a way for him to quit drinking so I can quit nagging, I will sure thank you.
DEAR NAGGING: If you can't get your husband to call Alcoholics Anonymous (they are listed in your telephone directory), investigate the group called "ALANON." They are the wives, husbands, sweethearts and friends of alcoholics who are organized for a common purpose . . . to learn how to cope with problem drinkers and eventually lead them back to the road of sobriety and self-respect. Good luck!
DEAR ABBY: I am in love with a boy the same age as I, which is 14. We have been going steady for two years. We have it all planned to get married when we get out of school in four years. He kissed me last Saturday night for the first time. It was just a peck on the cheek. Don't you think that after waiting for two years I deserved at least a kiss on the lips?
DISAPPOINTED
DEAR DISAPPOINTED: You had better slow down, Honey! Get the hands off your teeth before you start thinking about a hand on your finger. A peck on the cheek is quite enough for two 14-year-olds.
To get ABBY's booklet, "What Every Teen-ager Wants to Know," send 25 cents and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope to ABBY in care of The Big Spring Herald.
For a personal reply write to ABBY in care of The Big Spring Herald. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.
