Americans Given

WASHINGTON (AP) - America had only two atomic bombs when the decision was made to drop them on Japan in World War II, according to a posthumuously published interview with Gen. George C. Marshall.

The magazine U.S. News & World Report, in a copyrighted article today, said Marshall granted the interview to one of its editors, John P. Sutherland, in 1954 it would not be published until

The soldier-diplomat died Oct.

Marshall said in the interview that America's military leaders had no idea of the destructive power of the A-bomb until one was exploded in New Mexico on July 16, 1945. Even after that, he said, there was no clear-cut plan

"When we got the bombs we had to use them in the best possible way to save American lives." about 50 injured, and Castro he said, "I heard all kinds of discussions on how we should use the first one. Some wanted to drop some witnesses said the casualties it on the Sea of Japan. But we didn't know how it would work in out of control. We just didn't know.

"Others wanted to drop it in a rice paddy to save the lives of two, and the situation demanded shock action. After using the two bombs against Japan, there would be nothing in reserve. Until the awesome power of the bomb became known, it had been planned to use nine of them in an invasion of Japan, Marshall said. The invasion was set for

LEARN TO RELAX

There is no place where the axiom "a stitch in time saves nine" applies more than in the release of tension. An ability to "let go" is a valuable safeguard against nervous exhaustion and the accompanying illnesses. Leaflet M-4,

"How to Relax," is a fresh approach to the subject. With it you'll find yourself able to "command" your body to release tension And it will! For your copy of this vital leaflet send only 10 cents (ten cents) and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Lydia Lane. Hollywood Beauty, Big Spring Her-

LOOKING EM OVER With Tommy Hart

Buddy Travis, the new HCJC cage mentor, was reminded by a friend the other day that he had one of the better coaching jobs around

The friend went on to say, in effect, that some of the athletic fans so dedicated themselves to the job of throwing verbal harpoons at the high school football coaching staff that they never had any time to figure out what kind of a job a Jayhawk coach was doing.

Sometimes, I think the most popular sport here is cussing and discussing the merits of the coaches rather than football, basketball or whatever sport is in session.

Granting that they would be a much better ball club with end David Parks in there, I don't see how the Abilene Eagles can go all the way in this year's state football playoffs.

True, the Eagles walloped Big Spring to the tune of 36-0 and used their reserves much of the way in branding the Steers but they seem to be only a pale copy of some the teams Coach Chuck Moser has fielded in the past.

The Steers appear to run better against them than they did any opponent this year. Bobby Austin is a fair back but the talent in Moser's backfield tails off in a hurry, after you consider him.

The Eagles use brute strength to wear down the opposition. There's very little finesse about their attack although Moser, no doubt, saved back a few tricks-knowing he didn't have to use them against Big Spring.

Abilene hasn't been running roughshod over any opponent this season. There must have been a time or two when Moser rubbed his good luck charms until friction caused them to turn warm

Abilene appears to have sufficient manpower and firepower to get out of district and nobody familiar with the situation would give any of the El Paso teams a ghost of a chance against the Eagles.

After that, however, the Eagles will probably be living on borrowed time.

The defeat of San Angelo by Odessa High last week, no doubt, jeopardized Bob Harrell's chances of being rehired as head mentor the Bobcats.

It's those games in which you're favored to win and then lose that hurt you in the eyes of your fans and San Angelo wasn't supposed to lose to any steam in District 2-AAAA but Abilene-or so some of the San Angelo fans reasoned.

Quite possibly, the 9,500 or so people who witnessed the Big Spring-Abilene game in Abilene last weekend was the largest paid attendance ever to see a local contingent in action.

The Steers never played to that large a crowd in any of their playoff games in 1953.

The one-time welterweight boxing champion, Johnny Bratton, who ballooned up to 200 pounds, recently was released from a state mental institution. He'll make progress checks with the doctors for the next year.

The Harlem Globetrotters reportedly are fielding one of their weakest teams in years, which means they'll have to go in for more and more comedy in order to hide their court deficiencies from the fans.

the above picture, made during the Steer-Eagle game in Abilene Friday night. Abilene won the game, 36-0, district opener for both teams.

merce directors meeting, considerable interest was manifested in the possibility of including Webb Village within the corporate limits of Big Spring.

Since this is a federal facility, Webb Village would remain under federal administrative jurisdiction. By the same token, the City of Big Spring would presumably not be assuming security and other responsibilities.

If nothing appreciable would be changed, why bother?

The simplest answer is that the move would mean that some 1,500 to 2,000 people in Webb Village would count in the decennial census for Big Spring next

Were the salving of provincial pride in numbers and growth at the root of this,

Last week at the Chamber of Com- it wouldn't be worth the effort. But as little as the average person may think, there is something magic in crossing a round figure such as 20,000, or 25,000 or 30 000

> For business purposes, such things as market services, distribution points, manufacturing plants, etc. are often given consideration on the basis of round figure population brackets. For instance, some firms don't consider cities of less than 30,000 for store locations no matter what the other statistical market pictures may show.

> If this would help Big Spring to increase these facilities and services, it stands to reason that residents of Webb Village-who are in reality full-fledged citizens of Big Spring - would benefit from greater services and wider marketing opportunities.

People, Not Polls, Still Elect

in Britain, 24 hours before the parliamentary elections, showed Conservatives leading Laborites by only 1.5 percentage points in popular favor.

Actual voting gave an advantage of 5.7 percentage points to the Conservatives. Polls taken by some British dailies were equally off the beam. In all the polls there was a high percentage of voters who answered "Don't know" when asked which side they favored. One in every six gave that answer just a few days before the election, "Experts" in political tides decided the "don't knows" really were the "won't tells." That's as good an alibi as any.

The London Express, like the others, was way off; manfully the paper confessed that its poll "failed completely" to mirror public opinion as it actually existed. "In these conditions the polls became preposterous," it commented editorially

One of the major public opinion polls Report, in a grassroots roundup of what politicians are saying about next year's commentary (quite aside from the British experience, and merely incidental to its grassroots story) on the mischiefpotential of all public opinion polls.

There is evidence that politicians place great store by the polls, in spite of what happened in Britain last week and in this country in 1948.

One is entitled to draw one's conclusion from two basic premises: 1. Either the polls are highly potent in influencing public opinion before a convention or an election, and are therefore a menace to our free institutions and should be regulated; or 2. That politicians who are dumb enough to place their confidence in polls deserve no sympathy.

On the basis of the British upset and that in the U.S. in 1948, we'll string along with Number 2. The voters themselves have made a mockery of the

Around The Rim Thus The World Makes Its Changes

One thing and another:

Albert D. Ullman, professor of sociology at Tufts University, Medford, Mass., has suggested that small, frequent doses of alcohol beginning early in a child's life might make alcohol "psychologically unavailable" as an addiction.

In other words, he's proposing a vaccine against drink, just as there is one against polio and smallpox.

Illinois is trying something I wish our state will attempt, in time. Sharp edges on license plates will be eliminated in the Land of Lincoln starting next year.

Instead, the edges of the tags will be rolled, thus eliminating the hazard, which has slashed hands and arms of scores of motorists.

Ever try to sponge down your car and accidentally whack your hand against the edge of one of the Texas plates? Makes you wish they made you tattoo them on your arms, instead.

I see where the Chicago Board of Education members were told these facts recently:

Some public school engineer-custodians earn more than teachers with a Ph.D. degree of 31 years of service. The teacher armed with such a diploma and as much background draws $800 a month. The custodian, $930.

From the Pikke Country Journal, Zebulon, Ga :

"Kill a little time now and then. After all, time is killing you."

Cal Farley, who manages Boys Ranch in Amarillo, recommends the following five rules for guiding a boy to responsible manhood. He says the rules are deceptively simple and therefore easy to overlook. They are:

1. Teach the boy to obey. A boy's own rules turn out to be no rules at all. 2. Take time to be a boy's companion.

3. Be specific with a boy. Uncertainty in youth leaves the door open for lifelong doubt and conflict. 4. Give the boy responsibility. Let him learn how to be part of a team. 5. Love the boy. Show him that love is a kind of mutual respect, reflecting itself in one's conduct. -TOMMY HART

Who Says Women Aren't Smart?

"Women are sure smart!" a taxi driver said a few days ago to a friend of mine who had just entered his hack.

My friend tried to look modest and leaned forward, the better to hear what she had always suspected but seldom heard the opposite sex admit.

"I was just cruising down Madison Avenue," the driver continued, "and in the Sixties I see a woman parking her car right next to a fire plug. And I said to myself. 'What a dumb dame! Won't they never learn?'

"As she finished parking and stepped out of the car, I drove up close to say, 'Lady, don't you know the cops'll tag you here as sure as God made little apples?

"But just as I am about to warn this babe that she is flouting the law, why, she opens her pocketbook and pulls out a summons. And you know what she done with it? She slips it under the windshield wiper! And off she goes, happy like a lark

BABE AND HER SUMMONS

"How do you like that! A babe that carries her own summons' She knows when them lazy cops go by they'll see the car's already tagged and won't do nothing more about it. So she can shop all day and all night.

women. I thought the world had wagged beyond the old chestnut that education was wasted on women, especially on married women who obviously don't need an atom of schooling to help them cope with a home, husband and children.

In the past three decades, it appeared that the world had pretty well accepted the fact that an educated wife and mother improved the tone of home and family. So I am a little surprised to read that the new president of Smith College in his inaugural address counseled his students "not to waste their education by succumbing to the prevailing mania for early marriage."

CAN'T FIGHT NATURE Now, if Dr. Thomas Corwin Mendenhall, Smith's new prexy, is against highschool marriage, a phenomenon with which many communities are having to contend, that's one thing. But if he believes that a college girl who prefers marriage to a job is throwing away her time and talents, WELL ----

"While any of us would welcome a happy marriage as a by-product of college education," Dr Mendenhall says "to make it a first purpose is wasteful of the precious resources of a college."

Still, I don't think it's going to dampen the educational process if a girl keeps her eye peeled for a likely prospect. A good man is hard to find, granted, and if a girl spots one in Chem. II or while spending a weekend at Harvard or Dartmouth, she is ably proving how worthy

BOTH CAN LOSE

We paint a 19th Century picture of the stockholder in the United States: He bears the brunt of risk in a money-making enterprise. He puts up the capital. If the business goes broke, he takes itin his bank account. He is the shockabsorber during adversity.

That's folklore.

It's the worker who gets laid off, who has to scrimp for beans and instalment money. The shareholder may be squeezed out of dividends. If the company goes sour, he may lose his investment entirely But long before that happens, many workers have lost their jobs, their earning power, their sense of self-worth.

Throughout history, industrial workers have been dogged by a fear of nothing to do. Like squirrels, they want to guard against winter famine. That's what the carpenter did. Deep down, inside his psychological self, he wanted work to come back to. So he never finished

That's why workers establish norms of production. The eager beaver who lays too many bricks or shows up other workers on the assembly line is a pariah, a work depriver. He threatens their job tenure, their security. This sense of a sufficient day's work develops wherever and whenever men work together whether unionized or not.

UNILATERAL ACTION FEARED

And this explains why David J. Mc-Donald, president of the United Steelworkers, rejected the steel industry's request to revise the work rules. The rules in the steel dispute are of three types:

1. Those that help the company by codifying customs and procedures. These establish norms for coffee breaks, lunch hours, output.

2. Those that recognize the rights of

It's easy to understand why a worker cherishes clean-up time before quitting, why he insists on higher pay for night than day work. But his underlying concern is displacement. If he's part of a five-man crew which is cut to four, he fears being switched to a job on which he has no old-hand status.

NATIONAL PROBLEM

The dark, desperate, no-work days of the Deep Depression can't be pushed out of men's minds. Workers still dread unemployment. Work rules could not have separated the company and union for so long, were it not for this fear of running out of work.

This is more than a steel problem -it's a national problem, a social problem.

To attain maximum efficiency-unionemployer cooperation - American industry will have to evolve a plan to protect workers against long-term unemployment, against technological displacement

Unemployment insurance can't help the coal miner in an oil economy, the railroader in a bus, truck, and private car era, or the steel worker shouldered aside by a photoelectric eye. A society that doesn't provide for workers who run out of work can't hope for optimum productivity. There'll always be squirreling on the job. That's human nature.

> THIS DAY IN TEXAS By CURTIS BISHOP

Founded on this day in 1848 was Fort Ringgold on the Rio Grande in Starr County. It was named for Maj. David Ringgold, who was killed in the battle of Palo Alto.

The post played a historic role in border troubles before and after the Civil

Its first momentous use came in 1859 when U. S. regulars were stationed here in an effort to check the depredations of Juan Cortinas, the "Robin Hood" of the Rio. A new commanding officer gave the fort a special luster that year - Col. Robert E. Lee.

Shortly the barracks were in Confederate hands as all U.S. installations in Texas were surrendered to secessionist authorities. The Confederates did not occupy it. Fort Ringgold sat unused and deteriorating until 1865, when federal troops were stationed there to await developments in the Mexican international war between Benito Juarez and the Emperor Maximilian.

New additions were built four years later, but the U.S. troopers pulled out in 1875. In their place came Texas Rangers under the command of Capt. Leander McNelly.

By 1886 the original adobe buildings were gone; the Rangers occupied quarters of frame and brick. Other U. S. detachments stayed on intermittent duty until 1907. The site was transferred from the War Department to the Department of the Interior in 1912, but two years later the fort took on military importance again. Two cavalry troops augmented the token force, apparently to watch for espionage movements along the Rio. In August, 1944 the post was declared surplus and inactivated. Part of it is used today by the Rio Grande Independent School District.

Marguis Childs Silence Is Setback For Moral Force

WASHINGTON-It was a setback for these territories, and, to this end, to ensure, with due respect for the culture of the peoples concerned, their political, economic, social and educational advancement, their just treatment, and their protection against abuses." BARBARISMS

The record of the Peking government in Tibet is characterized by cruel treatment of the Tibetan people. Not only has there been a brazen interference with the rights of the Tibetan citizens to choose their own spiritual leaders and their own head of government, but barbarisms practiced by the invading troops include wholesale destruction of religious shrines and the killing of priests as well as thousands of other men, women and children.

Has not the Red Clina government, which seeks admission to the United Nations, shown itself-by flagrant violation of the principle set forth in Article 73ineligible for membership in the U.N ? Isn't the resolution which was adopted on Wednesday and added barrier to admission of Red China to the U.N., along with the resolution adopted in February of 1951 condemning Red China's aggression in Korea?

An examination of the excuses given for "abstention" from voting on this week's resolution in the U. N. makes it apparent that there are governments like Great Britain, France and Belgium, for instance, which have colonies, that fear the U. N. some day may be asked to pass on the quality of their own rule in various territories where partial selfgovernment has been granted.

MALAYA AND IRELAND LEAD But no government should really expect the support of the moral force of the world anyway if it is ever guilty of maltreatment of helpless peoples. The precedent that might have been created for Great Britain, France, Belgium and some of the other countries which abstained from voting is, therefore, more theoretical than real

It is to the credit of Ireland and Malaya that they led the fight for the adoption of the resolution in the U. N. They are among the smaller countries which hever could have gotten their independence except by laving their case before the forum of world opinion. It is a backward step that the 26 nations took when they failed to express themselves by a formal vote on a resolution which meant so much to freedom and liberty for the oppressed peoples in many areas of the world. moral force and the cause of idealism in the world when Great Britain, France, Belgium and 23 other members of the United Nations formally abstained from voting on the resolution which, in effect, condemned the Communist regime of China for its aggressions against the fundamental human rights of the people of Tibet.

The resolution itself was passed by a vote of 45 to 9, and it is to the everlssting credit of the United States and most of the Latin-American countries that a majority was obtained. But the victory for freedom and humanitarianism was clouded by the absententions in the voting.

Naturally, the Soviet bloc furnished the nine votes in opposition, but the reasons given by some of those governments which didn't vote at all were hardly different from the line of argument offered by the Communist group in the U.N.

The abstaining countries took refuge in a provision of the United Nations charter which says that nothing contained in the present charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state.

NO INTERFERENCE The resolution itself did not ask the United Nations to intervene or to take any action against the Chinese Communist regime. Indeed, it did not even mention Red China, though it was obviously directed against the Peking Regime It merely took cognizance of reports of what has been happening in Tibet and called "for respect for the fundamental human rights of the Tibetan people and for their distinctive cultural and religious life." Thus, it was only the expression of an opinion by the United Nations general assembly, which is the forum to which all oppressed peoples everywhere look for moral support.

After the Chinese Communists invaded Tibet in 1950, the Peking government made an agreement with the Tibetans which provided for a certain measure of self-government and for the protection of their religious freedom under the Dalai Lama, Even, however, in those cases were nations are not self-governing, the charter of the United Nations does provide for a certain type of action which was in line with the resolution passed by the U. N. this week. The U. N. charter in Article 73 says:

"Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount, and accepted as a sacred trust the obligation to promote to the utmost, within the system of international peace and security established by the present charter, the well-being of the inhabitants of

Alger Suggests Congressmen Write Gas Bill

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas congressman suggested today that gas producers and interstate suppliers get together and place before Congress a workable gas bill.

Rep. Bruce Alger (R-Tex) said he has reports of increasing diversion of gas to intrastate consumers because of utility-type federal controls over producers selling wholesale to interstate transmission lines. The Dallas Republican told the annual meeting of the Independent Petroleum Assn, of America (IPAA) such an intrastate trend poses the possibility of inadequate supplies to serve mounting numbers of interstate customers.

"It's obvious another effort must be made within the industry to get together on a workable gas bill," Alger said. Russell Brown, IPAA general counsel from Washington, told the 1,500 independents congressional action is the only practical solution for the gas producer.

"Corrective legislation should be pursued with all the vigor we possess," he said. CAREFUL PLANNING

The independents also heard an optimistic forecast for 1960 domestic demand for petroleum and a warning they must overcome current problems by careful long range planning.

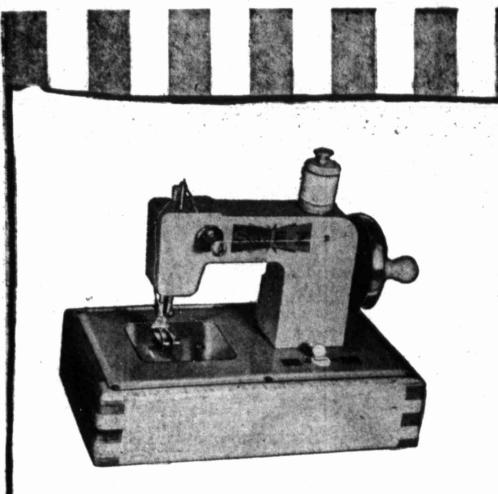

A supply and demand committee headed by Serge B. Jurenev, New York, forecast a 3.4 per cent increase in 1960 domestic demand for petroleum products, Assuming that oil imports will be held to current levels, the committee estimated 1960 domestic crude and natural gas liquids production will increase 6.8 per cent to a daily average of 8,439,000 barrels.

The 1960 demand increase would approximate 323,000 barrels a day. Judge Gordon Simpson, IPAA president from Dallas, said the crude producer seldom has had more reason to be discouraged than at present. But he said current problems must be put in their proper perspective as part of a much larger problem of keeping the nation supplied with oil. "This is an industry which has weathered many worse storms."

weathered many worse storms," he said. "On reflection, it is obvious that some of these storms. could have been lightened if not avoided with a little more planning for the future." LOW ALLOWABLES

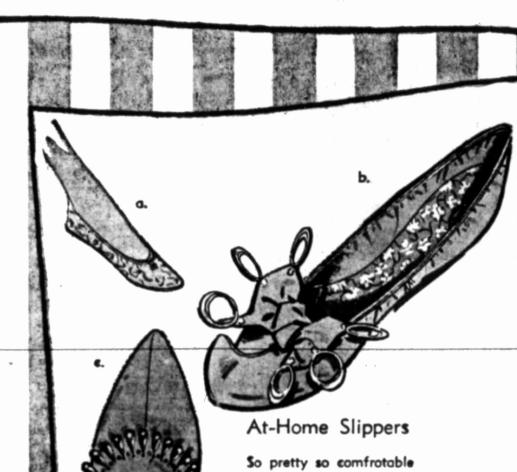

Simpson said the crude producer is burdened with seemingly permanent low allowables. "His costs are rising on every hand," he said. "He is beset with serious deterioration in the price of his product." He added, however, the producers must keep in mind larger responsibilities down the road. "Critical short-term problems bred by high imports, lopsided inventories, unnecessary refining, or other changing conditions, cause us all at times to despair," he said. "Such conditions may bring forth ill-advised proposals." It would be unfortunate if, at such times, we would embrace harsh measures to cope with problems which may be non-existent next year or the year following."

George W. Abbott, solicitor for the Department of the Interior, said the current mandatory controls program for oil imports is meeting the objective of insuring a stable, healthy petroleum industry

"Since the establishment of the program, we are advised, domestic drilling activity has increased about 14 per cent and rotary rig activity about 12 per cent," he said.
